Daily scrapped by more budget cuts

by Robin Von Haden
Contributor

Students will no longer be able to grab a Daily to find out what's happening on campus. As of Monday, The Daily has been indefinitely discontinued due to lack of funds. Jerry Lineberger, Associate Director of University Centers, simply states, "We can't afford to do it."

Produced and distributed by Copies Plus, The Daily was a publication that informed students, faculty, and staff of activities going on around campus. It also listed meeting times and places and what was on the menu at the dining centers.

It cost $12,000 a year to produce The Daily. This accounts for the 2500 sheets of paper a day, the photocopying, and the labor hours. Lineberger explained how the decision to drop The Daily was a consequence of the reduced budget this year. He described the situation as this:

Since taxpayers wanted their taxes kept down, legislators had to cut some of the state expenses. Because the state helps pay the cost of universities, expenses were decreased through reducing enrollment by enforcing an enrollment cap--which limits the number of students admitted to each state university.

In the past, UWSP's enrollment had been as high as 9500, but this year the cap imposed only an 8725 enrollment, which is what it was at in the early 1970's.

The General Purpose Revenue from the state, funds two-thirds of the school's academic expenses (professors, library, classes, physical education department, etc.), and students pay the other third. But students fund 100 percent of the university auxiliaries, which include the U.C., food service, and housing. Each full-time student pays a $100 yearly fee for the University Center. Since there are less students enrolled, there is less money in the U.C. budget.

Therefore, all areas are cutting back and reevaluating their costs. The U.C. administrators have had to look at reducing the hours of operation, extent of activities/services, and staffing of all areas. They needed to save $200,000 and The Daily was one of those services chosen to be discontinued.

"We want to revive The Daily in some form, but it's up to the students. We're looking for student reaction." said Lineberger. Since the U.C. is spending the students' money, he welcomes and is looking for feedback and ideas on how to bring it back.

There are several options, including putting it on the network or posting it near building entrances, both of which would cut costs by reducing the amount of paper used. Lineberger says, "If they want a Daily, we'll figure out a way to bring it back."

Are your lemons worth squeezing?

by Sheila Krueger
Contributor

Joan Lawless, a motivational speaker and entertainer, will provide answers to this question at 2p.m., Friday, September 27, in the Wisconsin Room of the U.C.

Lawless promotes the idea of turning the negative into something positive, thus the expression "if life gives you lemons...make lemonade."

"Joan has an educational and serious message, but she is also entertaining," said Julie Hellweg, the event's coordinator.

Hellweg added, "It's a good way to close a busy, stressful week and put people in the right step for an up weekend."

Lawless will talk about the recipe for success which involves communication, human relations, enthusiasm, and self-confidence.

In her presentation, she will explain "how to make lemonade, if life throws you a lemon".

She also said, "Much of my talk comes from personal experience as a single woman for the past seven years."

Lawless' presentation relates to people of all ages and backgrounds and the public is encouraged to come. Admission is free.

Protective Service boosts efficiency

by Michelle Neinst
Contributor

Many students may have noticed a few of our local police officers riding around on bicycles. What may have been less obvious though, is the fact that UWSP protective services also has implemented bicycles into their system.

The department employs seven security officers and 16 student patrols - two of which are women. The two bikes now in use greatly increase their mobility, allow them to reach a destination more quickly, and increase the number of times campus grounds can be covered in a night. Patrols are on from six p.m. to two a.m.

There are a number of duties the patrols are responsible for. Besides patrolling campus property, including Schmeckle Reserve, and being available as escorts for those traversing on campus, they also make sure things are alright in the residence halls. They check to make sure doors are closed and locked, look for anyone suspicious in the basements, and stop at the front desk to see how things are going.

All of the student patrols are CPR trained in case of emergencies and carry flashlights and two-way radios to make their job easier and more effective.

Joyce Blader, the department coordinator, trains all the students and teaches them to watch for anything strange or unusual.

Most of the incidents reported to protective services deal with vandalism or thefts from dorm rooms or vehicles, which occur predominantly at night.

A "smash and grab" policy is most common in vehicular theft, where the criminal smashes a window, then grabs any expensive items such as radar detectors, radios, tapes, and purses. Other thefts occur because students leave dorm rooms unlocked or belongings unattended.

A few alleged physical assaults are usually reported, but repeated incidents involving drugs or sexual connotations are rare if not non-existent.

However, supervisor Velma Jain believes there is a huge problem with alcohol on campus and that, because of this, cases of date rape are fairly common, although unreported.

Area blues bar to close

by John Diser
Contributor

This weekend marks the end of an era for live music in Stevens Point. The Cabin, recognized throughout the state for high quality blues, will close its doors Monday, September 30.

"Cabinites" will have three more chances to party in Cabin style before the final closing. This Friday, September 27, The Cabin will feature local crowd favorites, The Stellectrics. Saturday, the 28th Burnt Toast and Jam will play before an expected full house. Sunday the 29th is slated for a last day party. Opening at 3:00 for the Packer game, customers will pay just $5.00 to drink all they want from any open alcohol (tap beer, mixed drinks, etc.). The party will last until regular closing time or until everything is gone, which ever comes first.

