Terrorism causes concern for students abroadby Jacquie Riggle
Staff Reporter

On April 16, 1986, at 10 a.m. in Old Main Founders Room, Helen M. Corneli, Director of International Programs, gave her prepared statement on the terrorism situation and how it is affecting the 38 students who are in Europe at this time.

International Programs, as well as many parents, have been concerned about the negative repercussions for the students overseas from the attack on Libya on Monday night.

Dr. Corneli called the State Department for official advice first thing Tuesday morning.

The official position is that there are no new travel advisories for Americans and that each person must decide for him/herself where and when he/she wishes to travel. When she called the Embassy Counselor Official, she asked, "What would they do if they had a son or daughter in Italy, Greece, or France right now?" He stated, "I would think they should complete their program." This was the considered response from the Italy and Greece desks.

Dr. Corneli has also talked to the leaders who in turn have talked directly to the appropriate embassies or counselor officials. Students have been instructed on what they should avoid: military hang-outs, demonstrations and embassy row. Their feelings about the situation seem to be calm and responsible, but the whole subject of terrorism is real and troubling, even though the numbers involved are small.

Dr. Corneli pointed out that less than 200 Americans were affected directly by terrorism in 1985 of the up to 25 million who have traveled abroad.

In the same year, over 200 were killed by lightning here at home. These are random situations so the feelings that our students may be affected is small.

As far as International cancelling any programs, Helen feels, as of today, that they will continue with summer and fall offerings.

Dr. Corneli is also impressed with the number of parents she has talked to and finds it heartening to hear their sturdy determination to keep options open, their ideas and their enthusiasm for what their children are experiencing overseas. She plans to continue to check with the State Department, her academic superiors, and with the travel agents in case any emergency arises.

Network prevailsby Joanne Davis
News Editor

The team Network took first place in WWSP's (90 FM) Trivia contest for the fourth consecutive year.

7,700 people participated on 328 teams during the 54-hour marathon contest which ended Sunday at midnight.

A representative from the winning team said this of their skills: "We've been taking notes for ten years and just keep them organized." The team has about 15 core group members, many from out of town. The team has been together since 1976.

Revealing some of their trivia gathering tips during a 90FM Trivia wrap-up interview, a representative from Network said, "Anytime we go to a movie, we'll have a notebook with us. And when the new TV fall season's shows start, we really start watching; some of those shows won't be around long." The player indicated that inevitably questions from those short running programs will crop up during the game.

Network tallied 5,500 points during the contest. Substation placed second with 4,810 points, while Village Apartments took third with 4,775 points.

Jim Oliva, co-writer for the contest, admits to one serious error that led many teams on a fruitless trail in search of the "trivia stone." Clues given on-air lead teams to the stone to collect tickets worth points. A clue given early Sunday morning, however, sent trivia players on a right turn instead of a left, causing obvious confusion.

Oliva summarized Trivia 1986, after the trophies were given out early Monday morning, by saying, "I think the teams are really working hard and that's good. Learning is really a great endeavor — it's a fantastic endeavor. People getting together and having fun for a weekend and learning is great." Oliva went on to say, "I don't think anything's trivial — everything is intrinsically valuable."

Oliva, affectionately or maybe frustratingly known as "Oz" by Trivia players, commented, "My attitude in presenting the questions for the contest is that I'm gonna have a good time with it. I'm not out to beat the teams. If I get cynical and crusty, it's no fun for them and it's no fun for me."

Kevin Hamm, Station Manager at 90FM said the contest went incredibly smooth, much in part to the many volunteer hours put in by the staff and the many volunteers. Hamm extended a special thanks to all volunteers, businesses, and many others who contributed to Trivia weekend's success.

Staff at the radio station revealed their computer went down approximately ten minutes after the game was over; fortunately no data was lost. The station did have a back-up system ready to go in an emergency.

As for next year, Jim Oliva said, "I'll be back." New co-writer Mark Polzin also added, "I'll be back too." Trivia 1987 is scheduled to be held April 3, 4, and 5.

Republican candidates for governor speak at Pointby Carol Diser
Staff Reporter

The UWSP College Republicans sponsored a forum for the Republican candidates for governor Monday night in the University Center.

The forum, which was moderated by former SGA President Scott West, consisted of opening statements by each candidate, questions from a panel, and audience-directed questions. The panel consisted of Vern Holmes, Executive Vice-President at Sentry Insurance; SGA President Christopher Johnson; and Barbara Knowlton of the League of Women Voters.

The four gubernatorial candidates were Minority Leader of the State Assembly, Tommy Thompson; Milwaukee businessman, George Watts; Dane County executive, Jonathon

Barry, and UW-Madison physician, Al Wiley, Jr.

In their opening remarks, all four candidates soundly criticized Governor Earl's policies regarding business and industry. "Earl is opposed to growth," said Barry. "We need to bring back opportunity to the state."

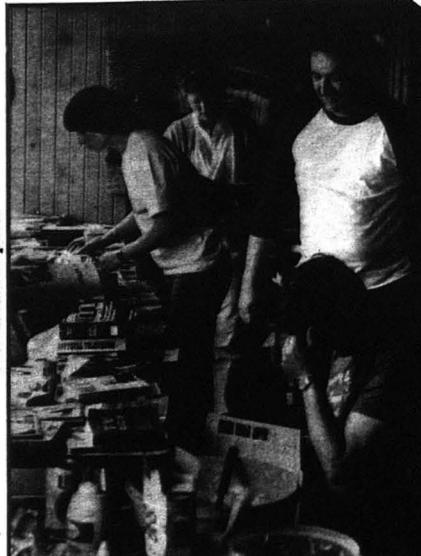

Each candidate also promised to increase the promotion of tourism in Wisconsin and vowed to create more jobs in the state.

Other issues discussed included the lowering of property taxes. Thompson claimed that equalized valuation has harmed the farmer because values have gone down but have been too slowly adjusted. Watts, Barry and Wiley all agreed that lower property taxes would be most beneficial to the farmers.

When discussing the active role Earl has had in the UW System, the candidates all agreed that the Board of Regents should have maximum responsibility. Thompson, however, wanted improvements on the board. "They don't have a long-term plan," he said. "We need to improve the quality of the board."

Barry, Thompson and Watts all suggested that caps may have to be put on admissions at UW-Madison and UW-Milwaukee. Watts also stated that something should be done about duplicate programs within the UW System, but Wiley claimed, "Each campus is essential. The Legislature has no business trying to direct where new information will come from."

The forum served as Portage County's first introduction to the Republican gubernatorial candidates.

Drinking Age

Political blackmail isn't the answer

Student apathy. It seems that lately whenever some event or organization isn't as successful as its planner or members had hoped, they blame it on student apathy.

You're probably thinking, "Oh no, not another lecture on how we should become more involved and stand up for our rights." Right? Wrong.

I'm not devoting this space to student apathy on the UWSP campus. What I am talking about is that people in general seem to prefer to stay uninformed and uninvolved (there are exceptions of course). Most of us have an opinion on subjects pertaining to laws or the like, but whether or not we take a stand to defend that opinion is usually dependent on how it may affect our take-home pay or our social life.

The drinking age is a good example of both of these things. The reason the state government will allow the drinking age to change from 19 to 21 is due to a fear of losing millions of dollars in state highway funding.

Backing down to a threat such as this could be trouble. What if Reagan decides he wants other things implemented such as nuclear dumpsites in every state, cuts in student funding or the abolition of legalized abortion? Will he have only to threaten withholding financial aid for agriculture, family planning or public schools?

