"Dedicated to the preservation of the first amendment"

South Africa changing

by Barry Radler
Staff Writer

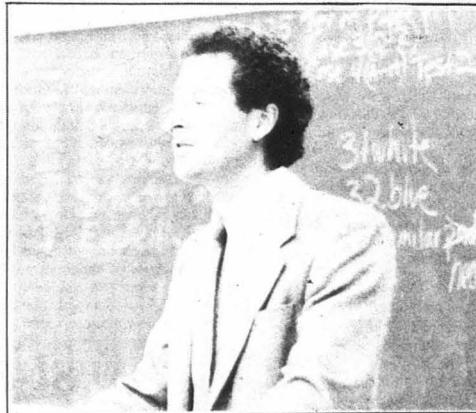

Martin Meyers, a marketing specialist from UWSP, has concluded his fifth visit to South Africa and has determined that a pullout by American businesses would hinder that nation's blacks the most.

"It seems to me that the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer because of sanctions," says Meyers. "What happens is when American companies pull out of South Africa, they sell their assets; and they're selling them for a song." South African companies acquire assets in buildings and computers as a result.

"Another reason the rich are getting richer is the rand has really fallen in value," Meyers says. "So for people who are exporting, they're getting a bonus." Meyers contends that this is due in large part to sanctions.

Many foes of apartheid-including senators returning from fact-finding missions in South Africa-have called for multinational firms operating in South Africa to cease enterprises there. But Meyers contends that the country's progress in race relations are largely the result of efforts by American companies promoting the cause of BAC's (Blacks, Asians and Coloureds).

"American companies there are doing so much good in terms of social responsibility," states Meyers. "For example, Kellogg's is still there. They built a computer lab for St. Barnabas College, a multiracial school. When companies pull out of the country they stop their social responsibility programs."

"It's more than just money for schools. It's money for workshops, job training, hospitals, and bursaries (scholarships). And the American companies are more likely to promote Blacks, Asians, and Coloureds."

Meyers adds that German, British and Japanese companies generally are not pulling out of South Africa. Fifty-four major American corporations are still in South Africa, but that is less than half as many as there were a few years ago.

Some of the best known spokespeople for South African Blacks-including Nelson Mandela and Bishop Desmond Tutu-have encouraged foreign firms to leave the country in protest of apartheid.

There is some doubt as to how many support these spokespeople, especially Mandela, and most Blacks oppose efforts to force our foreign firms, especially those based in the United States, contends Meyers.

He points out that Mandela has orchestrated one day strikes called "stayaways." People not

Prevent Vandalism

Vandalism is the largest single crime problem at UWSP, and it will be attacked during a campus "Crime Prevention Month" observance.

Velma Jain reports that the Department of Protective Services, for which she is security supervisor, is sponsoring programs and the distribution of a variety of printed materials throughout October to inform students and faculty/staff about what they can do to better protect themselves and their property.

The vandalism problem is addressed in the brochure "Be Smart. Be Alert. A Safe Campus Starts with You." Other publications will be made available about date rape and ways to prevent it, how to handle obscene phone calls, and how to be safe walking and using public transportation.

Distribution of the brochures and related posters will be on each remaining tuesday and Wednesday during October, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Locations will be in the Professional Studies Building lobby Oct. 9, Collins Classroom Center lobby Oct. 10, Natural Resources Building lobby Oct. 16, Science Building lobby Oct. 17, Fine Arts Center courtyard Oct. 23, Berg Gymnasium lobby Oct. 24, Allen Center Oct. 30, and DeBot Center on Oct. 31.

Though it's been an uncommon problem for the campus, reports of an intruder in several women's dorm rooms the first weekend of the school year emphasized the need for students to take more safety precautions, according to Jain.

And with vandalism problems, she added, there is a "real need" for students to not only protect their own property but report incidents they witness because the losses "come out of everyone's pockets."

"Crime Prevention Month" has been given high priority this year by Chancellor Keith Sanders, who issued a proclamation noting that crime prevention "adds immeasurably to the health, safety and vigor of UWSP and should be encouraged and supported by everyone."

Stop Bush

President George Bush has threatened to veto the Civil Rights Act of 1990. THIS IS UNACCEPTABLE! The Civil Rights Act of 1990 Supreme Court decisions. The bill is necessary to prevent further erosion of rights for people of color, women, people with disabilities, religious minorities, and others.

History professor speaks on Persian Gulf

by Blair Cleary
Staff Writer

"A war in the Middle East is not as inevitable this week as it was last week," said Neil Lewis, a UWSP history professor, as he gave a talk on Tuesday on recent developments in the Middle East.

Sponsored by the UWSP History Club, Professor Lewis gave his presentation and then took several questions from the audience on the Persian Gulf crisis.

Lewis said in his discussion that a war was less likely now than it was last week in part because of a French proposal suggesting a link between a withdrawal from Kuwait by Iraq to a spurring of negotiations for an Israeli withdrawal from land once held by the Arabs.

"The proposal offers a way out for Saddam Hussein," said Lewis, "It allows him to save face and get out with his skin intact."

Lewis also talked about some of the diplomatic events leading up to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait as well as why Hussein was willing to take such a risk.

There were many reasons a war with Kuwait was worth the risk for Hussein.

First, it would help the people of Iraq to put the war with Iran, with 500,000 Iraqi troops dead and perhaps as many as one million wounded, behind them.

Also, it would be a chance for Iraq to cancel billions of dollars in debt to Kuwait, to say nothing of the billions of dollars worth of goods looted during the invasion.

Another reason Hussein may have been willing to risk an invasion was the United States.

Lewis said that the U.S. may have given the wrong diplomatic signals to Iraq when, in the week prior to the invasion, the U.S. said it "had no binding defensive commitment with Kuwait."

This, coupled with the fact the U.S. was on friendly terms with Iraq, may have given Hussein the impression that the U.S. would not act as severely as it did.

Lewis stated that for now the U.S. seems content to let the economic sanctions work on Iraq. He said that the international support for the Iraqi economic sanctions is still strong.

The sea embargo is very successful and the air embargo is strengthening with the help of the fact that people who break the air embargo by flying items into Iraq may get embargoes against their own nations.

"If war comes," said Lewis, "Hussein may try to drag Israel into it." This would probably cause many of the Arab nations currently allied with the U.S. against Iraq to withdraw their support.

Lewis quoted an old Arab saying of "Me and my brother against my cousin, but me and my cousin against the stranger," when discussing the impact of Israeli involvement in the Persian Gulf.

Lewis also discussed Libya and Iran and how they fit into the whole affair. When asked what side Libya was on Lewis said, "Both sides." He said that while Libya condemned the invasion of Kuwait, it also condemned "unbeliever forces in the land of Islam."

"A dream for Iran," said Lewis, "would be if both the US and Iraq went down in flames."

Lewis, however, suspected that Iran was leaning slightly toward the west. He said that the fact that Iran re-opened relations with Great Britain was evidence to help support this.

Lewis concluded by saying that Iraq had lost its offensive options. Lewis cautioned that to drive them from Kuwait would be very bloody. "They have almost 10 years of experience from fighting a defensive war with Iran."

Where have all the Jacobins gone?

by Michelle Marver
Contributor

Where are the Jacobins? Walking through the halls of the University Center without the sound of Father Patriot's boots isn't the same. Where have he and his followers vanished to? Last year, Student Government Association recognized the Jacobins as a student organization on campus. This year, the Jacobins have not been as outspoken and were not recognized as a campus organization.

When asked what happened, Maud LaMarche responded, "It's not because Madison is gone! All of the leaders and many members, except myself graduated last May. I cannot be the leader of the organization without any dedicated followers."

Many members of the former Jacobins have become involved in the Philosophy Club on campus. The club is under the direction of President Robert Crapol-Hall, who was not a member of the Jacobins. The organization has over 35 members. Crapol-Hall commented, "The purpose of the club is to explore philosophical issues of value to UWSP students." Each member receives a pass/fail credit in philosophy 399 for participation in the club.

The Philosophy Club will produce a monthly newsletter of educational information, entitled The Enchiridion. This newsletter will be discuss freedom of thought and education in a philosophical way. According to Crapol-Hall, "The purpose of the newsletter is to defend freedom of expression by placing value on liberal arts in a well-written educational piece." This is in contrast to the Jacobin's newsletter, that used an activist approach to writing about key issues on campus. The Jacobin newsletter had no organizational structure.

