WMDs found in Iraq; Bush vindicated

Victorious leader announces National Week of Gloating

By Phyu Yu
GOVERNMENT SANCTIONED REPORTER

In a move that did not surprise patriotic and loyal Americans, our glorious leader HM George Walker Bush II Esq. announced that a massive stockpile of weapons of mass destruction was found in Iraq. In his triumphant press conference, His Excellency announced the weapons had been found in the same spider hole that ousted evildoer Saddam Hussein was found in, cowering and praying to his inferior god.

"We found the weapons in the hole, just to the right of Saddams's filthy blanket," said the President. "It turns out that hole was bigger than we thought." Inside the hole, inspectors found 25 nuclear weapons, 300 chemical warheads, 250 biological warheads and a picture of himself drinking with the Bush girls.

The President continued his awe-inspiring speech by saying that "clearly now that the weapons have been found the war has been justified, so all Americans can now bask in the knowledge that our strategy going into Iraq was an correct one."

One unpatriotic un-American reporter from a non-White House approved network, or any non-Clear Channel/Fox News Channel Reporter dared to ask the great leader if his statement contradicted his earlier rationale for the war, which included the possibility of links to Al-Qaeda, the liberation of the Iraqi people, and the start of a plan to remove dictatorships around the world.

The President said that "the WMD's were what this war was all about from the beginning, obviously you were too busy printing liberal media biased information to pay attention to what excuse, I mean, justification this war was all about, the WMD's, that we have found, right before the election, as my poll numbers have been slipping, with some paint that looks like a U and an S scraped off the side. This is what this war has been about from the beginning."

Using powers granted to him by the wise GOP-dominated congress under the new Americans Selflessly Serving and Helping Our Leader Extrordinaire [A.S.S.H.O.L.E.]Act, which grants the president the express powers to "do whatever the hell he wants to do," the President ordered the insolent reporter to be flogged through the streets of the capital at midday.

As a result of the joyous news, all factories and businesses that have not been outsourced to friendly nations will be closed for the week for spontaneous demonstration of the great leader's forward thinking plans to make America strong again by going to war with any nation that looks at him funny.

The president rejoiced in the news that his poll numbers shot to well over 90%, and news that his foreigner endorsed tax and spend liberal opponent announced that he will withdraw his candidacy in the face of the president's overwhelming level of support.

Sen. Kerry, from the law-of-God denying, gay-marriage endorsing state of Massachusetts was not available for comment, but Democratic Party Chair Terry McGullible said the party would continue as it had during the days after 9/11 by "opposing the president in public to not completely See Dear leader, page 2

National Security Advisor Condoleezza Rice made a shocking announcement last Tuesday in relation to the War on Terror. In a far reaching initiative targeting foreign citizens studying within the United State's international study programs, the U.S. Government has elected to suppress what they have termed, "treacherous alien sneakery."

Rice stated in her announcement that, "these tricky Islamic spies have undermined our national security effort, and we're not about to sit back and let them filter crypto-speak and bombs through our nation's higher education institutions."

Comm professor sues WB for rights to Foghorn Leghorn character

Claims his southern drawl and "take-no-shit" attitude was groundwork for oversized cartoon rooster

By Cheddarwurst Longfellow
BACK FOR A SECOND TERM

Communication professor C.Y. Allen unveiled plans last week for one of the biggest lawsuits in copyright infringement history against Warner Bros. Studios for their character Foghorn Leghorn.

"Those bas, I say, those bastards stole my character from right underneath my beak, I mean, nose," said Allen in a recent interview. "This has, I say boy, this has been going on for way too long. I want the riches and respect that I deserve for harboring this genius rooster character."

Leghorn, voiced by toon legend Mel Blanc, first appeared in a cartoon in 1946. The giant rooster is notorious for thwarting chicken hawk Henery Hawk and playing pranks on the farmer's dog, George P. Dog.

"Now listen here boy," said Allen. "I say, one day my wife Janet and I were sitting down to a nice meal in front of the ol' television box. I flipped on Cartoon Network and saw Foghorn Leghorn.

"Janet immediately told me See Loud professor, page 3 foreign insurgents and step up surveillance operations on international students. UWSP director of Residential Living, Robert Mosier told Pointless reporters that plans to build a high tech security wall around Pray-Sims Hall had recently passed through the University Budget Committee.

"The wall will include a 12 foot electrified barbed wire fence and several machine gun towers with spotlights," said Mosier. "Studies have proven that foreigners, although extremely quick and talented at soccer and Abu Dhabi, cannot jump higher than ten feet."

Additional measures will include video monitors in each bedroom, bathroom and hallway, as well as infrared sensors located on the roof. Mosier explained, "While many morally inferior races are capable of invisibility, they have not yet developed technology that can effectively shield their sneaky body heat."

Phase three of Mosier's proposal would include a large moat, citing the Sanskrit-speaking peoples' fear of water and black depths.

Another restriction has banned the use of fortune cookies and yo-yos. Rice stated in her briefing that CIA operatives have uncovered a plot by foreign terrorists involving "some kind of rhythmic-based voodoo code within the once innocent devices of evil."

UWSP international student Lo Chi Deng, briefly lured away from his all-Asian posse of mystery, gave a brief statement from within the fence on Tuesday in reference to the new restrictions. "We want to know what the hell their problem is with us, because we sure as f*#k don't!"

"Likely story," was Mosier's reply. "Students. Whatever! What is that anyway? Some kind of roughly translated verse from the Koran. Next they're going to claim that the Annual International Dinner is a good thing."

Former UW System President Katharine Lyall, backed the decision from her Madison-area home, reading a prepared statement:

"I'm a huge proponent of bringing in international students in order to promote diversity among our student bodies. But the fact of the matter is those shifty foreign eyes are hiding a dark secret. I'm at least three percent sure of this."

UWSP stepped up anti-terrorist propaganda with an on-campus poster series titled, "Loose lips, mah-jong and magic carpets... sink ships."

Further security steps will include censorship of incoming and outgoing mail and phone calls to Pray-Sims Hall, heat to Pray Sims in correlation with an expansive mind-war.

The recently constructed wall around Pray-Sims Hall. The disgruntled students trapped within are said to be working on a way to bring down the wall with Debot leftovers, which can double as a corrosive agent in an emergency.

Toilet paper clogs UWSP; students in revolt

Students protest sandpaper-like quality of toilet paper offered by university

By Stu Pidman
DENSE REPORTER

UWSP students gathered outside Old Main and decorated the trees, hurling rolls of the school issued "rough" toilet paper up and through the foliage outside the venerable building Tuesday afternoon.

Freshmen and seniors alike displayed signs and voiced their displeasure with the current brand of toilet paper used on campus.

turn away our base, and voting to pass everything he throws at us anyway."

Supporters of the President are planning a major change of the nations agenda now that the president stands unopposed in the election. Plans include the removal of all leftist presidents from our nation's coinage, such as the polio-infected womanizer Franklin Roosevelt with more patriotic presidents like the great Ronald Reagan, Richard Nixon and our current great leader George Bush the II.

As part of his newfound presidential swagger, the President announced that he will now take six months of vacation rather than his usual two months per year. He also announced plans to wear his flight suit as often as he feels the need to remind people that the war is over and he is a wartime president.

Plans were in the works by several America-hating leftist groups to protest the bold initiatives proposed by the President, however plans quickly fell apart due to lack of interest.

The President denied reports that several Americans had been killed yesterday in Iraq, as his few remaining critics cited that incident as evidence that the war is far from over and Iraq far from secure.

"That incident is completely untrue," said the President when asked about the validity of a news report that stated several Americans had been killed and their bodies dragged through the streets and hung from a nearby bridge.

"Those were pinatas, given to the local people by some of our brave troops. They were celebrating Cinco de Mayo early, no further questions," he said.

The President also plans constitutional amendments that will ban all unwarranted criticism of the White House and its occupant, a ban on gay marriage, a requirement that all future supreme court nominees earn their law degrees at Bob Jones University, a ban of stem-cell research except for the program to grow Vice President Dick Cheney a new heart, a measure announcing that the supreme leader of America is Jesus Christ and an amendment that sends Janet Jackson and Howard Stern to Haiti.

long time, it's not right," said sophomore protestor Chaffe McRash. "If I drop two deuces on campus, I know I'll be sleeping on my stomach in the evening. Something needs to be done."

Although many students are skeptical of the SGA, they were the organization that organized the protest.

SMOD worked

They put out a message on SMOD Friday calling for students to gather tp from all over campus to toss around Old Main. The message appeared under the heading "how rough is too rough."

I was amazed at the turnout," said SGA President Nick Crawford. "To my knowledge this is the most successful SMOD message ever."

Student Protest

Students carried signs bearing a number of different slogans. The two most common signs carried the writing of "students deserve quilted tp" and "Hell no, rough tp has to go."

The UWSP administration was overwhelmed by the student response.

of how much Foghorn reminds her of me, and I real, I say, I realized how similar that witty ol' rooster and I are. I mean, what the shit, it's a complete ripoff. I'll pound those conniving bastards into the ground, I will."

Warner Bros. Studios has declined to comment on the actual lawsuit, but released a brief statement saying, "As much as Mr. Allen may resemble an arrogant, smart-mouthed, wise-assed, six-foot rooster, he should no longer flatter himself by thinking that the brilliant character of Foghorn Leghorn was derived from his personality."

Allen replied, "That's a load, I say, that's a complete load of horse pucky, boy. You're about as sharp as a bowlin' ball, son. I say, 'Click, whirr' baby. It's all there. Click whirr, click whirr, click whirr," Allen trailed off as he obnoxiously snapped his fingers in my ear repeatedly.

