Director of Development

The decade of the 1980's will hold an unusual challenge for people involved in public higher education. Decreasing tax revenues and inflation are pushing institutions to the brink as they cope with reduced support, fight to maintain buildings, search for equipment dollars, work to sustain enrollment and face the grim reality that top faculty are being wooed away from higher education by industrial offers at higher pay.

During this decade, and perhaps those following, new attitudes will need to emerge concerning the advancement of public universities — now labeled tax supported. Ideas of what public monies should buy for the benefit of our students beyond basic survival must be reappraised. None of us strive for mediocrity, we strive for excellence. If current ideas do not change relative to private support for public education, mediocrity and a downward slide are now changed to permit up to 10 percent of these pretax funds to go for charitable purposes. It is apparent that most corporations have not responded to this incentive and, in fact, have allowed the relative level of corporate contributions to slip below levels previously thought to be acceptable. Public institutions need to work more diligently in this area telling our story and appealing to area and regional companies.

In Wisconsin, 90 percent of our students are Wisconsin residents and only 10 percent are non-residents. It is interesting to note, the alumni figures approximate the same balance. Our public school graduates tend to stay in Wisconsin and become part of our economy.

The Wisconsin Association of Independent Colleges reports that 60 percent of its students are from Wisconsin, 40 percent non-residents. It is assumed these percentages might approximate alumni locations.

It would appear, then, if a Wisconsin corporation really wanted to invest in the future of Wisconsin, its philanthropy would serve best if a larger share were directed to our state universities, especially when we note that almost 80 percent of our students attend public schools!

Many corporations choose a university community as they select a new site for building or expanding. A university community adds many benefits for employees and corporate officers and their families. Some of these businesses indicate their taxes are high enough and those taxes constitute public support. Circumstances indicate that as the cuts continue and inflation shrinks these fewer dollars, the institution that attracted and enhances the location of these companies may not be able to provide the cultural, recreational and academic programs envisioned without additional private support.

It is hoped Wisconsin business and foundation leaders will become more aware of the delicate funding balance that exists and how public higher education administration is making serious decisions that may affect the quality of our graduates, not because these decisions are desired, but mandated by tough choices. Do we sacrifice lab equipment for roof repair? Do we cut library acquisitions for a few more salary dollars? Do we train students with less than current state-of-the-art computers, etc. etc.?

inevitable on campuses across the country.

There is a persistent myth and misconception that private schools operate without public assistance and that public colleges and universities meet their objectives without private support. This perception is not true today; it has not been true for 50 years!

Private schools receive federal funds for student assistance, research and development and certain other programs. The vast majority of the states provide some form of aid to the private sector. Public subsidies to private higher education far exceed private support to private higher education.

Seventy-nine percent of America's college students attend public universities. Twenty-one percent attend private institutions. At the same time, 20 percent of the educational and general operating revenues of private higher education are tax monies that are provided to private institutions through student aid programs and other benefits. The imbalance suggests that public higher education does not receive its fair share of private gifts from corporations, individuals and community foundations.

It has been estimated that 40 percent of public college graduates are employed by business and industry. For example, 400 of the presidents and chairmen of the boards of Fortune magazine's 500 major companies attended public universities; 62 percent of the state governors attended state colleges; 48 percent of the living Nobel Prize laureates graduated from public schools; 60 percent of our U.S. Senators were trained by public universities; 49 percent of our U.S. Representatives to Congress attended public institutions.

Indeed, business and industry do have an important stake in being made aware of the current issues relative to supporting public higher education.

The federal government has encouraged private support of public higher education by permitting 5 percent of pre-tax profits for charitable purposes. Today corporate philanthropy remains a little above 1 percent as the most recent tax laws have

Barrows Heads Alumni

Allen Barrows of 3001 Channel Drive, Stevens Point, is the new president of the UW-SP Alumni Association.

He was elevated from the position of vice president to head the organization that maintains contact with nearly 30,000 graduates, friends and patrons of UW-SP. His term is for one year.

The association assists in fund raising, sponsors special events, assists fellow alumni, and aids in student recruitment.

Barrows succeeds Mrs. Mary Ann Nigbor, 1601 Airline Rd., Stevens Point, who served a two-year presidency.

William Horvath, Stevens Point, was elevated from a director position to vice president, and Todd Dillman, Milwaukee, was chosen as a new member director succeeding Mrs. Goldene Purcell, Park Ridge, who declined another term.

Barrows is a 1949 graduate of UW-SP who operated the Pal Restaurant in Stevens Point before pursuing graduate study at Indiana University and returning to his alma mater as a library specialist in 1969. He now holds the title at UW-SP of public services director in the Albertson Learning Resources Center.

Horvath, regional director of the National Association of Conservation Districts, is a 1962 graduate, and Dillman, an attorney for Clark Oil Company in Milwaukee, is a 1977 graduate.

Re-elected to three year terms on the association's 28 member board were: Marion Fey, Wisconsin Rapids; Kenneth Kulick, Stevens Point; Bruce Menzel, Greendale; John Taylor, Waukesha; Richard Toser, Park Ridge; and Patrick Vaughn, Wisconsin Rapids.

Holdover members of the board are Harvin Abrahamson, Fox Point; Barrows; William Bartell, Custer; Reuben Belongia, Eau Claire; John Bohl, Stevens Point; Judy Carlson, Stevens Point; Patricia Curry, Wisconsin Rapids; Lorraine Dudley, Stevens Point;

Also, Michael Ferrall, Racine; Sharon Godfrey, Waupaca; Katherine Hetzer, Stevens Point; Horvath; Raymond Hutchinson, Weyauwega; Erwin Janowski, Madison; James Neale, Park Ridge; Mrs. Nigbor; Dr. Thomas Nikolai, Marshfield; Clarence Novitzke, Park Falls; Patricia Okray, Stevens Point; Donald Wendorf, Schofield; and David Sharer, Stevens Point.

25th, 50th Anniversary Classes Will Be Reunited

The "Central State" classes of 1932 and 1957 will celebrate the 50th and 25th anniversaries of their graduations Saturday, June 13 at the University of Wisconsin Stevens Point's annual Alumni Day.

The afternoon and evening programs will be open to all alumni and friends of the university, but the attention will be focused on members of the two classes.

There will be a luncheon at noon followed by campus tours, a reception in the late afternoon and a banquet and program in the evening.

Tickets and information about lodging are available from the alumni office in Old Main (715) 346-3811.

The 1957 Class had as its officers: Louis Korth, president; Jerry Drake, vice president; Trieve Anderson, secretary; Ray Stroik, treasurer; Betty Behl, representative to the Student Council. Professor Pauline Isaacson, who is retiring this summer, was the faculty adviser.

In 1957, the basketball team had one of its best seasons in the history of the institution and advanced to NAIA finals in Kansas City where it was stopped during its second game by a powerful squad from Hamline. Also that year, Arthur Lyness, who had taught biology here for 27 of his 50 years in education, retired.

Loren Woerpel was amusing spectators at athletic events by coming to games dressed as a look-alike of the popular actor James Dean. The yearbook was dedicated to its adviser, Ray Specht, who retired last December after 34½ years on the faculty.

The 1932 class, which graduated to one of the country's worst job markets as it struggled in economic depression, had as its officers: Sadie Storzbach, president; Clifford Alberts, vice president; Cassie Raasoch, secretary; and Earl Carl Koch, treasurer.

In that year, the enrollment at Central State Teachers College was about 650. The prom king and queen were Ced Vig and Adeline Bellman. A relatively new faculty member, Peter Michelsen was organizing a band, and the basketball team played an exhibition game with the Green Bay Packers and lost. Celestine Nuesse, a sophomore, won the state oratorical contest, and Margaret Ashmun, who was graduated from the school in the mid 1890s and became nationally recognized for the books she wrote that appealed to women, returned to campus to be honored by a literary club bearing her name.

The 1932 yearbook contained advertisements for numerous firms still in business and many that have closed such as the H.D. McCulloch Company, Moll Glennon Company where you got "Your Money's Worth or Your Money Back," The Pal and Spot Restaurants, Hannon-Bach, Baebenroth and Taylor's Drug Stores, Krembs Hardware Company, the Ringness Shoe Company, and Wilson Floral Company.

Their Paths Returned Them to Alma Mater

They were members of the "Central State" class of 1957 — both history majors.

They were in the military during the Korean War, before entering college. After graduation they went in different directions but both were active in various activities in support of world peace and equal rights.

Years later, their roots in Portage County pulled them home and now both are on the staff of their alma mater.

On this 25th anniversary of their college graduation, Adolph (Zeke) Torzewski is serving as assistant chancellor for business affairs at UW-SP, and Raymond Stroik is on the staff of the university archives.

Torzewski has worked as a state employee nearly 25 years in various budget, personnel and data processing assignments. He has been on the administrative staff of UW-SP for 14 years and as assistant chancellor the past two years. He has been a candidate for the Assembly as a Democrat and a volunteer in various community projects. While living in Dane County, near Madison, he served on the Governor's Commission on Mental Health as chairman of a statewide task force on mental health personnel. He has a profitable hobby of bee keeping.

Stroik has made his name well known in Stevens Point for his special interest in commenting on social issues via letters to the editor of the Stevens Point Journal.

Stroik, who holds a Ph.D. in the history of ideas, has been on the UW-SP staff since 1978. He is a former history professor at St. Norbert's College in De Pere.

In 1956-57, Stroik wrote a column in the Pointer on "The Realm of Ideas." In his first in a series of articles, he pleaded for wider opportunities for advanced education and the right of persons to pick up the trail of knowledge at all times of their lives. He continues to promote this cause on campus today.

In his letter writing to the local newspaper, he has seized the theme of social justice in Central America. He was calling attention to the growing problem there several years ago, long before there were daily headlines in U.S. papers about hostilities there.

Stroik expresses his opinions in another forum. He is a member of the Bishop's Commission on Justice and Peace in the La Crosse Diocese.

Steiner Hall Re-Dedicated

A re-dedication of a residence hall was held Dec. 6 at UW-SP in honor of the late Professor Herbert Steiner.

Members of his family and his former colleagues and friends attended a buffet dinner and program at 1 p.m. and members of the public were at an open house and official ceremony at 3 p.m.

Steiner Hall was opened in 1967 and dedicated to the late Professor Fred Schmeckle. But, several years ago, when UW-SP opened its wildlife and nature reserve on the north campus, officials decided to name it for Schmeckle who had pioneered the natural resources program here. At that time the university announced it would consider selling the dormitory at the corner of Clark and Fremont Streets, which had been constructed in the mid 1950s and named for Steiner. So, the Steiner name was removed and that facility became known as South Hall and the Steiner name was put on the dormitory on Isadore Street that had honored Schmeckle's memory.

Steiner died Aug. 7, 1955 after having served UW-SP for 37 years. The Elk Mound native had served the institution as a teacher, chairman of social studies and history, dean of men and was regarded as one of the most popular professors of his era. Before earning bachelor's and master's degrees, he had studied at the Stevens Point Normal School and had been a high school teacher early in his career.

Steiner

Mrs. Steiner

His 91-year-old widow, Myrle, 2716 Simonis St., whom he married in 1913, took part in the ceremonies.

A Great Year in Pointer Sports

National tournament competition has been the measuring stick for athletic teams at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point during the 1981-82 academic school year.

