Young Republicans' budget

Student used $3,000 for personal use, allege Republicans

by Dan Dietrich
Editor

Gene Cisewski used approximately $3,000 of the Young Republicans' budget for his personal use while serving as chairman of that state organization in 1985, Nick Fuhrman, chairman of the Young Republicans, alleged.

Cisewski is a 29-year-old freshman at UWSP and serves as the publisher and CEO of UWSP Today.

A member of the Republican Party of Wisconsin confirmed that allegation and added that he believed the figure to be $3,000 to $4,000. He also stated that he saw the checkbook of the Young Republicans that contained "very questionable" purchases during Cisewski's tenure as chairman. This Republican Party member spoke on the grounds that he would remain anonymous.

As chairman of the Young Republicans (YRs), Cisewski "ended up, for convenience or for whatever reason, handling the YR finances," said Fuhrman. "In other words he had control of the checkbook."

"He then took the liberty of using the (YR) funds to, for instance, move his possessions to Madison (where he received office space), to pay for dry cleaning bills, to pay for meals," alleged Fuhrman. "These are the kind of expenditures that one is expected to pay for himself."

(Fuhrman initially provided information under anonymity, but then said that as chairman it is his job to "clean up this mess.")

"I did see (the checkbook). I saw the check entries," said the anonymous source, who remembered entries for such purchases as "home-delivered pizzas" and "personal shopping lists for food."

Cisewski denied using YR funds for personal use. "Money never disappeared from the budget," he added. "And the books were all audited before I was done and the audit showed everything exactly where it was and the entire approval was sent through the Budget Committee which approved everything."

Cisewski stated that his handling of money with the Young Republicans included "minor amounts for office expenses or office supplies."

Steve King, chairman of the Republican Party of Wisconsin (RPW) since June of 1985, stated that he has heard "a lot of allegations" concerning the use of YR funds for personal use during Cisewski's tenure, but refused to comment on the issue. King views this "as a YR situation that they dealt with and I wouldn't want to speak for them."

As chairman of the RPW during the time of those alleged purchases, King said, "I became aware of some YR finance problems, after he (Cisewski) had been employed (as director of list development for RPW). I think I'm aware of how any financial problems that occurred during Gene's tenure as chairman were ultimately resolved. But I just assume that (specifics) come from the YRs."

King recommended speaking with Rick Hartel. "He succeeded Gene as chairman of the YRs," said King, "and obviously by virtue of succeeding him, inherited whatever it is that he inherited, if you understand what I'm saying. Rick will be able to tell you more intimately about Gene's tenure as chairman of the YRs. He was chair-

Clash centers around press freedom at UW-LC

by Chris Dorsey
On Assignment

At UW-La Crosse a clash between the student newspaper, the Racquet, and the Student Association, the student government at UW-La Crosse, centers around press freedoms.

The controversy originated when current Racquet editor Dennis Cooley was rejected in his bid to be appointed editor for the fall semester. He worked as a Racquet reporter for two years before becoming editor this semester.

Cooley was turned down by the campus Publications Committee which consists of a mass communications professor, two students elected at large and four senators, including Student Body President Barry McNulty. The committee chose instead to appoint freshman Blake Morrison to the editor post and the decision was upheld by a vote of the Student Association.

Morrison spent three weeks last fall working for the Racquet and he is now a correspondent for the La Crosse Tribune.

Members of the current Racquet staff are outraged by the decision of the Student Association to hire the inexperienced Morrison. In an article published in the UW-Eau Claire Spectator, Racquet news editor Lynn Gall said, "(Morrison) doesn't even know what we do. I really question if he knows what he's getting into. I mean, he's only a freshman, how much can the guy really know?"

The way in which Racquet editors are appointed changed in 1980 when Racquet officials claimed censorship by the communications department who was then responsible for editor appointments. The present system was a direct result of the censorship claim.

The present system, say current Racquet members, is equally flawed because it amounts to prior restraint, and is an infringement on the First Amendment principles of freedom of speech and of the press.

Racquet officials fear the Student Association is now in the position to dictate Racquet editorial policy because the editor must answer directly to the Association.

Editors from other campus newspapers around the UW-System are typically chosen by the newspaper's staff or by a Publications Committee comprised of members of student and faculty groups.

The Pointer editor is selected by the UWSP Publications Board which includes two student senators, two Pointer staff members, a faculty member appointed by the Chancellor, a faculty senator and the Pointer advisor.

Student Association officials from UW-La Crosse deny any bias in the editor selection process. "No way in hell do I feel the Racquet itself can decide (its editor) because I feel," says McNulty, "that it would definitely be nothing but a cliquish decision."

One student senator reaffirmed McNulty by saying that senators are confident that they choose the best editor for the Racquet. He admitted, however, that most senators have little knowledge of journalism. And that's what has the Racquet staff concerned.

U.S. Senate propose compromise budget

by Karen Rivedal
News Editor

The United States Senate came to a compromise budget proposal on Tuesday of this week. Student lobbyists in Washington, D.C. were pleased to see the Hollings-Danforth amendment incorporated into this compromise legislation. The United States Student Association (USSA) strongly supported the education allocations this amendment proposes. However, Senate manipulation of the compromise bill reduced the $1.7 billion above inflation earmarked for education in the amendment to $1.6 billion.

A USSA spokesperson remarked: "We are disappointed to lose that $100 million in budget authority for fiscal year 1988, but this compromise is still almost $1 billion better than the original Chiles plan."

The compromise budget is patterned after a budget resolution offered by Senator Lawton Chiles of Florida. His original proposal failed to meet the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing target mandates by Congress. The House, which passed its national budget proposal on April 16 and proposed a $2 billion increase for education, will now work with the Senate to reach a final bill.

In related developments, several U.S. senators have proposed legislation concerning educational issues during this busy period of budget debate. Among the most notable proposals are two from Senator Dale Bumpers of Arkansas. An aide to the Senator explained Bumpers' plans: "No one seems to know that currently, if a student borrower goes to work for a non-profit, tax-exempt organization like United Way, repayment of student loans can be deferred for up to three years." Bumpers first proposal would simply seek to promote publicity for that current legal option.

A second resolution from Bumpers would extend the loan forgiveness option currently offered to volunteers in organizations like Peace Corps to all tax-exempt, non-profit groups such as United Way. The proposal would specifically cancel fifteen percent of the loan for one year of service, and another twenty percent after three years of consecutive service.

UWSP enrollment climbing

by Karen Rivedal
News Editor

This year's graduating high school class doesn't appear to have heard about the UW Board of Regents new enrollment reduction plan, which would seek to eliminate 7,000 students from the System in four years and would like to see 122 less freshmen at UWSP next fall. Seniors just keep applying.

According to Chancellor Marshall, the number of applications received is up ten percent from last year at this time. A new policy requiring freshman applicants to pay a $100 deposit to prove their serious intent to attend UWSP isn't even helping. No less than 700 interested students have paid the $100 deposit, which applies to a freshman's fall semester tuition if he or she shows up, but is forfeited by those who were just browsing.

If this sort of thing keeps up much longer, the administration says, admission will "undoubtedly need to be closed or greatly curtailed."

EDITOR'S DESK

Houlihan's last words

The Pointer has asked me to do a guest editorial. I decided that a reminiscence of my illustrious career at UWSP would bore you silly. So I am going to tell you what I think of some things that may interest you.

I think:

That there is great satisfaction in seeing a student perform well in class. I recently had a student give a persuasive speech in which he attempted to convince the class that Wisconsin should be a nuclear waste repository. He didn't believe it; he just wanted to challenge himself to see if he could prepare that side of the argument. He did a good job.

That administrations should report to faculty, be paid half as much, and wear uniforms (the sixties made me do it).

That students should get their papers back the next class after they have turned them in.

That students and faculty should make every effort to attend every class - otherwise the unity goes. Attendance should not be a whim thing.

That there are few things that make me sadder than a student who is poorly prepared when he comes here, develops little interest in academics while here, decides that the important college experiences deal with some "happenings" in residence halls, the University Center, or partying, and finally leaves, having little intellectually to show for his four years in a university. Whenever will such an opportunity to learn occur?

That if you as a student have a poor vocabulary then you probably can't think very well.

That teaching, and even preparation, is enjoyable; but grading papers is dog work.

That there is no other job that I would have enjoyed as much as my twenty-three years teaching at UWSP and at the other assorted places for ten years before that.

That on further thought, what I said above about "no other job" is not true. I'd have loved to have been a major league pitcher, and would have made it but for a lack of talent.

That the opportunity I have had to work with UWSP faculty in an atmosphere where it is not only accepted but expected for ideas to be challenged has been wonderful. To be associated with so many excellent minds has enriched my life.

That it's a crying shame when a fine teacher becomes an administrator. The latter have almost nothing to do with the real work of a university.

That it is great to remember that I once taught in an elementary school in New York with forty-two faculty, of which I was the only male. Now, many males teach at that school, and what is even better is that we've had the good sense to include many more women on college faculties. What an asset they are!

That shared governance is some sort of black humor.

That I can't understand war any more than I could in the sixties. It still frustrates and angers me. What a waste of young men.

That the joy of reading a good book is right up there with the beautiful vision. (Any reading of any book beats drinking.)

That I've made two great decisions in my life and I'm still married to the first one.

State asks Congress for education increases

by Karen Rivedal
News Editor

Since 1980, the undergraduate tuition cost to UW students has increased 6.4 percent. Currently, students pay 31.4 percent of that bill. Next semester's proposed 12 percent tuition hike would increase that burden to 33.4 percent. State and federal financial aid allocations for the last six years have not enjoyed similar inflation. Worse yet, new eligibility restrictions levied on the federal Guaranteed Student Loan program last semester will compound tuition trouble for many students this fall.

To keep higher education affordable, some schools have developed new methods of financing. Pre-paid tuition, for example, allows parents to pay for their child's future education at a school's present rates. The schools manage the investment and use the accruing interest to cover costs when the student enrolls years later. "The UW System is currently considering a form of this plan already being used by many private schools.

Duquesne University in Pennsylvania was the first school to try pre-pay tuition, three years ago. A spokesman for Duquesne reports 582 students, four years old and under, now enrolled for future years.

At Duquesne, where tuition alone is normally $6,800 per year, parents can pay $6,400 for a newborn to cover all four years of the child's education. The cost increases for older children, costing the parents of a twelve year old, for example, $16,000 for the same service.

