The University . . .

Change

The other day I was stopped on the street and asked by one of our alumni to tell him exactly what good the money contributed to the Annual Fund Drive has done for the students or for the community of Stevens Point.

Thirty-five minutes, and two cups of coffee later, he had his answer.

That encounter led me into thinking that perhaps there are many of you who also are not totally aware of some interesting facts pertaining to your alma mater, or where the money has gone. The following brief list of facts should be of interest:

1. The University payroll is $7 million a year.
2. The UW-SP has the oldest and largest College of Natural Resources in the world.
3. 90% of the students at this campus are receiving some type of financial aid, or are "working their way through college."
4. 35 buildings comprise the 250 acre campus.
5. The largest Army ROTC program in Wisconsin is located at Stevens Point.
6. 10% of the student body is employed by businesses in Stevens Point.

Since July 1, 1971, 571 students have borrowed a total of $51,426 from the emergency student loan fund. This is an increase of $6,000 over last year. Last year, $7,000 was used for direct student scholarship aid.

During the first five months of this year's Annual Fund Drive, $17,473.18 has been contributed by alumni, corporations, businesses and friends of the University. Our goal for the 1971-72 fund drive, which ends May 31, is $45,000. To reach it, we'll need your help.

A report on the UW-SP's successful first annual fund drive, a look to the future by President Dreyfus, and the election of new officers highlighted the fall meeting of the UW-SP Alumni Association Board of Directors.

Heading an Alumni Association of more than 17,000 members this year is Warren J. Lensmire '50, who replaces Robert Konopack ky as president of the Board. Konopack remains as a Board member.

Lensmire, who graduated twice from the UW-SP, receiving a two year rural degree in '40 from the then Central State Teacher's College, and his bachelor's in 1950, is a UW-SP coordinator in the office of student teaching.

New Board members installed included: Mrs. Manuel (Marion Brazeau) Fey '25, of Wisconsin Rapids; and Mrs. James W. (Mary Ann Cwiklo) Nigbor '67, and Erwin Jankowski '62, both of Stevens Point.

Student representatives on the Alumni Association board are Ursula Berger, a senior sociology major, and Ray McMillion, Student Senate president, and a senior history major.

Holdover Board members include: Miss Marjorie Warner, Mrs. Nancy Vevea, Richard Toser, Charles Hanes, Ronald Nelson, Ken Willett, Harvin Abrahamson, Mrs. Sylvia Reinholdt. James Boston, chairman of the 1971-72 Annual Fund Drive, is an ad hoc member of the Board.

During the daylong Board meeting, members heard a brief review of the university's first fund drive, which is sponsored by the Alumni Association, from Rick Frederick, Alumni Director. Frederick noted that the drive had netted a total of nearly $39,000 in funds to be used for student scholarships and aids and special University projects. The 1971-72 fund drive goal is $45,000.

Chancellor's Council To Aid University

A group of 34 area civic and business leaders have become "super-salesmen" for the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

The group, which includes one woman, are charter members of an organization dedicated to promoting and insuring the continued growth and excellence of the UW-Stevens Point — the newly formed Chancellor's Advisory Council for University Development.

Organized in late summer, the area businessmen were told by Chancellor Dreyfus at a noon luncheon that salesmanship for the University was their key responsibility. All have volunteered to help raise funds for student scholarships and loans, besides doing a bit of public relations for the University — soliciting reactions from the public on what it regards as good and bad about the institution.

James Boston of the Boston Furniture Co. and Funeral Home, was appointed council president. In an acceptance speech, he urged business colleagues to regard the new organization as a vehicle for expressing appreciation for the educational, financial and cultural advances brought to Stevens Point by the presence of a large school of higher learning.

"Any investment in the future of a student is an investment in our (town's) future," he noted.