Four of UW-SP's seven fall sports capped highly successful regular seasons by advancing on to national competition.

The most successful UW-SP team last fall was the women's cross country team which finished third in the NCAA Division III national meet.

The Lady Pointer runners were led by All-Americans Dawn Buntman of Green Bay, and Tracey Lamers of Kimberly, who finished sixth and 11th, respectively at the nationals.

First year coach Deb Lindert also guided her team to a second place finish in the NCAA Midwest Regional and to third place in the Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Meet.

The women's field hockey team of veteran coach Nancy Page competed in a national meet after winning the state conference championship for the second consecutive year. The women compiled a regular season record of 20-3 and were the No. 6 ranked team in the NCAA Division III rankings.

UW-SP was then one of six teams picked to participate in the NCAA Division III national tournament. The Pointers traveled to Elizabethtown, Penn., where they lost to Elizabethtown College 2-0.

Named to the all-state honor team were seniors Barb Bernhardt of Port Edwards, and Karen Konopacki of Menasha, and junior Sara Boehnlein of Weston, Conn.

The UW-SP men's cross country team won the school's first Wisconsin State University Conference championship in that sport in the fall. Coach Rick Witt's harriers entered the meet as a big underdog and then advanced to the NAIA National Meet, where they finished 11th. Dan Schoepke of Burnsville, Minn., was UW-SP's top finisher, in 57th place.

Schoepke and Leon Rozmarynowski of Wittenberg were named to the All-WSUC and NAIA District 14 honor teams and Witt was picked as the District 14 Coach of the Year.

Earning a spot in a national tournament for the second time in three years was the women's volleyball team of coach Nancy Schoen.

Her Lady Pointer spikers won the state conference championship and had a regular season record of 34-4. UW-SP hosted a NCAA Division III Regional and in the finals of that tourney Point was defeated by a talented team from Occidental College (Los Angeles, Cal.) in a grueling five game showdown.

Earning all-state laurels for Point were Tina Hill of Glendale, Doris Riley of Waupaca, and Mary Jo Wamser of Cedarburg.

The Pointer football team didn't advance to national competition with its 5-5 season record, but it did have individuals who figured strongly in national honors and statistics.

Chuck Braun, a senior from Athens, earned first team All-American honors from the NAIA and on the Kodak All-American Team as a wide receiver. He led the nation with 61 catches for 949 yards and seven touchdowns, all in just eight games. He averaged 7.6 catches and 118.6 yards per game this season.

Brion Demski, a senior quarterback from Hales Corners, was given honorable mention All-American laurels from the NAIA after leading both the NCAA and NAIA in total offense with an average of 289.5 yards per game. He was also No. 2 in passing.

Five Pointers were listed as members of the All-WSUC honor team. Joining Demski and Braun in earning the honor were Andy Shumway, a running back from Wisconsin Dells; Randy Ryskoski, a placekicker from Green Bay; and Gary Van Vreede, a defensive back from Green Bay.

The Lady Pointer tennis team finished fifth in the WWIAC Meet and came away with its first individual winner in a number of years.

Sarah Schallow, a junior from Marshfield, captured the individual title at No. 5 singles to cap an outstanding season in which she compiled a record of 13-2.

Teammate Kerry Meinberg, a senior from West Bend, finished third at No. 3 singles, to further aid the UW-SP cause.

After losing most of his team that tied for the WSUC title in 1980, golf coach Pete Kasson predicted a rebuilding year. His prophecy proved correct as the Pointers finished seventh in the WSUC Meet in 1981.

The Pointers did have some big moments, however, as they captured the first place trophy in both the Lawrence and UW-Green Bay Invitationals. Bob Van Den Elzen, a senior from Green Bay, was the only Pointer named to the All-WSUC all-star squad.

The men's basketball team of coach Dick Bennett had one of its best cage seasons in UW-SP history while winning the school's first conference title since 1968-69. The Pointers compiled a 13-3 record in the WSUC to tie UW-Eau Claire for the conference championship and also set a new school record for wins in a season with their 22-6 season record.

Included in the Pointers' outstanding season was a season opening 57-51 upset win over Division I Creighton University in Omaha, Neb.

Kevin Kulas, a senior from Medford, and John Mack, a junior from Milwaukee, earned first team All-WSUC laurels, while Dick Bennett was named the loop's coach of the year.

UW-SP concluded the season as the No. 16 ranked team in the nation according to the NAIA and also as the No. 1 ranked team nationally in team defense allowing just 53.3 points per game.

The young and inexperienced Lady Pointer basketball team came up with a 9-11 record for the season, but did feature record setting scorer and rebounder Anne Bumgarner.

Bumgarner, a junior from Mukwonago, set single season highs for points and rebounds in a season and she is now the second all-time leading scorer and rebounder in UW-SP history.

For the fifth consecutive year, coach Lynn "Red" Blair's men's swim team finished second in the WSUC Meet. However, this is one finish Blair is happy to accept as it was accomplished without the services of four All-Americans who had to drop from the squad.

Winning individual championships for UW-SP were Pete Samuelson, a freshman from Park Ridge, Ill., and Brad Thatcher, a senior from Rochester, Minn.

The women's swim team finished sixth in the WWIAC even though team members came through with 32 personal best performances. The Lady Pointer swimmers then advanced to the NCAA Division III Meet and placed 26th.

Leading Point in the national meet was Kim Swanson, a sophomore from DeKalb, Ill., with ninth and 10th place finishes, while Ann Finley, another sophomore from Madison, added 10th and 12th place points.

The Pointer wrestling team suffered through a frustrating season of injuries and finished last in the WSUC Meet after compiling a dual meet record of 3-6.

A bright spot for UW-SP was the performance of 177 pound junior Jim Erickson of Owen, who completed the regular season with a perfect 21-0 record. He then finished second in the WSUC and NCAA Division III Regional Meets and competed in the NCAA Division III National Meet where he had a 2-2 record.

Fred Stemmeler's dunk in the Pointers' opening game of the season against Creighton University in Omaha graphically depicts the achievements of men and women sports teams at UW-SP throughout the past year. The game drew national attention as Dick Bennett's team outclassed the favored Creighton, 57-51, as the famed Willis Reed began his career as a collegiate coach in Omaha.

A new sport came on the varsity sports scene at UW-SP this winter and that was ice hockey. As might be expected, it was a long season for the Pointer yearlings who finished with a record of 3-23-1. However, one of the wins was an upset win over Iowa State University.

Earning first team All-WSUC laurels for the Pointers were freshmen Jeff Stoskopf of Eagle River and Greg Tessier of Duluth, Minn.

The spring sports look to be in good shape as the defending WWIAC champion women's softball team returns most of its starters as does the men's tennis team.

The baseball and women's track teams will be undergoing rebuilding years, but both have a solid nucleus to build around.

Mural Going Up

A Quaker hat and a vest will be hidden among the 286,000 two-inch square ceramic tiles that make up a huge mosaic mural scheduled for installation this summer at UW-SP.

The art work will be approximately 150 by 50 feet covering nearly the entire front of the four-story College of Natural Resources Building. When finished, it may be the largest mosaic mural in the world, university officials have boasted.

Why a Quaker hat and a vest? Project director Richard Schneider, a ceramics artist, designed the individual tiles in honor of UW-SP Chancellor Philip Marshall, a Quaker, who began his teaching career at the Friends Boarding School in Ohio, and also to honor Marshall's predecessor on campus, Governor Lee Dreyfus, whose trademark is a red vest. Schneider won't reveal where the commemorative tiles will be placed — he's keeping the locations a secret until they're put up, and even then he may not tell.

Those squares will be among thousands of tiles drawn by Schneider that relate to the university's natural resources program and its role in the state and beyond. With a scale of 20 gradations from dark to light, the hand-decorated small tiles will form the over-all design which embodies such images as the cupola of UW-SP's Old Main, wildlife of the state, a large maple leaf, a Native American, and a map of Central Wisconsin.

A new computer printout of the mural donated by Control Data of Minneapolis is on display in the studio in the Fine Arts Building. The composite, scaled at one eighth actual size, serves as a blueprint for the placement of the tiles.

Faculty Achievements, Appointments

Thomas Detwyler

New Chairman

Thomas Detwyler, formerly director of the environmental science program at Willamette University in Salem, Ore., is the new chairman of the geography/geology department at UW-SP.

He succeeds Delmar Multhaupt who returned to full-time teaching.

Detwyler, 43, a native of Jackson, Mich., said he was attracted to UW-SP because of the opportunity to return to the Midwest and to be involved with an institution that has a well-developed curricula related to the environment.

About a decade ago, Detwyler penned a book, "Man's Impact on Environment" that was considered one of the first of its kind for students and professionals in the field. It was published by McGraw-Hill. He also authored "Urbanization and Environment" for Duxbury Press.

The new chairman had spent the past three years at Willamette where, in addition to having administrative responsibilities, he was associate professor of geography and environmental science. He was on the geography faculty of the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor for 12 years before moving to the West Coast.

Detwyler was given a B.S. degree from the University of Michigan, earned graduate credits from Otago University in New Zealand under a Fulbright Fellowship, and was awarded a Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md.

The outgoing geography chairman, Multhaupt, has served two three-year terms as head of the department faculty. There are nine full and three part-time members. He has taught on campus for 15 years.

Most recently, Multhaupt was involved in shepherding through various committees and official decision-making bodies a proposal to greatly alter the geography curricula. Effective this fall, students may opt to specialize either in cartography, urban/economic activities, physical environment or cultural environment within the geography major.

The old major was geared mainly for people studying to become teachers. Now graduates will be prepared for careers in such areas as business, economics and various phases of natural resources.

Sabbaticals Given

Two historians, an artist and a forester serving on the faculty of UW-SP have been granted sabbaticals to undertake special study and research projects during the 1982-83 school year.

The UW System Board of Regents has accepted recommendations from a screening committee at UW-SP and approved the awards for Donald Dietrich and Richard Face of the Department of History; Gary Hagen of the Department of Art; and Hans G. Schabel of the College of Natural Resources.

The four are among 57 faculty members in the UW System given leaves on either full-time basis for a full semester or half-time for two semesters.

Face, professor of history and member of the faculty since 1963, intends to prepare himself as a specialist in Wisconsin history to eventually take charge of classes now conducted by colleagues who intend to retire within a few years. His background is in medieval Europe with secondary specialization in ancient and modern Europe. A specific project he may be involved in, to provide him with expertise in the area of economic and cultural history of Wisconsin, would be research and co-authorship of a publication on the history of the craft of pipe organ building in the state.

Dietrich intends to prepare computer tutorial materials and simulation materials plus study/discussion guides for European and American history classes. The professor who has taught here since 1968 would, in short, like to use simulations or games to move students from passive observers to historical actors. The computer materials and other study guides would be used by students outside the classroom for acquisition of basic data of the course. Consequently, Dietrich would be free to devote more time in class periods to treating historical issues and themes, focusing on the formation of behavior patterns and values instead of hard facts.

Schabel proposes to write the first textbook ever prepared on the subject of fire management of forests. The German-born associate professor who has taught here since 1973 says, "During recent years, natural resources agencies throughout North America and other parts of the world have been revising their basic attitudes and policies toward forest fires. Whereas at one time, the belief that all forest fires are detrimental, promoted an all out emphasis on fire control, it is now known that fires judiciously used can meet certain silvicultural, landscape, range and wildlife management objectives in admirable ways."