The Jacobins were founded two years ago by Elliot Madison, James O'Donnell, Dave Cherney and Maud LaMarche in response to the uncensored edition of The Pointer, and accusations of student apathy by SGA. They felt that both organizations misrepresented the students. According to LaMarche, "We wanted to be the voice of the students and we wanted to prove that students aren't apathetic, but just uninformed about many key issues on campus."

The name "Jacobin" and the Father Patriot costuming came from the French Revolution era. When asked about the costuming that distinguishes the Jacobins, LaMarche responded, "We want our organization to be recognized on campus. It's our way of promotion."

LaMarche concluded, "I am willing to bring the Jacobins alive again with the support of dedicated students. I can't do it alone!"

Phi Sigs take action

by Sarah Newton
Contributor

National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness week is coming up October 14 -20, and this year, the local chapter of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity will be participating by sponsoring a portion of the week's activities in conjunction with the University.

The last time the Phi Sigs were in the news was February of last year for an uncomfortable break up of one of their parties. According to Patrick James, Phi Sig coordinator of Alcohol Awareness week, that incident is directly related to their involvement with this year's program.

"Our first motive for taking part was the fact that it fulfills our probation (from the party), and then when we got involved, and learned more about the importance of the week, we decided to go all the way and do something worthwhile rather than just fulfilling the minimum requirement," said James.

Speakers sponsored by Phi Sigma Kappa include professor Rowe from the psychology department. He will discuss "The Effect of Alcohol on the Body," Monday, October 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the Program Banquet Room of the University Center.

Detective Barge from the Stevens Point Police Department will speak on the "War Stories of Alcohol Addiction," his personal recovery as an alcoholic, and also the legal aspects of alcohol as a substance. This program will be in an open question and answer format in the PBR room at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday October 17.

Thursday at 7:30 p.m., also in the PBR room, a representative from the Oaks Side Rehabilitation Center will be speaking on personal recovery.

For further information on National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, contact JoAnne Griffen in Delzell Hall or at the Community Drug and Alcohol Center, 344-4611.

Bratfest revived

by Rick Waldvogel
Contributor

Just when you thought it was safe to attend homecoming, Sigma Tau Gamma has revived their annual Bratfest. On Saturday, Oct. 13, from 10:30 to 2:30 p.m., brats, beer and soda will be served on the practice field behind the Quandt Field House.

"We're really excited to bring back Bratfest this year, especially since it has been two years since we did our last one," said organizer Kristian Sydow. "This homecoming will also mark our fraternity's 25th anniversary, so it is going to be much more than just a fund raiser for us."

Bratfest will be held between the homecoming parade and the football game. The event is being sponsored by Miller beer and will be held inside of enclosed tents. Entertainment will be provided by the Wausau native band, Beggars Banquet, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Sigma Tau Gamma's sorority sisters, Alpha Omega Rho, will be cosponsoring the event and also participating with the fraternity in other events for homecoming.

"Bratfest used to be quite a large event, with attendance being as large as six thousand people," said Sig Tau Craig Wilson. "It would be great if we could get that many people back and make this an annual event again."

90 FM to air debate

WWSP 90FM will broadcast the Wisconsin Broadcasters Association's (WBA) gubernatorial debate live on Friday, October 5, 1990. The one hour debate will begin at 7:00 p.m.

The WBA debate is the only remaining scheduled debate between Republican Governor Tommy Thompson and Democratic Assembly Speaker Tom Loftus. The debate will be held at the Milwaukee Area Technical College in downtown Milwaukee.

The two candidates will answer questions from Dave Iverson, Wisconsin Public Television; Patty Loew, WKOW-TV, Madison; and John Sherer, WMYM/WWMH Radio, Minocqua. WBA President John Laabs will moderate the event.

WWSP 90FM, which broadcasts at 89.9 on the FM dial, is the only FM station in Central Wisconsin to be airing the debate.

Shaw proposes 5% enrollment cut

United Council and the students of the University of Wisconsin System responded with vehement opposition to President Shaw's plan to cut the student population by 5 percent.

"This cut would be a devastating blow to the people of Wisconsin," said Brenda Leahy, President of United Council and former UWSP SGA President from 1988-90. "A college to gain a broad based education to strengthen their skills for a brighter future."

Leahy went on to add that, "This proposed enrollment cut would put our state on a road back to the days when only a relatively small, wealthy population could afford college. This contradicts the notion of public education. Low cost higher education is the foundation of a democratic and prosperous society."

The proposed enrollment management cuts would affect current as well as potential students. Stated Leahy, "The university system continues to ignore the fact that students currently pay 100 percent of the costs of resident halls and university centers. If enacted, the proposed cuts would mean that fewer students would end up paying tremendous amounts for building upkeep on already deteriorating buildings. Students cannot continue to be expected to pay such high costs."

As long as it's down... ...why not beat it some more?

by Ron Wirtz
Editor-in-Chief

I had really hoped to avoid ever commenting on this subject because it has been beaten to death more times than Wild E. Coyote. But...

Recently, a friend of mine living in another city was fined for underage drinking.

It seems he was taking a twelve pack to share with some friends who had all been working many hours over the past week completing and architecture model. For the sake of brevity, I'll just say a security officer stopped him while outside and ticketed him.

My friend (I'll call him Z) had not had anything to drink at this point and was bringing beer for four other guys. Say what you want about blood alcohol levels, but there wasn't enough beer to bring a grade school cheerleading squad to giggles.

It just so happens that Z will turn 21 in three weeks. You know what his early B-day present was from the university? $302. Let me spell it out for you. $3-0-2.

Z got tickets for possession of alcohol by a minor, and possession of a falsified ID. Campus security said they let him off because they could have got him for tampering with a state ID. Oh my, that's mighty generous. You mean you'll leave me two lumps of coal this year in my X-mas stocking instead of just one? Don't bother. A student can no more afford $302 than he can $453.

Yes, yes, I know these activities are illegal. But let's look squarely in the mirror for a second. A) Do we really believe that 95 percent of those between 18-21 don't have fake IDs?

B) Do you really think this will stop a 20 year, 11 month old person from enjoying a beer with friends after a tough assignment?

C) Why would you want to stop this anyway? Is this really aberrant behavior?

D) Are $151 tickets necessary? Will it scare minors into not drinking? Answer: No. It'll merely make them poor. And as far as expenses, most will skip eating rather than have no money to go out with.

So all the cynics in the crowd are going to say that he should have known better or that it serves him right for breaking the law. I don't argue that he broke the law. It's the priorities of law enforcement which really bother me.

People wonder why 18-21 year olds are so concerned about the drinking age, and so unconcerned about other topics.

It's pretty simple. Every single one of us worries most about that which affects us personally. If it affects our own lives then it takes a higher priority. Previous generations did not have to worry about drinking privileges.

I'd be willing to bet that if the drinking age were raised to 21 during the Vietnam War the demonstrations wouldn't have been so war-oriented. People must be able to exercise true social freedom before society can expect a reciprocating concern.

If you take away the simple pleasures and rights of people, they will not concern themselves with outside problems until they cure internal problems.

Don't ask me why or how alcohol has come to be such a social obsession. I'm not sure. But I'm also not sure how tofu got to be popular, or if Jim Morrison and Elvis are really dead.

No one ever will be. They are just universal mysteries. We must instead decide on the consequences involved with the existence of each one.

Although I'm an advocate for a lower drinking age, that is not the point of this editorial. What I criticize is a law enforcement agency that acts overzealously in matching the punishment to the crime, and puts a student in dire financial straits by enforcing fines over a situation which, if objectively looked at, was very innocent and non-threatening.

To me a much better solution would be to merely take away the twelve pack and the fake ID. That way you prevent him from the immediate potential of "law breaking" if that indeed is the purpose of the drinking laws. More importantly, it'll allow the officer to get on to more important security activities.

Instead of over-indulgent punishment for young adults trying to fit into the college social life, let's re-evaluate and prioritize exactly what is dangerous to society.

Let's clean up the library

by Todd Schantz
Advertising Manager

Now that school has me off and scrambling again, I return to the dreaded library to study. I do however, kind of enjoy the library. It's quiet and non-stressful and I don't have to endure the noise of home.

I have a particularly favorite spot to plot myself on fourth floor by the window facing the sundial. Recently the health department has decided to bring the problem of sexually transmitted diseases to my small neck of the woods on fourth floor. It is a display featuring full color snapshots of genital warts and other various discomforts. While I'm not easily offended, this display makes me want to throw up.

I recognize the importance of educating people about STD's, but Dr. Zach and the health department have no place putting such a repulsive display in the library.