Paul Hillestad has run The Cabin for the last four years. Hillestad leased the building and the surrounding property, but owned just about everything else. An auction will be held Monday, September 30th at 1:00 p.m. to sell off his bar equipment. The auction will include everything from bar stools to shot glasses. Hard to find collector items such as beer lights and promotional mirrors will also be up for sale.

Hillestad began running The Cabin in the summer of 1987.

The bar has excelled in many areas since that time. The Cabin Import Club introduced 44 imported beers to the area (the largest selection in town). T-shirts and mugs were earned by those who sampled them all. Cabin volleyball leagues have grown in size and recognition each year. This summer saw the Kings of the Cabin tournament, the largest two-man tournament in the state. A unique personal touch was added by a newsletter for regular customers. "The Cabin Calendar," detailing upcoming events, was sent to over 900 patrons on an almost monthly basis.

The Cabin's biggest attraction always centered around the high caliber live bands. "Music, music, music... that was our main thing," stated Paul Hillestad. Asked about his proudest accomplishment over the years, Hillestad went on, "Bringing a wide variety of music to this town. That was one of my goals and I feel I achieved it." Among the highlights were Lil Ed and the Blues Imperials, William Clark, Tino Gonzales, Tony Brown, Honor Among Thieves, Howard "Guitar" Luedke and Blue Max as well as local favorites Otis and the Alligators, and the Stellectrics.

Otis and the Alligators in fact saw their birth at The Cabin. Members of the band first got together during an Open Mic Jam (another Cabin trademark) in 1987. Otis tells that after the jam, "Paul came up and asked us what our name was. One of the guys joked, 'Otis and the Alligators.'" They immediately set up a date to play as a featured band. The rest, as the saying goes, is blues history.

While The Cabin's chapter in local blues history is coming to a close, another may be just beginning. New owner Richard Borowitz plans to run live music on a regular basis. He intends to continue with an emphasis of blues (about 80% of the time) or blues oriented rock.

Borowitz will reopen the bar in December under the name Witz End Saloon. Included on his agenda are a new floor, increasing the size of the stage, and moving the bar to open up more floor space. He has already booked Otis and the Alligators to open up the season on December 6.

Otis summed up his feelings on the change of ownership, which are undoubtedly shared by many area blues fans. "I was hoping someone would pick up the torch," he said. "Paul has established it throughout the state as a blues place... I don't feel like it's closing. I feel like it's moving on."

New budget tightens education program

The number of students pursuing preparation as elementary school teachers will be reduced at UWSP by virtue of a decision made this week in the Faculty Senate.

Though UWSP is the last public institution in the state to limit the size of its education classes, "we're still doing this with regret," according to Professor Jay Price, who was involved in developing procedures for determining cuts.

Price said the university no longer had the resources to maintain its previous enrollment levels in teacher education programs.

The cuts will be considerable, he explained. In the recent past about 180 to 200 students entered the elementary education program each year. The new policies will restrict the number to 100, or 50 per semester.

Some schools have limited their enrollments primarily on the basis of student grade point averages. "We're being told to go for the best and brightest—that's the political nature of this game in education in Wisconsin," the professor observed.

But he emphasized that at UWSP, the procedure for ranking students for acceptance into the program will have other considerations. Besides the cumulative grade point average, scores will be used from a test in reading, mathematics and writing skills, an exam determining listening ability and a pre-professional interview that has been developed by a professional testing organization.

The grade point average will be weighted twice as much as the tests. Students must have a minimum of a 2.5 academic average for acceptance.

A lot of the support given by the senate was done with acknowledged reluctance. But given financial situations, several of those wary of the proposal conceded there was no other alternative.

Maggie Beeber, student advising coordinator in the School of Education, said those who are eliminated from the program have the option of gaining entry at a later time by raising their grade point averages and/or re-taking the entrance tests. Students will be allowed to apply for admission to the program twice.

Price said that the teacher supply and demand in the state was not considered as much as the enrollment cap as financial matters.

However, he noted that recent studies in Wisconsin suggest that as few as 30 percent of the teacher education graduates from state colleges and universities found regular classroom teaching jobs last year.

It's not to say, he added, that there aren't shortages in some areas of teaching. Demand is particularly high, he said, for teachers in special education areas, especially in the northern third of the state.

Student funding for hemp education? Harvest Fest Supporters go for the gusto

by Sarah L. Newton
Editor-in-Chief

Cash is hard to get no matter where you look. Be it from your mom when you're 16 and going on a date, or getting funding from the government, or even the work world after you graduate, when entry level means slave wages. Like a title, or a smile out of a grouchy person - things you work for... you work for.

This concept is much more enhanced in the area of Universities and student organization funding.

To say one organization is more important than another, without getting your nose hairs ripped out (ouch!), is almost impossible, until annual budget time rolls around.

Every year, organizations like SGA and UAB proportionately get more money than most, given they do service the highest number of students. Is this because their goals and actions are more important to students than say... sports, fine arts, or diversity organizations? Or are their goals and actions are more important and better FOR the students than the others?