Hagen, associate professor of art and director of the Carlsten Gallery, has been given his sabbatical to pursue specialized painting projects in synthetic media. He is particularly interested in a process of building up "luminations" of rice paper, rhoplex and pigment as a means of emphasizing light, space and atmosphere. He has been involved in developing a style of painting featuring large fields of space and color, and he has gone to desert regions of Southwestern United States and the subarctic of Northern Canada to mimic their terrain and anthropological themes. During his sabbatical, he plans to make a trip to Peru to investigate the Inca culture and ruins. Hagen has been at UW-SP since 1966.

Helen Corneli

Heads Programs

Helen M. Corneli, professor of English, will become director of the International Programs at UW-SP on July 1.

She succeeds Pauline Isaacson who is retiring.

Miss Isaacson, who has been on campus 36 years in various administrative as well as teaching assignments, founded the international studies program about 12 years ago and has guided its growth to include semester offerings in Germany, England, Poland, Spain, Taiwan, Malaysia and India (which has not been offered for several years).

Mrs. Corneli is in her 20th year on the faculty.

She has vast experience in living outside the boundaries of the United States.

Born and reared in India, she was one of five children of a Disciples of Christ missionary. With the exception of several one-year visits to the United States every seven years, she lived in "three or four very rural, quiet places without electricity. . . places where we got our water from wells." Her father was a third generation missionary in India. He recently retired at age 83 as dean of the school of world missions at Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena.

Early in their marriage, she and her husband, Clifford (Kip), lived in Paris for one year where he studied at the National Institute of Agronomy.

Last year, the Cornelis led a contingent of students in the semester abroad program in Taiwan-Nationalist China.

Mrs. Corneli attended Washington University in St. Louis and later completed her baccalaureate degree requirements and work for a M.A. at the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana. She holds a Ph.D. from UW-Madison.

While her husband was in a Ph.D. program in agronomy at UW-Madison in the early 1960s, the couple purchased a potato farm in the Plainfield-Hancock area. The Cornelis live there and at a home at 1316 Reserve St., Stevens Point.

Besides teaching, leading an overseas program, Mrs. Corneli has served UW-SP as director of the freshman English program and in the development of a Native American Center.

He's Mr. Metric

There is prestige in the national office to which a UW-SP professor has been elected.

But William J. Cable, a mathematician says smilingly that, "I sometimes liken it to involvement in the Flat Earth Society."

He has been chosen to be one of three regional directors of an organization which advocates something unpopular to many Americans — conversion to the metric system of measurement.

For the next two years, he will lead the 15-state Central Area of the U.S. Metric Association, Inc. More than 500 learning institutions, public agencies, businesses and individuals are under his jurisdiction in an area extending from Michigan to Texas.

Most people are not aware, says Cable that the United States Congress began passing legislation about the time of the Civil War in defining customary units of length in terms of metric measurements. As late as 1959, the Congress redefined the inch to be 2.54 centimeters. The problem has been getting the new measurements enacted.

The professor says full conversion is inevitable in this country; it's just a matter of time.

Article Cited

Dennis Tierney of the administrative staff at UW-SP, has been given the first prize for writing the "outstanding article of the year" in the nationally circulated Journal of College Placement.

Tierney, director of career counseling and placement and associate professor of psychology at UW-SP, was honored for writing "The University's Mission in a Decade of Turmoil." He defended the value of a liberal arts education for people entering the job market.

The College Placement Council, a national organization, was joined by the Middle Atlantic Placement Association in selecting Tierney for the award. The winning article was one in competition with others that have appeared during the past year in the quarterly journal.

The sponsors of the competition have sent Tierney a plaque and a $100 check.

There is a strong movement in academe at this time toward vocationalism in classrooms as salaries for technically-prepared graduates skyrocket. Tierney wrote that "the tangible rewards for a liberal arts education become very real when running life's vocational marathon, for the average graduate will experience 10 job changes and three lifetime career alterations."

Universities can best defend the liberal arts through "the will to educate, the vigor to lead and the energy to implement minimum competency standards for existing requirements."

National Director

Michael J. Kocurek, chairman of the paper science department at UW-SP has been elected to the 15-member board of directors of the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry (TAPPI).

He was chosen in a mail balloting by the 25,000 member organization which is headquartered in Atlanta, Ga., and has been in existence about 50 years.

Kocurek assumed his office in Washington, D.C., during TAPPI's annual meeting March 8 to 12. He will attend about six meetings each year at various cities throughout the United States and Canada.

Kocurek has been elected to serve a three-year term. He is the only academician on the board and at 38 is believed to be the youngest person elected to the governing body.

Student Life Staffers Elected

Five staff officers in the division of student life at the UW-SP have been elected to head regional, state or international organizations.

Dr. James Zach, coordinator of clinical services in the health services, is the president-elect and will become the next leader of the Wisconsin College Health Association.

Dennis Tierney, director of career counseling and placement, is president-elect of the Wisconsin Career Planning and Placement Association and will assume the top office in 1983.

Dr. Bill Hettler, director of the health service, will assume duties later this year as president of the Society of Prospective Medicine, an international organization with most of its members from the United States and Canada.

Registrar David Eckholm is the current president of the Wisconsin Association of College Registrars and Admissions Officers, and Georgia Duerst, student involvement coordinator, is president of the Central Wisconsin Association of Volunteer Administrators.

Pioneer in Radio Broadcasting Here Dies

Mrs. Gertie Hanson Halsted, 92, who pioneered instruction in radio and the art of broadcasting while serving on the faculty of UW-SP, died Jan. 26 in a hospital in St. Petersburg, Fla.

She had lived in Florida nearly 30 years, the last two and one-half years in a boarding home in Seminole.

Her only survivors are cousins. She was the widow of Harry Halsted, a retired Baraboo city employe whom she married after her retirement from the university.

Funeral services for Mrs. Halsted, who was a Methodist, were at the International Chapel in St. Petersburg and burial was in Memorial Park there.

Mrs. Halsted had taught at UW-SP from 1920 to 1953 with the exception of three years when she was on leaves of absence pursuing academic degrees.

In 1974, the Alumni Association honored her at a dinner and program attended by her former students and colleagues. The speaker, Gov. Lee S. Dreyfus, then chancellor here, announced at that time that the campus radio station, WWSP-FM, is dedicated in her honor and a plaque citing her contributions to broadcasting is to be displayed in the station studio.

Born Jan. 29, 1890, in Richland County, she was graduated from high school in 1909 and the county normal school in 1910, both in Richland Center.

She earned $360 for her first year of teaching in a rural school in her home area and continued in that employment until 1913. She later served on the faculty of the Baraboo City Grade School for six years. Her first assignment at the then Stevens Point Normal School was as a teacher in the training school program.

In 1924, what is now the state's Department of Agriculture established a radio station in the Hotel Whiting to serve farmers in north central Wisconsin. As public interest in broadcasting intensified, the station's management encouraged faculty and students at UW-SP to develop programs, and Mrs. Halsted was among those who became early and active participants. The studios were moved from the hotel to the Fox Theater and in 1937 were established in Old Main. The transmitter was at Ellis.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Halsted did graduate study in radio at UW-Madison and as a special project did a program for the WHA station's School of the Air series entitled, "Neighbors 'Round the World." Nearly 34,000 state children from 1,726 schools enrolled in it.

In 1940, after completing her advanced study in geography and broadcasting, she was involved in the establishment of the campus' radio workshop.

In addition to programs developed by Halsted, there were such regular broadcasts as "The Music Album" by student Robert H. Rifleman and Professor Gilbert E. Faust; "Your Story Time" by student Jane Miller; "Real Americans," by Professor Norman E. Knutzen; "Come Read to Me" by Professor Leland M. Burroughs; and "Conservation and the American Youth" by Professors Fred Schmeeckle, Bernard Wievel and Walter Sylvester.

During World War II, Mrs. Halsted tapped the talents of men in the Army Air Corp who were involved in a special training program on campus. "The 97th Is on the Air" was a regular Saturday afternoon special.

At the time of her retirement, she said that a highlight of the workshop was its receipt in 1950 of one of the top prizes from the National Education Conference for the program, "The Half Way Mark" which she had directed with students Peter Thomas, Maurice Mead, Ed Furstenburg, Daryl Fonstad, and Richard Karel.

Gertie Hanson Halsted
(1974)

Some of her students, including David Silverman, were instrumental in the development of commercial broadcasting in Stevens Point after WSPT went on the air as WTWT in 1948.

In 1950, WLBI became part of the state radio network with a transmitter at Auburndale, and Mrs. Halsted and her students continued to produce programs for that outlet as well as commercial stations in the area.

In the professional circles, Mrs. Halsted was active in the National Association of Educational Broadcasters, having been on several of its convention programs, and had been an officer in the Wisconsin Association for Better Radio Listening. By the time of her retirement, she was involved in meetings discussing the future of television. She took part in area education societies and was affiliated with the local chapters of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs and the American Association of University Women.

She had held the title of chairman of the geography department at UW-SP and in the 1920s she became one of the first women in the history of the institution to serve as chairman of the faculty.

For a time after her retirement, she was associated with Educators Program Service and Tape Adventures, based in Randolph.

At the time of her departure from UW-SP, President William C. Hansen noted on her credentials that "her record in the college was A-1 Plus. She has earned emeritus status and richly deserves it."

Oniel Mitter Succumbs in France

A resolution paying tribute to Oniel K. Mitter, a mathematician who had taught 10 years at UW-SP was approved by the Faculty Senate.

Mitter, 75, died Oct. 3 at the American Hospital in suburban Paris. He had been ill about three days. His body was cremated and the ashes were interred in Pere Lachaise, oldest cemetery in France.

Mitter and his wife, Bella, had been vacationing in England, Switzerland and France about four months prior to his illness. She returned to Stevens Point Oct. 21.

Mitter was born July 22, 1906, in Myitkyina, Burma, and was valedictorian of his class at Rangoon University where he received a bachelor's degree in 1926. He later earned another bachelor's degree with honors and a master's from the University of London.

His career as an educator had been at Rangoon University in Burma, the University of Nigeria, Lanchester College of Technology in Coventry, England, and (since 1968 when he came to the United States) at Austin College in Sherman, Texas, and from 1970 to 1980 at UW-SP.

He lost all of his possessions twice in his life as the result of wars. The first time was in the mid 1940s when he fled Burma on foot enroute to India. He befell a similar fate about 15 years ago during civil war in Nigeria.

"Through all of this he retained a great sense of optimism and enthusiasm for life," Mathematics Chairman Bruce Staal said in his presentation of a resolution to the Faculty Senate.

His losses had included his notes based on many years of research, which were to be used for publication of a book. He was a specialist in statistics, and at the University of Nigeria he established a major in that field plus a graduate program. Much of his time in Nigeria, from 1961 to 1967 was spent as chairman of the 13-member mathematics and statistics department.

A pioneer in academe in the field of computer science, he had taught courses on that subject at UW-SP. In a letter of recommendation before he was hired here, a friend who then was chairman of mathematics at Yale University wrote that Mitter had taught himself the language and science of computers. "... a remarkable feat for an older person coming from a very foreign country where there can hardly be any advanced equipment," the letter of recommendation stated.