If the purpose of these pictures is to gross people out and scare them, it is a success, but these tactics rarely work and sometimes backfire on the intended purpose: If the health department feels they have to display pictures of peoples genitals covered with warts to discourage unsafe sex then they ought to do it in their own building and not the library.

I feel this display should be removed and replaced with information that could benefit people.

A person is not too likely to be seen in the library discreetly pocketing information from a display that features pictures of genital diseases. I can't for the life of me understand the purpose of this offensive display. If the library is a forum for this material why don't we put up other full color photos of drunk driving accidents that include severed heads bouncing across the highway or of crack addicts who have taken a gun to their head and popped it like a rice krispie in milk.

Of course I'm being a little extreme, but so is the health department. I feel the wart gallery belongs elsewhere.

In defense of non-vegetarians

Facts show beef-vegetarian conflict in different light

Dear Editor:

Concerning the commentary, "In Defense of Vegetarianism" which appeared in the September 27 issue of The Pointer, I would like to point out several erroneous and misleading statements made by Ms. Maher.

Being a soils major and having spent two internships with the Soil Conservation Service, I have observed and calculated with the Universal Soil Loss Equation, soil erosion under a variety of agricultural systems.

The statements, "Farmers must work their lands exhaustively to feed their livestock. Meanwhile the soil erodes... As a result, yields drop and farmers continue to overwork their land," are in the vast majority of circumstances incorrect.

Beef producers, especially in the Upper Midwest and West, depend primarily on pastures and hay production to feed their animals. The other main staples of cattle are corn and soy meal. Properly managed hay and pasture lands produce extremely low erosion rates. Farmers who do not manage are soon out of business.

Corn is a high residue crop, which means the plant stalks and leaves remaining after harvest are left on the land and help to greatly reduce soil erosion. Soybeans are not as good a residue source, but are also a staple of many vegetarians' diets.

As a matter of fact, many of the vegetables mentioned by Ms. Maher are low residue crops which greatly increase the chances for soil erosion.

As an example, if a crop of peas and alfalfa are grown on similar soils with equal slopes, the USLE predicts that the pea producing ground will undergo five to thirty times the erosion of the alfalfa hay field.

These vegetable crops are of much higher value than forage crops, and higher fertilizer addition to offset erosional losses is economically feasible. Additionally, vegetable crops, on the average, require higher inputs of fertilizer, pesticides and herbicides. While organic farming is a boom business, it currently is unable to supply sufficient quantities of food. Someday perhaps it will, but not today.

Animals such as cattle are able to digest many forms of plant material which man cannot. Cattle are ruminants, which means they have four stomachs complete with a full compliment of bacteria capable of breaking down complex carbohydrates such as hemicellulose.

Such plant materials provide little or nothing in the way of human nutrition.

I have no personal gripe with vegetarians, but I do with people who pass along misinformation to further their cause.

SGA: voice of the students

Dear Editor,

The UWSP Student Government Association. Money. Funding. For many students on our fine campus these three words summarize the representative body that helps guide policies and supports programs at UWSP.

Fortunately for us students attending school here, SGA does more than collect and allocate.

What is SGA then? Good question.

The standard summary would include a statement along these lines, "The UWSP Student Government Association is a link between students, faculty, administration and the community."

More simply put, SGA is you. You are the student government. Yes, you fund campus organizations for activities. You as a student decide on important issues that affect this campus. For example, this week in senate one issue that will be discussed is UWS-14.

This plan has been worked over during the summer by both student senators and faculty members. Now the revised format will be up for approval by SGA. This policy will provide guidelines on academic misconduct issues stemming from student/faculty conflicts.

When issues like UWS-14 are brought for discussion, this is your opportunity to voice opinion either by way of your college's representatives or in person at the meeting.

Getting in touch with your senators is as simple as attending a caucus meeting. These gatherings are held for all the colleges and "regular" students are given center stage. These meetings are listed in The Daily. Be in tune with the issues. You as a student, have the chance to make a difference!

Funding is a big part of SGA. Budget Director Dave Schleichs, along with other members of the budget team serve as a resource for organizations to help ensure strong programming. You as a student contribute to funding non-academic areas of UWSP as a part of your segregated fees. Our fees help fund campus organizations and activities, the health center, day care center, athletics and many more areas. The fees that SGA allocates amounts to more than $675,000 for the 190-91 academic year. Students who are not involved in senate are invited to participate to help assess campus opinion.

SGA President Craig Schoenfeld stated recently, "One of SGA's goals this year is to be proactive rather than reactive." In order to accomplish this, we need your help. All are invited to attend senate meetings in the Wright Lounge, University Center, Thursdays at 7:15 p.m. Read The Pointer or The Daily. If you have time, sit down and watch Student Video Operation's "SGA Update" television show.

Perhaps most important, let us know how you feel about being part of UWSP. Contact your SGA representative or a member of the Executive Board at the Student Government Office in the Campus Activities Office of the UC, or phone at 346-4036. YOU are the voice of student opinion.

I AM an American

Dear Editor:

I must make a remark about Lee Pritzl's article, "A First Hand View of the Gulf" in your Sept. 27 issue. He says I'm not a true American because I don't care about the servicemen and women over or near Saudi Arabia. In fact I don't care about any servicemen or women anywhere.

I won't make a person rebuttal toward Lee because I know the military brainwashes some of its people. But to the ideology of the military, it's all backward.

Being patriotic toward the armed forces is spitting in the faces of the founding Fathers of the United States of America. They put their beliefs into creating the U.S. constitution, meaning the armed Forced Patriots are stepping on that great document as well.

What did the Founding Fathers believe in? Well they were very much against a standing army. They knew a standing army would stand in the way of a peaceful revolution when our government became extremely corrupt--such as now.

I have no doubt in my mind that James Madison and the other Founding Fathers and their Mothers would have tears streaking down their faces if they could see all the American homeless while billions of dollars are being spent on a standing army.

Creating a female hunter After effort she sees the light

by Steve Schmidt
Outdoors Editor

It was about this time last fall that I had decided to introduce Michelle, my fiancée, to the abundant opportunities offered by Central Wisconsin's outdoors. Actually, I was bound and determined to convert a city girl into a diehard hunter and hopefully spark her interest in an outside activity other than window shopping.

My plan was to start her off on something challenging and exciting yet not extremely difficult. Therefore, squirrels were to be our game for the day.

We left for the hardwoods mid-morning on a Saturday since I didn't want to discourage her right-off-the-bat by insisting we be in the woods by daybreak. Besides, she demanded, "We must have some morning nourishment before our adventure." This included some very healthy sweet rolls and coffee.

Nonetheless, we were finally entering the woods with high optimism at about 10:00 a.m.

The weather conditions were ideal and the chatter of bushytails filled our ears with delightful sound. Michelle was prepared, or at least appeared to be. She was familiar with her Savage over and under 22/20GA and had fired it several times previous to our outing. Fortunately, we spotted our first target. A feisty grey squirrel scampered through the understorey and darted up the inviting trunk of an ancient pin oak. I wondered if another Annie Oakley was in the making as Michelle raised the gun.

It was then that she shouted, "Steve, get over here and hold my eye shut so I can aim this thing." My rose-colored glasses had shattered as I stumbled over to Michelle's location several yards away.

"I can't keep my left eye closed now to shoot him," she whimpered.

Dumbfounded by the fact she could not execute a technique so fundamental to an avid hunter, I aided her by holding the palm of my hand over her left eye.

KAPOW... the shotgun bellowed as Michelle's delicate finger slapped the stiff trigger. Seconds later the crimson stained bushytail thumped to the forest floor.

Instantaneously, my lower jaw dropped in amazement as I realized she had truly killed her first animal, ever. Filled with awe I turned to absorb her reaction, but her tear drenched countenance reflected an unsuspected outcome.

At this point, Michelle's emotional state was that of complete misery. "I killed that poor squirrel, I killed it," she cried. Consequently, a hard and brutal feeling overcame me, as I knew I had made an enormous mistake by pressuring her to engage in the sport of hunting.

Promptly, I reassured her that the kill was quick, clean and justified. I explained that her action was an important part of conservation and emphasized that squirrels are excellent eating. In minutes she was convinced that her ordeal was indeed an admirable one in the eyes of a hunter. By noon she was skillfully harvesting more squirrels and enjoying it.

I succeeded in bringing the joy of hunting to an important person. Today, hunting provides Michelle and me with a special fall activity. It allows us to spend time together in the outdoors where we can enjoy its beauty, excitement, and tranquility.