"Any a' this gettin' through to you anymore?" continued Allen in a rant. "I say, now listen up boy, it's fer your own good. We all know the best way to catch a real chicken is to use that stupid dog. His leash only goes so far, so I'll tell ya what ya gotta do..."

After Allen's lesson to me on how to "thwart that country Hillbilly mutt," he popped in a tape of Leghorn from 1967 where he defeats the dog in the exact way he described it to me; smashing a watermelon over the dog's head, then making the dog chase him around a corner with his leash on, thus strangling the dog when his slack ran out.

"See? All my idea," said Allen. "Boom, pow, click, whirr."

Atkins dieters face risk for Mad Cow Disease

By Mary Jane Cracko
MODEL FOR CRACK-WHORE MAGAZINE

Researchers have recently confirmed that there is a link between the popular fad of the Atkins Diet and mad cow disease. With many, many Americans buying into the low-carb diet, red meat supplies have diminished, forcing butchers to put meat infected with the dreadful Mad Cow Disease on the market for the Atkins dieters.

"It's not like I want to put diseased meat on the market, it can give me a bad name ya know? But I have no choice cause all of those damn trendy dieters refuse to eat carbs," said Dick Bigandred, a local Stevens Point butcher. "Some guy came in the other day. I could tell he was on the Atkins Diet cause he could barely muster enough energy to open up the door to my shop and asked me if I had any low carb sausage? Do I look like a guy who carries low carb sausage? I gave him some of the diseased shit and told him to get the hell out of here."

Studies have also shown that all of men and women who are infected with mad cow disease, 97% of them are on the Atkins Diet. The other 3% represents a group of FIB's (F*#$%n' Illinois B*#$*!@s) who were served diseased meat unknowingly when coming up to small Wisconsin towns to fish, camp, hunt and use whatever resources that are not theirs this past year.

Many have wondered why people, besides the FIB's, not on the Atkins Diet have not contracted Mad Cow Disease. The answer is pretty simple actually. According to researchers, people not on the Atkins Diet actually eat carbs, which can be good for you and therefore produce enough energy to fight off any diseases they might get by eating diseased meat.

Amidst all the problems with the non-diseased meat shortage, there is good news for those on the Atkins Diet. A large Texas based meat packaging corporation is putting out low-carb Mad Cow Diseased meat. Apparently, Subway will include this meat in their new wraps and Hardee's will change the Angus beef in their low-carb Thick-burgers to this new low-carb meat as well.

"I honestly had no idea this was even an issue," said Interim Chancellor Virginia Helm. "The student voice hasn't fallen on deaf ears. We will make every effort to bring in softer um, bathroom tissue."

However, "an effort" will not be enough to appease the riled-up student population. The students were clear they wanted their demands met, not just paid lip service.

"The tuition rises every year at a rate that far exceeds normal inflation," said senior protestor Tom Behnke. "The least they can do is make sure our asses are taken care of."

A meeting has been scheduled for later this week with Crawford and Helm in an effort to resolve the issue.

Non-traditional students banned from UWSP

Older students to be shown the door

By Derek Zoolander
MODEL IDIOT

In an effort to make UWSP younger, Interim Chancellor Virginia Helm banned all non-traditional students. The ban will take effect starting in the 2004-05 school year.

Helm released a statement Wednesday explaining her reasoning for the ban on the older students.

"Straight up, non-trads are annoying," said Helm. "They talk too much and most think they're above the normal students and it's causing a rift at our Universtiy. I'm just repairing that rift."

The statement also suggested that non-trads look into alternative schooling such as technical schools or junior colleges.

"This is not a second chance school," said Helm. "I'm sorry that these people dropped out or delayed their schooling the first time around. I do know that some needed time to save up also. Too bad. That's their fault, not mine or UWSP's."

In effect, the ban applies to all students over the age of 25. The ban has created a lot of unrest among non-trads currently attending UWSP.

"It's not fair, it's ageism and discrimination," said non-trad Twold Furskool. "To not even grandfather in the non-trads who are currently registered should scare all UWSP students, not just the old ones."

Despite the ban, non-trads all over campus are uniting in an effort to reverse the decision. They have formed a group called Nontrads Against Dickhead Schools or NADS. NADS goal is to gain enough faculty support to overthrow the ban.

"If non-trads are good at one thing it's brown nosing the professors," said Furskool. "I have no doubt that the majority of the faculty will side with us."

While Helm understands the dissention of non-trads, she remains resolute in her decision.

"I truly believe our campus will be better off without these know-it-all, overly self-important students and I know the majority of UWSP students agree with these ideals."

Musings From Mirman

I'm the shit, biatch, but don't worry, I'll remember all of you when I make it to the Promised Land...well, probably not.

Leave me alone.

Seriously, enough is enough. True, I am a major campus celebrity extraordinaire, but please, put your cameras and Sharpie pens away when I'm in class.

Sure, if you see me walking to class I'll gladly take a picture with you and sign whatever body part makes you happy.

However, if I'm out to dinner or obviously busy, use some common sense. Just because the paparazzi follows me into the bathroom doesn't mean that you have to.

I can't blame you fans out there. For the most part, college students are sharp when sober, so they can see a rising star.

And let's face it, I am a star. I write a brilliantly funny or humorous weekly column. Furthermore, I'm one of the best sports broadcasters this school or any UW school has ever seen. My weekly radio show should be syndicated nationally next year and now S-TV will air a reality series on The Pointer and it should come as no surprise that I'm the breakout star of the series. Screw Howard Stern, I'm the king of all media.

Despite my amazing success, I have still managed to stay humble, grounded and modest. In fact, few can compare with my modesty. However, the aforementioned paparazzi are starting to test my patience. The picture you see came from the confiscated film of some lush who ambushed me in the men's room.

I can't leave my dwelling without make-up because somebody is always lurking around my house with a telephoto lens. Most of the pictures they publish are unflattering to say the least. I know I'm a straight-up good looking guy, but it's tough to look beautiful for the fans when you roll out of bed and immediately walk to class.

And don't even get me started on what this is doing to my love life. It's tough to show a lady a nice time when you're constantly interrupted by autograph hounds and crazy photographers.

The only girls that dig that scenario are the gold-diggers and jersey chasers. Of course, the gold-diggers stay just long enough to find out I'm going into the underpaid field of radio and not television. And the jersey chasers hang out until I introduce them to the jocks that I cover. Like it matters; the truth is I'm too good for just about every woman on campus anyway. Sometimes I think my best dates are with my trusty left hand.

Oh well, hound me if you must, UWSP, but please stop interrupting my bathroom breaks.

Moving Sidewalks needed at UWSP

I have been an avid reader of The Pointer my four years of schooling at UWSP and have enjoyed the publication from afar.

But my silence had to end after I realized that nobody will champion the cause of moving sidewalks if I don't.

Let me first address the perceived negatives of transforming all our walkways into a moveable form.

First and foremost, there is the money issue.

I have figured that the price range to install the moving sidewalks would come to just over $11 million, a very workable amount. We would simply need to put together a few bake sales, run some car washes and rob a bank or two. Very simple projects if we all just pitch in. Besides, I've been casing a couple banks for a few weeks now and I assure you it's not a problem.

The only other negative I can think of is that people view these sidewalks as unnecessary. These people have obviously never taken an 8 a.m. class. Those who have know we need these sidewalks now.

Just imagine all the benefits that these sidewalks would provide. UWSP would be the first campus with these wonders of technology, causing the campus to receive national attention.

But beyond the prestige, these sidewalks are something the student body needs and deserves. So contact your SGA representative or our chancellor to show you support the moving sidewalks. Together we can achieve greatness.

Bush has replaced God

At last, my prayers have been answered.

Declaring that "God is dead" and that "a new power is rising," the College Republicans officialy declared George W. Bush to be the new God and Supreme Being.

"The Bible is incomplete and obsolete," said one vapid-eyed College Republican who asked not to be named. "We have seen the light and the way. God is the past. Our Holy Father Bush is the future."

The College Republicans have always been devoted to the President, but this declaration of his divine heritage came as a surprise. Christian Coalition representatives immediately cried foul, saying the CRs stole their idea.

College Republican representatives immediately declared that they would instantly petition for the "Book of Bush" to be added to every Bible in America.

"The light and path of Bush is the only way to salvation," CR rep Robert Blake said. "His mission of reckless spending, preemptive war and oppression of others is the chosen path. We are his humble servants and will carry out his work."

College Republicans also intend to erect a giant golden statue and altar to Bush on campus where they and other chosen ones will worship the new deity to their hearts' content.

The campus library will be demolished to make way for the statue, which will be visible from several states.

"Books and facts are meaningless," Blake said. "Our God Bush has proven that one does not need to know how to read or recognize facts to achieve greatness. We forsake all learning and knowledge for your glory, O mighty God and Father Bush."

Other College Republican projects glorifying the new deity will include planned crusades against Democrats and Independents, who will now be considered "infidels" and "worthy of cleansing." Plans for "reeducation" camps for such infidels are rumored to be under way, intended to free the world for followers of the new God.

"We will not stop until all America and the world worship the one true God Bush as we do," Blake said. "We will also petition Mel Gibson to digitally replace Jesus with Bush in The Passion of the Christ so all can see how much he has suffered for us."

When asked about his new status as a deity, Bush was somewhat taken aback.

"Um, that's nice," he said. "Look, I don't handle such things. Go ask Uncle Dick or Aunt Condi if it's okay."

Despite this less than ringing endorsement from their new God, the College Republicans are devout in their embrace of the new savior.

"God, Jesus, Allah, Buddah, they are all false idols," Blake said. "Bush is the one true God. All will embrace the Book of Tax Cuts or be smitten by the power of his mighty smirk. We praise you and worship you, O mighty God and Father."