Regardless of in whose best interest the budget allocations are made, there is a new group of students (who pay $187.60 per semester in segregated fees) who have been temporarily recognized as a student organization, and want funding.

Hold onto your teeth, and anything else that may be in danger of coming loose, this group calls themselves The Harvest Fest Supporters, and they do exactly that. When they go in front of SGA's finance committee (they haven't yet, but plan to), they will be asking your Student Government for money to take at least 40 students, in a University vehicle to Madison to "gather literature" in order to come back and educate anyone who will listen on the environmenting many more; expecting almost all to want to attend Harvest Fest.

I've learned a lot in the past few days about the support for and opposition to the legalization of marijuana. I can't exactly say I'm in support of it, but the environmentally beneficial facts backing legalization are nothing to sneeze at: The USDA says 10,000 acres planted in Hemp will yield as over, the group plans to disband except for a few members who would like to start a NORML (National Organization for The Reform of Marijuana Laws) chapter at UWSP. If this becomes a permanent organization, one with constant issues to tackle and goals to accomplish, it will be a different story.

I agree with the idea of everyone having a chance to ASK for funding. Hell, everyone deserves a fair shake, especially when we all pay seg fees. But let's put this thing in perspective.

Organizations like SGA and UAB are formed for the benefit of every student, not just the ones who are interested in politics, or entertainment. If The Harvest Fest Supporters are given funding from SGA, it will be like each of us giving them $5.00 to go to Madison, learn about pot, and come back to tell us all about it. NOT! By the way, if anyone wants to join a Spring Break in Tahiti Supporters group, let me know, maybe we can get some cash from SGA!

Whether I support the legalization of pot or not has little to do with whether I agree to student government funding of The Harvest Fest Supporter's little trip (are they anything like athletic supporters?).

The Harvest Fest Supporters formed their organization for the sole purpose of going to Harvest Fest. As soon as the Fest is mental, industrial, and medicinal benefits of Hemp, or Marijuana. (cklmp! Pardon me, just a little hack I can't get rid of, maybe I should call Mr. Jay).

For anyone who doesn't know what Harvest Fest is, I'll explain. It's tons of people, everyday people, getting together on and around the lawn of The Library in Madison to socially deliberate problems with and in the government, societal norms, and things in general, and smoke a bunch of pot (Marijuana, Hemp, whatever) in the process.

Last year, 25,000 of these everyday people were at Harvest Fest. The first meeting of The UWSP Harvest Fest Supporters consisted of 40 "members," and spokesperson Mike Schumacher is hoping for and

Nay in print, Yea in concept

Dear Editor:

After the second edition of THE POINTER came out, I realized that something was missing, that something was a simple line stating "Dedicated to the Preservation of the First Amendment." That simple statement, that has been so easily erased from our paper, is one of the foundations of this country. This privilege, granted to us by the Bill of Rights, is one of the most commonly violated student freedoms.

This being the 25th anniversary of the "Student Bill of Rights," I feel it very important to have this placed back in our student newspaper. The Student Bill of Rights is being rejuvenated this year after it's lame existence in the past few years and to celebrate this fact Wisconsin is hosting the national kickoff (being the ever-so-progressive state that we are).

For most of you who are wondering what this bill is, it was a document compiled for students by students, dealing with issues that affect us. Issues such as the drinking age, having student voice in administrative decisions (an example on our campus, where no student input was received, was the removal of "The Daily"), and of course, freedom of speech.

The actual kickoff date is October 17th, in Green Bay. Why Green Bay, nothing goes on there! WRONG! Some of the most blatant violations of freedom of speech have occurred there, example, the Chancellor closes the student run radio station in Green Bay for no given reason. THAT SUCKS, HOW WOULD THE EDITOR OF THIS PAPER FEEL IF SHE DIDN'T HAVE A PAPER TO EDIT, or SVO and WWSP without any broadcasting power.

So bring back "Dedicated to the preservation of the First Amendment," and let's make sure our student rights aren't stepped on.

David J. Kunze

Is this Lame Enough?

Dear Editor

I see we've made it through the first 3 weeks at the big U without the loss of too much life and limb. Generally the first three weeks are not considered the hardest, but I realize that for some of you underclassmen it's been really tough with the closing of Ella's and all. But they're back open now, so Thursday puckers are back on the schedule.

And you freshpeople--you'll catch on soon enough.

I'm Dan Krause, and I just thought I'd earn some of the measly wages you pay me as the Legislative Affairs Director of SGA. Writing this trash is as good as bending paper clips at my desk.

Speaking of trash--would the wonderbrains who keep throwing their aluminum in the classroom cans knock it off? Is recycling not cool now that everyone's doing it? There are recycle bins just down the hall. Don't make me have to say it again.

Last year UWSP was recognized by the EPA as the college campus with the best recycling program in the United States. That is something that we can be damn proud of. Let that be a precedent, and let's move ahead.

We should look into using recycled paper in the campus computers as well as in the copiers, and for faculty, staff, and student supplies. Along with conserving trees, chemicals, and energy, we would be helping to create a demand for all that paper we recycle every week.