I understand that we do need this money for our highways. However, there are several other means our state could use to get some of this money. Unfortunately, they leave no room for you conservatives.

First, the legalization of a state lottery could generate over $100 million a year for our state. Last year, New York passed a tax amnesty law which generated almost $100 million from guilt-stricken citizens who received no penalty for their original misconduct.

Another thing Wisconsin could consider as a means of acquiring millions of dollars for state highway funding is the implementing of tollways. Although a bit liberal, the legalization of marijuana and/or prostitution possess the potential of generated millions of dollars in state taxes and revenue.

I agree that legalizing marijuana and prostitution may be a little too severe to keep the drinking age from going to 21. However, that's not the real issue I'm fighting for. What I'm concerned about is that a federal government should not be able to use blackmail as a means of getting states to adopt a law where it isn't wanted!

Health Issues Class:

Student Government questions where Health Center draws the line

by Linda Butkus
Staff Reporter

The issue of the mandatory Health Issues class for students requesting physicals and/or pap and pelvic exams from the UWSP Health Center was discussed in length at the April 10 Student Government meeting.

Student Government and the Women's Resource Center feel students should have a choice as to whether they should be required to attend the class or not. On the other hand, Dr. Bill Hettler, Director of UWSP Health Service, said, "It (mandatory class) started because we found students were not knowledgeable. We made it mandatory because people didn't show up for it; when the class was optional people were not attending."

Approximately 23,000 students visit the Health Center a year. Of those, approximately 1,500 are seen for physicals and/or pap and pelvic exams.

Dr. Hettler opened the meeting with his point of view on the goal of the Health Center. "Our goal is that each of you will achieve your optimal health potential given your genetic gifts from your parents and your social and cultural backgrounds," he said.

The Health Issues class covers topics such as breast/testicle exams, contraceptives, cardiovascular fitness, and osteoporosis, among other topics. The class takes from 45 to 60 minutes.

In response to comments made by Dr. Hettler, Mary Beneppe, a student senator from the College of Professional Studies, said, "I don't think it should be something that's mandatory for someone that isn't sexually active. Some of the topics, osteoporosis, cardiovascular fitness and all that, are important, but contraception for someone who is not concerned about it is not."

Sue Wilcox, Director of the Women's Resource Center, said, "What we're talking about is women's and men's choices. All of you as adults have that choice and that's being taken away by Dr. Hettler. As a woman, I should have a choice to say whether I should go to that class or not. Furthermore," she added, "I don't think any of us disagree as to how important that class is or what the information is, but I want the choice to make that decision for myself, and I think all adult students want that choice."

The question as to who mandates Health Center policy was brought up by Nancy Mayek, SGA Communications Director. "If I were to come in with a cold or flu and I didn't know how to treat it, what would prevent you from making a mandatory class to help me learn about the flu? Do you understand what I'm saying? Where do we draw the line?"

Dr. Hettler responded, "The policy of the Health Center is set by the Health Center staff."

Further into the meeting, the subject of ignorance to the Health Issues class was brought up. "What if I just don't want to know those things. I'm an ignorant individual and I really can care less. I can go around and impregnate all kinds of women. I don't care," said John Loomans, a student senator from the College of Fine Arts.

Dr. Hettler responded, "You have the right to be that way. You have a right to do a lot of things, but I also have the right as a practicing physician in the state of Wisconsin to set my standards of practice."

Loomans went on further to say, "In essence, if I live up to your standards of caring for myself and meet my obligations to myself—my responsibilities—you do indeed have the right to deny me my physical?"

Dr. Hettler responded, "No, you're missing the point. I cannot control your behavior, but I can control the standards that I provide."

Again, Loomans asked, "So I would be denied a physical then?"

Dr. Hettler replied, "You would be denied a physical in our health service."

Further comments and questions were brought up and asked of Dr. Hettler, Student Government, and members of the audience.

Several alternatives to the mandatory Health Issues class were offered to the Health Center by the Student Government: 1) include the class during freshman orientation; 2) make the class mandatory only if the student is going to be getting birth control; 3) offer the class in the residence halls and not at the Health Center—and not mandatorily; 4) add the information to the already offered Healthy American class—a two-credit P.E. class; and lastly, 5) offer the class, but discontinue mandation.

"As of right now we are going to the University Affairs Committee of Faculty Senate. They have more power and we're trying to see what they will come up with there," said Sue Ellen Burns, Women's Affairs Director at SGA.

Maguire addresses abortion issue

by Donna M. Brauer
Staff Reporter

Dr. Marjorie Relley Maguire spoke to a crowd of 150 people at UWSP on April 9 on the subject of abortion. Dr. Maguire received her degree in religious studies from the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. Since the early 1980s, she has become more outspoken on feminist issues and pluralism in the Catholic church. She has had various articles published on abortion, one of which appeared in the Milwaukee Journal in 1980, entitled, "Not all Pro-Life People Think Alike."

Dr. Maguire stated, "Abortion affects all women. We hear those who are Pro-life trying to change the law so that women may not have this choice. We're talking about restoring criminal penalties for women trying to have an abortion. No matter what the reasons they choose an abortion, no matter what the tragedies and particularities there are in their lives, we're saying they ought to be sent to jail, they ought to pay fines and the doctors who perform the abortions ought to go to jail." According to Maguire, Pro-lifers are saying that women cannot make responsible, moral decisions.

Regarding Pro-lifers, Dr. Maguire also pointed out that they will allow abortions for rape or incest cases. "Now, if abortion is the killing of human life, how can it be justified in these special cases and not in any others? What you're really saying is I want to set the perimeters for when an abortion is acceptable. I don't trust women to set those perimeters," said Dr. Maguire.

Maguire did not advocate abortion but she seemed to advocate the choice that women have in the situation; she is strongly pro-morality. The stand taken on abortion by Maguire is that the embryo is not a person but the woman is. She stated, "Not every living thing has a right to life." Maguire indicated it is up to the individual woman to decide whether this beginning life will develop.

In regard to abortion, Pro-choice advocates seem to feel, rather than attacking the person choosing an abortion, attack the causes of her pregnancy. A distinction must be made between the legality and morality of abortion, according to Maguire.

She went on to explain the following. Just because abortion is legal does not mean it's moral. Just as in divorce, it is legal. In the Catholic church, however, divorce is not moral. Homosexuality is legal as well, but is not moral, according to the Catholic church. With these precedents, Dr. Maguire felt that even if it's morally wrong, it should be legal for a woman to make the choice.

In talking about the biological aspects of pregnancy, Maguire looked at the fetus as being supported in life by the woman. "If a woman must support this life by law, then we should all be organ typed so that if someone with the exact match of kidneys as yours requires to have a kidney transplant, then you must by law give up one of your kidneys in order to support the other person's life."

Just as in the eminent domain for land, so, too, should there be eminent domain for life if you believe that abortion is not legally right, according to Maguire. The abortion issue, she reaffirmed, is a question of legality and not morality.

Maguire believed that all abortions are tragic, but the choice should always be the woman's.

Legislative Affairs report

Legislative Affairs Director -
UWSP Student Government Association
Legislative Report

So much legislation in our state and national governing bodies affects today's students. Unfortunately, however, the majority of today's college students are underinformed (or misinformed) as to what legislation is being considered by our state and national representatives—legislation that directly and drastically affects us all. Presently, there is a multitude of state and national bills that have substantial impact on all of us. The primary purpose of the SGA Legislative Affairs Committee is to search out these bills, educate the student body as to the content of the bill, and then lobby state and national representatives to vote on the bill according to the interests of the student community.

