Basement Brewhaus changes its flavor

By the Love Doctor
ALL YOU NEED TO KNOW

In an effort to increase use and make more money, University Centers Director John Jury has announced the Basement Brewhaus will be renamed the Basement Brothel.

Along with the name change, The "Brothel" will be serving a variety of hard liquor and feature reasonably priced prostitutes for both men and women.

"I just think it incorporates everything a college student wants from this university," said University Centers Assistant Director Ed Richmond. "I mean everyone knows all college kids do is get drunk and have sex."

Along with the new name and theme, major remodeling is in the works, transferring the spacious social area into 23 private rooms.

Student manager Tracy Marhal says students are just crazy about the new name and theme, and the line is out the door during all business hours.

"I've never seen so many students so happy," Marhal said.

Freshman John Daniels was very enthusiastic about the new look and feel while stumbling out the door last evening. "Dude, I just drank 10 shots of whiskey and got laid. What can be better than that?" Daniels said.

New Basement Brothel manager, Terry "the Tigrress" says that she is going to have to order more prostitutes to keep up with the incredibly high demand.

"At other campuses our guys and gals have a break every once and a while, but you guys just keep on coming and coming and coming," Terry said.

Currently, six men and six women service UW-SP students.

Basement Brothel hours are 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. every day.

Freshman drinks Housing Cries

By Jerry Falwell
SIN REPORTER

Campus security made a shocking discovery last night that has cracked the very foundation of the UW-SP reputation and austerity.

Last night at approximately 10:23 p.m. freshman, mind you I said freshman, James Beam, was apprehended at 103 Hyer Hall by Campus security officer Joyce Blader, for underage consumption of alcohol.

The report, that has University Housing officials literally crying, states that Beam was seen by Blader through his first floor window holding what appeared to be a Miller Lite beer bottle.

"As I peeked through the slightly open curtain, I definitely saw what looked to me like a beer bottle," Blader said.

Upon breaking down the door with the assistance of the Stevens Point Police Department SWAT team, Beam, who is only 18 years old, was caught in the act of literally "gulping" the sinful beverage.

When searching the room, police found not only one beer, but an entire six pack in Beam's fridge.

According to Beams' neighbor Steve Vig, Beam was seen as a "nice kid, but quiet."

"Now I know why we all thought he was kind of weird. I mean drinking when you are only 18 years old. What does he want? Anarchy!?" Vig said.

Hyer Hall Community Advisor Iam Good, said due to the tragedy, surveillance camera's will be installed in every room, and random strip searches will be implemented.

Chancellor George trendy

By Bill Clinton
AFFAIR EXPERT

Student Government Association (S.G.A.) President Sara Houfe shook up the campus and Stevens Point community on Tuesday when she made several statements about an alleged affair she was engaged in for more than a year with Chancellor Thomas George.

Houfe claimed the affair started in February of 1997 when she met George at a UW-SP administration social event. According to Houfe, the alleged affair began when George offered to give her a ride home where "one thing led to another and the next thing I knew we were smoking cigarettes in bed together."

George addressed the allegations on Wednesday in front of a media circus in the University Center's Laird Room.

"I have never had sexual relations with that woman, Miss Houfe," said an adamant Chancellor George. "I would never break my marriage vows or damage a strong working relationship like the one Rosebud (Houfe) and I currently have. On the other hand, she is an attractive young lady and if I were single and approached with the opportunity, it would be awfully tough to turn down."

On Wednesday, a Pullman, Wa. woman came forward, stating she and George were intimately involved when he served as Provost and Academic Vice President at Washington State University.

"I was going to remain silent but Sara's courage propelled me to come forward," said Monica Flowers.

A mixed response has floated through campus since Houfe's announcement.

Student government says light up

By The Marlboro Man
CANCER PATIENT

After five minutes of debate Thursday, the Student Government Association passed a resolution giving the student body the option of lighting up during class.

Answering concerns that students were not going to class because of continued "nic" fits, S.G.A. Senator Michael Roth wrote the "Smokers Rights" bill that is receiving praise from all members of the student body.

"This is just wonderful. I think this is the most important piece of legislation we've passed all year," said S.G.A. Senator Ann Finan.

"We are finally giving smokers the rights they deserve." Answering criticism that the bill passed because over 80% of S.G.A. members are smokers, S.G.A. Speaker of the Senate, Matt Mutz said "Wait a sec, let me light

"Its for the good of everybody," Good said. "One more incident like this and students are just not going to want to come here."

Reportedly, Beam, being led out of the dorm in a straight jacket and shackles, was overheard as saying: "I just wanted to be cool. Like that guy on Melrose Place."

As a result of her efforts, Blader is being awarded the Campus Security "Gumshoe" award for bravery and courage in the line of duty.

According to campus security, drinking alcohol can cause injury, blindness, and even death.

Smoke:Profs support resolution up quick. Now that's better...the fact that nearly everyone of us is a smoker does not mean a thing. We were representing the entire student body."

Also included in the resolution is a clause that says if any professor objects, student government will organize mass boycotts and protests of the university.

"If they don't let us smoke we are going to shut this mother down," said College of Communication and Fine Art's Senator Eric Scharenbroch.

Student Government recently passed a resolution that would limit smoking to designated entryways, then failed it, then sent it to committee, failed it, did a survey, then passed it.

S.G.A. sees no conflict between the two resolutions.

"S.G.A. can do whatever the hell we want," said SOURCE Director Jeff Buhrandt. "As soon as all the other organizations realize that, we will be getting on fine."

Professors are taking the news well.

"Personally I hope they boycott," said Forestry Professor Bob Govett. "I don't like the idiotic chuckleheads anyway. And hey, the more time I can spend away from class butchering trees, the better."

The resolution will go into effect next week, and ashtrays will be provided.

"I think its great," said Communication Professor Pete Kelley. "Now Illka, Ferrante and I can all smoke anywhere we want and not have to hide out in my office."

A survey conducted by The Pointer indicted that 99% of the student body did not support the new resolution.

"Those folks from The Pointer don't get any money from us, and can't be controlled," said S.G.A. Budget Director Adam Hasse. "I wouldn't trust them for a second."

Oh and that stuff about smoking causing cancer is a bunch of bull.

"Tommy bagged a chic half his age!," said Associate Vice Chancellor to the Assistant Vice Head of University Operations John Plutowski. "There's something to be said about that!"

A private poll indicated more than 80 percent of people employed in Old Main believed Houfe's story but were for the most part impressed with George's alleged affair.

Some were disappointed with the reaction coming from Old Main.

"I was shocked, shocked to hear some administrators in Old Main laughing off the allegations," said a straight-faced Sol Sepsenwol, Assistant Professor of Biology. "I don't find allegations like the ones brought out by Miss Houfe to be funny at all. I don't have a sense of humor at all in fact. I don't even find Seinfeld funny."

Campus

Monday, March 24th

- A suspicious man was reported looking into the bookstore window in the University Center. Campus Security was notified.

Tuesday, March 25th

- I saw this guy with chewing tobacco in his bottom lip that night at a house party--or . . . um . . . at the library. Why do guys do that? It's friggin nasty, thats why. Guys like dumb stuff.

- A toilet overflowed on the fourth floor of Roach Hall. Then everyone peeked into the bathroom. No one knows why they looked though. They told their friends about the toilet, and their friends looked. "Gross!" they all commented, but kept looking at the stuff that was floating around. The over-flow was attributed to the excessive amount of bull st that comes out of college guys.

Wednesday, March 26th

- Another suspicious individual was reported trying to break into Baldwin Hall. When asked why he wanted in the hall so badly, so desperately, Marty M. Firm-Aneuss replied, "Get a hobby you freak, I live here!" A custodian was called.

- A Natural Resource Major discovered a three-legged frog in Schmeekle Reserve. He then set his pipe down and blew smoke in the frog's face.

Thursday, March 27th

- A CA complained of a marijuana stench coming from Hyer Hall. The CA later confessed that he was just on a power trip, and that is why he wanted to be a CA in the first place. "To get back at the world for teasing me about being a dork all my life," he said, in his own words.

Friday, March 28th

- There were 6 cars in Lot Q with smashed windows, missing their radios. When asked about the recent string of break-ins, Chancellor Tom threateningly waved his crow bar, shouting, "Why don't you ask those stinky hippies who run this place, huh?" A custodian was called.

Saturday, March 29th

- A CA busted some more pot-smokers in fourth floor Neale. The CA then put his greasy hat back on, with his longish hair curling up at the bottom, pinch-rolled his jeans, and proceeded to Garry's Tap. The pot-smokers made fun of the CA after he departed.

Protective Services' Phat Advice

Make friendly with the Debot ladies. They got food, real food stashed away in back, and if you make friendly, and say the words, "Hey foxy mamma, I wanna taste of your mock-chicken," they might just go in back and get it for ya.

Know what else? The people who work for parking services get paid like--nothing. You think they go home every night like us? Yeah, right. They gotta sleep there too. And why do you think they're always so crazy about giving parking tickets? Cause they get a quarter for each one they give, and they get a glimpse at their families, who are kept in a vault in the space under the Parking Services' desk. It's like the movie, The Firm. Once you start working there, you think it'll be all great, then, they turn on you, and you're trapped! So when you see them hovering around your car, like about to give you a ticket, slip em a quarter, and say, "Buck up little camper, the sun's gotta come out sometime." Oh, and tell 'em you sympathize. Or just like, leave quarters under your windshield wipers. Peace-out.

Munson and Hettler want naked chicks

By T-$ Johnson
FATTY-ACID

Wellness of the body and mind is the main theme of the UW-Stevens Point campus. It's just one thing that separates us from all the other shwag-ass universities in the nation, along with the new and improved Wellness Week.

Wellness Week, a concept brought to life by Dr. William Hetler, and his chemically imbalanced side-kick John "The Crusher" Munson is a chance for students to expand on their knowledge of the "wellness" concept, and with the new and improved Wellness Week, students will get some real life experience testing their wellness, in the buck.

"Oh ya der, we'd been meanin' to use dis as an excuse to see some naked chicks for quite a while," Munson said under his breath to Hetler.

This week of ultimate freedom and natural expression will take place the week before finals. The professors say by then, everyone will be a little tanner, toned up, and wearing less clothes anyway.

Hetler then explained, "The student body...huh, huh...will be required to walk around naked, once in a campus building, and hopefully outside, weather permitting."

The two defined the new Wellness Week, while giggling like school girls, as a chance for students to completely get in touch with nature, as this is a natural resources school.

"Hey this Wellness Week is cool," said one happy student. "I feel so free in the buff." (Submitted Photo)

Not only will they exemplify this theme with their birthday suits, but also by speaking freely about their feelings, hopes, and dreams, and releasing natural bodily functions as they wish, without modesty, without fear, without jeans to filter the blow.