Blake then scurried off to prepare to sacrifice the "harlot" Janet Jackson as an offering to the great God Bush.

As a Faux News drone, I really love this. I officially swear my allegiance to the Great God Bush. God is dead. Jesus sucks. Bush is the light and the way.

ASK CHESTY MCBOOBERSON

Great advice from a ginormous chest

Dear Ms. McBooberson
Straight-up, I can't get laid. I've tried everything to coax the ladies back to my room. I buy the expensive cologne, dress to the nines and I'm always polite. But I consistently get dissed for someone else. What am I doing wrong?
-Loveable Loser

Dear Loser,
I'm assuming that you're a very homely man, but that's all right. I've slept with my share of "dirty men." So, being ugly is not an excuse.

First off, drop the polite bullshit. This isn't the Middle Ages, chivalry is dead, so deal with it. When you're polite, you come off as wuss. Don't ask the lady if she wants to dance, pull her out on the dance floor and give her ass a good squeeze. Sure, you may get slapped at first, but eventually she'll come around.

Good luck on the booty hunt and when you come home empty handed, which I assume you will, just think of me when you're pleasuring yourself.

Dear Chesty,
My sister is a self-centered bitch. I keep trying to remember the qualities she has that I like, but I can't think of any. I know I'm supposed to love her, but I can't even stand to talk to her. What should I do?
-Confused Sibling

Dear Sibling,
I'm sorry. I thought this column was for legitimate problems. Everybody hates their brother/sister, it's the way of the world. You should be thinking about problems that really matter, like poverty and Janet Jackson's nipple.

Ms. McBooberson,
All I want to do is play video games all day every day. When I'm in class I find myself thinking about whatever game is sitting in my X-Box. I find myself lying to my girlfriend so I can leave early and get a game in before bedtime. Is this normal?

-Dedicated Gamer

Dear Gamer,
Yes, you have a problem, you douchebag. Join reality; it's a pretty good time here in the real world.

Of course, you could continue to exist in your cheesy video game universe until your complexion turns all pasty and nasty, you become attached to your couch and the controller becomes an extension of your hand. Sounds fun.

That's right, you mentioned a girlfriend as well. The hell. A dork like you finds someone who wants to spend time with him, and then you lie to her. Do 100 Hail Marys and write me again in two weeks.

Madame McBooberson,
I want you, how can I get you to come to my house?
-Your Soulmate

Dear Soulmate,
You're so romantic. But You could never get me, so don't try. Go use your soulmate crap on some foolhardy female. No soup for you!

Chesty,
I'm so depressed. What's the point of living?
-Freshman failure

Dear Failure
Stop feeling sorry for yourself and get your shit together. If you're thinking about suicide, you're a selfish asshole: what about your family? Huh, think your mom will like that? I suggest a heavy dose of strip clubs and hookers. Just make sure you wrap it up.

Three and a half decades ago on a tiny college campus in Indiana, a wise man named Marvin K. Long risked everything he had and opened a restaurant. He hired university students, who helped him to plan his menu and service. In the 33 years since, Marvin's has fed hundreds of thousands of people and has gained a world-wide reputation for excellence.

Until today, there was only one place in the world to get the original Garlic Cheeseburger. Until today, only one place would deliver the Garlic Cheeseburger, Mexican food, salads, cheese fries, pizza, and egg rolls from the same kitchen. Until today, there was only one Marvin's.

We are proud to announce that Marvin's has chosen UWSP as its second home and is now open for business. The much-coveted Marvin's cuisine is now yours to savor. Currently, there are students on campuses all over Indiana who are furious that they were not chosen as the home of the second Marvin's. You owe it to yourselves to find out why Hoosiers consider Pointers to be the luckiest group of students in the world.

Call for delivery, call for pick-up, or stop by for a sit-down meal; it's all good. We're the place that was designed specifically for students by students and has something to offer for all tastes and palettes.

Come taste the sensation that attracted President Jimmy Carter, Aerosmith, John Mellencamp, and hundreds of thousands of students to eat at the one-and-only Marvin's!

An attempt at thirty days of distasteful Debot

One man's quest to do the inevitable

By Ofresha Clain DeNuter
CLEANER OF EXTREMITIES BOTH
THICK AND THIN

Fueled in part by the recent attempt of one man to eat McDonald's food entirely for one month, UWSP's own Phil McCracken has attempted the very same but with an eatery that many say would be far worse - yes, you guessed it. It is none other than that wonderful cafeteria dining place known as Debot.

McCracken, an avid Debot enthusiast who regularly goes to Debot to the extent of once every three months, began the diet a month ago. However, even with the first day of eating Debot food for breakfast, lunch and dinner, McCracken noticed a distinct change in his attitude and appearance. It was not long before body hair began sprouting hair from every nook and cranny, most noticeably on his tongue and the tops of his ears. One day, while sitting in class, he went to erase a marking on his paper only to hear a rather distinct sound coming as he rubbed his hand against the paper. McCracken looked down only to see curly pubescent hair coming from underneath his fingernails, and the story only gets worse.

By day 11, he had to wear a gauze pad over his stomach, for pus began forming in his belly button. Throughout this time, McCracken's feet grew by two shoe sizes. Unfortunately, as McCracken noted, the body region that is closely correlated to shoe size remained surprisingly small. Sadly, by day 21 McCracken had to end his quest of doing the unthinkable.

Before Debot Hell

In addition to the change in physical experience that McCracken endured, he also had to cast friendships aside during this time; however, this was not by choice. As Chinky Shittaker, close friend of McCracken said, "It is really hard to maintain a friendship with someone as grotesque as McCracken has become during this whole thing."

Those that have tracked McCracken on his quest, hygienists and doctors alike, have stated that what McCracken endured was far worse than eating McDonald's for a month.

As Cravin Moorehead, renowned doctor of body orifice conditions, said, "It is unfathomable that McCracken was able to go as long as he did. He certainly put aside his own personal image during this whole thing. I mean, to have no regard for grotesque body hair growing in unsightly places and pus engulfing each shirt he put on within an hour, says a great deal about this man's perseverance." What McCracken went through was far worse than a routine toxicosis of the liver as what was experienced by the man who only ate McDonald's for a month.

McCracken, since ending his mission, noted that eating Debot

made him forget what taste tastes like. He now has a greater appreciation for the tastiness and texture of rice cakes. As McCracken added, "Nothing compares to biting into a crisp, partially stale, unflavored rice cake after experiencing Debot - nothing."

When asked if he would recommend that anyone attempt this feat, McCracken had rather mixed feelings. "I would recommend it for anyone who has a loss of humanity and self interest. If you have completely lost all hope and respect for life, then this is certainly the diet for you," McCracken said.

So, if you find that the man is getting you down and you don't exactly know what to do to prove to yourself that nothing is out of reach, then I challenge you to take on the feat that McCracken set for himself. And if you have it in you and you can sustain the dreaded Debot for an entire month, I have pity on the friends, family and employees that have to be in your company during that time. As McCracken puts it, "My only words of encouragement to those that wish to embark on this feat are, "Happy growin.'"

Cheney announces Saddam/Sauron alliance

By Smeagol the Hobbit
PRECIOUS SEEKER

In another strange turn in the Bush administration's never-ending search for a new excuse for the Iraq war, Vice President Cheney declared that Saddam Hussein's evil reach stretched all the way to Middle Earth.

In front of dumbfounded reporters, Cheney declared that Saddam had formed a pact with Sauron, the evil Dark Lord of Mordor, and had been receiving advice on WMDs. Cheney further went on to declare that Sauron had secretly slipped the One Ring to Saddam to keep it safe.

"The evil of Saddam knew no bounds," Cheney declared. "With the Ring in his possession, who knows what destruction he could have wreaked on the free world? If we had not invaded Iraq, we would have Orcs on the front lawn of the White House by now."

Cheney's comments were seen as yet another attempt by the administration to deflect attention from the lack of weapons of mass destruction in Iraq. The supposed threat of a chemical, biological or nuclear attack from Saddam was the major case given for going to war to topple him. With the weapons apparently non-existent, the Bush administration is trying desperately to cover their failure.

Cheney's comments, however, were quickly repudiated by Sauron himself. The Dark Lord was unable to speak in person, being just a giant eyeball stuck atop his tower of Barad-dur, but he was able to send a message via his spokesman the Witch King.

"I have no idea what that bald little troll is talking about," Sauron said. "I don't even know where the Ring is these days. It got cut from my finger long ago and trust me, that hurt. Last I heard, some frigging hobbit making doe eyes at his gardener had it."

Sauron added that if he did still have the Ring, he wouldn't have lent it to Saddam.

"I wouldn't give the Ring to anyone," he said. "You think I would have let that schizophrenic little gnome get it if I could? And I especially wouldn't give it to some bearded loser like Saddam. I've got my own bearded loser in Saruman. I'm not in the market for another."

Sauron concluded by saying that if Cheney persisted in making his wild claims, he would send the Ringwraiths to "open up a major case of Middle Earth whoopass on his bunker-dwelling hide."

"He'd better watch it," Sauron said. "If he doesn't shut up, the Ringwraiths will be the least of his worries. If he really pisses me off, I'll shove him up Shelob's butt crack."

Cheney stood by his remarks. "Where else do you think those WMDs went? Saddam used the Ring to make them invisible. Trust me, we have vast and extensive evidence on this. We can't show any of it to you, of course, but trust me, the connection exists."

Cheney then ran off as fast as he could to his bunker, with the Black Riders close behind.

Upset that this space is not used in a more constructive manner? Well, that is too bad. This is the Pointless so your thoughts mean nothing. Someone, somewhere might care, but i doubt it.

