"Mystery Man" gets nabbed

The man that UWSP students have come to know as the "Mystery Man" is being held without bond in the Marathon County Jail and is awaiting his Sept. 18 hearing.

The mystery man allegedly entered various resident halls and watched women sleep last year.

DuWayne Boushack, AKA. Mystery Man, is charged with first-degree sexual assault, second degree sexual assault, criminal trespassing and bail jumping in Wood County; criminal trespassing charges in Portage County; and burglary and criminal trespass in Marathon County.

Boushack was arrested after he had threatened to assault and sodomize a woman while she was reportedly walking on Sixth St., the night of April 20.

Boushack allegedly grabbed the woman and threw her behind some bushes where he yelled obscenities and attempted to sodomize her. The woman escaped by running into a tavern on Sixth St.

The incident occurred only a few hours after Boushack was released on a $500 bond for allegedly breaking into a woman's house April 15.

During the preliminary hearing, a Marshfield police detective testified that Boushack told her he had broken into dorm rooms and watched women sleep.

Between August 31 and September 4, 1990 nine UWSP residence halls reported a per-look similar. He said, "The first thing that caught my attention was the similarities in his (Boushack's) eyes."

Boushack's hearing is scheduled for Sept. 18 at the Marathon County Circuit Court. Boushack and his attorney, Paul Goetz, entered a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity.

Trisha Fischer, a former resident of Knutzen Hall was one of Boushack's first victims. She said that she will never forget that night or his face.

"The first thing that caught my attention was the similarities in his eyes."

Don Burling
Director of Protective Services

The Stevens Point police, along with an art student and members from UWSP protective services used information about the trespasser and made a composit sketch of what he might look like.

The Director of Protective Services, Don Burling believes the sketch and the real photo

Fischer said, "I thought the police and protective services handled it very well. Knowing he is locked up makes me feel more at ease." She also said that when she make the positive I.D. at the Stevens Point Police Station she knew right away it was the right guy. "It was the scariest feeling I've ever felt, yet, I felt great to be able to help end the dilemma," said Fischer.

Even though the situation is nearing its end Burling still warns students about further occurrences. He says "Don't keep Resident Hall doors propped open at night and always lock your room doors before going to sleep."

UWSP receives grant

AT&T is donating $350,000 worth of computing equipment to the University of Wisconsin, Stevens Point to provide more opportunities for science students.

UWSP was nominated for AT&T's competitive grant program specifically designed for college campuses.

Dan Croolet, director of academic computing and coordinator of the grant program said "AT&T's grant program is highly competitive, Point's collaborative Science laboratory had to submit a written proposal for the grant."

UWSP was granted the highest amount of money from AT&T in the UW system. The only other school was UW-Madison which is receiving a grant worth of $74,000.

Jo Ann Greene, director of

AT&T's Corporation University Equipment Donation Program, announced that UWSP is one of 44 colleges and universities across the country sharing in $18 million worth of computing equipment.

The grant will go toward the installation of about 30 personal computers in a special classroom in the Science Building for chemistry, biology, physics, astronomy, and paper science classes that will meet there. Data acquisition stations for connection to monitoring instruments along with networks and stations will also be installed.

"This is a real opportunity and a great contribution for science students, they can now have the equipment they've needed to get more involved," said Croolet.

Croolet expects all in the installations in the science building will be completed by second semester.

Sanders' efforts surprise students

by Amanda Scott
Contributor

On September 2, when new and old students were moving into the residence halls the students met with a surprise.

Chancellor Keith Sanders and Tammy Butts, President of Student Government Association were there to offer a helping hand.

Tammy Butts wants to get closer to the students. "I want the students to know that Student Government is not just a political organization. The students need to get more involved. If you have a problem, please tell us that's why we're here," said Butts.

Chancellor Keith Sanders is looking forward to Point's 1991-92 academic year.

"In my continuing effort to stay closer with the students, I will be holding a breakfast for students twice a month, to get to know them."

Sanders will also be spending one evening a semester staying overnight in one of the residence halls.

"I am delighted the students are back. It gets very lonely here in the summertime," said Sanders.

Last Friday, beginning at nine A.M., Newman University Parish, located on campus at the corner of 4th Ave. & Reserve St. held its annual back-to-school used-item sale.

In the last 4-years Newman has held the sale, many of the 500-550 Catholic student members have become actively involved. Parishioners, along with people in the Stevens Point community, donated the furniture, books, dishes, and other items to be sold.

While the staff served the 45 gallons of free ice cream and frozen yogurt outside, members volunteered their time to help with the sale inside. Everyone on campus was welcome to stop and chat, have a cold treat, or purchase something for a minimal fee.

Despite the low-level cost of the items, a couple of hundred dollars was raised for student programs. The sale was not meant to be a fund-raiser, since the amount raised was a small percentage of Newman's $150,000 budget. According to Father Mark, he, the staff, and the parishioners simply wanted to welcome UWSP students back to school and most importantly, to let the students know that Newman Parish is available.

The freshmen this year have the highest GPA out of all the past 97 years of Stevens Point freshmen. "I welcome this academic accommodation," said Sanders.

If you have any questions about the breakfast with the chancellor, or any other concerns you can contact the Student Government Association.

"We need more students involved," said Butts.

9000 pounds recycled over Labor Day

by Sarah L. Newton
Editor-in-Chief

If you're a student or faculty member at UWSP just take a look around and you'll see it. No, it's not an advertisement for another Pizza Hut, and no, it's not a drop/add slip, it's the concept and actualization of... RECYCLING! And to those who feel that being environmentally conscious is a waste of time and it's positive results a myth, Campus Recycling has some staggering facts to share.

In a recent three day period beginning the Saturday (August 31) that freshman students were allowed to move into the residence halls, over 9,000 pounds of recyclable corrugated cardboard was collected from UWSP's twelve halls. That may or may not seem like an overabundance of material, but when compared to last year's approximate 4200 pounds, the positive affect that recycling has had on the environment, landfills in specific, is very apparent.

Gerald Burling, Director of Purchasing, works in accordance with the Campus Recycling program and is very proud to see the progress students have made in awareness. "We have doubled figures from last year," states Burling, "the corrugated cardboard we collect gets bound into bails which average 850 pounds each. We're looking at close to 11 bails from Labor Day Weekend compared to five bails from the same weekend last year, and that's a substantial difference."

