Undercover agents bust house party

By Gregory Vandenberg
NEWS EDITOR

Hosts of a house party unknowingly welcomed two undercover Wisconsin Alcohol and Tobacco Enforcement agents posing as UWSP students last Thursday night.

Much to the surprise of the hosts and the 118 minors being served alcohol, the agents identified themselves after buying cups to gain entrance into the illegal party.

Agents Rick Uhlig and Brett Rogers entered the house at 1428 College Avenue, then proceeded to notify the Stevens Point Police Department of the illegal distribution of alcohol.

"The agents found six persons present who were residents," said James Jenkins, Chief of the Wisconsin Alcohol and Tobacco Enforcement Agency (AT).

"We'll handle any criminal follow-up for those who are involved in running the show," added Jenkins.

According to Jenkins, sending in agents undercover is not a new concept. "That is definitely one of the techniques that we use."

Of the 118 minors attending the party, only two were given citations. The other 116 participants were given warnings and allowed to leave.

"You have to look at the whole picture," said Jenkins. "It was an orderly situation considering the sheer number of people there and their cooperativeness was involved."

The tenants of the house consented to a search once the SPPD arrived. It was then discovered that the party was illegal because the hosts were "procuring for an underage drinker" and "selling alcohol without a general license," according to state law.

The case has been handed over to the Stevens Point District Attorney's office where charges against the tenants are pending.

"We didn't charge anyone criminally," said District Attorney Tom Egan. "We are referring the matter to the city for ordinance violations."

The profits and alcohol were confiscated by AT agents and are currently being held by the SPPD.

"The profits are seized by the state as evidence," said Jenkins.

"If there is a conviction the money goes to the state treasury. I would guess that the SPPD kept the barrels and they'll eventually be destroyed."

College campuses have been targeted by the AT because of the numerous problems with illegal alcohol sales.

"Pure demographics force us to target college cities since our effort is two-fold," said Jenkins. "We want to deter underage drinking, but also insure there are licenses involved in the sale of alcohol."

The AT does not go out looking for parties to bust according to Assistant Chief Roger Johnson. "I really don't know that this is a proactive program," said Johnson. "It is more a reaction to complaints with no real set plan."

The charges that were referred to the Stevens Point D.A. by the AT include two counts of selling alcohol without a license and 118 counts of procuring for an underage drinker.

The penalty for selling with out a license carries a maximum fine of $1,000 and ninety days in jail. Procuring for an underage drinker carries a maximum of $500 for each count.

"I hope this sends a message to everyone about the sales and distribution of alcohol," said Johnson.

Axe set to fall on majors and minors

A line officer's report released Friday outlines prospective budget, personnel and program cuts for the next three fiscal years at UWSP.

40 percent of the projected $1.4 million in program cuts are expected to come from the elimination of the anthropology and food systems management majors, and minors in anthropology, exceptional child in physical education, food systems management, home economics, microelectronics, mild/moderate cognitive disabilities, religious studies, and Russian.

"These proposed cuts are to programs that have declining enrollment or lack of interest by the students," said Acting Chancellor Howard Thoyre.

According to the report, 13.25 FTE (full-time employee) positions will be cut or transferred from state funding.

The total budget cuts at UWSP are expected to be $2.4 million.

"The need for budget cuts is twofold, reductions mandated by the governor and secondly, to meet internal priorities to assure quality fund critical needs," said

Tommy Thompson's new state budget.

"The state budget is partially based on the economic developments of the state, and if economic growth isn't at expected levels, state agencies will be asked to reallocate even more money to the state," said Oswald.

The proposed cuts are not set in stone. "The recommendations of the line officers are open to input until Dec. 15, at which time they will review the input and make their final recommendations," said Oswald.

Students, faculty, parents, and anyone else connected to UWSP are welcomed to contact the line officers and SGA to express their feelings on the proposed cuts.

When the line officers have made their final recommendations, the matter will be turned over to the Chancellor.

The Chancellor's final decision is due on Feb. 8.

United Council sends Feds message

In an effort to protest the largest federal financial aid cuts ever proposed, UW students collected over 18,000 postcards to Wisconsin's Congressional representatives.

The postcards, collected in financial aid lines statewide and delivered today by the United Council of UW Student Governments, urged Wisconsin Senators Herb Kohl and Russ Feingold to continue funding many federal financial aid programs and to oppose the elimination of the Direct Lending program.

"Students are losing the financial aid they need to continue their education, and at the same time the state is decreasing support for the university and raising tuition," said David C. Stacy, President of United Council.

"If these programs are eliminated, students will be priced out of an education."

The postcards, which students collected in less than two weeks, support the continuation of the six-month grace period for student loans and level

UC construction annoys students

By Jennifer Tatro
COPY EDITOR

The sign in the UC reads: "We are sorry for any inconvenience caused during renovation of this area."

A blue tarp hangs next to the table where you eat and blocks the walkway. The hammering and humming of chisels and saws echoes in your ears.

Students on campus are wondering when the construction of the eating area in the University Center will be complete.

"You would think they would have it finished by the time school started," said University student Suzanne Burrows.

Other students are frustrated because of the current lack of selection, high prices and long check-out lines.

According to Jerry Lineberger, Associate Director of University Center, a completion date around mid-October is likely.

"We were aiming for completion in the beginning of October, but I think it would be more safe to say mid-October," Lineberger said.

Lineberger said he was aware of the inconvenience, but is happy with the progress made so far.

"I feel good about the work completed, we have been moving with all due haste ... we wanted to have it finished before classes started, but it just isn't possible to finish a project of this magnitude in three weeks," Lineberger said.

A request for proposal went through last year 2nd semester. Construction of the area began on August 21 of this year.

The completed project will "bring the area into the '90s, brighten it up- so it doesn't look so old and tired," Lineberger said.

In about seven weeks the project will be complete. A grand opening is set for November.

The new area will have three cashiers, a new floor with shades of purple and gold, a deli, a burger stand, soup and salad bar, a serve-yourself split beverage area, a coffee stand selling flavored coffee and bagged coffee, and a bakery.

"The concept is for higher quality and faster service" Lineberger said.

Construction of the whole area will cost $450,000, of which the University pays $150,000.