STOP 21 — DRINKING AGE BILL:

The drinking age bill is dead. The bill, under a close 8-3 vote (six for/three against/two abstentions) was passed out of the Committee of State Affairs. It went to the House Rules Committee (which schedules the bill for floor debate and voting) and never came out before the session ended on March 26. A special legislative session may be called during recess, and a border hopping bill may be introduced (although recent reports hint that this will not happen). A new drinking age bill will not be introduced in the special session; however, such a provision could be added into a border hopping bill as an amendment. Attempts to raise the drinking age through a "side-door" amendment have happened twice already and failed.

This issue is a fine example of how the United Council of Wisconsin's Student Governments can affect legislation. The UC, (which consists of all the four and two year UW Centers and their respective student governments), in combination with Wisconsin's Tavern League/"Stop 21" were two of the main coalitions which were responsible for the "Death of 21." Little known to most people, tremendous political pressure had been put on our state legislators by the "21 Now" coalition (pro-21 group) and by constituencies of the legislators' districts, demanding that Wisconsin's legal drinking age be raised to 21. An example of the Tavern league/Stop 21 coalition was the outstanding turnout at the public hearing for the drinking age bill—over 500 people, as compared to the 100 "21 Now" representatives. Five to one!

To The Editor:

The purpose of this letter is to clear the air about Sigma Tau Gamma's Bratfest and dispel any rumors which may have arisen. This year the event will be held the same way it has since it first began, with the exception of the change in the date.

This year the date of the event will be on May 6 from 2 to 6 p.m., with May 7 as the rain date.

Rumors about the location of the event and the use of tickets to obtain beverages are just those, rumors, and are not to be taken seriously.

The Fraternity has been busy at work, ensuring that the event will be done with the same goals in mind, that being: a chance for the students to get away from the campus and have an afternoon filled with good music, friends, and most of all FUN!

A point to keep in mind while at BRATFEST is this: If there are any problems, before, during, or after the event, it is very likely there will be no other event of this kind, for any student organization in the future. Remember, "The eyes of the community and the university are upon us!"

We hope to see you out at Bukolt Park on May 6, and let's show the City of Stevens Point and the university that we students can be responsible!

Rep. Comment

To The Editor:

Thank you, Mr. President, for having the courage and confidence to do what needed to be done. US strikes against terrorist bases and camps in Libya should be viewed as strategic defensive tactics in the ongoing war against terrorism. The ability of the President to act unilaterally, with some help from our good friends in Britain, demonstrates the willingness of a civilized and peaceful people to combat religious fanatics, like mad dog Kaddafi, who export terror and death.

For those of you who may be concerned about US warplanes killing innocent civilians, and about world opinion, remember a couple of things: The four Americans, one of them an eight-month old baby, that were blasted through a hole in a TWA jet by a terrorist bomb were also innocent victims. And when the Soviets condemn us for our actions, think about the pregnant Afghan women who are herded into the center of the village, told to lay on their backs, then scream in horror as Soviet soldiers split their bellies open with bayonets while proclaiming, "Let's see your God save you now." Think about the young Afghan child who runs in circles screaming in terror after a Soviet bomb, disguised as a toy, blew off the child's hands. These are documented reports from villagers who flee the terror to join the Miyahideen freedom fighters, who continue to fight for their homeland.

We shall see if mad dog wants to come out and play now!

Mr. Raygun

To The Editor:

Thank you Mr. Raygun for showing us what you are, an old man acting like a child. I feel sorry for Kaddafi's little one-year-old daughter who will never be able to act like a child because of your terrorist attack. I was sickened by the false sense of patriotism that has surfaced on campus. I heard someone say "We sure kicked their asses and showed them." But did we?

Does acting like a two year old and attacking a place the size of Wisconsin make us want to hold our heads high? Maybe I'm by myself in saying that what happened Monday made me ashamed to be an American and sad that students rejoice in such actions. One terrorist act does not deserve another. I only hope that this does end so we can get off our high and mighty cloud and start acting like human beings.

Penny-Wise? Pound-Foolish?

Lights are cheaper than hot water.

Lighting costs $3 to $6 a month for the average apartment. So if you cut lighting by, say 15%, you could save 50¢ to $1 a month. Now that's nothing to scoff at; it'll buy you a couple rounds of Pac-Man, if nothing else.

But you'll save substantially more by cutting back on hot water use.

That's because heating water takes a lot of energy and that means it costs you money. For perspective, a shower is 500 to 1,000 times more expensive than lighting a 60-watt bulb for the same time period.

So the next time you're standing in the shower in the dark, think about it.

Dim Bulb in the Attic

"What it looks like isn't really what it is."

by Carol Diser
Staff Reporter

They met in first grade, made their stage debut in third grade, and now, as graduating UWSP seniors, will perform a two-man mixed-media comedy revue—Dim Bulb in the Attic.

Mario Fraboni and Ron Weirick, both senior drama majors from Beloit, will perform their show of fast-paced sketches through live performance and videotape in the Encore Room of the UC this Friday and Saturday night at 8.

Fraboni and Weirick got the idea for the show a couple of years ago when they teamed up to do a benefit for their former high school, Beloit Catholic High. They performed some material from a comedy revue called "Good Evening," written by Peter Cook and Dudley Moore.

"Up until the benefit, we had both been very active in theatre productions but had rarely had the opportunity to appear on stage together," said Fraboni. "Except for Doctor Doolittle in the third grade (he played Dr. Doolittle, Weirick played half of the Pushme-Pullyou), we always seemed to appear at opposite times."

Since Fraboni and Weirick enjoyed the benefit so much, they began to look for a new project to collaborate on together. They got the idea to create a comedy revue to serve as a senior project, approached the Theatre Department faculty for approval, and went to work. The revue is a mixture of comedy, dance, music, and reallistic pieces, the two explained. The title Dim Bulb in the Attic comes from two ideas—one, that there is a lot of junk everyone collects, and two, the idea of not having it all upstairs. "The show is a little odd," said Fraboni. "It's a hodgepodge of weird stuff." Both performers say they've been influenced the most by television. "On TV there's so much to laugh at. That's why we're doing parts of the show on video, because it's television-ish stuff," said Weirick.

A lot of the duo's material comes from real life and their close friendship. "We laugh at just about everything. We see something normal and think of it in a demented way," explained Fraboni. "We like the idea that what it looks like isn't really what it is."

Fraboni and Weirick both stress that they've had a lot of help in the creation of Dim Bulb in the Attic. Steve Sherwin of the Theatre Department served as the project's advisor and has "given us a look from a fresh eyeball," according to Fraboni. Tom Nevins, also a faculty member from the Theatre Department, contributed greatly as a creative consultant. The Dance Department's Linda Caldwell contributed choreography to the show, and students Melodie Hendricks and Eileen Stanke will both act in the show.

"People outside of the Theatre and Dance Departments helped us too," said Weirick. "Area businesses lent props to us. Bernard's Supper Club even lent us the use of their limousine. Also we are really grateful to Tom Ropella from CA-3 for his work on the videos, to Bill Johnson from Collins Classroom Center, and to Jim Vandervelder from Student Activities who has helped us with the arrangements for the Encore Room."

Fraboni and Weirick hope that Dim Bulb in the Attic will serve as a springboard for their dream—to put together a small company to perform comedy at the club they hope to have someday. "That's partly why we chose the Encore," said Fraboni. "The Encore has the relaxed, nightclub atmosphere that we hope to have in our place. Live performance comedy is growing all over the country and we hope to be part of it."

Tickets for Dim Bulb in the Attic are only $1 and are available from the Theatre Arts Box Office or can be obtained at the door of the Encore before the performances on Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m.