There are many other recyclable items collected on campus, including glass, plastic, aluminum and paper. Sharon Simonis, Physical Plant Business Manager, explains how each type of recyclable is processed. "A basement room in each building is set aside for the collection of recyclables; the actual collecting is done by either custodial or student staff. From there," she adds, "an LTE (limited term employee) takes everything to the Resource Recovery Center, where it is composted, bailed or bound. Many times glass and plastic comes to us co-mingled and must first be sorted for contamination purposes." The Resource Recovery Center is located on campus, across the Building. Sounds great, but the process is not free. Ah, the money factor, I knew we were missing something." In the olden days, before recycling, it would have cost the University approximately $1200.00 to dispose of the waste from one Labor Day Weekend, plus this waste would be transported to the landfill to sit and rot rather than be recycled. With the new mindset, methods, and programs, UWSP has greatly reduced these costs, financially and environmentally.

Truck rental for two days to haul the recyclables to the Resource Recovery Center totalled $350.00. Labor costs, i.e. payroll for LTE, Custodial, and student staff totalled $855.00 for the weekend. The nearly 11 bails of corrugated cardboard (that you all were considerate enough to put in the recycling bins) have been sold to Consolidated Papers in Wisconsin Rapids for $30.00 per ton, which again may not seem like a whole lot, but when the environmental factors are figured in, we've saved more than we bargained for.

"Hopefully the money spent will break us even enough to keep the recycling project an environmentally positive one," says Burling, offering, "thanks so much to everyone for their time and interest in the Campus Recycling Program, if there are questions, please feel free to call us at x2721."

Real people . . . a thing of the past?

by Sarah L. Newton
Editor-in-Chief

I remember when I was little, everyone seemed like a real person. There were no plastic smiles, there were no "flat" people. Everyone was "round," and everyone was real.

I suppose as you grow you begin to classify the round from the flat, and both of those from those who choose to be flat; kind of like going through your cereal bowl in the morning and realizing not everyone can be a complete cheerio - some people have to be halves of "o's" or maybe even just chunks of an "o."

Anyway, you all are fortunate enough to attend a University which has made it possible for you to reach a "round" person turned "flat" 24 hours a day. And not many schools in the UW system have such elaborate programs. You may do this through an incredible new service called Audix.

Scratch incredible, it's a major understatement. This thing is technologically fascinating and apparently a wonderful time saver.

Get a load of this: Audix is a voice messaging system that was implemented at UWSP in the Spring of last year. On it you can create, add to or delete from a message that may be sent to anyone else who is connected with the system, and to as many of them as you would like! In laymen's/editor's terms it can be considered an extremely versatile and advanced version of the answering machine (just don't let those at the Telephone Support Office hear you call it that, or they'll show you what else it can do!).

I admit I had a preconceived bad taste in my mouth about Audix before I bothered to actually learn about it and all that it can do, the time it saves, and the headaches it creates or eliminates. Now that I do know, I want to share, share, share!

This system, or upgrade of the old system (which cost the University approximately $1.5 million in 1985) is capable of creating a mailbox of sorts on a computer disk that can accept and store messages. It can also record a date and time each message was taken, and then allow the "owner" of the mailbox to call from anywhere on campus, or anywhere in the world and

Not only does it do that, Audix also allows a phone (or mailbox) to be reached by several callers at the same time, give them all the message simultaneously, and take all of their messages . . . all at the same time. This thing should be called Super Audix and come wearing tights and a cape.

Everyone at the Telephone Support Office, including Kathy Wachowiak, Telecommunications Manager, is hoping that the more people learn, understand, and utilize through Audix, the more they will accept and like it.

"We just hope everyone takes the time and patience

"Kind of like going through your cereal bowl in the morning and realizing not everyone can be a complete cheerio"

hear those messages (providing they enter the correct audix code, extension, and four digit password code which are used as a means of privacy). WOW!

Students who live on campus also have the option to get their mits into the Audix system. One portion of Audix assigns a calling card number to each student which they use when dialing long distance. In this way, on campus phone bills are automatically separated and each call is designated to a certain card number, creating individual bills for each roommate. WOW AGAIN!

Terry Zabrowski, Audix System Administrator says departments have been really receptive of their mailboxes and automated attendants (provides opportunity to route calls to the appropriate person or line). She adds that it saves secretaries a lot of time not having to transfer calls or take messages for professors - Audix does all of that.

to try and understand why the Audix system was implemented," says Zabrowski.

Perhaps time and patience would cut the need for Audix all together. That's just an idea.

Telephone Support Office says the Audix upgrade was done for the students, to alleviate hassles in the processing of their phone bills, among many other benefits. On campus students may place long distance calls right up until the day they move out, final bills are sent to their homes, and a delivery service takes payment from the residence halls to the Telephone Support Office daily. Perhaps next we will have computers installed in every residence hall room and give each student an account number so they don't even have to go downstairs! QUADRUPLE WOW! For the QUINTUPLE WOW, call Debot on Monday, and be able to make dinner arrangements for Friday.

Speaking of transferring funds (we were, weren't we?), Audix took care of that, big time. $350,000 worth, actually. According to the Telephone Support Office, there is a deferred maintenance, or reserve account which has been drawn on each year to save up for switch upgrade (installation of Audix). So this way, "No new money had to go into this upgrade." What about old money? Does it not spend as well as new money? Maybe what they mean is that new money of yesterday is the old money of today, and once it's old it's okay to spend, no matter who it once belonged to. Maybe. Incidentally, purchasing a standard answering machine for every faculty and staff member on campus would total about a third of the cost of Audix.

So in the end, Audix is like talking to someone without actually having to talk to them. I suppose it they're a victim of chronic halitosis that's a plus, but what happened to conversation? Aren't they what helps bring about friendships and lets people get to know one another? Perhaps the workplace is not the environment for such things. Perhaps. All I know is when I reach someone on the phone, and they're a real person, I get much more than just a voice. There is either a smile or a hump! behind it, and then come the eyes, and a laugh or a growl, and I know the person is real. When I reach someone through a mechanical system, I get a voice, without anything else. Call me silly, and perhaps it'll grow on me. Perhaps. But for now, I'm going for the whole cheerio.

Scouting opportunities at UWSP

Dear Editor:

Very few people realize the various opportunities available through scouting at UWSP. Swimming, selling cookies, going to the theatre, camping, singing, learning, growing, and caring, it's all part of growing up in scouting.