The remaining $300,000 is footed by the DAKA company, the food contractor in charge of the project.

The construction is part of several other projects on campus which include the DeBot convenience store, the Wooden Spoon area in the UC., the kitchen area in the UC., and an aerobic facility in the Allen Center.

Computer accessibility bytes

By Gina Klosowski
CONTRIBUTOR

It's only the third week of classes, but by the lines in the computer labs, you might think it's midterm time already.

So besides worrying about homework deadlines, now you can also worry about whether or not you'll have access to a computer on campus.

Currently, there are seven labs on campus and one in each residence hall. There are two new labs this year, one in the FAC and one in the CAC.

The FAC lab has six Macintosh computers and the CAC has 16 multimedia Pentium computers.

Each residence hall has five Pentium computers and one Macintosh. This year, extended weekend hours were even added to accommodate the students' needs.

Although this seems to leave the opportunity for computer access wide open, this is not always true.

The lab in the CNR is only for CNR students. The labs in the halls can only be used by students who live there and have paid a $30 user fee.

Also, on the average, two classes are held every day in each lab. Two years ago, the entire DeBot lab was lost due to budget cuts.

Lab assistant, Todd Komop, even thinks computer accessibility is a problem on this campus.

"Students who spend hours on the internet and e-mail monopolize the computers for those students who need to work on assignments," Komop said.

"Students who spend hours on the internet and e-mail monopolize the computers for those students who need to work on assignments."

Todd Komop, Lab Assistant

Student
Lab Manager,

Chris Rutta, said, "I think there are enough computers on campus, but more students are using computers than ever before. This is when accessibility becomes a problem."

Rutta added that she pushed for one 24 hour lab on campus this semester, but the budget, security, and availability of lab assistants put a damper on this idea.

So when you're looking around for a computer on campus, remember ... you're not the only one.

What is your reaction to the expansion of the CNR building?

Bruce Felix, Senior Psychology Major

"I was uninformed until last week. I had no idea what they were breaking ground for."

Lesley Hofstede, Sophomore Undecided Major

"I think it's good that the school is expanding. I think this is a good school."

Matt McDaniel, Sophomore Psychology Major

"It's such a small area. Hopefully, the new building will make up for the damage to the forest."

Heather Varco, Senior Environmental Education Major

"It's inviting education to those who might otherwise have turned away."

Student claims basis for TLC closing inaccurate

Dear Editor:

There is something I do not understand. Why is the Tutoring-Learning Center (TLC) on the list of proposed budget cuts?

Since The Pointer published, "Student Defends Tutoring Center," I have been researching why this University is considering closing the TLC.

I was amazed that inaccurate information was used by a committee, information which formed the basis for that committee's recommendation that the TLC be closed.

The TLC, that I, as a learning disabled student have spent so much time in over the past year, was nothing like what I was reading in this committee's report, a report that will be used in part to make the life or death decision which will affect so many students.

Here is the real story. The TLC is used by 26 percent of the student body at UWSP [1993-94]. That comes to 2,067 students with an average use of eight visits each.

There are 133 tutors currently working. The report claims there are "several unclassified Ph.D.'s on staff. Do we need that many highly paid people..... The fact is, there is only one Ph.D. on staff and she works half time.

The report also leaves the impression that only English and writing are taught in the TLC.

The committee recommends alternatives for the one service it wrongfully believes the TLC offers; for instance, one recommendation is to, "Institute a minimum 'reasonable' writing standard as an exit requirement for students.

This seems to be a way to improve the quality of writing. A reasonable writing ability should be the very least we should demand from UWSP graduates..."

I believe this would mean that instead of having a place to work on your writing, students would simply be tested when trying to graduate; a cart in front of the horse.

The report also states, "Another option would be to connect this to the English GDR and require students to achieve an "A" or "B" grade in English 102 or English 150 in order to graduate."

Upgrading is not a solution for people who need help.

Perhaps the committee was given information that was dated. The TLC was founded 23 years ago and perhaps it was not as diversified as it is today.

The TLC of today teaches writing skills for any subject. Three or four years ago tutoring was centralized at UWSP and the vast majority of tutoring now takes place at the TLC.

Not only do the committee's recommendations leave the impression that the TLC teaches basically English and writing, but the committee fails to include the wide variety of courses tutored at the center, so I will:

ACC 210,211, ART 283, BIOL 100, 101, 130, 160, 210, 281, 285, 333, 378, CHEM 101, 105, 106, 115, 116; CIS 102, 111, COMMD 251, COMM 272, ECON 210, 211; FOR 120, FREN 101, 211, GEOG 101, GERM 101, 102; HIST 106, 107, 212, MATH 51, 100, 101, 102, 106, 108, 109, 111, 120,121, 222,355, NRES 270,372, PHYS 101; RUSS 101, SOIL 260, SPAN 101, 102, WATR 180; and WILD140.

This list is for group tutoring and does not include one-on-one for the non-trad and learning disabled and others.

I myself have several classes not listed in the above. This course list is not exhaustive. The TLC will make every effort to help anyone in any course.

The TLC is funded for one more year and it will hopefully not be closed if accurate information is used in making the final determination.

With 25 percent of the student body upgrading their work in the TLC, the student body will feel the impact of it's closing first.

This will be followed by the professors who will be suddenly confronted with lower quality student work, and students who need more help and can no longer find it.

Having had tutors all of my life, I can tell you from many years of experience that the recommendations for replacing the TLC are not workable.

Respectfully submitted,
Jeffrey D. Schira

UC staff welcomes comments

Dear Editor:

In response to last week's letter from Laura Routh concerning the new Taco Bell in the UC, I would like to offer some additional information.

The Centers are firmly committed to recycling. We employ an excellent student staff as part of Program Services to assist in our recycling efforts.

Last year we as a campus recycled over 351,000 pounds of paper, 44,500 pounds of glass, 10,100 pounds of no. 1 and no. 2 plastic, 24,700 pounds of aluminum, 178,300 pounds of cardboard, and over 1,300 pounds of five gallon plastic food pails.

The food service operations at UWSP are proud to be part of an excellent campus recycling effort and to help the campus serve as national leaders in the percentage of recycled materials diverted from landfill.