Mitter had done extensive study of the history, economics and politics of under-developed countries in Asia and Africa and had given numerous lectures on those subjects. He could speak five languages.

He taught full-time at UW-SP for six years until reaching age 70, then he was on a part-time assignment through the spring semester of 1980.

Mitter had been a delegate to the First African Population conference in 1966 that was attended by demographers from all parts of the world. He had held membership in the Indian Physical Society, American Astronomical Association, Science Association of Nigeria and Mathematical Association of Nigeria.

Mitter's survivors are his wife whom he had married 47 years ago; two daughters living in Paris and London, and one grandson. His wife is a noted batik artist.

Sadat Remembered

A commendation signed by Egypt's assassinated president, Anwar Sadat, has been presented to a group of students at UW-SP.

Leaders of Steiner Residence Hall Council received the certificate in appreciation of their donation of $1,500 for the fight against alcoholism. The students raised the funds by having a "shopping cart push," selling glasses embossed with the initials of "UW-SP," and holding a "fun run" from Stevens Point to Madison. While in Madison, the students met Governor Lee Dreyfus, who issued them a proclamation for the alcohol awareness program.

The alcohol educator at UW-SP, Stuart Whipple, said he sent certificates last summer to about 25 "famous" people and asked them to sign them. He chose to mail one to Sadat because "like Sadat, who was willing to take risks and endure ridicule in his fight for peace, the residents of Steiner Hall took risks and endured ridicule in their efforts to raise money for the fight against alcoholism." Sadat was killed about two months later.

Another certificate was signed and returned by former first lady, Betty Ford.

Treehaven, new natural resources camp being developed for UW-SP by the University Foundation, is progressing. Benefactors Dorothy Vallier, left, and Fern Young cut ribbon at the camp's main lodge which will be named for the late Irvin L. Young, Palmyra inventor. Land was given by Mrs. Vallier and her husband, Jacques. Architect's drawing is of the Irvin Young Lodge.

Alumnus Bequeaths $50,000 for Scholarships

Michael Zylka remembered his alma mater in his will with a $50,000 bequest for a scholarship fund.

But he specified that not his, but his favorite professor's name be placed on the annual awards for students at UW-SP.

Zylka was a 1937 graduate of UW-SP who was successful both as a sales factory representative and investor. His widow said he often credited Professor Leland Burroughs for motivating him and helping him.

The son of a Stevens Point blacksmith and youngest of 10 children, Zylka died Feb. 6, 1980, in Minneapolis at the age of 65. In a codicil to his will written shortly before his death, he specified that two scholarships should be presented by UW-SP each year from his bequest. At present interest rates, the fund will generate at least $6000 per year. Leland Burroughs Scholarship winners will be eligible to have their awards renewed to a maximum of five years, he specified.

Zylka had majors in history and English and was affiliated with the Rural Life Club and Phi Sigma Epsilon. He was best known as a championship debator and orator and was a member of a Central State Teachers College team that won a tri-state contest.

It was through his debate activities that Zylka had considerable association with Professor Burroughs, who died in the late 1960s after serving UW-SP nearly 50 years. Burroughs coached debate.

Earl Shippy, a local businessman and longtime friend of Zylka said "Mike was a terrific speaker" which helped him considerably in sales work.

A "brilliant" man of considerable ambition, according to his widow, Eleanor, Zylka took a teaching job at a country school north of Stevens Point, in the Crocker's Landing area, when he was 18 years old. He later worked for a time as a sports writer for the Milwaukee Journal and taught in a high school. He also worked for Lullabye Co. in Stevens Point for several years.

During World War II, Zylka served in China, Burma and India, and after his discharge he spent a short time in New York before moving to Minneapolis where he was a sales representative for Telescope Co., manufacturers of lawn and patio furniture.

Besides his alma mater, Zylka made "very generous bequests," according to his widow, to the Salvation Army, and programs for crippled children, burn victims and the elderly that are operated by Masons and Shriners.

He had maintained connections to his hometown by holding life membership in the Elks Club.

Leonard Gibb, executive director of the UW-SP Foundation, Inc., told members of the foundation's board of directors there is growing interest among alumni and friends of UW-SP to make bequests for institutional programs. He said he was aware that the university was included in four wills at the time he began working in the development office several years ago. "We have been informed that we are remembered in at least 36 wills now," he added.

The Zylka bequest was awarded at the foundation's annual meeting in January.

The foundation elected Jerry Viste, president of Wausau Insurance Companies, as a new board member and honored retiring directors John Ullrich, Wausau, and K. B. Willett, Stevens Point, who have served the maximum number of terms allowed by the by-laws.

Re-elected were John Buzza, Joe Okray, John Joanis and Sam Kingston, all of Stevens Point, and Herbert Grover, Madison, who is State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and Mary Williams, of Madison and Stevens Point, who has been serving as one of Gov. Lee Dreyfus' chief aides.

Officers who will continue into the second year of their two-year terms are Terry Norris, Port Edwards, president; John Seramur, Stevens Point, vice president; Gene Katz, Plover, past president; Robert Worth, Stevens Point, treasurer; Karen Engelhard, Stevens Point, executive secretary; and Gibb, executive director.

Gibb said foundation assets are now $1.9 million, up from about $1.2 million one year ago. Much of the increase is the result of fund raising for construction of new buildings at Treehaven, the privately-developed natural resources camp near Tomahawk for UW-SP students.

Gibb said the main lodge is nearly complete and the new residence for the camp director will be occupied this weekend by a UW-SP graduate student.

It was announced that a $30,000 pipe organ has been purchased by the foundation at a sale price of considerable savings and placed in Michelsen Concert Hall of the Fine Arts Center.

Plans for this year are to continue work at Treehaven, encourage more deferred giving, seek additional unrestricted income, complete and place the mosaic mural on the Natural Resources Building, negotiate for purchase of additional land for the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station and assist the university with student recruitment projects.

Among the expenditures from the unrestricted gifts budget last year were various small projects assisting faculty and students at a total cost of $10,500.

Mrs. Engelhard, who is in charge of the scholarship program on campus, said a brochure recently has been completed announcing that the foundation provides more than $90,000 in student scholarships each year and more than a third of that is to go to incoming freshmen in the top 10 percent of their graduating classes.

Dollar figures were the topic of discussion throughout the meeting, and Chancellor Philip R. Marshall said at the conclusion that UW-SP is worth $100 million to Stevens Point's economy each year. That amount is the total of the money spent by students here, paid in salaries and for services and supplies, plus the contributions of the federal and state governments for student financial aids.

Marshall said he has no idea what the impact will be on the campus and community when the sharp cutback of federally supplied student aid goes into effect this fall.

Million Dollar Accomplishment

They served a million dollar cake one morning last fall at UW-SP. Yes, it even had green frosting and was decorated to look like paper money.

The dessert capped a fund raising campaign in which UW-SP, for the first time, raised $1 million in private funds in one year.

The Development/Alumni Office staff hosted the reception for officers of the UW-SP Foundation, Inc., and fellow employees in Old Main.

Chancellor Philip Marshall said revenues will be used largely to "build endowments for deserving students" and development of a natural resources camp/research facility near Tomahawk.

Marshall and Foundation President Terry Norris of Nekoosa paid tribute to Leonard Gibb, director of development, whose job is to raise funds for projects that aren't covered under the state budget.

The total receipts for the fiscal year ending Sept. 1 were $1,087,000, an increase of 22 percent from the $891,000 total recorded last year.

The gains came despite downturns in the economy, but Gibb told well wishers that fund raisers can still be successful if they have worthy projects which appeal to people.

During the reception, it was announced that a bequest of $40,000 has been received from the estate of Susan Elizabeth Colman, a retired faculty member who died in the fall of 1980.

Miss Colman left nearly all of her estate to charities and church organizations and specified that the money to UW-SP be used for music scholarships and support of athletics. Miss Colman served for a time on the board of directors of the university foundation and had assisted in earlier fund raising projects for the institution. The synthetic-surfaced track on the north campus is named for her.

The foundation's receipts last year were for products, services and contributions to scholarships, special projects and unrestricted accounts for discretionary use by the board of directors.

Sales were for such things as lifestyle assessment questionnaires, videotapes produced about paper production, a 40-acre tract of land in the town of Plover that had been given years ago by Amanda Goerke (who died nearly 60 years ago and for whom Goerke Park is named); revenues from the foundation-owned Central Wisconsin Environmental Center, various conferences and treatment provided in a laser laboratory for people with portwine birthmarks; donations to an alumni fund raising campaign, benefit ball, $50 per plate "Evening with the Chancellor" dinner, and various scholarship accounts.

The largest gifts were earmarked specifically for the development of Treehaven, new natural resources camp near Tomahawk, for a basic skills program (with a $100,000 grant from the Mellon Foundation), and the paper science program.

Gibb said he now is involved in raising money for phase two of Treehaven, which carries a $900,000 price tag for several new buildings plus the mosaic mural that will be completed this summer on the front of the College of Natural Resources Building and an organ for Michelsen Concert Hall.

Chancellor Develops Manuscript on Cube

Philip R. Marshall has a lot of mind boggling problems to face as chancellor of UW-SP in these times of austere budgets.

To divert his attention from them, he has sought the ultimate in problems.

Marshall is an affectionado of the Rubik's cube and has mastered it.

Within two and one-half minutes, he can bring a solid color to all sides of the internationally-popular puzzle.

True, whiz kids can do it faster, but Marshall is over the hill in that category. He's 55.

But the chancellor has gone a step further than most cubists by penning instructions how to manipulate the puzzle.

He has spent his leisure since last summer studying the cube and writing about it, and in December, he completed a 55-page typed manuscript. The title of his proposed book is, "The Rubik's Cube — The Simplest Solution." The material has been sent to a publisher in New York City, and he is waiting for a reply.

Marshall believes his work deserves special consideration because readership surveys among American students in higher education show that two of their top 10 favorite books now are about Rubik's cube.

With an analytical mind nurtured by his study through the Ph.D. level in chemistry, Marshall has devised a system which involves fewer moves than one described in a book entitled, "The Simple Solution to the Rubik's Cube." Until the book is published, his solution is a secret.

Our People Will Make the Difference

By Chancellor Philip Marshall

The current budget crisis of the State of Wisconsin and the worsening budget crunch of the University of Wisconsin System places me and many other individuals in an awkward position. How do we, on the one hand, complain about inadequate resources to perform our task as it should be done (as I have done on several occasions) while at the same time extolling the virtues of a great university?

Obviously, I cannot speak for the other campuses of the University of Wisconsin, but I can speak for this one. As I examine this beast, I find no fat. In fact, I find a lot of ribs showing (we do not have the equipment and supplies that we need). But I also find a lot of muscle. That muscle lies, as it always has, in the hearts and minds and spirit of the people who serve the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

From the beginning, there was a Joseph Collins. There have been, and undoubtedly always will be, the Bessie Mae Allens, Fred Schmeeckles, Will Hansens and many others like them. They have always been underpaid and no doubt always will be. The only difference now is that they are more underpaid than they used to be. This country has many peculiar characteristics, not the least of which is the fact that we pay our entertainers many, many times what we pay our educators, those people to whom we entrust the minds upon which our future depends.