Chances are you were a scout as a child and have memories of the counselors and leaders you still admire. The days of childhood may be gone but the fun is still here.

Campus Girl Scouts is a coed organization affiliated with the Girl Scouts of America, however, you need not be a Girl Scout to join. CGS is dedicated to serving the community through involvement with ACT (the Association for Community Tasks) and area Girl Scout troops.

Aside from the service oriented activities we take camping trips, go to shows, and just get together to have fun. So call us at 346-2260 or stop down at the ACT office, lower level in the U.C.

Director urges student involvement

Dear Editor:

Get out of your Hardees uniforms gardeners, it's school-time. Time for a little getting down to the business of becoming smarter, richer, and better than most of your high school pals. Welcome back, all you returning campus rats, and an especially warm welcome to you transfer students, and of course you freshmen and freshmen-women--you'll catch on pretty soon.

My name is Dan Krause, and I am a student working for you. I am the Legislative Affairs Director for Student Government Association (SGA), which basically means that I work on the things that are happening with legislation concerning students. I will also be the guy that tries to get you to vote during the elections. There are a few other things that I'd like to do this year as far as conservation on campus goes.

You pay me a measly $4.25/hour for 5 long grueling hours a week out of the segregated fees that are tacked onto your tuition.

Now that we've got intro'd out of the way, here is one of the things that you may be interested in:

YOUR MONEY

Costs are keeping many people from going to college, and keeping many from finishing. Tuition is going up again. You residents now pay about 35% of your actual cost of instruction at UWSP; the taxpayers of Wisconsin and non-resident students pick up the rest (Non-residents pay about 105% of the cost of instruction at Wisconsin schools). If this sounds like a good deal to you, you should know that up until 1980, students paid 25%. And it keeps getting higher.

Segregated fees are also an item that keeps going up. This is money that you pay in addition to the cost of instruction. Segregated fees pay for things like student organization funding, the health enhancement temple, the running of the UC, text rental, my wage, etc....

These segregated fees ($187.60 per full-time student this semester) are tacked onto your tuition bill, and nobody bothers to tell you that you are paying them or where your money goes. You are led to believe, by looking at your tuition bill, that the actual cost of instruction is $977.60 when actually it is only $790.00. These fees are levied by each particular school (UWSP, Stout, Mad-town, etc...) on its students, and we UWSP students pay the highest fees compared to students of other schools of our size.

Many services that students now pay for through segregated fees used to be paid for through tax dollars. The cost of a public university education in Wisconsin is becoming harder and harder for us average citizens to afford, and only the rich can get higher education without working all night and studying all day. The legislature, the regents, and our administration keep raising the cost of our education, and more and more qualified students are unable to afford to go to school. It seems that Wisconsin's great university system is being seen by our lawmakers as a burden rather than the great asset that it is.

You dorm students are really getting screwed, too. You get to pay to overstaff the dorms and you pay for gobs of "fun" hall activities that you may not want to attend. If that weren't enough, currently you are getting rooked into paying for a few bonus programs that don't have anything to do with residence life, like new student recruitment (the Board of Regents in Mad-town have been reviewing our complaint about that since May). To pile on top of that, you are forced into paying for food in the cafeteria that you may not want, or you are given the choice of going to the convenience store and buying about $300.00 worth of food with 500 food points that you pay $640.00 for. Nobody offers any information on where your money goes either, you just see a bill for room and board for 13-hundred-and something bucks.

What can you do about it? Ask questions of our administrators or your dorm mama or papa. Become informed about where your hard-gotten money goes. Join the Legislative Affairs Committee of SGA. It's open to all students and we will be working on contacting school administrators, state legislators, and regents about paying too much for an education that should be accessible to all. Or just be ready to work your ass off even harder in the future trying to get educated and eating at the same time.

I hope I have piqued your interest, at least enough to pay a little attention to issues involving students. Hopefully enough to get you involved with a few political things around campus. The more you know, the more power you have over your government, your education, your money, and your future.

Contact me about any of the above issues at home (341-3864) or contact me at the SGA office (X-4592) in the back of the basement of the U.C. Better yet, join the Legislative Affairs Committee and work with me and other students and student senators on these and other exciting issues. We will have our first organizational meeting on Monday, the 16th at the UC Red Room at 9:00 p.m. I want to see you there.

Uncanny Fishing Outing

by Buck Jennings
Outdoors Editor

The warm summer evening of Wednesday July third found myself and two of my colleagues fishing for walleyes on the Wisconsin River.

Kevin was taking a short vacation from his graduate studies at Northern Illinois University and Jane was honing her talents as a walleye angler. The night was dark and clear. Working surface baits in the slews near the Red Bridge, we enjoy a peaceful summer's evening and the illusion of being a world away from civilization.

As the evening wore on, we began to get strikes and boated several walleyes, the largest nearing three-pounds. The fish were released and thoughts turned from waxing philosophically to decided angling. The volley turned off as abruptly it had started. Cast after cast the baits remained unscathed.

"What's going on?" I questioned aloud.

"What happened to the fish?"

"What the hell is that!?"

Came my reply from Jane, quite out of context. Kevin and I turned to the direction she indicated. Slightly above the horizon we witnessed a moving light.

A single bright white light, very high in the atmosphere moved slowly, and deliberately above the horizon. It's path was very straight, yet at random intervals it would zig-zag several miles before returning to it's straight flight.

We watched for along time; myself (a staunch believer in extra-terrestrial life), Kevin (a member of the Illinois chapter of Midwest U.F.O. Network), and Jane (a person impartial on the subject). After about fifteen minutes the bright light disappeared behind the opposite horizon.

Though Kevin said that it was a drone ship (and then put aluminum foil on his head so that they could not track the transmitter they had implanted in his skull in an earlier encounter) Jane and I both agreed that there was no logical explanation.

After fishing a few more hours and not getting a single strike, I was convinced. Dang U.F.O.s had ruined what had been a wonderful fishing outing.

How come this fish tastes like Dukey?

by Buck Jennings
Outdoors Editor

The question has certainly been raised at one time or another by every Wisconsin River angler. A large body of research on flavor and odor tainting in the upper Wisconsin River has been completed by Robert Lindsay, a PhD of food chemistry and a professor at the University of Wisconsin Madison. In two phone interviews, Lindsay explained the processes involved.