On April 22, at 8 p.m. in the Encore, WWSP and UAB will present Fire and Ice, featuring John Harmon. The concert is designed to kick off Jazz Fest, a weekend of listening pleasure in which WWSP will play a feast of jazz for its patrons.

WWSP and UAB couldn't have chosen a better band to usher in Jazz Fest. Fire and Ice is a band that "puts out high energy music" says fan Bill McGuire. Fire and Ice offers original, powerful music that transcends music categories. Much of their material is original, written by John Harmon, formerly of Matrix.

The power of Harmon's music has carried over to Fire and Ice. "John's rich personality echos in his music," notes Joel

Student involvement can help your future

by Carol Diser
Staff Reporter

Most of us have been told at some time that we should get involved on campus. "It'll look good on your resume," we're told, or "It'll help you get a job."

Well, they (whomever they might be) were right. Former students, faculty, and studies agree—student involvement is an important part of preparation for the future.

Sara Dunham put it this way, "Being involved made all the difference in the world. I wouldn't have been the same person without it."

Dunham, who was SGA Vice-President, ACT co-President, and active in many other organizations, now works for the university in Campus Activities and serves as the advisor for Campus Leaders Association—an organization she was involved with as a student. Dunham also works for CAP-Services, a program that assists people with employment training.

"I learned the skills I use now through the activities I was involved in. I learned a lot about working with people, organization, and how to make contacts," she said. "But my major also prepared me. Involvement is a complement to academics. One doesn't work without the other."

UWSP Alumni Debbie McDonald agrees. "My activities got me the job. I learned how to run meetings, interview, and work with a committee. Everything required for my job, I had learned as a student leader."

McDonald, who also works for CAP-Services, served as a Vice-President for ACT, Minority Affairs Director and Executive Director for SGA, and was active in a number of other organizations.

Dr. Dan Dieterich of the English Department strongly urges students to get involved. "It is my opinion that students should get involved in professional organizations within their major or create them if they do not now exist," he said. "Student involvement is regarded as an indication of professionalism. It shows some professional commitment."

Dieterich cited a study done by Marian Baudoin of the University of Pittsburgh. The study on Administrative Management Society college chapters showed that much involvement provides experience and knowledge and is highly recommended by members, former members, and employers of former members.

Dieterich also stressed that volunteer work in the community is a beneficial involvement.

"Besides the humanitarian aspect which is important, students develop skills through volunteer work that will serve them well. Employers regard volunteer work as an indication of honesty and responsibility. These attributes rank higher with employers than grade point average."

C.Y. Allen of the Communication Department agrees. "In a survey done of 175 personnel managers by the American Management Association, work experience was one of the top

Blank, music educator and clinician. "I think he sees the world as a constantly shifting kaleidoscope and he's awed and excited by all the beauty and variety—also humbled. So his music comes across gently, rich, full of openness and melody—like himself."

Harmon traces his love for jazz back to his childhood. "My father, Dan, loved music. He owned a good-sized Oshkosh insurance agency and knew the strains of managing a staff. At home he turned to music to unwind, usually listening to jazz or symphonic records."

Harmon's father also tried his hand at the piano, though his lack of musical training limited him to one tune, Jerome Kern's All the Things You Are. But the repetition never bothered Harmon: "I trace my love of music to that song."

Harmon's love for jazz stayed with him as he grew. After his graduation from Lawrence University, Harmon was accepted at the Lenox School of Jazz in Lenox, Massachusetts, where he studied under Oscar Peterson. Peterson was considered the world's greatest living pianist.

Harmon formed Matrix in a pub called J.W. Puddy's in Appleton, Wisconsin. Harmon's idea was to form a band that would "create a whole new music and set the musical world on fire." It didn't take long for the sparks to start flying. That's not to say that Matrix found instant fame. It had its period of struggle like all bands do. They suffered from broken contracts, management troubles that almost split the band.

But they eventually fell into luck. The first break came when the Milwaukee Symphony booked the band for a dual performance that was raved. The next stroke of luck, or unconscious genius, came when Matrix was booked to play the Monterey Jazz Festival. Leonard Feather, the dean of American jazz critics, heard Matrix perform at the festival. He later wrote: Matrix has come off as the surprise show-stealer at the Monterey Jazz Festival. The term jazz/rock fails to define it because its scope is too broad, its level of artistry too high, its potential too great for such pigeonholing."

Opportunities began to flourish. The band contracted to cut albums for RCA and Warner Brothers. The Reno Evening Gazette wrote of Matrix: "In booking Matrix, the Reno International Jazz Festival, the world's largest, has achieved what may be its greatest triumph."

But opportunity and annual tours of 250 to 300 days eventually wore the band down. Harmon returned to his home 12 miles west of Oshkosh in the town of Winneconne.

Harmon has emerged from retirement, however, with the formation of his second band, Fire and Ice. And once again, the musical world had better prepare itself or get burned—sparks are flying.

If you love music, and if you love seeing a master performing his art, you do not want to miss Fire and Ice Tuesday night.

Festival's 10th anniversary

Press Release

PLATTEVILLE, WI—The Wisconsin Shakespeare Festival, located on the campus of the University of Wisconsin-Platteville, will be celebrating its 10th anniversary in 1986. The 1985 season was one of sold-out houses and an extended season because of the tremendous praise it received from major newspapers in Wisconsin. Attendance was up 17 percent, and the season closed with a budget in the black, giving proof of the ability to draw audiences.

People who attended were very impressed with all three plays: "Hamlet," "The Taming of the Shrew," and Moliere's "Tartuffe." The Wisconsin State Journal ran a feature article about the festival, saying, "...many fine moments, much fine acting, and, all in all, excellent theatre." Isthmus, of Madison, also made very positive comments such as, "...highly enjoyable productions...fast-paced action...lively, merry characterizations." Similar praise was heard from other publications such as the Milwaukee Sentinel and the Dubuque Telegraph Herald. The festival also received glowing reviews from prestigious theatre magazines including The Shakespeare Quarterly.

This year, the festival's 10th anniversary season will be celebrated with three Shakespeare plays: "Macbeth," "Twelfth Night," and "As You Like It." Each opening night will be celebrated with a reception.

Each season's cast is selected from approximately 300 actors and actresses. These performers are either graduate students in advanced acting schools or are presently acting with theatres around the country. The auditions are presented at major universities throughout the United States.

The festival begins July 5 with "Twelfth Night." The plays are rotated throughout the month-long season, closing with "As You Like It" on August 2. Ticket prices are $7 Sunday through Thursday, and $8 Friday through Saturday evening. There are special rates for senior citizens and students ($6 Friday and Saturday, and $5 Sunday through Thursday).

For further information about the festival, please call 608-342-1194 or write to Wisconsin Shakespeare Festival, University of Wisconsin-Platteville, Platteville, Wisconsin 53818.

Caldwell's piece selected for Dance Festival

by Mary Ringstad
Staff Reporter

Fantasies still are realized—the dream of one UWSP dance instructor and five of her students came true last weekend.

Linda Caldwell's "Fantasy for a Few Good Men" has been selected to perform in the closing night gala concert at the national American College Dance Festival held in Washington, D.C. May 22-25. The dance piece was chosen for the honorary closing spot in the gala of the regional festival in Iowa at the end of January. "Hopefully we'll get to close again," Caldwell said.

Caldwell and her "Few Good Men"—John Millard, Mario Fraboni, Blaine Mastalir, Russell Germann and George McCarthy—have been waiting to find out if they had been chosen to go to Washington since the beginning of February. "UWSP will probably be the smallest school there," Caldwell admitted proudly.

