CHAMPIONS

Pointer Alumnus

We're Number 1 in basketball and doing well in other sports

Many successes were experienced by the winter athletic teams at UW-SP, but none could compare with those of the men's basketball team.

Coach Dick Bennett's Pointers won their second straight Wisconsin State University Conference title, were the No. 9 ranked team nationally in the NAIA, and appeared in the NAIA National Tournament in Kansas City for the first time since 1957.

The season was the most successful one for Pointer basketball in the school's history. John Mack of Milwaukee, and Fred Stemmeler of Thiensville, earned All-WSUC laurels. Mack, who finished his career as Point's second all-time leading scorer with 1,451 points, also was chosen as the conference's most valuable player.

The women's basketball team of Coach Bonnie Gehling overcame a slow start and tied for the regular season title in the Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference with a 7-1 record. The Lady Pointers then finished second in the conference tournament to UW-La Crosse and concluded the season with a 14-10 record.

Kathi Bennett (Dick's daughter) earned first team All-WWIAC honors as a freshman and Mukwonago native Anne Bumgarner concluded a brilliant four year career as UW-SP's all-time leading scorer and rebounder with 1,108 points and 821 rebounds.

Red Blair's men's swim team experienced its most successful season in history, and that is impressive considering the winning tradition he has built with the program.

The Pointers finished second in the WSUC meet to UW-Eau Claire by six points after easily winning the WSUC Relays earlier in the season. UW-SP outscored UW-EC by 108 points in swimming events, but was outscored by 114 points in diving events (UW-SP has virtually no diving facilities).

However, Point bounced back to capture sixth place in the NAIA National meet which is the best finish ever by a men's team in the national meet.

Winning titles in the WSUC meet for Point were Scot Moser, Apple Valley, Minn.; Baron Richardson, Madison; Pete Samuelson, Park Ridge, Ill.; Greg Schneider, Champlin, Minn.; and Scott Slaybaugh, Waukesha.

Jon Combs, a freshman from Oshkosh became UW-SP's second student in the school's history to be a national champion in swimming. He won the 100-yard breaststroke in the national meet.

The Lady Pointer swim team earned the best finish by UW-SP in the WWIAC meet since 1976 when it finished fourth in this year's tourney. Coach Carol Huettig's team finish moved up from the seventh place finish of 1981-82.

The 880-yard freestyle relay team's Kim Swanson of DeKalb, Ill., was the top individual finisher with a third in the 500 freestyle.

Six Lady Pointers also qualified for the NCAA Division III National meet in Canton, Ohio, but no one scored points.

The Pointer wrestling team experienced another frustrating season and placed ninth in the WSUC meet.

A real bright spot for Point was the performance all season long of junior Dennis Giaimo, a 158 pounder from Brown Deer. After finishing third in the WSUC meet, Giaimo captured second in the NCAA Division III Regionals and then placed fifth in the Division III National meet in Wheaton, Ill. He concluded his season with a 22-5-1 record.

The Pointer ice hockey team continued to experience growing pains in its second year of existence as it compiled a WSUC record of 2-11-0 and a season mark of 5-22.

Paul Kohlman, a freshman from Fond du Lac, and Daryle Hanson, a sophomore from Williams, Minn., led the team in scoring with 21 points each. Greg Tessier, a sophomore from Duluth, Minn., earned first team All-WSUC laurels for the second straight year.

The spring sports are well into their seasons with the men's and women's track and field teams beginning in January.

Nancy Schoen's women's track team appears to be much stronger than last season when UW-SP finished fifth in the WWIAC Indoor and Outdoor meets.

All-Americans Barb Nauschutz of Howards Grove, and Barb Sorenson of Manawa, are the top returnees while freshman Michelle Riedi of Green Bay, appears to be the top high jumper in the conference in just her first year.

The men's track team of veteran coach Rick Witt is again very strong and should challenge for the WSUC indoor and outdoor crowns. UW-SP finished third indoors and second outdoors last season.

All-American returnees for Witt included Tom Weatherspoon of Brookfield, Gary Van Vreede, Green Bay; Steve Brilowski, Stevens Point; and Eric

Parker, Shorewood. Van Vreede is the defending national champion in the decathlon in Division III.

Success and championships are all the women's softball teams have experienced in its two years of existence, and there is no reason to believe 1983 will be any different for Nancy Page's charges.

Page's 1981 and 1982 teams both won WWIAC crowns and then advanced on to national tournament play. Eight letterwinners return from last year's team, including first team All-WWIAC pitcher Sue Murphy of Neenah. Second team honorees who return are Beth Kiene, Green Bay; Sue Schwebbs, Appleton; and Madonna Golla, Wautoma.

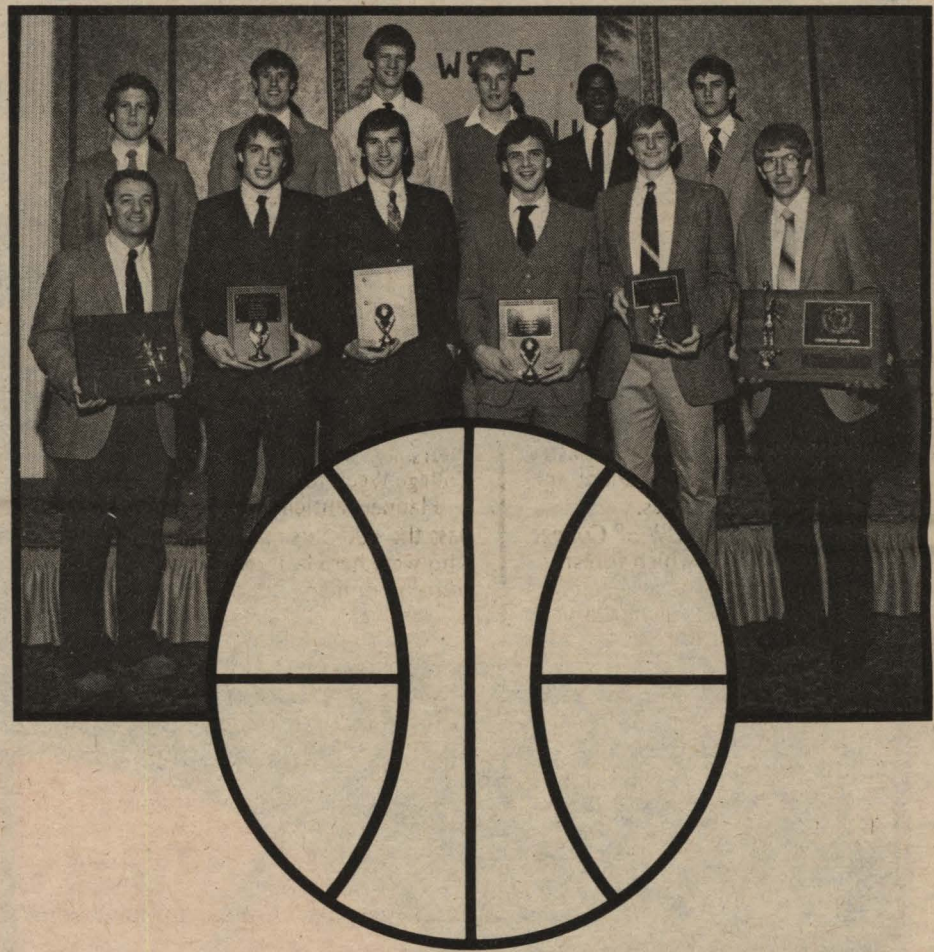

The baseball team is under the tutelage of first year coach Ron Steiner and is aiming for a good season.