But there is a consolation and that is the reward which is intrinsic: the satisfaction which comes from service, the fulfillment which comes with the development of, and association with, our outstanding programs and the glow which accompanies the success of students and former students. It is very fortunate that such individuals are motivated more by these intrinsic rewards than they are by the coin of the realm. However, we cannot afford to neglect the latter since most missionaries are quite willing to be martyrs for more of it rather than less and could attain this exalted position elsewhere just as well as here.

Lacking an adequate supply of mammon, we must be sure that we pay our faculty abundantly in that area where our resources are more plentiful. That is in recognition, love and affection.

Our salvation in recent years has been due to the senior faculty and administrators who have served us well and are still here, people like Pat Crow, Agnes Jones, Bill Stielstra and Roland Trytten. But the future will depend on our younger leaders, individuals who can help us perfect the programs we have now and develop those we need for tomorrow. Most especially, these are the people who must persuade new faculty to join us. They are the ones who not only believe in themselves and what they are doing but they believe in their colleagues and in this institution. Most importantly, these leaders have the capacity to attract others and to infect them with their enthusiasm, their dedication and their faith in the future.

The best known of these individuals is undoubtedly Dan Trainer. While there are several talented and dedicated faculty who have been members of the College of Natural Resources for a longer time, Dean Trainer is generally credited with being the catalyst who has recruited new faculty and united the entire group into one of the best faculties in this field in the country.

But there are many others about whom much less is heard. Virgil Thiesfeld has helped to mold an outstanding Department of Biology without which the College of Natural Resources would be unable to function as it does. John Zawadsky is credited with assembling the best undergraduate Department of Philosophy in the middle west. Other strong leaders include Myrvin Christopherson in Communication, Mark Seiler in Foreign Languages, Richard Christofferson in Political Science and Justus Paul in History.

While there are others who could be named, Jim Moore provides an excellent example of an individual who has made a tremendous difference in a relatively short time. Coming to a moribund program in 1975, when attendance at dance performance was sparse and not a few spectators would leave at intermission, he and his colleagues have created an outstanding program, perhaps the best in Wisconsin. Crowds are large and no one leaves before the finale.

In another area, I would mention Fred Leafgren and his colleagues in Student Life. Fred has a unique quality which attracts outstanding personnel and which obtains maximum effort from them. Our programs in Housing, Wellness and Student Volunteer Services are used as models at other universities across the country. Our Housing program was judged to be one of the 10 best in the country by student services directors.

The future of UW-SP depends on our ability to keep faculty like those named above and recruit still more just like them. Recruiting those leaders is now the job of our new Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs, Dr. Patrick McDonough. Vice Chancellor McDonough comes to us from the University of Evansville where he was Dean of Fine Arts. Certainly, we will measure his success in terms of the improvement in quality of various university programs and the development of new programs for future students.

Three new departmental leaders have been recruited this year. All are expected to make significant improvements in their programs and, in fact, all have already done so. They are Mary Jo Czapski in Home Economics, Bob Taylor in Economics and Business and Tom Detwyler in Geography and Geology. We expect even more and we will hope that future generations of students will express gratitude for the contributions they have made just as their predecessors did for Joseph Collins, Bessie Mae Allen and so many others.

Summer Information Available

The 75th annual summer session of UW-SP has been scheduled for June 14 to Aug. 6.

An enrollment of between 2,700 and 2,800 — similar to what has been recorded in the past two years — is expected, according to Orland Radke, session director and head of the office of continuing education and outreach.

Offerings and information about costs and registration are listed in a timetable which is part of the 1982 summer session magazine being distributed on request to individuals, schools, and libraries. Copies are available from the Office of Continuing Education and Outreach in Old Main, UW-SP, 54481.

For a fourth consecutive year, UW-SP will sponsor a four-day summer schedule for many of its courses. And, there will be considerable flexibility of scheduling for students as professors plan to offer their courses either for one week, two or three weeks, or four and more, up to the entire eight weeks of the session. Those offered during shorter periods of time may have fewer credits than courses spread over a longer period and/or may involve longer class periods each day. The four-day schedule usually does not apply to courses held in time slots of less than four weeks.

A mini-session is planned for the three-week period preceding the beginning of the summer session. About 15 courses will be offered in this period.

There will be workshops on such diverse topics as nucleic acid and the small city study tour in textiles and fashion. The tour will be led by UW-SP home economics faculty members Ann Fairhurst and Shirley Randall to textiles centers in South Carolina and to fashion industry installations in New York City.

After the regular summer calendar ends in early August, another mini session will include music instruction in the American Suzuki Talent Education Institute. Several thousand people come to the institution each year from around the world to participate in it.

The Elderhostel program at UW-SP will be expanded this summer with a second session exclusively for women beyond age 60 who are interested in the out-of-doors.

A maximum of 26 participants will be accepted to be in residence from Aug. 29 to Sept. 4 at the environmental station on Sunset Lake, about 18 miles east of the university campus. Housing will be in a new solar-heated dormitory.

"The Lake States through the Eyes of Wisconsin's Great Naturalists" is the topic of the total program which will include exploration of the landscape's mature forests, floating bogs, marshlands and lakes. The writings of John Muir, Aldo Leopold and Sigurd Olson will be studied.

In addition, UW-SP will host a fifth annual Elderhostel on campus from July 25 to 31 for men and women over 60. Three topics of discussion will be "Utopian Communities — Past and Present," "Exploring Plants and Bird Life of Central Wisconsin," and "Altered States of Consciousness — Exploring the Frontiers of Inner Space."

Information for registration, payment of fees and housing is available from Barbara Inch of the UW-SP Office of Continuing Education and Outreach in Old Main. The charge for participation and room and board is $150 per person for the July program and the same amount for the August-September field study. Area residents may enroll as commuters at $50 per session.

Isaacson Scholarship Started

Pauline Isaacson

Faculty colleagues of Professor Pauline Isaacson have established a fund which contains nearly $1,500 to perpetuate her name on campus in support of outstanding students and programs at UW-SP.

They collected the money while preparing for a reception in her honor last fall at the Stevens Point Country Club.

The Pauline Isaacson Fund will be administered by the UW-SP Foundation, Inc. and contributions will be encouraged at several social events during the remainder of the academic year, according to Professor Gerald Johnson who helped establish it.

Professor Isaacson, will retire this summer after 36 years as a teacher and administrator at UW-SP.

In a tribute written by her former boss, Gov. Lee S. Dreyfus, Professor Isaacson was cited for her role in "broadening opportunities for students. . . almost single-handedly developing and directing the Office of International Programs which has become one of UW-SP's great success stories through semester offerings in England, Germany, Poland, Spain, Malaysia, India and Taiwan. . . for contributions she has made to the world community in bringing together and promoting understanding between peoples from all parts of the world."

Dreyfus proclaimed Oct. 24 as "Pauline Isaacson Day" in Wisconsin.

Gerald E. Chappell, one of the planners of the program, said her name should be added to "The Record Book of People Who Have Greatly Influenced the Lives of Other People."

In earlier days, Professor Isaacson was chairman of the former speech department and she was instrumental in curricular developments in the areas of communication, communicative disorders and drama, all of which now are in separate departments. She has been director of international programs since she founded it about 13 years ago.

'Pat' Crow

'Pat' Crow's Name Chosen for Award

Thirteen hundred dollars in prize money has been awarded to the top scholars in UW-SP's Department of History.

The annual student recognition program included announcement of a new scholarship fund to honor the department's senior faculty member, Frank (Pat) Crow who is in his 35th year of teaching on campus.

Students in the UW-SP History Club and Phi Alpha Theta honorary fraternity originated the idea for the award and held various fund-raising projects to earn $150 for the first recipient, Patricia Arnold of 141 13th St. N., Wisconsin Rapids.

Crow, a former department chairman and former head of faculty government, has been nominated often by his students for recognition of teaching excellence. He and his wife, Luella, have been active throughout their years in Stevens Point in hosting special activities for collegians, especially foreign students.

The scholarship planners said they have arranged with the UW-SP Foundation, Inc. to establish a permanent fund and now are encouraging friends, plus past and present colleagues and students of Crow to make contributions. The tax exempt gifts may be addressed to the foundation office in Old Main.

As the first winner of the Crow Scholarship, Miss Arnold said she intends to use it for her final semester here prior to entering law school. Her special interest now is in the history of how laws came to be, why they were written and landmark decisions. In her department, she has served as president of both the UW-SP History Club and Phi Alpha Theta honorary fraternity.

Other recipients of awards are Mark Koepke of Appleton, and James Derleth, Minocqua, who each were given $450 Rhys W. Hayes Memorial History Scholarships; Gary P. Worthing, Beloit, given the $100 Elwin W. Sigmund Memorial History Scholarship;

Also, Amy M. Hielsberg, Oshkosh, given the $50 Herbert Steiner Prize; and Cheryl J. Peterson, Clear Lake, and John H. Terre, Madison, each given $50 History Department Recognition Awards.

The selection of Professor Crow's name for a new UW-SP scholarship was one of two honors recently bestowed on him.

In February, Evergreen Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, Stevens Point, gave Crow its Brotherhood Award for his work in "building bridges between cultures." His special contribution, it was noted, has been in his service to foreign students.

'Nannie' Gray Remembered

More than a half century after she retired from the faculty, UW-SP held "Nannie Gray Week" in connection with an open house of foreign language facilities last November.

Miss Nancy Gray taught at the Stevens Point Normal from 1896 to 1928, and pioneered instruction in foreign language. The Charleston, Ill., native who was a graduate of the Illinois State Normal University, did additional study at numerous Big Ten universities, in Germany and at Middlebury, Vt. She taught German, Spanish, French and Latin.

This open house included individually guided tours of the Mildred Davis Language Laboratory and Materials Center plus other department facilities in the Collins Classroom Center. Faculty offices are on the fourth floor and the lab and classrooms are on the third floor. The lab was named in honor of Professor Emeritus Mildred Davis who succeeded Miss Gray as head of the foreign language program and remained on the faculty more than 40 years.

The university language program has grown to include courses in German, Spanish, French, Russian, and Chinese. There also are occasional courses in Polish and Greek.

Department Chairman Mark Seiler says Latin may be re-introduced within a few years because of renewed student interest.

A new faculty position was filled this fall, bringing to nine the number of full-time faculty in the department plus four part-time teachers.

Keith Palka, who has been working toward a Ph.D. degree at the University of Michigan and teaching at Michigan State University, has been hired for the new position. He teaches French and is qualified to hold classes in Latin, too.

Filling positions of resigned faculty members are Gabriele Strauch, a native German who has been working recently on her Ph.D. at UW-Madison, and

'Nannie' Gray

Michael Smith, holder of a Ph.D. from the University of California in San Diego and most recently a faculty member at the University of San Diego. Ms. Strauch teaches German and Smith is in French but also is qualified to teach German and Latin.

Seiler reported that enrollment in foreign languages this fall is at an all-time high, up about 10 percent from last year to include about 940 students.

There has been growing interest in all languages in recent years and the enrollments have been boosted, in part, through more career opportunities both in business and on the elementary, secondary and college teaching levels.

The faculty and student body both have some of the largest numbers among the former state universities in Wisconsin. Seiler said the curricula also is one of the most extensive.

Spanish has the largest local enrollment, followed by German, French, Russian and Chinese.