The Pennsylvania state legislature has not yet determined if parents are to be taxed eventually for the full value of the investment. Duquesne U. spokesmen don't think so. And if a student would rather not attend Duquesne, they say he or she "would only have to come for one year. Then we would continue to pay the agreed amount at a school of the student's choice for three years. That gives the student flexibility."

UW System administrators prepared a report on pre-paid tuition for the Board of Regents in March. Board of Regents Pres. Laurence Weinstein says the UW System will wait to see what Michigan public schools, who are considering the program, decide to do. He adds, "The federal government has not yet ruled on the tax implications of the plan. The question is whether the accumulated interest is taxable income. Once we have that, we can talk more intelligently."

UWSP Financial Aids Director Phil George shares the System's overall wariness of the plan: "I just think it's safer to pay as you go. The plan is a little paternalistic. It's only a benefit to those who can afford to pay."

Regents and administrators point to other UW actions to bolster financial aid. Three Regents sit on the Wisconsin Higher Educational Aids Board (WHEAB), which makes recommendations to the state legislature for UW System grant funding. This year, the Board recommended a 40 percent increase for WHEC, the state's general grant program for all UW students. Gov. Thompson has since cut that request in half, to equal about a $3 million increase. The state's five other grant programs, which cover minorities, Indians, the handicapped, and the most needy are to receive inflationary increases only.

WHEAB administrator Don Fowler says, "The Board asked for gobs more money than what the governor recommended. That's long gone." He still thinks, however, that "the appropriation is very large percent-wise. It's about the largest in any state program."

WHEC Vice-president Ray Johnston says WHEC is "alive and well" despite the federal requirement-tightening that will remove large numbers from the program next fall. WHEC is the state agency that processes the federal GSL program.

Johnston says married independent students will be hardest hit, but a change in the needs formula method has also made it difficult for many dependent students to be eligible. At UWSP, 2,000 of the 3,836 students who now get loans will receive little or nothing next semester. For students who can still get GSLs, WHEC recently lowered the guarantee fee on the loans to a flat 1 percent, for a savings of $50.

The Colleges and Universities Committee is another body that can make education allocation requests to the state legislature. Stevens Point Rep. Stan Gruszynski is chair of that body. On April 9, the Committee approved a proposal from

New University shopping center under construction

A new shopping center, called the University Plaza, should be open by this fall. Construction on the plaza, which will be located next to K-Mart and behind Perkins, began two weeks ago with sewer digging. The entire center should be completed by September.

The plaza, at 30,000 square feet, will hold up to 30 stores, says John Galecke, who works with Galecke Realtors, the company handling leasing of the property.

The plaza has been in discussion "for quite a long time," says Galecke, and blueprints have been around for nearly three years. Construction was slowed by the city government, concerned about conflicts with the "new Downtown Mall, and the University, worried over potential sewage runoff into Schmeckle Reserve.

The plaza will cost from 4 to 5 million dollars to construct and is being financed out of Milwaukee. Galecke estimates that about 60 percent of the services offered in the new center will be student related. "It'll make the North Point Center look like junk," he adds.

Here's what the Congressman said

by Karen Rivedal
News Editor

The Wisconsin State Legislature is currently at work on a joint resolution that would ask Wisconsin's Congressional representatives to support increases in federal financial aid to college students. In the proposal, a comparison is made between Reagan Administration spending for education versus its spending in other areas. Rep. Stan Gruszynski and Sen. Chuck Chvala are co-sponsors, with support from the United Council of Student Governments.

The proposal is now waiting for approval by the state Senate's Education and Labor Committee, after which it would be sent to the Wisconsin delegation. Rep. Gruszynski feels it will move out of committee "fairly quickly. There's a good deal of support for it in the state."

A recent phone poll of the Wisconsin representatives, asking if they would support the increase requested in Joint Resolution 22, yielded the following responses:

Rep. Bob Kastenmeier: An

aide for Rep. Kastenmeier said "Education is Bob's number one priority. He has always supported as much money as possible for education." Kastenmeier's office feels that education is a must if the United States is to be competitive in the world.

Rep. Gerald Kleczka: A spokesman for Rep. Kleczka said the Congressman was generally supportive of increases for education. The aide further remarked that increases passed in the House budget for education could go even higher during the appropriations period.

Rep. Steve Gunderson: An aide to Rep. Gunderson reported that while the Congressman was very supportive of financial aid to students, "in this day and age, 100 percent increases are unrealistic. Within budget constraints, Rep. Gunderson would support some minimum increases in education."

Rep. Thomas Petri: Congressman Petri's press secretary said Rep. Petri had his own education proposal pending. Petri supports an Income Dependent Loan program for college aid. The program provides no federal subsidies of interest payment while the student is in school.

Petri's aide says the initial interest rate for the IDL program is "slightly lower than that of a Guaranteed Student loan. The IDL program has a more flexible repayment schedule and will solve the same aid problems at less cost to taxpayers and the federal government."

He also reported that the total cost to a student for an IDL would be less than that of a Guaranteed Student loan for a one or two year loan period. A GSL is slightly cheaper, according to Petri's aide, for a four year period.

Rep. James Sensenbrenner: A press secretary for Rep. Sensenbrenner said the Congressman supports increased financial aid for those students who "really, really need it. Not for upper middle-class students." He cited student default on GSLs as a major federal deficit problem.

Senator William Proxmire: A spokesman for Senator Proxmire was not optimistic for much of an increase in education spending. "A couple per-

United Council: Is it worth the bucks?

by Karen Rivedal
News Editor

With 164,000 members, the United Council of Student Governments is the largest student lobby group in Wisconsin. Most of those members are UW students, who pay fifty cents each a semester to finance United Council's efforts.

At one time or another in United Council's 26-year history, each of the UW Systems thirteen 4-yr. schools was a full-time member. Presently, UW-La Crosse is not a member and UW-Madison is an associate member. The issue is periodically voted on by each campus student body. During UWSP's past Student Government elections, membership in United Council was approved by a large margin. Some problems between member UW-Milwaukee and United Council threatened to pull that campus from the flock recently, but since the Milwaukee student body voted yes on the referendum for U.C. membership this year, UW-Milwaukee remains a member.

United Council's full-time paid staff works with a budget of $140,000, according to Chief Administrator Bryce Tolefree. Tolefree, a college graduate, makes $11,300 a year for his efforts. He remarks of the staff, "There has to be a high level of commitment by these people and a willingness to sacrifice a lot. I could make more money picking up trash."

As the lobbying agent for UW students at the state capital, Tolefree says United Council has "helped save over $3 million for financial aid in the last biennium." This year, United Council is working on a joint resolution to ask Congress for more federal financial aid. The group also claim some credit for the 21.5 percent increase proposed for state grant funds by the Wisconsin Higher Educational Aids Board (WHEAB), and the decrease in tuition from the 17.5 percent tuition hike requested by the Board of Regents earlier this year to the present 12 percent that Gov. Thompson has proposed.

"We think that through our lobbying efforts we have made the legislature accountable for these things," says Tolefree.

Tolefree will soon resign his position at United Council, when his one-year term is up, to Adrian Serrano, who will graduate from UW-Parkside this spring.

UW-Madison has been a non-voting associate member since the fall. As such, the school's financial contribution is $300, rather than the $40,000 United Council would receive from the Madison student body as a full member.

Madison's Wisconsin Student Association President Rob McGinnis explains why Madison cancelled full-time membership: "Last fall, we ran a referendum for U.C. membership, and it failed, very closely by 175 votes. So we pulled out."

The rift between U.C. and UW-Madison and Milwaukee was primarily over both schools' claims of under-representation. United Council has since decided to enstate proportional voting at its annual budget and platform meetings that is more to UW-Madison's liking. The current voting structure allocates twelve votes to Madison, nine to Milwaukee, seven for medium-sized schools, and six for the smaller universities.

At the two annual meetings, Madison will now receive more votes. Tolefree admits: "Since they contribute so much to the budget, they feel it would be important to have the ability to have more of an influence on what goes in the budget. We could understand that."

Due to the voting changes, UW-Madison feels it can now rejoin United Council as a full member. WSA President McGinnis says that "There's no way that it (the rift) helped Madison students. The advantage we have that the other campuses don't is that the capital is one block away. We can still do an adequate job of lobbying. The only difference is it's not a united voice."

Arrangements were also made for UW-Milwaukee to have more of a voice at the budget and platform meetings. UW-Milwaukee Student Association Zed Dababhy would only remark that since the last referendum of the student body for U.C. membership passed, UW-Milwaukee would remain a member. He added that "There are some people who are contesting the referendum as illegal. If that's successful, we may not be a member next year."

At UW-Milwaukee's student government elections earlier this semester, the ballot for the U.C. referendum was improperly worded, according to the UW-Board of Regents. Milwaukee's Student Association chose to ignore the Regents' request because "the Regents really don't have the authority to tell us how to organize ourselves, under 36,095 (the legal mandate for shared governance)".

UW-La Crosse has been unassociated with United Council since 1984. The La Crosse student government also felt its representation was inadequate. Pres. Barry McNulty says, "We felt that it was easy for a smaller school such as ourself to get blocked out in voting. We felt our $9,000 would be more adequately directed towards our needs, rather than a shared group's."

The LaCrosse student government has ten graduate students working in Madison for "key representatives." McNulty likens their activities and lobbying to that done by other UW schools and United Council, except that they feel "We've done them on a more professional level."

La Crosse holds out some hope for a future reconciliation: "I look forward to good changes for United Council. Maybe we will get back in. We're definitely hurt to some degree that we're not."

cent more is all you can expect," he remarked, adding that Proxmire could not support very large increases in financial aid: "We'd certainly review any proposal we received from the state, but we're running a $200 billion national deficit here."

The spokesman acknowledged, however, that the cuts in President Reagan's proposed budget were too drastic: "They were DOA—dead on arrival."

Rep. James Moody: Congressman Moody's press secretary said Rep. Moody would vote for last year's levels of education spending. "There is a $171 billion deficit," the aide remarked, "and the passed House budget calls for a $9 billion decrease in domestic spending."