Steiner has inherited All-WSUC performers Don Hurley of Tomah and two-time selection Jeff Bohne of Combined Locks. UW-SP was 9-9 in 1982 and 6-6 in the WSUC.

The men's tennis team also has a new coach in John Kapter who replaced long time mentor Jerry Gotham during the winter.

1983 looks to be a rebuilding year for Kapter as only Bob Smaglik, a junior from Milwaukee, returns from last year's team. Freshman and transfers are expected to round out the team.

Home Economics societies formed

Phi Upsilon Omicron national honor society in home economics has instituted two new chapters.

Thirty-one honor students pursuing degrees on campus either in home economics education, early childhood education, dietetics, food and nutrition, fashion merchandising or housing and interiors have been inducted into Gamma Alpha chapter and eight graduates have become the first to hold memberships in the alumni chapter.

Eula Masingale, national president of Phi Upsilon Omicron from Baton Rouge, La., conducted the installation ceremony. She is dean of the college of home economics at Southern University.

The national organization has more than 53,000 members who were invited to become affiliates on the basis of their academic accomplishments, leadership and service.

Students at UW-SP who were chosen, for example, have overall grade points of about 3.3 and higher, according to Mary Jo Czaplewski, head of the home economics program here who was instrumental in arranging for the formation of the new chapters.

The ceremony was scheduled to coincide with the 80th anniversary of the establishment of home economics programs, originally called domestic science, at UW-SP.

Officers of the new student chapter, who were formally installed during the ceremony and who also gave talks about the symbols of the organization, are Collette Charlier, West Allis, president; Patrice Kent, Oak Creek, vice president; Cynthia Parrett, Wisconsin Rapids, secretary; Dori Adamski, Stevens Point, treasurer; Brenda Cuty, Wisconsin Rapids, historian; and Nola Holverson, Appleton, reporter.

Anne Elsen Eggleston who received her B.S. degree in 1953 and her M.S. in 1971, is the new president of the alumni chapter. Mary Konkel Zurawski, master's degree recipient in 1971, is vice president; Jill Counselman Norton, master's degree recipient in 1976, secretary; Ethel Hill, emeritus faculty member and alumna, treasurer; and Mary Ann Baird, faculty member and alumna, reporter.

Suzuki appoints Paul Landefeld

Paul Alan Landefeld of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been appointed assistant to the director of the American Suzuki Institute at UW-SP.

He will assist Professor Margery V. Aber, founder and long-time executive director of the Central Wisconsin Suzuki program.

Landefeld, who holds a bachelor's degree from Carnegie-Mellon University and a master's degree from Duquesne University, has studied in Japan under Shinichi Suzuki, founder of the method. He has served as conductor of the student orchestra at the Talent Education Institute in Matsumoto, Japan, and holds a certificate of observation and study from the Japanese program.

Landefeld and his family attended the First American Suzuki Institute in Stevens Point in 1971, and have attended the annual event every year since that time. He has taught at the local summer conference and at the International Suzuki Teachers' Conference in Amherst, Mass., in 1981.

He came to UW-SP from the Suzuki Development Center of Pittsburgh, Inc., which he founded and serves as music director. He will teach violin at the Talent Education Center in Stevens Point and assist with the coordination of the annual Institute.

The American Suzuki Talent Education Center offers instruction in violin, viola, cello, piano and flute to 350 people in five different cities in Central Wisconsin.

Paul Landefeld

The annual Suzuki Institute hosted on the university campus each summer attracts thousands of students, parents and teachers from throughout the world. Last year's event brought 2,054 people to the UW-SP campus for Suzuki instruction.

UW-SP has 10 unique majors

The uniqueness of UW-SP's academic offerings is shown in a newly compiled list of undergraduate majors at the 13 degree-granting institutions in the UW system.

Ten majors at UW-SP aren't available elsewhere in the state system.

The comparisons are based on a study of the curricula at the UW campuses in Eau Claire, Green Bay, La Crosse, Madison, Milwaukee, Oshkosh, Parkside (Kenosha), Platteville, River Falls, Stout (Menomonie), Superior, Whitewater as well as Stevens Point.

The 10 majors offered only at UW-SP are resource management, water resources, wildlife, American Studies, Russian and East Central European Studies, paper science, music literature, food and nutrition, housing and interiors, and human services.

Majors found at UW-SP and at only one of the other campuses are managerial accounting (available elsewhere at Green Bay), fashion merchandising (Stout), Latin American Studies (Eau Claire), and forestry (Madison).

Majors offered only at three campuses including UW-SP are communication (Parkside and Milwaukee), home economics education and dietetics (Madison and Stout), natural science (Madison and Oshkosh), and soil science (River Falls and Madison).

The Stevens Point curriculum includes several concentrations within majors which rank among few of their kind in the state system. Comparative literature is a concentration here and a major at Madison and Milwaukee; the technical communication concentration compares only with a major in that field at Platteville; a recreation concentration vies only with a major at Milwaukee; the Russian concentration in foreign language competes only with majors in Madison and Milwaukee while the food service administration concentration is matched only by majors at Stout and Madison and the interior design concentration is found elsewhere as a major only in Madison.

The office of statewide communications in the UW System headquarters at Madison published the complete listing of undergraduate majors. The staff there has recommended that people wanting first-hand information about the academic menu of the various campuses should use its toll free telephone "HELP" service. The number is 1-800-362-3020.

Classes of '33 and '58 plan reunions June 12

UW-SP's graduating classes of 1933 and 1958 will have reunions during the annual Alumni Day on campus Sunday, June 12.

The 50th and 25th anniversaries of the commencements will be in the University Center.

All alumni are invited to attend, though special attention is given to the members of the classes being honored. Distinguished alumnus awards will be presented, and alumni are encouraged to send recommendations to the Alumni and Development Office in Old Main.

The day's activities will begin with registration at 1 p.m. followed by a welcoming program, campus tours, and a reception/reunion in the University Center. An evening dinner program will conclude the event.

Tickets for the dinner are available in the Alumni and Development Office. Members of the anniversary classes will receive special mailings listing specific information about activities for their groups.

Forestry program has most students

"We always knew we were the best, now we're the biggest, too," says a smiling Daniel Trainer in response to a new report that lists the UW-SP forestry program as number one in student enrollment in the United States.

Trainer is dean of the UW-SP College of Natural Resources in which forestry is one of several areas of specialization. The information is in a recently published survey from the Society of American Foresters.

UW-SP has 699 undergraduate forestry majors among a total of 9,288 men and women studying this subject for a bachelor's degree at nearly 50 colleges and universities across the country.

Ranking second in enrollment is Humboldt State in California with 556 students. In third place is Colorado State with 409 students.

The wildlife program at UW-SP also ranks number one in size despite the fact it isn't as large as it was in the 1970s.