Memorial Fund for Etta Shumway Barry

A scholarship fund has been established at UW-SP in memory of Mrs. Etta Shumway Barry, 85, an alumna of the institution who died March 12 in Waupaca.

Members of her family, including a niece, Mary Shumway who teaches on the English faculty at UW-SP, have established the fund which will annually provide recognition to a member of the senior class for writing.

Mrs. Barry, of 415 W. Fulton St., Waupaca, died at Riverside Community

Memorial Hospital and her funeral was held March 16 at St. Mark's Episcopal Church. Her body was cremated.

Born Nov. 19, 1896, in Ladysmith, she was the daughter of Freddie and Maggie Shumway. She was reared in Stevens Point, graduated from Emerson High School and received a two-year diploma in English from the Stevens Point State Normal School in 1916. She returned to the campus years later and received a bachelor's degree in 1953.

She was married at Fond du Lac in 1920 to Arthur C. Barry. He died in 1942. They had two children.

Mrs. Barry was an English teacher for 21 years at Waupaca High School prior to her retirement in 1966.

She was a member of the Riverside Hospital Auxiliary, and the Gray Ladies at the Wisconsin Veterans Home in King.

Contributions to the memorial fund are being received by the UW-SP Foundation, Inc., in care of Leonard Gibb, Main Building, UW-SP, 54481.

Pointer Potpourri

Schreiber and Dreyfus

They Switched Jobs

While a former chancellor of UW-SP, Lee Sherman Dreyfus, is on leave from the faculty serving as governor of Wisconsin, the immediate past chief executive of the state, Martin Schreiber is living near Stevens Point and serving as an executive for Sentry Insurance. For a second time last fall, Schreiber taught a course for the political science department here on the workings of state government.

Enrollment Record

After having a record fall enrollment surpassing 9,200 students, UW-SP continued its strong attraction with a record spring semester student population, too. A total of 8,526 students began classes in January — 94 more than on the same date one year earlier.

In Touch with Poland

Obviously, imposition of martial law by the Warsaw government has weakened UW-SP's Polish connection. However, Pauline Isaacson, director of International Programs, believes it will be possible to continue programs at Jagiellonian University in Krakow. About 25 students and a professor go to Krakow each fall and a contingent of natural resources students goes there each summer. The political turmoil has caused one UW-SP student to delay a major event in her life. Virginia Stefonek of Sugar Camp in Oneida County, was scheduled to be married to Andre Smaydor of Krakow. They met while she was studying at Jagiellonian with the UW-SP students last fall and had planned to marry Dec. 17, four days after the martial law was imposed. She was elsewhere in Europe when military rule went into effect.

Homecoming Is Oct. 2

Homecoming '82 at UW-SP will be Saturday, Oct. 2. Save the date.

More information will be provided in the fall edition of this publication and in other materials to be sent to your home. Tentative plans are to have an alumni pig roast, similar to a successful one held at last year's homecoming, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. A parade has been suggested for the morning, and the football game already scheduled pits the Pointers against a tough UW-La Crosse team.

A Fifth Quarter Cocktail Party will be held at the Holiday Inn immediately after the game and an evening banquet, also at the Holiday Inn, will include an induction for this year's selection to the UW-SP Athletic Hall of Fame.

Gallery for Post Cards

Scenes of the state's small towns in the early part of this century are highlighted in a new pictorial exhibit at UW-SP.

Nearly 150 enlargements of old post cards have been mounted behind synthetic glass on 10 large oak panels surrounding the formal dining room in the University Center.

Most of the pictures were taken between about 1908 and 1918 by photographers who traversed Wisconsin snapping their shutters at horse-drawn rigs lining main streets, public buildings, special events, people at work, and in a few instances, disasters.

The enlargements, some the size of posters of contemporary movie and sports celebrities sold in novelty stores, were made from post cards in the collection of John Anderson, who is in charge of publicity and news at UW-SP and editor of their alumni newspaper. James Pierson, coordinator of photography and graphics on campus did the reproduction work.

Money for Poland

Annual Lectures on Poland, an organization affiliated with UW-SP, has collected more than $4,000 for its "Food for Poland" campaign. Contributions continue to be received at the Citizens National Bank in Stevens Point.

Telling the Whole Story

Yes, UW-SP is number one in the nation in the quality of the natural resources programs it has been developing during the last four decades. But there's much more offered at the campus.

You'll probably be hearing more about the diversity of UW-SP's curriculum as the result of a new "marketing" project to be undertaken by Pointer personnel. Chancellor Philip Marshall has been leading the campaign to tell all of the stories about UW-SP's successes.

For example, Marshall directed attention to the extraordinary dance program here last fall when he hosted a meeting of the UW System Board of Regents. This institution is one of few in this part of the country with such a large and diverse offering in this fine art discipline. The main entertainment for the regents during the first meeting here in more than a decade was a concert featuring the student company, Dance Midwest.

In a report to the regents, Marshall observed that:

Communicative disorders offerings here are among several that attract students from all parts of the country. Paper science is a program that is both widely acclaimed and one of very new nationally. Computer science instruction is being enhanced by the addition of a new Burroughs 6900 computer at a time when knowledge of computer usage is fast becoming a fundamental basic skill in the category with writing and problem solving. The foundation which gives private support to the university has enabled UW-SP to establish the Schmeeckle Reserve on the north campus, to develop the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station near Nelsonville, and to start construction of a new natural resources camp near Tomahawk. He said others in higher education have rated UW-SP's housing, wellness, and writing emphasis programs among the best in the country.

In a lengthy article in the Stevens Point Journal in February, Marshall, who has agonized in recent months about budget problems and their effect on UW-SP, reminded university people and the public at large that UW-SP still is firmly grounded in academic excellence with a top flight faculty and programs that will be important for young people preparing for careers in the 21st century. He explained that natural resources majors are the best known, and that he wants to have people also remember UW-SP for what it does in communicative disorders, philosophy, paper science, chemistry, biology, dance, history and music. He said these programs not only are good, but among the best on the undergraduate level in this part of the country.

Center Being Remodeled

The University Center, with facilities for student activities, conferences, bookstore, dining and various entertainment programs, has had two major additions since it was constructed about 25 years ago. Now it is undergoing a million-dollar remodeling mainly to upgrade the kitchen and food serving areas. Another elevator is being added and re-decorating is being done in some of the oldest sections of the building. Work will be completed this fall. The project is paid for by profits from various enterprises in the building and not by tax dollars.

Honors for Carolyn

Carolyn Rolfson Sargis, who retired in 1962 after 43½ years as UW-SP's business manager, was honored last fall as the Stevens Point Business and Professional Women's Club selection as "Woman of the Year." She was a charter member of the club more than 50 years and holds a record for length of time of employment at the University in the civil service ranks. She and her husband, George, whom she married after retiring, live in Park Ridge and are active in several civic and charitable organizations.

Carolyn Sargis

Our China Connection

As of February, the university had a record number of foreign students — 192 from 33 countries. Among them are two students from mainland China, the first from behind the Bamboo Curtain. One of those Chinese students was a physician in his country who decided to come to the United States to study in the western techniques of dentistry. He is expected to transfer to a dental school in a year or two.

Did We Take A 'Byte' Out Of Your Name?

To err is human. To really foul things up requires a computer.

With more than 39,000 names on file, the UW-SP Alumni Association relies heavily on the assistance of computers to maintain accurate records. The mechanical side of data processing enables us to store and have access to important alumni information. The human side (transcribing and key-punching) opens the door to mistakes which go undetected.

Our intention is to have no errors, so it is very important that you contact us if you detect a mistake. For example, if both you and your spouse are alumni of UW-SP, both names should be on your mailing label. If they are not, we have a correction to make. One situation we have no control over is the number of letters in someone's first name. The University programmers decided that eight spaces was enough for first names. If your name is Elizabeth, our label won't have an "h". If you are a Christopher, you lose three letters. This is one of the few instances where we are at the mercy of the machine.

If you notice an error, please keep in mind that a person is responsible and that we will always do our best to see that the error does not recur.

Do You Need New Horizons?

Back issues of the UW-SP yearbook, Horizon, are available for sale. The Horizon office staff is selling 1977, 1978 and 1979 copies for $1.25 apiece and 1980 copies for $.50. People should include an additional $.20 with their orders to cover shipping costs. The Horizon's address is Room 133, University Center Building, UW-Stevens Point, 54481.

Insurance Firm Recruits Alums

The UW-SP Alumni Association reports that its term life insurance program remains open to new applicants.

Alumni and their spouses are eligible to apply for various amounts of insurance up to $160,000 (lower maximum starting at age 65), and smaller amounts are available for the eligible children of insured alumni. The spouse can apply whether or not the alumnus does. Rates are attractive — especially since the 17.6 percent average reduction in rates effective November, 1980 — and the insurance cannot be canceled (unless premiums are not paid on time), an uncommonly attractive feature of the program. Coverage terminates at age 75.

The availability of low-priced insurance should be a valuable, long-term service to alumni. This is especially true for women, who tend not to belong to organizations or to be employed full-time in such great numbers as men.

Solicitation materials will not be mailed to alumni during this academic year. However, any alumnus or spouse under age 75 wishing to know more about the program may obtain descriptive materials by sending the coupon below to our insurance program administrator.

INT MINDPOWER

Homecoming

Homecoming '81 on Oct. 10 drew hundreds of alumni and friends to a pig roast, reunion to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Phi Sigma Epsilon fraternity, and to cheer on the Pointer football squad.

The spanferkel was held in a huge tent that had been pitched outside Old Main. The football game was discussed late that afternoon at the Holiday Inn at a Fifth Quarter cocktail hour and the fraternity reunion was held in the evening at the University Center. The men at left were members of the group in the 1920s and 1930s. This year's homecoming will be Oct. 2.

What's New in Classrooms?

Computers Advanced

Staff officers for the UW System Board of Regents like the idea of a new major in computer information system at the Stevens Point campus.

They have informed UW-SP that its mathematics/computer science should begin planning for the expansion of the minor in computer science into a major that would have options for specialization in business, communication and technical support.

The communication option may involve such innovations as computers communicating with other computers in the media and use of the devices in the development of electronic mail systems.

If all goes smoothly, the major could be implemented on campus as early as the fall of 1983.

Forestry Re-Accredited

The Society of American Foresters has renewed its accreditation for a second five-year period of the forestry major at UW-SP.

"We far surpassed all of the standards except one," said Daniel O. Trainer, dean of the College of Natural Resources. "And there was a lot of irony in the biggest complaint."

Enrollment in the major has been growing faster than the university has been able to scratch up new dollars for additional faculty positions, Trainer explained. "So their (accreditation team) biggest complaint stemmed from our own popularity."

The natural resources faculty is exploring the possibility of increasing from 2.0 to 2.25 the minimum cumulative grade point required of students who enter junior-level forestry courses.

In 1980, the major here was believed to be the only one of about 50 in the country that was growing, accreditation team members informed UW-SP officials.

Trainer said he believes the high job placement record of local forestry graduates has been a major factor in the program's expansion.

Last year, all but one of the 76 forestry graduates sought employment and 65, or 87 percent, of them were hired in the profession, six were hired out of the field, two enrolled in graduate schools, and two entered the military. In 1979, the placement in the field was 81 percent and in 1978, 83 percent.