Rep. Dave Obey: Rep. Obey, in whose congressional district the area of Stevens Point lies, had this to say about spending for education: "I think my entire public career has made it quite clear that I believe very strongly that a higher education should be made available on the basis of how many vote for last year's levels of education spending. "There is a $171 billion deficit," the aide remarked, "and the passed House budget calls for a $9 billion decrease in domestic spending."

true I was discriminated against sometimes, but most of the time I always thought that I was discriminated against because I had already made up my mind that people in this town are racists. There are few people in this town who really don't like black people and that is no reason for anybody to brand this town a racist town. I have met very nice people during my stay here. In fact, people are very friendly here compared to some places I have been to. I enjoyed my stay in Stevens Point very much and I'm going to miss this place when I get out of here.

Most of my stereotypes were destroyed because I had the chance to travel. I don't think that we all have to move around the world to understand other people, but most students here have their stereotypes about Africa and the African people. Most of the things that students here say about Africa are not true. It is not true to say that Africa is a jungle. It is also not true that people in Africa live together with wild animals. There are towns and cities in Africa like there are in the U.S.A. It is not true that all Africans are starving like people in Ethiopia. Africa, as you all know, is a big continent with many countries. Each country has a different culture, language and political system. So I find it hard sometimes when people talk about Africa like they talk about Marshfield.

There are many students in this school from many parts of the world. Why not find out about other people from other parts of the world before it's too late? If you graduate from here with your ignorance you may pass it over to your children, so do something about your stereotypes, will ya?

Here's a secret about acid rain

Secret: Environmental release of sulfur dioxide -- an air pollutant -- has fallen 25% in the U.S. since 1970. Yet we're burning more coal today than in 1970. And that's important if you care about acid rain.

Because sulfur dioxide is a gas which promotes acid rain. In the eastern U.S., most sulfur dioxide comes from coal burning.

Locally, Wisconsin Public Service has done even better. Since 1970, we've cut sulfur dioxide releases by 40 percent at the coal-burning plants we operate.

United Council and Rep. Bill Berndt to cap tuition at 33.4 percent.

Gruszynski, who voted for the cap, explains his support: "The 21.5 percent proposed for the state grant program is fine. But when you look at who it's going to...lower middle income kids are still squeezed out."

The proposal will go to the Joint Finance Committee for a vote within the next few weeks, a step it must pass before full Legislature consideration in the summer.

Wisconsin legislators are currently at work on a joint resolution that would ask Wisconsin Congressmen to support increases in federal financial aid to college students. Not all of Wisconsin's D.C. reps are inclined to support the request (see attached box). Rep. Gruszynski and Sen. Chvala, with United Council support, sponsor the proposal. It will be sent to the Wisconsin delegation as soon as it passes an education committee in the state Senate.

man during a very critical time in YRs' history."

Hartel stated that no purchases were made with YR money for personal use during Cisewski's chairmanship. Pizzas and food were purchased, he said, but "all of those purchases had a reason and were done in connection with the Young Republicans."

"We thought of him as a run-away train," the anonymous member of the Republican Party stated. "He was talented, but he didn't think before he acted. That's the work ethic that he had."

"Gene is a fast talker," he continued, "and his fast talking has also got him into trouble."

The Republican Party became aware of the alleged use of YR money for personal use when Cisewski misplaced the checkbook for the Young Republicans, stated Fuhrman and the source. It was found and turned over to a Republican Party member. Cisewski was then confronted with these purchases, and responded by saying that he would pay it all back and that he had to do this as a short-term thing because he didn't have any money or job at the time, Fuhrman said.

"People were very understanding," Fuhrman added.

However, when additional circumstances concerning the YR funds became apparent, there was a greater concern on the part of the RPW.

By that time, Cisewski had left his position as director of list development "because the term of the position was done and also I was entering an exploratory level of a state senate campaign," Cisewski said.

He did not continue and enter into the primary for the District 25 senator position.

Prominent politicians approached Cisewski and asked him to withdraw from that race because of circumstances surrounding the $3,000 in YR funds, Fuhrman stated. The anonymous source confirmed this statement.

Cisewski stated that he stepped down after, "Basically looking at the fund raising, the demographics of the district and determining that it wasn't winnable by a Republican (because there was) not enough pre-primary money to be raised."

The reason that prominent politicians approached Cisewski was because of the size of the situation and the circumstances, Fuhrman said.

Fuhrman said that Cisewski raised about $2,500 from contributions through mailings and received money from the Republican Party of Wisconsin.

"It is not normal or customary" for the Republican Party to give money to an auxiliary organization such as the YRs, said RPW Chairman King, "but it has been done in special circumstances."

Regarding RPW money during his tenure, Cisewski said, "I'm not exactly sure how all the things worked in all the different budget strategies or budget layouts there."

"They (RPW) gave us money to get us started and he squandered that," Fuhrman alleged. "He set the organization back for a couple of years in terms of our internal credibility."

For really nice people only...

Awww.....!

To the Editor:

Here is what I see when I look at young people: I see all the years that went before, all the years it took to get them here. I see years of three meals a day and umpteen loads of dirty clothes, and figuring out what doesn't fit anymore, and patching jeans and putting new feet in pajamas. I see fights and squabbles and lots of tooth-paste globs in the sink and toddlers with shoes on and bare bottoms running down the hall. I hear giggles when toe nails are cut and squeals when tangled hair is combed. I hear the phone ringing and the "OK, you've talked long enough." I smell pancakes on Sunday morning and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches on Monday. I smell dandelions, picked and given and wilting in little glasses on the Kitchen counter. I hear car keys jingling and see as confident face, hiding a concerned one, as her first born takes the car. I see her waiting up and worrying and wondering if she should first hug or yell. I see hours spent as a chauffeur, hours spent on bleachers on Friday and Saturday and fold-up chairs at recitals on Sunday.

I also see kids in class who are sick, but drag themselves there anyway. I see them working towards a goal when at times they've lost sight of it. I hear them questioning the world we live in and caring deeply to change it. I see a lot of nice, young, responsible people who deserve special credit. I see them and think that somewhere there is a Mom who cares about that person more than he or she will ever know.

The next time you go home or write home, tell your Mom you're doing a good job - and tell her she did too.

To the Editor:

Wisconsin Special Olympics needs volunteers for the preparation and staging of the 1987 summer games to be held in Stevens Point, June 4-7.

More than 2,000 mentally retarded and multiple handicap athletes will come to Stevens Point on those days to compete in a variety of events which assist the handicapped individual to develop physically and psychologically.

These athletes, who represent cities and communities throughout Wisconsin, range in age from 8 to 80 and will compete in track and field events, swimming and frisbee. A positive experience is gained and recreational and physical activities help the handicap gain confidence and self-mastery, and the beginning of a self-image of success.

Wisconsin Special Olympics is a nonprofit volunteer organization created to promote and provide physical education, sports training, athletic competition and recreational activities for Wisconsin's mentally retarded individuals.

To stage an event of the magnitude of the summer games, we rely heavily on support and

Cans! Cans!

The recycling of aluminum cans should be urged, especially in the residence hall. Hundreds of aluminum cans are thrown in the garbage every week from each hall. We as residents should take a little initiative to recycle the cans that we use. It doesn't take a whole lot of extra effort and time. All you need is a few motivated individuals on a wing to get a recycling program going by setting aside a garbage can in their room or bathroom and encouraging the wing to pitch in. However, everyone must do their part, if the program is to be successful. The cans can be taken over to the "Golden Goat" recycling machine next to IGA for cash. It's an excellent way for a wing to raise funds for trips, parties, charity, etc. Believe it or not, collecting cans can be fun, profitable and most of all, environmentally sound. Please recycle your cans!

And about war?

by Frank Bosler
Special to the Pointer

It has been more than a week since members of SNIF (Student Nuclear Information Forum) traveled to Washington D.C. to take part in the "Mobilization for Justice and Peace in Central America and Southern Africa" weekend. The underlying themes were an end to racist violence at home and abroad, ending the arms race and the allocation of money for jobs, not war.

I can't think of a rational human being that would not support these ideas. Yet, the amount of attention this entire weekend received in the national media was almost as if this outcry were an embarrassment. And what is most upsetting is the real notion that seems to be blowing in the wind that to speak for peace and disarmament is to speak against America.

Can this be? Have we embraced the Rambo, Top Gun, mentality so much that we cannot envision a day when violence and military might will no longer be necessary?

No matter what the actual

Further analysis...

by William Paul
Special to the Pointer

Bernie Bleske's April 30th roller coaster ride through the secular joys and nightmares of the American Dream is insightful when he ponders the role of education in the programming of children into workers: "Classes are no longer meant to be meaningful. Instead they are based on practicality."

But Bernie also showers us with weak cliches, like when he describes the soap opera at the end of the rainbow: "A high paying job, 2.4 kids, trim lawn, and a BMW."

Indeed, just what creates the 'sources of (our) lives?' Work is one, right? But what builds and sustains our "Dream Race" for the things we need so desperately? His editorial demands a deeper analysis.

In Bernie's view we are constantly dreaming about the ends of our actions. Goals. The American Dream is a pot of gold somewhere. The end of school, the end of the work week. The end of our beers. But there is a different perspective - a sharp departure from ends to the means we choose.

The American Dream has changed. It can no longer be gauged simply in terms of fun cars, fractional households or "money, money, money, money." The Dream is better likened to a Race, with special means-an everyday, individualistic assault with little regard for the "Flag, History, or God." The nationalistic dream of prior generations has melted, fuel-rodged by shitty wars, cor-

Just a word before I go...

Nobody is responsible for anybody's ignorance but we can all do something about it. What we don't know can hurt us.

We were all born ignorant about everything. Our ignorance diminished as we grew up and learned about the things we didn't know. What we learn is mostly what we hear and see, but do we always see and hear the real thing? I don't think so. I used to be a very stereotypical person. I was only fortunate because I had the chance to travel around the world. One of those places that I went to was Stevens Point. I am a black person and before I came to this town I had certain beliefs about white people. Erroneous beliefs of course. I also know that many people around here have their wrong beliefs about me and the place I come from.

This university admits foreign students for several reasons. That's why I decided to share with you some of what used to be my stereotypes about white people in this town.

I'm an African student from South West Africa (Namibia). I have lived in this town for two years now and I heard about Stevens Point while still in Africa.