Lindsay explained that the process starts with the introduction of wood material into the riverine environment. When this material, both hardwood and softwood, undergoes natural microbial decomposition, the plant metabolites within the wood change chemically. The resultant chemicals are alcohols phenols and diterpenes. Because they bioaccumulate, diterpenes are given a large part of the blame as flavor tainters, but as we'll see phenols also play a key role as their concentrations fluxuate in reaction to changing riverine water levels.

These diterpenes accumulate in the riverine microflora and bio-magnify as they move up the food chain. Example: Mr. Microflora has accumulated 1 unit of bad flavor. Mr. Tiny Aquatic Insect pinches his nose and consumes Mr. Microflora plus about half a million of his closest friends. Hence Mr. Tiny Aquatic Insect is about half a million times more obnoxious than he was before his microfloral binge.

Though toxic to some forms of microflora, these compounds are thought to be non-toxic to humans. The situation is usually at it's worst in late winter and early spring. At this time of year a fish's forage base is at it's lowest, as most of the young of year feed fish have been consumed. It is also during this time that high waters can flood the surrounding timber. The high waters can dislodge many of the insects up to now hiding peacefully in the moist soil and stagnant backwaters feeding on "them tasty microflora." Volumes of hapless insects stand little chance when besieged by hungry fish. Here is when the phenols, which don't bioaccumulate reach their gut wrenching, gag reflexive peak.

Up to 50% of this process occurs naturally. But a direct relationship between poor fish flavor and paper mill effluent B.O.D. has been illustrated. (Biological Oxygen Demand is the amount of oxygen required to biologically degrade the organic matter contained in discharged effluent. BOD's can also be thought of as oxygen demanders.)

Some of these "bad taste" compounds are formed in anaerobic reactions. BOD's aggravate the situation by removing oxygen from the system. This increases these anaerobic reactions. Also, most of these BOD's aggravate the situation by removing oxygen from the system. This increases these anaerobic reactions. Also, most of these BOD's are themselves wood fibres, the source of the resin acids to being with. Therefore the negative impacts of BOD's are two fold and synergistic.

Proponents of paper mills have shown that when caged fish are hung directly in the mill effluent discharge, no mal-work and having the potential to significantly increase economic development in the state.

The regents make special appropriations of $25,000 for each professor's position and the honored faculty members are asked to raise at least another $25,000 in non-tax dollars from industry and other sources to support their work.

In July, Robert Govett, a faculty member at the University of Idaho, was named UWSP's first "Distinguished Professor" in the field of wood use and marketing.

Razvi has "pioneered the research and continues to point the way toward reducing the solid waste impact on our environment and our national resources," according to Alan Haney, dean of the College of Natural Resources in which the professor serves.

In a letter supporting Razvi's nomination, Timothy J. Draeger of the National Corn Growers Association in St. Louis, argued that the professor's work "could provide the needed research and information that would tear down the barriers for both Wisconsin and national entrepreneurs, lower economic risks for investors and create job opportunities for many. In addition, many small engineering firms, unable to afford full-time technical staffs, could locate in Wisconsin in order to be closer to the university's Waste Management Center and its technical expertise."

Razvi is a founding member of the National Solid Waste Composting Council and serves on its board of directors. He also is vice president of the Associated Recyclers of Wisconsin and a former chairman of the Intra State Recycling in Stevens Point.

The professor became widely known for research he conducted in composting/recycling in a pilot project on garbage at Lodi earlier in the 1980s. Last year, the State Legislature established its first solid waste center, situating it on the Stevens Point campus with Razvi as director.

One of the center's major projects is an on-going study on solid waste disposal involving city of Portage garbage. Specifically, he and assistants, including students, are exploring feasibility of composting various kinds of wastes and then returning them to agricultural land.

Because there are few people in the country who possess practical waste management expertise, Razvi is increasingly being called upon for advice.

For example, representatives of the city of Philadelphia sought his assistance in reducing costs of disposing of sewage sludge. After testing the sludge and examining a system used to add wood chips to the waste, he offered a plan that would reduce three-quarters of the $7 million cost.

For Weyerhaeuser of Marshfield, he found a way to turn a $120,000 expense of disposing of waste to income by selling the material for agricultural lime to area farmers.

In the future, Razvi would like to be involved in special projects for the Environmental Protection Agency, a unit of the federal government, because of the major impact that would be made on the nation's industries.

The professor, who lives at 1427 Skyline Drive, Stevens Point, with his wife and two children, is a native of India who received his bachelor's degree from an agricultural university in his homeland. He earned the M.S. in soil science and water chemistry and the Ph.D. in soil science with an emphasis in environmental engineering, both from UW-Madison.

He has taught in the UW System for 15 years, for one year at UW-River Falls and since 1977 at UW-Stevens Point.

Razvi has won several awards for outstanding teaching and service at UW-Stevens Point and has been recognized by the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources for outstanding contributions to the state in the area of solid waste composting.

flavoring occurs. This is true. These chemicals cannot enter the fish when they are locked safely in the wood fibres. The damage occurs when these wood fibres undergo natural microbial degradation in the riverine environment.

It is this type of misleading "scientific research" and "proof" that is used to fool the public into believing these industries are not at fault. One might say that because half of this process occurs naturally, it is not a man-made problem. It certainly seems that the top, man-made, half has the most detrimental effect. Before the times of the paper mills and other industry this area supported a substantial summer population of Native Americans. It is thought that the Indians migrated to this area to exploit the surrounding woods and waters of the region, including the harvest of fish. I don't believe that an entire tribe of Indians would migrate hundreds of miles to harvest foul tasting fish. It is foolish to believe that the obnoxious flavor and odor is anything but the result of industry and "civilization" on the Wisconsin River.

Doubtless, a finger can be pointed at industry and paper-making in particular. While I will not defend the industry, Bob Martini of the Rhinelander DNR station points out that while paper mill effluent discharges have been reduced by as much as 90%, municipal discharges and polluted urban runoff have increased. Here is where you are directly responsible for damage to the Wisconsin river system. In one of several phone conversations, Mr Martini explained that something as simple as conserving water can have a positive impact on the river. By reducing water usage, less demand is placed on stored reservoirs. When less water is used, less water, in the form of municipal effluent is discharged into the river. What of industry? Industry is fueled by money and money comes from you and me.