"I can talk a lot about how great we are, but what it all comes down to is that if you put out a good product, it will sell," Trainer declared.

The placement record has been boosted by the fact a large part of Michael Pagel's assignment on the career counseling and placement staff is to work with natural resources students. Trainer said Pagel has been unusually successful lining up new employers across the country.

Last year, four local graduates were hired by the State of Florida and as the result of their performances, Trainer said, a state official will be coming to Stevens Point to interview more foresters next spring. It will be the only place in this part of the country the recruiter said he will visit.

Students helped themselves by being active in their own chapter of the Society of American Foresters and have logged large attendance numbers at the national organization's annual meetings. This year, for example, about 45 students paid for most of their own way to travel by school bus to Orlando, Fla. The contingent from UW-SP was the largest from any school in the country, including the host institution.

The dean said the forestry profession isn't undergoing a significant growth period; instead, Stevens Point graduates are cornering a larger share of the openings.

The forestry major was established here in 1968 following a long political battle in which pro-UW-Madison forces attempted to block it. With about 600 students, it now ranks as one of the largest in the United States. It accounts for about a third of the total enrollment in the College of Natural Resources.

There are 10 forestry faculty members, and to keep pace with the growth and to satisfy the requirements of the accreditation team, another two professors will be hired next year, one with experience in forest management utilizing computers and the other in mensuration.

New Major Started

A new major in public administration and policy analysis has been approved for UW-SP.

The new major will lead to a bachelor of science degree and will be offered by the department of political science.

Dennis Riley, an associate professor of political science since 1978, has been appointed coordinator of the new program that draws on faculty from several departments within the College of Letters and Science. Riley has a doctorate from the University of Michigan plus a master of public administration from Syracuse University and a B.A. from Willamette University. He has won a campuswide excellence in teaching award.

A minor in public administration was established at UW-SP in 1968 and was one of the first of its kind at a campus in the Upper Midwest. From it, the new major has emerged.

In a proposal to the regents, the political science faculty said the new program will prepare individuals for entry-level administrative and staff positions in a variety of public agencies. "Emphasis will be given to the policy-making role of administrators and to the critical normative questions raised by bureaucratic power in a democratic society. Also, the program will serve as the foundation for advanced professional training in the field of public administration."

The curriculum will comprise (1) a core of 28 credits on basic goals and values; fundamental concepts; organizational environment, political environment and tools of analysis; (2) a twelve-credit concentration area in either public policy analysis, public planning, personnel administration, resources and the environment, or public finance administration; and (3) internship in government to give the student practical experience in a public agency in the junior or senior year. The program will draw on the sociology and economics/business departments while including a strong emphasis in political science.

Writing Minor Set

The program, first of its kind in the UW System, is administered by the Department of English, but requires courses from several departments.

Gifford said the minor was started because it's a good complement for people in the scientific and natural resources field. "For most of the jobs in those areas, people are required to write reports," Gifford said. He added that the minor coordinates well with any major in the humanities area, giving people an additional career choice that they otherwise might not have had.

Gifford said that while a "relatively" small number of colleges and universities in the nation offer a degree in technical writing, there are many career opportunities in that area.

Since there is a "fairly heavy demand" for technical writing courses from non-traditional students, Gifford said some courses will be offered in the late afternoon or early evening.

To earn a minor in technical writing, students must take intermediate writing, technical writing, editing and publishing, and either a basic computer science or data processing course. The electives include communication and natural resources, expository writing, basic or advanced journalism, graphic arts, photography, environmental interpretation, and writing for the media. Of the electives, no more than two can be from the same discipline.

Gifford said it is recommended, but not required, that the general science requirements be completed before taking courses in the minor.

An assistant professor of English, Gifford has taught at UW-SP since 1976. He has had technical writing experience with the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the University of California. He was a participant in the Technical Writing Institute for teachers and a speaker at the International Technical Writers convention last summer.

Special Kids Aided

A minor in physical education for exceptional children has been given a new name, undergone curricular revisions and expanded with several new courses at UW-SP.

Faculty Senate has voted to re-name the program "Physical Education for the Handicapped."

The expansion in offering will include new courses in foundations of adapted physical education, physical education for physical and neurological disorders, intramurals for the handicapped and leadership in adapted physical education.

Alice Clawson, head of the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, said the changes and additions were proposed because of a desire to make the program more "all-inclusive."

She said the appointment this year of a second faculty member with special preparation in serving the physical needs of handicapped people "makes it possible for us to do much more."

Most of the instruction for courses in the minor are taught by Patrick Powers, a Mount Horeb native currently on leave to finish his Ph.D. in adapted physical education at Oklahoma State University in Stillwater, and Carol Huettig, originally from Fontana, who has completed nearly all of her work for her doctorate from Texas Woman's University in Denton.

Powers, who came to UW-SP in the fall of 1979, has studied at UW-Madison and UW-La Crosse, taught at Oconomowoc and published articles in professional journals on an elective approach to adapted physical education and guidelines for development of a backpacking program for the moderately mentally retarded.

Ms. Huettig, whose bachelor's and master's degrees are from Carthage College and Illinois State University in Normal, has taught at Cornell College in Mount Vernon, Iowa, and Carthage College in Kenosha. Most recently, she has served as an adapted physical education consultant for the Denton County Special Service Co-op and was associated with the Bureau of Education for the Handicapped in Texas. She came to UW-SP this fall. Her awards include the distinguished teacher citation at Carthage and selection as Wisconsin swim coach for the state team which entered a national Special Olympics competition in New York State. She is the UW-SP women's swim team coach in addition to her service on the faculty.

Programs Videotaped

A 15-hour videotape production, "Introduction to Pulp and Paper Technology," has been produced at UW-SP.

The educational tapes were written and narrated by Michael Kocurek, chairman of the paper science department, and filmed in color by the telecommunications staff in the Communication Arts Center on campus.

Subjects included in the series are: Introduction and Overview; Wood Properties; Bonding and Fiber Properties; Mechanical Pulp; Chemical Pulp; Bleaching and Pulp Treatment; Secondary Fibers and Chemical Recovery; Beating and Refining; Additives; Paper Machine Wet End Operations; Paper Machine Wet End Operations II; Pressing; Drying; Calendaring and Coating; and Paper Properties and Tests.

Kocurek says this is the first and only videotape course published in the world for the paper industry. Designed to serve the needs of both technical and non-technical personnel, the program makes extensive use of more than 300 micrographs, figures and diagrams, he adds.

A sample tape is available for viewing and the series may be purchased for $2,750 in a variety of tape formats, through the UW-SP Foundation, Inc., c/o University Telecommunications, Communication Arts Center, UW-SP, Stevens Point, WI 54481.

Robert J. Simeone, '77, and his wife Theresa are Peace Corps volunteers in Paraguay. A forester, Simeone is helping to establish the first reforestation project of native hardwood species in that country. Due to the clearing of the Paraguayan High Forests, some valuable native trees have been threatened with extinction, and Simeone is helping to replant the trees.

Noting that approximately 200 species of hardwood grown in Paraguay are ranked among the hardest and most beautiful in the world, Simeone said the country is cutting its virgin tropical forests at a rate of 250,000 acres per year and has a "projected eight years before it has pretty much exhausted its prime timber."

He added, "Being a woodworker as well as a forester, I appreciate the beauty, workability, weather resistance and strength of cedro, lapacho, quebracho, ('the ax breaker'), incienso, Peterby, quajevy and Yvyra-pepe. They have few peers in the United States — the closest being hardwood like oak or walnut. These are just a few of the trees which appear in large enough numbers and sizes to become economically feasible for exploitation — the majority of the species being clear cut along with the rest are just piled up and burned. There is a genuine risk of forever losing many of these species for future generations."

Simeone also is helping to prepare a pesticide handbook for farmers. "Everyday we are confronted with abuses and misuses of pesticides which result from the highly organized exploitation of large chemical manufacturers. Paraguay has no laws controlling pesticide uses like we are used to in the United States. These companies sell pesticides long banned in the United States."

While Simeone has been working on his projects, his wife, who teaches nutrition, health care and first aid, has organized women into groups similar to 4-H clubs. "Mostly, she tries to make people aware of the resources available to them in their own home," Simeone said. For example, most farmers grow soybeans to sell, but rarely use them. Now the women in Mrs. Simeone's class make milk, cheese and coffee from the versatile beans.

The Simeones will complete three years of Peace Corps service next January.

Winifred Nelson, '09, Shakers Heights, Ohio, died there Sept. 19 at age 91. About two weeks earlier she had returned from a motor-coach tour of New England and less than a year earlier she had visited her alma mater at Stevens Point where she was given a campus tour.

She recalled her career in education in a letter to the editor of this alumni news magazine about seven years ago. At age 76, after several years of retirement, she decided to return to the classroom as a substitute teacher. She could serve up to 100 days per school term, and did just that until she was 84. She spent her earnings on vacations in London, taking Caribbean cruises and other jaunts which kept her abreast of happenings around the world and full of fresh information for her classes.

Miss Nelson went to Cleveland Heights in 1920 where her students included Milton Shapiro (Shapp), former governor of Pennsylvania, who was an unsuccessful candidate on the Democratic ticket for his party's 1976 presidential nomination.

There also was the famous Sam Shepard and his wife Marilyn, and Sam's brother Steve who was a student she said she "never enjoyed more."

Steve, she reported, sent her a copy of his book, "My Brother's Keeper" after the widely publicized 1950s murder trial that involved Sam.

Miss Nelson's memories of Stevens Point Normal went back almost to its beginnings. She was in the model (laboratory) school as early as 1897; she remembers when President Pray was fired in 1906 and how the students protested the Board of Regent action by hanging in effigy the local regent who sought to remove Pray as head of the Normal. There were memories of Mary D. Bradford, one of the original faculty members here, who later made history in several ways, including becoming the first woman superintendent of a large school system (Kenosha). Miss Nelson described her as a "beautiful disciplinarian."

Stevens Point's colorful Professor Frank Spindler was one of her favorites, too. "I proved true a rumor that he read only the first and last pages of our papers when I received an 'A' on an essay with a recipe for fudge on the middle sheet." Of another longtime faculty member she said, "I remember Mr. Collins' delightful humor better than the geometry he taught so well."

Miss Nelson's family name continues to be very much part of UW-SP. Stately old Nelson Hall memorializes her cousin, George Nelson, an attorney who became a member of the Wisconsin Supreme Court and at one time was a member of the Board of Regents of State Normal Schools.

Raymond Specht Ends Long Campus Career

Raymond Specht, whose association with UW-SP began about 45 years ago when he was a student on another campus and came here to play against the Pointer football squad, has retired.

For 34 years, he was a faculty member and administrator with assignments ranging from teaching, coaching, advising student organizations, serving in top level administrative posts, handling public relations projects, pioneering some curriculum development to directing men's dormitories.

Indeed, Specht with his imposing physical frame, has been a big man on campus in more ways than one.

Specht was holding two positions at the time of his departure: university planner and associate professor of geography and natural resources. He has, however, continued to be involved in both jobs on a part-time basis for spring semester.

Attaching the description of retired to Specht is a misnomer because he is keeping a schedule of activities either in business, public service or hobbies.

He and his wife, Ellen, are proprietors of the Antiquarian Shop on Strongs Avenue; he serves on the Stevens Point Plan Commission and as chairman of the Down*own Action Committee's Historic Preservation Committee; and he spends his leisure time as a photographer and railroad historian/writer.