I never heard anything nice about this town. I was told that people here are very hostile towards black people. I heard

FEATURES

by Trudy Stewart
Features Editor

Bernie Bleske has been named editor-in-chief of the Pointer for the 1987-88 academic year. His appointment was made at an April 20 meeting of the UWSP Publications Board, which is made up of two members of the Student Government Association, the communications department chair, an English department faculty member and the advisor of the Pointer.

Bleske, who has worked as senior editor on the Pointer staff for the past year, is familiar to its readers for his sardonic writing style and skeptical outlook. Speaking of the future editorial tone of the paper, he says, "I will continue the cynicism that I try to perpetuate. I don't want to impose my own views, but I would like to see us get more vocal, to take chances—be more outspoken."

The news section of the Pointer, Bleske feels, will receive the focus of his attention in his role as editor. "It's the most important part of the paper because that's what we are—a newspaper. There's lots of news on campus, things happening that should be looked into, and it's our job to look into them."

Some individuals on campus have suggested that the Pointer should be less concerned with the "things happening" on campus and give more space to events and entertainment. To them, Bleske replies, "If people don't like it because we're not simply entertainment, they can watch television. If they want to be aware of what's really going on around campus, they can read the Pointer."

Bleske, a senior majoring in English with a writing minor, referred to an incident at UW-La Crosse, where the campus paper's editor is chosen exclusively by the student government. The news editor, a freshman, was chosen over this year's editor, who had re-applied for the position, and was undeniably more qualified than the person chosen.

He believes that we have the same problem here, "though not to the same extent—SGA doesn't have the controlling vote. But because they control our funding, SGA has some control over us. We're always watching our step—but we get mad sometimes, thinking about it, and that's bad because we then focus on money, rather than issues. It causes some very strong biases on our part. I'd like to try to organize something among all the system universities. Some way to prevent any organization from gaining control over a student publication. I'd like to define the First Amendment rights in regard to college newspapers."

Most staff members from spring semester plan to return in their positions next fall, according to Bleske, who expects the quality of next year's Pointer to be even better due to the experience of the staff.

Chris Dorsey is returning as outdoors editor; Karen Kulinski as sports editor; Karen Rivedal as news editor; Troy Sass as graphics editor; Kyle White as cartoonist; Joe Luedtke as photo editor; and Brian Day as business manager.

Several staff members will return in new positions; Ginger Edwards and Bill Lee will be advertising managers, and Scott Hueltskamp will be research assistant. A newly created position, the research assistant will be able to do more information gathering and write in-depth articles for any of the sections although chiefly news.

New staff members include Gwen Schwanke, features editor; Rhonda Oestreich and Cindy Saunders, typesetters; Jeanne Oswald, ad layout; and Kathy Phillippi, copy editor.

UWSP covers up banquetgate

by Kathleen Golke
Staff Writer

Thanks to bulimic receptionists in various departments who failed to "lift the lid" on menu plans of their departments' annual banquets, one of our staff reporters almost starved to death last week. The reporter was immediately rushed to the wellness center and given intravenous feedings.

Covert investigators, also trying to get information on banquet affairs, interrogated our staff reporter. They were especially interested in the meal plans of the political science and foreign languages departments, suspecting their menus included aphrodisiacs and foreign entrees which may have had their origins in communist countries.

Our reporter, weak and afraid, succumbed to the interrogators—disclosing the little information she had in return for political amnesty. Our reporter's findings were almost indigestible.

Although the reporter didn't get any pertinent data from foreign languages, she disclosed to interrogators that political science was serving Chicken Kiev—a Russian dish—just as they suspected.

But with this creeping internationalism, the All-American banquet staples, fried chicken, ham and beef are losing out in the cold food war. Even the more conservative chemistry and physics departments may be implicated.

This kind of conspiracy isn't digested well by the palates of dedicated Americans and, after these banquets are over, no one will know what has passed from the mouths of men. If we aren't given information on University award banquets menus, soon all any of us will be eating is erow and Third World rice.

Nutrition Points Hot weather cooking

by Toni L. Wood, R.D.
Staff Writer

Spring, officially announced March 21, has finally arrived. Summer is certain to follow with its bright lazy days easing into comfortable evenings: the living is casual and so are the meals. As the temperature rises and your days fill with summertime activities, it's easy to give way to a haphazard "fast food" intake, rather than a thoughtfully selected diet. Well...if you can't stand the heat, you needn't stay out of the kitchen—just plan meals that require a minimum of cooking.

The key is careful planning. Select from all the basic food groups. Relegate anything that requires oven baking to early morning or late evening when it's cooler and bake several items at once for use throughout the week. Or ban the oven altogether for the summer and turn to the microwave or barbecue grill. Another timesaving—and cooler—method is the crockpot; poultry and beef can be cooked and frozen then thawed for future use in salads or stirfry.

Consider alternate protein sources like lowfat cheeses, yogurt or canned legumes. These will provide adequate protein, but require little or no cooking. They are also lower in fat, therefore, lower in calories—a perfect choice for a slirring summer.

Most of us find that as the days heat up, our appetites fall and we want lighter, less filling entrees and meals. Salads can be tempting and satisfying without leaving you stuffed. With the seasonal abundance of fresh produce and fresh fruit, salads are thrifty, too. Look for unblemished fruit and vegetables. Store without washing them first to preserve the nutrients as long as possible and use within a few days. Don't hesitate to try new salad combinations.

One of my all-time favorites is cold chicken chunks (marinated in Italian dressing) tossed with cucumber, zucchini, bits of ripe nectarine or cantaloupe and jicama (a crunchy, sweet-potato-like Mexican vegetable). With a bran muffin or a few bread sticks, it's a complete meal on a hot August night. If monitoring calories, slow down on the "goodies" at the salad bars; croutons, bacon bits and salad dressings may add up to more than you think. One tablespoon of salad dressing may have 50-80 calories, so go easy.

Barbecuing and grilling have become increasingly popular. The inevitable hotdog and hamburger are giving way to meats grilled over specialty woods such as mesquite which impart a biting Southwestern flavor.

Although these methods are easy and often low in fat, there is evidence that the charring from barbecuing and charcoal grilling produces carcinogens.

It is suggested that you limit your intake of these items. When grilling, do not let the food come into direct contact with the smoke and flames. Place food in a pan high above the coals or wrap tightly in foil. Foods high in Vitamin C may have a protective effect against these carcinogenic actions so be sure to include these daily in your diet.

Below is another favorite summer salad; tabouleh goes well with kabobs or chicken.

TABOULEH SALAD
2 C. boiling water
1 C. wheat pilaf or bulgher
¼ C. chopped fresh mint or 2 Tbs. dried mint
1 small carrot, shredded
1 cucumber, diced
1 onion, chopped
½ C. parsley, chopped
1 medium tomato, cut into eighths
¼ C. salad oil
¼ tsp. salt

Pour boiling water over pilaf or bulgher. Let stand one hour or until fluffy. Toss with mint, carrot, cucumber, onion and parsley. Beat together lemon juice, oil and salt. Toss with pilaf mixture. Garnish with tomatoes, serve at room temperature. Six servings.

Unitizing makes history at Hansen

by Karen Kneisler Staff Writer

History was made at Hansen Hall last Wednesday night. The hall set out to create a new record for the Guinness Book of World's Records. As part of Hansen Hall's Resident Appreciation Day, the executive board devised an event called "Unitizing."

Unitizing was a process in which the residents of the hall joined together to create a world's record for the longest unbroken chain of twist ties.

The idea originated from the hall's Assistant Director Michael Jameson. Throughout the year, the residents of the hall collected all the ties they could and worked on the chain. Last Wednesday, the whole process came together. There is no current world's record for this event.

At about 9:45 p.m., residents gathered in the Hansen Hall basement to tie the chain together.

Residents then stretched out the chain throughout the hall. Next, the chain was taken outside where it went from Hansen to around Old Main, around the Fine Arts Building, and back to Hansen. The final measurement was about 2 miles with 55,800 garbage bag ties.

Now, the residents, along with Jameson, wait for Guinness's approval.

Summer Calendar of Events

Highlights of summer activities in Point

by Trudy Stewart
Features Editor

After final exams next week, the exodus from campus will start. Some students will go to new cities to begin jobs, others will go home to vegetate (a.k.a. recover from study stress), some will be preparing to begin graduate school in the fall, while still others will be sending out resumes and answering want-ads.

However, about one-third of the campus will stay right here in Stevens Point; they will be attending summer sessions or working to earn money to continue classes in the fall.

But nobody should study or work all summer; everybody needs a little rest and relaxation. So when you do get some free time, what do you do with it? You could sit in a Square bar and think about what you might be doing instead. Or, you could try out some of the campus activities planned over the summer, or events that Stevens Point and many area cities have scheduled to entertain you.

For instance, Recreational Services has a Tripper's outing leaving the day after graduation, May 18, and returning May 25. They will be visiting the Boundary Waters of Lake Superior. If you don't want to go on a week's outing though, Rec-Services also has a selection of canoes, camping equipment, kayaks, sailboats and boards, volleyballs and nets available to check out. Closed weekends during the summer, they are open during the week for overnight or over-weekend check outs.

The department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics will be holding intramural competitions throughout the summer. Programs are planned in canoeing, tennis, softball and aerobic dance.

In addition to holding a one-week workshop in nature photography, Schmeckle Reserve will be organizing nature walks and special group sessions on star-gazing, medicinal plants, wildflowers and trees. Contact them for the exact dates.

Campus Activities has scheduled five films in June and July. The films include "Breaking Away," "Mr. Mom," "Places in the Heart," "Pretty in Pink" and "The Way We Were." Showings will be at 8:30 p.m. in the PBR or the Wisconsin Room of the UC. On Monday and Wednesday nights from June 8-July 18, the local band, Double Duty, will appear in the Encore. Plans are in the works for trips to a Brewer game and Summerfest in Milwaukee.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday night, the Observatory in the science building will be open at 9 p.m.—assuming clear skies. The programs will begin with a visit to the roof to view the night sky and continue in the observatory with presentations centering on planets, bright stars or constellations. On cloudy nights, the programs will be held in the planetarium where the sky, as it should appear, is projected on an hemispherical dome.

The Theatre Arts department will be staging three plays this summer, but they'll be performed at Sentry Theatre while the asbestos is removed from the Fine Arts Center. "Little Shop of Horrors" will run from July 15-18 and 21-25. "Godspell" is scheduled for July 7-12 and "The Rink" from July 26 through August 4. A special dinner theatre performance is planned for the opening night of each play.