New S.G.A. President ready for this year's issues

by Julie Apker
Features Editor

When Tami Butts arrived at UWSP as a freshman three years ago, representing a student population larger than her hometown, was not something she could have predicted.

"We have about 5600 people in Jefferson, and about 8000 students at UWSP," said Butts, 1991-92 Student Government Association (SGA) President. "Putting my position in this perspective is challenging, but I'm looking forward to involving all students in the issues, gaining their input and getting things done."

A senior business administration and communication major, Butts took over as SGA President last May. However, her involvement as a student leader began many years ago.

"I guess my first leadership role was being captain of the safety patrol when I was in sixth grade at Jefferson Elementary School, recalled Butts. "I was later involved in my high school's student council and when I got to UWSP, I became a part of the hall government of Roach Hall."

Her friends in the College of Letters and Science encouraged her to run for SGA when she was a sophomore. A year later, Butts was elected speaker of the senate and last spring she was elected president.

With her record of student government experience, many students might think Butts has future political aspirations for after graduation. However, she is more interested in the field of human resources rather than government and her involvement in SGA is to give students a voice in issues that affect them.

"I'm not interested in a life in politics," said Butts. "I like government, and I see a real need to make politics down to earth and honest. I have learned a lot about the campus from my involvement in SGA, and my motivation stems from the opportunity to help students using my experience and knowledge about how things work."

She considers her decision to attend school at UWSP to be a good one, defining Stevens Point as "a more urban environment which still holds small-town values." Butts believes her experiences in student leadership to have helped her grow as a person, and encourages other students to get involved in the many student organizations on campus.

"Student Government Association is accepting applications for senator positions from all four colleges until Sept. 13, as well as for the executive board positions for Cultural Diversity Affairs Director, Women's Issues Director, Academic Affairs Director, and Administrative Assistant," explained Butts. "In addition, there are about 100 faculty, student and administrative committees that really need student input. All students have to do is contact SGA at 346-4036."

Several challenges face students this year, including the problem of student apathy. Butts thinks the solution is to make involvement fun.

"My goal this year is to incorporate a sense of fun and in the process people will learn as well," she said. "Creativity can be the change. If we can help students feel that they can make a difference, it will be a successful year."

Butts is also optimistic about the present and future relationship between students and administration.

"After a successful first year, SGA is continuing the 'Out to Breakfast with the Chancellor' program this year. Thus far, Old Main has been very receptive, but in the future, if things change, student will do what they have to do."

According to Butts, several important issues face the student body this year. She is especially interested in rallying students to give input on campus budgets, segregated fees, cultural diversity, and the environment.

Currently, one of the projects SGA is working on is to make available to students an itemized bill of all fees students pay per semester. All full-time students pay approximately $200 per semester in non-tuition fees that are added to their tuition bills.

She acknowledges her role as SGA President to be a challenging position, especially in her efforts to represent all students on the campus issues.

"A big challenge is to raise student awareness of these concerns, ranging from where our money is being spent, to expanding recycling activities, to incorporating students of color and white students in a variety of programs," commented Butts.

Pointer Profile: U.A.B.'s Tamie Paquet

by Júlie Apker
Features Editor

"UWSP has given me so much, the people at this university have spent a lot of time and energy to help me become a student leader. After four years here, I'd like to give something back to the campus," said Tamie Paquet, President of the University Activities Board (UAB).

When searching for an example of "Pointer Pride," you don't have to look any further than Paquet. A senior communication major, she epitomizes UWSP school spirit, enthusiasm, and student involvement.

Serving as UAB President for her second year, Paquet is busy bringing entertainment and educational programming to campus. One of the biggest events she is helping coordinate is the upcoming performance of nationally-known rock band ".38Special." The concert will be held Friday, October 11 in the Quandt Fieldhouse.

Along with her sense of fun, Paquet brings to her leadership role a lot of enthusiasm and a determination to keep life in the organization and the campus full of variety.

"I want to give UAB 150% again this year," she explained. "Our goal is to let students know who we are and what exactly we have to offer, in both leadership opportunities, and in our entertainment and educational programs."

Made up of nine program areas, including Homecoming, concerts, athletic entertainment, and issues and ideas, UAB is one of the largest groups on campus. The organization is built on a "team-approach" concept which incorporates student volunteers in planning and coordinating all its activities. It involves about 200 active students and sponsors events ranging from jazz performances and educational speakers to spring break trips.

"The UWSP UAB is unique because students are an important part in all the phases of programming, from the initial scheduling decisions to the event's production and evaluation," said Paquet. "We offer hands-on experience that gives students an important role on campus. Not many other universities offer this opportunity."

A native of Denmark, Paquet already had a lot of leadership experience in high school when she entered school at UWSP. This background, combined with positive role models of resident assistants and hall directors, motivated her to serve as an RHA representative for Steiner Hall.

"Mentors have been an important catalyst for my participation in student organizations," commented Paquet. My parents are both teachers, so I have always been focused towards school-related activities, and involvement certainly isn't hard to find on this campus. Role models from Residence Life and Campus Activities have helped me gain direction and challenge myself."

When citing her motivation for overseeing the largest-funded student organization on campus, Paquet points to her interest in keeping UAB fun, but also a learning environment where everyone learns from each success and failure.

"Variety is key for me, and in the campus activities area I have certainly found my niche. After being in RHA, I wanted to continue to be active on campus and the supportive atmosphere and wide-ranging program areas of UAB appealed to me. I started as administrative assistant and then went on to president the next year. In the past three years, I have enjoyed my various jobs immensely."

According to Paquet, her participation in these extra-curricular activities has meshed well with her academic life. She believes that her own leadership role has supported and enhanced her classwork. In fact, it caused her to switch her major from education to communication, with the hope of pursuing graduate school and a future career in college student personnel/campus activities.

"You can't put a price tag on the experiences you receive as a result of being active in student groups," Paquet said. "No one can tell someone to get involved, but groups like UAB help students identify areas of interest and challenge. Self-motivation is important, but resources are out there in the form of 160 student organizations."

But the organization she knows best is UAB and she enthusiastically promotes all its programs areas and events.

"The University Activities Board wants to provide entertainment and educational events for all students," Paquet explained. "The popular trend is stand-up comics and musical groups, but because our programming areas are so varied, UAB covers a lot more than just these forms of entertainment. I encourage students to suggest ideas and became a team member at anytime during the semester."