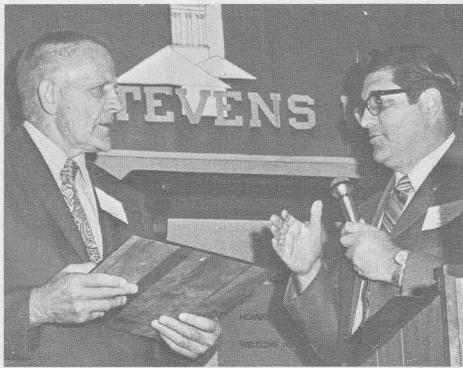

Each council member has been asked to contact five other members of the area business community for financial support. Charter council members are: Miss Marjorie Warner, director of the Charles M. White Memorial Library, and lone woman on the council; Frank Leahy, Dave Varney, Gene Clute, Jack Butler, William Zenoff, Dick Berndt, Robert Konopacky, Judge James H. Levi, Larry Okray, Dave Sharer, Jim Mendyke, Beryl Pascavis, Orland Radke, Arnold Anderson, James Newman, Erv Jankowski, Warren Lensmire, Wayne Enerson, Jim Otterlee, Richard Slayton, Bernard Sommers, Jim Cashin, Jim Neale, Dave Galecke, John Wozniak, Carl Wohlbier, Phil Shibilski, Allan Brekke, J. G. Swoboda, Joe Lemmens, Richard Toser, Ken Willett, and Boston.

year by the American Alumni Council for special recognition, when it was awarded the council's 1971 Citation of Merit Award for an individual Outstanding Program.

Mrs. Susan Kramer, alumni publications editor, reviewed the Alumni Association's "Continuing Education Day for Women" on campus which it co-sponsors with the Division of Extended Services. The program, which attracted over 200 women to the daylong conference on "Concerns of the 70s," will be offered again this year, on Saturday, March 11.

A look into the future, encompassing changes in curriculum, philosophy and the aspirations of the university community was elaborated on by President Dreyfus, who briefed the Board on both short and long-range university goals.

Homecoming '71!

AN EMOTIONAL MOMENT FOR HENRY "TINY" BANNACH '30, following his acceptance of the Alumni "S" Club Hall of Fame award from "S" Club president Dick Berndt.

TELLING IT LIKE IT WAS . . . a reflective Norbert "Nubbs" Miller '57, recalls the "good old days" following his acceptance of the Hall of Fame award.

THAT OLD GANG OF MINE!! Reminiscing after the banquet with Hall of Fame inductee Ted Fritsch '42, is Miss Sue Colman, a former teacher of Fritsch's, and Miss Marjorie Warner, a classmate of Fritsch's.

HOMECOMING WOULDN'T BE HOME-COMING without May Roach, a teacher at the UW-SP for over 40 years, and one of the university's most enthusiastic boosters. Catching up on news with Miss Roach is Mrs. Elizabeth Collins Pfiffner DeBot, former UW-SP dean of women.

UW-SP Names Track Field for Sports Fan Sue Colman

It was "Sue Colman Day" in Stevens Point, on Saturday, Oct. 23, when the town joined forces with the university to honor one of the UW-SP's most loyal sports fans, and athletic backer, Miss Sue Colman.

Miss Colman, a retired faculty member who served 21 years (between 1931-1952) as director of the primary education department, was honored in a manner most fitting a sports fan: the new synthetic track field at the corner of Reserve Street and Maria Drive was named the Colman Track Field in her honor.

In addition, President Lee Sherman Dreyfus also announced that she had been granted emeritus faculty status, which he said is "well-deserved but long-overdue."

Miss Colman was honored during halftime activities at the Pointer-Whitewater game, during which she was presented with a copy of Stevens Point Mayor Paul Borham's proclamation declaring that Saturday as Sue Colman Day. President Dreyfus led the brief dedication program, and a former student of Miss Colman's, Robert Shorey, recalled her service to the school.

Following the game, Miss Colman was honored at a reception for family and friends at the University Center.

What does she think about the naming of the field in her honor? "I feel about proud enough to burst — I can't believe that this has happened, and naturally, I feel small and humble because I don't know what I did to have the friendship that I enjoyed with those kids in my day," Miss Colman declared.