The piece will be adjudicated by "some of the highest names in dance." In addition to performing, the students will attend daily workshops and classes with top dancers from around the country. Financing the trip, however, may be a problem. Theatre Arts Chair Arthur Hopper is trying to raise the necessary funds. Caldwell is hopeful that, one way or another, the money will be found.

The festival will be good for the students in two ways, Caldwell said. "They'll get to see real dance...the foreground of dance which changes art." Also, Caldwell expects to see New York choreographers at the festival and their presence might have an effect on the future careers of the UWSP dancers.

"For myself, I've got a lot to live up to," Caldwell said. "It opens a lot of doors." She added that as for the university, "It certainly can't hurt it."

Why can't profs count?

by Brian McCombe
Staff Reporter

I'm constantly amazed by my teachers. These people have graduated from some of the best colleges in America. These people have six years, eight years, sometimes even 10 years of university education. People old enough to be my parents. And they can't count.

Now I know that they can read because they make up their own syllabi. (At least I think they do.) But once the semester starts and they try to follow their syllabi, it becomes painfully clear that my teachers have not mastered basic math. So here's a little refresher for all those teachers who still use their fingers and toes.

First of all, there are 15 weeks in a semester. Now, how many assignments are your students going to have in the semester? Let's say eight, eight of whatever—papers, books, chapters, etc. With eight assignments in a semester, this means that you, the teacher, should spend just under two weeks on each assignment.

Got it? This doesn't mean that you should spend five weeks on the first assignment, four weeks on the second assignment, and that you should then start cracking the whip because you'll be five to six weeks behind the syllabus. You want to spread the assignments evenly over the 15 weeks. This will help to avoid the huge pile-up of work that generally hits students around week 12.

Let's use a different example. Let's say that the number of assignments is 10. In a 15-week semester, this means that you'll have right around a week and a half per assignment. Now, what if you have 15 assignments in a semester? Yes, you in the back. That's right. It works out to one assignment per week. Got it?

Yes, I know that it's too late in the semester to use these new-found math skills. And yes, I know that you've got your students doing double what they should be doing in your frantic rush to cover the syllabus. But try to practice your addition and long division over the summer break. It isn't so hard. You've just got to practice.

Four Native American artists display work

University News Service

Four Native American artists will exhibit their work during April in the Museum of Natural History at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

Jerry Maulson of Lac Du Flambeau, Marshall E. Ellis, Denice F. Beans and Melanie M. Ellis, natives of Oneida, will display paintings, drawings, bowls, belts, baskets and other items from April 12-27 in the museum's gallery. The show was arranged through the Native American Center at UWSP as part of the observation of American Indian Week, April 21-25.

Maulson, who is tribal planner for the Chippewa Tribe of the Lac du Flambeau Indians, was trained by his grandmother, the late Mary Potts, in the ancient cultural crafts. He also attended the Institute of American Indian Art in Santa Fe, New Mexico, for one year.

He will be showing "God's Eyes," which he describes as two sticks strung together with woven yarn, like a spiderweb. Also included will be birch bark baskets, some with cultural scenes painted on them. Maulson describes his work as traditional in form with added contemporary touches.

Maulson, 44, holds a teaching degree from the University of Arizona-Tucson and is vice chairman of the Lac du Flambeau Council. He says he is involved with reviving the traditional cultural crafts on the reservation and encouraging local people to appreciate Indian art. He is a co-sponsor of the Native American Art Show and Sale, held annually at the reservation's museum and cultural center.

Maulson's traditional name is "Bedonquid," which means "thunder clouds in the distance."

Marshall and Melanie Ellis and Denice Bean are the children of Loretta Metoxen of Oneida, a grantswriter and consultant to Indian organizations. All three are graduates of the Indian Art Institute in Santa Fe. Most of the work which will be displayed at UWSP has been purchased from the artists by Loretta's husband, Floyd Metoxen.

Marshall, 27, is currently assigned to an Air Force satellite tracking station in Zama, Japan. He has attended the Minneapolis College of Art and Design, the University of Alaska and UW-Superior. His work to be shown at UWSP includes several oil portraits of Indian men, plus pen and ink wildlife drawings.

Denice, 30, who is married to an Eskimo and lives in the Yukon, is a magistrate for St. Mary's Village, Alaska. She was elected to the position, which her mother describes as being similar to a judgeship, for three years. She also holds a bachelor's degree in art education from the University of Alaska-Fairbanks. She will display a raku bowl and finger-woven and beaded belts at UWSP.

Melanie, 28, is a Navy recruit stationed in Orlando, Fla. She holds an associate degree in creative writing and journalism and is a published poet. Some of her work is included in "I Am the Fire of Time," a book of poetry about Indian Women, edited by Jane Katz. She will be showing a cut bead hat band and fingerwoven belts.

The exhibit will be open to the public during museum hours, Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., on Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Weekend laughs

by Mary Ringstad Staff Reporter

If you need some laughs this weekend, University Theatre has the remedy for you. Several UWSP theatre arts students present their acting recitals this Friday and Saturday, April 18 and 19.

Ken Jenkins' one-man show "Chug" will be performed by senior Doug Curtis at 6 p.m. in the Studio Theatre of the College of Fine Arts. Admission is free. Curtis bills his senior recital as "a tale of free enterprise and bullfrogs." Recent UWSP graduate Dean Gray serves as director of the piece. Gray directed ACT's February production of "The Tender Trap" at Sentry Theatre.

Mario Fraboni and Ron Weirick's "Dim Bulb in the Attic," scheduled for 8 p.m. on both nights at the Encore in the University Center, is a multimedia comedy revue with both original and classic material. Tickets, available at the Fine Arts Box Office and at the door, are $1. Call 348-4100 for more information.

University Theatre promises that time will permit students to be able to see both "Chug" and "Dim Bulb in the Attic" on the same evening, if they so desire.

three skills most important to them when hiring employees. Grade point average didn't even make the top 10."

Allen, who has considerable contact with executives in business and industry, believes that the business community perceives student involvement as very important. "Student involvement helps to develop competencies. Involvement makes you stronger as a human being," he said.

In a study done by the National Association of School Principals, it was found that co-curricular activities may be a better predictor of future success than I.Q. or G.P.A.

"I think this is great," said Allen. "If I.Q. is mostly genetic and G.P.A. isn't always within our control, then involvement is where we can make the difference. Involvement is where you've got some choice."

GET "THE EDGE," GET INVOLVED!

Dear Mom and Dad,

Guess what? you'll never guess. After trying four different majors I've finally decided on one . . . Political Science with a minor in Communications.

Guess what helped me decide? You'll never guess. Remember that organization I got involved in last semester? (You know, then you said, "Oh my, what's he getting himself into now?") Well, it turned out to be a great move on my part. I've had the chance to work with people who share some of my interests and have been able to gain perspective on the field I want to work in. This organization is really great! It gives me an opportunity to try out some of the theories I read about in my classes. Actually using what I learn in class in a "real world" situation makes it easier to understand.

I'm going to continue on the Senate and Legislative Affairs committee of the Student Government Association this semester and have decided to run for Student Government Association President for 1987-1988 school year. (You won't have to call me Mr. President). That way, I will be working in my field and will gain further leadership experience as well.

Well, that's all my big news for today except to say that without your love and support none of my big news would have happened. Thanks for being there and caring.

More later.

Love,
George

P.S. Could you please send $10.00 so I can do my laundry? Thanks.

BEING INVOLVED MAY MAKE THE DIFFERENCE

two years later . . .