According to Julie Hellweg, Coordinator of Success Seminar, participation in Success Seminar has many benefits. "I really believe Success Seminar is an opportunity for experimental learning and will give leaders a good base and foundation for their leadership position this year," states Hellweg. School starts abroad

by Kristina Tolan

As summer draws to a close-most UWSP students start to think about the long lines at Checkpoint, what new poster they will get for their dorm rooms, and the great parties they'll be attending in the near future.

However, other UWSP students will be considering the upcoming semester a little differently. These special students have concerns about flying eight hours across the Atlantic or packing four months of clothing in one little backpack. These are the students on the UWSP semester abroad to Germany, and I'm one of them.

This is our group's second night in Dresden, and already we have gotten quite a "chunk 'o learning" way before the traditional school semester has begun back in Stevens Point.

The first stop on our trip was Frankfurt, a large city on the Mainz River. There, we visited St. Bartholomew's church, the famous coronation site of many Holy Roman Empire emperors. We also saw the Kaisersaal, St. Paul's Church, Goethe's house, and a fantastic art museum which houses works of Van Gogh, Renoir, and Picasso.

Our itinerary has kept us busy and provided us with many different aspects of German culture. In addition to seeing museums and churches, we

by Julie Wiebusch
Contributor

I bet you're wondering what in the world is BACCHUS? Let me tell you. . . BACCHUS stands for "Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students." It is the largest national collegiate program of alcohol education and abuse prevention. BACCHUS first began as a small group of students at the University of Florida in 1976, but now has emerged into a huge network of over 500 chapters throughout the United States! The BACCHUS Philosophy is that "Students can play a uniquely effective role--unmatched by professional educators--in encouraging their peers to consider, talk honestly about, and develop responsible habits and attitudes toward the use or non-use of alcohol."

"The BACCHUS Philosophy is that students can play a uniquely effective role"

BACCHUS promotes respect for state laws and campus policies related to alcohol use. Its emphasis is in student involvement and peers helping peers. Besides, who knows students better than other students!!

Chapters affiliated with BACCHUS are concerned with the health of their students, their institution, and their community. BACCHUS chapters acknowledge that students of all ages are faced with making personal decisions about alcohol, but it opposes the notion that excessive use of alcohol is an acceptable social practice.

For several years now, BACCHUS of the U.S., Inc., has worked side by side with many leaders in the fraternity and sorority world, too, to help implement alcohol education among the Greek organizations. The most evident result of this partnership has been the development of Project GAMMA or Greeks Advocating the Mature Management of Alcohol.

The focus of GAMMA is to unity entire campus Greek Systems, using the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils as springboards for change. A solid GAMMA Chapter raises the risk management standards of every chapter through policy enforcement, educational programs, and positive public relations.

If you're looking for an organization that will help you develop life skills in leadership, responsibility, organization, and networking, BACCHUS and/or GAMMA is for you! BACCHUS/GAMMA also provide a forum for enjoyable have visited huge markets and sampled German night life at a pub called "Bistro 29."

After Frankfurt, our group was off to Dresden, a city famous for being uselessly firebombed in World War II (it was not a military target). Now, almost 50 years later, the city is rebuilt and bustling with capitalism--complete with

Burger King!

Unfortunately, despite capitalistic efforts, unemployment is almost 50%, but students on our trip have found it is hard to make economic judgments here like we would in the United States. Initially, most of us thought only of the economic advantages for the East Germans as a result of reunification. However, it is apparent the process of unifying two different cultures will require many changes in attitudes and lifestyles for both East and West Germans.

Our group is looking forward to an exciting semester in Germany! We hope it to be filled with more unforgettable experiences, new friends, and opportunities to be a part of an exciting part of German history!

You put more than just your savings into a retirement company. You put in your trust and hopes for the future, too. So before you choose one, ask some questions. How stable is the company? How solid are its investments? How sound is its overall financial health?

A good place to start looking for answers is in the ratings of independent analysts. Three companies, all widely recognized resources for finding out how strong a financial services company really is, gave TIAA their top grade.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, TIAA IS LETTER-PERFECT.

TIAA received A+ from A.M. Best Co., AAA from Standard & Poor's and Aaa from Moody's Investors Service. These ratings reflect TIAA's reliable claims-paying ability, exceptional financial strength, superior investment performance, and low expenses. Involvement Fair '91 gigantic success

Students get exposure to campus organizations

by Sarah L. Newton
Editor-in-Chief

What happens when hundreds of dedicated students from campus organizations get together for a common cause and free popcorn is available? Well, anything is possible, but last week it was Involvement Fair '91!

Wednesday, September 4 saw UWSP's annual Involvement Fair hit the Program Banquet Room in the U.C., and according to the program's organizers, Mark Olkowski and Julie Hellweg, it was a huge success.

This was definitely our most successful year," states Hellweg, Assistant Director of Campus Activities for Student Organizations. "We had approximately 850 students walk through, and in combination with all the organization representatives and other volunteers, at least 1000 people were involved."

Involvement Fair is a program geared toward incoming freshmen which gives campus and community organizations the opportunity to represent themselves to new students in an effort to inform and encourage involvement. 80 student and 17 community booths were included in this year's Fair, the highest number since it began four years ago.

"Although this year was the biggest turnout ever, it wasn't necessarily the best because of the number of students, but more so that the students who did come through honestly seemed to want to get involved, and that's our main goal," said Olkowski, Student Government Vice President.

Domino's pizza gave a free pizza party to the residence hall with the highest attendance, which was won by Roach Hall who had 112 of their 319 residents attend.

The organization of Involvement Fair '91 relied heavily on volunteerism. "It pulled together really well," commented Hellweg, "people who were willing to help seemed to come out of the woodwork, and we really had a lot of staff support from Campus Activities Student Assistants."

"We all worked together as a team," adds Olkowski. "Normally a project like Involvement Fair would be handled by the Source committee, but being as early in the semester as it is, the Source committee members have not yet been appointed.

Therefore it's always a challenge to put the fair together."