Volunteers also are needed for some of the programs offered on campus this summer. The Office of Continuing Education and Outreach could use student guides for its College Days Program that begins June 16. Their Elder Hostel program also uses student volunteers from July 12-18 and July 19-25.

Perhaps the most rewarding experience student volunteers could have is through working with the Special Olympics. This year a sign language course, Basic Manual Communication 252, will be offered to aid volunteers in communicating with some participants. The volunteer orientation meeting is at 7 p.m. on June 3 in the upper level of Allen Center. Special Olympics will be held on June 4, 5 and 6.

Summer is the season of the carnival and Stevens Point and the surrounding area will host several. First on the agenda is the Spud City National Rod and Custom Car Show at Lake Pacawa on June 5-7.

On June 28, the Lincoln Center will sponsor a Country Craft and Strawberry Festival.

The Lions Club is conducting Arnett Days again this summer from June 19-21 (Arnett is east on Hwy 10). They'll have bands playing country and rock 'n roll, then a polka band on Sunday. A softball tournament will begin on Friday, an antique car show on Sunday and there will be rides, food and games all weekend. The Lions are also sponsoring a raffle; first prize is $500.

Two 4th of July carnivals are scheduled, one in Plover, the other in Point. The Plover Freedom Days will feature air bands on Friday and a parade on Saturday, plus other entertainment at the Manufacturers' Mall and Lake Pacawa. Riverfront Rendezvous will be staged this year at Pfiffner Park. Organizers have arranged "theme" nights: Friday is country music night with The Gambler and Lyle Lovett; Saturday features rock 'n roll with Double Duty and Gerard; Sunday is Jazz day with Oceans. There will also be a horseshoe tournament and bed races (can't wait to see this year's photo of the winners of the bed race).

Holiday Inn in Point has a summer concert series planned around 60s rockers. The series opens June 5 with Jan and Dean; other performers include Roy Orbison, Gary Puckett and the Union Gap, the Everly Brothers, the Platters and the Drifters. For the politically minded, the Inn will host the State Democratic Conference on June 12-14.

Sentry Theatre will stage the Area Community Theatre's production of "The Owl and the Pussycat," on June 5, 6 and 7. Sentry World golf course will hold a golf exhibition featuring eight senior pros including Gary Player. A golf clinic is scheduled for the morning.

Marshfield's Dairy Fest will be held on June 5, 6 and 7. Dairy Fest will open Friday with a picnic in the park to the music of a variety of bands. It will feature amusement park rides, a Mayor's breakfast priced at $2, a parade on Saturday and a weekend flea market. Criterion Bike Races will be run on Saturday and Sunday, while at the Speedway, the Central Wisconsin Tractor Pull will roar in on Sunday.

Marshfield will also have a fireworks show on July 4. Then, the next week, July 8-12; Summerfest will begin, with bands and a carnival. On July 16, the Marshfield Zoo will conduct a festival to acquaint area residents with the zoo and its grounds. Barbecue chicken will be served and guided tours arranged. Capping the summer festivities in Marshfield will be the Central Wisconsin State Fair which begins Wednesday, September 2.

Wausau has a full summer schedule of events, culminating with the Wisconsin Valley Fair. But before the fair, a horse show will be held on June 26, 27 and 28, at Marathon Park, sponsored by the Wausau Hospital Center Volunteers. That same weekend, an American Kennel Club Show will be held on Saturday in the Mosinee Sports Arena and the American Canoe Association will hold whitewater slalom races at Whitewater Park on Saturday and Sunday. If none of these events interest you, the Wausau Municipal Airport has scheduled an Air Show, an Antique Auto Show and a pancake breakfast all on Sunday, June 28.

Giving celebrants only two days to recover, the Jaycees are holding a 4th of July Celebration in Marathon Park from June 30 through July 6.

The American Canoe Association also has scheduled an open-boat whitewater slalom race for July 18 and 19, the United States Kayak Slalom Nationals on August 1 and the National Junior Training Camp for canoe and kayak on August 3-6, all at Whitewater Park.

The Wisconsin Valley Fair will begin on August 11 and continue through August 16. In addition to harness racing and horse pulls, the Fair will feature entertainment that includes The Judds, Randy Travis, Sawyer Brown, The Jets and the Young Ambassadors.

The Iola Car Show will be on July 10, 11 and 12.

There are lots of things to do if you're planning on staying around for the summer, and if cash flow is a problem, check in with the student employment office. They have summer jobs ranging from house painting to telemarketing.

Andrew Lloyd Weber
The Phantom Of The Opera
Original London Cast
Polydor

I'm probably seriously out of my league here, but I'm going to try to critique something extremely highbrow. 'Scuse me a moment while I slip into my tux.

Andrew Lloyd Weber, a brilliant young composer, has recently scored a version of that great tale of tragedy and terror "The Phantom Of The Opera." To make a long story tolerably short, Christine is a young singer who, through a series of bizarre events, orchestrated by an unseen force, becomes the lead in an opera company. At the same time, she is reunited with an old lover of hers, Raoul. The unseen force that engineered Christine's rise to the top then makes himself known. Dumm, Da, Dumm ... The Phantom Of The Opera.

The Phantom is this guy who lives in the labyrinth beneath the opera house, and for kicks, haunts the opera house. He is in love with Christine's voice and is nothing if not determined to make her his. She is simultaneously attracted to and repelled by this pathetic figure. Not only that, she's also in love with Raoul. And, let's face it, her mom and dad would probably be a little more thrilled if she brought home a handsome, young, rich count, like Raoul, than a masked psychopath who lives in the sewer. I can just picture it: "So son, you haunt an opera house for a living and engineer bizarre accidents that nearly kill off whole casts. That's nice." Hoo Boy! Let's see "Dynasty" throw together a love triangle like this! And not only that ... Well, if you want to know what happens next, buy the album.

If you do decide to buy this double LP, instead of Zamfir, the master of the pan flute, you won't be sorry. This exquisite recording comes with a libretto (kind of like a scorecard, but classier) to tell you the action. But, you don't need it. The music carries you right along with the story. Not only that, but besides his brilliant score being (tastefully updated with sparing use of guitars, bass, drums and keyboards), Mr. Weber has written some damn nice tunes. Christine's showpiece, "Think Of Me," is the best ballad I've heard in a long time. "All I Ask Of You," a duet from Raoul and Christine, is a genuine tearjerker. The Phantom's "Theme" is appropriately eerie, and "Music Of The Night," sung by The Phantom, is at once, both tender and terrifying.

And those voices, please let us not forget those voices. Soprano Sara Brightman (Christine), Tenor Steve Burton (Raoul) and Baritone Michael Crawford (The Phantom) are the heart and soul of this production. Boy! What I wouldn't give to see this show live!

There you have it. My first attempt to critique, "serious" music. Wasn't so bad, was it? "Jon Pike, classical music critic." I like that. Maybe I'll have to buy a tux.

Album awards announced

by Jon R. Pike
Staff Writer

For the past school year, I've been the resident music critic for the Pointer. In that time, I've inflicted my views and reviews on an unappreciated public. This time is no different, except for the fact that I'm sitting in judgment of what has transpired in the world of popular music for the past school year.

But cheer up folks, I'm graduating, so you'll never have to hear from me again.

Now, with appropriate fanfare and hoopla, I lovingly present with what I like to call (Tah! Dah!) The P.P.M.A.A.: The Pike Popular Music Achievement Awards. Also known as the Sammys, after Samantha Fox (since the awards aren't worth anything either).

THE EVERYTHING OLD IS NEW AGAIN AWARD: To rock 'n roll dinosaurs who proved in the past year, that they've still got the stuff — Paul Simon, Steve Winwood, The Kinks, Deep Purple, Richard Thompson, Santana (with Buddy Miles) and Peter, Paul and Mary for releasing vinyl product worthy of their legends.

THE THAT WAS THEN THIS IS NOW AWARD: To rock 'n roll dinosaurs who came back and shouldn't have bothered — Aretha Franklin, once the reigning Queen of Soul and now a boring pop singer, and The Monkees. Let's face it, the slightly-fab four were fun the first time around and their old hits are still a joy. But a limp single and a silly tour demonstrated that the 80s version is nothing more than a boring novelty act. A special merit version of this award goes to Phil Collins who brought new meaning to the term, "sell out."

BEST CONCEPT ALBUM: Middle of the Road pop singer Jennifer Warnes teamed up with New York folk singer Leonard Cohen to record an album of his songs called, "Famous Blue Raincoat." A haunting and beautiful masterpiece.

WORST CONCEPT ALBUM: "Sign Of The Times," by Prince. Yes, the Minneapolis Midget returns to assault the public with not one, but two, LPs worth of inane, pretentious rambling. Coming to a theatre near you? Let's hope not.

STRANGEST TREND OF THE YEAR: Accordions. From Los Lobos to Paul Simon, from the underground to the mainstream, the ol' squeeze box reared its not-so-ugly head. Refreshing.

MOST OVERRATED TREND OF THE YEAR: Compact disks. The industry is throwing pert near everything on these little buggers and getting away with it. If these things die, the recording industry has no one to blame but themselves.

BEST SOUND TRACK: O.K., so it really wasn't a soundtrack.

But, CBS' re-recording of the music from "South Pacific," was nothing short of inspired. Especially getting jazz legend Sara Vaughn to sing the part of Bloody Mary.

WORST SOUNDTRACK: Any brat pack feature by John Hughes. Decent enough music by new bands, but wasted on movies that never should have been made.

BEST WISCONSIN BAND: Tatters, out of Eau Claire. Look for these to break out of the Midwest's college circuit soon.

BEST WISCONSIN COMMERCIAL RADIO STATION: WAPL-FM 106 from Appleton. They at least try to be innovative in their programming instead of bludgeoning us with the same drive over and over again.

THE SHUT-UP ALREADY AWARD: If any more airplay is given to Bon Jovi or Bruce, I suggest the U.S. declare war on New Jersey.

ON THE HORIZON AWARD: If those East Los Angeles roots rockers Los Lobos and the hard-driving Husker Du from Minneapolis don't get more airplay in the near future, there is no justice in the world.

BEST LIVE NATIONAL TOURING ACT: Iron Maiden's 1987 "Somewhere On Tour." With a new innovative recording and a fantastic high-tech stage show, these heavy metal heroes from England were the sight to see! 'Nuff Said!