If UWSP bought recycled paper, it would help create a demand for recycled products which would bring prices down and encourage more companies to make and use recycled stuff.

A new addition is planned for College of Natural Resources building. Wouldn't it be a keen idea to use alternative energy sources in its design?

Then there's the problem of that smokestack at the north end of campus. It's nice that we burn waste pellets in there, but what makes that black smoke? Pouring tons of pollutants into the air every semester doesn't seem like such a good thing for a campus that is supposed to be conservation-wise.

Because it was built before environmental laws could gag it, the stack is free to belch that crap into the community. So now communities and companies want to pay our campus to burn their waste because they can't burn stuff in their facilities; it would cost too much for them to meet the pollution guidelines. Should our campus make money by being a pollution peddler? Not.

"OK, but what can we do?" Become involved and check out the Campus Greens (meetings Tuesdays 7:30 U.C.) or join the Legislative Affairs Committee of SGA (Meet Wednesdays at 5:00 Red Room U.C.); we will be working with these and similar issues this semester.

Or you could just pop open a frosty one and leave the work to someone else.

Bow Hunting For The Heathen

by Buck Jennings
Outdoors Editor

Last Friday evening saw me whiling away the hours in my favorite downtown saloon. The night was at such a fever-pitch that I instantly found myself reading the gripping story of a local crossing guard in the local rag. The car missed him by inches! Wide-eyed, I read on with a fervor.

My attention was torn away from this epic-thriller by a fascinating tale being spun at the back of the tavern. My jaw must have dropped and my eyes grown wider. I sat spell-bound listening to a man describe in great detail the methods in which he had fixed his glasses. On and on he extolled the virtues of the particular tape he had chosen. I laughed I cried

I was awoken by a friend of mine, raging impotent. I explained that in central Wisconsin "raging, impotent" carries a stiff fine and a possible prison sentence. To no avail. On she raged.

The crux of her anxieties were this; how come guys are so squirrely during hunting season? Are they in the rut?

I understood her dilemma and sympathized. With this article I will try to shed light on some of bow hunting's quirks and eccentricities. I will give you a closer look at some of the equipment. Most of this equipment could warrant an article of its own so I will be brief. Then a look at one of my typical outings.

The first part of the shooting equipment consists of a bow. The bow can be a classic nofrills recurve usually made of laminated fiber-glass and wood or a compound bow. A recurve bow with a 55 pound draw-weight means you are pulling back 55 pounds weight. A compound bow can be of weights up to 85 pounds but cams and physics allow for let-off. An 80 pound bow with 50% let-off means that you are only holding back about 40 pounds (the bows actually weigh under 5 pounds).

Bows shoot arrows. Arrows can be cedar, for recurve bows, and aluminum or graphite for compounds. These arrows are tipped with broad-heads. Broad-heads typically consist of razor-sharp blades sweeping from a central axis. Many of these are over enthusiastically bladed and quite hilarious. While parrousing this section in the sport-shop I am filled with the same mirth that over-takes me in the art institute of Chicago's Hall of Weapons. Imagining the weapon designers original twisted intention strikes me as funny. But I digress

This brings me to tree stands. A tree stand places the hunter above the animals line of vision and can keep your scent above detection. Treestands come in a variety of manufactured varieties, which on public land must be packed in and removed each night. A hunter can also make use of a natural "stand" such as a blown down tree. I personally prefer to mount a crotch in a tree (though I never know where to hang my pants).

Camouflage is our next topic. I will argue that if a hunter

A Typical Hunt For Buck The Dork

I generally hunt in the evening, and after doning my camouflage and safe guard against my scent I creep out to my stand. Getting to my stand is a lot like sneaking through my parents house late night as a high school student. I usually bait my stand with apples and after reaching it with as little disturbance as possible I scatter a few apples around. When placing apples about I try to touch them as little as possible and keep movements to a minimum. I wear rubber boots to avoid leaving a scent on the ground as a further safeguard I try not to walk around much.

I make use of a blown down tree as a stand and I hang my bow on a branch before climbing up. I climb to my stand in this manner to avoid falling on my bow or on my broad heads. If they kill keer they can certainly kill me.

Once situated in my stand I concentrate on relaxing thus, keeping movement to a minimum. I will sit in this manner until about one-half hour after dark.

Mounting An Appeal To The Faculty

by Buck Jennings
Outdoors Editor

Well, I'm mounting another appeal. The last appeal I mounted sits idly by smoking a cigarette. This appeal is to the faculty.

Interested in tearing down the barriers between students and instructors? What better place than in the Pointer? Though it's the University newspaper, the Pointer is widely held as the student newspaper. I would like to open this forum to interested faculty members.

I would be willing to print any articles written by faculty members on about any subject. Subject matter should include outdoor activity (not by any means, restricted to hunting and fishing) or an environmentally related topic.

Letters, Stories, articles etc... should be dropped off at the Pointer News Room 104 in the Communications Building. Material should be directed to the Outdoors Column. I sincerely hope that some of you will take advantage of the opportunity.