The nation's colleges and universities have 2,348 people studying wildlife science and 417 of them at UW-SP. Colorado State stands second with 322 majors and the University of Montana is third with 219.

Of all schools with natural resources programs, UW-SP ranks second in its total enrollment, according to the SAF study.

The largest one is Colorado State with 1,893 students. UW-SP follows with 1,691 and North Carolina State ranks third with 945 students.

There are, however, 173 paper science majors at UW-SP which added to the 1,691 would bring the size of the total natural resources college here to within 39 students of Colorado State.

The study suggests that the program at UW-SP may be particularly rigorous in that a smaller percentage of the students graduate from it than at many other places, particularly the colleges and universities with the larger enrollments.

Trainer believes the growth of the College of Natural Resources has been largely the result of a faculty that has been able to work effectively with administrators in "getting together to do a good job."

The success in the job market of students has helped, too, he adds. "A good product always sells itself."

College week for women set

UW-SP will host more than 400 participants at a series of programs and seminars on Tuesday, June 21 through Thursday, June 23, for its annual College Week for Women.

Planners anticipate a turnout to surpass the 400-plus number of registrants who were here last year because of the addition of many courses never offered before.

Costs will be $30.50 for tuition and $48 for room and board in a residence hall. The fees include opportunities for recreation and entertainment on campus. Commuters will be charged only for tuition.

Participants have the option of choosing either one concentrated course or two shorter classes which meet each day.

Professor Rondy is dead at 68

Joseph J. Rondy, 68, who taught English at UW-SP from 1961 until his retirement in 1979, died Feb. 4 at Wausau Hospital Center.

He had been living in Park Ridge.

Joseph J. Rondy

A memorial service was held Feb. 6 at the Boston Funeral Home with the Rev. Thomas Finucan of St. Stanislaus Catholic Church officiating.

Rondy was a specialist in literary criticism and was a member of the Modern Language Association and The Association of University of Wisconsin Faculties.

His teaching career was spent at the University of Missouri, University of Illinois, Michigan State University, Murray State, Ripon College and at UW-SP.

At the time of his retirement, he was given the honorary status of professor emeritus.

His survivors include two sons, John, Chicago, and Thomas, Stevens Point, and a sister.

NEWS FOR POINTER ALUMNUS: _____

Chancellor on international board of Elderhostel

Philip R. Marshall, chancellor of UW-SP, has been elected to the board of trustees of an international organization that promotes participation in higher education by senior citizens.

He will be one of 10 trustees of Elderhostel in a three-year term.

Elderhostel, which started about a decade ago in New England, has grown rapidly to include annual participation by about 80,000 men and women beyond age 60 at 600 colleges and universities.

In addition to the United States, campuses in Canada, France, Italy, England and the Scandinavian countries host Elderhostel programs.

UW-SP has been a participating institution since 1978. Last year it increased its offering to two, one-week in-residence programs. This year the number will be expanded to three and will involve about 110 hostellers from all parts of the country.

Marshall was nominated to be a trustee by his longtime friend, Eugene S. Mills, who also is on the board and who has become president of Whittier College in California after serving as head of the University of New Hampshire where Elderhostel began. The nomination was endorsed by Barbara Inch, Elderhostel coordinator at UW-SP.

Elderhostel's international headquarters is in Boston where some of its three regular yearly meetings are held.

Marshall will be inducted as a new trustee this spring at a gathering in Chicago.

Most Elderhostel programs are held during summer, and Wisconsin has become one of the more popular states among the participants. Last year, for example, about 1,400 senior citizens were involved on 23 state campuses of both public and private colleges and universities.

On each campus, hostellers live in dormitories from Sunday through Saturday and enroll in from one to three specially designed courses, each session running from 1½ to 2 hours per day.

The courses are informal and non-credit and arranged to introduce new ideas and new fields of inquiry into the lives of older learners.

Outside the classroom, both free time and planned activities such as field trips, cultural events and guided group discussions are available.

Marshall has held offices in diverse organizations in the communities where he has been a professor or collegiate administrator. In Washington, where he lived before moving here, he was a member of the state's Public Employees Insurance Board.

On the national educational scene, he serves on the committee for state relations of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

New director for institute

Joseph P. Opatz, former health promotion director for Hennepin County in St. Paul, Minn., has been appointed to the newly created position of executive director of the Institute for Lifestyle Improvement at UW-SP.

Opatz, who received a Ph.D. in higher education studies from the University of Minnesota last summer, holds a master's degree in education from Kent State University and a bachelor's degree in psychology from St. Cloud State University.

While employed by Hennepin County, Opatz designed a study assessing work force risk factors and employee needs to develop a health promotion program for 8,000 employees; administered courses such as smoking cessation, weight reduction, stress and relaxation, breast self examination, aerobic exercise and nutrition; served as a consultant to the American Lung Association; and administered a corporate running program, employee assistance program, and work return assistance program.

He has been an administrative fellow at the University of Minnesota and a college center manager at Trenton State College, Trenton, N.J.

The Institute for Lifestyle Improvement, which Opatz will head at UW-SP, provides health promotion services to public and private agencies; conducts research on lifestyle improvement activities and provides continuing educational and training programs.

UW-SP cited for helping minorities

A 10-state organization of professionals who are advocates in education for disadvantaged students has given one of its two top awards for 1982 to UW-SP and chosen a local faculty member to be its next president.

The Mid America Association of Educational Opportunity Program Personnel presented plaques to UW-SP and Michigan State University for "significant contributions and outstanding support to the MAEOPP cause." Accepting it was Fred Leafgren, assistant chancellor for student life.

The approximately 500 members in attendance named Jim Vance as its president-elect to take over leadership of the organization. Vance is associate director of Programs Recognizing Individual Determination through Education (PRIDE) and head of its special services division at UW-SP.

The organization, which has members from Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, and Ohio was established in 1974 to promote excellence and equity in education for economically/educationally disadvantaged and physically handicapped students. Members represent public and private high schools, colleges and universities, and vocational-technical schools.

Vance has been active in the group since it was started, and in recent years numerous staff members, faculty, and students at UW-SP also have become involved and have served on committees.

Scholarships available to freshmen essayists

Scholarships totaling $1,000 will be awarded to winners in an essay contest for new freshmen and transfer students planning to enter UW-SP this fall.

Five winners will be chosen, and each will be given $200.

Participants are asked to write in 500 words or less, "Why I Would Like to Attend UW-SP and Live in a Residence Hall."

"This is our way of reaching academic consumers for feedback on what at our campus is attractive to them. In addition to comments about our academic menu, we will be interested in responses to our innovations in food service, residence hall living and student activities," said Dennis Tierney, executive director of student services at UW-SP and coordinator of the competition.

Prospective contestants desiring informational materials to use in writing essays may address their requests to the Office of News and Publications, Old Main, UW-Stevens Point, Stevens Point, WI 54481.

Deadline for entries is July 1. Winners will be notified before August 1.

Tierney said the university sponsored similar contests several times in the mid 1970s, "and we learned a lot about ourselves which was helpful in planning the services we now offer."