OUTDOORS

How to kill a tick:

Ruthless people enjoy the challenge

by Chris Dorsey
Outdoors Editor

It can happen anywhere. No one is ever really safe. Nothing can stop them, and you may be their next victim.

You may be sitting at the dinner table when you notice one. You stop chewing with your mouth full of meatloaf. The creature's sharply-hooked claws gently scale your scalp, tugging at each hair as it continues its assault. You drop your fork and everyone is startled by the loud dink-bank-conk as the fork bounces off your plate and onto the linoleum of the kitchen floor. All eyes are upon (and on) you.

You hope it isn't, you fear it is. You reach up with your thumb and index finger, sifting meticulously through each follicle one-by-frantic-one. Finally, a small piece of matter filters through your thumb and finger. You quickly yank it out of your hair, along with seven or eight deeply-rooted hairs. You slowly open your pinching grip as everyone watches.

"Tick! It's a tick!" you holler.

Several forks drop, no one continues chewing. Napkins are mercifully raised to mouths as half-chewed meatloaf is spit into them. It's yet unsure whether more napkins will be needed. The others begin scratching, combing their fingers through their hair.

Now that you've seized the culprit, what are you going to do with it? Nope, can't smash him between your fingers—his hide is too tough. Crushing him under your glass doesn't work well either. Smothering him in cooking oil just makes a mess.

Actually, this is the time to be creative. Sure, anyone can light a match and burn the little beast, but where's the innovation in that? Think torture. That's right, there's no such thing as mercy for these lecherous, blood-sucking vampires. Who knows, they may even spread AIDS (Articulated Idiot Disposition Syndrome).

Now there are several unique methods for disposing of ticks. One of the more clever I've run across involves taking a 10-15 inch piece of sticky masking tape and adhering it to the wall at each end so that the sticky surface is facing out. Once a tick is plucked from a family member or helpless pet, the tick is then slapped onto the tape where it will remain alive for several weeks in a sticky, suspended state. After the tape is covered with several of the legged-leaches it is called, of course, a "ticker-tape."

Yet another delightfully devious way to torture ticks is to burn the wick at both ends—literally. Place the tick on a long piece of candle wick and light both ends. The tick will crawl away from the end that is burning closest to him only to run into the other end that is also burning. In one sudden spark he'll be snuffed-out.

Boating safety includes maintenance

MADISON, WI — The mild winter and early spring thaw means a greater number of boaters will be on the lakes sooner than in years past. Good weather and even better baseball may entice many skippers to cast away, tune out the world and tune in to the Brewers on their high seas hi-fis.

But before spring fever gets the best of you this season, a thorough check of your craft — whatever its size — could save you frustration, money and maybe even you life.

Before launching your boat, DNR boating safety coordinator Dale Morey advises examination of all boating equipment. The following points are of most importance:

- check hulls for leaks or fatigue
- test lights and batteries
- inspect hoses, fuel lines and connections for cracking

- be sure motors will start and that steering will work
- and carry on board at least as many life preservers as you have passengers

After your boat is in shipshape, officials say your should be sure you are, too. Captains need to be aware of what is good boating practice and what is not. Most accidents occur because of poor or impaired judgment and carelessness. Morey, who's also chairman of the National Boating Safety Council, stresses that boaters should be especially cautious early in the season until they have "regained their sea legs."

Morey also suggests that boaters review state boating regulations to make sure their equipment and boating skills are up to standards. Morey says the laws carry stiff fines because "their enforcement is essential to everyone's personal safety."

To find out about Wisconsin boating laws, boaters can call their local DNR office. There are numerous publications on boating safety and regulations available from the DNR. Morey, however, believes that boating courses are the surest way to become a competent captain.

"The best thing you could do for yourself and your family is to enroll in a boating course."

Perhaps the nastiest of all tick torture methods is the floating inferno debacle. This is a detailed process that involves pouring water into a quart mason jar until it is about half full (or empty, depending on your prospective).

Then simply pour enough lantern fluid to cover the surface of the water. Place the to-be-baked tick on a small piece of cork and carefully set the cork in the jar so as to not submerge the tick in the flammable fluid. Now deposit one lighted match into the jar. The lantern fluid will burn slowly and the tick will likely commit tickicide by plunging into the sea of burning fluid. Gotcha!

This is always a crowd-pleaser.

Remember that these are but three ways to kill a tick. Don't limit yourself, develop your own method. I know of a person who pits ticks against spiders for some real arachnid excitement.

When you're done with your fun, you can go back and finish your meatloaf.

Turkey Hunt

Harvest up from last year

MADISON, WI — Wisconsin turkey hunters took 451 birds during the first five-day period of the 1987 Wisconsin turkey hunting season this year, compared with a harvest of 306 for the first period a year ago.

"Taking into consideration that there were 30 percent more permits issued for each of the four hunting periods this year, the harvest increase for the first period is 13 percent better than a year ago," said Ed Frank, farm wildlife specialist in the DNR Bureau of Wildlife Management. He said that indicated that the total number of turkeys taken during the season this spring would be in the upper range of the one thousand to fifteen hundred bird pre-season harvest predication.

Three periods of the turkey hunt remain. They are: April 29-May 3, May 6-10, and May 13-17.

It also has a map showing the location of these state operated facilities around the state. It's a handy guide for anyone who visits or plans to visit Wisconsin state parks, trails or forests.

The brochure is also available by contacting the Bureau of Parks and Recreation, Department of Natural Resources, P.O. Box 7621, Madison, WI 53707. Phone: 608/266-2181.

Seminars to teach log building

Great Lakes School of Log Building is offering two weekend seminars on homesteading in uninhabited areas. The workshops will be conducted by Ron Brodigan, a guide and log building instructor who has carved from the forest several homesteads and camps during the past two decades.

These sessions, in practical homesteading, will be held May 29-31 and July 10-12 at the Great Lakes School near the Boundary Waters canoe area in the Superior National Forest. The seminars will be useful to men and women contemplating land purchase and settlement in rural areas, who wish to prepare themselves in related skills and technology for the adventures ahead. Illustrated lectures, field trips, and direct experience will be employed in the workshops.

Topics include: how to purchase undeveloped land or lake-shore; road and trail construction; fresh water systems; shelters and buildings; heating alternatives; gardening and food preservation; tools for homesteading; the many resources available to the backwoods settler, such as books and helpful public agencies.

Each weekend class includes the above topics and runs from 6:00 p.m. Friday to 3:00 p.m. Sunday. The tuition of $75 includes lodging and course materials. Participants should bring notebook, food, sleeping bag, and camera. For further information or to register, contact Great Lakes School 3544 1/2 Grand Avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55408 or call (612)822-5955.

Water levels low, fishing enthusiasm high

In the northwest, lake and stream water levels are low in the Park Falls area. Walleyes are finished spawning and the season opening should be good. Extremely dry conditions prevail in the Cumberland area...be careful. Lake and stream water levels are also low there.

Farther south in the west central counties, there is good fishing action on the Mississippi River in the La Crosse area with white bass biting on the wing dams and largemouth being caught in the backwaters. More hunters are finding their favorite morsels on the south slopes along the Mississippi River in Trempealeau and Buffalo counties. Water levels throughout the Black River Falls area are very low, compa-nable to the lowest levels recorded last summer. Some catfish are hitting in the river below Black River Falls.

In north central Wisconsin, anglers continue to enjoy good walleye and white bass action on the Wisconsin River in the Wisconsin Rapids area, and panfish are beginning to hit on area lakes. Crappie anglers are doing fairly well in the Woodruff area, and walleyes have completed their spawning. Conditions remain dry in the Antigo and Woodruff areas...care with fire in the outdoors is a must.

In the northeast, anglers enjoyed some brown trout activity in Lake Michigan off Door County. The smelt run there peaked last week. There was fair to good brown trout action off the Algoma harbor. And, Manitowoc County anglers took some browns at the power plant and from the piers at Manitowoc. The smelt run was tapering off last week. Many perch were taken off the Oconto breakwall and at Oconto parks 1 and 11. The wildfire danger is high in Marinette, Oconto and Florence counties. Panfish and bullheads are being taken on Shawano County waters. There is very good white bass action on the Wolf and Fox rivers in Winnebago County.

In the southeast, browns are hitting for shoreline trollers and pier anglers in Sheboygan County. The smelt run, and the steelhead and sucker runs, are about over in Ozaukee County. But, nice catches of chinook and coho were made there last week. On the inland waters in the southeast, prospects look excellent for the general fishing season opener, Saturday, May 2nd. Panfish, especially crappies, are moving in to the shallow water to spawn.

In the south and southwest, good panfish action is reported on waters in the Dodgeville area and more pickers are having some success. Crappies and white bass are biting on the river system and Lake Wisconsin in Columbia County. Largemouth and smallmouth bass are hitting in Big Green Lake and Buffalo Lake in Marquette County is producing northerns, bass and panfish. Crappies, white bass and bullheads are beginning to bite on Lake Koshkonong.

Area outdoor action

Woodruff Area

The weather has been favorable for outdoor users. Although a little rain fell during the past weekend, the fire danger remains high. Burning permits are being issued for burning trash and debris, but only for one day at a time. Crappie anglers are doing fairly well. Walleyes have completed their spawning and fishing should be good on opening weekend.

Stevens Point Area

Walleyes and white bass continue to hit on the Wisconsin River waters. Some panfish are starting to be taken on area lakes. Trout streams in the area are presently being stocked with trout for the coming season.

Antigo Area

Initial surveys indicate the ruffed grouse population is up from last year. Lake and stream water levels are very low. There are significant fly hatches along the streams. Forest conditions continue to dry. Anglers and campers are urged to be very careful with fire.

New outdoors magazine

Wisconsin outdoorsmen can look forward to a new magazine, tailored to state interests, that will appear this fall.

Chuck Petrie, former managing editor of Wisconsin Sportsman magazine before it was sold to a publisher in Georgia, will be the editorial director for Wisconsin Outdoor Journal.

The first issue will be August/September 1987, and the magazine will be published six times a year. Many of the field editors and columnists from the old Wisconsin Sportsman will write for the new Outdoor Journal. Subscriptions will be $7.95 per year from P.O. Box 26, DePere, WI 54115.

AFRICAN DISCOVERIES?