Tournament Impacts Questioned

A second meeting of the tournament fishing workshop committee preparing a report for the Natural Resource Board will be held at 10 a.m., Tuesday, Oct. 8, 1991, at the Best Western Royale Motel at Stevens Point, said Ron Poff, DNR Chief of Fish Operations.

The 23-member committee is preparing a report to be presented at the December meeting of the Natural Resources Board, the citizen policy-setting board of the Department of Natural Resources.

Membership on the committee is composed of representatives from the DNR, Conservation Congree, Northern Governor's Council, Wisconsin Federation of Great Lakes Sports Fishing Clubs, Wisconsin Council of Sports Fishing Organizations, Wisconsin Wildlife Federation, Manufacturers Walleye Council, Country World Productions, and Wisconsin Chapters of Muskies Inc.

"It's the intent of the group at this next meeting to develop a draft report to be ready to take to the Natural Resources Board," added Poff.

The group has identified 12 key issues in developing a policy on tournament fishing:

*the concept of over-use--too much pressure on a limited resource;

*a perception of unethical use of over-use of the resource;

*excessive, unsafe boat traffic, crowding of access and fishing areas;

*insensitivity of tournament anglers to local resource values and concerns;

*law enforcement concerns of snagging, overbagging, group bagging, sorting, fishing in refuges and unattended lines;

remains motionless, camo is not needed. Most hunters wear clothing with patterns mimicking brush, tree bark or mossy oaks, as opposed to insurance salesmen. Deer hate insurance salesmen. Deer hate insurance salesmen.

Perhaps the most important aspect of camouflage is camouflaging your scent. Deer are extremely scent oriented. If they smell you they are gone.

Hunters are offered liquid products supposedly which remove or neutralize human scent. Liquid cover scents are supposed to cover-up human scent. Cover scents come in many varieties, from earth-scent to skunk scent, to the ever popular, 'coon, fox and coyote urine. Sorry, we're fresh out of squirrel fart.

Hunters are also offered a variety of food scents to attract deer, acorn, apple, peanut butter, and corn, to name a few. A broad category of scent attractants are called sex scents. These are scents that mimic a doe in heat or a rival buck, playing upon a bucks' territorial nature during the rut.

There is endless debate as to the effectiveness of these hormone-type scents. Manufacturers and professional hunters endorsing these products agree that they work. Researchers feel that this is partially true. Most will agree that if an attractive sex-hormone or chemical were found that was 100% effective, it would be illegal.

This brings us to the rut. The rut refers loosely to a time of year and directly to a condition. Thus a buck can be seen in the rut in rut. Confused yet? The human animal can breed successfully throughout the year, hell, throughout the day, but deer can only breed at one time of year. The time of the rut. When the rut occurs is a function of photo-period and temperature. It usually occurs in late October to early November.

The rut is important to the hunter because bucks become very active. Bucks are out actively protecting territories and trying to breed with does in heat. During this time a buck's neck swells, some fighting may occur and the animals are generally preoccupied and less wary. A hunters' chances increase substantially when the animal drops its guard.

Are you still with me? It's safe to assume that at this point I've lost about 80% of my original readership. Oh well. To wrap this up, I hope this article helps to explain some of the wacky behavior illisted by bow hunters, ie hanging clothes in the yard to deodorize them, going to sleep early not letting you smoke in the house and being generally lame. Educate yourselves to the kooky behavior of the bow-hunter. Meet their innanity with understanding. Keep in mind that Ted Nugent, the motor city madman is a bow-hunter, and he's cool.

If deer come past, I check my watch and make a note of the time. I record each night's happenings, trying to establish a pattern on animals in the area.

At the end of an evening I sneak back to my truck.

It might not seem like much fun, but you would be surprised at the amount of wildlife you can observe by simply sitting still for a few hours. Its these animals which make the experience enjoyable. The excitement however comes from seeing deer, and hoping, hoping, hoping it's that monster buck.

Affirmative action battles discrimination

by Linda Richmond

Contributor

"The average white female employee makes 66 cents for every $1.00 the average white male earns," says Judy Goldsmith, a UWSP special consultant to the chancellor for equity and affirmative action. Goldsmith continues by stating that "the average black male earns 77 cents" for every white male's dollar.

Goldsmith believes that the blame for this difference rests on the shoulders of conscious and unconscious perceptions which result in discrimination.

Affirmative action was established through presidential executive order number 11246, which was created to ensure that the entire work force was researched in the hiring process. The order was established during the early 70's and was necessary to remove the limitations that had developed:

"Before affirmative action," says Goldsmith, "personnel managers would merely think of associates and friends who were like them, male and white, whenever employment opportunities would arise." The affirmative action legislation encouraged a removing of blinders in order that the entire work force could be examined. The UWSP Affirmative Action Office is primarily concerned with the prevention of discriminatory behaviors and attitudes rather than placing an emphasis on a prescription. According to Goldsmith, much of the answer to discrimination in the work place remains within the area of outreach concentration.