Specht joined the UW-SP faculty in 1947, and in his early years here, he taught courses in geography and natural resources, served as assistant coach in both football and basketball, was director of Delzell Residence Hall (the second person in that position) and director of Steiner Residence Hall (the first in that capacity), photo adviser of student publications and the pioneering instructor in cartography, driver education and photography.

More than a decade earlier, while he was an undergraduate student at UW-Oshkosh, he became acquainted with this institution by competing with the Pointer football team and its colorful coach, Eddie Kotal. Ted Fritsch was playing for Stevens Point in those days and later went on to earn all-pro honors as a member of the Green Bay Packers.

From 1966 to 1981, Specht was in charge of planning campus development, which involved everything from identifying sites for buildings to shepherding the construction. Through it all, he said his philosophy was to "plan for many but hold out for the individual."

Reflecting on his administrative career, he concluded that planning can only be treated as a process to accommodate changes.

A big challenge at the university, he says, was to secure enough long range academic planning information from the faculty to incorporate into his designs for campus development.

In planning, a job is never done, he advised. At UW-SP, for example, while many of the newest buildings already are in need of some major repairs they are still incomplete without special refinements and landscaping, which are to be done when monies become available.

Specht's greatest pride is not as much in the campus he helped create as it is in the success of his students in his favorite class-cartography.

About five of his students in one short period of time all went on for advanced degrees in cartography. One of them, Judy Olson, formerly of Waupaca, now is editor of the internationally-circulated Cartography Journal and a faculty member at Boston College.

The professor always believed in the value of involving his students in cartography projects that would get public attention and thereby further stimulate interest in map making. He guided numerous student publications that relied heavily on maps, and he found writers who were interested in using work created by his classes. He also received student assistance for many of his own publications.

Beyond Stevens Point and its university community, Specht is best known as a railroad historian. He has published three books on that subject, dealing with the Wisconsin Valley Line, Green Bay & Western and Milwaukee and Northern. He has ideas for more books.

In 1964, when the Chicago and North Western announced it would be closing about 100 depots, Specht reacted with more than a sigh of disappointment about the end of an era. He requested and gained permission from the railroad to gather materials and records from the depots. With his wife, Ellen, he traveled more than 20,000 miles to collect various kinds of railroad records, maps, passenger lists, ticket stubs, freight orders and timetables. He also acquired a considerable inventory of railroad artifacts.

A decade later, Specht gave many of the maps to the UW-SP Cartography Collection.

A native of a farm near Two Rivers, Specht received a bachelor's degree from UW-Oshkosh, a master's from Clark University in Worcester, Mass., and did doctoral study at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., the McGill University in Canada, and UW-Madison.

His four decades of teaching include services on the faculties of the Junior Military Academy, UW-Oshkosh, Oconto Falls High School and Lincoln High School of Wisconsin Rapids prior to his appointment at UW-SP. At each of those places, he coached men's athletics and taught geography.

Pursuing Ideas...

...for Self Treatment

Having a cold can be a learning experience at UW-SP.

Students who follow Dr. John Betinis' lead in the student health center treat themselves and, in the process "learn" how their body works and how to take care of it."

Betinis' "do-it-yourself cold clinic" is an innovation in modern medicine, so unusual that three pages of colored photographs and text are devoted to it in a new Time-Life Book entitled, "Coping with the Common Cold."

The clinic is in a lobby area for the UW-SP health center in Delzell Hall, and its use is optional for people who want instant help in dealing with their illness.

Dr. Betinis developed it as a means of saving time for students with more pressing health problems. He believes about 10 to 15 students use it each day.

In most cases, people with the typical mild cold can manage the illness without talking to a physician or nurse. The treatment Dr. Betinis prescribes is simply plenty of rest, fluids, gargle and steam.

While the physician gets what he calls "a needed break from the endless routine of explaining colds and sore throats," students get "a chance to develop self awareness and self-responsibility in following directions to handle their own problems." (About 25 per cent of all health problems brought to the UW-SP health center involve upper respiratory problems.)

The "do-it-yourself" clinic can be built for about $550 — the most expensive item is the thermometer which carries a pricetag of more than $200.

Dr. Betinis recommends that other campus health centers and private clinics consider installing the clinics. The busy housewife is an example of someone who believes she cannot take the time to go through a long wait to see a practitioner for a mild cold and therefore would be especially interested in such self-help program.

His unit, which he constructed in 1979, has been discussed at professional meetings and has been copied by about 17 other collegiate health centers from Massachusetts to Florida to California.

Among responses from the information in the new book was a call from the producers of the ABC TV Network's newsmagazine, "20/20" requesting video tape of the clinic for possible use on the show.

...to Better Communicate

The word you should be adding to your vocabulary is "videotex," says a communication professor at UW-SP.

In a decade, you'll be uttering it as often as you now say television and radio.

Eric Somers makes that prediction after developing what he describes as the first "hands on" videotex course at an American university.

Videotex communication is direct electronic delivery of printed information — text and graphic — to offices and homes. And Somers says it is on the verge of becoming an important part of the lives of all people.

It's currently going through states of development similar to television in the late 1940s, before the TV set became a standard furnishing in nearly every home in the country, regardless of income.

Somers says owners of newspapers are exploring the new technology along with retailers and owners of advertising businesses.

"This will be the lowest cost method of transmitting any kind of information to large numbers of people," the professor explains. Moreover, "it may do for developing nations what airplanes did instantly linking once remote regions with places where the standard of living is the highest and technology is most extensively developed," he adds.

An aspect of videotex that intrigues Somers is that "the field is new and the technology has not yet been standardized. There is still time for potential users, technical communicators, to influence the development of these systems along lines that would provide the greatest communicative utility."

Home computer systems that are quite new on the market, give people insights but not certain previews of what videotex systems will be like when videotex becomes a standard household appliance. There are computing systems to process data, screens to view it and instruments to make printouts (like typed sheets of paper) of information desired for storing or distributing other than via electronic means.

He urges all technical communicators to remain flexible and open to various interactive electronic text communications that are now in pioneering stages and are currently expensive but may not remain so. And, he adds, "beware of huge investments in dedicated word processing packages that are in reality expensive glorified typewriters."

For people interested in getting some of the new equipment, but concerned about being stuck with devices that won't be compatible with future technology, Somers suggests: "It is better to look at text and graphics systems designed around common general purpose mini and micro computers. These usually allow for expansion and updating more easily than dedicated hardware designed to perform a single text processing task."

...to Instill Values

Inexpensive, plastic toys children insist on buying at discount stores can distort their value systems, warns a home economist at UW-SP.

There's built in obsolescence in toys made with low grade materials, says Janet Malone, family relations and child development specialist in the UW-SP School of Home Economics. As a result, children are hindered in developing accurate concepts about worth and repairability.

Children now are conditioned to a "throw away society," she contends.

"Almost daily, children come into contact with toys made of low quality plastic which are almost certain to be broken within a short period of time... and thrown away after little use."

Professor Malone says adults are compounding the situation through the use of disposable dishes, diapers, razors, napkins and so forth.

She conducted a pilot study on children's values several years ago at Oklahoma State University in Stillwater and plans to continue her research at UW-SP. Little has been done by researchers in this subject, she reports.

Professor Malone became interested in the subject while involved in a nursery school program for 3 and 4-year-olds. The children were given hand puppets which had been made by staff members. After being played with for a short period of time, one puppet lost its button eye. The child for whom it was made immediately tossed the toy in a trash can with the observation, "It's broke — it's no good."

Her initial study with a group of elementary school children was insightful on the manner in which they determined value. A major finding was that size of a toy or gift is considered by most children, especially younger ones, as being the foremost means of judging worth — bigger being better.

Expendability was the most critical factor to older girls in determining monetary value. An example being that play dough that hardens while in use is worth less than items that can be played with a longer period of time. Also, older girls are most likely to recognize the value of good workmanship in items.

Younger girls believed attractiveness of an item was an indication of value. And, nearly all of the respondents said usefulness of a particular toy was important in determining worth.

The time has come, Professor Malone believes, when a serious challenge should be made of the throw away habits being developed by children. The problem is becoming especially serious, she suggests, in view of limited resources and the threat of them diminishing at an increasing rate.

Bright Kids to Be Served This Summer

A "Youth in College" program for children labeled as gifted and talented learners will be expanded to two sessions when it is offered for a second consecutive summer at UW-SP.

Children who have completed grade 5 or above are eligible to apply for attendance in sessions from June 6 to 19 or Aug. 4 to 14.

Participants may choose one of six fields of study: microcomputers (beginner and advanced), forensic chemistry, theater arts, observational astronomy, science fiction literature or simulation gaming. A common focus on environmental concerns will be shared by all of the students.

The participants will have options of living off campus and being daily commuters or being in residence and served meals at the UW-SP's Central Wisconsin Environmental Station near Nelsonville. Outdoor recreational activities are planned there.

Inquiries about the program may be directed to "Youth in College," Gifted/Talented Resource Center, Room 458 of Professional Studies Building, University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point 54481.

Natural Resources Programs Slated

Two workshops on natural resources careers — one geared for low income women and minorities and the other for high school students — will be offered in June, July and August by UW-SP.

They will be held at the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station near Nelsonville with faculty from UW-SP and from state and federal agencies as discussion leaders.

Two identical sessions for high school students will be June 20 to 26 and Aug. 15 to 21. The workshop for women and minority group members will be July 5 to 16.

Topics will be career opportunities and educational requirements in areas such as forestry, wildlife management, soil science, water quality, fisheries management and environmental education.

Students participating can earn college credit. They also will have opportunities for recreational canoeing, swimming, fishing and hiking.

The cost for meals, lodging and the program is $120. There is an additional charge for tuition if credit is desired.

All costs for the participating low income women and minority group members in their July workshop will be covered by a grant to UW-SP from the Governor's Employment and Training Office.

Dear Alumni and Friends:

On several different pages of this publication, we have called your attention to the outstanding students and worthy projects supported by your donations. Your alumni board of directors and members of the UW-SP Foundation, Inc. are especially proud of what has been accomplished via private support.

Thanks to so many of you, our joint efforts are resulting in a very good university becoming even better.

We are making this year's "Reasonable Request" specifically for student scholarships in view of cutbacks in government-supported financial aid programs. Our appeal is being carried out a little differently, though, as a means of minimizing printing and mailing costs. We are incorporating our appeal for the first time into the dissemination of this semi-annual alumni magazine. The advantage is that we have more space to show you what we have done with your past gifts and why we need your continued assistance.

In the center section, you will notice pictures of some of the students who received scholarships as the result of last year's appeal. With your help, we hope to expand this private aid to our high achieving young men and women.

In closing, let me share with you excerpts of two letters I received recently from members of the class of 1932. With a check for our fund, Mrs. Malcolm Chinnock of West Bend enclosed these comments: "I am very proud to be an alumna of Stevens Point. I feel that my attendance at Point was the best thing that I ever did in my life! I make use of the knowledge gained every day..."

Added Edward J. Okray of Stevens Point, who has become widely known for his successes in the produce business: "Enclosed you will find a token of my appreciation. The figure represents $100 per year since my graduation. Well worth the price...."

Cordially yours,

Karen Engelhard