The Stevens Point/Plover area Chamber of Commerce was responsible for finding community organizations to take part in the "communitivity" portion of Involvement Fair. Businesses like Bank One, Public Service, Super 8 Motel, Moms Computers, and Regis Hairstylists were among those who gave out free gifts at their booths. Pat Roberts, Program Director for the Stevens Point/Plover area Chamber of Commerce said of the Fair, "Successful is not good enough. It was overwhelmingly great. All businesses involved, on a scale of one to ten, rated Involvement Fair as an eight or above, and evaluated the audience as outstanding and very receptive, saying they will definitely take part again next year."

BACCHUS begins at UWSP

by Julie Wiebusch
Contributor

I bet you're wondering what in the world is BACCHUS? Let me tell you. . . BACCHUS stands for "Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students." It is the largest national collegiate program of alcohol education and abuse prevention. BACCHUS first began as a small group of students at the University of Florida in 1976, but now has emerged into a huge network of over 500 chapters throughout the United States! The BACCHUS Philosophy is that "Students can play a uniquely effective role--unmatched by professional educators--in encouraging their peers to consider, talk honestly about, and develop responsible habits and attitudes toward the use or non-use of alcohol."

"The BACCHUS Philosophy is that students can play a uniquely effective role"

BACCHUS promotes respect for state laws and campus policies related to alcohol use. Its emphasis is in student involvement and peers helping peers. Besides, who knows students better than other students!!

Chapters affiliated with BACCHUS are concerned with the health of their students, their institution, and their community. BACCHUS chapters acknowledge that students of all ages are faced with making personal decisions about alcohol, but it opposes the notion that excessive use of alcohol is an acceptable social practice.

For several years now, BACCHUS of the U.S., Inc., has worked side by side with many leaders in the fraternity and sorority world, too, to help implement alcohol education among the Greek organizations. The most evident result of this partnership has been the development of Project GAMMA or Greeks Advocating the Mature Management of Alcohol.

The focus of GAMMA is to unify entire campus Greek Systems, using the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils as springboards for change. A solid GAMMA Chapter raises the risk management standards of every chapter through policy enforcement, educational programs, and positive public relations.

If you're looking for an organization that will help you develop life skills in leadership, responsibility, organization, and networking, BACCHUS and/or GAMMA is for you! BACCHUS/GAMMA also provides a forum for enjoyable have visited huge markets and sampled German night life at a pub called "Bistro 29."

After Frankfurt, our group was off to Dresden, a city famous for being uselessly firebombed in World War II (it was not a military target). Now, almost 50 years later, the city is rebuilt and bustling with capitalism--complete with

Burger King!

Unfortunately, despite capitalistic efforts, unemployment is almost 50%, but students on our trip have found it is hard to make economic judgments here like we would in the United States. Initially, most of us thought only of the economic advantages for the East Germans as a result of reunification. However, it is apparent the

Our group is looking forward to an exciting semester in Germany! We hope it to be filled with more unforgettable experiences, new friends, and opportunities to be a part of an exciting part of German history!

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

BEFORE TRUSTING YOUR FUTURE TO ANY COMPANY, ASK FOR SOME LETTERS OF REFERENCE.

You put more than just your savings into a retirement company. You put in your trust and hopes for the future, too. So before you choose one, ask some questions. How stable is the company? How solid are its investments? How sound is its overall financial health?

A good place to start looking for answers is in the ratings of independent analysts. Three companies, all widely recognized resources for finding out how strong a financial services company really is, gave TIAA their top grade.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, TIAA IS LETTER-PERFECT.

TIAA received A+ from A.M. Best Co., AAA from Standard & Poor's and Aaa from Moody's Investors Service. These ratings reflect TIAA's reliable claims-paying ability, exceptional financial strength, superior investment performance, and low expenses. With its guaranteed rate of return and opportunity for dividends, TIAA is one of less than ten companies, out of

2,200 nationwide, that received these highest marks.

CREF. FOUR MORE LETTERS EVERYONE SHOULD KNOW.

For further growth potential and diversification, there's the CREF variable annuity with four different investment accounts to give you the flexibility you want as you save for the future.

Together, TIAA and CREF form the nation's largest private retirement system, with over $95 billion in assets and more than 70 years of experience serving the education community. For over one million people nationwide, the only letters to remember are TIAA-CREF.

Involvement Fair '91 gigantic success

Students get exposure to campus organizations

by Sarah L. Newton
Editor-in-Chief

What happens when hundreds of dedicated students from campus organizations get together for a common cause and free popcorn is available? Well, anything is possible, but last week it was Involvement Fair '91!

Wednesday, September 4 saw UWSP's annual Involvement Fair hit the Program Banquet Room in the U.C., and according to the program's organizers, Mark Olkowski and Julie Hellweg, it was a huge success.

"This was definitely our most successful year," states Hellweg, Assistant Director of Campus Activities for Student Organizations. "We had approximately 850 students walk through, and in combination with all the organization representatives and other volunteers, at least 1000 people were involved."

Involvement Fair is a program geared toward incoming freshmen which gives campus and community organizations the opportunity to represent themselves to new students in an effort to inform and encourage involvement. 80 student and 17 community booths were included in this year's Fair, the highest number since it began four years ago.

"Although this year was the biggest turnout ever, it wasn't necessarily the best because of the number of students, but more so that the students who did come through honestly seemed to want to get involved, and that's our main goal," said Olkowski, Student Government Vice President.

Domino's pizza gave a free pizza party to the residence hall with the highest attendance, which was won by Roach Hall who had 112 of their 319 residents attend.

The organization of Involvement Fair '91 relied heavily on volunteerism. "It pulled together really well," commented Hellweg, "people who were willing to help seemed to come out of the woodwork, and we really had a lot of staff support from Campus Activities Student Assistants."

"We all worked together as a team," adds Olkowski, "Normally a project like Involvement Fair would be handled by the Source committee, but being as early in the semester as it is, the Source committee members have not yet been appointed.

Therefore it's always a challenge to put the fair together."

The Stevens Point/Plover area Chamber of Commerce was responsible for finding community organizations to take part in the "communiversity" portion of Involvement Fair. Businesses like Bank One, Public Service, Super 8 Motel, Moms Computers, and Regis Hairstylists were among those who gave out free gifts at their booths. Patt Roberts, Program Director for the Stevens Point/Plover area Chamber of Commerce said of the Fair, "Successful is not good enough. It was overwhelmingly great. All businesses involved, on a scale of one to ten, rated Involvement Fair as an eight or above, and evaluated the audience as outstanding and very receptive, saying they will definitely take part again next year."