PointCash, the way to pay . . . no more

"I have lost my identity": student cries over the loss of the PointCard

By Makya Bustagutt

KEEPER OF THE SEAL LAUGH

A decision late last Friday to end the use of the PointCard has left many students in disarray. Interim chancellor Virginia Helm made the decision late Friday afternoon at the behest of faculty, while students protested their feelings against the matter.

As bewildered student Nodi Rection said, "I have lost my identity. I don't know how to go on from here and I know I am not alone in feeling this way."

Helm said that the decision was decided because students were beginning to look to the PointCard as their answer to all crucial financial decisions. As Helm said, "It was beginning to get out of hand. Students must realize that when they leave UWSP their PointCard will no longer be coming with them." And now students must face that reality all too soon, it appears.

As Hungri Ashell stuttered through the tears, "I view this as a matter against personal hygiene. I can't do laundry without my PointCard. If you want us students to infume your classroom with foulness, then you have been granted your wish." Other students expressed similar sentiments, believing that the revocation of the PointCard will now leave many hungry. Outside a filled Alumni room, students began somberly singing "Where do we go from Here," made popular by the ever classic hit movie Evita.

That seems to be the general consensus among students, as stomachs begin to turn in agony and body odor starts to engulf the campus.

And so, as the campus begins anew with the absence of the PointCard, students will begin anew as well. The only unfortunate thing is that this new measure to form our own identities will only leave students and faculty alike in a pit of despair. So long, you trusted plastic card, thanks for the good eats and clean clothes.

A look ahead: competition begins next week to be named "Most Foul Smelling Student on Campus."

Students are uncertain of their hygienic future in lieu of the new measure revoking the use of the infamous PointCard.

Mutant meat holds Debot hostage, terrifying many

A headline like that needs no kicker

By Ted Turner

DIRTY OLD MAN

Stevens Point officials are still trying to grapple with an unexpected crisis that has engulfed the UWSP campus. As of now, Debot has been seized and at least a dozen employees are being held hostage by intelligent meat that was originally intended for next Thursday's dinner entrée.

Reports are still sketchy as of this writing, but it appears the meat, which has been sitting around for months unattended, has mutated into an intelligent life form with the ability to use weapons. The meat has barricaded itself inside Debot and is holding everyone inside hostage with a variety of knives, spoons and sporks.

Officials confirm that the meat is playing for keeps. If its demands are not met, they say, it threatens to feed rancid chunks of itself to the employees who helped create it with their negligence.

The meat's demands are currently being kept under wraps, but they are described as "unusual." One source described it as, "condiments, nothing but condiments."

"I knew this would come to pass eventually," Ron Jeremy, one of the hostage negotiators, said. "It's just like Debot's food to mutate into a superior form of life. I'm just amazed it hasn't happened before."

Unbeknownst to Jeremy, such Debot-related incidents have occurred at Point. The last recorded case was in 1988, when a jar of mayonnaise left out in the sun for three weeks morphed into a ravenous, flesh-eating blob that devoured half of Pray-Sims. The mayo monster was eventually defeated when a giant loaf of bread was dropped on it, sucking it up.

Earlier incidents of mutant food from Debot's kitchen are rumored, but unconfirmed. Stories abound of everything from "mystery meat" chucking steak knives to random attacks by angry vats of pudding. The term "Soylent Green" was even bandied about, though its meaning is unclear.

Campus officials deny such rumored incidents. They have, however, admitted that they overlooked Debot's hellish servings until it was too late.

Meanwhile, the rats that live in Debot's ducts are apparently making friends with the intelligent meat. Some worry the meat is training the rats to be its unholy army of the night, but officials dismissed that as wild speculation caused by too many viewings of the movie Willard.

Officials concede, however, that the meat is holding all the cards.

"He's a tough bastard," Jeremy said. "But we can't risk him feeding pieces of himself to those hostages. I wouldn't wish Debot's food on anyone."

Profile of the offending meat: he's tough, he's rotten and he will stop at nothing to wipe Debot off the face of the Earth.

Residential living busted for embezzlement

By Klaus Minded

I DON'T HEAR YOU

Earlier this week a group of CAs from Steiner Hall exposed Residential Living for embezzling money from incoming students. The CAs' names cannot be released at this time due to the ongoing investigation of the embezzlement.

At this point, investigators believe Residential Living president Bob Mosier has been running the scam since the 1980s, but members of the Stevens Point Police Department (SPPD) think that it could have gone on a lot longer.

"At this point we are still trying to gather information about who was involved and how far back the embezzlement goes," said Chief Clancy Wiggum. "We're just grateful to the CAs from Steiner Hall who did the legwork to expose the scandal."

The Pointer was able to speak with one of the CAs and they mentioned that they have been working on the secret investigation for the last year.

"You have two students staying in a room that should really only hold one person. Yet they are paying more than they would for a normal apartment. Something didn't fit," said the advisor.

As it turned out, the CAs were absolutely right. Apparently Residential Living only needed the money from one roommate and kept the other roommates money for themselves. It is believed that members of Residential Living used the money to finance their gambling and drug addictions.

Details are still sketchy as to how many people were involved besides Mosier. So far four arrests have been made, but authorities believe that that number will at least quadruple in the next two weeks.

Interim Chancellor Virginia Helm has not yet made a decision on how or if students will be reimbursed, although she did say that the university will try its best to make sure everyone is taken care of.

"We plan on waiting for all the facts to come out before we render a decision," said Helm. "We can say that the perpetrators will be brought to justice and in all probability the students will be the ones hurt the most, but they should be used to it by now."

Students hoping to receive some kind of refund have been told not to get their hopes up.

"To me this seems like a perfect way to solve all our budget problems," said Helm. "We just keep overcharging the students and use the money to fund all the programs we planned on cutting." Helm also said students shouldn't expect tuition rates to stop climbing either. So, as usual, students can expect to stay broke.

"I don't even care anymore," said Senior Ben Dover. "I've never been raped, but I feel very confident that I know what it feels like."

If it smells like chicken, keep on lick'in.

Local frat boy claims to have largest unit in Portage County

By Lil' Jon

WHAT? WHAT? OKAYYYY!

UWSP student and frat (er, fraternity) member Richard Cranium has seen a ton of penises in his day, but none have matched up to his enormous 14-inch "fully automatic love gun."

Cranium, a member of the Ieta Lotta Cum frat (er, fraternity), first noticed his gift of size when comparing length with other brothers.

"You know, we were all trashed and playing around, one thing led to another and my brother Joe said that nobody's ever jabbed his tonsils with a rod so hard before," said Cranium. "I guess I scraped up his throat pretty badly. Then I knew I was big - Joe, that kid gets around."

Cranium's self-investigation concluded that he did indeed hold the record for the longest unit at UWSP, measuring in at a dominating 14 1/4 inches.

"I know it's a huge joke among normies who have little six-inchers, but I really do have to tie this shit around my leg," said Cranium. "It's embarrassing to be sitting in class with shorts on and have big Randy sneak a peek at that hot slut sitting next to me. It's a total game-killer. At least in class, that is."

Cranium, along with Health Services, conducted surveys among Portage County males willing to take the survey. The closest cock measured out to ten inches, a solid four inches short of Cranium's.

"See? They ain't got shit on big Randy," said Cranium.

Of course, Cranium and Health Services couldn't survey every male in the county - only those willing to participate.

"I know I'm the biggest. I'm taking this thing statewide," boasted Cranium. "If any of you out there think you can rival big Randy, I'd like to see it. Long live Ieta Lotta Cum!"

Offended yet? Don't worry, there is still plenty of reading ahead to upset you in some way. Here at the Pointer, being offensive is our duty this week. Happy reading! 😊

Special stoner-emphasis classes added to timetables

By Miguel "Rumspringa" Sanchez

DRUG DEALER KEEPER-AWAYER

In a long overdue move, Interim Chancellor Virginia Helm finally agreed to add stoner classes to the UWSP curriculum next fall.

"This is a great day for the stoners on our campus," said Helm. "And we all know there are plenty of them here. The dopers have spoken."

The classes specially designated for stoners will all begin eight minutes later than normal classes, will be all lecture and film-based (including several courses that are solely web-based), non-mandatory in attendance, take-home exam only and each enrolled student will receive a new Nalgene bottle, roach clip and "heady dank crystals" for a chakra boost.

"I'm glad to get those pot-heads out of my classes," said nonsmoker Betty Narcomatic. "They always come in late, smell like doob and they wear like 17 sweatshirts in the winter instead of one jacket. Just give in and wear winter clothing like the rest of us, stupid hippies!"

Stoners across campus share the support for a special stoner curriculum.

"This is great news," said dooper extraordinaire Dan K. Nugent. "Now I can be surrounded by my patchouli-soaked friends in class. We can show up on 'hippie time,' be absolutely ripped for lecture, feel free to take off our shoes without regular students looking at us weird and share heady organic treats with everyone in class. Screw those boring-ass cutesy normies."

For the longer three-hour lectures, Helm suggested a ten-minute session with a complete techno thump-a-thon played over the new quadrophonic state-of-the-art sound system to be installed in each stoner's classroom instead of the traditional, boring 10-minute cigarette break. After the break, though, it's back to the tough lecture, kickin' it barefoot style in the bean bag desks.

Next up on the campus drug acceptance agenda: ecstasy classes. X-heads around campus will finally be able to roll face during class without worrying about the ELMO projector giving them dirty looks.

Admission to the special stoner curriculum will require students to fail a drug urine analysis. More details are available at www.uwsp.edu/pothead.

"Attaining an understanding of the yoga chakras will be a main goal of all stoners enrolled in the stoner curriculum."