NUCLEAR WASTE STORED TWO BILLION YEARS.

In 1972 French scientists working in tropical Africa discovered a site where nuclear waste has been safely contained for an estimated two billion years. Remarkably, the naturally created waste did not make the region's ground water undrinkable. Instead, natural processes held the waste -- thousands of pounds of it -- in the rocks where the waste was buried.

Where did this ancient nuclear waste come from? It was created below ground when a uranium ore body began operating just like the core of a modern nuclear reactor. The ore was water-soaked and hot. Even with these harsh conditions, the rocks worked -- they held the waste at that site. Plutonium-239, a radioactive substance with a 25,000-year half-life, did not budge. Some other radioelements of the "fission product" class did migrate, but less than 300 feet through the rocks. Natural processes halted movement, allowing scientists today to study the remnants of ancient geological "disposal".

Hunters taught to train their dogs

MADISON, WI - Again this year, hunters will have the opportunity to participate in hunting dog training seminars as the result of a cooperative effort between the Department of Natural Resources and the Wisconsin Association of Field Trail Clubs.

The three sessions scheduled this year, the tenth year for the program, will be held at the Brown County Sportsman's Club on May 30, the Mazomanie Wildlife Area on June 6, and the Bong Recreation Area on June 13.

The fee for the seminars is $15 which includes a copy of the illustrated book, "Training You to Train Your Hunting Dog." Qualified amateur and professional dog trainers will be on hand to lead the sessions which will focus on demonstrations of trained and partially trained hunting dogs, group discussions of dog training problems and attention to problems individuals have in training their hunting dogs.

All three Saturday seminars will begin at 9 a.m. The May 30 seminar at the Brown County Sportsman Club, located two miles north of Highway 41 and Lineville Road in Brown County, is for pointers, retrievers and flushers. Contact Mark Oppenorth at 414/497-6022 for more information.

Over 100 hunting dog owners attended a state-sponsored dog training seminar held near Mazomanie, Wisconsin last fall. These seminars teach dog owners to train their dogs.

Polston, Zowin lead netters at District 14 meet

Pointer Bryan Zowin gets set to return a shot. Zowin and the entire men's tennis team are preparing for the WSUC championships this weekend.

by Karen Kulinski
Sports Editor

Pointer Gary Polston met a tough obstacle in the semifinals and was eliminated from competition during the NAIA District 14 Tournament last week.

The Stevens Point men's tennis team concluded the tourney in third place with 12 points and did not advance anyone to national competition. Stout won the meet with 31 points followed by Eau Claire in second with 15. La Crosse was fourth with 8 while River Falls tallied 3 points. Milwaukee failed to score.

In the singles competition, Polston beat Al Olson (EC) 6-2, 6-7, 6-4 in the first round before winning another three-set match in round two over Jeff Guest (RF), 6-2, 4-6, 6-4. In the third round, he beat Bill Johnson (ST) 7-5, 3-6, 6-1 and then proceeded to knock out Tim Rolling (EC) in the quarterfinals, 7-5, 7-6. In the semifinals, Polston lost to John Leehy of Stout, 6-4, 6-1.

"Polston played very good to get to the semifinals," said Pointer coach Dave Droste. "He then played smart tennis against Leehy, the eventual winner of the singles draw. Leehy is ranked in the top 25 of Division III tennis players in singles so the odds were stacked up against Gary."

Bryan Zowin also won in the first three rounds before losing in the quarterfinals. He won 6-1, 6-3 in round one, 6-0, 6-2 in round two and 6-3, 7-5 in round three. His only loss, which eliminated him from the tourney, was to Tony Pfeifer of Stout, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

"Zowin also played very well but had some problems with muscle cramps that hindered his play," said Droste.

After a first-round bye, Bill Diehl beat Tom McGuire (EC) 6-2, 7-5 and Steve Francour (OSH), 6-2, 6-4 before losing to Mike Friedman (ST) 1-6, 6-0, 7-5.

Peter Benedict and Stew Stone lost in the first round and Doug Greenberg, who had a first-round bye, lost his first match in round two. All three were eliminated.

In the doubles competition, Polston teamed with Greenberg to beat a Milwaukee duo, 6-2, 7-6. In round three, the Point two-some lost to Stout after a tough three-set battle, 6-4, 2-6, 6-2. The other two Point entries—Benedict-Stone and Diehl-Zowin—lost their opening matches. All three Point doubles teams received first round byes.

The Pointers travel to Madison for the Wisconsin State University conference meet on May 8-9.

Women runners compete at

Roonie Invite

by Karen Kulinski
Sports Editor

It may have been a low-key meet, but Carlene Willkom and Tammy Stowers didn't let that stop them.

At the Roonie Invitational in La Crosse last weekend, Willkom set a school record and qualified for nationals in the triple jump with a leap of 36-10 1/2. Stowers also burned up the field as she qualified for nationals in the discus with a toss of 136-3.

"I was afraid that the team might be flat because this was a low-key meet and also that they might be looking forward to the conference meet next week," said Point coach Len Hill of the unscored meet. "We had two basic goals—one was to improve our seed times for the conference meet and the other was to get some more people qualified for nationals. We accomplished both."

Golfers host Pointer Open, finish in 3rd

by Karen Kulinski
Sports Editor

The Pointer golf team returned home to the Stevens Point Country Club to conclude its spring season by hosting the Pointer Open last Friday.

Oshkosh set a meet record in the outing with a 379. Eau Claire grabbed second at 391 followed by Stevens Point at 393, Stout 404, Whitewater 405, Milwaukee School of Engineering and Madison Area Technical College 411, St. Norbert 429, Green Bay 443 and Lawrence 504.

Although not victorious, Stevens Point coach Pete Kasson was pleased. "Yes, I'm happy with our performance," he said. "Oshkosh shot very well. There were three nice scores under 400. Eau Claire is going to nationals and so is either Oshkosh or Whitewater. The top schools from the WSUC were here."

Mick Gilbert paced the Pointers with nines of 36 and 38 for a 74. He earned runner-up medalist honors. Jamie Keiler finished close behind at 75 with nines of 34 and 41.

"Gilbert and Keiler had excellent rounds," said Kasson. "It was a perfect day and the course was in excellent shape."

Kurt Rebholz shot a 79 for Point on nines of 39 and 40 while Joe Stadler had an 80 (38-42) and Mike Frieder an 85 (43-42).

Two other Point golfers joined an "individual" team along with Parkside which did not have enough players to compete. Greg Majka shot a 78 (37-41) while Pete Deubler had an 83 (42-41).

The fine spring weather along with the fine play of the Pointers pleased Kasson. With the entire team returning next fall, optimism looms.

"Our play has improved from last fall," he said. "But for next fall, we still have to improve and get a little deeper. We'll be very competitive if everybody returns. It should be interesting."

Pointers conclude WSUC season in third

The UW-Stevens Point men's baseball team finished up their 1987 Wisconsin State University Conference season by winning three-out-of-four games this past weekend at Bukolt Park.

Last Friday, the Pointers produced 24 runs on 24 base hits to sweep a doubleheader from the Platteville Pioneers, winning 16-6 and 8-2.

In the opener, Dave Romnek pitched two and one-third innings of relief, giving up two runs on three base hits while fanning two. He picked up his first victory of the season. Tom Karst who started for Point, threw three and two-thirds innings allowing four runs on four base hits and walking two.

UWSP head coach Randy Handel said, "Romnek threw the ball really well in game one, in relief of Karst."

The Pointer bats came alive in game one, knocking in 16 runs on 13 hits and stranding four men on base. Dan Dantoin led the way as he went three-for-four with one HR and four RBIs. Tyler Caswell added his first homerun of the year to the offensive show. "We got our bats going in the first game," said Handel. "It was a big day for us offensively. Speth had a grand slam and Reuchel had a three-run homerun. Their pitching struggled and we were able to hit the long ball."

In the nightcap, Scott Pompe pitched five solid innings allowing one run on four base hits. He walked three and struck out five en route to his third win of the season. Steve Meredith picked up his first save in relief of Pompe.

"Meredith pitched two innings of relief and did real well," said Handel. "Pompe started for us and did a nice job. He pitched five innings and only gave up one earned run."

Offensively in game two, Point managed eight runs on 11 base hits. Chris Kohnle added two RBIs in a pinch-hit homerun in the fifth inning. Handel added, "I was really happy to give a lot of the younger players a chance to bat and gain some experience in the Platteville doubleheader."

Last Saturday, UWSP and UW-Whitewater put on an offensive show as both teams combined for 51 hits and scored a total of 38 runs in both games. Point won the first game 10-8, and then lost to the Warhawks, 12-8.

In the opener, Darin Leveraus had good relief help from Jeff Spitzer and Paul Speth. Speth also picked up his first save of the year.

The Pointers scored 10 runs on 13 hits and put seven runs across in the second inning. Reuchel went two-for-four with his 10th HR and had five RBIs. Kohnle was three-for-four at the plate while Speth added his sixth homerun of the year to add to the Pointer cause. Point left just four men on base in game one.

In the nightcap, the Pointers scored eight runs on eight hits in a losing effort. John Hinze was two-for-three in the lead-off spot. Dan Dantoin was three-for-four with a double while Kohnle went two-for-two with a double, a homerun, his seventh of the year, with five big RBIs.

Handel summarized the Whitewater doubleheader, "We would have liked to have swept the two games today, to finish in second place in the conference behind Oshkosh. We scored 18 runs, but our pitching was unable to get ahead of their hitters all day."

Last Thursday, the Pointers traveled to Madison to face the NCAA Division I Wisconsin Badgers. Point came out on the short end, losing to the Badgers, 8-0.

Handel noted, "We lose Hensley and Spitzer as the only two graduating seniors on the team. I'm looking forward to and I am excited about next year's Pointer squad. Coach Fred Herbert and John Lindauer really have been a great asset to this year's team and myself."

The Pointers finished their WSUC Southern Division play in third place with a 6-6 record. Point was 18-14 overall.

array of top performances with second places for their national-qualifying distances. Willkom also placed third in the 100 hurdles in 15.8 while Stowers grabbed a fifth in the shot put (37-5 1/4, also a PR).

The 4 x 400 relay topped the Lady Pointer crew by bringing home a first place title. The team of Cheri Schopper, Willkom, Maureen Seidl and Carrie Enger topped the pack in 4:00.6.