Miss Colman radiates enthusiasm as she reminisces of her sideline interest in Pointer sporting activities. She traveled to many of the away games and "brought home the cripples" (injured players) in her own car. "I guess I was an unofficial adviser to the players because I was always going to bat for them when they had problems," she mused. Her interest in football, particularly, still goes uninterrupted. Any NFL game draws her to a colored television set in the den of her Stevens Point home.

A $1,000 scholarship check is presented to Phyllis Woehlert, UW-SP senior, by John Ullrich, President of the Thomas H. Jacobs Foundation, Inc.

A scholarship of $1,000, made possible through a contribution to the University's Annual Fund Drive, has been given to Miss Phyllis Woehlert, a Wausau coed majoring in physical education.

Miss Woehlert's scholarship was provided by the Thomas H. Jacobs Foundation, Inc. of Wausau, earmarked for a student from Marathon County with financial need and exhibiting promise in a particular field.

Phyllis, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Woehlert of Wausau, is a senior and plans to attend graduate school next year and eventually teach on the university level.

Re-dedicate Lab School for Early Childhood Pioneer

An alumnus who graduated in 1899, and whose name has long been synonymous with early childhood development, was honored posthumously when the 42 year old campus laboratory school was recently re-dedicated in his honor.

A ceremony December 3 officially designated the three-story brick building as the Gesell Institute for the Study of Early Childhood, named for the late Dr. Arnold Gesell.

Gesell, a native of Alma in Buffalo County, was internationally recognized for his pioneering research in child psychology and development. He died in 1962 at the age of 82.

Besides honoring Gesell, the facility will carry out the goals of his profession, with an emphasis on developing new programs in early childhood education and learning disabilities.

After attending the Stevens Point Normal, Gesell taught in Stevens Point, Platteville, Los Angeles and Chippewa Falls. He later attended Clark and Yale universities, receiving the doctor of psychology and the doctor of medicine degrees. He was

Academic Appointments

A well-known researcher and recognized authority in the field of wildlife diseases, Dr. Trainer, 44, has assumed the position of Dean of the College of Natural Resources. Dr. Trainer succeeds Dr. John R. Ellery, who returns to his original assignment as assistant to President Lee Sherman Dreyfus. Dr. Trainer comes to Stevens Point from the UW-Madison, where he was a professor of veterinary science. He was on the UW-Madison faculty nine years, and prior to that he was a wildlife pathologist for six years with the State Department of Natural Resources.

DR. BURDETTE W. EAGON, DEAN, ALBERTSON CENTER FOR LEARNING RESOURCES

Dr. Burdette W. Eagon, associate vice president for academic affairs, has been appointed dean of the Learning Resources Center, a position he assumes in addition to his regular duties. Dr. Eagon replaces Dr. Fredrich Krempel who resigned to return fulltime to the classroom as a professor of history. The responsibilities of the deanship have been partially decentralized, with staff members Allen F. Barrows appointed as director of public services, and Keith Lea, director of technical services.

DR. DAVID L. COKER, VICE-PRESIDENT FOR STUDENT AFFAIRS

Dr. David L. Coker, 34, director of the UW-SP's counseling center the past five years, is the new vice-president for student affairs. He replaces Dr. William Stielstra, who held the position for six years, and has returned fulltime to teaching history at the university. Coker heads a professional staff of more than 50 persons, and is responsible for the departments of student health, counseling, admissions, placement, student activities, University Centers, financial aids and housing.

Future Vision . . .

The Dreyfus Commission

President Dreyfus

A new blue ribbon commission on cable television is being headed by UW-SP President Lee Sherman Dreyfus, who was recently named to the position by Governor Patrick Lucey.

President Dreyfus will lead 40 communications experts and representatives of the general public who will study possible means for the state to regulate development of cable television.

The Dreyfus Commission will hold a series of public hearings at various sectors of the state during the next several months, and discussions on selection of sites will take into account places where companies are currently negotiating with communities to provide cable service.

President Dreyfus, the former manager of educational station WHA-TV in Madison and UW-M professor (before he became president at Stevens Point) said the economics of cable currently is "promise and potential and not immediate return."

Dreyfus said the commission is encouraging city officials throughout Wisconsin to delay issuing franchises until the commission completes its study.