Also, I now have a legitimate excuse to buy more sporting goods. Try this with your loved one. It may work.

DNR proposes wetland protection rule

MADISON, WI-- A new rule to improve wetlands protection in Wisconsin will be the subject of six informational sessions scheduled by the Department of Natural Resources in September in Madison, Waukesha, Green Bay, Wisconsin Rapids, Spooner and Hudson (St. Croix County).

The Natural Resources Board, at its August meeting, approved holding these informal sessions before December public hearings on the issue "so citizens have time to learn about the proposed rule and give the DNR feedback and suggestions on it," said Pat Trochell, wetland ecologist for the Department's Bureau of Water Resources Management.

The proposed rule (NR 103) would establish water quality standards for wetlands. Proposed wetlands activities, such as dredging or filling, would need to meet the standards and some other requirements in order to be approved.

"The new rule would help the state curb wetlands losses, but would not prohibit all dredging, fills or other wetland uses," Trochell said.

Wisconsin has lost half of its original pre-settlement wetlands acreage. The rate of wetlands loss has more than doubled in the past twenty years in southeastern Wisconsin, commented Trochell.

Activities that would need to comply with standards established in the rule include physical alterations of waterways, including grading or construction of dams, ponds or commercial cranberry-growing beds; residential and commercial building construction; road and highway construction; federal dam relicensing; sewer extension approvals; landfill siting; discharge of treated waste water into wetlands and some fish and wildlife management projects.

According to Trochell, applicants proposing activities that would significantly harm wetlands and for which alternatives exist could be denied permits. The rule would have less impact on agricultural uses of wetlands, which already are discouraged under federal efforts such as Swampbuster and the Conservation Reserve Program.

Establishing wetlands standards would enable the Department of Natural Resources to accurately evaluate the ecological impact of dredging, fills and other activities on wetlands, Trochell said. Wisconsin has lacked these standards, impairing the Department's ability to protect the state's remaining 5.3 million acres of swamps, marshes, bogs and fens.

With uniform standards in place, the Department would be better able to issue or deny "certifications" for wetlands activities regulated under Section 404 of the Clean Water Act by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The DNR would be better equipped to consistently review permit applications for wetlands activities than the Corps, said Trochell. In addition, DNR staff are decentralized, more

Water Commission approves funding

MADISON, WI-- The Wisconsin Waterways Commission has approved $357,400 in matching funds for state recreational boating facilities. The funding was approved at the commission's Sept. 14 meeting, and will be used for eight projects statewide.

The following projects received funding from the commission: Town of Farmington (sponsor); Upgrade Taylor Lake access site (project); $2,500 (amount) -- Village of Pepin; Breakwater at Pepin Harbor; $15,000 -- Town of Long Lake; Toilet at Long Lake access site; $1,000 -- City of Beloit; Expand Riverway Improvement Project to include riverwalk along the Rock River with paved path, benches and water fountains; $100,000 -- Town of Port Wing; parking lot at Lake Park; Lake Superior; $19,125 -- City of Sheboygan; Increase funding for feasibility study to address disposition of wrecks located earlier in the study.

Previously this year the Wisconsin Waterways Commission had approved $670,000 for another 23 projects located throughout the state. The recreational boating facilities matching grant program is funded by a formula transfer of excise taxes on motor fuels used for marine purposes.

The next meeting of the commission will be held in early February of 1991. Units of government interested in applying for funds to develop access sites or harbors of refuge should have completed applications turned in to DNR district community services specialists before January 10, 1991.

UWSP professor researches sawmills

Two forestry professors from UWSP and UW-Madison are embarking on a joint two-year study of sawmills

Jan Harms of UWSP and Jeffery Stier of UW-Madison will be joined by conducting a survey of about 500 Wisconsin sawmill operators. They will begin with a written questionnaire, then follow up with selected on-site visits.

According to Harms, "The project should improve the interface of the forest product industry."

The first year of the project is funded through a $21,000 UW Consortium grant. The professors will apply for a $19,000 funding renewal for the second phase of the study.

The research fits very nicely with UWSP's new minor in wood utilization and marketing and the program's distinguished professorship, Harms says.

One of the reasons for undertaking the survey, according to the forester, is to more accurately

Watched walleye lakes will remain open

Hook-and-line fishing for walleyes on the 41 lakes designated by the Department of Natural Resources to be watched after the spring spearfishing will remain open during the remainder of the 1990-91 fishing season, DNR Secretary C.D. "Buzz" Besadny announced today.

"We have analyzed all available fish population data and summer creel surveys and the 41 lakes in question earlier this year will remain open," Besadny said. "From the information we have, the lakes will be able to continue with their current bag limits of three fish per day through the end of ice fishing."

Earlier data examined prior to the start of the open fishing season showed that 41 lakes had the potential of being harvested beyond their capacity based on spearing harvest declarations and anticipated hook-and-line fishing pressure. Bag limits for hook-and-line angling were reduced to three fish per day, but it was thought that the season might have to be shortened to keep the lakes within their respective safe harvest levels.

"An analysis of the spearing harvest data coordinated with hook-and-line harvests shows the total harvest is staying within safe limits," Besadny added. "This again is good news for Wisconsin's fishing public."

The lakes originally named to be watched that now will remain open include:

Ashland County, English and Gordon lakes; Bayfield County, Bony, Diamond, Jackson, Owen, Long, Middle Eau Claire, Namekagon, Pike Lake Chain and Upper Eau Claire lakes; Douglas County, Amnicon, Minnesuing, Nebagamon, Lower Eau Claire and Upper St. Croix lakes;

Forest County, Butternut, Metonga and Franklin lakes; Iron County, Pine and Trude lakes and Turtle Flambeau Flowage; Oneida County, Clear, Crescent, Pelican and Two Sisters lakes and Willow Flowage; Price County, Pike and Round lakes;

Sawyer County, Nelson lake; and Vilas County, Ballard, Big Arbor Vitae, Big Muskellunge, Big Sand, Harris, Kentuck, Laura, Little St. Germain, Long, Trout, and White Sand lakes.

The shared fishery on lakes in the ceded territory between spearfishing and hook-and-line angling has occurred since 1985.

This sharing has necessitated changes in fishing regulations on a lake-by-lake basis. Regulations are continuing to be refined.

"Department fisheries staff will continue to monitor hook-and-line fishing on selected lakes and the resulting data will be used for any needed adjustments in fishing regulations during this and future seasons," Besadny said. "Fisheries management is a year-round function and if there appears to be a potential to harm any lake's fish population, regulations changes will be made."

Treehaven to hold weekend study

"Mushrooms and Nonflowering plants," a weekend study course open to the public for personal enrichment or college credit, will be offered Oct. 5-7 at Treehaven Field Station near Tomahawk.

Participants will study the natural history and ecology of mushrooms, mosses, lichens and liverworts during indoor and outdoor sessions led by staff members of UWSP, which operates the station.

Food, lodging, and senior rates are available. Commuters are welcome.

For information, or to register, write to Treehaven at 2540 Pickerel Rd., Tomahawk, WI 54487, or phone (715) 453-4106.

Autumn colors explained

Xanthophyll, carotene, anthocyanin and photosynthesis; put all those multi-syllabic words together and what have you got? Fall. Of course!

Actually, DNR North Central District Entomologist, Bill Kearby, puts it, "The change of the trees to their fall colors is more complicated to explain than that. When the day length shortens and night temperatures begin to drop 40 degrees and below, the process that makes a tree appear green (photosynthesis) decreases. In its place, pigments that are always present in tree leaves depending on the species, show their flashy fall colors."

Kearby says, "Aspens, birch, and elms display yellow pigment (xanthophyll) or orange-yellow colors (carotene) during fall. On the other hand, maples, especially red maple and scarlet oak can become fiery red (anthocyanin) as a result of the pigmentation in their leaves."

Kearby speculates on what many of us have already observed, that some trees seem to have changed earlier this year than the season would seem to indicate. Kearby says, "Years of stress on trees seems to be a major factor this year. We had a wet spring with frost that, in some places, was experienced in May and June. If you combine that with heavy rains throughout the summer and with cool nights, it's not surprising that fall colors appear earlier this year."

"Of course," says Kearby, "Fall colors can even extend to trees we usually consider resistant to seasonal changes. Such evergreens as white pine, red pine, and scotch pine will display a noticeable yellowing of their needles, and as part of their normal growth cycle, will drop the innermost needles," he said.