Campus Health markets new "breather condoms"

New style a hit among campus sinners

By Skeeter McGee

GOT YOU LOOKIN' LIKE A FOAMY LATTE

UWSP Health Services has patented a new type of breathable condom called "Breathers" that allows more air and fluid circulation to the penis during coitus.

"Men have never really been comfortable wearing condoms," said Health Services Nurse Rosey Palmkitten. "We hope to eliminate that non-comfort issue with our new line of Breathers."

The state-of-the-art condoms will feature slits down each side, allowing for more comfort in addition to better air circulation.

"They feel great," said student Harry Knockterupt. "Almost like I'm not wearing a condom at all."

Health Services is anticipating an absolute condom-market boom with their release of Breathers. Much of the profit made from Breathers will be filtered back into the University's child-care program and the play area located outside the College of Professional Studies building.

"Breathers will be available on the mainstream market in late April, just in time for human breeding season."

UWSP Board of Regents votes unanimously that education is the most rigorous major on campus

In a non-roll-call vote held this past Monday, the Board of Regents awarded the distinct honor of "Most demanding major on the UWSP campus" to those involved in the School of Education.

This is an honor that few majors ever attain. As Lolonda Spheres, an elementary education major said, "Few students understand what education majors actually have to go through. The amount of time that we put in sitting in class doodling as professors continually talk on about appropriate desk height is unfathomable."

It is no surprise that those involved in the School of Education have the overall highest GPAs on campus. The amount of dedication these students demonstrate through taking open book tests and having classes solely based on coming to class and listening to the jargon told to them by distinguished professors truly defines the honorable college student.

"Education students deserve so much more credit than other majors on campus. I mean, remembering the order, family, and genus names of over 300 birds is nothing compared to what they go through on a daily basis," said Bucky Tearanova, a UWSP biology student.

To all of you education students, we salute you. You are most certainly the epitome of hard work.

If it smells like trout, get the hell out.

May you not have to learn this valuable piece of information the hard way.

Thomas "Skeeter" Franklin is shown in action in a game against Pacelli last season. Franklin has announced his plans to go pro next season.

SPASH flag football star declares for 2004 NFL draft

Young star hopes to be early first day selection

By Bull Schitter

THE CREEPY OLD GUY AT BRUISERS

17-year-old Thomas "Skeeter" Franklin, wide receiver for the The Friendly Bar Fireflies flag football team, has declared himself eligible for the upcoming NFL draft.

Unlikely Heros

"Maurice Clarrett's brave fight against the NFL has given me an opportunity to live my dream," stated Franklin at his high school's pro day.

The 5'7", 147 pound Franklin was a dominant player in the Stevens Point co-ed flag football league.

"We don't really keep stats," said Skeeter, "but I know I scored at least 10 touchdowns over the last couple of years. I'm a threat to take it to the house on every play."

Franklin burst onto the scene two years ago in his first game with the Fireflies when he caught a pass on a two-yard crossing pattern and took it 37 yards for the winning score against The Friendly Bar's main rival, the St. Stephen's Academy Little Sisters.

"Those fifth grade girls didn't know what hit them. They'd beaten us five years straight so I knew I had to make a play," said a proud Franklin.

Since Franklin took over as a starter for The Friendly Bar, the Fireflies have become a force in the four team city league, placing second and third in the last two seasons.

"Yeah, I wasn't able to get a championship for the Fireflies, but we play in a really tough league," said Franklin.

In addition to the Little Sisters, the league features perennial powers the Stevens Point School for the Blind, and the 18-time defending champion SPASH Alternative Delinquents.

SPASH's pro-day had quite a crowd in attendance. One of the spectators was Franklin's mother, Virginia Franklin.

"I think Thomas is the best player ever," gushed Virginia. "I think any foosball team will be lucky to have him."

Also in attendance was SPASH Alternative Delinquent star defensive back Miles "Stray Bullet" Goff.

Goff

"I've never actually seen him play," stated Goff, "but I felt him run past me a couple of times."

Tampa Bay Buccaneers Head Coach Jon Gruden was also spotted wandering near the field.

"I'm not sure what's going on," said a confused-looking Gruden. "My plane got diverted to this podunk town. I'm just trying to kill some time."

When asked to speculate what round Franklin would be drafted, Gruden replied, "Who's Thomas Franklin?"

Franklin's workout results were slightly disappointing. He ran a 5.45 40-yard dash, posted a 12 inch vertical jump, and couldn't get 225 off the rack for the bench press. While running pass routes, he dropped all but three balls.

"Sure, I'm a little disappointed in my workout, but my skills speak for themselves," said Franklin. "I may not go in the first round, but I think I'm still an early second round prospect."

Bennett to take over at Eastern Washington

"I miss my brother," admits coach

By Harpo Freywin
RICH GUY WITH A LITTLE PACKAGE

Jack Bennett has announced that he is leaving UW-Stevens Point for a Division I head coaching position at Eastern Washington.

Bennettball

"Really, I just miss Dick," said a teary-eyed Bennett as he packed up his office on Wednesday. "I really don't have anything left to accomplish here anyway, so I might as well move on."

Jack Bennett

When contacted at Washington State University, Dick admitted that he was up in the air on his brother's decision.

"I really wish him well, but he just keeps following me around," said the elder Bennett. "He's just like a puppy. Woof-woof."

Jack did accomplish something that Dick never did here, though, when he won his first Division III national championship a couple weeks ago.

"Don't remind me about that," said Dick. "Ever since he won that stupid trophy, he's been rubbing it in my face. He even sent me a candid picture of him and the trophy in a hot tub."

Dick Bennett did admit to a bit of jealousy, though.

"Yeah, he won a D-III championship, so what," said Dick. "Lets see him come out here and deal with these little prima-donna babies that play D-I ball."

Washington State and Eastern Washington are scheduled to play twice next season.

Men's championship a hoax

Local journalist admits to "making up" team's championship run

By Randall Jackson
UN-AMERICAN IDOL

After a lengthy investigation, UWSP officials have found that the recent Division III men's basketball team was a figment of a lonely journalist's imagination.

Men's Basketball

Jerry Rhoden, the sports editor at The Stevens Point Journal, admitted to fabricating the story when prodded by a private investigator.

"It was always my dream to cover a national championship team," said Rhoden. "Since a majority of this community can barely read, and most have never left Stevens Point, I figured my story would go off without a hitch. If it wasn't for those meddling kids..."

Those meddling kids that Rhoden is referring to are Dan Mirman, Editor-In-Chief of the student newspaper, The Pointer, and Shawn Kozlowski, the sports director at STV. Both became alarmed after reading daily stories in the Journal about the championship run and not being notified by the university that the team was still playing.

"I was beginning to feel a little left out," said Kozlowski. I mean, this school was cruising to a national championship, and all I knew about it was a crappy story in the paper every day."

Mirman echoed Kozlowski's sentiments, saying, "At first, I had trouble finding information, and that's what set me off as to the truthfulness of the story. Well, that, and seeing Nick Bennett sloshed at The Friendly Bar on the night he was supposedly in Washington scoring 37 points."

Unfortunately, some fans weren't as lucky as Kozlowski and Mirman, and didn't find out about the hoax until getting to Salem, Virginia.

"We drove for 17 hours straight," said jersey-chaser Maggie Swallows. "When I got there and found out that I wouldn't be able to throw myself at Eric Maus, it was pretty disappointing. It's a good thing that those studs from Williams College were there to ease my pain."

Even the Pointer basketball players themselves were surprised at the stories appearing in the local paper.

Krajnik

"When I read that we supposedly won at sectionals, I was like, 'Damn, did I miss the plane again?'" said senior point guard Neal Krajnik. "It took me a few minutes to figure out what year it was. Wait, where am I?"

Junior forward Jason Kalsow, who supposedly won the championship game at the final buzzer, was flattered by the attention.

"Jersey-chasers were chasin' me all over, even more than normal," said Kalsow. "Hey, I'll take the publicity. It might help me get a better draft position for the NBA next year."

Currently the community and university are deciding what charges, if any, will be brought upon Rhoden.

D&D club holds slam dunk contest

Kalsow warns, "Stick to your dorky war games."

By Tom Emanski
COACH OF AAU NATIONAL CHAMPS

Inspired by UWSP's men's Division III basketball championship, the university's Dungeons & Dragons club surprisingly ventured outside and to the Quandt for a slam dunk contest.

Dorks

As a special treat to his cousin, D&D president Melvin Kalsow, Pointer star forward Jason Kalsow served as the judge for the contest.

The contest started rather slowly, as each of the 12 participants missed his first eight dunk attempts.

As the contest went into sudden-death overtime, competition heated up between the club's top two athletes, Frederick Johansson and Kirby Rogers.

Rogers

Johansson, who has a year of high school junior varsity golf on his resume, continued to talk trash to Rogers, a former figure skater.

"Frederick really chapped my pastry," said Rogers. "When he accused me of stealing his strongest wizard, that set me off. I knew I had to take it to his house."

Rogers responded with a thunderous throw-down that shook the gym. Unfortunately, no one saw it, as Jason Kalsow got bored and left, turning out the lights on the participants just as Rogers flew into the air.

When questioned about his decision, Kalsow responded with a sigh.

"Well, that was 45 minutes of my life I'll never get back, dammit," said Kalsow. "It sucks that one of these guys is going to be my boss next year."

Two hockey players behave badly during a game this season. Unfortunately, the players tend to continue these actions off the ice, which lead to their imposed sensitivity training.

Skaters forced to attend sensitivity training

Head coach appalled by decision

By Frankie Four-Fingers
GAMBLING ADDICT

At a press conference Monday, UWSP Athletic Director Frank O'Brien ordered that all members of the UWSP men's hockey team must sign up for sensitivity training or anger management classes during the fall semester. All team members are required to have the program finished by the completion of fall semester, 2005.