Point Battles #10 Baker to 0-0 Deadlock

by Mark Gillette

Sports Editor

On Saturday, September 7th, the Pointer football team traveled to Baker, Kansas to take on #10 NAIA ranked Baker University. When the game ended the final score was at a deadlock 0-0.

The game was characterized by many missed scoring opportunities and five turnovers by each team.

Each defense matched the other down for down. Coach John Miech said "Baker had a lot to do with our offense being held scoreless."

The Pointers had many scoring chances in the final five minutes of the game. A fumble recovered by UWSP at the Baker 33 got the Pointers only seven yards in its next series after quarterback Kenton Carr, a junior college transfer, was sacked and injured for a loss. Placekicker Dave Schneider missed the 44 yard field goal and the score stood.

Baker got the ball back and four downs later punted only 15 yards to put the Pointers in good field position at the Baker 34

After a Pointer penalty and a sack to quarterback Rip Flippo back to the 48 yard line, the Pointers were forced to punt.

One more opportunity came with 16 seconds remaining as Baker quarterback Aaron Todd was intercepted at the 35 yard line by Mark Leidel. Flippo got the ball down to the 26 when he completed a pass to running back Jimmy Henderson, a UW-Madison transfer who led the Pointers with 49 rushing yards on 19 carries.

With five seconds left Schneider attempted a 43 yard field goal, which was blocked by a Baker defensive lineman's helmet. To have the last scoring opportunity and not capitalize made the loss hard to take, Miech said. Adding, "Our defense made an outstanding effort. Early in the year our defense always stands out. Everybody played well. Andy Chilcote and Dave Schepp, both inside linemen, were great.

In the first half Stevens Point had a 35 yard touchdown pass from Carr to standout receiver Barry Rose nullified on a holding penalty. Another deep penetration inside the Baker 10 yard line was held back when Carr threw an interception.

The Pointers did realize in this game that they "have the opportunity to be a very good team," Miech commented.

UW-LaCrosse and UW-Whitewater are considered to be the top contenders for the conference title. But, after Stevens Point's performance against Baker, the Pointers may have to be included in that group.

Miech said that in order for that to happen "our defense has to play as well as they did against Baker and our offense has to put points on the board."

Miech is also very happy with the group of kids he's working with this year. "They're really hard-working. These guys are one of the best groups I've had since I've been here."

Point is on the road this upcoming week as they travel to LaCrosse to take on a very good Catbird team. Miech said that besides Carr, who will be out two to three weeks with a stretch in his knee ligament, the team should be ready and healthy for the game.

Rugby opens with 31-12 victory at Marquette

Point Rugby traveled to Milwaukee to play Marquette for their season opener.

As the game got under way Marquette took Point by surprise by completing two penalty kicks into points. After 20 minutes of play Point picked up the pace and had scores by rookie Matt "Shifty" Bonnet and Sam "Big Ed From Pittsburgh" Eddy. Unfortunately the team struggled with the conversions attempted by Steve "Chicken Legs" Paglia and Todd "Club Foot" Drakk missing them both.

The second half was a lot more exciting for the players and fans. Except for a few minutes, Point controlled the entire second half. Scores were made by both the scrum and backs. Rookies Shifty and Brad "I Can't Believe I Did It" LaBott. Other tries were made by Big Ed and Tim "Can't See The Road" Wandtke. Club Foot also had more concentration making all but one conversion. This was due to the pep talk by Assistant Coach Matt "I Can't Find My Other Pon Pom" Brown. The final score was 31-12 in favor of the Pointers.

Point Rugby would like to invite all to come watch and cheer them on. They will host Stout this Saturday at 1 p.m. at the field on the corner of Michigan and Maria across from the Village Apartments.

As the game got under way Marquette took Point by surprise by completing two penalty kicks into points. After 20 minutes of play Point picked up the pace and had scores by rookie Matt "Shifty" Bonnet and Sam "Big Ed From Pittsburgh"

Eddy. Unfortunately the team struggled with the conversions attempted by Steve "Chicken Legs" Paglia and Todd "Club Foot" Drakk missing them both.

The second half was a lot more exciting for the players and fans. Except for a few minutes, Point controlled the entire second half. Scores were made by both the scrum and backs. Rookies Shifty and Brad "I Can't Believe I Did It" La-Bott. Other tries were made by Big Ed and Tim "Can't See The Road" Wandke. Club Foot also had more concentration making all but one conversion. This was due to the pep talk by Assistant Coach Matt "I Can't Find My Other Pon Pom" Brown. The final score was 31-12 in favor of the Pointers.

Point Rugby would like to invite all to come watch and cheer them on. They will host Stout this Saturday at 1 p.m. at the field on the corner of Michigan and Maria across from the Village Apartments.

Tennis Team Gains Experience

by Mark Gillette
Sports Editor

This past weekend the Women's Tennis Team traveled to Eau Claire to play in the Chipewa Valley Open Tennis Tournament.

Every player who completed got to play in at least 2 singles and 2 doubles matches.

Number one seed Shelly Locker, a sophomore from Racine, got as far as the semifinals and lost there 7-6, 7-5.

Locker and number two seed Sarah Bather, a sophomore from Maple Grove, Minnesota advanced to the semifinals of the doubles tournament and lost in three sets.

Number three seed Jamie Jensen made it to the consolation finals before losing 7-6, 7-5.

Coach Nancy Page believes the team will be stronger than last years, adding, "we're deeper than we were last year."

Last year the team consisted of mainly freshmen and sophomores. This year the team is much more experienced with a senior and three juniors.

Coach Page commented, "we're looking forward to a good season. We have more experience than last year. The freshman/ sophomore dominated team lost several close matches last year. This year I expect them to win those close matches."

This past Tuesday, Sept. 10, Point traveled to Lawrence University in Appleton in a non-conference match. Today, they host St. Norberts and Saturday they travel to Oshkosh to compete in a doubles tournament.

Both goals came in the second half of play. Jenny Bradley scored the first goal unassisted, and Aimee Jerman got help from Jill Kieliszewski in scoring the second goal. UWSP goalie Sue Radmer had four saves in the game.

UWSP Head Coach Sheila Miech is very happy with the felt pretty good," she said, "We started slow and then took off the second half. Real good defense was a highlight. Some of the new freshmen played very well."