UW-Stevens Point has received several national awards from professionals in student life careers in recent years. This recognition has been given on the basis of the support provided to local collegians out of the classroom. "Now that the professionals have spoken, we're interested in knowing how we stack up in the eyes of the people who are on the receiving end of our services," Tierney explained.

Funding for the contest is from revenues in the Campus Living Unit of the Division of Student Life at UW-SP and does not involve monies provided from taxes.

It's springtime at UW-SP

Spring enrollment stands at 8,269

Enrollment for the spring semester at UW-SP is 8,269, according to Registrar David Eckholm.

As expected, the count is down by 257 from the same time one year ago.

The gains for the semester were among seniors. There are 144 more of them than in 1982. The largest decline is in the freshman class, with 214 fewer of them. The drop was minimal among sophomores down two to 1713, and small among juniors, down 42 to 1553. The graduate enrollment was down 114 to 509.

The university may experience more gradual declines in the next few years because of the smaller number of people who will be graduating from the nation's high schools.

Gertie Hanson Halsted remembers her school

The UW-SP Foundation, Inc., has announced the receipt of a $4,200 bequest from a longtime faculty member who died last year.

The funds are from the estate of Gertie Hanson Halsted who died Jan. 26, 1982 in St. Petersburg, Fla. at the age of 92. She served at UW-SP, beginning in the days when it was a State Normal School, from 1920 to 1953. Among her achievements were pioneering efforts in developing radio broadcasting from the campus and creating curricula in her geography department on the subject of educational broadcasting.

Her bequest was unrestricted which gives foundation officers the discretion of determining how the money should be spent.

Moffatt returns as chairman

John E. Moffatt, a specialist in the study of crime, delinquency, and corrections, has been appointed to a three-year term as chairman of the sociology department at UW-SP, effective this fall.

He will succeed Kirby Throckmorton, who has served as chair for five years. Throckmorton, who declined reappointment to return to full-time teaching and research, is currently involved in exploring Polish-American ethnic identity in Portage County.

A native of Rockford, Ill., Moffatt holds an undergraduate degree from Ripon College and master's and Ph.D. degrees in sociology from Southern Illinois University. He spent a year of teaching at UW-Platteville preceded by three years of graduate work and teaching at Southern Illinois University.

At UW-SP since 1974, he served for a time as department chair in his first several years here.

Moffatt, who is the associate editor of "Wisconsin Sociologist," is a member of the Portage County Community Human Services Advisory Committee and the Northern Region Advisory Committee of the Bureau of Community Corrections, and past president of the Wisconsin Sociological Association.

Moffatt says he is enthusiastic about his department's new concentration on adult life and aging within the sociology major. He calls the new offering timely because of the "aging of America," and says there is a need for students to become sensitized to the needs of the elderly.

Paper people provide $70,000 for students

Representatives of the paper and allied industries from across the country made plans last fall to provide $70,000 in support this academic year to UW-SP's Paper Science Foundation.

They met on campus to elect James Crane of Appleton as their next president, to confer with students and faculty in UW-SP's engineering-based technological program, and to hear a report on the future of their business.

Robert Hagemeyer of the J. M. Huber Company in Atlanta, Ga., and chairman of the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry's committee on future trends, predicted in a keynote speech at the meeting that world consumption of paper would double by the year 2000.

Crane, president of Crane Engineering Sales in Appleton, was elected to a two-year term as president, succeeding Gene Meyer of the Weyerhaeuser Co. in Schofield. William Buedingen, manager of the Owens Illinois plant in Tomahawk is the new vice president, filling the vacancy left by Crane. Continuing as secretary and treasurer are Michael Kocurek, chairman of the paper science department at UW-SP, and Leonard Gibb, director of university development, respectively.

New members of the board of directors are Mary Hermanson, process engineer at Consolidated Papers in Wisconsin Rapids who also is president of the UW-SP Paper Science and Engineering Alumni Association; James Kemerling, president of Mosinee Papers in Mosinee; and Max Hughson, vice president of Consolidated Papers in Wisconsin Rapids.

Re-elected as directors were Roger Bart, corporation technical director of Union Camp, Inc., Wayne, N.J.; Crane; Terry Norris, vice president of Nekoosa Papers in Port Edwards; and Gordon Rabeler, section head for International Papers in Tuxedo Park, N.Y.

Director terms are for three years. The outgoing president, Meyer, reported that UW-SP has "created a blend of talents and techniques for the art of paper making" and is producing some of the best prepared students in this field. There are few programs like it in the world.

Meyer said about 65 students receive scholarships from the foundation providing they maintain at least a 3.2 (above a B average) grade point.

Kocurek, who heads the department with four faculty and a 10-year history, reported that enrollments continue to grow and that new freshmen this year numbered about 100, up 25 from last year.

Course work in the department is rigorous. However, more students are enrolling, and they are bringing better academic credentials as a whole, the chairman said. Most of this year's new freshmen had four years of high school mathematics.

Total enrollment in the program now is about 200.

Despite the economic slowdown, demand has still far outpaced the supply of graduates. Starting salary for seniors this year was $26,138, Kocurek said.

Foreign student adviser honored

Marcus Fang, member of the psychology faculty and adviser to foreign students at UW-SP, has been elected chairman of the National Association of Foreign Student Affairs, Region V.

Fang will assume the position of chair-elect in May of 1983, and will assume the top position a year later. He says it is a three-year commitment, and the duties during his first year will mainly consist of coordinating and chairing the program for the regional conference in November.

NAFSA is a tri-level organization with national, regional and state divisions. Region V is made up of representatives from Wisconsin, Michigan, and Illinois who work with about 25,000 foreign students in colleges, technical schools and high schools throughout the three states. Fang describes the regional group as the most active in the U.S.

Hartman to leave for Michigan job

Paul E. Hartman will leave his position as athletic director at UW-SP to assume the same post at Oakland University in Rochester, Mich.

The resignation was announced Feb. 18 by Arthur Fritschel, dean of the College of Professional Studies and will be effective at the end of the spring semester. Hartman has held his position for seven years.

Paul Hartman

Last year, according to the dean, Hartman was given academic tenure in recognition of accomplishments as a teacher.

Fritschel said Hartman's successor would be chosen from within the UW-SP faculty.

Hartman said:

"The athletic program has progressed during the last seven years, and I am certain with new guidance and the excellent coaching staff that we have at UW-SP, the program will continue to improve."

Hartman assumed his position at UW-SP in 1976 when there were 15 intercollegiate sports at the school. There now are 18 sports with softball and cross country having been added for women in 1980 and ice hockey for men in 1981.

Numerous athletic teams at UW-SP have experienced high levels of success, led in many cases by coaches Hartman appointed.

Hartman has been active since his arrival in fund raising projects to further support the total athletic program. Some of the benefits of having those additional monies has been the ability financially for UW-SP to send athletes to national contests. In 1982 alone, UW-SP sponsored 10 teams to post-season competition.

Colleagues give support to Shaw

Byron Shaw, who has become shrouded in controversy because of his research on the quality of this area's groundwater, has received a commendation for his work from faculty colleagues at UW-SP.