"We should make em' watch that sex cartoon for kids in the Encore. I can't believe we get away with that. And now, naked chicks! I love this job!" Squealed Munson to Hetler, "Crap! Did she just write that down?" he added.

"She's been writing everything down, mental! Why do you think I've been so serious about this--uhgg!" Hetler replied.

Only certain faculty members will be included in the event. The lucky ones will be chosen by Munson and Hetler, and given a months notice to "shape up," not that that's important.

Some Wellness Week activities will include Save the Hippos Hopscotch, Anti-Slave Labor Skinny Dipping, and No Way Nicolet Jumpropping.

"Look, I got a twenty in my pocket. It's all yours if you pretend you never heard the bad stuff," Hetler added, weeping.

If this event receives attention from Centertainment, and Student Government recognition, UW-SP students will have a chance at the utopia they've been pissin' and moanin about, a chance to see "naked chicks," and--um--the faculty members remind students to express their emotions, with hugs.

Pointless Exclusive: Trivia 1998 answers

By O.D.G.
ASSISTANT PIMP DADDY

What will be the talk of the Stevens Point among the Trekkies, Gamers, and "way too into it" comic book readers? TRIVIA '98 On the Road.

And we here at the newspaper that makes the show Hard Copy envious, have the last ten trivia answers for you, the people who love the Rocky Horror Picture Show.

For those of you who don't know, Trivia is a big deal in Stevens Point, it's almost creepy how big of a deal it is.

April 17th through 19th is dedicated to locals and students who eat, sleep and live attached to the radio waiting for trivia questions. Upon receiving the questions, they shift their living arrangements to the internet, to search for the answers, and the cycle continues.

"Last year I didn't sleep for all three days," said Dungeons and Dragons player, Zorcon-5, "I began to have visions about my mother planet by the third night. I'm coming home I shouted, and it was divine."

Um...okay.

Anyway, teams compete for a trophy or something.

"It's not about winning for me. It's about proving myself as the true individual I am. And I need a story to tell my fellow X-members at our next X-Files convention," said Comic Book Shop owner, Bob, just Bob.

OK, listen, this isn't right. Somebody needs a hobby--something.

Fine, whatever, here are the answers, just leave me out of it (I'm gettin' outta here, Bill type this stuff up).

10. The third dead guy from the left in the cult classic "Attack from the Killer Tomatoes."

9. Three

8. Arethra Franklins hips

7. Yo' Momma's so fat when your daddy gets on top of her, his ears pop.

6. Penis Envy

5. Joey Lawrence's New Album, "WHOA!, What ever happened to my career?"

4. Gettin' Jiggy Wit' It

3. Riff Raff

2. Neve Campbell's (I can't believe she didn't get naked) performance in "Wild Things."

1. If you got this far, you need serious psychological help. I mean why do you play this stupid game. Its a trophy, a friggin' trophy. No money, no fame. I mean get a life, a hobby, something. Do you realize the vast number of things that you could be doing in those three days. Why don't you drag your Double-Stuffed Oreo ass to the stairmaster. You freak.

Fraternity furious over blue lights

Dear Editors:

I am writing on behalf of the Phi Sigma Laya fraternity here at UW-Stevens Point.

For the past few years, our fraternity membership has dwindled on campus and the only explanation we have is the installation of the blue light emergency stations across university grounds.

Pledges to our esteemed fraternity are guaranteed to get laid several times throughout the semester, no matter what it takes.

Ever since the university installed these lights, one of our biggest ways of getting sexual intercourse went down the crapper.

Now everytime we try and pick up a chick for another member, off they run, screaming and flailing their arms in the air, to the nearest blue light emergency station to press that damned button.

Some of our members have even tried to lose weight by drinking less beer so we have a better chance of running down the women before they reach the safety of the blue light.

But of course, the great looking bitches still outrun us and we are again stuck, flying solo.

As months went on, members started to drop out as promises couldn't be kept.

At the same time, crime on campus began its current downward trend. And unfortunately for us, no sex "crimes" have been reported in the past three years, obviously because of those stupid lights.

We thought we weathered the storm with "Take Back the Night" when chicks would march on the streets, protesting these so-called "sex crimes."

But you university officials just had to take the next step, making it next to impossible to get laid.

At our fraternity reunions, our former fraternity brothers tell us how it was in the good old days, which always brings out the anger in the current members.

It's not like we're asking much. Just a little sex here and there with no one to call later.

But you university bastards had to ruin our fun with those damn blue lights.

We hope you all rot in hell.

-Aaron Stewart
President, Phi Sigma Laya

Just give me a damned parking ticket please!

Dear Editors:

I am writing this letter in utter disgust towards the UW-Stevens Point Parking Services. After all, aren't we as students paying their salaries. If this is so, we should expect to be satisfied.

My problems stems from the fact that day after day, I park in the university parking lots without a dime. Now one would expect that after six months of parking for free, I would have a mountain of parking tickets. Well it turns out that the very opposite is true; I have yet to receive a single parking ticket.

Maybe it is due to a lack of dedication on behalf of the parking police, or maybe it has something to do with the sales at local gas stations, but whatever the reason is, I will not stand for free parking anymore.

As growing and maturing adults, we should be living each day like the days ahead. I remember hearing in a class sometime ago that there's no such thing as a free lunch. I ask, shouldn't that go for parking also?

All that I ask, as a student of this fine university, is that cars are ticketed every minute of the day. I feel that if we hire more staff, say enough for a parking person in every lot, that no car will go unticketed.

In fact, why not go all the way and let Parking Services employees sleep in the parking lots. That way, whenever a car is there, we all can be guaranteed there's another paying customer.

Student asks for a new tutoring program

Dear Editors:

I have been attending Stevens Point University for some time, and as a whole I have been very impressed with the educational opportunities that have been presented to me.

What has impressed me even more is the vast array of programs that support the learning experience here in Point. While some students might not be aware of it, there are tutoring programs available to help students with all parts of their Academic and nonacademic lives.

Make that almost all parts of their lives. There is one gaping hole in the University's otherwise upstanding curriculum.

I am referring, of course, to sex. Thanks to university programs, I can get a reading tutor, a writing tutor, or a computer tutor. But there simply aren't any programs available for students who need a little help in understanding the vast and varied nuances of sexual intercourse.

I guess what I'm calling for isn't sex education, but sex higher education. Coming into college, students are told to practice safe sex. However, no practical advice on the subject is given, and they are given very little, if any, opportunity to actually practice.

A series of sex related classes (such as Sex 101 Intro To Sex, Sex 150 History of Sex, and Sex 210 Sex of Other Cultures: Kama Sutra to Tantrism, MNS.) would be the easy solution to this, giving

Pointless/Counterpointless: Which bud has more bang for the buck

By Phil "My" Blunt
"HIGH" GESTAPO

When thinking about which bud you should pursue, it's important to think about important qualities that each possesses.

Take kind bud, or kb, for example. There's the great smell of green, leafy bud, that accents the incredible buzz one receives.

Then there's the always plentiful bud known to most as schwag. While the smell is not always appealing, compared to kb, the price is one that can't be beat.

In my opinion, schwag is the way to go for most. Now if you're a hard smoking, tube-pulling, weed fiend, maybe kb now and then is cool for your spirits.

For me though, I'll take a bowl of schwag, five or six beers and a nice night of sleep to pull me through. Of course, too many hits from the bong and it doesn't matter what you're smoking; you'll be out cold.

You see, there's a phenomenon known as being "too high." How can somebody be too high you ask, well it can happen. If one was sitting around with four or five buds and each of them matches you with kind bud, well then you're there. Too high is a place where words carry absolutely no meaning.

Now I like to talk and joke around and have a good time when I'm buzzed, so therefore, I enjoy the mellow, joyful high I get from schwag. Nothing against kind bud; I just like to talk.

Of course the economic factor is sure to come up, because schwag is a family car to kind bud's Camero status. While it may cost more than schwag, here is one point where I'll lean towards Blueberry, Northern Lights or any other kind variety. This is probably cause one bowl of kind bud equals maybe three or four of schwag.

In an instance like this, kind bud saves money.

But if you are not in a rush to go on a smoking binge, there's nothing wrong with schwag at all.

In fact, if you buy an ounce of schwag, it will last much longer than if you pay MORE for a quarter of kind bud.

Granted, either side to this debate will shout loudly to uphold their beliefs, but comparing the two is much the same as comparing apples to oranges.

Which ever one decides to go with, remember each carries with it a certain mystique. Also remember to give me call when the shipment comes in!

By Constant Li Hy
YOU GOT A LIGHTER?

This is something that I never thought I would have to debate. The issue at hand is whether kind or schwag weed delivers a bigger bang for the buck. I don't know about you, but when I can even find kind bud around here, I snap it up.

I'll concede the fact that living on my budget makes it tough to afford $100 quarters, but when my Pointer check comes in, you better believe that I'm scouring the town for anything that smells remotely skunky.

Day after day of sparking cheap bowls or scraped resin makes me absolutely crave "the taste." You know what I'm talking about—clearing a cloudy footer and luxuriously blowing that smoke out of your nose, and then relaxing your head against the wall (or floor) and taking off for the clouds. You just can't get that at $35 a quad.

Sometimes, when forced to smoke the schwag, my mind goes back to freshman year, when we found this grass that literally stuck to the wall. I don't even mean figuratively sticky here— that nug actually clung to the wall. That represents, for me, the penultimate of smoking pleasure.

The other thing to consider in terms of economics (the greatest threat to kind smoking) is the fact that kind bud will last a whole lot longer. Remember that $20 eighth you bought at 8:00 p.m. one night and then were forced to go looking for more at 10:00? I sure do.

Makes me wish that I had bought a $50 dollar eighth, and then it would have lasted for a week and a half. That is called longevity, and that is the economic vitality of kind bud. Can't buy $20 eighths three times a week, can you? Not for very long. Try some Northern Lights for a week, and then see if you go back to that hairy Mexican stuff. Your taste buds and music appreciation will love you for it.

And remember: there's no greater feeling than walking into your friend's living room (perhaps tearing him away from Days) and packing a fat bowl of some really good stuff and then seeing his eyes widen and a smile stretch when he tastes what you've brought over. "Nice stuff, man," he'll say, and you'll smile and say "Yeah, not bad, eh?" like you smoke this stuff every day.

And think how much better Highlander and Star Trek: The Next Generation are when you're flying high. And that Domino's large Pointer combo? Heaven in a box, people.

There are no real drawbacks to kind buds. And if you find some, give me a call.

Why protest Nicolet? Executive questions protests

Dear Editors:

I would just like to address the furor that has accompanied my company's attempt to bribe your university with grant money.

This practice is generally accepted at other institutions of higher learning around the country, and even goes on unchecked in the White House and Congress. Crandon and Exxon have always boasted a perfect record in terms of pocketed politicians and deadlocked professors willing to sign off on our research projects.