Dear Mother and Father,

After all the resume writing and job interviewing, I have acquired a position with a Virginia based lobbying organization. I'll be moving down right after graduation.

The interview for the position was extremely intense. They were looking for someone with an excellent academic record that had attended a strong institution . . . and they wanted someone with experience. My politically-related work on student issues, as SGA President, really sold them. The trips to lobby in Madison and Washington for student rights really helped. My major and my organizational involvement were a perfect compliment to each other. I am SO glad I gave my all in both. It really paid off.

Well, I must be off. Much to do. I love you both! Write soon!

Love, George

P.S. The apartment complex I'll be living in, the Valley Forge Apartments, has a cherry tree in front, just like home.

OUTDOOR

Ag innovator Jackson to keynote Earth Day

by Andy Gallagher
Outdoor Contributor

In the farm country around Salina, Kansas, a new breeze is blowing. Unlike the winds that turned the Great Plains into a dusty hell back in the 1930s, these winds leave no billowing clouds of dust. They are the winds of change that could, like the Great Dust Bowl, drastically alter agriculture forever. The change is being proposed, researched and practiced by Wes Jackson and his wife Dana at the Land Institute.

The Land Institute is a school that the couple started in 1976 to try to create a sustainable type of agriculture, using the North American prairie as a model. Research at the Land Institute is covering new ground in energy alternatives, solid waste management, shelter and especially in perennial polyculture (a cropping system that attempts to attain high yields from perennial mixed crops of native flora stock).

Next Tuesday, April 22, at 7:30 p.m. in the University Center's Wright Lounge, Wes Jackson will kick off Earthweek '86 with a keynote address. Wes Jackson is also the author of two books, Man and the Environment and New Roots for Agriculture. Jackson's research at the Land Institute calls into question all forms of agriculture that rely on tillage, large doses of pesticides, synthetic fertilizers, fossil fuels, and irrigation. In his words, "...not because sustainable till agriculture can't be practiced, but because it isn't and hasn't been, except in small pockets scattered over the globe. So destructive has the agricultural revolution been that, geologically speaking, it surely stands as the most significant and explosive event to appear on the face of the earth, changing the earth even faster than did the origin of life."

Wes Jackson is a native of rural Kansas with a strong farm background. His familiarity with great plains agricultural problems and his academic background in genetics have given him the motivation and tools to move boldly with his ideas of sustainable agriculture, utilizing native plants that evolved in place, and modern genetics to increase yields. This is what Jackson calls the "biotechnical fix" — agriculture's need to be sustainable. Like their pioneer grandfathers, Wes and Dana Jackson are pioneers who are striving for long range ecologically compatible farming techniques and cropping systems, that, if put into practice, could not only build soil instead of eroding it, but could also help turn around an ailing farm economy.

Nesting Help

This Grand River Marsh structure is one of a number of Forster's tern artificial nesting platforms set up by the Bureau of Endangered Resources.

Species Spotlight

Throughout the year, the Outdoor Section has run a 'Species Spotlight' each month, highlighting a different Wisconsin endangered species and its particular habitat, life cycle, and survival problems. Owls, eagles, wolves, and Canadian lynxes have had a part in making 'Species Spotlight' enjoyable to read. Next month the endangered plants of the world will be highlighted, so to end this section of Outdoor, the Forster's tern will be featured, a bird known well by wildlifers, but not by many others.

Research and Surveys

A thorough survey of all traditional and potential nesting areas in 1985 revealed 413 pairs of Forster's terns nesting at sites statewide. This number was down from 1984 due to high water levels in the Green Bay area. Two hundred forty-eight of these nests were on platforms in Lake Poygan and Rush Lake. Forster's terns nested on all platforms set out. However, all nests on Rush Lake (48) were abandoned, evidently due to predation by great horned owls. One new nesting site on natural substrate was found in the Sensiba Wildlife Area.

Habitat Management

The statewide nesting population declined from 800 pairs in 1984 to 413 pairs in 1985, due largely to high water levels that inundated traditional nest colonies on the west shore of Green Bay. In 1985, BER installed 200 nest platforms for Forster's terns in traditional nesting areas on Lake Poygan, Winnebago County. Terns nested on all of these platforms.

State researchers find source of fungal infection

University News Service

A group of researchers from Wisconsin has provided the first documentation of a clear-cut association between a source of environmental exposure and an outbreak of blastomycosis.

Blastomycosis is a rare fungal infection which occurs in humans and animals, especially dogs. It usually affects the lungs or skin.

Symptoms of this disease are similar to those of a respiratory infection or pneumonia, including cough, headache, chest pain, weight loss, abdominal pain, night sweats, loss of appetite, and chills. Symptoms occur four to six weeks after exposure to the fungus.

Writing The New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Bruce Klein, an infectious diseases specialist at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and others described their investigation of a blastomycosis outbreak in Vilas County in northern Wisconsin.

In the summer of 1984, a total of 46 elementary school children and two adults contracted the disease at an environmental camp on the Eagle River. Ten of these were hospitalized and treated with drugs. There have been no complications, deaths, or episodes of disease reactivation, according to Klein.

Numerous previous studies have failed to isolate the causative agent, a fungus called B. dermatitidis, from the soil, but

Fast food destruction of tropical rainforests

by Andy Savagian
Outdoor Editor

Identifying world problems is one thing; relating the problems to students at UW-Stevens Point is another matter altogether.

The destruction of the world's tropical rainforests is one of the most permanently devastating and ecologically dangerous problems human beings face today. And we do face it; we are the sole cause for a phenomenal deforestation process that has just destroyed 25 acres of trees in the time it took you to read this introduction.

Yet to bring this issue to the fore at UWSP is not easy, and for a logical reason. Stevens Point is not even close to any sort of tropical rainforest, and the climate here usually resembles the North Pole, not the equator. We are not near the problem, so we do not feel we can be part of the solution.

But we are very much a part of this problem — we will be affected by its eventual repercussions, and we need to know the facts to help solve the problem.

Tropical rainforests are extremely unique. They contain perhaps half the world's species, of which only 15 percent have been identified. They are the world's richest genetic storehouse. Costa Rica (a country smaller than West Virginia) has more bird species (758) than all of North America. Scientists have identified 8,000 plant species in Costa Rica alone, including 1,000 orchids.

and the Third World. Though they are incredibly diverse and complex, once the trees are cleared and the land 'developed' for farming, grazing, etc., the last, vast natural resources that evaporates as soon as it is within his grasp. It is a dilemma, unfortunately, that most rainforest developers do not realize.

The rainforests are disappearing. Since '50, most forests on the continents have shrunk to half their pre-developed size. Increasing populations, especially in south Asia and the Third World, are pressing hard against the rainforest's borders. Under-developed countries are hungry for cleared land to support the growing masses through farming, grazing, and industry. Firewood among these 'fossil fuel-less' nations is in great need, as is farmland. The poor peasant, numerous in the rainforest, needs the land to feed his family and cattle, and to fuel his home.

These pressures are hard to ease, yet global organizations are working hard on conservation projects. In 1984, the World Bank had some 48 ongoing reforestation and forestry related projects around the world. But the poor countries are reluctant to comply because they are eager to build bridges, dams and other job stimulating projects; many also have logging operations to export tropical hardwoods to the industrialized West.

There is another cause of tropical deforestation, though, that does not deal in population numbers, or poverty, or farming. It is a blatant exploitation of the resource, and it is a growing problem that stems mainly from the wants of the American consumer.

The cattle rancher is a common symbol of the American West and Southwest, and for the past 25 years, its impact has reached numerous countries in Central and South America. Since 1960, man-made pasture areas have increased by two-thirds in Central America and rainforests have been reduced by 40 percent.