He and his wife were guests of honor at a dinner party last fall where a plaque presented to him stated, "Your pioneering work as a scientist in identifying contaminants in the groundwater of Wisconsin will be appreciated by generations to come. We the faculty of the College of Natural Resources wish to express our sincere recognition, appreciation and support of your efforts. We are proud to claim you as a colleague and friend."

More than 40 people signed it.

Shaw has been on a hotspot as a result of his assignments in recent years to study contamination of groundwater. His findings have sparked controversies because current agricultural practices, particularly use of pesticides, are being linked to the problem.

The ensuing debate has put Shaw in the middle of the issue, a place he doesn't feel comfortable.

Daniel Trainer, dean of the College of Natural Resources at UW-SP, said the award and recognition dinner for Shaw were the ideas of his fellow faculty members. "They felt strongly that they wanted to show their support for his scientific endeavors," he explained.

Shaw spends one-quarter of his time teaching, another quarter of his time directing the Environmental Task Force which is headquartered on campus and does research and monitoring of environmental problems, one half of his time in adult education projects as a water quality specialist for UW-Extension.

He initially was involved in studying use of nitrates in agriculture and their effects on the environment, particularly drinking water. He learned that many wells contain toxic nitrates in excess of 10 parts per million, the nationally-established danger level.

There was some controversy with public disclosures of those findings, but not to the extent that followed his reports about three years ago of finding aldicarb in wells near potato fields. He was the first to make such a discovery in this part of the state.

His findings have resulted in statements, charges and countercharges by environmentalists, farmers, state officials, politicians, chemical dealers and others.

Ironically, Shaw isn't convinced the aldicarb problem, which he calls "the most spectacular," should be the greatest cause for public concern. The nitrate situation continues to bother him as much, if not more, than the aldicarb controversy. Pregnant women are advised not to drink water that contains more than 10 parts of nitrates per million.

There is a growing number of wells with alarming amounts of nitrates, he says, but this toxic material is "taking a back seat" right now to aldicarb.

"We must be looking at the whole range of things in groundwater," he advises.

Shaw holds the rank of professor of soil science and water science and has been on the faculty at UW-SP since 1968.

Computer pioneer Kelch steps down

Paul Kelch, who pioneered instruction in computers and also served in numerous high-ranking administrative positions at UW-SP for 17½ years, retired in December.

He was an assistant professor of accounting and in charge of student advising for the Division of Business and Economics.

Paul Kelch

But for most of his tenure here, he served at the right hand of three different chancellors (presidents) and two additional acting chancellors of UW-SP.

He was the university's first director of data processing, controller, secretary to the Budget Advisory Committee, director of budget planning and analysis, secretary of the administrative council, acting assistant chancellor for business affairs, executive secretary to the chancellor and internal auditor.

All of those different titles came after he retired from a 22-year stint in the U.S. Army.

He is teaching two sections of an accounting course this semester but after that his plans are indefinite. He and his wife, Audrey, of 41 years, are considering moving to a warmer climate. A native of Cincinnati, Ohio, Kelch was reared in Texas where he attended Sul Ross State College. He received both a bachelor's and a master's degree there, and then was an elementary teacher in Edinburg, Texas. He served there until signing up for the Army two years later.

In the military, Kelch rose to the rank of lieutenant colonel. He had combat duty during World War II in Okinawa and later had assignments related to budgets and finance in Korea, Germany, Hawaii and intermittent tours on the U.S. mainland.

In 1950, when hardly anyone knew what computers were, Kelch got involved in their use. He remembers that the equipment he worked with 30 years ago filled a large room. Today's small personal computers, about the size of typewriters, have as much and probably more capability than those early models, he says.

While a soldier, Kelch continued his education at Princeton, Indiana University and Butler University. He taught some courses for the Army, and after his discharge, he was the first to teach data processing courses at his alma mater, Sul Ross State College.

When he came to UW-SP, he developed the first computer course, and also was involved with Betty Witkowski and Michael Sowiak in the development of the data processing operation which he headed for several years.

He saw his academic department of business and economics grow dramatically from about five faculty to nearly 30 in the past 17 years.

Kelch enjoys gardening and photography. He's also considering a new hobby: playing with a home computer.

Computer helps students decide major to pursue

People having difficulty deciding which major to pursue at UW-SP are offered the use of a computer to explore their options.

The ranks of undecided students is a big bloc among UW-SP freshmen, representing about 20 percent of each year's incoming class.

Being undecided early in one's collegiate career is being touted as something positive on campus. Admissions Director John Larsen says "it's healthy." There is plenty of time during the first few semesters for students to explore what interests them both academically and careerwise, he explains.

Patricia Doherty, associate director of counseling and human development, concurs with Larsen as she helps the undecided with the assistance of a computer program called "SIGI." That name stands for System of Interactive Guidance and Information.

The program was the first one of its kind offered at a college or university in the state.

Leased from Educational Testing Service which developed SIGI, the program is updated annually to keep pace with the current job market. It's used on a micro-computer which Doherty describes as simple to operate. A printer provides each user with a copy of the information to keep and use in discussions with a counselor.

SIGI is available to student users in the UW-SP Counseling Center, Delzell Hall. After about 12 months of being in operation here, it has received good evaluations from those who have interacted with it. Doherty calls SIGI a tool—one source of advice to be integrated into the total career counseling process.

Because it is a structured program and is geared to a national audience, it doesn't contain local information. After taking into account skills of students, the program offers the user several choices, but is not truly individualized.

"And the choice is ultimately up to the individual," Doherty says. "The first thing I advise a student to consider is, 'What do I want?' not 'What's out there?' To enter almost any field, you really have to work hard and you need to consider the level of risk. Five percent of the people who get their Ph.D.'s in counseling psychology find work in the field, but I wanted it, so I went for it," she recalls.

Doherty lists three assumptions about decision-making which SIGI offers assistance with. Know the information you need, know where to get it, and develop a system for reaching decisions.

The program has five parts—values, locate, compare, plan and strategy. Values define what is important to the individual in the work world. Locate offers a list of possible career titles. Compare lets the student ask up to 30 questions about at least three different jobs. Plan gives information about preparation such as education, degrees required, internships, etc. Strategy is the wrap-up which helps the user weigh the risks or investments versus the rewards and make some decisions.

One important thing to keep in mind when considering career options, according to the counselor, is the number of times each individual changes jobs in a lifetime. Human career development goes on and on and adaptability to change is a necessity, she maintains.

For example, experts currently predict that 75 percent of the jobs people will have in 1990 didn't exist in 1980.

Statistics like that hovering over the world of work and the people about to enter it are expected to result in no major change in the large number of college-bound freshmen who have not made up their minds about their future careers.

And, while Admissions Director Larsen consoles the undecided that their status is healthy in the early semesters of their study at UW-SP, Doherty adds that change is the name of the career game.

Four professors given sabbaticals

Two artists, a philosopher and a writer, have been granted one-semester sabbaticals during the 1983-84 academic year to do research that will result in new dimensions to the curriculum of UW-SP.

The UW System Board of Regents approved sabbaticals for a total of 67 faculty members in the system, including UW-SP's:

David L. Smith, associate professor of art; Daniel Fabiano, associate professor of art; Robert K. Miller, associate professor of English; and Thomas W. Overholt, professor of philosophy.