Frankly, we're just having a difficult time understanding why you have a problem with corruption and greed anyway. It is the American way. It's how you will all make money in the future, and if you think that your idealism will last forever, then you are sorely mistaken. When confronted with bills, debts and collectors, will you find that you have developed a healthy concern for money, and that usually translates into a healthy disrespect for both the environment and personal autonomy.

My most overwhelming concern is this, however. Are we being targeted because there aren't any more Dow Chemicals out there? There are always protestors. Please don't make us out to be the bad guys here. We really just want to be rich and exploit the land.

Remember that your elected governor is very strongly supportive of exploitation and expansion at the cost of "Gaia," whatever the hell that means. Why don't you protest him and leave us alone?

Reader's guide on how not to "cheat"

Dear Editors:

Society has come to an unfair understanding of what "cheating" is. I have gone through six different girlfriends in the past two months all because they said I was "cheating" on them. It's ludicrous what women expect of men these days and this editorial is to clarify for women what is and what is not "cheating," at least what I think.

First let's talk about certain relationships a man may have and why they should not be considered "cheating."

Girlfriend's Sister: sleeping with your girlfriend's sister should not be considered "cheating." Women should be happy that you're willing to keep sexual relations in the family. Who better than to sleep with a blood relative?

Co-Worker: I never could understand why women would get upset when men boink a co-worker! All you are doing is strengthening workforce morale. Ask yourself this: "Who gets more work done, an employee who is gettin' some or one with cobwebs on their crotch?" The answer is an obvious one.

Ex-Girlfriends: bumpin' uglies with an old girlfriend should never be considered unfaithful. I mean, come on, you already boinked her once; what difference does it make if you do it again, it's not like she's a complete stranger or anything!

Complete stranger: some women may feel a one-night stand with a complete stranger is "cheating." I happen to disagree. A complete stranger may help your boyfriend truly appreciate his girlfriend, if the sex is bad. Of course, if it's good sex (or the stranger is really hot) you may be screwed.

Really drunk: no man should ever be held accountable when he's really hammered. Men have absolutely no control when intoxicated and should not be expected to behave at society's "norms." Why do you think the pope never drinks too much? He's a little too concerned about that hot nun in the cafeteria.

Girlfriend's mom: please see girlfriend's sister (above).

Younger chicks: how can women expect men to turn down younger women. Those rock hard bodies and simple, easily manipulated minds. Come on. Give men a break. We are only human and every now and then need a release. Besides, it's not like there's any feeling behind it, just sex, so back off!

Threesome: women actually expect us to say no to a threesome? Yeah, right. Do men actually look that dumb? If anything in this world is a given, this is. Even if they're ugly you have to do it out of general principle. Sorry. To me this is a no-brainer.

Next I'd like to discuss certain actions that should not be considered "cheating."

Kissing: kissing another woman should not be considered "cheating." It's like shaking hands, for God's sake. Women should be thankful that men are trying to improve their kissing skills.

Sex without moving: what I mean is that if the man does not move it should not be considered "cheating." If he just lies there and some woman is doing things to him what's the big deal? It's not like he's an active participant! I myself have not "cheated" this way many times.

Sex with moving: should be considered cheating unless, of course, the man is really drunk or with anyone in the situations described previously. I feel that it's okay for women to get a little upset here.

There you have it women. If you'll allow men to slide in these instances you will be on the road to a successful, faithful relationship. No need to thank me, just being there to help is thanks enough for a faithful guy like myself. For all you men out there, there is still one way to cheat on your girlfriend, and that's by sleeping with your sister, but only if she's a minor.

GNATURE GNEWZ AND GNOTES

World

Scotland-A rash of Lock Ness Monster sightings has erupted in direct correspondence with the arrival of Dolly Pardon in the European stretch of her world tour.

"I can't understand what all the fuss is about," said Pardon. "I've been out floating around in that lake every day and haven't even seen a minnow much less a monster."

Mexico City- An unidentified seismic gas has wiped out the entire population of Mexican Killer Bees.

All 10 million or so people crowded the streets singing songs of joy and eating jars of honey.

Nation

Everywhere, U.S.A- In a surprise to everyone but little Jimmy Johnson, the common dandelion has been placed on the endangered species list.

The eight year-old Johnson said he had predicted the problem for years.

"It was only a matter of time before someone popped one to many heads off of momma," said Johnson.

My House

Phillips St.- A mouse ate a bag of my Cheetohs. Two days later roommate Curtis Disher from Albert Lee, Minn., caught it with his bare hands and ate the whole damn thing, bald tail and all. Smokey Bear locked up for lighting up

By Joe's Head
STUPID SITCOM ON FOX

Popular forest fire prevention advocate Smokey Bear is being held today in the Portage County jail under suspicion of arson, Portage County police say. Authorities arrested Bear last night after fire fighters found bear tracks near where a blaze burned 300 acres of forest including the Schmeckle Reserve.

Portage County sheriff Nick Uvtyne was thankful that the arrest was made so quickly before any more damage could be done. "We've been onto this guy for months. You've just got to be cautious around any bear that knows that much about fire," Uvtyne said.

Bear left many clues that led to his arrest. An empty gas can with his paw prints was left at the crime scene, along with a book of matches that read "Smokey's friends don't play with matches". A charred copy of the Wisconsin bear hunting regulations was also found.

While firefighters feverishly tried to extinguish the inferno, police were hot on the trail of the 'fire prevention bear'. "Bear's tracks were easy to follow," Uvtyne said. "He led us down the streets of town right to the traffic cop but he only paused a moment when he heard us holler, 'stop'. Then he ran into the woods."

Police pursued Bear into the forest suspected to be his home.

Woodsy Owl, close friend of the suspect, said "Just when you think you finally get to know someone..." (Phile photo)

The tracks lead up to a stream which Bear had used to mask his tracks. Fortunately for police, two kids playing among the trees had seen Bear and were able to point authorities in the right direction and later helped apprehend the suspect.

Police surrounded Bear's cave, demanding that he come out. Bear threatened to start another fire inside the cave, but police called his bluff, knowing he'd only smoke himself out. Bear was apprehended at approximately 9 p.m. last night.

Bear commented freely on his reasoning for starting the fire.

"You just don't know how hard it is to be a bear," he growled. "I mean, how would you like to have a football team from Chicago named after you?"

"It was the perfect retaliation. I thought by burning down Schmeckle, people would feel some of the pain I feel being ridiculed during football season and then being hunted like I'm some kind of animal every fall," Bear continued. "And I would have gotten away with it, too, if it hadn't been for those meddling kids!"

Bear faces trial next month where he plans to plea guilty to charges of arson and plagiarism of the criminals on Scooby Doo.

Ducks sign new deal with state, Elk move on to new pastures

By Bah Woo Gah
WHALE LOVER

The National Flyway Council (NFC) agreed to a 10 year, $400 million deal with the state of Wisconsin yesterday. Headed by mostly mallards, wood ducks, and teal, the NFC extended its previous contract, agreeing to nest in the state of Wisconsin through 2008.

NFC spokesman Drake Duckworth was pleased with the deal. "We had looked at other options, but we have generally been very happy with Wisconsin's marshes. Once we agreed on the terms it was just a pecuniary matter."

Under the deal, waterfowl will be required to produce 1.3 million young birds each year. Each pair of birds will be paid based on the number of offspring they produce. The Wisconsin DNR was hoping to keep waterfowl in the state, but refused to comment, mentioning only something about the first Saturday in October.

In other natural resources legislation, elk, which had been reintroduced into northern Wisconsin a few years ago, have decided to leave the state, said Brave Young Elk (BYE) co-chairs Mark Boone and Ally Crockett.

"We just weren't happy here in Wisconsin," Boone said. "It's not like out west where you can drink from a river and not have to worry. Here, one of our members was bitten by a huge muskie.

It's just too dangerous." Crockett agreed adding, "We're really worried about our kids catching brainworm from deer. And also, these elk have no taste in fashion. One was wearing a thick, gaudy necklace with her elkskin coat."

BYE members plan to leave the state and head to Wyoming where they hope to find more traditional homes.

FRESH RATS (for sale)

By Dr. Evil
PROFESSOR OF BIOLOGY

The other day I stepped into my lab and breathed in the breath of my life. Formaldehyde burned in my nostrils and I knew once again that I was alive. The dim, yellow lights glowing above me cast giant shadows of myself on the wall so I shadowboxed for a while until the greatest idea I've ever had hit me like a file cabinet.

It actually was a file cabinet, I knocked it over while I was dancing around the room. But while I was pinned under there, I had a vision. Why not sell off the rats that we don't use in our Bio 160 labs? Most of them are perfectly fine, a little dead, but still good.

There are all sorts of fun things students could do with our rats. Some may have snakes, lizards, or small children that need feeding. Others might need base markers for their softball games. They make great pillows and they are a lot cooler than those Beany Babies.

Rats are my favorite animal. No other animal is more like a person. They are smart, conniving and industrious. Some day they may even rule the planet.

You may do well to take them home for dissection studies on your own. That way if they ever do take over the world, you'll know all about them from inside out and then, just maybe you will be able to save us all. Good luck and I'll see you all Sunday, April 32 at the Rat Sale.

Turkeys turn the tables on hunters

By Foghorn Leghorn
A CHICKEN, I SAY

If you're like me, you're one of the thousands of Wisconsin turkey hunters who were lucky enough to draw a tag for this spring.

For months we have been waiting patiently for the chance to hear a gobble echo through the hills at dawn, and with spring nearly upon us, we will finally get that chance. Or will we?

Recent events have shown that all is not well in the turkey woods. A disturbing tale has come to my attention and though the individual involved has asked to remain anonymous (we will call him Joe), he believed it necessary that his story be told. For in fact, the gobble that hunters have so longed to hear, may signal disaster.

Joe looked terrible. He lay before me in his hospital bed, leg broken, ribs bruised, and arms wrapped in bandages. To a casual observer he might have looked as though he took a bad tumble from his bike or maybe mouthed off to the wrong guy, but even the cuts on his face could not hide his astonished expression that hinted at the nature of his ordeal.

His injuries were the result of a no mere fist fight; no ordinary bike riding accident, but were the product of a viscous attack by an assailant who remains at large. The culprit; an Eastern Wild Turkey.

With vacant eyes and a trembling voice Joe told me his chilling tale.

Recently, while scouting for turkeys on a certain Richland county farm, he had been "lucky" enough to come across some fresh gobble sign. Little did he know the danger he was in, for his happiness would soon come crashing to a strange and tragic end.

The events that followed will no doubt be a source of great mystery and horror to turkey hunters for many years to come. Joe's fragile mental and physical state made it difficult for me to discover all the details, but he did manage to provide me with an being used against him. Left for dead, he some how managed to crawl back to the farmhouse.