"We work with every search and screen process on campus and we encourage a broad outreach emphasis. Decisions are made in a step by step legitimate process," she explains.

When asked to comment on how discriminatory harassment could be halted on a large scale, Goldsmith responded by saying that the major obstacle remains in the "business and corporate world" and that the implications of this will be very detrimental on a national level:

"Human resource areas are not being used; there will be serious disadvantages on the world trade market level. Other nations are utilizing their human resources to their fullest extent...and we are not."

Judy Goldsmith is responsible for the education and programming which supports outreach efforts and strives toward the "improvement of campus climate for women, people of color and ultimately for all of us. If we better the environment for others, we ourselves will ultimately be affected... to quote John Donne, 'no man in an island'."

Pointer Profile: Bridgett advocates change through diversity

by Julie Apker

Features Editor

Steven Bridgett wants to know what has happened to UWSP's black student population. The residence hall director for Steiner Hall, Bridgett has seen seven black students leave the university within the last year. He has questions, and no one is providing him with reasons for their departure.

"In my opinion, there is a definite commitment from the entire UW-System and Chancellor Sanders to bring cultural diversity to UWSP and other state campuses," said Bridgett. "I hear and read about increasing cultural diversity on this campus, but there's a gap with what's actually going on. Our recruitment is poor and retention is worse."

"UWSP students need to start asking questions and getting the facts."

In a recent interview, Bridgett expressed his views about the status of cultural diversity at UWSP and the efforts to recruit and retain students, faculty, and administrators who are people of color. A UWSP hall director for the past three years, he has been a vocal advocate for integrating persons of different family and environmental orientations in higher education.

According to Bridgett, the term cultural diversity encompasses not only issues of race, but also differences of age, gender and ethnic backgrounds. Bridgett's belief that students of color need support from role models at the college level inspired him to make a career change and work at UWSP.

"Many times, when multi-cultural students graduate from high school, they also leave behind support and encouragement," he said. "In this environment, some diversified students feel isolated. They are faced with a situation where they are suspended; not connected to a new whiter culture and yet disconnected to their past."

At UWSP, about 300 students are people of color. Bridgett is positive about past and current receptiveness demonstrated by white students for a more culturally diverse campus. Despite this openness however, he considers the move to a university setting to be a tradeoff for many multi-cultural students and one that possesses opportunities and challenges.

"Often, students want to get away from home and the negative situations or dangers that exist there," commented Bridgett. "They hope to experience the excitement of campus life, but what happens is that the perceived excitement and opportunity is lost. Unfortunately, not being included... for success, involvement, and social outlets here often means they leave before graduating."

Although significant challenges exist, he believes students need to be told the truth about the situation in higher education. Bridgett thinks that if presented with the facts and given a choice, students of color will not become disillusioned as easily and stay with higher education.

Former football pro to visit UWSP

by Brady Kiel
Contributor

In the spirit of October Alcohol Awareness Month, the UWSP Chapter of BACCHUS (Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students), the UWSP Athletic Assistance Program, and the NCAA are promoting the upcoming visit of public speaker Keith Nord. Nord will be giving a presentation entitled, "Will Alcohol and Drugs get You What You Want" at UWSP.

Nord is a former Minnesota Viking who is now an accomplished public speaker and consultant. Since his football days ended in 1985, Keith has built his reputation as a public speaker considerably. After a limited number of presentations during his football career, Nord conducts over 150 presentations and workshops annually. His genuine, hometown personality has contributed to a speaking style that makes him unique among former athletes in the public eye. His ability to reach the listener overshadows the aura of his status as a former NFL player allowing more personal contact between audience and speaker. Keith Nord is definitely a "must see." He will speak on Wednesday, October 2, at 7:00 pm in the Wisconsin Room at the University Center.

Look for this and other BACCHUS-sponsored events on campus during October Alcohol Awareness Month. BACCHUS is an organization set on making students aware of alcohol issues and problems, alternative activities, and promoting responsible alcohol use and respect for state laws.

"Rush" rolls out the rock

by Ed Porter
Contributor

The Canadian progressive rock trio, Rush, has reentered the music charts with their 14th studio release, "Roll The Bones." Their second outing on the Atlantic records label, the album follows in the wake of their successful greatest hits compilation, "Chronicles". Stylistically, "Roll The Bones" continues in the same direction established with their 1989 release, "Presto." Rush has concentrated their music, getting back to the three piece approach with a focus on vocal arrangements and textured use of synthesizers. The album opens with the first single, "Dreamline," a fast paced journey through various lyrical ideas. The band's lyricist, drummer Neil Peart, ventures into varied tales and themes throughout while a recurring motif of fate gives way to the album title. The featured instrumental, "Where's My Thing?" is the first for Rush since "YYZ" from Moving Pictures. Other highlights include the title track, "Roll The Bones," "Face Up," and "Ghost Of A Chance". With the 10 track, 48 minute release, Roll The Bones, Rush remains an uncompromising, highly talented band. Exploring new styles while maintaining their musical edge, they continue to generate strong music on their own terms as evident in the band's longevity and following.