Men's Hockey

O'Brien made the decision after the latest in a number of violent incidents involving members of the hockey team.

"It's not really in response to one particular event or skirmish, instead I made the decision after looking at all the problems we've had with this team in particular," said O'Brien.

At the press conference O'Brien read off a list of offenses committed by the team that included trashing hotel rooms, habitual fighting at a plethora of drinking establishments and constant harassment of the majority of female students.

Reading the list of offenses took up more than half of the time during the press conference.

When O'Brien finished the list he added, "It also doesn't help that the players are ridiculously arrogant and have shown no remorse at all for their infractions."

Head Coach Joe Baldarotta was more upset about the punishment than his players violations.

"Sensitivity training, what the hell is this? These are hockey players not little bitches and they should be treated that way," said Baldarotta. "Besides, people need to understand this is how all hockey players act. They are more important than other students and that gives them more privileges."

When Baldarotta was asked if he would attend the sensitivity training himself, he only glared at the crowd and gave an emphatic, "No."

The skaters' required punishment is to spend a minimum of 20 hours in any of five courses on a list that O'Brien had given to the team before the conference. All members of the team must complete the required hours or they will not be allowed to compete next season. Obviously the decision was not welcomed very warmly by the majority of the team.

"This is bullshit. I don't think Frank understands that we're the Shafts of this school. Every woman wants us and every guys wants to be us," said junior Mike Brolsma.

"And what happens if this training stuff sticks? How can we keep our edge on the ice if we actually care about other people?"

Baldarotta did say that the team plans on appealing the decision and added that he won't rest until this injustice has been fixed.

"I see no reason why this decision would be reversed, I believe the punishment fits the crime," O'Brien said. He also added that sensitivity training was in no way related to the team's chronic underachievement the last few seasons.

WIAC baseball programs adopt steroid-only policy

Teams turn to the juice to drum up interest in sport

By Juice McGillicuddy
PUMPIN IRON FOR THE CHICKS

In an attempt to take some of the pressure off Major League Baseball's ongoing steroid controversy and as a ploy to add more excitement to the sport of Division III baseball, the Wisconsin Intercollegiate Athletic Conference has introduced a new policy for all seven schools that field a baseball program.

baseball

All players on the roster of each team must be placed on a steroid-using program prior to conference play this season. The new policy states that any given player must put on at least 20 extra pounds of muscle over the course of WIAC play. While the new rule has raised some eyebrows, most players and coaches have welcomed the so-called "Roid Rule" with open arms.

"A chance to add 20 pounds of muscle with minimal exercise? How can it not be a great idea?" said a UWSP player who asked to remain anonymous. "We should have the same opportunities as the Major League players. This is America after all: all men and women are created equal."

The Juice

"This new policy should add at least 50 home runs and 100 runs to our line-up," predicted UWSP head baseball coach Pat Bloom. "I think all coaches are in favor of a rule that could do that for their team."

While the rule is widely accepted by the WIAC baseball community, some players hold strong disdain towards the newly formed rule.

"I don't want to be some kind of testosterone freak with a short temper and a bald head," said an unidentified player from UW-Oshkosh. "I've heard what steroids do to you and it scares me half to death. I will do what's best for the team, but I do have some doubts."

Those players who wish to refrain from the new drug policy will face stiff penalties. Drug tests will be taken every week. If a player tests negative for steroids, they will face a five game suspension. For every offense after the first negligence, the suspension will increase by 2 games.

"All we are trying to do is level the playing field," said WIAC commissioner Gary F. Karner. "If some players take the drugs, I think all athletes should be able to use. Also, the casual sports fan might find baseball boring. With steroids involved, it's a whole new ballgame. Literally."

Wisconsin sports update

Brewers

Once again, the Brewers go into a season with low expectations. What is different this year, though, is that instead of performance bonuses, the players will receive a sex act from a hooker for each good play.

For example, a stolen base is worth a hand job, a home run is a blow job and a grand slam equals full-fledged 69 action.

"I think it's a great idea," said Brewers' outfielder Ben Greive. "My wife isn't a big fan, but she understands."

The acts can be differentiated for each player's specific needs and wants too.

"If a player wants his salad tossed, we can arrange for that," said Brewers' General Manager Doug Melvin. "Lap dances, bondage, role-playing...we can pay for anything. Heck, Ben Sheets likes to play 'Find the Baseball.' We got that too."

Melvin

Bucks

As the Bucks limp into the playoffs, they can't get one thing off their mind: George Karl's fat, white ass.

"Yeah, I saw it last year," said forward Desmond Mason. "It was huge, pasty, hairy, white and wrinkly. Gross!"

When Karl was fired before the season, it didn't take long for the players to buy into new coach Terry Porter's philosophy. Unfortunately for the players and coaches, the memory of Karl's nether regions haunts them to this day.

"He liked to show with the players," said assistant coach Sam Mitchell. "I don't understand it. I guess he thought it was some kind of team bonding thing."

Karl, now a television analyst for ESPN, doesn't understand what all the fuss is about.

"I think I have a nice ass," said Karl. "Sure, it's a little lumpy in places, but it's still nice."

Get ready for hot babe hunting

By Warden T.T. Sandwiches
NO THESE AREN'T X-RAY GOGGLES

April 2 brings the long awaited 2005 Hot Babe Hunting Season. Early spring is prime time for bagging these feisty critters who, with the arrival of warmer weather, emerge in hoards from their winter-time hibernation grounds.

Wisconsin DNR Hot Babe-ologist Chuck Pepper has been studying the Hot Babe, Homo Gorgeousien, in Wisconsin for 18 years.

"With the ever increasing human population in Wisconsin, there has been a sharp correlation in the emergence of the sub-species, Hot Babe," said Pepper. "The species tends to congregate in settings such as beaches and college campuses, making UWSP a prime target for professional Babe hunters."

This spring hottie was photographed sunning herself outside the U.C.

The best time to hunt for Hot Babes is on warm sunny days, during the six-month season lasting from April through September. During the warmer months, the Northern Hot Babe is more likely to seek a breeding partner, and thus will be more open to outdoorsmen. Unlike the Southern Hot Babe, who breed and wander throughout the year, the Northern Hot Babe hides in caves and large sweaters during the winter, making the open season all the more special.

The best methods for hunting Hot Babes are decoy hunting and baiting. Babes are naturally drawn to other Babes and shiny things. Many hunters like to use a bait pile that may include money, old copies of Cosmo and images of French things.

Longtime Hot Babe hunter, Gary M. Clitman, prefers using a call. "This wooden call mimics compliments and other sweet English words that give the Hot Babe a natural feeling of security. I've bagged plenty of Hot Babes in the past using this method. Hopefully this year I will nail a trophy on opening day."

Hot Babe hunters are reminded to practice Catch and Release when hunting Hot Babes. "Of course, many hunters will want to save a few for the frying pan and mount a trophy Babe above the fireplace, but in order to retain the great population of Hot Babes in this area, we need to be ethical in our Hot Babe Management," said Warden Pepper. "Also, remember to be safe out there. All hunters should wear blaze orange, display proper tags and use sanitary protection when field dressing your Babe."

Mr. Winters' two cents from the gates of senility

How's it going, Shep? I have been wondering for a long time why nobody told me about the demon in my hat? The damn thing stole my left shoe last week, but I don't intend to let that demon steal on my hat as well. I lined the brim with cottage cheese and rat feces, 'cause hey, demons don't like that stuff. No.

I fixed you some oatmeal, too. I lost my left shoe today. If I knew who you were, would tell you to change my shoes and tell me that story again. Scat, you dirty wirlygig! Scat!

I remember when I was a youngster back in 1876. I was in the woods when I saw the mighty beast. He was a mastodon and he stood 30 feet tall. I remember telling my dog Shep to sic 'im, but that damn mastodon was too fast. He ran faster than a steam train. I yelled after him but he was gone. Well, that oatmeal should be about ready now.

Make sure to use a napkin an' keep them new trousers clean'sa whistle. I remember the mastodon on that island, but it is hard to remember now. So if you could help me get rid of that demon in my hat, I would really appreciate it. Scat! Scat, you dirty wirlygig!!

That oatmeal better not be in my shoe again! Biscuits.

Hey, now, "Go on and Geeeeeet!" Here, Shep. Good boy. See 'im Shep, see that rascal mastodon through the palm tree and the vines. Whoa baby. Ha cha-cha.

David Blaine goes for booze marathon

By Robby N. Ahat
AGREES WITH CAPTIAN RETARDO PANTS

Most fans of street magic agree that David Blaine is the premier magician roaming the gutter these days. Working the streets of New York, Blaine wowed audiences with his "levitation" illusion.

Lately, Blaine has moved from simple street magic to spectacular feats of endurance. These included standing on top of a pole for days on end, being buried alive, frozen in a block of ice and, most recently, living without food in a glass box above the Thames River for 44 days. Blaine plans to push the bar further to test the endurance of the human liver.

"I will visit the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point, and during this spring semester, attend 100 house parties in 100 days," Blaine stated earlier this year at a press conference. "Every night, I will push the limits of the human body to drink shitty beer, sweat profusely, dance to overrated college bands and score big time with hot freshmen," he commented. "Just last night, I puked on a tree and followed an 18-year old to Smith Hall. I told her I was famous, then I did a levitation trick, followed by some hypnotism and a serious session of 'consensual sex.'" Blaine giggled menacingly and licked his lips.

So far, David Blaine has gone 56 days without missing a night.

Fellow magician David Copperfield called the stunt "childish, and completely out of line with the magician's code of conduct."