Now I know this seems hard to swallow, but let me just say that you have been warned. You may not believe me but for those who do, I'm sure some of you are trying to downplay this with some sort of explanation; ultraviolet radiation, rabid turkeys, or the ever-popular El Nino, however,

I know better. More of these "accidents" have already occurred this spring, but the victims remain silent for fear of ridicule.

Here is a turkey. They are nice birds. Shoot them!

emotional description of his encounter.

Apparently, as he found the turkey scratchings a renegade tom barreled over the ridge and attacked. Joe, defenseless and too shocked to run, was no match for the furious turkey. Ironically the turkey's spurs, a feature so admired by Joe and other turkey hunters, were the very weapons

I mean, how many of us would like to admit we've been beaten up by a turkey! This was not some chance encounter with an ill-tempered turkey, but was a part of a large and deliberate scheme. The frightening truth is that lovesick toms have banded together to prevent hunters from

Editor snaps, thrown into kennel

By FURRY ANIMAL

Last Thursday, Outdoors editor Charlie Sensenbrenner was pronounced mentally unstable and physically unable to perform after a failed attempt to hold The Pointer staff hostage Wednesday night.

Sensenbrenner cording to Features editor, Tara Zawlocki, the normally quiet and reserved Sensenbrenner erupted in an unexpected burst of rage early in the evening when she completed her section.

"I was dancing around on all the desks singing, 'I'm done! I'm done! Time for me to go have fun! Too bad that you're all so dumb!' Then all hell broke lose," said Zawlocki.

Sensenbrenner hurled his computer monitor over his head and through the window behind him screaming, "No!" then jumped out of his chair and ran towards the office's only door on all fours, frothing at the mouth like a rabid wolf and blocking anyone from coming or going.

Two staff members, Advertising Representative Steve Schoemer and Co-Editor-in-Chief Chris Keller, were wounded in the incident.

"Chris and I wanted to get out for a smoke break so I tried petting him like the dog he thought he was and he almost bit my hand off," said Schoemer. "Then Chris made a running jump over his head, but Charlie caught his foot, like a frisby in mid-air."

Keller hit the ground hard, but still managed to slip out of his shoe and escape. Schoemer snuck through in the midst of the commotion.

Two hours and twenty minutes later, Keller the courageous leader, returned to save the rest of his staff.

"I went down to Ella's, had a few beers and pretended that nothing happened, but people kept asking what happened to my other shoe and I realized what I had to do," said Keller. "I stopped home for my NWO t-shirt and bandana then went back to the office to take care of business."

He snuck back into the Communications Building hiding a metal chair behind his back only to find that Sensenbrenner had left his post and gone back to his seat in front of a computer alongside the other section editors.

"I knew what he was trying to do and wasn't going to let him fool me," said Keller. "So I got him and brother, I got him good!"

Witnesses say Keller slammed the chair over Sensenbrenner, picked him up off the ground, lifted him high in the air and "Power-bombed" him directly onto the chair.

Sensenbrenner was unavailable for comment and is currently being held for Treatment in the lower level of the Health Center. He was placed on the growing Pointer inactive list and is expected to return to action early next week.

Environmental group targets new goals

By Hardlee Cares
HARD ASS-IN-A-TRUCK

The student group formerly known as Environmental Council fell under new reins earlier this week with the inauguration of a new president.

Shortly after the inauguration ceremony, the new club president decided to change the organization's name from Environmental Council to Evict Conservation and revamp the environmental ideals associated with the group.

"I've decided to get rid of all that tree hugger crap," said Dave Braidless. "There are an uncountable number of things that need to be done far more important than protecting the earth."

Stage one of the new E.C. plan is to pave the planet. According to Braidless' assistant Dee Hydrate the paving will go beyond the average monotonous concrete design now found on all roadways.

"The new roads are going to be so cool under the new plan," commented Hydrate.

E.C. has joined up with Crayola Crayon Inc. and Ben and Jerry's Ice Cream Company to instate the theme plan "Pave the Planet Pretty" onto the public.

son chunky monkey, chartreuse phish food, or burnt umber chubby hubby.

Before the kick off of the "Pave the Planet Pretty" plan, E.C. has to find a contracting company willing to cut down all the trees in the world, so the pavement can be laid down.

Environmentalists have nothing to fear, commented Braidless.

After every square millimeter has a coat of special pavement, then the group will plant artificial Christmas trees randomly into the concrete.

"All the trees will have flashing Christmas lights too," Braidless said.

"The dramatic increase in electricity will drive the need for more power plants. We definitely need more power plants," said General Electric representative Buzz Watt.

Due to Braidless' noble plan some sources say that Braidless will definitely earn a distinguished Dumbbell Award for the tremendous idea of the century.

The plan will then move into every county government, where the mayor and other city officials vote on a color/favor scheme. Portage County has already brought the plan to the drawing board. Community members will have three choices during the "special election for pavement" next week. The choices for the color/flavor are sparkly crim-

Carp fisherman may be dumb, but they sure are funny

By Ernie

ORANGE-SKINNED MUPPET

After opening my mailbox this past week to see what fishing catalogs were sent to me, I was intrigued. It was the spring catalog for "Carp Fever", that is published by EuroTackle. This blew my mind that a fish that we regard as crap, can actually have a catalog proclaiming its existence. In my boredom, because I have nothing better to do in my free time as a college student, I decided to look into this phenomenon and see how many people ate paint chips as children and actually fished for these bottom feeders.

I came to the conclusion that there are a lot of demented people living in our society. We have reached a sad point in time when In Fisherman is writing articles on carp, videos and books are being made on the topic, and worldwide organizations actually exist.

There is a real organization named the "Carp Anglers Group", that started in 1993 with thirty "gifted" anglers. Now the group proclaims to have over 800 "gifted" anglers that have obviously not yet realized that other fish exist in our lakes and streams.

This group also began carp tournaments, the first one being in Chicago in 1996. How fitting! Paul Ockenden proudly can say he won the first ever Chicago Carp Classic, and proclaims himself to be the Chicago Carp

King. Tod Carlender beat out "proud" Paul in 1997, and successfully won enough other nationwide tournaments to be declared North American Carp Champion in 1997. That's something I'd proudly put on my resume!

I also ran across a new book published by a man who proclaims to be the "New Jersey Carp King". Manny Luftglass proudly published a book called "Gone Fishin' For Carp". How embarrassing! "Carp Crazy" is a new video that was just produced by Krafty Katcher featuring Bob Roberts. I'll tell you, any video made by a company called Krafty Katcher sounds like a "best buy" to me.

If you are intersted in wasting a thousand dollars on a vacation, the honorable Bob Roberts says, "This is the finest, most organized, comprehensive, quality carp fishing vacation in the world." It is even recommended by Carpworld's "Globetrotter" Tony Davies-Patrick. All you have to do is catch a plane to Montreal and soon you'll be fishin' the St. Lawrence River for a bargain price of $925. That's without food and travel expenses. Please respond soon, because I'm sure they're already almost booked for the 1998 season.

When asking, "What might I expect to catch on an average day on the mighty St. Lawrence?" The answer by the lodge owner was, "Seven carp in an eight hour session is average, with all the carp weighing over 17 pounds." This carp charter, I thought those words would never come from my lips, proclaims to be all catch and release and has taken fish up to 64 pounds.

One bonus when planning this trip is the expense of the bait. Bread is said to be the number one bait in the area, and guides usually "chum" with it to

Clinton: Africa is "vary danejerus!"

B.S. News Services

CAPE TOWN- President Bill Clinton shocked South African officials Tuesday at an impromptu press conference concerning recent developments in the Paula Jones sexual assault case.

When British reporters asked, "So Mr. President, now that you've finally got Ms. Jones' big nose out of your bum, what are you going to do?"

Clinton paused, cracked a beaming grin and answered "I'm going to Swaziland!"

The crowd erupted in cheers of joy, chanting "Bill, Bill, Bill..." Clinton "raised the roof" in rhythm with the crowd, then grabbed the microphone to discuss plans for his second, more exciting, African safari.

"Theodore Roosevelt came out here early in the century and killed hundreds of animals. Now, as we near the millennium. I think it's time for me to follow in his footsteps," said Clinton.

"I also really and truly believe that I am better than him. I can take a lion with my bare hands. There is nothing we Americans can't do if we put our minds to it and I'm going to prove it."

Within minutes an American helicopter landed to carry the president off to "Ivory Dollars," a South African safari camp long suspected of poaching.

Clinton was heard saying, "Better stay here woman this could be dangerous," as he made his way to the aircraft. Moments later, the first lady shook her fist in the air as the chopper took off without her.

The Safari got off to a rocky start when South African driver/guide Spidut Tsiht refused to let Clinton drive his Land Rover.

"I told him I didn't give a monkey's blue ass who he was. Nobody drives my truck!" said Tsiht.

Clinton yielded control on the condition that everyone address him as "Mufasa" for the duration of the hunt and the safari finally began.

With The Lion King soundtrack blaring from the Land Rover's speakers, "Mufasa" Clinton bagged five impallas and an elephant in ten minutes of heart pumping action.

The party did spot one dark-maned lion. Clinton jumped in front of the camera and muttered in an Australian accent, "These guys are really mean, he could probably take my head off with one swipe."

Video footage shows the lion turn tail and run as a bare-chested Clinton gave chase screaming unprintable explicatives.

Tremors starts shaking with strip club

By Crack Baby
DOOMED-IN-WOMB

Change is inevitable and those things that do not change fall to the wayside.

Tremors, formerly UW-Stevens Point's non-alcoholic nightclub, has faced this harsh reality more than once this semester.

The initial problems that Tremors faced blossomed out of the management's unwillingness to evolve with the times.

"(We) were blind to the real problem," said Aaron Williams, a former hand stamper at the club.

"The students and their taste in music were changing everyday and we were trying to hold onto the past."

Attendance over the past year reflected the club's inability to appeal to a new class.

"Once people figured out that we were dubbing our regular nights 'hip-hop night' and 'eighties night' just to cover up that we didn't know what to play on a 'nineties night,' it started going down hill," said Kenny "D.J. Hip" Lexington, a former Tremors disc jockey.

By February of this year, the question facing the staff at Tremors and the University Centers wasn't whether or not to shut the club down, but what to do with the space when they did close the doors for good.

"We had many informational and open forum type meetings concerning the future of the space previously filled by Tremors," said Tom McDonald, Assistant to the Head of Social Affairs and Functions for the University Centers.

"We came up with the idea of turning the space into a lodge type lounge, the (Basement) Brewhaus the lodge idea."

There was a place on the survey for suggested uses of the space for students not in favor of the lodge proposal.