Home Ec Dept. Celebrates 70th Year at UW-SP

The UW-SP home economics department, one of the pioneering departments in the nation in the field of home economics and in its 70th year of operation at the University, is celebrating its distinguished program and longevity in a big way with the opening of the $2.5 million College of Professional Studies building. The facilities will be heavily utilized by home economics majors preparing for future careers in a field once known as "domestic science."

Present day departmental offerings include degree programs not only in the traditional home economics education but also in nutrition and foods, with specialized options in dietetics, food service management, experimental and general food and nutrition; home economics in business with options in housing and interiors, fashion merchandising, food and equipment and communications.

Dr. Agnes Jones, head of the home economics department, notes that over 1,500 teachers and specialists in the field have graduated from the University, and she predicts a greater demand for home economics graduates, particularly in the field of dietetics. Dr. Jones also views the program becoming coeducational to a greater degree since the employment opportunities in the field are many and varied.

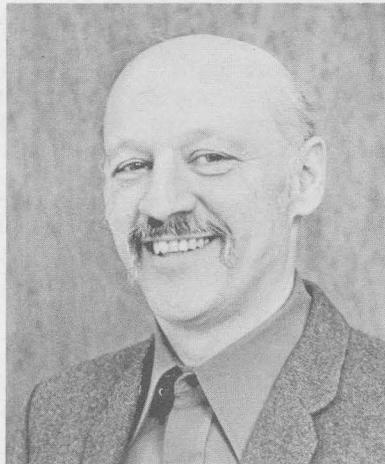

The UW-SP program predates formation of the American Home Economics Association by nearly a decade, and the association today lists the University as one of its pioneering institutions.

UW-SP Prof Goes Behind Bars To Bring Education to Prisoners

Dan Houlihan

Dan Houlihan, an assistant UW-SP professor of communications, is going to jail to teach.

He's got a "captive" student body—prisoners at the Stevens Point-Portage County jail, who are enrolled in his innovative educational program designed to "improve thought processes and create rational thinking."

Two 90-minute class periods are held each week, one on campus and one in the County-City Building, where the jail is located and from where the students come on a voluntary basis.

Attendance ranges from seven to 19 persons, depending on the number of persons actually incarcerated. Generally, 25 men are serving sentences simultaneously, from three months to one year.

Subject matter has about covered the broad sphere of man's recorded knowledge. Sometimes there are open discussions, other times lectures or film showings.

"We've talked about values and how they are formed, how prisoners view other people's values. I've exposed them to John F. Kennedy's "Profiles in Courage" films as well as movies produced on the humanities, politics, jet propulsion and even Buster Keaton and Charlie Chaplin," Houlihan recalled.

He noted that prisoners are "interested in ideas like everyone else, and through good literature and films we hope to improve those thought processes and create the rational thinking."

Houlihan said he developed the idea after Governor Lucey called for a new commitment to prison reform during a speech on campus in October. Part of Lucey's recommendations were involvement in the problem area by universities which, he said, have both great resources and means to aid prisoners.

The pilot project, scheduled by Houlihan for six weeks so he could learn about prisoners, the jail and its facilities, is expected to survive, and with even greater thrust. Next semester he's also planning to take the prisoners to some cultural events on campus.

How does he feel about this new experience? "It's not necessary to look for lost people in other parts of the world. We have them right here," Houlihan concluded.

Gerald Quinnell Named Teacher of the Year in Guam

Gerald (Gere) Quinnell, '50, has been awarded the 1971 Outstanding Educator award for the Island of Guam.

The citation was announced on the basis of numerous years of distinguished teaching service on the Western Pacific territory of the United States.

Gere was a runner-up for the Guam award the past two years.

A native of Wisconsin Rapids, he received his bachelor's degree in intermediate and upper elementary education from the UW-SP in 1950. He is currently completing work for his master's degree.

Fine Arts Building . . .

"Dedicated to the Spirit of Man"

Embellishing the spirit of man through involvement in the arts is the ultimate function of the new College of Fine Arts building, which houses the departments of art, drama and music.