"UWSP students need to start asking questions and getting the facts," he said. "Right now the numbers of culturally diverse students aren't where they should be. Students of color don't see enough representation of diversity on campus in the form of academics, programming, or in the student body itself."

Bridgett is actively involved in bringing multiethnic programs to campus, both in his role as a hall director and in his involvement with student organizations. In addition to his efforts at the university, he helps coordinate community events such as the annual musical event "Gospelfest" and a tennis exchange program held with students from the Chicago area every summer at Sentryworld. The project stems from Bridgett's own interest in tennis, a sport he has played for the past 18 years.

"I'm interested in keeping traditions, but instilling new ones also," he explained.

Pointers Lose Close Game to Division II Wayne State 22-17 Prepare for Home Debut in Spud Bowl Against Whitewater

by Mark Gillette
Sports Editor

The Pointer football team traveled to Wayne State, Nebraska last Saturday to take on the division II Wildcats. UWSP lost 22-17, in a very close, hard hitting game.

The game was the Pointers third straight game away from home against a formidable opponent.

Wayne State, 2-2-0, scored first on Troy Mott's 15 yard pass to Lee Harper with 13:09 remaining in the first quarter. The point after attempt failed, so the score remained 6-0.

After Jeff Mallak sacked Mott deep in Wildcat territory, Mott fumbled and the Pointers recovered at the three yard line. On the next play, Jimmy Henderson went in from the third yard line for the touchdown. Dave Schneider's point after attempt was successful and the Pointers were up 7-6.

Wayne State's defense rose to the occasion in the middle of the second quarter when Cory Reeder tackled Jimmy Henderson in the end zone for a safety. The Wildcats were up 8-7.

Wayne State closed out the scoring in the first half with 29 seconds left as Mott threw a seven yard touchdown pass to Lamar Daniels. The scoring drive occurred after a Roger Hauri pass was intercepted by Terry Bear at the Pointer 30 yard line. At half time the score was 15-7.

The first half, as well as the second half, was characterized by tough defensive football by both teams.

Coach John Miech was very happy with the defensive play of the Pointers. "Our defense hit their receivers hard. Our defensive team as a whole was super." Stevens Point forced six fumbles and two interceptions to create a total of eight Wildcat turnovers. The eight turnovers were a Wayne State record and a tribute to the UWSP defense.

Wayne State came out in the second half and scored immediately with 13:27 remaining in the third quarter on a 20 yard pass from Mott to Marlon Goolsby. The point after attempt was good and the Wildcats were up 22-7.

The Pointers struck back later in the third quarter after Mark Leidel of UWSP intercepted a Mott pass at the UWSP 43. A couple of plays later Hauri launched a 46 yard touchdown pass to Scott Zwirschitz. Schneider's point after attempt was good and the score closed to 22-14.

Miech felt at this point that, "For the first time this season the offense started to click." Adwith 8:40 left in the game.

On the Wildcats next possession they drove from their own 30 yard line to the Pointer 35 before Andy Chilcote recovered a Mott fumble.

The Pointers could not drive on their next series and punted back to the Wildcats. There was a fumble on the return, which was recovered by Mallak at the Wayne State 37.

On the next play Hauri threw a pass to Barry Rose for a 21 yard gain. Rose fumbled on the play to stop the drive with 2:01 remaining.

UWSP did get the ball back for one last chance when Dean Bryan returned a punt 17 yards to the Wildcat 27. After no gain on the first two plays, Hauri threw toward the end zone on third down and was intercepted for a touchback.

The tough Wayne State defense held the Pointers in check, and in the final 1:09, Wayne State ran down the clock to secure their 22-17 victory.

Leading the Pointers in running was Henderson with 83 yards. Henderson will make his home debut for the Pointers this Saturday against Whitewater. Coach Miech sees good things coming from Henderson "especially when the offensive line gets."

Hauri ended the day 19 of 35 for 210 yards with two interceptions. Of those yards, 132 went to wide receiver Rose on 13 catches. Coach Miech feels Rose is "the best receiver in the conference. Hauri has a great ability to find Rose when he's open," he said.

Stevens Point, 0-2-1, is preparing this week for their first home game against the Whitewater Warhawks. The Warhawks were ranked number one nationally in the preseason polls, but after getting upset 16-14 last weekend against UW-Superior, their record is 1-2.

"We're glad we're home, and we're excited to see the fans," commented Coach Miech.

The game will be at Goerke Field at 7 p.m. on Saturday night as part of the Spud Bowl.

"Were glad we're home, and we're excited to see the fans"

ding, "We felt we could score when we had the chance."

In the fourth quarter the Pointers stopped two Wildcat drives with their defense. Leidel made his second interception of a Mott pass in the Pointer end zone for a touchback, keeping the Pointers in the game. After the interception the Pointers drove to the Wayne State 28 yard line. Schneider proceeded to kick a 46 yard field goal to make the score 22-17

Golf Sets Two Day Record of 781

by Mark Gillette
Sports Editor

The UWSP golf team set an all-time two day record for UWSP by golfing a 781 on September 22-23 at the Stevens Point Invitational.

