DESIGNATION OF THE STATE OF THE

A Tew Baskets for the WSST

The basketball season has made its annual debut at CSTC and everyone is anxious that it be as successful a season as it was last year. We everyone is anxious that it be as successful a season as it was last year. We hope the games will be as exciting, the players as terrific and the crowds as large and as spontaneous in their enthusiasm. Basketball is a wholesome sport, and with the large audience participation that was evidenced last year, the situation could become downright healthy.

There is another reason why we have awaited the coming of the "bucket" season so avidly. It gives us a chance to champion that very worthy organization, the World Student Service Fund, more commonly known as the WSSF. Last year the Student council sponsored several dances in the P. J. Jacobs gym after the basketball games were over. Proceeds from entrance fees to the dances were contributed to the WSSF as our part in helping to carry on the gigantic task that lies still unfinished before this organization.

Acting as a go-between, the WSSF has made it possible for benevolent high school and college students all over America to help those unfortunate students of war-torn Europe and Asia to grasp and hold the enlightenment for which they search so eagerly. Contributions great and small have left the pockets of American students only to be sent about the world and into pockets where they do the most good — into pockets of students who carry torches of decency through dark and devastated lands.

It is only through the untiring efforts of the WSSF that our paltry individual donations can be collected and poured in an unending stream into places where obtaining an education is a luxury as well as a continual fight beset with the greatest of hardships. Gravely enough, these places are the ones where education and the trust that comes with enlightenment are needed the most.

After-game dances have been our way of standing behind the WSSF.

It is hoped that more and better dances can be held this year. If this project is carried out, plan on attending as many as you can and support a cause that has reaped a thousandfold in grateful returns.

Having our team win a basketball game is a grand and glorious feeling; but the victory becomes rather hollow when we realize that in distant areas students are playing the game of survival against almost overwhelming odds. If we had our way, every basketball player and spectator at the games this year would have to take advanced courses from Arthur Murray before he could participate.

Behind the Velvet Curtain

During the recent activity of College Theater, wherein the famous Broadway play "Life with Father" was successfully produced, the Pointer devoted a great amount of space and attention to the members of the cast and to the fine qualities of the play itself. This procedure was good journalism and helped to "sell" the play. It also gave due credit to a fine group of actors who devoted a great amount of time to the mastery of their

However, lack of space, and unfortunately, lack of reader interest, did not allow the Pointer the opportunity of giving just recognition to equally important members of the College Theater group — the production and technical staff. These able and talented individuals have worked and technical staff. These able and talented individuals have worked with religious fervor in the dim, drab surroundings that are typical of back-stage areas. Their lack of recognition is equaled only by their lack of complaint as they plod along diligently in their serious quest to make those people before the footlights the stars of the hour. Several visits back-stage during the dress rehearsals of 'Life with Father' substantiated the sad fact that a freat amount of talent was blooming there, never to be appreciated by people outside of College Theater. One hundred and one technical problems concerning the production were being constantly revised, and the intricate lighting system was being mastered with great effect. People responsible for stage properties had scoured the town in quest of rare antiques that were common in a New York brownstone mansion of the 1880's. Make-up experts drew upon their resources of creams and paints to make each actor appear before the footlights to the best advantage.

York brownstone mansion of the 1880's. Make-up experts drew upon their resources of creams and paints to make each actor appear before the footlights to the best advantage.

The production managers seemed to know every stage line and movement by heart and the expert timing in the handling of controls was nothing short of phenomenal.

All of this back-stage activity took place with the least amount of noise and confusion. The situation was very businesslike and orderly as only people who know their business can make it. While one actor was throwing his emotions all over the place, a half-dozen technicians were in there pitching to make things as advantageous as possible for him. It would be a rare and interesting experience, if, during the production of some future play, the audience could go back-stage and watch the "principals" there emote through at least one act. Did you ever see the expression of ecstasy that steals over an electrician's face, as he obtains a particularly fine lighting effect? Did you ever experience the exasperation of a stage manager who has just seen an actor step through a "flat" that is a necessary part of the scenery for the third act? If you have, you know that all of the acting ability is not out there "tredding the boards."

"Life with Father" was written for actors who want to entertain audiences, but Oscar Wilde's play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," must have been written solely in appreciation of the production and technical staffs.

Haven't heard of any outstanding hunting escapades yet. Reports have it that hunting wasn't too good because of the overabundance of snow in the north and the lack of it far-ther south. Did hear of one deer decided to brave the city streets of Rhinelander rather than take his chance in the bullet zinging wilds. His life was short-lived, however, as the beast became excited by mod-ern conveyances and was knifed by a stalwart citizen who, incidentally, didn't get the deer. Congratulations-

CSTC's Cagers Beat Dixie Bars by 40-37

In a preliminary basketball game at P. J. Jacobs gym Monday evening, November 22, the Central State Collegiates won a thriller from the Dixie Bars of Wisconsin Rapids by a score of 40-37.

It was a see-saw affair from start to finish as the Collegiates under Coach Ray Specht needed a double overtime to squeeze out the victory.

The game ended with a 31-31 count and in the first extra period Murgatroyd of Wisconsin Rapids and Ray Sodersten of Waupaca tallied for the Dixie Bars and Collegiates respectively as the period ended a 33-33 tie.

In the second over time Murga-troyd and Gill added four points for the Rapids and Nelson, Martin, Menzel and Sodersten scored for the locals as the period ended with a 40-37 victory for the Point team.

Dave Case of Rhinelander scored 12 points for high honors for the Collegiates.

Whitewater is conference game number three as they play at P. J. Jacobs gym on January 8. White-water lost twice to Point last year but will have 12 lettermen out after revenge.

January 13 is the date of the La. Crosse-Point clash. The Indians were stopped 44-38 last year by the Quandtmen. Coach Clark Van Gald-en has 10 varsity men of last year to help make the bid for victory. With eight letter winners back from last year to form the nucleus of the Superior State squad, Coach Leo DiMarco and his Yellowjackets in-vade Stevens Point on January 15 to offer the competition for the Point-er's fifth conference game.

The Oshkosh Titans, who last season spoiled Point's chance for the undisputed title by defeating the Quandtmen 61-55, are scheduled to face the Pointers at Oshkosh on January 20. Twelve men are back to re-enforce the CSTC squad that fell to Point early last season 55-45. fell to Point early last season 55-45.

After meeting Platteville in a re-turn game on January 29, the Point-ers travel to Eau Claire on February 11 and to Stout Institute on February 12. Eau Claire humbled the Pointers 73-48 in their first meeting last year but fell to Point by 66-65 score later in the year.