The reason? Fast foods. The fast food industry (McDonalds, Hardees, Burger King, etc.), in need of cheap beef for its hamburgers, hot dogs and processed meats, found a haven of low priced land, labor and cattle in the heart of rainforest country. This has led to wholesale destruction of forests for beef, a situation experts aptly dubbed "The Hamburger Connection."

"A main stimulus for this outburst of cattle raising is the growing demand from markets in the developed world for 'non-inflationary' beef," according to Norman Meyers, rainforest expert and author of a 1985 National Academy of Sciences report. "Due to low costs of land and labor, grass-fed beef can be produced in tropical Latin America at only one-quarter the price of similar beef in the United States."

Yet tropical rainforests blanket only two percent of the Earth's surface along an equatorial strip that includes most of Central and South America, Central Africa, southern India soil falls apart. Completely. In three to four years of grazing the land is totally worthless.

This is the ironic dilemma the modern day human being faces; he is caught exploiting one of

As during the past five years, these platforms have supported the largest and probably the most successful population of Forster's terns statewide. Observations of nesting birds from blinds in both natural and platform nesting situations documented the efficacy of the current platform design and suggested improvements to be tested in 1986.

Forster's terns have been declining at Rush Lake, Winneba-go County, over the last decade due to loss of emergent vegetations. Forty-seven pairs were attracted to the lake in 1985 through the use of artificial platforms, but the entire colony was abandoned due to great horned owl predation.

In 1986, the nest platform program will be expanded in these and other traditional nesting areas where the nest habitat appears to be limiting, and we will experiment with the effects of platform location on nest success.

Klein and his colleagues succeeded. They found it in soil near a beaver pond that was visited by the campers.

The soil was moist with a high content of organic materials, an acid pH, and exposure to animal waste. The children probably became infected when they physically disturbed the soil, sending spores into the air which they then inhaled.

Blastomycosis is very rare in Portage County, according to Dave Nordstrom, Health Officer. An average of two or three cases are reported each year. This could be due in part to the lack of a reliable diagnostic test for this disease.

Knowledge of this fungal infection is still limited, said Nordstrom. It is not transmitted directly from person to person or animal to person.

Persons who walk along river banks have some risk of contracting blastomycosis, but the likelihood is very small compared to the probability of developing other lung disease from such behaviors as cigarette smoking.

Nordstrom recommends that persons who believe they may have this infection see their physician and that physicians who diagnose blastomycosis notify the Community Human Services Department.

Another disturbing fact is that the beef makes up only a quarter of the total beef imports of the United States, and the curate grass-fed cattle is considered only suitable in the US fast-food industry.

The Science News in 1985 stated that from 1965 to 1978, more than one billion dollars was pumped into raising beef cattle; Brazil alone had 336 ranches. In Central America, at least, beef consumption declined over a period that saw a doubling in the number of cattle raised for meat.

What this all boils down to is the immediate degradation of equatorial species and lands, and the future destruction of global climates and habitats — cold hard facts that have been well documented. Cleared tropical rainforests are overgrazed and abused, have extremely low soil fertility, and in some areas are exhausted, never to be used again by humans or other animals. UWSP forestry professor Jay Cravens, in a 1983 interview with the Pointer said: "The tropical forest's soils are rich only because of millions of years of evolution. The recycling of the leaves and the twigs...goes back into the soil and enriches it. And when you take away that cycle the soil is very, very poor...it can't hold its nutrients."

Tropical rainforests also play two very important global roles: they transpire a lot of the moisture and rainfall into the atmosphere, which maintains a steady world climate; and their extreme complexity maintains a diverse world ecosystem necessary for all species survival — human beings included.

To expect the reader of this article to pack up his/her belongings and head for the equator to do social work belies the message. Hopefully we have achieved an awareness of our connection with other areas of the world and the broad impact of our social and cultural actions.

Stevens Point is not so isolated once you consider the whole; a McDonald's hamburger can do much to bring about the destruction of our tropical rainforests. Says Norman Meyers: "on a planetary time-scale, it will all happen in the twinkling of a geological eye."

Earthweek Fact
The Ecologist reported in 1980 that McDonald's sells three billion hamburgers every year using 300,000 head of cattle and has gross annual sales of $3 billion.

Trivia
What was the theme for Earthweek in 1984?

Answer
UWSP's theme for Earthweek '84 was "Search for Alternatives."

Pointers topple Concordia in home opener

by UWSP Sports Information Office

The UW-Stevens Point baseball team opened its 1986 home schedule in fine fashion, winning two games against Concordia College (Mequon) by scores of 3-1 and 9-4.

The first game was highlighted by a sparkling pitching performance from sophomore Scott Pompe. The left-hander from Watertown allowed only one hit, a double in the sixth inning, while going the distance for the season opening win.

The Pointers scored first, when Greg Dantoin singled home Kevin Lyons, who doubled with one out in the second inning.

UWSP added lone runs in the fourth and fifth innings without the benefit of a base hit. Concordia aided the Pointer cause by committing five errors and yielding two walks in those two frames.

Concordia's Troy Cox limited UWSP to only two hits and although several Pointers hit balls sharply, they were either right at the defense, or were held up by a strong wind which blew in from left field.

The Pointers completed the sweep behind the combined mound efforts of Randy Janikowski and Craig Borchardt in the nightcap.

UWSP broke the game open with five runs in the sixth inning. Greg Dantoin led off by reaching on an error and Mike Ruechel followed with a run-scoring double. A pair of walks loaded the bases and Phil Huebner's single drove in two runs. Consecutive singles by Dan Dantoin and Lyons provided the punch to drive in the final insurance runs.

Dan Dantoin led the Pointers with three singles and two RBIs while Ruechel pounded a pair of doubles and scored two runs.

Harriers strong at Northwestern

by UWSP Sports Information Office

EVANSTON, ILL. - Led by strong performances from 1500M champ Arnie Schraeder and high jump winner Michelle Riedi, the UWSP men's and women's track squads made a solid showing at the Northwestern Relays held here over the weekend.

Though no team scores were recorded, coach Rick Witt was pleased with the overall performance of both teams. "I feel we got excellent efforts and performances from all the men and women," he said, "even though the places may not indicate it."

Schraeder, a junior from Nekosa, churned to a 3:57.2 clocking en route to victory. Riedi, a senior from De Pere, also continued her winning ways as she won the high jump with a leap of 5'4".

Notching the only second for the Pointers was senior James Kowalczyk with a time of 31:04.8 in the 10,000M.

Third place showings were recorded on Don Reiter, 5000M, 14:45.7; Cathy Ausloos, 800M, 2:15.1 (qualifying her for Div. III Nationals); men's 4x800M Relay (Allison, Olson, Hujik and Nelson), 7:58.0; Carrie Enger, 400M, 60.2; Scott Patza and Ben Baumgart (tie), high jump, 6'4"; Tammy Stowers, discus, 113'8"; Stacey Frieman, javelin, 99'8"; and Carlene Wilkom, triple jump, 5'6 1/2".

Fourth place finishers were Kris Hoel, 3000M, 17:50.0; Mike Christman, 400M, 48.6; women's 4x100M Relay (Brilowski, Enger, Ausloos and Wilkom), 51.2; women's 4x200M Relay (Morgan, Calchura, Michalets and Laude), 1:58.3; and the women's 4x400M Relay (Enger, Knuese, Brilowski and Ausloos), 4:10.3.

"Wilkom captured the lone fifth place with a leap of 17'0" in the long jump.