Blaine quickly responded, "Since I overtook Copperfield in the Magician Power Ratings Poll, he has been crying like a magical dove with a wiener in its tight dove-butt. Not that I would know what that sounds like, but you could imagine." After a long silence, he continued, with a bold look, "His style of magic just isn't dangerous enough. Copperfield has lost his edge."

Wild Mullet population drops Emergency reintroduction plan to be implemented

By Hilary Aussdoo
GETS OFF WITH INFECTED PUPPETS

The Great Northern Mullet/Wild Neckwarmer is in danger. Call it what you will, but the favorite hair style of the 1980s is on the verge of becoming extinct after the government began paying $50 a pelt for the critters in the late 80's.

In an attempt to stave off elimination of the hairstyle from the wild, the DNR is planning an extensive mullet reintroduction program, set to begin in the spring of 2005.

"It's a hairstyle that makes sense for the people of Wisconsin. It keeps your neck warm in the winter and shaded in the summer," said DNR Mulletologist Norm Mall. "Just because something stops being popular, doesn't mean that it is practical or ethical to exterminate it altogether. The mullet is a natural part of our ecosystem."

Mall believes that if action is not taken now, the hairstyle could be extinct within the next five years. Studies have shown that the mullet has received a severe backlash during the 90's and the anti-mullet phenomenon has continued into the new millennium. The mullet opposition have voiced their protest of DNR reintroducing the hairstyle into central Wisconsin.

Joey Styles, the president of the UWSP branch of the anti-mullet federation (AMF) finds it difficult to believe that the DNR is attempting to prolong the life of the mullet.

"This is absurd. The mullet is a rough hairstyle that should have killed off years ago. An ignorant few have allowed it to pollute our state. These critters should be removed, not endorsed."

Regardless of the AMF protests, Agent Mall plans to go forward with his plan to beef up the mullet population.

The plan will work by trapping wild Europeans and Canadians who still sport the hairstyle and then relocating them in rural Wisconsin cities. Mall hopes that when the locals see others sporting the hairstyle, they will believe the mullet is back in fashion and grow their hair long in back once more, causing mullet populations to flourish.

Despite the DNR's plan to go ahead with the mullet reintroduction, the AMF plans to fight them every step of the way.

"Whenever we see a mullet, we will shave that head. No question," said Styles. "I'm sick and tired of these mullet wearers giving all of Wisconsin a bad name as hicks. We're here as honorable citizens and sportsmen to ensure that the reintroduction is a failure."

A wild mullet in its natural state... is simply stunning.

Whichever side wins out, this does not appear to be an issue that will go away soon. For more information on the mullet, visit the official website of the haircut, www.mulletsgalore.com.

DNR agent caught poaching beaver

Trapper's web of deceit unravels

By Joan Cusack
SNOOTY BITCH WITH A HALF-ASSED LISP

Making a "serious error in professional judgment," Tuesday, off-duty DNR field agent Mike Hermies was caught poaching beaver on private land. The arresting officer in the case, his wife of seven years, was dispatched to the scene after hearing "gunshots in the master bedroom."

Mrs. Anne Hermies then found the suspect "huddled over the young beaver carcass" and reported that he was in possession of "unregistered traps, a loaded gun and illegal shot." She also noted that, "Agent Hermies was hunting beaver outside of the moral hunting season."

Agent Mike Hermies was obviously upset with his actions, saying, "I know I broke the law, but I haven't been catching any beaver in my traps for a long time now. Isn't that right, Anne?"

Mrs. Hermies, noticeably infuriated, continued, "His badge will be revoked. Also, Mike can take that skank-ass beaver and move to fucking Florida if he wants. I'm keeping the goddamn house."

CNR animal testing goes nuts

By Justin Heras
VICEROY OF TESTICULAR SCOUTING TEAM 48

An estimated 300 animals, including cats, dogs, birds and squirrels are used in animal research at the CNR building each year. About 90% of the animals tested agree that it can be invasive and painful, but the rewards usually outlast the pain.

Students in the 378 biological testing units recently conducted a Viagra test on squirrels and were thrilled by the results.

Squirrels from all areas of Stevens Point were lined up outside the CNR building to volunteer for the experiments, and many of them were excited to be a part of the new experiment. One squirrel mentioned that he "was thrilled to have the chance to feel young again."

Another squirrel up for the experiment was Ron Squirly, a retired acorn excavator from Schmeekle Reserve. "I'm not so sure that I want them touching my nuts, but it seems like a pretty good deal."

All squirrels that were chosen for the experiment were knocked out and given shocks through electrodes inserted into their penises. Once the procedure was finished, each squirrel was tied to a treadmill and forced to "walk it off" until they eventually collapsed.

"It was fun to watch those little guys ride the treadmill," exclaimed biology student Peter Dunkin. "After shocking penises all day long, the class deserved a good laugh. We were going to conduct laxative research to test how constipated we could get the squirrels, but Professor Hardon declined."

Thirteen out of 30 squirrels tested were actually killed in the experiment, but Ron Squirly survived and

Even a blind squirrel can bust a nut once in a while

couldn't have been happier. "It's been difficult for me to get it up in the past," said Squirly, but now I can run faster, jump higher, and have loads of sex. I've been getting phone calls from all the lady squirrels, and making lots of new friends." CNR students will be honoring the 13 squirrel victims by kicking off the third annual squirrel feed on April 1, sponsored by the CNR. The proceeds will be donated to the families of the squirrels who gave their lives for the experiment, and a bronze squirrel genitalia statue will be commissioned.

Wolf raised by tame humans found lecturing on voter apathy

Members of the Ghost Lake wolf pack in Northeastern Wisconsin found a "tame pup" wandering in the woods early Tuesday morning.

Alpha Male White Ears described the unusual find as, "A very bizarre spectacle."

The tame pup was sitting by a pine tree, lecturing in human-howls to the forest spirits and a few woodchucks about "voter apathy among young adults and the problems that this self-negligence will surely bring in the future." His human-wear included a silk vest, a monocle and an oversized magonony smoking pipe.

The wandering youngster further confused the Ghost Lake pack by his refusal to drink milk from any of the older females. White Ears said, "That bizarre tame pup kept asking us for 'juice' and 'treats' all day long. I guess those humans that raised him never thought about his wolf heritage."

The intellectual beast continued to annoy other pack members with very bizarre, human-like behavior. He would not eat raw elk brains, snarl or even howl at the moon. Instead, he spent his time reading The DaVinci Code, talking about "opinions" and asking wolves if they knew the solution to world hunger.

"I guess we're going to keep an eye on that bizarre tame pup for now," said White Ears, "but if he asks me about that 'environmental ethics' mumbo jumbo one more time, I swear I'm going to lose it."

Fine arts center looks totally fat in spring break photos

By The CCC
THE ARETHA FRANKLIN OF ACADEMIC BUILDINGS

Upon returning from South Padre Island, Texas last Sunday, the Fine Arts Center took her film to the one-hour photo lab at K-mart. The results were simply appalling.

"I know I kinda slacked off a little during winter, but holy shit, I look totally fat in all my pics," the Fine Arts Center said after perusing the glossy prints.

Her friends agree. Longtime best friend and co-spring breaker The Suzuki Institute wasn't surprised. "She started packing on the pounds early last fall. I mean come on, her ass made the sundial dark as night. I can't believe she is even acting surprised. Frankly, it is disgusting."

The Fine Arts Center remained in denial. "Look at this picture of me dancing to the new Jay-Z track on the beach. Sure, the camera adds at least ten pounds, but my ass is bulging out of my thong like someone added yeast to it. How embarrassing!" The pictures of the Fine Arts Center clubbing at Schlitterbahn Beach, a popular dance club and tiki bar, were equally disturbing.

The Science building from Mississippi State has been receiving a good rousing from his pals since last Tuesday, when he "stupidly" hooked up with the whale-like Fine Arts Center. "You totally bagged a deuce and a half," joked friend Mississippi State Dining Hall, in reference to the "shorty's" two and a half million feet of square footage. "You must've been totally crunked out, man."

All the Science Building could say was, "Yeah, I'm not doing that ecstasy shit anymore." He then returned to vomiting and looking disgusted with the memory fresh in his attic.

The Fine Arts Center had another story to tell. "At least I hooked up," she scoffed. "The Suzuki Center didn't get laid once." She continued thumbing through the pictures sadly, "I can't believe my new bikini looked so bad on me. I guess I'll have to start running again and eating a lo-plaster diet."

The Suzuki Center, now questioning their status as "best friends," wasn't buying it. "Whatever. By next week she'll be sitting on her ass again watching Jenny Jones and huffing down crane-loads of steel beams. She'll be four stories tall by next semester."

An all-too recent steel-beam binge has almost doubled the size of this once "semi-hot" building

Invasive plant species found in dorm furniture

By Sgt. Curley Pubes
NOT A PERVERT ON SUNDAYS

Thirty-two students at UWSP have discovered Eurasian water-milfoil and zebra mussels in their underwear drawers recently, leaving Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) baffled about what to do.

The invasive species were found accidentally by perverted limnology student Phillip Hiscock, after he allegedly snuck into Knutzen Hall in the hopes of stealing women's panties. Hiscock reported his discovery to the DNR, and was apprehended by police and later charged with breaking and entering.

"I like to wear women's panties on my head when I'm doing homework, or out on the lake fishing," Hiscock said from the Stevens Point Correctional Facility. "Normally I look for dirty underwear, but due to the recent rainy weather I searched for a clean pair instead, and that's when I found the milfoil."

Although it is uncertain as to why Hiscock wears clean underwear on his head during rainy weather, he explained his position on water quality clearly.

"I am devoted to wearing men's and women's underwear on my head, but I am more devoted to fighting the spread of Eurasian water-milfoil and other invasive species from polluting our inland lakes," Hiscock explained. "When I discovered that the invasive species had spread to my neighbor's underwear drawer I just had to report it."