Sabbaticals involve full salaries for faculty members while they are away from their classrooms to pursue their projects.

Smith will use his sabbatical to acquire additional training and experience in developing art programs for children with exceptional educational needs in order to start a new course in this field for student teachers. Such a course would be one of only a few offered in Wisconsin.

Fabiano will spend his semester leave investigating how computers and neon lights can be used as an art form for inclusion as part of several courses on computer/media design. In addition to his in-depth study of a new medium to be put to use in his courses plus a new one in computer art, Fabiano also intends to create works that will form an exhibition in the Edna Carlsten Gallery on campus at a later date.

Miller is planning to write a book after investigating the differences between Americans and Europeans that are revealed in American literature. He already has been contracted by Frederick Ungar Publishing Co. to prepare a textbook about the American response to Europe, and his sabbatical also will be spent developing materials for a new course on the same topic. Such a course is believed to be especially needed at UW-SP where there is an active international program involving numerous students in residence each year in Europe. The course would integrate for the students their foreign experiences into their university education as a whole.

Overholt will develop course work, collect readings and do article and book manuscript writings aimed at helping students acquire an understanding of the social background of Old Testament religion. His research will include a study of anthropological and sociological theories and data to enhance the interpretation of Old Testament texts.

Area's Norse pioneers studied

College students across the country are learning about American history by studying, in part, the evolution of a Norwegian family with deep roots in Portage County.

"These United States," a textbook which is being widely distributed, includes two sections about the Rosholt family of Scandinavia and Rosholt. The author of the sections is Joel Mickelson, a professor at UW-SP.

Mickelson's writings were commissioned by Little, Brown and Co., publishers of Boston and Toronto.

The first edition of "These United States" by Irwin Unger of New York University, included a section about the history of a specific family that settled first in New England and eventually migrated South and was involved in the slave issue. Mickelson says response to this feature of the textbook was "extremely good," and an editor at Little, Brown and Co. decided that it should be expanded in a second edition.

Consequently, Maury Klein of the University of Rhode Island, who wrote about the Alexander family, was invited to do another section on a family that acquired great wealth and exercised considerable influence in industry. He chose the Goulds of New York City.

Because of his interest and past research on ethnic groups, Mickelson was invited to do a section on an immigrant family in the Midwest of either German, Irish, or Scandinavian background.

The professor conferred with Malcolm Rosholt of Rosholt, longtime historian/writer who several years ago was interviewed extensively on camera for a British documentary on Scandinavian immigration to the United States. Rosholt had collected a lot of material about his own family but hadn't taken the time to put it all together for a book. He offered Mickelson use of this information.

Lloyd Beck ends career on campus

After a lifetime in the field of psychology, Lloyd Beck, a professor at UW-SP, retired in December.

He has been either studying, researching and/or teaching psychology for half a century. Looking ahead, he says: "Psychology will be important in developing techniques for people to live peacefully."

Lloyd Beck

The professor is regarded by his fellow faculty members as the father of UW-SP's modern day psychology program. When he came here in 1964, the philosophy and psychology departments were joined as one. At the time, they were probably the last disciplines in such an arrangement on an American campus, according to Beck. About two years later, when they were split, Beck was chosen as the first chairman of the psychology department.

Eventually he was involved in hiring nearly all of the 15 present day full-time faculty, a massive curriculum development, and planning for various departmental research laboratories in the Science Hall.

He served three three-year terms as chairman before stepping down and returning to full-time teaching in 1975.

His observations about UW-SP are that "students are the healthiest and most beautiful that I have ever seen. They have purpose. They are scholars." Also, "The faculty and the facilities they have are among the best in the state."

Feldman heads state committee

A philosophy professor at UW-SP has been elected to serve a one-year term as chairman of the Wisconsin Humanities Committee.

Richard Feldman, who has taught at UW-SP since 1971, was selected to head the 25-member group, the state arm of the National Endowment for the Humanities. He is serving his second three-year term on the committee, which grants federal funding for humanities programming.

The committee focuses on television and radio programming, films, lectures, and other projects which are public oriented. According to Feldman, two of the criteria the committee uses for selection are that the plan be academically sound and that it be aimed at a public audience.

Trainer elected to state academy

Daniel Trainer, dean of natural resources at UW-SP, has been elected to be one of 17 members of the Council of the Wisconsin Academy of Sciences, Arts and Letters.

His term is four years.

The 113-year-old academy was established by legislative charter to encourage research and communication of information on the sciences, arts and letters of the state. It is an umbrella organization of archeologists, architects, artists, administrators, ecologists, engineers, entomologists, lawyers, librarians, ministers, musicians, physicians, psychologists and poets.

The academy's governing body includes seven officers plus 10 additional council members, including Trainer.

Warner wins prize for study

A faculty member in the division of economics and business at UW-SP has won a $500 first prize for writing the most outstanding Ph.D. dissertation of the year at Washington State University in Pullman.

The work by Paul Warner, who came to UW-SP last fall, entitled "Property Taxes and the Mobility of Capital" now is entered in nationwide competition sponsored by the National Council of Graduate Schools.

He based his book on research he conducted among 188 industries in every state except Alaska and Hawaii. He made comparisons on their locations between 1958 and 1972 and concluded that incentive (labor, taxes, energy, etc.) and ability have the greatest impact on firms' decisions to move.

Rouda in national paper science office

Robert H. Rouda, professor of paper science and engineering at UW-SP, has been named an officer of the process simulation committee in the engineering division of the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry (TAPPI).

He will serve as committee secretary.

Rouda has played a leading role in TAPPI since he joined the Association in 1975. In 1980 he was appointed chairman of the process simulation committee's task group on data and physical properties. He has presented papers on process simulation in the kraft pulp mill, participated in panel discussions at TAPPI engineering conferences and annual meetings, and he has lectured at several TAPPI seminars on process engineering calculations.

Environmental study outside is at its peak for UW-SP students during the summer.

Environmental programs planned

The Central Wisconsin Environmental Station, an arm of UW-SP, is sponsoring several programs this summer for elementary and secondary students.

High school students may become acquainted with the natural resources of the state and the people who manage those resources during two one-week workshops. The sessions for young women and minorities will be held at the station, June 12-18, and a co-ed offering will be offered August 14-20.

Any student currently enrolled in grades 9 through 12 is eligible to attend and explore career fields in resource management.

Two wilderness expeditions will examine the ecology and natural history of unique areas and develop participants' camping skills. The first one, from July 9 to 17, open to students in grades 8 to 12, will explore northern Minnesota's Boundary Waters Canoe Area. The second expedition, from July 22 to 30, also open to students in grades 8 to 12 will include backpacking and camping in Isle Royale National Park.

Youths entering the sixth to twelfth grades who are regarded as "gifted and talented" are eligible to participate in a third annual Youth in College Program. The first session is set for June 26 to July 8. Mornings will be devoted to exploring natural environments and afternoons will include options to work with microcomputers, study environmental ethics and environmental communication.

The second session, July 31 to August 13, will offer environmental study, plus experiences with microcomputers, theater arts, forensic chemistry, observational astronomy and photography.

Further information and registration are available through the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station, 7290 County MM, Amherst Junction, Wis. 54407.