Earning second places were Maureen Seidl in the 400 dash with a time of 60.8 while Enger had a 2:17.8 clocking in the 800 run. Third places went to the 4 x 100 relay of Beckie Sherwood, Schopper, Maureen Seidl and Enger (50.7), Sherwood in the 400 dash (61.4), Beth Weiland in the javelin (91-11) and Kris Helein in the 3,000 run (10:30.1).

"Good efforts for the day came from Enger, Wallander and Barb Knuese in the 800," said Hill. "as all ran their best races of the year. Weiland and Carol Zielinski (fourth, 91-10) had personal-record efforts in the javelin. Helein's time in the 3,000 was also a personal record."

Other place winners for Point came from Kathi Seidl in the 1,500 run (fifth, 4:54.2), Kris Zander in the triple jump (fifth, 33-3 1/4), Liz Sindlinger in the high jump (fifth, 4-10 1/4), Wallander in the 800 run (sixth, 2:23.6), Sheri Hall in the 1,500 run (sixth, 4:57.2) and Francie Payette in the triple jump (sixth, 32-4 1/4).

"Kathi Seidl gave the best performance for the season in the 1,500," said Hill. "We also had many other good efforts. I feel, and more importantly, the team feels that we are ready for the conference meet next week."

Hill named Stowers as the Pointer field event performer of the week while Kathi Seidl grabbed Pointer runner of the week honors.

The Lady Pointers travel to La Crosse on May 8-9 for the WWIAC Outdoor Meet.

Lady Pointers lose two

by Craig Roberts
Staff Writer

UW-River Falls took its third win of the week from UW-Stevens Point and UW-La Crosse came away with an upset win as the Lady Pointers were knocked out of the Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference tournament over the weekend.

River Falls (18-9) went on to capture the tourney championship Saturday by edging host Oshkosh in the title game, 1-0. Lori Sukow pitched a two-hitter while loser Kari Miller of the Titans allowed just three hits. The Falcons finished the tourney 4-0 while the No. 1 seeded Titans (31-7) wound up 4-2.

In Friday's opener the Falcons used four walks and seven hits to earn a 2-1 decision.

After falling behind 1-0 in the second inning, the Lady Pointers come back with a run in the fourth.

Tammy Kuester led off the inning with a double to left-center and Brenda VanDerBurgt followed with a sacrifice bunt. Ann Lux followed with a fly ball to right to drive in Kuester.

Amy block picked up the game-winning RBI when she singled home Karen Hurd who had singled home Karen Hurd who had singled and advanced to second on a wild pitch.

Kuester led the Stevens Point offense with a pair of hits, a walk and a run scored.

The Lady Pointers' second game in the tourney saw them allow two unearned runs in the

Tracksters in high-gear at low-key meet

Karen Kulinski
Sports Editor

With the season winding down, the Pointer men's track team is gearing up.

With the WSUC and national championships just around the corner, the athletes are using these last few meets to prepare themselves for heavy competition.

Senior Arnie Schraeder proved that he will be in fine shape to defend his title in the 1,500 run.

At the Metro Sports Classic in La Crosse, Schraeder won the 1,500 run with a clocking of 3:47.16.

"Arnie's time was faster than his time to win NCAA's last year," said Point coach Rick Witt. "He is definitely ready to run some really outstanding times."

Although that was the only first place finish, there were fourth and another in the sixth as La Crosse, the No. 8 seed, knocked off the fifth-seeded UWSP squad, 4-2.

The Roonies, who had been bumped by No. 9 seed Platteville in the first round, used three errors in the fourth inning to take a 2-1 lead.

Stevens Point took a 1-0 lead in the third when VanDerBurgt singled to score Becky Lundberg from third. Heidi Singer had the stop sign given to her a third and she was eventually stranded there as the Lady Pointers left the bases loaded. Lack of the clutch hit proved several other promising showings. John Wright earned second place in the javelin (52.85) as did Ben Baumgart in the high jump (6-8) and Steve Allison in the 800 run (1:54.30).

"I was pleased with Wright in the javelin," said Witt. "He is looking very good."

Tom Moris placed third in the 1,500 run (4:01.47) and Keith Stoll also placed third in the high jump (6-8). Fourth place finishers were Tim Olson in the 1,500 run (4:01.71), Tim Gerk in the shot put (34 10 1/2) and the 4 x 400 relay (3:28.5).

Grabbing fifth places were Eric Fossum in the 3,000 steeplechase (9:29.52), John Gunderson in the hammer throw (128-11) and Brad Houslet in the 400 IM hurdles (57.37). Jim Shumway placed sixth in the hammer throw (121-6).

In the discus, Brian Fehrman grabbed fourth with a toss of 145-2 while Shumway placed costly to UWSP which stranded 13 runners all told, leaving the bases loaded in the fourth and fifth.

A last-ditch effort in the seventh for Stevens Point came up shy as Karen Scarseth's RBI single, to drive in Lux, was all they could muster.

"We just couldn't come up with any key hits," said Lady Pointer coach Nancy Page of her team's weekend showing. "We made some key mistakes and it cost us two games."

UW-Stevens Point finished the year at 8-20, including 4-4 in the Eastern Division of the WWIAC.

sixth with a 138-8. "The discus also looks like our guys are really getting ready at the right time," said Witt.

The Pointers return to action this Friday and Saturday at the WSUC Championships in La Crosse.

ruption in government, and a hollow Christian echo.

Today we act as material anarchists. Political zombies. Spiritually: showing face in church with our headphones jammed into our hangovers. The constant push-push of getting ahead has clogged the larger visions which got us here! The Race is now "one-on-one million." We must win our race, if we have one! The contest is figures were as to how many people were in Washington for that rally (it varies from 100,000-150,000), the fact of the matter is that that many people felt strongly enough to be physically present at the same time and walk through the streets of Washington protesting our governments foreign policy in these areas. There was a similar rally in San Francisco where 30,000-50,000 people participated. So that means that somewhere between 130,000-200,000 people gathered to send a message to our leaders that they disapprove of our policies in those areas.

This is not an insignificant number! If you consider that telephone surveys are taken of thousands of people and then the results are projected to represent the opinions of the nation, what is the significance of this many people showing up in person to deliver their message? Surely there are people that feel the same way who were unable to appear in Washington or San Francisco or who simply did not know this event was taking place.

My question is: Can we continue to ignore this number of people and their plea for justice. Regardless how well you know the issues, it's important to remember that this was not a 'Levi-clad, hippie-type' group of people that marched for this cause. This was a mobilization of national religious and labor leaders. Participants were from every age and ethnic group. There were affluent moms walking with their kids. There were tough-looking blue collar workers walking alongside elderly veterans and they all joined in the same cry for "No more Vietnams."

Now that another American has died and soon there will be 50 thousand troops in Central America preparing for 'exercises', don't you think it's about time more of us came out of our 70s lathargy and once again realized that this is our government and we can turn things around if we so choose. This will be an interesting summer for those that watched the Watergate scandal unfold on television, soon the entire Iran arms-Contra scandal will hit the fan and the people of this country are going to have to admit that they have once again given up responsibility of controlling their destiny to someone that appeared larger than life on the silver screen.

There is nothing larger than life. The only soap opera is the one we live and there are no commercials and station breaks. We are it! When are we going to take this seriously and consider the 'people of this Earth our brothers and sisters and not potential customers or victims of our greed and materialism?

ever present. We scam day after day, each racer surviving in different contexts, but all hoping to be somehow better off than last month, last year. Richer than big brother.

How are we, as individual operators, attempting to win the American Race? Here is a partial list of behaviors in the "American Subversion 500":

1. Have you been injured in an accident? Sue the bastards! Our country in court, forever and ever! Winning through litigation! I know a cheap lawyer....
2. The American debt - billions, trillions, who cares? Borrow it. Use it. Re-finance it. Leave the state. Declare bankruptcy! Win while you loose!
3. Taxes, ...HA! Let the other guy pay. I know a cheap lawyer!
4. Sell it! Out front, on the drive way. Why not make a buck? The rummage sale solution for old, broken shit. Sell it! No sales tax!
5. Do drugs! Pretend that you are winning your race - even if you haven't devised one! Just call your doctor and bitch. Get high with the kids! Try again tomorrow.

6. Quick! Quick! Move faster, faster! Ten minutes for lunch! Fast as you can! Time is money! Win on the run!

While lampoonish, there are important patterns to consider. Paradoxically, while lawyers represent our "interests" - we race to pay and pay. Our pace and complexity has necessitated a compartmentalizing of skills, each with a price. The Dream of One has devolved into a wacked-out beehive, honey combed into millions of selfish speeding insects, each one in a daily race for the pollen.

There are other ways that Americans employ to gain material goods and social power. But rather than focus on the ends, on the goals which dangle like rearview mirror dice day after day, we must question how we live. The quality of each small decision. Do any of us really have the American Dream? What good is it if we cannot find a daily sense of health and balance? Can we win the Race?

Good luck my friend.

about the beating of Nigerian students while still in Africa. The story spread like wildfire. Despite all the things I heard about this town I still came here. I really wanted to find out if what people said about Stevens Point were true, though that wasn't my mission here.

When I first came here some people told me to be very careful. I was told I couldn't move alone at night and that made me very paranoid. I couldn't go to any place I wanted to go because I was so afraid. It was like living in South Africa. I couldn't imagine why people here should be racists, I always thought that people in Europe would have reason to be racists since they haven't been very exposed to black people.

As time went on, I decided to mix with Americans so I could experience the racism myself. I decided to go any place I wanted to go. Making friends here wasn't an easy task; I guess we all have problems making friends, but it was harder for me because of what I thought about Americans and language problems. It really made me feel bad when people asked me questions about Africa which I thought were pretty stupid. I realized that most students here were very ignorant about Africa and Africans, but I failed to realize the fact that I was also ignorant about America and Americans.

Most of my information about white people came from relatives and friends. My parents made me look at the outside world from a dark window. My parents are still looking at the world from a dark window. They see the world they way they want it to be. They are still feeding their stereotypes about white people.

What about your own parents? It wasn't until I went into the world that I realized that most of the things I was told by my parents and friends weren't true. Sometimes I found it hard to adjust because I always judged people from my stereotypes.

I haven't seen the racism that I was told existed in Stevens Point yet. I have had a nice time since I came here. It is