The concrete building, which itself resembles a giant piece of sculpture, was officially dedicated on Oct. 10.

Within, the art department occupies nine specialized and multi-purpose studios in the building's west wing, as well as the Carlsten Art Gallery on the second level. The focal point of the drama department is the Warren Gard Jenkins Theatre, with adjacent facilities which include costume and scenery shops, dressing rooms and rehearsal and storage areas.

The music department boasts 40 practice rooms, separate large rehearsal rooms, 18 teaching studio-offices, faculty offices, 265 instrument lockers and a modern listening laboratory. The Peter J. Michelsen Concert Hall, which seats 350, is equipped with a professional recording room.

Where the Boys Are . . .

The Girls Are Too!

In the past, coeds coming to the UW-SP in search of an "MRS." degree have invariably met with gratifying success.

Male students have always heavily outnumbered female students enrolled, to the immense satisfaction of the female of the species.

Not so anymore.

According to Dr. William Clements, director of institutional research at the UW-SP, 46 per cent of all new freshmen are women, a gain of nearly five per cent over 1970, and almost eight per cent over 1966.

Why more women? Clements can't pinpoint the answer exactly, but statistics show that less "marginal men (academically) enrolled." New freshmen for the past term included 1,240 men and 1,057 women as compared with 1966, when there were 1,110 men and 695 women.

Oh, for the good old days, eh, girls?

UW-Point Grad Job Outlook Better Than National Average

Pity the poor college graduate of '70, '71 and '72.

After four long years of blood, sweat, tears and financial sacrifice, many a recent graduate has little else than his sheepskin to show for his efforts.

A minority of graduates — the lucky ones — have jobs. Most do not. Or, if they do, the jobs they hold may not be on a par with their education.

Nevertheless, Stevens Point graduates are faring quite a bit better than their counterparts across the country. The national average of degree holders securing any kind of job is about 50 per cent.

Of those who received degrees at the UW-SP in January and June, and August, 80 per cent preparing for teaching careers were placed in the teaching profession, according to Dennis Tierney, director of the career counseling and placement center.

The liberal arts grads weren't quite as successful, however. Tierney has records on about 70 per cent who found employment, is unsure of the status of another 15 per cent, and is quite certain at least another 15 per cent remains unemployed.

He estimates that only half of the non-teachers have jobs that are on a par with their education.

Tierney, who recently completed a study about supply and demand for graduates in the former Wisconsin State University system (which included the nine campuses including Stevens Point) learned that:

— The number of persons graduating in 1971 and 1972 as certified teachers will increase 22 per cent over the biennium from 1969 and 1970. The numbers will jump from 7,945 to 9,683 in a period when a decreasing demand exists for these kinds of professionals.

— The number of non-teachers turned out by the system will jump 48 per cent in the same period, from 6,275 to 9,284. In many areas, there's less demand in this category than in the teaching profession.

There is a vocational surplus, Tierney reported, in all areas of liberal arts (for non-teaching areas) with the exception of business administration and accounting, and to a lesser degree, in mathematics, economics, home economics and medical technology.

In teaching, shortages still exist in special education, speech therapy, mathematics, library education, industrial arts and agriculture. But in special education, the number of specialists in this field is increasing substantially.

Charles LaFollette, who handles all of the university's teacher placement as assistant to Tierney, reports that the biggest problem areas are social science, history, biology and English. He noted that future teachers of physics, chemistry, French, German, school psychology and library and general science are still experiencing relatively good success in their job hunting.

With the economy lagging, and unemployment at one of its highest levels in a decade, there has been a sharp drop in the number of recruiters coming to campus to interview prospective candidates for jobs.

Interviewing is off between 15-20 per cent over last year — "and last year was a bad time," Tierney said. Of 2500 companies, governmental agencies and school districts invited to meet with seniors this spring, only 125 have accepted.

To cope with the current economic situation and job market, Tierney has expanded the services of the placement center to include career counseling as well. The counseling service is available to all students, beginning in the freshman year. There is free resume and manuscript service for seniors and students seeking summer work, and Tierney's office serves as the official testing center for the state and federal civil services. The office even provides a computerized system where alumni are matched with jobs.