Four overseas offerings set

UW-SP will offer four overseas programs this summer for students wanting academic credits or non-students seeking opportunities for personal enrichment.

All of the groups are headed for Europe, and all of them will visit several countries.

In addition to announcing the offerings, Helen Corneli, director of international programs, said an administrative arrangement between her office and the theatre arts department is making it possible for UW-SP to have a widely-traveled faculty member, Frieda Estes Bridgeman, as coordinator of summer travel courses.

Here's a summary of each summer program:

Polish Culture: Its Expression in Folk and Fine Art—Air travel from Chicago to New York and then to Vienna, train travel across Eastern Europe to Cracow. Poland will be visited from the Baltic Sea to the Tatra Mountains, with stops in museums, cathedrals and castles. David L. Smith, professor of art, will lead the group from July 13 to August 10.

A Mediterranean Summer—From June 12 to July 11, participants will travel with Richard Pinnell, a music professor who has minors in aesthetics and art history, in visits to the relics of European culture. There will be stops at the various rivieras and historic buildings and museums in Italy, France, Spain and Switzerland.

European Fashions and Interiors: Design Study Tour—Professors Mary Ann Baird and Ann Fairhurst, faculty specialists in interior design and fashion merchandising, respectively, in the UW-SP School of Home Economics, will lead the group between June 30 and July 28. The students will gain perspectives in historical development, contemporary trends and internal marketing of fashion and interior designs. Visits will be made to design studios, manufacturers, retail stores, costume and furniture collections, museums and historical sites in England, France, the Netherlands, Italy, Switzerland and Austria.

Summer in Germany and Poland: Natural Resources Camp—Two different groups will be organized, the first leaving July 4 for Poland for environmental study there and then continuing about two weeks later to Germany to meet a UW-SP contingent arriving there July 18. Both groups will be together in the Black Forest region continuing their examinations of European methods of resource management before returning August 15. The faculty leaders will be Neil Payne, a wildlife specialist, and Byron Shaw, a water specialist in the College of Natural Resources.

Students in the Polish and Mediterranean groups will earn three academic credits while those in the design and interiors tour will be given four or five credits in home economics, and the natural resources students will receive three to five credits, depending on whether they go only to Germany or there and to Poland.

There are still openings for the Polish art, Mediterranean culture and interior/design course groups. However, the offerings to natural resources students have already been booked to capacity with local collegians who are required to be involved in a summer camp either in Europe or northern Wisconsin.

Inquiries about all of the programs are being handled in the Office of International Programs, Old Main, by Professors Bridgeman and Corneli.

As a new coordinator of summer offerings, Professor Bridgeman will be assigned to the office on a one-quarter time basis, remaining in the theatre arts department for three-quarters of the time.

The native of Cape Girardeau, Mo., holds a Ph.D. from UW-Madison and has taught art in North Kansas City Public Schools, was technical director and instructor in speech at the University of Kansas City, and a faculty member at UW-Madison and UW-Marshfield Center. She came to UW-SP in 1965 as a specialist in costuming and scene design. She has traveled extensively abroad independently and has been a faculty member for several UW-SP semester abroad groups.

Summer session opens June 13

Workshops for teachers, computer courses and a continuation of four-day class weeks will highlight the 1983 summer session at UW-SP.

Classes will begin Monday, June 13 and continue uninterrupted except for Monday, July 4, through Friday, Aug. 5. The summer commencement will be held on the evening of the final day.

Also planned are a mini or interim session from May 23 to June 10 in which several courses will be offered in a concentrated three-week period.

Numerous courses within the regular summer session also will be given in concentrated formats such as two, three or four weeks.

A combination magazine/timetable listing all of the summer courses and containing general and feature material about the university and its people is now available without charge. Copies may be secured in person or by phone or letter from the Office of Continuing Education and Outreach or Office of Registration and Records, UW-Stevens Point, Stevens Point, WI 54481.

This summer's enrollment, according to Orland Radke, director of the session, is expected to be about the same as last year—2,850, which was an all-time high. The count in 1982 was up more than 100 from the previous year.

Among the workshops planned are nucleic acid in biology; microcomputers in teaching chemistry; writing for all disciplines in English; computer familiarization for teachers, basic computer workshop for teachers and computer science methods for teachers, all in mathematics; jazz arrangement, techniques and pedagogy in music; touring children's theater and summer theater in theater arts;

Also, spectrographic analysis—an aid to speech assessment in speech pathology and audiology; microcomputers in elementary education, outdoor education, gifted and talented children, supplemental materials in curriculum, and children behavior problems, all in education;

Also, health nutrition and its application to health education and coaching in home economics; and athletics for special individuals, wellness for the exceptional individual, athletic taping and training, wellness strategies for educators, trends/issues/curriculum in driver education, all in health, physical education, recreation and athletics.

As a special service to astronomy students interested in first-hand study of the skies, one of the introductory astronomy courses will be offered at night so students can use telescopes in the Science Hall observatory.

An archeological dig near the campus, along the Wisconsin River, will be led for several different credit and non-credit groups by John Moore of the sociology/anthropology department.

The Office of International Programs will sponsor study/travel offerings in Europe.

After the session closes, there will be several special workshops including the American Suzuki Institute which is one of the largest gatherings of Suzuki Talent Education student musicians and their teachers and parents. The several thousand participants come from all parts of the world.

The summer session will mark its 75th anniversary in 1983. The first one was held in 1908 when UW-SP was a normal school. Last year was, technically, the 75th annual session.

Summertime at UW-SP is filled with outdoor concerts, with audiences seated on the lawn.

Larger percentage of graduates needed for financial assistance

This issue of the ALUMNUS chronicles the contributions made by many friends of the university in the on-going search for excellence at this institution.

These contributions enable us to do many things that we could not otherwise do. Most notable among these is the project at TREEHAVEN which will soon be the locus of the summer camp for the College of Natural Resources as well as other conferences and retreats for the entire institution. We know that this excellent facility would not be possible were it not for the contributions of our alumni and friends. While we still need many hundreds of thousands of dollars to complete it, it is well under way and we know that it will eventually be a facility of which all of us can be justly proud.

Alumni gifts also enable us to give scholarships to needy and deserving students; scholarships which would not be available without this display of private giving.

While we appreciate the gifts which have been made, we are disappointed in the percentage of our alumni who participate in the annual alumni fund drive. The percentage of alumni contributing, as well as the average gift, are both well below the national average for institutions of this type. It is my hope that in the future we will be able to improve in both of these categories and that as we do so the dollars which become available will more nearly match the needs of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

Here are ideas for planning your bequest to alma mater

By Leonard Gibb
Director of Development

Can you make a bequest to the UW-SP Foundation without a will?

There are many people who, for any number of reasons, will die without making a will. That doesn't mean you can't support the UW-SP Foundation!

Bequests represent the simplest kind of "deferred gift." Donors who could never make, say, a $10,000 gift during life, often can make a gift that size through their wills. The gift comes from their estate, and therefore can't endanger their lifetime financial security. But statistics tell us most people never make wills! All of the persuasion in the world may not turn an "intestate" into a "testator." Some people don't wish to work with lawyers. Others secretly hope they'll be the one person in history whom death won't visit. Others recognize that they should have a will, but procrastinate until it is too late.