UW-Eau Claire got second in the meet, which was played at the Stevens Point Country Club, with 801 points.

UWSP had two of the top three golfers in the meet. Jason Zahradka swung a 76 on the first day and a 74 on the second day to place first.

Brian Steinke shot a 79 the first day, and a 75 on the second for 154 and a tie for second place.

Pointer Jason Allen shot an 83 the first day, but came back the second day and shot a super 74 to gain sixth with 157 points.

In tenth place was Rich Krzykowski with a 78-83, totaling 161 points.

Jason Summers and Todd Gaynor golfed a 166 and 170 respectively to finish the Pointer scoring.

The WSUC Golf standings through the second leg has UWSP in first with 18, and UW-

Eau Claire a close second with 16.

Rugby Falls to Defeat in Conference Opener

by Steve Galo
Contributor

Point Rugby traveled to Eau Claire this past weekend and played in their first conference match of the season.

The final score didn't bode well for UWSP. It was 16-0 at half time. Plagued by more than a dozen penalties, it seemed that every time UWSP got down near its try something would go wrong and those nasty words that kept ringing in their ears, "Penalty to Point. . . Back Ten," would once again reverberate.

The second half looked a little brighter. UWSP only allowed UW-Eau Claire to score once, and it also got to put some points on the board with a try by Tim

"so that's what the road looks like" Wandtke. UWSP also kept the penalties to under ten too. The final score was Eau Claire 20, Point 4.

The B players should be commended for their efforts. In the second game they produced some excellent play. The guys have also stuck with the game, new to them, even though they haven't had an easy time getting used to it. Congratulations on a fine effort.

Point Rugby would like to invite all to come watch and cheer them on. They will host Appleton this Saturday at 1 p.m. at the field on the corner of Michigan and Maria across from the Village Apartments. Be there or be square.

UWSP Runs Well at Wombat

by Mike McGill
Contributor

A cool, sunny day with little wind resistance met the Stevens Point Cross Country Teams at the Wombat Invitational in Sheboygan last weekend.

An all grass combination of hills and flat ground made for a fairly tough course and slow times as the women's team finished fourth.

Senior runner Nancy Kortenkamp finished 20th (21:53) in the four year women individuals, performing commendably in her first race of the season, and freshmen Tami Moyer looked good, ending up 25th (22:18).

Other women's finishers included Jessie Laughrey, Jenny Bowman, Berkley Cameron, and Becky Ames.

The women are currently ranked 15th in the NCAA Division 3 poll, while the men rank 8th, thanks in part to their 2nd place finish at Wombat.

Stevens Point runners Rob Martin placed sixth at 27:46, Pat McKenna (ninth, 28:11), Todd Good (10th, 28:13), Scott Johnson (14th), Jed Zondlo (15th) and Adam Olson (19th) all cracked the top 20.

The Pointer Cross Country Teams' next meet are this Saturday at the UW-Whitewater Invitational.

Women's Soccer Keeps Winning

by Mike McGill
Contributor

The UWSP Women's Soccer team played some high intensity soccer last week, losing their road game in overtime but emerging victorious at home.

On Wednesday, September 18, UWSP held the number one ranked team in the region, St. Mary's, as well as themselves scoreless through regulation.

UWSP goalie Sue Radmer kept busy with 16 saves, but it wasn't enough as St. Mary's took advantage of a couple of mistakes and lucky breaks to score twice in overtime, sealing the game at 2-0.

On Friday, September 20, the Pointers took their home field and made quick work of St. Scholastica College, scoring both of their goals in the first half.

Suzi Lindauer fired one in unassisted 60 seconds into the contest. Jenny Bradley, with some help from Lindauer and Kim Lueneberg, added another with about a minute and a half remaining before halftime.

UWSP outshot St. Scholastica 21-8 and Radmer and Jenny Reith combined to register four saves.

The Pointers are now 5-1-1 overall, good enough for 7th place in the NCAA division 3 Far West Region rankings.

Their next game is at Ripon this Saturday versus Ripon College at 11 a.m.

Pennant Races Heat Up

With the Pittsburgh Pirates clinching the National League's Eastern Division this past weekend, there's three more division winners to be decided.

In the National League West, the Los Angeles Dodgers entered week's play with a one and a half game lead over Atlanta, who they beat two out of three games this past weekend in L.A. Many would like to see Atlanta win since they've been the underdogs all season.

Atlanta will have a tough time of it though, as Otis Nixon, their speedy outfielder, was suspended for the rest of the season because drugs were found in his urine.

Tommy Lasorda has been there before and he'll take them again.

In the America League West the Minnesota Twins have it all but wrapped up. By sweeping the Texas Rangers in their weekend series at home, the Twins reduced their magic number to five over the Chicago White Sox.

With the Twins winning the division, it will be the first time since the Twins won the World Series in 1987 that the A's have not won the division.

The American League East race tightened up recently as the Boston Red Sox closed in on the first place Toronto Blue Jays. The Blue Jays are only one and a half games up on the Red Sox. Toronto has a better team on paper, but Boston may surprise and take it all.