As soon as the owners of Taco Bell realized the degree of paper usage in their new location, they asked about using trays to address the problem. We have implemented the use of trays for Taco Bell in the UC for those dining within the Center.

In addition, customers are given a bag for Taco Bell purchases only upon request to prevent unnecessary paper usage.

Program Services has placed additional blue recycling bins in the vicinity to encourage recycling.

Wherever possible we use condiment dispensers. Taco Bell currently has a program utilizing individual portion packs for some items.

My recommendation is that customers use only what is necessary for their purchase. We will communicate the concern for packaging waste to Taco Bell.

Jerry L. Wilson, General Manager for DAKA Restaurants, members of the University Centers Advisory and Policy Board (UCAPB), Centers staff, and myself continually review all Centers operations for potential improvements.

We welcome any comments and suggestions about our operations and services.

Sincerely,
Jerry Lineberger
Associate Director University Centers

UC loses comfort

Dear Editor:

Show me a place with the decor of a hotel waiting room and the warmth of a hospital cafeteria, and I'll show you the UC Building.

Garth was right. Humans resist change!

In the realm of the world, the UC make-over is smaller than a neutrino, but I'm a commuter and having a home away from home was a nice touch.

To be honest, I miss those orange couches that sank to the floor when I sat in them.

And the dark oak chairs in the Encore created an atmosphere totally unique to this University. So why has this place been stripped of all its character?

I was hoping you'd write an article regarding this issue. Perhaps you could answer the questions why all the changes?

How much is it costing us? Students do care! I know that, simply from all the negative comments I've heard. So, go with it! Thanks.

Sincerely,
Heidi Sorensen

Once again the Democrats and Republicans are up on the Hill exchanging punches over where budget cuts should occur and what programs should stay untouched.

It seems as though welfare has come to the forefront as the one program that legislatures simply have no idea what to do with.

Republican Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas was quoted as saying that people on welfare are "in the wagon and ought to get out and help the rest of us pull."

Now granted I may oversimplify things when it comes to the government, administration, and red-tape, but if Gramm can say something as oversimplified and generalized as this, I think I can too.

First off, people forget how many of us are actually in "the wagon" that Gramm speaks of.

Now I'm not saying we are all on welfare, but millions of Americans are somehow helped through Federal government funding.

If anyone realizes this, it should certainly be students. Millions of dollars are given to students each year through Federal financial aid.

Whether it is through grants or loans, many of us have been allowed to continue our education because of Federal funding. It follows then, that students, too are "in the wagon."

Since we are in the heart of the potato belt here in Stevens

Point, agriculture must be looked at.

Farmers are given money to not plant crops on fields they own to decrease surplus and control the fluctuation of the economy.

These Federal agricultural subsidies defer the losses a farmer would face if he simply did not plant crops on the fields. So farmers too are "in the wagon."

Does anyone out there work in any sort of manufacturing corporation or factory? Well, you too are involved.

Year in and year out the government gives tax breaks and even Federal funding to ensure that manufacturing firms stay above water.

These multimillion dollar corporations are a substantial portion of our economy, and the government helps them to maintain a certain level of prosperity.

So, any employee of a factory is "in the wagon," right?

I hope you're starting to get my point. That is one big wagon! I can't think of one industry or individual that isn't somehow affected by Federal funding or intervention.

Whether we're receiving enough money or if the cut of money is fair isn't really the point. The point is that we all reap the benefits of the government and none of us want to give up our portion of the collective pot.

It's funny how so many people can complain about the staggering numbers our national deficit

As many of you have heard, the UWSP Line Officers have released a report outlining where many budget cuts will be made at UWSP.

I encourage each of you to look at these reports on the campus network (through Oriel) and voice your opinions.

Please address any comments to myself at SGA-Campus Activities-Box 72. I will also be happy to answer any questions you have on the cuts.

Student Government will be going through the entire proposal and submitting our comments to the Line Officers in early December.

It is vital to realize that we all have a chance to offer new suggestions and comments until December 15.

At that time, the reports will be finalized and sent to Chancellor Howard Thoyre for his final decision on which areas will be cut, phased-out, or eliminated.

There is a rather sad update on Financial Aid. Both the House of Representatives and the Senate agreed to cut $10.5 billion from the Stafford loan program.

The House Appropriations Committee adopted a plan to remove 2,800,000 students from the Pell Grant program, while at the same time eliminating the Student Incentive Grant program, and level funding at 1995 levels for many other student aid programs.

Some members of Congress have also introduced an amendment that student groups have labeled the "Campus Gag Rule", which would cut all federal funds to universities that allow student activity fees to be used to fund campus based groups involved in activities aimed at "influencing public policy".

That could mean that organizations that are funded by SGA could not be funded if they were to lobby for changes in public policy.

A strict interpretation of this could mean that Student Government would not be able to lobby for lower (or stabilized) tuition, state or federal financial aid programs, or be able to financially support organizations that lobby.

I have been in contact with our representatives on this issue to let them know how detrimental this amendment could be to students at UWSP.

We are attending UWSP in a time that will not be forgotten.

This is the year that UWSP will redefine its focus with academic programs.

This is also the single worst year that students have ever seen for reductions in financial aid.

Now, more than ever, UWSP needs you to get involved! Strive to find time to get involved with the organizations you want to protect!

SGA has a few openings in the Student Senate, and we are always looking for new people. The decisions we make this year need your input and ideas. For more information please call 346-4036.

ACTIVE OR INACTIVE?

For legal and practical reasons, student organizations need to be re-recognized each fall to maintain formal recognition status. To complete the re-recognition process, the following is required:

- 1) A list of current officers with addresses and phone numbers.
- 2) An Advisor Contract Form which your advisor needs to sign, stating that he/she will advise your group (forms are available in the Campus Activities/Student Involvement Office).
- 3) A copy of your constitution if changes have been made within the past three years. (NOTE: Constitutions need to be revised/updated a minimum of once every three years.)
- 4) Attendance WHICH IS MANDATORY at ONE of two re-recognition meetings (PRESIDENTS or DESIGNEES) scheduled on September 26 and 27, 7PM in the Wright Lounge of the University Center.

Services will NOT be provided to your organization until the above process has been completed. Please re-register AS SOON AS POSSIBLE in the Campus Activities/Student Involvement Office, University Center.