The DNR is currently working on how the invasive species have evolved to live in underwear drawers and exactly how they were transported there in the first place. Due to budget cuts, an ornithologist has been hired to pinpoint the cause of this unusual phenomenon.

In addition, the DNR plans to hire 30 underwear inspectors, who will work at underwear drawers and various laundromats during the summer. They will talk with people who wear underwear, and provide them with information to help them identify invasive species and take steps to ensure that their underwear are clean of these invaders.

Please help stop the spread of invasive species by checking your underwear before putting them in someone else's drawer. Make sure to clean your genitals of all plants and debris after exiting a body of water.

Lil' Jon to host gangsta rap fest at Bruiser's

Stevens Point wins right to host show for being "Whitest White City in America"

By Sheanayniqua Harris-Jones
PROFESSIONAL SPEAKER DANCER

According to Lil' Jon and the East Side Boyz's website (www.liljononline.com), Lil' Jon will be hosting the third annual "Teach Whitey the Ways" benefit concert at Bruiser's in Stevens Point on Saturday, May 8.

Local resident and student Peter Zoidberg registered Stevens Point in Lil' Jon's contest, "Who Da Whitest White City Out Dere?" The winner of the contest, venue pending, won the rights to host the ever-growing yearly festival.

"YEEEEAAAAAH, we're supa' pumped to be bringin' ghetto vibes into yo' white-ass community," was the message released by Lil' Jon per his website. Previous winning cities include Livonia, Mich. (2002) and Bar Nunn, Wyo. (2003).

Lil' Jon featuring The East Side Boyz featuring Ludacris featuring Pharell featuring D12 featuring J-Kwon featuring Lloyd Banks featuring Andre 3000 and R2-D2 (of Star Wars fame) on turntables will conclude the festival upstairs on the main stage at 11 p.m. Each of Lil' Jon's "featuring" acts will perform seperately throughout the day upstairs and downstairs, with R2-D2 spinning a special post-show come-down set. His set will feature hardtekno and jungle beats from 12:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m., and downtempo dub and drum n' bass from 1:30 - 2 a.m.

Tickets will be extremely limited and UWSP students will have first crack at them through the University Box Office on Saturday, April 10 at 9 a.m. All day passes for the event, which will run from noon until bartime, are $92.50.

Lil' Jon's charity, "Oooookayyyyy for Inner City Kids" will receive 95 percent of the ticket profits; the other 5 percent will go toward Lil' Jon's new Texas-sized bling-bling-eroo.

movie review:

By Bun Dixon
CHEDDARWURST'S POOR LOWLY SIDEKICK

Oral. Anal. Double penetrations. Facials. These are the sacred elements that can send any mediocre porno flick into one worthy of a "Woody" award. Cleveland Steamer Massacre not only contains all of those elements, multiple times, but also serves up a hardy dose of gangbangs, interracial three-ways and monster dildo action. I left this film feeling hornier than Michael Jackson at a third grade spelling bee.

The film's plot twists and turns as it follows plumber Hugo Humongo (Steve Buscemi) around the meager town of Corpus Christie, Tex. on emergency calls. Humongo, plagued with gonorrhea and a nasty case of contagious anal warts, plants his seed among bored housewives with clogged drains. Humongo's main secret fetish, among many others, is infecting innocent women with his "one-eyed skeet monster," and then telling them about the different diseases that they might have. Humongo never gets off-until the women start guessing what they may have.

Sluts banged throughout the film include Kathy Bates (Misery; Wine Me, Dine Me, Dunk Me), Jenna Elfman (Dharma & Greg; Three Sluts and a Dildo), Jessica Simpson (The Newlyweds; Dumb Bitch Gets Slammed in the Cornhole), and Jennifer Lopez (Gigli; Gurgle; Gurgle 2: Skeeter's Revenge; Gurgle 3: The Return of the Skeet; and Gurgle 4: The Last Swallow).

Other cameo appearances include Samuel L.

Cleveland Steamer Massacre

Jackson in a ravishing three-way involving himself, Buscemi and Carrie Fischer after Buscemi masterfully clears Fischer's kitchen sink. The culprit: strawberries, whipped cream and two feet of anal beads. The scene provides some of the best dialogue from the movie; after Buscemi pulls the strawberries from the pipes, he exclaims, "Bitch, bend over. Now I've got a pipe that needs unclogging," and ends in one of the most powerful ejaculatory scenes I've seen in my entire life. Jackson, a shut-in hermit neighbor, hears the ruckus next door and naturally comes over to investigate, which prompts a tag-team event on Fischer's ass. Literally.

As if the script wasn't powerful enough, the acting from each of Buscemi's sluts is so finely portrayed that at times, I felt as though I was right there amidst the grunting, groaning and gangbangs. Wit Maverick, porn director aficionado, gets right in the middle of the action with intense close-ups of insertions and facials.

I hate to label films as "Best of the Year," but Cleveland Steamer Massacre has it all. Without spoiling the ending, I will say that the midget's confrontation to Buscemi at the end about his gonorrhea is truly a tear-jerker. Well, that is, until he nails her in the McDonald's corner booth and then makes her finish off her Super-Sized Big Mac meal, with fries and a Coke.

Cleveland Steamer Massacre is rated PG-13 for brief nudity, suggestive language and adult situations, and will show at Campus Cinemas this weekend at 11 a.m., 1 p.m., 3 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Steve Buscemi fixes the pipes, then buries his own in his best performance to date, Cleveland Steamer Massacre.

Gibson announces plans for Passion 2

By Arthur Digby Sellers
BULK OF THE SERIES, DUDE

Mel Gibson stunned the movie industry by announcing that he signed a deal to produce a sequel to his blockbuster The Passion of Christ.

Gibson seemed to enjoy telling the media of his plans for the sequel, "You guys thought the first one was bloody, wait until the sequel comes out. We're talking Evil Dead mixed with Kill Bill with extra organs thrown in for good measure."

Gibson was a little sketchy on the details, however he did mention a few facts about the Passion 2.

The sequel will be set in the future and will have an apocalyptic tone to it. Apparently Jesus comes back to life to smite all the sinners and anyone else he deems unworthy. Gibson mentioned that the post Vatican II Catholic church will not escape unscathed.

"In my opinion the current Catholic church has just as much blood on their hands as the Jews. My hope is that this movie can warn people that they have the choice of converting to fundamentalist Christianity or burn forever in Hell, but it's their choice."

All the cast members will change due to the fact that their characters have all died by the time the movie takes place. Even the character of Jesus will be portrayed by another actor. Gibson mentioned that he was torn between Jason Biggs and Ashton Kutcher

The original Passion shattered box office records for religious movies and has set many

"...people...have the choice of converting to fundamentalist Christianity or burn forever in Hell, but it's their choice."
-Mel Gibson,
Director of *Passion 2

directors diving for their bibles in an attempt to capitalize on the pro-Christian audience.

"Before Passion I thought that you couldn't get the Christian crowd with a violent movie, but it does make sense they would be drawn to the gore," said George Lucas. "After re-reading The Bible a light went on. That's one of the most violent books I've ever come across, God is all about mass murder."

Lucas said he plans to make a movie on Noah's Ark, but focus on people besides Noah.

"Whenever you hear about Noah's Ark it's always the animals and some guy building a ship. I want to feature the millions of people who slowly die as the rain builds up, and include a side story about the Wookiee community and how they coped as well. Everyone loves those silly Wookies."

Among other religious films that are in the works, includes Cane and Able as well as a remake of the 10 Commandments which is rumored to star Vin Diesel as Moses.

Passion fans should expect the sequel sometime next May, but Gibson was very clear that the movie will take as long as it takes.

"I really don't want to burden myself with a timeframe on this one. Besides, I need plenty of time to let the critics start up another campaign to publicize this movie as much as the last one."

Reeves assaulted for crappy sequels

By Harry Knowles
SCARY, VIRGINAL FILM CRITIC

Keanu Reeves was reported to be in serious but stable condition after being assaulted by an unruly pack of fanboys over the sheer crappiness of the Matrix sequels.

Witnesses say that the gang of overweight, scraggly, black-clad geeks surrounded the somnambulistic actor as he exited a Spencer's Gifts. Without warning, the fanboys began mercilessly pummeling Reeves, one even screaming, "Eat my foot, Mr. Anderson!"

The fanboys scattered upon arrival of the police. Reeves was taken to the hospital and is recuperating from numerous broken ribs, a ruptured spleen and multiple concussions. After his attack, Reeves could only muster a single word response, "Whoa."

The Matrix sequels have been considered major disappointments, with many stating that they "suck," "blow," and "are mammoth stinking piles of feces that will scar generations of movie-goers to come." While many have been blamed for the film's shortcomings, Reeves has been the major target.

Reeves has long been criticized for his lack of acting skills. Supporters of the attackers were quick to point out that anyone who did Chain Reaction, Johnny Neumonic and Sweet November deserved such a beating long ago.

"The Matrix sequels were the biggest disappointments of my life," said one fan. "Reeves can't act his way out of a paper bag."

The gang of fanboys remains at large. Other actors are presumed targets as well, though Hugo Weaving, a la Agent Smith, has been declared off limits by the fanboys because "he repeatedly kicked Keanu's ass."

Encouraged by the fanboys' actions, similar groups are rumored to be planning attacks on other lousy actors. Kevin Costner is currently in hiding, as one group is reported to be plotting to capture him and make him watch Waterworld, Wyatt Earp and The Postman back to back until his head explodes.

"Keanu is the first," one unidentified fanboy declared. "Others will follow. Sylvester Stallone, you're next."