As for the outlook for the fall color spectacular this season, Kearby says, "Much depends on mother nature. If we continue to have cool nights and sunny warm days, color ama this year may be beautiful. But heavy rains and windy conditions could change all that in a hurry. The next week or two should see the peak of our fall color season." So, get out and enjoy!

Professor wins award

Randy Champeau, an environmental education professor at UWSP, is the 1990 winner of the Facilitator of the Year Award given by the state's Project Learning Tree.

He was cited for his role in getting Project Learning Tree re-established in Wisconsin and in promoting its use in pre-service and in-service teacher education at UWSP.

Champeau, an alumnus of UWSP who returned to the faculty in 1984 with a Ph.D. from Michigan State University, is chair of the Wisconsin Association for Environmental Education.

This week, he received a second honor as part of a small group of experts chosen by Project Learning Tree to serve the international organization as a reviewer of the curriculum in environmental education that it has developed for secondary schools.

familiar with local wetlands and more conveniently located to efficiently review and process wetland permit applications.

"Permit reviews, field investigations and final decisions on wetlands permit applications could be made more quickly, which would reduce waiting time for applicants," Trochlell said.

Standards also would improve the state's ability to review proposed activities on wetlands under five acres and isolated wetlands not associated with navigable waters.

At the informational sessions, DNR staff will give a brief status report on Wisconsin wetlands, describe the proposed rule and answer questions from the public about the issue. Sessions will be informal.

The rule may be changed based on citizen comments the DNR receives at the informational sessions. The revised rule would be present for further comment at formal public hearings to be held December 11 in Madison, December 12 in Waukesha and December 14 in Wausau. At the hearings, citizens may file oral or written comments on the rule, but won't have the opportunity to discuss the rule with DNR staff. Citizen comments filed at the hearings will become part of the formal hearing record.

A final rule will need approval from the Natural Resources Board and the Legislature before taking effect.

ly assess the potential for growth in the wood products industry. Governor Thompson has targeted the field as a major economic development opportunity for northern Wisconsin.

The industry, which historically has expended little money or time on research, is composed of many small, independent mills and a few major corporations. Through the survey, the professors hope to better characterize the nature of the firms, determine the products and levels of production and identify markets and distribution outlets. The information will be shared with landowners and the DNR, to use in creating forest management plans, with the Department of Development and with state government, as well as with the private business sector.

Harms came to UW-SP in 1988 following 14 years in the forest products industry, where he was involved in management and planning for a major pulp and paper company.

Homecoming 1990 "Games Pointers Play"

by Mary Kaye Smith
Features Editor

It's Homecoming time again! This year's week titled "Games Pointers Play" promises to be one of the best ever. Show your Pointer spirit and gear-up for a jam-packed week of activity.

Homecoming is sponsored by the University Activities Board (UAB). This year there will be 22 organizations participating including members of the residence halls, local fraternities and sororities, as well as several other clubs on campus. Only 15 of the groups, however, will be competing in all six events which comprise the Homecoming competition.

Mike Moore, Homecoming coordinator 1990 hopes for a large turnout at the week's events. "This year we tried to get as many different organizations involved as we could. We want to get off-campus and non-traditional students involved more than ever before."

The week kicks off with the small games competition Tuesday Oct. 9. Each group will participate in two of three games, which include Win, Lose or Draw, Twister and College Madhouse, to receive the first points to apply to their overall score.

Win, Lose or Draw, which is based on its t.v. counterpart, will be held at 11 a.m., noon and 1 p.m. in the Encore Room of the University Center. Twister, based on the game of the same name, will take place at 6:30 p.m. in the Wisconsin Room. College Madhouse, which is also based on the like t.v. show, will be held at 8 p.m. in the Encore Room.

The other highlight of the day will be the preliminary voting in the election for Homecoming King and Queen from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the University Center Concourse. The outcome of this election will not influence the competitor's final score. (See side box for candidates and the organizations that they are associated with).

Wednesday's events begin with the University Carnival. The carnival, which contributes points to the competition, will consist of displays and games designed by the organizations. Each attraction will be judged on criteria such as originality, the effective use of space and the ability to attract a crowd. It will be held in the Berg Gymnasium from 4 to 7 p.m. Admission is 25 cents.

The day will be capped off with the third scored event of the week, Talent Night. Each organization is required to perform an on stage act. Each act must be imaginative and include from 6 to 15 members. Talent Night will be held at 8 p.m. in the Program Banquet Room.

Thursday will be packed with opportunities to show Homecoming spirit. Students will again have the chance to cast their votes in the royalty elections from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. in the University Center Concourse.

Pointers will have the opportunity to show their support for the football team at the "Yell Like Hell" pep assembly. Each group will perform a cheer that will be judged on volume, originality, spirit and clarity. The event will be held at 5:30 p.m. on Colman field.

Right after the event, the winners of the royalty competition will be announced. There will also be a new addition to the event, a fireworks display which will begin at 7:45 p.m. According to Mike Moore the display was added to help draw more people to "Yell Like Hell" and will consist mostly of purple and gold.

Performances by comedian Craig Higgins and the UWSP Theatre Department (see story on "Bus Stop") will round out the evening. Craig Higgins, according to his biography, is a comic from Orville, Ohio who began his career after graduating from a comedy writing class at the University of Ohio. He is described as having "biting cynicism wrapped in child-like innocence." Check him out 8:30 p.m. in the Encore Room.

Friday's events will begin with the fifth scored event of the competition, the Scavenger Hunt. This event will differ from the previous year's hunts as it will be based more heavily on off-the-wall activities than on trivia questions. It will be held in the Wisconsin Room from 3-7 p.m.

One of the main events of the Homecoming week, performances by Meatloaf and opening act Mile One will top off the evening. The show, to be held in the Quandt Gymnasium, will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $9 for students and $11 for the public.

Now for the grand finale, Saturday! If there is a day not to with a UWSP Alumni Association, this is it. The day kicks off tion sponsored treat of coffee and rolls at 9:30 a.m. in the Berg Gym lobby. Next is "The Great Dog Chase," a one-mile fun run organized according to age categories, at 9:45. Participants are encouraged to wear costumes.

The final event to contribute a score to the Homecoming competition, the parade, will begin at 10 a.m. on the corner of Maria Drive and Illinois Avenue. It will feature floats decorated by participating organizations as well as a performance by the Alumni Band.

Following the parade, the University Center's Wooden Spoon will be open to the public for Homecoming lunch. Brat Fest, sponsored by Sigma Tau Gamma, will provide hungry students with brats, refreshments and music from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The highlight of the week, the game between the Pointers and the Oshkosh Titans, will begin at 1 p.m. at Goerke field.

Be sure to come and show your support for the team.

Next on the alumni agenda will be the Fifth Quarter Reception in the LaFollette Lounge at 4:30 p.m. Then the alumni dinner and Hall of Fame induction ceremonies at 6 p.m. in the Program Banquet Room. Reservations and further information is available through the UWSP Alumni Office, 212 Old Main (715)346-3811.

This year's inductees include Dan Wilcox of Charlotte, N.C., Becky Seevers of River Falls, Mary Schultz of Arlington Heights, Ill., Phil Rodriguez of Chicago, Gary Muchow of Iowa City and Larry Ironside of Wisconsin Rapids.

The evening will conclude with the Cotillion Ball and a performance of "Bus Stop." The ball will feature the Homecoming King and Queen as well as a new feature, a D.J. It will be held in the Encore Room from 8 to 11 p.m.

Homecoming is here, let the games begin!

Theatre Department to present "Bus Stop"

The largest-ever class of new students has enrolled in the theatre and dance department at UWSP, and one of them will play a leading role in the upcoming production of "Bus Stop," which opens at 8 p.m., Friday, Oct. 5.

Tricia Theiler, a freshman from Tomahawk, will portray Cherie, a nightclub singer, the role made famous by Marilyn Monroe in the film adaption. Theiler is one of 55 freshman and transfer students who entered the university this fall. Ordinarily, the count is about 35, says Arthur Hopper, department chairman and director of "Bus Stop."

The production will run at 8 p.m. on Oct. 6 and 11 through 13 and at 7 p.m. on Oct. 7 in the Jenkins Theatre of the Fine Arts and Communication box office.

"Bus Stop," William Inge's comedy about several likeable characters stranded in a roadside diner during a snowstorm, is touching, sentimental and entertaining, according to the director.

Hopper says he is pleased with the growing numbers of students entering theatre and dance program, but he is even more enthused about their potential. He predicts audiences will be entertained by the new crop of talented actors on the main stage this season.