This is frustrating to development officers, who often have willing donors who would like to assist an institution. Nothing happens because many die without making any plans. Below are some ideas that you may follow to help us, without making a will. They still take some planning and action, though.

U.S. Savings Bonds

Many individuals have them. Bonds have a death beneficiary designation, and donors can designate the UW-SP Foundation as a beneficiary when they purchase new Series EE bonds. They could change the beneficiary of currently owned EE bonds to us by simply having them reissued with the new beneficiary designation. To change Series E bonds, the original death beneficiary has to sign a consent form. If the original beneficiary is deceased, the donor must produce a copy of the death certificate in order to have the bonds reissued with the Foundation as beneficiary.

Life Insurance

People who don't like to talk to lawyers may find life insurance agents less threatening. Donors can make charity the revocable beneficiary of their life insurance policies merely by asking the company for a form. Better yet, they can transfer all ownership rights to the UW-SP Foundation, get an income tax deduction, and deduct all future premium payments!

P.O.D. Accounts

Wisconsin recognizes P.O.D. (payable on death) accounts at banks, building and loan associations, industrial loan and investment companies, savings banks, and credit unions. Depositors may indicate their deposits—checking, savings share accounts, certificates of deposit, etc.—be "P.O.D." to the UW-SP Foundation. This designation is wholly revocable, and in no way affects a donor's control over the deposit.

Revocable Trusts

Individuals who don't have wills probably aren't likely to establish lifetime trusts. They could do so, of course, naming the UW-SP Foundation as beneficiary, and then any assets in the trust would pass to our university at death. But some charities, including our foundation, offer to serve as trustee of revocable trusts, and have procedures for receiving cash or income-producing property on a change-your-mind-anytime basis. We pay the donor an income for life, and whatever remains in the trust at death passes to the UW-SP Foundation.

Life Income Plans

Gift annuities, remainder trusts, and gifts of remainder interests in homes and farms are also "will substitutes," but require an irrevocable commitment.

These suggestions can result in a gift to our university upon death. We don't advocate not drafting a will. A will is the best way to convey some of your lifetime accumulation to the UW-SP Foundation. I have, however, mentioned a few exceptions to this pattern.

These suggestions are from R & R Newkirk of Indianapolis, Indiana.

Okray, Sentry, Seramur boost fund drive

Greater faculty involvement in fund raising helped the UW-SP Foundation, Inc. defy a stagnant economy and log the best financial year in its history during 1982.

Leonard Gibb, who is in charge of development for the university and executive director of the foundation, said total income was $1,141,000 compared with $1,087,000 in 1981.

Meanwhile, assets of the foundation increased from $1.9 million to $2.4 million during the year.

The foundation's annual meeting was held Jan. 27.

Outgoing President Terry Norris of Port Edwards, said that among Wisconsin's public universities outside of Madison and Milwaukee, UW-SP ranks number one in its fund-raising successes.

While outright contributions were down during the year, there were gains in income from investments and from services provided by various arms of the foundation, such as wellness promotion activities, lifestyle assessments, paper science projects and the laser laboratory where people with skin disorders receive treatment. The faculty, Gibb said, was active in providing many services that generated foundation income.

The more notable outright gifts received recently from local donors included $20,000 from Okray Produce Co., and $20,000 from Edward Okray, who is an alumnus of UW-SP and president of the firm bearing his family name. Northwoods recreation property valued at $30,000 was given by John Seramur, president of First Financial Savings and Loan, for future sale. Proceeds will support a scholarship fund he established several years ago for students in the Division of Business and Economics.

Various donations from Sentry Insurance, several of which were announced publicly at previous events, totaled $36,000 for the year.

During the meeting, Seramur was elected to a two-year term as foundation president. Seramur had been the organization's vice president the past two years.

He asked the directors to assist in the identification of new sources of income for the foundation so it can continue providing support that helps UW-SP maintain its "margin of excellence."

Basically the foundation raises money in support of projects the state cannot or is unable to finance including student scholarships.

That support amounted to $661,731 last year including $523,000 that went specifically for building improvements at Treehaven, UW-SP's new natural resources camp near Tomahawk. More than $90,000 was distributed in scholarships, $16,000 was spent on the final payment for an organ in the music department, $6,500 to complete the mosaic mural on the Natural Resources Building, and more than $8,000 in support of operating the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station. More than $8,000 was given for student recruitment efforts and the remainder of the money was allocated in small amounts for departmental or individual student or faculty projects.

Gibb said he will be working in 1983 to raise money for another $800,000 building phase at Treehaven, including a 48-bed dormitory that would cost about a quarter of a million dollars. The university would like to begin nearly full-scale use of the camp in the summer of 1984.

He also said the foundation may need to provide assistance in purchasing books and periodicals for the library. Inflation and budget squeezes have resulted in less state support for reading and study materials, he said.

Chancellor Philip Marshall told the directors he is "pleased to serve" at a campus where foundation and community support "is greater than I've experienced at other institutions."

Dr. Nyles Eskritt, a local dermatologist who serves on the foundation board and operates the laser laboratory on campus for treatment mainly of portwine birthmarks, said more than

Mosaic mural on Natural Resources Building—a foundation project

250 people from all parts of the United States and several foreign countries have been patients there since 1978.

He used colored slides to show how use of intense light rays from the laser have had "good to excellent" results in reducing skin blemishes on 75 percent of the patients.

Experience has proved that the older the patient, the better the chances for successful treatment, he said.

The laser laboratory was one of three in the country for birthmark treatment when it opened more than five years ago. Other laboratories have been established since then, but patients continue to come here from distant areas. Eskritt said he has not been as successful removing tattoos as he has in shrinking portwine birthmarks. There are far fewer calls for tattoo removal and he believes that is just as well. The ruby laser used for this treatment is difficult to operate because of cooling problems, he said.

Eskritt was re-elected to a three-year term as a director with Leonard DeBaker, president of the First National Bank of Stevens Point. A new director is Robert Hanes, a 1959 graduate of UW-SP who is the vice president of Robert W. Baird and Co., Inc. in Wausau.

David Miller of Sentry Insurance was elected vice president; Gene Katz of the Katz Co. in Plover, treasurer; and Norris, past-president. Winning re-elections were Gibb as executive director, Karen Engelhard as executive secretary and Atty. John Buzza as corporate counsel.

Carryover directors are David Ankley, Al Barrows, Donald Copps, Buzza, Rick Frederick, John Joanis, Samuel Kingston, Robert Konopacky, Florence Litzow, Marshall, Joseph Okray, Ruth Schierl, Richard Toser, Mary Williams and Robert Worth, all of Stevens Point; State Superintendent of Public Instruction Herbert Grover of Madison; Wayne Hochmuth, Wisconsin Rapids; Robert Schmatz, Rt. 1, Amherst Junction; William Vickerstaff, Minocqua; Gerald Viste, Wausau; and Frederick Wenzel, Marshfield.

Lee S. Dreyfus of Stevens Point is the only honorary life member and Scott West, also of Stevens Point, is the student member by virtue of his office as head of student government.