Groups not re-recognized by Friday, September 29 will have their organization appear under the INACTIVE SECTION of the Student Organization Directory. PLEASE VISIT CAMPUS ACTIVITIES/STUDENT INVOLVEMENT TO REMAIN ACTIVE!

Plan for restructuring the DNR approved by board

By Linda Schmid
TYPESETTER

A plan for internal restructuring of the Department of Natural Resources (D.N.R.) was approved by the Natural Resources Board this summer in the interests of meeting growing service demands and financial challenges. Reorganization begins January 1, 1996 and is scheduled to be completed by December 31, 1996.

The plan calls for a new emphasis to be placed on customer service and information via customer service centers which are expected to offer expanded evening and weekend hours and staff to handle most local customer needs.

Decentralization of the D.N.R.'s central office in Madison will provide the increased staff required for service centers.

D.N.R. programs will be grouped by their focus on land, water or air and solid waste, rather than the traditional divisions of environmental quality and resource management so that programs managing the same or similar resource can coordinate their efforts.

Fish and game- important to the state, will be moving from their familiar niche in resource management with fisheries going to water management and wildlife housed under land management.

Secretary George Meyer of the Natural Resources Board stated that management of these programs will be closely monitored. "I am confident that if we get off track, we'll hear about it quickly," he said.

The current division of six field districts will be changed to five regions achieving a closer match to the state's geographic features.

Field staff will be organized into water basin management teams to work toward common goals and priorities for their water basin.

However, the public can be serviced at any location according to Meyer. District boundaries are for internal management he said.

The restructuring plan, recommended by the Grant Thornton LLP consulting firm, is expected to increase efficiency, manage resources and the environment on a more natural geographic basis, integrate resource and environmental programs, facilitate public and private partnerships that benefit environmental management, meet increasing service demands and increase department effectiveness.

Goose hunting opportunities rise

Goose hunters will have more hunting opportunities when the 1995 Wisconsin goose hunting season opens later this month with an increase in the number of goose tags issued and a longer exterior zone season.

Hunters who applied to hunt in the Collins and Horicon goose management zones will be receiving from four to six carcass tags, depending upon the hunting period they applied for, according to Jon Bergquist, waterfowl and wetland ecologist for the Department of Natural Resources.

That is an increase from last year, when hunters received two to three permits, depending upon the zone.

Bergquist said that because the number of applications for the Horicon Zone dropped slightly compared to last year and because there was an increase in the harvest allocation for the zone in 1995, everyone will receive five tags.

Slightly over half of the hunters who applied for the first hunting period in the Horicon Zone will receive a sixth tag.

65 percent of applicants for the second period will get a sixth tag, and 84 percent of the applicants for the third period will get a sixth tag.

The sixth tags are being issued for hunting time periods when geese do the most crop damage in the Horicon Zone, Bergquist said.

The total number of applications for the Collins zone increased this year. "Everyone hunting in periods one through September 18. The first of four hunting periods in both the Collins and Horicon management zones opens September 23.

The bag limit in both zones will be two Canada geese per day. Shooting hours will begin one half hour before sunrise to sunset except for opening day of duck season, Saturday, September 30, when shooting hours for geese will begin at noon.

The goose season in the Exterior Management Zone also opens on September 23, with the same hunting hours as for the Collins and Horicon zones. The daily bag limit is one Canada goose per day through Sunday, October 8, and two Canada geese per day for the balance of the season.

The season in the Mississippi River sub-zone will open concurrent with the duck season.

Hunters in the Exterior Zone will have a new alternative for reporting their harvest this year: they may call toll-free 1-800-994-6673 to report their harvest instead of mailing in report cards.

"Everyone hunting in periods one through three will get four tags and all of the applicants for period four will get five tags."

Jon Bergquist

three will get four tags and all of the applicants for period four will get five tags," Bergquist said.

The tags for the first hunting periods in both Horicon and Collins zones are being sent out, and hunters should expect to start receiving them this week.

Tags for periods two through four will be sent out the week of

NATURE CALLS

by: Scott Van Natta
Outdoors Editor

When you think about the outdoors, what comes to mind? Camping, fishing, hunting, hiking, the Wolf river, Clam lake, Rhinelander?

Okay, now what images come to mind?

Walking along side a lazy, meandering stream, minnows scattering as your shadow falls across the water; two ducks sitting on the bank slipping into the water and moving downstream as you approach.

Take a walk across the needle covered forest floor of a stand of towering white pines. Pick a good forest floor of a stand of towering white pines. Pick a good spot to stop and listen. The trees gently sway and creak as a northwest breeze ruffles their tops.

Suddenly, you see a large, dark body maneuvering its way through the upper limbs- its giant wings seemingly moving to slow to keep its owl-shaped body aloft.

Further on, a grey squirrel hops among the dead leaves (sounding more like a human than a squirrel), while another heaves acorns from a nearby oak.

Ahead of you the forest thickens a bit. It's hard to walk without making a general ruckus, and the chipmunks make sure everyone knows you're coming.

As your foot cracks a hidden stick, a head pops up. And it's not yours.

A pair of large, black eyes stare at you from a 100 feet away. The large ears twitch, hearing every sound and the tail flicks.

Behind the small to medium sized doe, are two more, both assessing the situation. The deer quickly lose interest in your motionless figure and dip their heads to resume browsing.

Taking two more steps, you test your luck. In an instant, three heads snap up, in mid-chew. Before you can stop moving, the first deer snorts and dashes off with her friends.

They disappear into the undergrowth in streak of brown before you can blink.

The tour continues across a marsh, where spring peepers own the sound waves. Moving back into the woods, a dull hammering sound becomes audible. And before you realize what it is, a huge red-headed woodpecker takes flight from behind a nearby tree. It swooshes through the forest, its red head visible from a great distance.

As you approach a lake, you hear nature calling, or rather, honking. A flock of geese sit in the middle of the lake, one of the many stops in their long journey.

The lake is also a friend to ducks, hurons, songbirds, and thirsty animals.

A short trail through the woods brings you to a prairie-like clearing. A hawk circles above. Probably annoyed at you for entering his territory, while a red squirrel, now in your debt, scampers up a red pine.