Sixth place finishers were Christman, 400M (IH), 55.1; men's 4x100 Relay, (Wolfigram, Hiemark, Larson and Christman), 42.84; women's 4x800 Relay (Cynor, Wilkom, Kotney and Peasley), 10:18.9; men's distance medley (Allison, Rotar, Hujik and Olson), 10:20.4; and the men's sprint medley, (Knuese, Blanco, Rotar and Nelson), 3:33.8.

"I thought Arnie (Schraeder) made another step in his racing career as he won this big meet and in the process beat Steve Lacy, a 1984 US Olympic qualfier and world-class athlete," said Witt. "I also felt Michelle (Riedi) won the high jump against some excellent Div. I athletes, even though the height was not as good as she is accustomed to due to the rain."

Witt also cited his middle and distance runners as performing well. "They all ran super," he said. "Cathy Ausloos ran a great 800 meters to qualify for nationals."

Enger and Christman also ran well against some super competition. Witt added, "Carrie (Enger) took third, which is a great effort for a freshman and she will run better when she gets more experience," he said.

Witt also was pleased with the women's 400 and 800M relay teams which did well for the first time running outdoors.

"Coach Schoen has done a good job with them on their exchanges and it really showed," he said. "I was also happy to see the women throwers perform well at this meet."

Even though the meet was dominated by superb Pointer performances, there was one disappointment, that being a potentially serious hamstring pull to junior all-American Christman. The injury occurred in the mile relay.

The UW-Stevens Point men's tennis team had mixed results during the past week. The Pointer netters dropped a 9-0 decision to UW-Stout but bounced back to whip UW-Platteville, 9-1, in the Oshkosh Invitational.

Winning singles matches against the Pioneers were Bill Diehl, Bryan Zowin, Gary Polston, Doug Greenberg and Pete Benedict. Doubles winners were Diehl-Zowin, Polston-Jon McElhane and Benedict-Greenberg.

"We totally dominated Platteville," said UWSP coach Dave Nass. "All of our players turned in fine matches including Mike Briones at No. 5 whose three-set match became our only loss. He played a smart second and third set strategy and only lost because Tony Guinn got hot in the third set and delivered some great shots.

"In doubles, Greenberg substituted for Briones at No. 3 and played smart. Doug's partner, Benedict, took control of the net play early and never faltered."

The Pointers were unable to win a match against the all-terrain Blue Devils.

"At No. 2, singles Bryan Zowin looked very good," said Nass. "The score of his match (6-2, 6-0) didn't reflect the quality of his play. His opponent (John Leehy) just didn't make any mistakes. At No. 3, Polston also turned in a good effort de-

Warhawks blank Lady Pointers in doubleheader

by UWSP Sports Information Office

The UW-Stevens Point women's softball team fell victim to both bad weather and a talented UW-Whitewater team as they dropped two games in a doubleheader last Saturday, 10-0 and 7-0.

Game number one began promptly at 1 p.m. and so did the rain which was to continue the remainder of the day — eventually forcing the Lady Pointers to forfeit game two.

In the first game, the lead-off hitter for UW-Whitewater connected for an opening triple and scored on a fly ball to center field. The Whitewater assault didn't slow down until the fifth inning when the game was called due to the 10 run rule.

Kathy Bertz and Amy Holak recorded hits for Stevens Point but it wasn't enough to make up for the three errors committed by the Lady Pointers and the ten hits recorded by Whitewater.

Game two began with Whitewater scoring nine runs in the top half of the first innings, and head coach Nancy Page decided the weather was too poor to continue play and forfeited the contest.

Page acknowledged Whitewater's great talent but also felt the cold, wet weather worked against her inexperienced team.

FIRST GAME	00	0-0	2-3
UW-Stevens Point	11	0-0	10-0
UW-Whitewater	11	0-0	10-0

(Forfeits are recorded as 7-0 victories).

"Whitewater is an excellent team and they made some outstanding fielding plays along with their solid hitting," she said.

"The second game really should have never begun. It was about 38 degrees, raining and windy and both teams were soaked and cold," Page continued. "I finally decided to forfeit — it wasn't worth the possibility of injury to my players."

Weather cooperating, the Lady Pointer softball team will raise their bats again today when they host Eau Claire for a pair of games beginning at 2 p.m. The Pointers' games versus Superior on Monday and Oshkosh Tuesday were cancelled.

Willkom emerges as class athlete at UWSP

by Scott Huelskamp
Staff Reporter

Willkom qualified for the national track meet in the triple jump. At the meet she placed sixth in the nation, earning All-America honors. All-America honors are given to individuals placing first through eighth at the national meet.

"I was a little surprised that I was an All-American," she said. "I just had a really good meet at the right time, and I knew then that I had made the right decision to join the team."

Willkom picked up where she left off her sophomore season, placing second in the triple jump and third in the long jump in the WSUC outdoor meet.

She again qualified for the national meet in the triple jump, but faltered on her first two jumps and could not post a competitive third try to finish a disappointing 13th place.

With virtually no time to rest after the national meet, Willkom was on a plane to Europe, where from June 21-30 she and other collegiate track stars nationwide competed against German track clubs.

Willkom felt going to Europe was a tremendous benefit. "It has really helped to improve my ability to prepare for a meet, and the international teams were terrific competition."

At this year's women's conference indoor meet at La Crosse, Willkom captured the triple jump title, in addition to the 60-yard hurdles and the five-event pentathlon championship. Willkom began training last year in the hurdles and pentathlon when her coaches wanted to tap her diverse talents.

"I really want to win the triple jump, hurdles and heptathlon at the WSUC outdoor meet (at Stevens Point) and maybe even go to nationals in those events," Willkom commented.

"Training for the heptathlon (seven individual events with competition outdoors only) does take away from practicing for the triple jump, but I don't mind because I'm really starting to get into the hept and want to improve. I don't think my triple jump will suffer at all.

"With the nine individual events and relays I compete in during meets, I have to work harder and harder to keep my stamina up so I don't fatigue."

Willkom has already posted a 17'2" long jump and qualified for the national meet in the triple jump with a leap of 38'7".

With a dozen medals already hanging from her wall and a bright year and a half of track eligibility remaining, it is evident Carlene Willkom made the right decision to join the team.

UBRAT time trials set

The University Bicycle Racers and Triathletes (UBRAT) held their first, in a series of four, time trials this past Saturday, April 12. The race was held at 10 a.m. and took place on County Highway C, west of Stevens Point. The participants in the race, starting individually at one-minute time intervals, biked to a turn-around point 7.2 miles from the start and returned along the same course for a total distance of 14.4 miles.

Gary Scott, 201 Nelson Hall, took first place with a time of 37:50, averaging 22.8 miles per hour. Mike Zielke took second place with a 37:57 clocking, while Mike Nelson turned in the third place finish with a time of 38:14. John Baltzell (39:00) and Dave Chaskey (39:04) wound up fourth and fifth, respectively.

UBRAT will be sponsoring three more time trials this semester, with a trophy going to the winner of the overall four races. A race will be held every Saturday until May 3, with registration at 9:30 a.m. and the start at 10 a.m. The cost for each race is 50 cents for members of UBRAT and $1 for non-members.

The dates, distances and start locations of the time trials are:

April 19—(10 miles)—Hwy. C, west of Stevens Point.

April 26—(20 miles)—junction of Granite Ridge Road and Sawmill Road, northwest of Stevens Point.

May 3—(2½ miles)—base of Rib Mountain, near Wausau.

In case of rain, the time trial will be held at the same time on the following Sunday. For more information, call 345-6323.