In the survey 2.1 percent of students responding thought the space should be used for a tanning salon, 12.9 percent suggested an indoor football arena and bidding on an expansion team, 27.3 percent wanted a bar where they served under-agers and 57.7 percent of students wanted a strip club.

"Initially we thought that the strip club idea was impossible, but after some research into the matter and the strong support of the Chancellor, we are beginning to see the idea materialize," said McDonald.

"I often frequent strip clubs myself, but I realize that not all students have the means to get into a good strip club or pay the cover charge if they get there," admitted Chancellor Thomas George.

"I am putting that whole technology push thing on hold and making a campus strip club my mission."

With the recommendation of the Chancellor, the club will be open to students, staff and administration every night of the week and free to administration. Personal points will be accepted.

Since the decision to close Tremors and to discard the lodge proposal, the only problem the University Centers face now is whether to hire male or female strippers.

minus the coffee and bear skins on the walls instead."

After a formal proposal for the lodge idea was drafted, the University Centers decided to send a survey via e-mail to get a preview of how students were going to respond to the lodge.

"The good news was that the actual response to our survey was amazing," McDonald said.

"I didn't think anyone read the student message of the day. The bad news was that students hated

WIC includes men for the first time

By Ryan N. Stacey
BOTTOM FEEDER

The secret feminist organization, WIC or Womyn in Communications, made an earth-shattering announcement last Wednesday. As of their last meeting, WIC would become gender integrated.

This was not shocking news to WIC Junta leader, General Cindy Wiedmeyer.

"We need guys for stuff, they like, are good for procreation and writing their names in the snow," Wiedmeyer said, perusing through a playgirl magazine.

The changes were ushered in slowly. At the first totally integrated meeting, men were allowed to serve cocktail weenies and other hors d'oeuvres to their female counterparts. Of course, the men were scantily clad in nothing but a bow tie.

New male WIC member Curtis Disher had this to say; "It was great, all of those years of hooting at women at construction

"What men do, we can do better. They don't even leave the toilet seat down; what a primitive species these 'male dominators' are."

--Sara Smith

sites, and now they're slapping my ass; what a dream come true."

At the power-dressing seminar last week, WIC members were shown how to assert themselves in the workplace by wearing powerful clothes.

"It was a very liberating experience. I've never worn shoulder pads before, now I don't feel so dominated and submissive when I speak. I think powerful men actually look at me as an equal," Disher said.

Wiedmeyer is considered a pioneer by most in the field of Communication for her mercy toward men.

"I think we're all equal, guys just need a kick in the ass sometimes," Wiedmeyer said.

Junior WIC hench womyn Sara Smith led the inner protest against the male intergration.

Smith stated, "What men do, we can do better. They don't even leave the toilet seat down, what a primitive species these 'male dominators' are."

She then proceeded to slap this reporter's ass.

Restaurant review: Debot Eatery

By Upp "Chuck" Kohler
RESTAURANT CRITIC

In a time and place where a good meal is on the endangered species list, the Debot Eatery provides an oasis for both on and off-campus students.

Upon entering the Debot complex through the main doors, a flight of stairs brings you to a facade of windows that enable you to see all of the happy faces of those already enjoying the Debot experience.

The benefits of the university food service look you right in the eyes as you are given the infinitely beneficial option to enter on either side of the restaurant.

The point card system has its obvious benefits of not having to carry cash and having your face on your ID guarantees that no one else can use it.

The real draw comes when you forget your ID or bring a friend who doesn't have a meal plan. The price of meals are quite reasonable, ranging from $8 to $10.

After passing through the cashier station, you get that "at home" feeling when you are expected to get your own tray and silverware.

Next comes the line for the main entrees, which is conveniently placed in such a way that those who are finished eating must cut through the line to put their trays away.

When it is your turn, you have the choice of two or three entrees. The overqualified servers considerately limit you to one entree per trip as to avoid needless bloating and self-destructive over-eating.

On this particular trip to the Debot Eatery, I opted for the Teriyaki chicken served over ramen noodles. It was a difficult decision, as turkey tetrazzini and freshly made Grade A hamburgers were also on the menu.

I made my choice based on the fact that one can never get enough ramen noodles.

I then proceeded to the salad bar where I was overjoyed at seeing fresh, crisp lettuce as usual. I loaded my plate with fresh vegetables and delicious top-of-the-line salad dressing.

As I went to the get my drinks from the milk, juice and soda bars, I realized that the Debot staff was looking out for my well-being once again.

To avoid binging and to promote variety in your selection, the cups and glasses hold a mere six ounces of fluid.

I'm no pervert but... Reader proposed with foursome

Dear Samantha,

I don't know what to do! Like, I've been in a threesome before, but never with someone of the same sex.

A few of my friends and I were sitting around playing poker and even though it really wasn't strip poker, I started removing clothing one piece at a time.

One of my really good friends asked me to join her with our other two friends in a foursome. Well, like I thought she was only into chicks, but this time it would be two on two.

I find all of them attractive but that is like the problem. I don't think I would be able to control my orgasms with that much sweaty flesh in one room and I don't want to embarrass myself.

Sincerely,

Multi-Orgasmic & Troubled

Multi-orgasmic and Troubled

Dear Multi-Orgasmic and Troubled,

I'm not sure if I'd actually consider your situation a problem. I know personally I would jump at the chance.

Concerning your friend's sudden apparent broadening of her sexual preference, perhaps she is in an experimental stage. How are you going to know if you like something unless you try it.

Now for the real "problem" you referred to. Being multi-orgasmic is something to be proud of, not embarrassed about. A lot of people are lucky if they orgasm once, let alone multiple times during a single sexual encounter.

If there really is no way you can get around feeling embarrassed about not controlling yourself, realize that there is help. Doing exercises with the muscle that you use to control urine flow will help you control your orgasms. Contract and relax the muscle consciously at least twenty times a day.

Sincerely,

Samantha

Meat gets day in sun Students forming a carnivore club

By Buddy Wackit
FUNNY COMEDIAN

A concerned group of student activists recently began a process of cutting through red tape in order to create a new organization on campus.

The group of over 25 students undertaking the task is forming the group in response to an overwhelming number of students adapting the vegetarian lifestyle.

"Students need to be and deserve to know about both the benefits and the drawbacks of a lifestyle that totally rules out the consumption of meat," said James "Slim Jim" Kapowski, a leading member of the group. "If you're going to rule out anything it should be vegetables."

The proposed name for the hope-to-be organization is Students for a Meatier Lifestyle (SML). SML will promote the gathering of information concerning the three choices people face concerning meat and vegetables: vegetarianism or veganism, omnivorism and carnivorism.

The students hoping to see their dream become a reality are publicly advocating and promoting carnivorism, a diet which is constituted solely of meat.

"Due to the biased nature of the media and dietary research, people don't know how beneficial eating just meat is," said Kapowski. "Not only is meat always in season but you can avoid costly pet burial costs."

"We are aiming our efforts at hunters and those people who get gas from eating vegetables," added Kapowski. "Our groups feels like they are the students who will have the most to gain from the change over to carnivorism."

"There's nothing like taking out a six point buck, slitting its neck with my boot knife, tearing one of its legs off and biting a big chunk right out of it," said Tom Williams, a student interested in joining SML when it becomes official. "I can't wait to share stories like this with people who will appreciate them."

SML will be open to all students who are willing to adopt the carnivore diet and solicit for the cause.

Student hustles way through college

By Fast Eddie
PROFESSIONAL HUSTLER

It is no easy task to play a really good game of pool. But for Dan "The Shark" Miller it is a means to an end; an educational end that is.

Miller came to UW-Stevens Point searching for a place to play a game of pool and get an education.

During his tour of campus his senior year of high school, Miller saw a definite lack in both pool skill and knowledge.

"First and foremost, I wanted a school with a strong business department," said Miller. "But taking a close second was someplace with a lot of suckers that think they can play pool."

During this pivotal visit, Miller also found that there wasn't a resident hustler in the Brewhaus.

"It makes it a lot easier when someone hasn't already claimed the territory," said Miller. "You can avoid a needless dual of pool skills."

Miller picked up his first pool cue at the age of two to defend himself from his older sister who had already established herself as a world class lawn jart player at the age of nine.

By the age of three, Miller had mastered using the cue to propel small objects like rocks and lit fireworks.

"At first it was a matter of life or death, or at least a hole in my head, because lawn jarts are considered deadly weapons in the majority of the continental United States," Miller said.

"After that, I realized I did have some true pool talent and I decided to make something of my misfortune."

Miller has taken in enough revenue to pay for his entire college education and his parking tickets.

"In the beginning my goal was to get my bachelor's degree but the whole thing has proved so profitable now I want to get my master's degree."

Miller plans on starting his own business after graduate school. His dream is to start a school for aspiring pool hustlers.

Until then, Miller will continue to play pool for money in the Brewhaus.

Miller is certainly a good person to know; he may be able to loan you money or buy you good shit someday.

A timeless debate: which is better, spitting or swallowing?

By William Clinton
COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF

People have fought over whether or not you should spit or swallow for centuries. I would like to wager that I will settle it once and for all in this oh-so-short column.

This may seem like a typical view, but I say that the obvious choice is to swallow, if not only for the sole reason that spitting is absolutely repulsive.

Beyond that though, there is the simple and very compelling argument of finishing what one starts. To get far enough in the process where a decision is required of whether to spit or swallow and decide to spit seems immature at best.

If you are old enough to be weaned from a bottle and eat baby food, you should definitely be old enough to finish what you started and swallow.

After all, filling your mouth was the intent. It's not like you didn't know what you were in for.

Another popular argument for swallowing comes into play when one considers how unsanitary spitting is.

Take a young lady for example (not that females are the only people to be faced with the decision). Say she is in bed with her boyfriend filling her face. There is no garbage can near the bed so she decides to spit on the sheets.

To spit all over the sheets starts a very unnecessary and avoidable spread of germs not to mention it will probably leave a stain.

Consider this same couple and their resulting plight when the young lady decides to spit. Not only will they face physical anguish but their relationship could be put in jeopardy.

What happens if the young lady spits on the unsuspecting young man? He is forced to deal with a mess that, to put it bluntly, he didn't directly assist in making.

A sort of resentment, perhaps a feeling of low self-esteem or self-worth, will result and the only way to escape these feelings is to give up the habit or terminate the relationship all together.

In either situation, one or both of the involved individuals loses and the whole thing could be avoided if the young lady had just decided to swallow.

For those individuals who are not used to swallowing, realize that it is in fact a skill. It is something that can be mastered, but only with hours and hours of practice.

When practicing, make sure that you are around someone who you are comfortable with, considering that you will probably not be completely successful your first few tries and might end up with some on your chin.

So when considering whether you should spit or swallow consider all of the repercussions of both. Only engage in the act if you have weighed all your options and understand all possible outcomes.

Realize that every action most definitely has a reaction.