Isn't Schmeekle a great place?

Leaked fuel recovery continues in Plover

By Scott Van Natta
OUTDOORS EDITOR

The fuel that leaked from a pipeline running through Plover last November 29, has now reached 116,425 gallons.

The pipeline belongs to Koch Industries of Wichita, Kansas. According to Koch spokeswoman, Kim Carraway, "A faulty O-ring in a valve was the cause of the leak."

The site of the leak, in southwest Plover, is roughly an acre and a half in size. More than 40 monitoring wells surround the 250 by 350 foot plume of fuel.

"We're working extremely close with the DNR in the cleanup efforts," said Carraway.

The company has had two previous leaks of 8000 and 42,000 gallons within a years time from 1990 to 1991.

The cleanup efforts from those leaks are now nearing completion.

The Plover leak has forced one couple from their home but has not affected the drinking water or property of any neighboring residences.

Since the first amount of lost fuel was estimated at 20,000 gallons, the amount recovered has risen 482 percent to the current number of 116,425 gallons. Cleanup efforts of the leak could take another three to five years.

Forest geneticist explains causes of fall colors

The vivid golden yellows, rich reds, brilliant oranges and deep purples that transform the forests of Wisconsin each fall are caused by the shortening daylight hours. Not, as many people believe, by the fall frosts, explains Trenten Marty, a forest geneticist with the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources.

There are three types of pigments involved in producing the colorful leaf display: chlorophyll, carotenoids and anthocyanins.

Chlorophyll is present in the leaves year-round and gives the leaves their green color throughout the growing season.

In the process called photosynthesis, chlorophyll utilizes the sun's energy to produce simple sugars—the trees' food—from water and carbon dioxide.

Carotenoids are present in the leaf chloroplasts also, but because the green coloration the chlorophylls predominate, they are not visible through the growing season.

The carotenoid pigments are responsible for the yellow colorations of fall leaves.

Anthocyanins produce the brilliant reds and purples of the fall color season. This color pigment develops in the early autumn within the liquid of the leaf cells in response to bright light and excess sugars within the leaf cells.

"During the summer chlorophyll is continually produced and broken down within the leaf," Marty says.

"The chlorophyll masks the carotenoids within the leaf and the leaves appear green during the growing season.

As fall approaches and day light shortens, production of new chlorophyll subsides and the existing chlorophyll breaks down, revealing the carotenoids within the leaves and their yellow coloration."

At this same time, he says, veins that transport sugars out of the leaf close and newly produced sugars are trapped within the leaf promoting production of anthocyanins.

Anthocyanins cause the scarlet red and deep purple colors we enjoy.

Environmental station holds celebration

On Saturday, September 30, the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station will be holding an open house - 20th anniversary celebration.

The day begins at 9 a.m., with a pancake breakfast.

Program highlights include environmental education activities, canoeing on Sunset Lake, arts and crafts and games.

Musical entertainment begins at 1 p.m. and includes Captain Ecology and the UWSP Jazz Combo. A benefit concert is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. and features Can't Lie Low, Tom Pease, and LJ Booth.

Tree stand safety a major concern

"Bow, deer and bear hunters should make a priority effort to check their tree stands from a safety standpoint," says Robert Tucker, Law Enforcement safety specialist for the North Central District.

"Injuries to hunters falling from tree stands is our greatest concern from a safety standpoint for those who participate in the bow season," said Conservation Warden Tucker.

A recent survey of over 2,300 hunters by Deer and Deer Hunting Magazine shows that more than a third of the hunters will fall from a tree stand or elevated stand at some point during their hunting career.

The average height of a fall from a stand is 11 feet. Of those hunters who fall, about 3 percent suffer permanently crippling injuries.

While statistics on the number of hunters killed by falling from tree stands are not available state by state, a 1979-1989 study by the Center for Disease Control in Georgia found that death occurred in less than 4 percent of the reported tree stand falls.

According to the Deer and Deer Hunting Magazine survey, 49 percent of the falls began while in the stand, 29 percent occurred while climbing to the stand, and 22 percent happened when the hunter attempted to climb down from the stand.

What were the leading causes of falls? The single-most common reason was structural failure on the stand, ladder or tree steps.

In all, 23 percent of the tumbles resulted from rotted wood, loose nails, nails pulling through boards, or broken bands, bolts, ropes or attaching chains.

Other leading causes were tree branches that broke, slipping blades or bands on climbing stands—especially old-style climbers, and faulty or slippery climbing gear such as climbing belts and spurs.

Yearwood to perform at UWSP

Country music star Trisha Yearwood and special guest Andy Childs will perform at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 1 at UWSP's Quandt Fieldhouse.

Winner of new artist citations from the Academy of Country Music, the American Music Awards and Pollster, Yearwood said in a recent Billboard interview, "I just flat out love to sing. . . If you really feel it, other people will hopefully feel it too. But even if nobody's listening, I will do it forever."

Yearwood got her start on Music Row in 1985 when she transferred to Nashville Belmont University's music business program and accepted an internship at MTM Records.

"She's In Love With the Boy" made the Georgia native a country star in 1991. It was the first of four hits from her album "Trisha Yearwood," which was certified platinum.

Her most recent album, "Thinkin' About You," is the culmination of more than a year of song-searching and recording.

Songs from the album such as "Thinkin' About You and "XXXs and 000s" (An American Girl), have kept her on the music charts and busy with tours.

In addition to releasing her new record and a Christmas album, she married bass player Robert Reynolds of The Mavericks last year.

Andy Childs began performing at an early age, having learned to play guitar and piano by ear.

He appeared in amusement parks and nightclubs as a teenager. That experience opened doors for him, giving him the chance to work with several Memphis legends such as Sam and Dave, Rufus Thomas and the Memphis Horns.

In his early twenties, Childs began making regular trips to Nashville, peddling his songs and getting demo work.

He recorded an album for an independent label in 1984 and signed a contract with RCA Records in 1992.

During his first year as a national recording artist, Childs toured extensively from coast to coast, released three chart singles and the "Simple Life" video.

He also has appeared on national television and soon will release a new album.