Theiler is one of those new faces—as a director, Hopper describes her as "vivacious and sparkling." And he describes junior Patrick Placzkowski of Shawano, who will play Bo, the cowboy, as possessing "charisma."

Another actor making his university debut in "Bus Stop" will be Nicholas Price, a sophomore from Stevens Point, who will play Will, the sheriff.

The director also has cast several juniors who are "coming up," as Hopper describes their progression into major roles. The most experienced are John Voight of Antigo, who will play Dr. Lyman, the unemployed and drunken professor; Tonya Beckman of West Springfield, Mass., who will portray Elma, a high school girl who works at the diner; and AmyLiz Schaub of Ripon as Grace, owner of the diner.

Recently, Beckman participated in the Folger Shakespeare Theatre's Summer Acting Conservatory, a professional training company in Washington, D.C. Other members of the cast are Daniel Katula of Pewaukee, as Carl, the bus driver; and M. Scott Taulman of Sun Prairie, as Virgil, Bo's mentor and friend.

The realistic set and costumes were designed by Steven Sherwin and Debra Lotsof, members of the theatre faculty. The stage manager is Carmen Dunn, 1328 Northpoint Drive, Stevens Point, and the lighting is by Patricia Mooney of Rhinelander, a dance major who has developed an interest in lighting design.

Recital to be held

Christopher Wills of Woodruff, a senior music education major, will perform in a percussion recital at 8 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 4 at UWSP.

The performance in Michelson Hall, Fine Arts Center, is open to the public without charge. Wills will be assisted by several other music students.

The program will include "Two Mexican Dances" by Gordon Stout, "Just Seven for Drum" by Herbert Brun, William Kraft's "English Suite," John Cage's "Composed Improvisation for Solo Snare," and Alan Hovhaness' "Fantasy on Japanese Wood Prints," arranged by Wills.

When it is said that the frame makes the picture, the truth may also be that it is his shoes that make the man.

Unfortunately, the issue of footwear has been neglected by many men whose only thoughts of wearing anything on their feet are grubby tennis shoes and discolored dockers.

How many times have you seen the supposedly well-dressed men on campus, looking like a million dollars only to be ruined by his mismatched footwear which quickly dispel the image of macho perfection. Well, take heart because the world of men's footwear has since expanded from the platform shoes of the 1960's to the sleek, finely crafted Italian shoes of the 1990's. The choices are thus mind-boggling as men are able to choose from many styles to suit their individual personality and life-style just as the women of today can.

With the semester just into its second month and winter gradually creeping in, men on campus are probably in the process of contemplating the type of shoes that would be the best (and most durable) investment for a season of blistering, cold weather and the year and the year-end festivities. The best bet (besides the reliable but predictable gym shoes) would probably be a pair that would match the staple clothing of men in winter.

With warmer and more textured apparel, footwear for men should also be balanced off with functional yet stylish shoes that could take him anywhere from class, to work and ultimately to parties.

Shoes that have thicker soles would be obvious choices as they are extremely suitable for the harsh winter here. Suede and leather lace up shoes (protected by Scotchguard) are for those who want a more classic and perhaps a preppy approach to their dressing. These are quite affordable (ideal for the budget conscious) and are available in many different styles. They can be paired with just about anything from jeans and cords to wool slacks and even formal wear.

For the fashion conscious, opt for monk strap suede and oil tanned leather low-cut boots for a versatile 'high' casual look. Give the old sneakers, moccasins and dockers a miss this fall/winter season.

Selecting the right color for footwear is also essential. Black is passe when compared to the rich tones of camel, tobacco, taupe, tan dark brown, chestnut, burgundy and a gamut of autumnal shades to complement the wardrobe. Finally, do not overlook socks which could enhance the appearance of shoes.

Invest in a few thick, colored and wollen/acrylic pairs besides the staple white and you are all ready to put your best foot forward for the new academic year!

University Film Society to show comedy

The University Film Society announced today that the October 6th showing will be Preston Sturges' comedy The Miracle of Morgan's Creek.

Preston Sturges film comedies are currently enjoying a worldwide revival and the witty dialogue and screwball characters who inhabit this film reveals why this 1943 film is being widely shown today.

The biggest box office success of the year in which it was released, The Miracle of Morgan's Creek is fresh, sassy, ironic, and a rebuttal to the kinds of films that traditional Hollywood was fond of producing.

The film stars Betty Hutton as the "patriotic" teenager who feels it is her duty to show the Armed services a good time on their final night in town. Eddie Bracken plays her hapless and bumbling boyfriend. William Demarest (Uncle Charlie of My Three Sons fame) plays Hutton's frustrated father and Diana Lynn her wisecracking and worldly wise sister.

The University Film Society meets on the first Saturday of each month at 7:30 in Room 333 of the Communication Building on the UWSP campus. There is no admission and new members are encouraged to attend.

For more information contact the UWSP Division of Communication, at 346-3409.

Career Services sponsors workshops

by Laura Jeffris
Contributor

Are you about to graduate and begin looking for just the right job? The Career Services Office will be sponsoring free workshops to introduce students to what it has to offer.

Career Services provides a variety of resources. They have videos with information about resume writing, cover letters, and preparing for interviews. An up-to-date library is located in the office for students.

The library contains literature sent in from corporations about their business, career related books, phone books from different cities and information on graduate schools and other professional schools.

The office also provides a "Dial-a-job" telephone service wherein up to thirty phone calls may be placed to employers and graduate schools for a $20.00 charge. They regularly post job openings that have been sent to UWSP.

Students can sign up for on campus interviews, find information on federal and state civil service opportunities and receive pre-graduation job experience.

Future workshops are planned for October 19, 30 and November 15 and 30 from 11:00 to noon. They are also planned for November 15 and 30 from 3:00 to 4:00 p.m. in Old Main, Room 134.

For more information, call the office at 346-3136/3226.

Amnesty International : people helping people

by Jimmy Katz
Contributor

"Nineteen letters. I don't think we've ever had this many in one night," said Brian Koller, President of Amnesty International. Last Thursday A.I. had its first organizational meeting and had a fantastic turnout. The nineteen letters were written to a General in the Philippines asking for the release of three prisoners.

Amnesty International is a movement of people all around the world dedicated to ensuring the protection of human rights. They bring to public attention the duty of supporting and defending human rights.

Direct actions by A.I. include writing letters to governments on behalf of people whose rights have been violated. They also organize public meetings, collect signatures for petitions and stage public events.

The efforts have paid off. Last year about 250 prisoners of conscience (persons detained because of their religion, beliefs, color, etc.) adopted by groups in the US were released.

Ten well-written letters from ten chapters to a President or Minister of Justice can make a difference. Since it began in 1961, Amnesty International has helped over 250,000 prisoners all over the world.

The first place that may come to mind when thinking about human rights being abused might be South Africa, China, or Eastern block countries. Actually, people are being tortured or imprisoned because of their language, beliefs, sex, color, or religion all over the world.

A.I. meets every Thursday at 6:30 in room 101 E off the Lafolette Lounge in the UC. Anyone interested is welcome to attend.

Red Cross to hold lecture

A state official of the American Red Cross will be at UWSP on Oct. 10 to present a program on "The Healthy American and the Blood Supply."

Dr. Gary Becker of Madison will discuss effects of lifestyle on the blood supply and the quality of donated blood. His presentation will begin at 10 a.m. in the Wright Lounge of the University Center. The public is invited to attend.

Jerry Lineberger, UWSP's Red Cross Bloodmobile coordinator, said the program precedes by one week a visit of the Bloodmobile to the campus.

Donors are invited to participate in that collection from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 16 and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Oct. 17 and 18.

Young Democrats hold first meeting

by Greg Bayer
Contributor

The UWSP Young Democrats held their first meeting of the 1990 school year on Monday, Oct. 1 in the Collins Classroom Center.

"Our goal is to promote the Democratic philosophy on this campus. We'd like to register UWSP students to vote as well as to gain support for various campaigns, such as Tom Loftus for Governor," explained Jim Brey, President of UWSP Young Democrats.

According to Brey, the group hopes to bring politicians to the UWSP campus to speak to students, hold debates with university Republicans and assist students in making political decisions involving issues such as health care, economics, and the environment.

In 1953 YDW was founded by a group of politically inclined young people here in Stevens Point. Their purpose, according to YDW literature, was "to encourage young people throughout Wisconsin to actively participate in the Democratic party...in local state, national, and international politics."

Membership with the UWSP Young Democrats requires a $2 fee for YDW registration, and a $1 fee payable to the local affiliate.