By Monica Lewinsky
WHITE HOUSE INTERN

The battle rages on. Which is better, spitting or swallowing? This debate has gone on for years and is often the topic of "heated" discussion in The Pointless newsroom.

I often hear from men, "why don't you like to swallow, or why don't females like to swallow?"

The reasons are simple. Swallowing really fills you up faster than spitting. And I've also heard that it is fattening since it is high in calories. And honestly, it really doesn't taste that good.

These reasons are probably why most females would prefer spitting to swallowing.

Just because some females choose to spit doesn't mean they don't enjoy what they are doing. They simply may not be comfortable swallowing in front of someone.

Going back to the reasons I stated earlier, I do think that swallowing fills you up faster. If you spit, you will be able to last longer and you won't have that uncomfortable "stuffed" feeling.

And what about all those extra calories? We women probably would have to run a few extra miles to burn off those unnecessary added calories. And who wants to exercise more than absolutely necessary? So spitting solves the problem.

Sure, it probably has some proteins, minerals or vitamins in it. But I'm sure you can get those things through some other source.

As I mentioned before, it doesn't taste good at all. In fact, it tastes worse than warm milk on a hot summer day. Ok, so I may be exaggerating a bit, but you get the point.

I've also heard that spitting creates an unwanted mess. Well, if you plan it just right, you could strategically place a garbage can nearby so you wouldn't have to worry about the clean-up. And if you are in a different location than you usually are, I would suggest discretely spitting into a napkin or kleenex.

I don't think the "mess" should be as big of an issue as you guys make it. I think swallowing is overrated. There is nothing wrong with spitting; it's not disgusting or offensive like most people think. It's simply a matter of choice and what is right for you at that particular time.

If you can't decide whether to spit or swallow, weigh all of your options; if you choose to swallow you could choke or have some kind of allergic reaction. And choosing to spit would eliminate those two dangers.

Remember, you have the choice to not participate in the activity at all. And if all else fails and this is still an important issue to you, try something else.

Next time you are at the grocery store, stop in the aisle with sunflower seeds and look for the ones without the shell and you won't have to worry about it. What did you think we were talking about?

Even better would be the addition of a sex minor. As well as providing valuable skills, students with this minor would be more desirable to potential employers. With the addition of the minor, trained sex tutors -employed in the Tutoring Learning Center- could provide help to students with additional difficulties.

Not only would the addition of sex to the curriculum improve student's health, the better understanding these classes would provide on gender issues could reduce uncomfortable friction between the sexes.

As I searched for a table among the masses of people who also heard the well-kept secret of Debot being a low key gourmet, I got a hell of a side ache.

I was ecstatic because I knew that I was burning off calories I hadn't even consumed yet.

I found a seat in a record breaking five minutes and 24 seconds and the best thing was that it was next to an energetic group of people who were throwing carrots right over my head.

The food was simply delectable, but then again, I didn't really doubt that it would be. The chicken was the perfect dryness and the ramen noodles were even saltier than the store bought kind.

The Debot experience left me confident that I would have my appetite back within a few hours as their food has an uncanny knack of passing right through my system.

Stevie Pointer leaves early to turn pro

By A. Pathee
LAZY ASS

Looking for big bucks, Stevie Pointer is leaving UW-SP for the pros. (Photo by Cam E. Raman)

In a move that shocked and stunned the UW-Stevens Point athletic department officials, mascot Stevie Pointer is bolting for the pros.

Citing the fact that many athletes leave college early for big money, the famed mascot of all UW-SP sports is forfeiting the remaining years of his eligibility.

"I'm definitely ready for the big time," Stevie Pointer said at a surprise news conference Wednesday. "And the money that they're throwing at me is so unbelievable. There's no way I can pass it up.

"Besides, I've got a family to think about. I've always dreamed of buying my parents a house so they don't have to live inside a chain-linked fence in somebody's backyard," Stevie Pointer added.

Stevie's move to the pros splits up his long-time partnership with Stephanie Pointer. The pair have been working together for years at various athletic events.

"I can't believe he did this to me," a distraught Stephanie Pointer said. "I thought we were a team, but I guess money comes before our friendship."

UW-SP Athletic Director Frank O'Brien isn't sure what the university will do next year.

"We're all in a state of shock right now. There's no way we can afford the salary Stevie will receive as a professional," O'Brien said.

"We have a few options right now but none of them are better than what we had with Stevie. We could find Stephanie another male pointer dog to team with or even change the mascot all-together to another animal."

Ever since Stevie Pointer finished first in the mascot division at the 1997 Americup Cheer and Dance Championships, he has been hawked by professional mascot agents and companies seeking endorsement deals.

"He's the hottest prospect out there on the market," superagent Drew Rosenhaus said. "He made a wise decision and he'll be a very rich dog soon."

The money is coming in sooner than Stevie may have thought.

Following his announcement, Purina Puppy Chow inked him to a sponsorship deal. Nike, Reebok, and Adidas are reportedly battling to sign the mascot to a shoe contract too.

SGA finally dishes out the dough to athletics

By Richard Liss
ANATOMICALLY CHALLENGED

In a shocking turn of events, the UW-Stevens Point Student Government Association (S.G.A.) decided to give the Athletic Department what it wanted, and more for its 1998-99 budget.

The UW-SP athletic department has always been the lowest funded of all UW-System schools and administration constantly has had to cut corners in order to run the athletic program.

But the tightwad days are over after the S.G.A. Finance Committee unanimously approved a motion that gives Pointer athletics the highest subsidy among all state schools besides UW-Madison.

"This is a great day for Pointer athletics," UW-SP athletic director Frank O'Brien said. "We've been lucky to be successful considering what we've received year in and year out from S.G.A. Now the sky is the limit."

The athletic department is funded by student segregated fees, which is included in each student's tuition. With the added funding, seg fees will rise by about $10 dollars, but students will reap the benefits of the extra cost.

"Because of the additional funding, we don't have to charge admission to athletic contests anymore," O'Brien said. "That's something we've been trying to do for a long time, but the money just hasn't been there."

"Students may cringe at the extra $10 that's included in their tuition every semester. But if you attend more than three athletic contests a semester, you've made money over the old ticket system where we charged $3 a game," O'Brien added.

UW-SP coaches are pleased as punch with the extra funding too.

"We'll definitely see more fans in the stands now that admission is free," UW-SP men's basketball coach Jack Bennett said. "Three dollars was a lot of money for a college student to attend a game."

S.G.A. Budget Director Adam Hasse is happy the times of underfunding the athletic department are over.

"It's about time the rest of S.G.A. finally got their heads out of their asses and gave the athletic department the jing that they need," Hasse said. "I've been fighting for this all year and thankfully the rest of S.G.A. actually listened to me for once."

Bennett bolts to Hodags

By I. P. Freeley
NEVER GONNA STOP THE FLOW

Once in a lifetime a golden opportunity can revisit itself.

"Whopper Wednesday" and McDonald's Shamrock Shakes, for instance.

Bennett

And now UW-Stevens Point men's basketball coach Jack Bennett has reportedly received an offer he just could not refuse.

Bennett has decided to leave his UW-SP team to return to where he came from, Rhinelander High School.

"When you're a Hodag, you're a Hodag for life," Bennett said as he packed up his office. "I've only been here at Point for two years but I already miss the northwoods too much. I have to go back."

Bennett, who led the Pointers to the Elite Eight of the NCAA Division III Tournament during his first season on the job in 1996-97, apparently found an even greater challenge in the high school circuit.

"You haven't played tough 'til you play physical teams that wear you down, like Antigo or Merrill," Bennett said.

"I mean, I scoff at the college level. Anyways, I am 'The Man' in Rhinelander, they love me."

UW-SP Athletic Director Frank O'Brien said the search is already beginning for a new coach.

Hockey taking alternate road to success National runner-up looking to Germany for recruits

By Erin Head
DUMB BLONDE

A popular cry throughout the Cold War during the 1980's was "The Russians are coming."

Now it appears that the Nazis may be coming.

It seems that the recent resurgence of the Pointer hockey program was not enough for head coach Joe Baldarotta and assistant coach Craig Heggs.

Inside sources for The Pointless report that Baldarotta and Heggs often sit around and watch Nazi-related programming on the History Channel in Baldarotta's office at K.B. Willet Arena.

When asked about their programming selection, Heggs responded simply, "Yeah, we like Nazis."

With the recent runner-up finish at the Division III championship, the Pointers feel that skillful recruiting of Nazis will carry them back to the top once again.

"Not a lot of people know what great hockey players Nazis are. They're ruthless. And those are the kind of players we need to capture a national championship," Baldarotta said.

"They're very loyal as well," Baldarotta added. "They'll give the swastika off their back for their teammates. They'll go to war for you."

The Pointers' coach reportedly enjoys their natural, hockey-like nature and their physical style of play, which he would like to return to.

One of the top recruits the Pointers are believed to be going after is Adolf Hitler's grandson, Gustaf "Bone-Jarring" Hitler.

"That boy's worse than his granddaddy," Heggs said. "He's a psychopath, and a hell of a goal-scorer too."

The delve into this previously unentered market may seem like a risk to some, but not to the UW-SP staff.

"I ain't scared," Baldarotta said shrugging. "What's the

THE MORE THE MERRIER

If you can't beat 'em, join 'em. After four straight losses to the Green Bay Packers, including a blowout in the 1997 NFC Championship Game, the San Francisco 49ers are joining the Cheese League for NFL Training Camp this summer.

UW-Stevens Point, the host of the 1995 Jacksonville Jaguars' training camp, won the derby that included UW-System schools and a late charge from Cardinal Stritch College.

The 49ers, who are dubbed the San Francisco "Forty-whiners" by Packers fans, should feel right at home in the Cheese League.

"After having to hear all their complaining every time we kicked their ass, joining the Cheese League will allow them to have some 'cheese with their whine' so to speak," Green Bay Packers coach Mike Holmgren, who was also an assistant for San Francisco.

"This will be great," Holmgren added. "If Mariucci wants to bring his team of overpaid and over-the-hill scrubs into Green Bay to scrimmage us, we'd be more than happy to wax them once again."

The 49ers' move from California came as quite a surprise to San Fran residents, but the decision was easy for team owner Eddie DeBartelo.

"UW-Stevens Point is a great campus and has excellent facilities. But the main thing for me was the close proximity of gambling casinos," said DeBartelo, who is currently under investigation for fraud.

"Just look, Rainbow Casino is only 40 minutes away from Point and wherever we would go to scrimmage another team, there's a casino within an hour."

DeBartelo also cited the excessive number of adult entertainment places for wide receiver Jerry Rice, who was caught at a California brothel in a police sting.

"Jerry demanded a training camp site where it would be easy for him to take off at night and see the sights, if you know what I mean," DeBartelo said.