Summer School Program Slanted to Job Needs

The current tight job market will affect the University's 1972 summer school program, according to Dr. Winthrop C. Difford, summer school director.

Course offerings during the eight-week session will be geared towards requests by students and some of the professions still understaffed in the current job market.

A memo from UW central headquarters to Dr. Difford encouraged emphasis in the areas of engineering, city planning, health, social work, employment counseling, psychology, business and system analyzing. The memo states demands for personnel still exists in those fields.

"We're giving a lot of consideration to that recommendation," Difford said. "For example, we've already arranged to offer several courses in the business education department that weren't on the class schedules in previous summers."

Workshops offered during the summer session will include environmental education, kindergarten, learning disabilities, elementary physical education, art, school administration, and the Suzuki string institute. Neither the aerospace nor the economics workshop will be offered this year.

Although the schedule of curriculum offerings is still being finalized, highlights will include courses taught by Dr. James Newman and Dr. Robert Engelhard, professors of natural resources. They will lead study tours to Scandinavia and Germany, respectively. Not since 1958 has the University sponsored overseas course work during the summer.

Dr. Difford noted that about 170 professors will be hired to lead the university's 64th annual summer program, which runs June 12-August 4. He will utilize a budget of $435,000 to accommodate the anticipated enrollment of over 2,500 students.

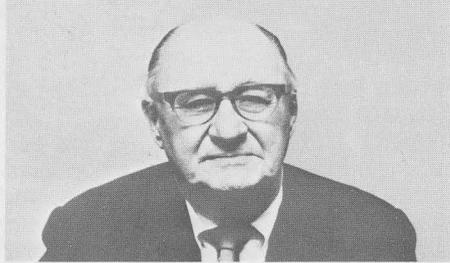

The complete schedule of summer school course offerings is expected to be available in mid-February.

'57 GRAD LAUDED FOR EFFORTS ON BEHALF OF POLISH COMMUNITY

W. Drzewieniecki

A '57 graduate of the UW-SP, Dr. Walter M. Drzewieniecki, was recently honored by over 200 friends and civic officials at a testimonial dinner which paid tribute to his outstanding work over the years as an American citizen of Polish extraction.

A resident of Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. Drzewieniecki, who has been given credit for initiating an ethnic revolution in western New York State, was selected for recognition by the State University of New York at Buffalo, the first individual with a Polish name to be so honored.

Dr. Drzewieniecki is a professor of history and chairman of the program in Soviet and East Central European studies at the University. He is married and has one daughter.

The celebration dinner, for the many friends who were unable to attend Dr. Drzewieniecki's formal acceptance of the 125th anniversary award of the State University of Buffalo last May, featured a traditional Polish style meal of golabki (stuffed cabbage) and pierogi (stuffed dough with cheese.) The Polish community leader was serenaded with the song "Sto Lat" (May He Live 100 Years), and was the recipient of accolades from civic officials. In honor of Dr. Drzewieniecki, Wallace Boguszewski, president of the Polanie Club, presented a $500 check to the Polish Central Foundation to be used for scholarships for Polish studies. Fillmore District Councilman Gus Franczyk presented him with a gold bison on behalf of Mayor Sedita.

Dr. Drzewieniecki's accomplishments include the establishment of the Polish Cultural Foundation in 1965 and the East European Studies Program in 1966.

Wearing an "I'm Proud to be a Polish American" button on his lapel, Dr. Drzewieniecki commented "This movement for the dignity and betterment of the Polonia (Poles who no longer live in Poland) for a well-deserved place in American society is rapidly gaining the dimensions of a revolution, of an avalanche, which must include all Polish Americans."

Dr. Drzewieniecki's formal citation read in part: "Your efforts on behalf of the 300,000 Western New Yorkers of Polish descent have been myriad. . . . Your encouragement to others interested in the field, and most of all, your personal example, is a continuing source of inspiration to Polish-Americans in Western New York, and indeed, throughout the nation."