Those interested in the group can attend the next meeting on Monday, Oct. 8 in room 114 of the Collins Classroom Center.

Football team suffers first loss, 21-7

The UWSP Football team made major mistakes on two fourth quarter punt plays en route to its first loss of the season as the Pointers fell to UW-LaCrosse, 21-7, last Saturday at Goerke Park.

The Pointers are now 1-1 in the Wisconsin State University Conference and 3-1 overall.

UWSP and La Crosse battled to a 7-7 tie through the first three periods, but early in the fourth quarter, La Crosse took a Pointer punt at its own 24 yard line and returned it 76 yards to take a 14-7 lead.

Then, late in the game, the Pointers fumbled a La Crosse punt in their own end zone and the Eagles recovered it to seal the 21-7 final.

La Crosse got on the scoreboard first, capping off a six-play, 45-yard drive with a touchdown to take a 7-0 lead.

The Pointers quickly countered, and on the next drive, drove 74 yards on 11 plays. Robert Reed capped off the drive with a one-yard touchdown run. Dave Schneider added the extra-point to tie the score at seven.

Pointer coach John Miech said that with the exception of the two mistakes on the punts, his team played well.

"After reviewing the films, I was happy with the way a majority of our team played," said Miech. "We just had a couple of serious breakdowns on our punt and punt return teams and it cost us the game."

The Pointers, who have been traditionally a passing team, managed only 35 yards through the air. They did rush for 129 yards for a total offense of 164 yards.

Meanwhile, the Angry Dog defense continued to lead the WSUC in rushing and total defense, limiting La Crosse to only 102 yards on the ground and 270 total yards.

The UWSP football team's Angry Dog Defense pursued the La Crosse quarterback in last Saturday's game at Goerke Field. The Pointers gave up two fourth quarter touchdowns as they suffered their first loss of the season, 21-7.

Pointer men second, women third in Oshkosh cross country invitational

OSHKOSH--The UWSP Men's Cross Country team finished second in the Athletics North Invitational Saturday, while the Pointer women finished third.

UW-Oshkosh won both races, taking seven of the top 12 places in the men's competition and all of the top five places in the women's race.

Oshkosh totaled 27 points in the men's race, followed by UWSP with 55. Michigan Tech third with 95 points, followed by RETC with 112. Northern

STRIKING OUT

By Timothy A. Bishop

Don Majkowski may have finally regained his magic after skipping the entire preseason as he led the Green Bay Packers to a come-from-behind 24-21 victory over the Detroit Lions last Sundays.

Majkowski completed 28 of 46 passes for 289 yards and NO interceptions while rushing for 88 yards to give the Packers the win.

But, it was not something that was a sure win. Majkowski completed two touchdown passes in the fourth quarter to overcome a 21-10 deficit, and then had watch as Eddie Murray missed his fourth field goal attempt on the day as time ran out.

Now the Packers have to gear up for their biggest rival, the Chicago Bears, who suffered their first loss of the season Sunday at the hands of the undefeated Los Angeles Raiders. The game will have national attention as CBS television will be highlighting the game, which starts at 3 p.m.

For my weekly gripe about the National Football League: Why can't NFL officials eat their pride and admit it when they make a mistake? So often you see a referee blow a call (especially with the "grasp-and-control" rule) as a result a big play is turned into a big loss. In other levels of football, the officials admit they make a mistake and let the rules attempt to right the errors with a rule called an inadvertent whistle. But, when is the last time you saw it called in the pros?

Looking on to Major League Baseball, the Milwaukee Brewers definitely went out with a wimper. A late season slide gave the Brewers their worst season record since 1975. And the Brewer games have lacked any excitement. The only times that the fans were even heard from on Sunday was when the Packer score was announced. But at least they did win their last two games.

Elsewhere the Major League season is over, and starting tonight is the play-offs, when we get to see the best of the best. In the National League Championship series, the Eastern Division, champion Pittsburgh Pirates travel to meet the Western Division champion Reds.

Meanwhile, the American League Championship Series features the Boston Red Sox, who staved off a late season slump to edge out Toronto for the Eastern Division title, meet defending World Series Champion Oakland. That match up begins Saturday in Boston.

Women's soccer team splits pair, now 5-3-1

By Kris Kasinski
Contributor

After defeating UW-Oshkosh 8-0 last Wednesday at home and suffering a 2-0 loss to UW-Green Bay in Green Bay on Saturday, the UWSP Women's soccer team now holds a 5-3-1 record.

The Pointers are showing impressive statistics in their first nine games. They have scored 32 goals and have given up only 13. The scoring and assists are coming from a variety of players, which shows the strength of the team.

In the victory over Oshkosh, the Pointers were led by freshmen Jenny Bradley with two goals and 3 assists and senior Heather Gottschalk with a goal and two assists.

"Jenny and Heather played extremely well today," said Head Coach Sheila Miech.

Three other Pointers added to the scoring attack for UWSP. Suzi Lindauer and Lynn Olson each scored two goals while Diana Huebschen added one. Assists were credited to Kim Luenenberg (2), Lidauer and Olson. Point had 42 shots on goal while Oshkosh was held to just two.

Point ruggers fall to Appleton, now 1-2

The Point Black and Blood traveled last Saturday to play the Appletoncity side club. Point took a 1-1 record into the game, after losing to conference leader Northern Michigan. The ruggers now stand a 1-2 after losing to Appleton.

Point went into the game against a bigger and more experienced Appleton club. The scrum pulled together to once again control the opposing scrum. The backs of the Black and Blood played a much improved tough nosed game tallying the only Point score by outside center Sam Eddy. This score tied the match as the extra point conversion was missed. At the end of regulation play the score stood at 4-4. The sudden death overtime is played with seven men on each side until there is a score. Point lost in the second half of the sudden death. "We tied an excellent team who taught us a lot in this match," said coach Mike Williams.

The Point B-side came up with another victory beating Appleton 4-0. The extra point was missed by rookie kicker Matt Brown.

The Black and Blood take on the Milwaukee Black and Blue's this Saturday in the intramural field at 1 p.m.

Pointer coach Pete Kasson said that Titus, List and the rest of his tem had an excellent weekend on the Eau Claire Course.

"Titus had his best two-day tournament ever," said Kasson. "Also, List continued his steady play while Summers had his best round of the fall. Janko broke 80 in his first tournament."

The final 54 holes of the WSUC competition and the NAIA District IV tournament will be played next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday on The Springs Golf Club in Spring Green.

In college football, the Pointers suffered their first defeat of the season as they continue to suffer the loss of all-American Kirk Baumgartner. UWSP gave up two fourth-quarter touchdowns as they fell to UW-La Crosse. Things don't get any easier this week as the Pointer travel to Wisconsin State University Conference leader UW-Whitewater. Then, the following Saturday, the Pointers return home to meet UW-Oshkosh in the homecoming game.

In major college football, the Notre Dame fighting Irish held on to the number one ranking in everyone's poll, rolling over Purdue University, 37-11.

Brigham Young University saw its hopes for an undefeated season submerged by the Oregon Ducks. Oregon defeated number four BYU, 32-16. The only other ranked team to fall by the wayside was Arizona, who lost to the California Golden Bears.

In auto racing, Mark Martin drove his Ford Thunderbird to victory lane in the Holly Farms 400 in North Wilkesboro, N.C. to hold on to a narrow 16-point lead over Sunday's second place finisher Dale Earnhart in the $1 million Winston Cup points race with only four races remaining.

Volleyball team defeats Lawrence

APPLETON--The UWSP Women's Volleyball team got on the winning track last Friday as the Pointers defeated Lawrence University, 15-12, 5-15, 15-11.

Last Tuesday, the Pointers fell to Carthage College 4-15, 4-15 and to UW-Oshkosh, 11-15, 3-15 in Oshkosh. All three of the matches were non-Wisconsin Women's intercollegiate Athletic Association events.

"Considering we had three players out due to sprained ankles," said Pointer coach Sharon Stellwagon, "we played a good match against both teams. Helling had very good all-around play."

Laurie Helling led the Pointers with six service points, while Jessie Datka made 23 of 26 hits with five kills. Jacques Fruke had seven solo blocks and five assists.

Things went much better on Friday for UWSP, as the Pointers knocked off Lawrence.

Fruke led Point with 12 service points including one ace, and three solo blocks and six assists. Dawnette Updyke added nine kills, while Datka had three solo blocks and seven assists.

The Pointers return to action Saturday when they travel to the Eau Claire Invitational.

Miech said that the low passing numbers were a combination of a conservative offense and a bad day by his quarterback.