"Plus Jerry says the place has to be safe because the San Francisco media won't be here to cover it up. Boy is the media there a bunch of kiss-ups. We could probably get away with murder."

Versatile Hornby signs contract with Packers

By Hugh Dunnett
IT'S A MYSTERY

Depleted by numerous offseason free agent defections at key positions, the Green Bay Packers signed UW-Stevens Point senior Joel Hornby to a multi-year contract.

Packers' general manager Ron Wolf singled out Hornby because of his ability to play both offensive and defensive lines.

"After everybody and their brother decided to leave Green Bay, we chose to focus on guys who can play more than one position," Wolf said. "And Joel can do just that."

Hornby

"It's a phenomenal opportunity for me," Hornby said. "I've watched the Packers since I was a little kid and now I'll actually be playing on the frozen tundra."

Hornby is expected to step in at the starting right defensive end spot on the line, taking over for Gabe Wilkins, who bolted to the San Francisco 49ers.

But if the senior from Richland Center can't make the switch from defensive tackle, where he played at UW-SP, to end, Santana Dotson is expected to move outside.

"We have full confidence Joel will be able to make the move outside," Green Bay coach Mike Holmgren said.

No matter which position Hornby is inserted at on the defensive line, he is also expected to contribute on the offensive line too.

During his first two seasons for the Pointers, Hornby became a first-team All-Conference center before moving to the other side of the ball for his senior season.

That success on the offensive line will give the Green and Gold depth, especially with the loss of Aaron Taylor to the San Diego Chargers.

"We don't expect Joel to start right away on the offensive line, but he will give us good depth at the center and guard positions," Holmgren said.

"But he should be ready when the time comes that Frankie Winters decides to hang it up."

"I'm sure my ability to play both ways really helped my cause," Hornby said. "I'm definitely ready to play 'Ironman football' for the Packers."

Another thing Hornby has going for him is his strong academic history at UW-SP.

Packers looking to past for replacements

By Ben Feldt
BUT, OF COURSE

The Pack is back.

After losing a number of starters this off-season, the Packers have finally dove into the free agent pool in order to bolster their lineup for next season.

"We've taken so much heat this off-season from the fans for letting all of these players go without signing any new ones, we figured we better hop to it and sign some replacements to help lead us back to the Super Bowl next year," Green Bay Packers' general manager Ron Wolf said.

"We wanted to go out and get some players who would know what it takes to win, and who are familiar with this organization. I think that we filled our holes quite nicely, and I really believe that we will have a better team this year."

Heading the list of free agent signees is a former Packers' punter, the immortal Don Bracken.

"The one player who we really wanted to replace Hentrich with was another former Packer, Paul McJulien, but he had an unfortunate accident with a weed wacker that cut off half of the big toe on his kicking foot. But we are definitely ecstatic to have Bracken on our roster."

When asked why he chose Bracken, who has been out of the league for a number of years, to be his punter, Wolf had this to say, "We understand that there is some risk involved, but he has stayed in good kicking condition."

"Since he left the league he has been running a vegetable farm, so he kicks potatoes, squash, pumpkins, and cucumbers around all day. So we figured the reward was greater than the risk."

The Packers also signed a number of other free agents: defensive linemen Ezra Johnson, Alphonso Carreker, Charles Martin, and Blaise Winter; running back Paul Ott Carruth; and quarterbacks Lynn Dickey and Blair Kiel.

"If Reggie White decides to retire Ezra Johnson will be his replacement. We figure that we will be replacing one Packer pass-rushing legend with another," Wolf said.

He also added that the other linemen will fight for the other defensive end spot, which was previously occupied by Gabe Wilkins.

Carruth, Dickey, and Kiel will all be backups at their respective positions.

Green Bay unveils new franchise fundraiser

By Bud E. Waakett
FLYING SOLO

Following a disappointing stock sale, the Green Bay Packers are putting a new product on the market to make money for the franchise.

Green Bay Packers president Bob Harlan unveiled the plan Thursday morning where football fans can get the authentic feel of attending a game at Lambeau Field.

For a mere $25, the team is making available used beer cups filled with used peanut shells. Both delicacies are swept from the Lambeau Field stands following every home game.

"We are offering another unique item for Packer fans so many people around the state, country, and world can experience more of Lambeau Field," Harlan said. "We expect to top more than $10 million in sales of this one-of-a-kind memorabilia item."

Packer fans across the state of Wisconsin are ecstatic about the sale and many already placed their orders.

"This is unbelievable," Packer fan Pat Crandiewicz said. "I've been watching the Packers for 42 years but I've still never been at the shrine they call Lambeau."

"I even have a television in my bathroom so I can watch the games while I'm taking a crap. The peanut shells in the beer cup will go right on top of that T.V. so I can look at it while I take a dump."

Harlan also said some lucky buyers can even find cigarette butts inside the beer cup, but the odds are slim.

"We expect that variation to be worth even more money," Harlan said. "On the secondary market, the normal item will probably sell for nearly $100. But with even one cigarette butt, they'll likely go for $250."

Amazingly, not everyone is approving of this brand-new item.

"It's sick that an organization would stoop so low as to sell garbage," said Dan Adelman, who for some reason is a self-proclaimed Chicago Bears fan.

Harlan said the sale period of the unique used peanut shells in a used beer cup will extend throughout the 1998 season.

Reggie White hiding from the police Minister and NFL All-Pro runs from drug charges

By Phil R. Up
BIG DRINKER

The Green Bay Police Department has issued a warrant for the arrest of Green Bay Packers defensive end Reggie White.

White is believed to be one of the biggest drug dealers in the Midwest.

The All-Pro is hiding at the moment, knowing that the police are after him.

"The suspect, Green Bay Packers player Reggie White, is wanted by the Green Bay Police Department for suspected drug trafficking," Captain Matt Stillwell said.

"Contrary to White's public image, this man is believed to be armed and dangerous," Capt. Stillwell added.

Police believe that White has been using his religion as a disguise, thinking that his involvement with the Baptist Church would deter any belief that he is a drug dealer.

Investigators are currently putting together clues as to how much of an influence drugs have had in his life.

Unsatisfied with the business in Philadelphia and faced with a high risk of getting caught, White made the move to attend a more open market in the low-key Midwest.

"Contrary to White's public image, this man is believed to be armed and dangerous."

Captain Matt Stillwell, Green Bay Police Department

It is now believed that his Tennessee church burning in 1996 is due to a drug deal White could not complete.

"It's a very sad story that White duped the public into donating money to rebuild his church when the multimillionaire was the one responsible for it," Capt. Stillwell said.

Green Bay Packers officials are declining from all comment at the moment, saying they will not speak until White does.

Inside sources are finding out more details surrounding the fatigue suffered by fellow defensive linemen Gilbert Brown and Santana Dotson in the Packers' loss to Denver in Super Bowl XXXII.

"I saw the three guys enter White's hotel room several nights and then heard excessive sniffing going on inside," Jane Caruso said, who is a maid at the La Jolla hotel where the Packers stayed during Super Bowl week.

"I even smelled a peculiar odor coming from the room. I could've sworn it was marijuana," Caruso added.

Brown and Dotson did not comment on the issue besides in a joint statement, where the two vehemently denied inhaling.

Police warned so-called well-intentioned Packer fans that aiding and abetting White in his hideout will lead to prosecution.

Who's the real 'Tubby'?: Majerus sues Smith

By Cherice Fatt
LARGE AND IN CHARGE

Just days after his Utah Utes fell to the Kentucky Wildcats in the NCAA men's basketball championship game, Rick Majerus and his lawyer have announced that they are suing Kentucky coach Tubby Smith.

The lawsuit calls for Majerus to put an exclusive copyright over the name "Tubby."

"We all know I'm the only real 'Tubby' in college basketball," Majerus said. "I mean come on, look at me. I'm huge."

Majerus' lawyer, I.M. Greedy, feels his client has a right to the name and that Smith in no way represents the name.

"I'm very confident," Greedy said. "Take a look at my client. He's a lard ass. Mr. Smith is a skinny punk. Let him find another name, like Stud or something."

When informed of the lawsuit, Smith was less than enthused.

"Who does that tub of goo think he is? He's just pissed that my team kicked his fat rear all over the floor on Monday," Smith said.

Smith, whose given name is Orlando, says his name dates back to his childhood years when he would spend endless hours in the bath tub pretending he was Jacques Cousteau.

"Look," Majerus said, "I've gone through a seven way bypass earlier this decade. I think I deserve the name."

"I've been forced to give up my dream of being a top fashion model to look like I do and to be a basketball coach," Majerus added.

Meanwhile, Smith's lawyer, Mickey Brady, feels that the suit has no basis and will be thrown out.

"Let him call himself Blubber or Chunky," Brady said. "Besides, I could have sworn that his name was Rick 'Majorass.'"

The lawsuit is scheduled to begin July 8th, which is National Pizza Eater's Day. The Honorable Edward Koch will hear the case in "The People's Court."

Hot off the press...

NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE

• Investigators report the fire at Dallas Cowboys' quarterback Troy Aikman's home was started in a mishap involving fluorescent lights. Police say Aikman was growing marijuana in a closet for teammate Michael Irvin and a towel caught fire, starting the blaze.

Irvin, who's on probation stemming from a cocaine and marijuana hotel room incident, declined comment.

• Disgruntled Chicago Bears' defensive lineman Alonzo Spellman announced his retirement Tuesday to work at Chippendales. Last month Spellman locked himself in a home and after surrendering to police, was sent to a hospital. Spellman tried to escape and walked out of the hospital wearing only his underwear.

NATIONAL BASKETBALL ASSOCIATION

• Stars Chris Webber and Allen Iverson are starting an anti-marijuana campaign in the NBA. The pair have both been arrested for possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia in the last year.

• Chicago Bulls' All-Star Michael Jordan admitted Sunday that he is the recipient of every call from referees. Jordan, who's arguably the best to ever play the game, doesn't deny he never is whistled for traveling and rarely ever gets called for a foul.

"I walk almost every time I have the ball," Jordan said. "But through the years, I haven't been called for it more than a dozen times."

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

• The Milwaukee Brewers are reportedly interested in dealing for Seattle Mariners' ace pitcher Randy Johnson. The Brewers are rumored to be offering their entire Triple-A minor league team in exchange for the strikeout king who's contract is up at the end of the season.

Milwaukee is expected to ink Johnson to a deal before the trade is made, but skeptics worry about his lingering back problem.

"Sure we've taken some chances on pitchers with health problems," Milwaukee general manager Sal Bando said. "We gave Ben McDonald and Teddy Higuera huge contracts only to see them get hurt, so luck has to swing our way sometime."

• Chicago White Sox badboy Albert Belle was nominated for "Baseball Man of the Year" by ESPN The Magazine. The oft-suspended and fined outfielder received the honor after climbing a 50-foot tree to save a cat.