Reserve seating tickets at $23 each go on sale Friday, September 22, at the University Center Information Desk, the Arts and Athletics Box Office in the Quandt Fieldhouse Lobby, or by calling 1-800-838-3378.

The ticket outlets accept Visa and Mastercard. The event is co-sponsored by Campus Activities and Events Resources Presents.

The Crystal Ball of Reality

CHAPTER 12

"How bad?"
"Real bad ... the airport's gone..."
"Okay, okay... stay on the line..."
He handed the phone to his secretary.
"Could you get some information from this guy?" he said grabbing his coat.
"Sure."
"Thanks I'm off to the White House."

On the way there, Gregory used the carphone.

"Tell the President the situation just got worse."

Twenty-five minutes later, Gregory walked into the briefing room. The President was on the phone.

"I want every airport searched and placed on alert.... okay, send the word out Code Blue." The President hung up.

A moment later, General David walked into the room.

"Ahh, just the man I want to see," said President Graham.

He stood up and moved over to shake hands with the General.

"Sorry about the short notice, General."

"Quite all right, sir."
"Well then, let's get down to business. We are running short of time."

The General set up camp in the front of the room and extracted some charts and photos from his briefcase.

"Gentlemen," he began, "we all know that Colonel Tyumen has a 50-megaton hydrogen bomb. Now, I have put this information together rather quickly, and have not taken the terrain or geologic formations into account.

Okay the blast wave from this bomb will expand outward at supersonic speed for about 15 to 20 miles, and the total blast wave will end in a radius of about 54 miles ..."

the trees within 20 miles would be incinerated and at 40 miles trees would be blown over."

As the charts were being passed around the room, the General continued.

"In regards to human life ... any person within 8 miles of ground zero will be vaporized. Someone between 8 and 14 miles away would be incinerated. As far as 38 miles away, a person will receive third-degree burns; at 50 miles away, a person gets second-degree burns."

There were now small murmurings going on around the table, but the General continued.

"As far as 60 miles away, a reflexive glance at the fireball would produce blindness by retinal burning ... at 70 miles..."

"We've heard enough," shouted the President. "Okay...now...David, do you have a plan on how to take out the bomb?"

"Yes... I've only found one way that will work...or has the best odds of working."

"Let's hear it."

"Well, using the F-117A Stealth fighter, we can drop a laser-guided conventional warhead through the cabin's front door..."

"Won't that cause the bomb to detonate? Remember, we're dealing with a fifty megaton bomb here," said the President.

"Not...if the bomb isn't armed."

"How can we be sure it's not armed?" asked Gregory.

"We can't ... this is a calculated risk...it either works or it doesn't."

"That's if the land were flat?" asked Gregory.

"Right. So roughly 9 0 0 0 square miles of Alaska will be destroyed. There are no major cities in the blast wave, but Mt. McKinley is and would most likely lose 4000-5000 feet off its summit." The General held up a chart.

"Everything within roughly ten miles would be vaporized. These mountains here," he pointed, "would be reduced to small hills of rubble ... ten miles further out everything is incinerated." Then he held up another chart.

"All the snow within 40 to 45 miles would be vaporized. All

Me, Myself and I

By Kate Roberts
FEATURES EDITOR

The word alone has such a bad connotation, when it really is not such a bad thing. It is not selfish to want to be alone, or even odd for that matter. I think it's necessary. I myself need to have "alone time". I think everyone does whether they would admit it or not.

I cherish the time that I have the house to myself. Don't get me wrong, I love my roommates. It is not that I do not want to be around them, it is just that sometimes I do not want to be around anyone.

Now you are all probably thinking, what a freak, right? There must be something seriously wrong with this girl. Why is she so antisocial? But I do not see it as being antisocial. Actually most of my alone time takes place when there are other people around. Mornings are the best for this. I get up early, eat my cereal and get myself together. Besides what else can you do in the morning? Not too many people I know are too sociable in the wee hours of the morning, anyway.

I admit sometimes alone time can go too far. It is possible to think too much. I am proof of that, as many of my friends would attest to. There are times when I will sit and contemplate life, death, love, anything and everything basically. The problem is ideas will start to get distorted in my head, not good. This is the conclusion that I have come to: It is alright to be alone as long as you don't feel alone.

There is still a lot to be said for being alone though. Think about this: If you can't spend time with yourself, how can you expect anyone else to want to spend time with you?

Before I worked during the summer months, I used to have a weekful of entire days to myself. I use to dance around the house with my parents stereo cranked way up.

Now as I am getting older I realize that I have less and less time to spare, a trend that is likely to continue. As we enter into adulthood and eventually (and I stress eventually) parenthood, Many more obligations and responsibilities will be imposed on us. I want to take time out for myself while I still can.

She has a long list of places that she wants to travel to. Africa, the Caribbean and Ireland are on the top of that list.

Canfield Bywaters hopes to continue to be inspired the fall and winter months when she will travel to both Maine and Hawaii as a selected artist-in-residence.

"I was chosen because of my success in my past experiences and also because I enjoy roughing it," Canfield Bywaters said.

Encore to host two bands

On Thursday, September 21, Peat Moss will play in the Encore. Peat Moss is an Illinois band hailing from Chicago.

Peat Moss's current CD titled "Keepsakes in the Garbage" was released nationally in April of this year.

In 1994, the band acquired much success by opening for Jeff Buckley, The Aquarium Rescue Unit, Blue Rodeo, Willie Porter and the Dave Matthews Band.

Band members include Brad Peterson, guitar; Matt Walker, drums; John Schulte, bass; and Arch Alcantara, guitar.

Chicago Tribune's David Rothschild called Peat Moss 'the band to hear in 95'.

Centertainment Productions Concerts is hosting the event. Doors open at 7:30 p.m. with the show starting at 8 p.m..

On Friday, September 22, the Dixie Power Trio hits the stage.

This unique band from Washington D.C. combines popular and old favorites with a Dixie land combo beat and rhythm.

The uniqueness about the band starts with the fact that they have four members, yet still call themselves a trio.

The uniqueness continues with band members playing instruments like washboards, harmonicas, accordions, voodoo drums, funk tuba and thrash banjo. Vocals top off the list.

The band plays everything from Jelly Roll Morton and Louis Armstrong, to the Ramones, Talking Heads, Chuck Berry and Led Zeppelin, all with a Dixie land twist.