"The situation was, we were running the ball effectively," said Miech, "and when we did put the ball up, we weren't that confident that our quarterback was seeing the same things we were seeing.

"We threw an interception in a crucial situation and almost threw a couple more in other crucial situations, so we were real leary of throwing the ball.

"Also, we were playing very conservatively. In the stretch run we were still in the game and we could have won the game."

Roger Hauri completed five of 12 pass attempts for the Pointers for 35 yards, but he did have two intercepted. Rip Flip-po, who replaced Hauri midway through the fourth quarter, did not complete any of his four attempts.

Rick Skaar had two receptions for 18 yards for UWSP, while Chris Moore carried the ball 21 times for 77 yards.

Miech said that the loss puts a lot of pressure on his team going into this weekend's game in Menomonie against UW-Stout.

"What we have done it put a lot of pressure on ourselves," said Miech. "We will have to win every game from here on out if we are to win the WSUC championship. We have had a couple of good days of practice and we are looking to get back on the winning track against Stout."

Stout narrowly defeated UW-Superior last weekend, 22-20, but Miech said that how a team fares against the last-place Yellow Jackets is not a measure of how good a team is.

"It used to be that you measured what kind of year you are having by how badly you beat Superior," said Miech. "However, that is no longer true. Superior has an up-and-coming team that can play."

Saturday's game, which is Stout's homecoming, begins at 2 p.m.

On Saturday the Pointers traveled to Green Bay and suffered their third loss of the season 2-0 to UW-GB.

The Pointers played a very defensive first half allowing UW-GB Bay to take control very early. Both of Green Bay's goals came in the first half.

"It took us until the second half to group and get some attack going. All of our shots on goal came in the second half. We just ran out of time when we finally got things going. A lack of intensity early hurt us," said Miech.

Miech also credited goalkeeper Lisa Mortensen with an excellent game, recording 17 saves.

Pointer Women

Suzu Jandarin led the Pointer women's team, finishing 10th after Oshkosh swept the top seven positions (only the top five runners count in the team scores).

Other finishers for the UWSP women were Aimee Knitter (12th), Marnie Sullivan (18th), Tina Jarr (26th), Tami Langton (30th), Nancy Kortenkamp (35th), Debbie Hartz (38th) and Pam Prohaska (41st).

Pointer women's coach Len Hill said that Oshkosh dominated the meet.

"It is easy to see why Oshkosh is ranked number one in the NCAA Division III poll," said Hill. They ran some tremendous times for this early in the season.

"As a team, we have come a long way, however we still have a lot of work to do and a long way to go before the end of the season."

The Pointer women travel to Minneapolis this weekend to run in the University of Minnesota Invitational on Saturday.

Because it does. Smart investors know that your future depends on how well your retirement system performs. TIAA-CREF has been the premier retirement system for people in education and research for over 70 years. We have enabled over 200,000 people like you to enjoy a comfortable retirement. And over 1,000,000 more are now planning for the future with TIAA-CREF.

SMART MONEY LOOKS FOR SECURITY, GROWTH AND DIVERSITY FOR RETIREMENT SAVINGS.

Security—so the resources are there when it is time to retire. Growth—so you'll have enough income for the kind of retirement you want. And diversity—to help protect you against market volatility and to let you benefit from several types of investments.

THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT YOU GET WITH TIAA-CREF.

TIAA offers you the safety of a traditional annuity that guarantees your principal plus a specified rate of interest, and provides for additional growth through dividends. CREF's variable annuity offers opportunities for growth through four different investment accounts, each managed with the long-term perspective essential to sound retirement planning:

AT&T sponsors stock challenge

College students nationwide this fall will be testing their stock market investment skills as they compete to win the $25,000 top prize in the third annual AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge.

The AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge, managed by Wellesley, Mass., based Wall Street Games Inc., is a hands-on educational game that re-creates actual stock-market trading without actual financial risk to players.

The objective is to compile the most profitable stock portfolio by the end of the four-month competition. Students can draw information from any source available to them—newspapers, business journals, their professors or a "hot tip." By keeping abreast of the news, the students learn about various industries and business trends in America.

This year's competition, with more than $200,000 in cash and merchandise prizes, is expected to out draw the second AT&T

Collegiate Investment Challenge, which last fall attracted 15,000 student participants representing every state.

Students can call toll-free 1-800-545-1990 to register and receive competition rules and materials needed to participate. The registration fee is $49.95. Deadline for registering is Oct. 27. The AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge begins Nov. 1.

The top 10 collegiate finishers will receive cash scholarship awards. Each winner and his or her guest also will be flown to the Bahamas for a week's vacation.

The third annual event begins when the stock market opens for trading on the morning of Nov. 1.

Starting with a fictional $500,000 brokerage account and an official stock guide, students will buy and sell shares of stock via toll-free AT&T 800 service calls to "brokers" at Wall Street Games.

The trading simulates the real world because Wall Street Games uses a computerized stock quotation network that receives up-to-the-minute prices via satellite. All trading is done during actual stock market hours.

An instruction booklet for players explains such strategies as "buying on margin" and "selling short."

The competition ends when the stock market closes at 4 p.m. eastern time Feb. 28.

College professors also can play the AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge in a separate category. The registration fee for professors is $39.95. This year's top professor will win a trip for two to the Bahamas.

only can't work during the stayaways, but risk injury or death if they disregard them. People cannot work when American companies leave and they lose their jobs. The stayaways and sanctions do weaken the system, but at the expense of Blacks and the poor.

"Looking from an economic viewpoint, there is a tremendous infrastructure there," says Meyers, and he points out a good transportation system and abundant natural resources as reasons. He predicts a bright economic future for the country, which will gain world attention following open national elections three years from now.

However, Meyers believes that sanctions should not be totally lifted so that some reward should be given the De Klerk government's progress.

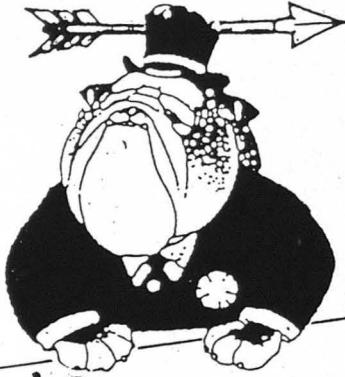

Meyers is optimistic that racial conflict can be overcome without catastrophic events. "Apartheid gradually is falling," states Meyers. "For example, the Separate Amenities Act was just scrapped, so all public facilities are integrated."

In addition, political parties such as the African National Congress and the Communist party are now allowed to exist.

Besides his teaching at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, Meyers also led a seminar in Soweto for Black business owners and received a grant from a major American company to assist a black business owner of an ethnic hair care products company in advancing his firm through improved marketing techniques.

Meyers also helped develop a marketing plan with the director of the Marvey Cohen Center, an institution for mentally and physically disabled children.

"You can change the government overnight," reasons Meyers, "but if the Blacks have no skills, do you see how everybody is hurt? If you have the Blacks being able to run businesses, teach quality classes, and provide for their own people, that's good."

Try Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics for yourself at our free 1 Hour "Mini" Lesson!

We'll show you how to increase your reading speed on the spot!

The Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course has helped over 1,000,000 people, including students from this area and UW-Stevens Point, learn how to read, study and learn more efficiently and effectively.

The Evelyn Wood program will teach you to read faster, improve your comprehension, develop better study skills, and increase your self-confidence ... which all translates to BETTER GRADES!

Whether you want to read faster ... or learn more ... or just want to have more FREE TIME ... Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics can help you!

Here's what some of our Evelyn Wood graduates have to say...

"My reading speed went from 353 words a minute to 4400 words a minute. It increased over 12 times. And even at that speed, my comprehension jumped 18%! Now I breeze through homework that used to bog me down. And I've got lots more time now. The note-taking skills and study techniques gave me the confidence to take on even tougher courses. I just wish I'd taken this course sooner."

John Huizenga — Randolph

"The classes were great. My reading speed nearly tripled to 1,287 words a minute, with very good comprehension. I'm doing much better on tests, and long homework assignments are a snap! Everyone should take the Evelyn Wood course!"

Pamela J. Boppel — Cedarburg

"Too much to read. Not enough time. Too much to study to be able to study thoroughly. I just didn't have the time ... But the Evelyn Wood course gave me the time. I read faster (by almost 6 times) with good comprehension. Even reading technical material goes faster. The note-taking methods, study skills, and planning and scheduling system made it all work together. Evelyn Wood is a "must take" course for those who want to succeed."