"It's about time I get some positive press after all the crap I've done," Belle said. "I never thought I'd live down chasing those Trick-or-Treaters with my car."

Bucks announce 1998-99 slogan, but Cubs don't 'Wait' to file lawsuit

By Shelly Gettiddunn
PROCRASTINATOR

Following a seven year span of lottery basketball, the Milwaukee Bucks announced the team's slogan for the 1998-99 National Basketball Association season.

But immediately following the press conference that revealed the team's "Wait 'til next year" slogan, club officials were served a lawsuit from another playoff-starved franchise.

Lawyers for Major League Baseball's Chicago Cubs contend the slogan is already their's.

"I don't understand how Milwaukee officials could be this stupid," Cubs' lawyer Sean Robinson said. "The Cubs organization has used this slogan for years."

"Everybody knows the Cubs are a bunch of losers who haven't won a World Series pennant since the early 1900's. Hell, they haven't been in the World Series in 52 years."

"I can't believe Milwaukee's audacity to say they're bigger losers than the Cubs are," Robinson added.

Milwaukee Bucks' owner, "Uncle Herbie" Senator Herb Kohl is astonished that the Cubs would file suit.

"I've sunk so much money into this franchise that I have every right to the slogan," Kohl said. "To my knowledge the Cubs don't hold a copyright or trademark on the saying 'Wait 'til next year' so it's fair game to anyone."

Cubs President Andy McPhail disagrees.

"When I came here from the Minnesota Twins to build a championship team here in the Windy City, I knew the history and Kohl is dead wrong," McPhail said.

"We protected that slogan before copyrights were even created. We've been losers here for that long."

Team members of both franchises aren't pleased about being associated with the slogan, especially the newly-tagged Bucks.

"It's amazing that our front office would have so little faith in us," Milwaukee reserve Jaime Feick said. "It looks like I'm out of this dump as soon as that multi-million dollar offer comes."

Cubs' pitcher Steve Trachel isn't happy with the lawsuit at all.

"For this silly lawsuit to get the national limelight is horrible public relations for our team," Trachel said. "We're trying to shake this loser label and it's not helping one bit."

A lawyer for the Milwaukee Bucks delivered this parting shot to the Cubs franchise.

"They've got a better chance to win the World Series this year than they do to win this lawsuit," Milwaukee lawyer Michael O'Brien.

Editors note--Feick was the only Bucks' player available for comment because the rest of the team was in the training room tending to various injuries.

Wolf was questioned why he would go out and sign two more quarterbacks.

"Well, as we all saw last preseason, Steve Bono just downright sucks ass. We figured that Lynn Dickey would be the prototypical backup quarterback in the NFL.

"If Favre were to get injured next season, we would still feel comfortable with Dickey in there because he has already proven that he can be a starter in this league, and we know that he can win a few games each year," Wolf said.

When asked about the status of free agent franchise running back Dorsey Levens, Wolf had this to say, "We all know that Dorsey Levens is an important part of this football team. However, if he wants too much money and we can't agree on a contract, we do have a backup plan.

"We just had former Packer Eddie Lee Ivory in for a workout the other day, and he looked absolutely spectacular.

"I feel that if we can't re-sign Levens, Ivory would do a wonderful job in his place, plus if you throw Paul Ott Carruth into the picture, our running game could be unstoppable."

And with the losses of starters Doug Evans and Eugene Robinson in the secondary, Wolf is reportedly talking with Mark Lee, Mark Murphy, and Jerry Holmes.

"We're a little short on depth in that area," Wolf said. "If we could be lucky enough to get one or two of these guys, we'll definitely be set to make a run to Super Bowl XXXIII."

Indeed, the Pack is back.

The senior will put his graduate school plans on hold for the National Football League after completing his Biology major with a 4.0 grade point average.

"It's not often you can get an offensive or defensive lineman who was the Scholar Athlete in his conference," Wolf said.

"The guy was a first team Academic All-American too, which is utterly amazing considering the stereotype that linemen are dumb as rocks."

The Packers were able to sign the 6-foot-2, 280 pounder before April's NFL draft because of a loophole in the league's collective bargaining agreement.

Terms were not disclosed, but sources say the contract is for three years and 1.5 million dollars.

"It's great to see another UW-SP player make it to the pros," UW-SP head football coach John Miech said. "Once again, it shows that this program is one of the best in the nation and that I'm a great coach too."

worse that could happen, another Holocaust?

"Once we begin winning every game the fans will warm up to these guys. It'll just take a little time. They're just misunderstood."

The "killer" instinct that may have been lacking from last season's squad won't be a problem anymore.

YES, IT'S REALLY HIM.

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19)
I'm afraid I spilled a little bourbon on the Aries chart for this week. From what I can make out, you'll either be going on a carnival cruise, or having sex with a rodeo clown. Regardless, it looks like an exciting weekend.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-MAY 20)
Cancel your Star Cable account and hope the paperboy trapped in your basement develops Tourette's Syndrome.

GEMINI (MAY 21-JUNE 20)
Venus in the third house shows that this might be a good time for you to explore your sexuality. While it may be difficult at first, eventually, you'll find that with a good map and a flashlight you can explore four or five sexualities a day.

CHOBIE (SEB. 43-ARC 20)
Remember, if you cut off your finger, it's gone for good. They don't just grow back. I'm assuming toes are pretty much the same way.

CANCER (JUNE 21-JULY 22)
With your internet connection down, you decide to resume dating. However, countless hours of internet surfing have degraded your social skills, and in a moment of nervous confusion, you end up mounting your date's saltwater aquarium.

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22)
Long term relationships might be difficult to maintain in the future, as by Monday you will be little more than a rotting corpse in an Arpin cornfield.

VIRGO (AUG. 23-SEPT. 22)
Your incessant demands for a cheese flurry at Belts will reduce a helpless girl of sixteen to hysterical tears.

LIBRA (SEPT. 23-OCT. 23)
Your insistence on being referred to as, "Lord Shankar, master of everything in my pockets," may prove to be a stumbling block on your first date with the chancellor's daughter.

SCORPIO (OCT. 24-NOV. 22)
A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step. Get up off the couch and empty your colostomy bag.

SAGITTARIUS (NOV. 23-DEC. 21)
Make sure you wear some pants the next time you feel like cooking bacon.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-JAN. 19)
The girl you've been flirting with sends you an invitation to dinner and a movie. Actually, it's a subpoena, but you have to read between the lines with these things.

AQUARIUS (JAN. 20-FEB. 19)
Mars ascendant shows this to be a good week to practice restraint. Try a silk scarf, or maybe some padded leather handcuffs.

MITCHEL (1035 JONIS CT.)
Your ex-girlfriend crushes your skull with a box of scented wet-naps after you make a quip about her, "ugly little monkey-baby." While this leaves you a twisted wreck of a man, you are also pleasantly lemony-fresh.

PISCES (FEB. 20-MARCH 20)
An ill-considered comment in your creative writing class, leaves you tied naked to a bicycle rack outside the UC with a toilet snake stuffed up your ass.

Thought to be on sabbatical for the last year, Pat Rothfuss was found wandering the library and lured back to the Pointer with strings of shiny beads and reassurances that no one would touch his sock monkey, Benny.

When asked how it felt to be back, Rothfuss responded, "It's nice to be outside again. Things like friends and pants are taken for granted until they're gone, but you'd be surprised how hard it is to get one without the other."

Over a hundred thousand fluffy bunnies were senselessly butchered to bring you this Horoscope.

April makes me a fool

Antarloka Inner or Between Worlds

By Kyle Geltmeyer
MUSIC CRITIC

Here it is the 1st of April, and the weather has been fooling me lately. The band I am reviewing this week is native to Stevens Point, "Antarloka". They blend various multimedia devices in their live shows that scare and misdirect many listeners, myself included! The music melds instrumental legend and lore, mystically sending one to another world.

I used headphones during my review and they clarified the experience. The characters "Satan and Jesus" are picked up with an Alien beat.

The first song, "Twilight Western," is a tale of the two opposing forces of good and evil and the battle (gunfight setting) they must fight. Remember the movie, "Tombstone." "Twilight" tells how the good gunfighter triumphs by killing the bad, even though he wishes not to kill. At the end of the story the good gunfighter is convinced to kill in believed self defense.

The album's 4th song is equally confusing and strange. "Perenium Falcon" is not like any other music I've heard, which is what I'd say for the album and their live show. It has a very sampled and mixed sound that bewilders the listener. The music seems to send subliminal messages.

The next track "Der Goderung Man" is an Evil sounding version of Ozzy Osbourne's "Iron Man." It sounds like Satan himself might be singing the lead vocals himself. Some of it may be recorded backwards (hard to for the listener to tell).

"Honkey Boozer" amuses and uses the sax well.. The words are graphic and extreme, and not for all.

"Judas Kiss/Rootbeer Taste Test", begins orchestrally. The vibe the guitar gives off is mesmerizing. The last song, "Technoshocker", appears to be sung by a Foreign-Computer. Some day this band will rule the world!

APRIL FOOLS! Just kidding! Lighten up and have some fun once in a while. Don't take things so seriously that you can't relax and have a sense of humor!

These guys are just one of many bands that play the local music scene in Point that many people miss out on because they sound a little different (well, okay, a lot different). This CD is avail-

So believe me when I say the woods are not safe (especially in Zone 3, Richland County, from April 22nd to the 26th)!

The turkeys are out for blood and nothing can stand in their way. There is no way of knowing where the turkeys will strike next or how long their hostility will continue.

So this spring take the advice of the turkeys' victims. Keep the calls, camouflage, and shotgun in the closet, kick back, and watch fishing shows. Leave the woods to me; I'll let you know when the coast is clear.

Big ol' carp

get you your prize catch. One guide even said, "Sometimes we even add peanut butter to coerce the really big fish"

Fly fishing for these "beautiful fish" is also a growing trend. Gary LaFontaine claims to have started this trend, and claims carp are even more sensitive and pickier eaters than all species of trout. He also equates this experience with bonefishing. Gary says the key to fly fishing is rubbing your flies with muck and algae from the bottom of the lake because carp are very sensitive to taste and smell. This guy is obviously fu*ked in the head.

Well if you're a carp angler, or belong to one of our nations highly respectable carp organizations, let me tell you something.

There's other fish out there idiots. I'm sorry to say this, but, the most depressing thing about this article is it's all true, and it's not April Fools.

FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK THERE'S MORE TO LIFE THAN A PAYCHECK.

If you're a young man or woman looking at a humdrum future, there's a challenging alternative—the Army.

Not just the more than 200 skills to choose from, but the lifestyle. The chance to travel, to become fit and trim and exercise your mental muscles, too. To do things you didn't think you could do. To be proud of yourself and your country.

And you get a pretty good paycheck, too.