Their first CD "Out of Control" has been out a little over a year and their second, "Greetings from Gumboville" was recently released.

Centertainment Productions, Alternative Sound presents this performance in the Encore which will start at 8 p.m..

Admission for both events is $2 with ID and $3.50 without.

Offense runs over Iowa Wesleyan

By Joe Trawitzki
CONTRIBUTOR

After scoring only nine points in their first game, the Pointer football team allowed the defense to relax this week by beating Iowa Wesleyan College 41-13.

The offense dominated as they rolled up 444 total yards with 315 yards gained on the ground.

The Pointers accumulated their massive offensive totals without quarterback Tom Fitzgerald.

Jay Krcmar started in place of the injured quarterback. Krcmar did an outstanding job throwing for 129 yards and two touchdowns.

However, the players that really took over for Fitzgerald were the running backs. Tom McKinney led the rushing attack by carrying the ball 14 times for 115 yards. He also scored two touchdowns, including the first score of the game which came on a 24 yard run.

Nate Harms followed up last week's 151 yard game with a 91 yard performance on 11 attempts and one touchdown.

Stan Strama also had a great game adding 85 yards rushing and two touchdowns.

"Despite a few penalties that set us back, the guys executed well and displayed how explosive this team can be," said Pointer offensive coordinator Todd Hoffner of his team.

Although the offense controlled the game from the start taking a 10-0 lead after one quarter, the defense also played extremely well. The team held Wesleyan to 86 total yards. They sacked the quarterbacks seven times for a loss of 60 yards.

The win improved the Pointer's record to 2-0 as Wesleyan dropped to 0-3. The game also extended the team's winning streak to eight games carrying over from last year.

This week the Pointers wrap up their three game road trip as they head to Indianapolis to take on Division I-AA Butler University. Running back Arnold Mickens will lead the charge for Butler. Last year Mickens managed more than 200 yards on the ground against Point.

Stevens Point head coach John Miech commented on his team's strategy against Butler's star rusher.

"We want our offense to stay on the field and keep Mickens off the field as much as we can," said Miech.

Point forms women's hockey club

UWSP women will have a chance to show off their skating skills due to a women's hockey club starting up this fall.

Coach Desiah Sobczak is looking for players who have an interest in the sport and are available anywhere from two to three times a week starting mid-November and running through February. An experienced assistant coach is also needed.

Hockey members must have their own stick and skates, but the rest of the equipment will be provided, including pads even though coach Sobczak points out that women's hockey is not quite as violent as men's hockey is.

"It (women's hockey) is argued to be a more finesse game than men's because of the no-check policy."

The idea for the club came from UWSP Athletic Director Frank O'Brien who approached Sobczak.

"We knew that Desiah had interest and experience in coaching," said O'Brien.

"If the club team is successful there's endless possibilities for it."

UWSP is not the only college to have attempted to put together a women's hockey team. In fact, many major universities have added the sport including UW-Madison and the University of Minnesota.

Any players or possible assistant coaches can contact Sobczak at 341-1556.

SOFFES

By Mike Beacom
SPORTS EDITOR

Barry Sanders has perhaps the most elusive moves in the history of professional football (Gale Sayers would be tough to argue against). Sanders has tremendous breakaway speed and can easily be considered the NFL's greatest runner in the game today.

But he's not the game's greatest running back.

That honor goes to Dallas' Emmitt Smith.

I know, like President Clinton refuses to take a stand for one side of a crucial issue over another in fear of losing even more supporters, it appears as if I am trying to please the fans of both Smith and Sanders.

But there is a difference between a runner and a running back.

You see, a runner runs, eludes and excites. While a running back can possess all of these skills, he also has the ability to block and catch.

That's Emmitt Smith.

A good example of this came this season when I witnessed Smith make an impressive block into an oncoming linebacker, fall to the ground and get up to catch a Troy Aikman pass for a considerable gain.

Was that the way the playbook was drawn up? Probably, but when's the last time you've seen Barry Sanders pick up a first down off a reception after successfully taking out his blocking assignment?

Yet, I'm sure somewhere out there, somebody's reading this and listing off reasons as to why Emmitt Smith doesn't even belong in the same sentence with Barry Sanders.

Maybe they believe Emmitt's line is better or Emmitt touches the ball more in an average game. Well those arguments may have worked in years past and maybe if you can still argue them strongly, they'll work today, but what about the knocks on Barry Sanders.

For one, Sanders has an east-west running style. He can be going one way, get trapped, and then head for the opposite side of the field.

This seems to work occasionally for the Detroit tailback, but it has also hurt him with big negative yard losses.

On the other hand, Emmitt Smith runs north-south, making sure he's past the line of scrimmage before he attempts to dance someone out of their shoes. That's why Smith will never have negative one-yard disasters like the pitiful daily total Sanders generated last season against Green Bay.

Sanders also can't seem to score a touchdown from inside the 20-yard line. That's one reason the Lions will miss fullback Derrick Moore this year who was Detroit's go-to-guy in goal line situations.

Emmitt's touchdown numbers speak for themselves.

And staying with production, the last time I looked, Emmitt's ring fingers were occupied on both hands, while his trophy case needs an extension built on to it.

So, as long as they both stay healthy, Barry Sanders will continue to electrify large audiences with his moves and Emmitt Smith will continue to break records, collect Super Bowl jewelry and dominate the position of running back.

“Other than the fact that I got served with the lawsuit during my clam chowder, it was a very productive meeting.”

Pointers take three of four at Tourney

By Cory Wojtalewicz
CONTRIBUTOR

The Pointer volleyball team continued to make progress recently as they improved their overall record of 10-3.

After sweeping three games at the College of St. Scholastica (15-13, 15-12, and 15-7), the Pointers traveled to Bethel College in Minnesota to compete in their tournament.

The Pointers continued to play well in the tournament winning three of four matches.

They defeated Upper Iowa 16-14, 15-6, 15-9, Bethel 15-11, 15-2, 15-7 and Concordia-

Moorhead 15-11, 15-8, and 15-12.

They then played Central of Iowa in the championship game, losing in five sets 10-15, 15-13, 15-5, 6-15, and 10-15.

"We've been playing very sound volleyball," said second year coach Julie Johnson. "This is the first time these girls have been in a championship game and they played well enough to win.

"We just had a few let downs at crucial times and that cost us, but the girls keep gaining confidence with the more experience they get," Johnson said.

Senior spiker Tara Raddatz and setter Jolien Heiden were the leaders for the second place Pointers as Raddatz made the all-tournament team.

"Tara's blocking was phenomenal," said Johnson.

The Pointers travel to Oshkosh on Wednesday for a non-conference match and then travel to River Falls this weekend for their first conference triangular.

Their next home match will be Tuesday, September 26 at 7 p.m. in the Berg gym.

Cross country teams finish first

By Mike Beacom
SPORTS EDITOR

Both the men's and the women's cross country squads came home with first place last Saturday from the Blue Devil Invitational.

A young men's team occupied three out of the top five places including a second place performance by Chris Krolick who came in from the 8000 meter event with a time of 27 minutes and 4.6 seconds. Only four seconds behind Stout's Jason Waldvogel.

Point's other four scored runners were Chad Johnson, Brian Ottestad, Pat Stillman, and Josh Metcalf, all of whom came in under 28 minutes.

Coach Richard Witt commented on the outing. "That was a good race," said Witt. "I was very pleased with the way we ran."

On the women's side, the No. 9 nationally ranked Pointers ran by the rest of the field with ease.

Star runner Wendi Zak came in nearly a minute faster than the rest of the field to take first place honors.

Her time of 18 minutes and 50 seconds was also around seven seconds faster than her time on the same field from a year ago.

Third place finisher Heather Ironside also improved on her time from last year giving coach Len Hill reason to be optimistic about his team this year.

"I thought we ran pretty well," stated Hill, "You've got to think we're going to be a much better team than a year ago."

Rounding it out for Stevens Point were Amanda Livingston, Dawn Ostrowski and Sara Drake, who were all within 20 seconds of one another.

Next up for the men's team will be the St.Olaf Invite this Saturday in Northfield, Minnesota.

While coach Hill will keep his top 12 runners at home and take the rest of the women to the Whitewater Invite this weekend.

"The Whitewater course is a good course," commented Hill. "It'll be a good experience for everybody."

Pom pons squad looks forward to an exciting 1995-96 season

The UWSP pom squad is dancing their way into what they hope to be another exciting year. Pom tryouts were held September 14. The squad is said to be a good one.

"I think it's going to be the best squad we've ever had," says squad captain, Elizabeth Kubalak. The team consists of 16 girls with two alternates. Half of the squad is brand new blood to the team,

Kubalak says, "many of them are freshman which is pretty exciting."

The squad does dance routines for both home football and basketball games. Their first performance is scheduled for Spud Bowl, September 30, followed by Homecoming on October 7.

The team also works hard to compete in the state pom competition which will be held at UWSP this year. The girls are hoping for a 6th year of victory after winning the competition for the last 5 years.

The year may be a long one lasting from now until March, but with the high energy these girls have, they aren't likely to run out of enthusiasm anytime soon.

THAT'S RIGHT, SOMEONE STOLE MY PANTS.

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19)
Expect a harsh winter this year when the deer eat the wood paneling off your Volvo.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-MAY 20)
Your frat brothers mock your Barbie collection. Wait till they are passed out drunk and epilady off their eyebrows.

GEMINI (MAY 21-JUNE 20)
You will eat a big bowl of Malt-o-Meal Mmmmmmm.

CANCER (JUNE 21-JULY 22)
Your continuing fear, that you are the only real person in the world, and the rest of us are just robots designed to look and act like humans, is completely unfounded. Whrrr-click Whrrrrr-click.

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22)
Tired of your roommates bragging that their rooms are big enough to swing a cat in? Try it out.

VIRGO (AUG. 23-SEPT. 22)
Years of costly psychotherapy culminate in the revelation that you are both aroused and repulsed by your own feet.

LIBRA (SEPT. 23-OCT. 23)
A less than salutary performance on "The Dating Game" earns you the nickname, "Mr. Nubbins."

SCORPIO (OCT. 24-NOV. 22)
Your roommate covets your knees. Be careful, once he steals them it will be too late.

SAGITTARIUS (NOV. 23-DEC. 21)
You only live once, spend as much time hanging out in parking lots and drinking Schlitz as you can.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-JAN. 19)
Ask your Bio 255 teacher how much Bounty paper toweling it would take to soak up 4 gallons of blood. If he answers you, simply say, "Wrong."

AQUARIUS (JAN. 20-FEB. 19)
You! Yes you! I know it was you that stole my pants. I KNOW. I don't want them back, You've probably been doing something sick with them. I would like my wallet back though, send it to the Pointer. Freak.

PISCES (FEB. 20-MARCH 20)
The police will come to your house and pistol whip you for making your neighbor's dog, "Kinda nervous."

IF YOUR BIRTHDAY IS THIS WEEK
You realize that the vast majority of the people flocking to the bars this weekend are just trying to forget how lonely they feel inside. How sad.

In a recent conversation Pat Rothfuss was asked who he thought was responsible for the sudden rash of pants related thefts on campus.

"The acting chancellor." Pat said matter of factly, "I don't blame him. It's just all these budget cuts, you see. He's a desperate man."

The chancellor was unavailable for comment.

If we cut welfare, children will most certainly freeze to death. If we cut education, we are mortgaging our future. If we cut defense, we are risking our security as a nation. It is becoming painfully obvious that no one has a solution that will satisfy the entire nation.

The cold fact is that a large chunk of the people of the United States are going to have to bite the bullet if we want to reduce the deficit and secure our children's future.

I just hope someone up on the Hill will step up and make a decision on who will bite that bullet.

Student leaders also targeted U.S. Representatives Tom Petri (R-Fond du Lac) and Steve Gunderson (R-Osseo), with postcards.

"Petri and Gunderson will have a chance to decide which specific programs are cut. These postcards will show them how seriously Wisconsin students are committed to keeping education affordable," said Stacy.

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: Set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $172,109* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $219 each month to reach the same goal.

Start planning your future. Call our Enrollment Hotline at 1 800 842-2888.
