Fund drive announced, needs of school detailed

By Chancellor Philip Marshall

This October, the UW-SP Foundation will launch a significant, new fund-raising campaign. Its purpose is to provide the current generation of Stevens Point students and faculty with resources to continue in the tradition of academic excellence that you, as a member of our alumni family, have built since 1894.

The campaign's theme is "Building on a Solid Foundation: Traditions in Action." That theme best describes what you, by your hard work as a student and accomplishments as a graduate, have done for nearly 100 years. You have made our university one of the finest teaching institutions in the Midwest.

O.K. But why do you need my support ...UW-SP is supported by state taxes.

A good point. The fact of the matter is our university is not totally supported by tax dollars. Let's look at some numbers. In 1986-87 our university had a total budget of $59,451,157. Of that amount only $23,298,588 or 39 percent was raised from state taxes. The remainder of the revenue was derived from tuition, operation of auxiliary operations such as dormitories, etc., gifts and grants.

Over the years, our university's sources of revenue have changed from almost total reliance on state tax support to being assisted by state support. Our university has made the transition and remains a solid, academic leader. Let's look at some of the noteworthy accomplishments of our current generation of Stevens Point students and faculty.

—Employers hire 97 percent of our graduates not going on for advanced training.

—Presently our university has 105 academic program offerings.

—Seventy percent of our faculty (409 members) have Ph.D.'s.

—Annually our university contributes back to our community over $100 million in the form of purchases, payroll, etc. Additionally, Stevens Point offers 99 public service programs to the central Wisconsin and state communities.

—Many of our academic programs have national and international impact in terms of the fine arts, environment, health and letters and science.

Speech, hearing specialists to mark 25th anniversary

UW-SP's School of Communicative Disorders will mark its 25th anniversary with dinner, program and a dance on Saturday, Oct. 31.

Alumni, current and former faculty and friends are invited to attend the event.

The activities will begin with a social hour at 6 p.m. in the University Center's Program Banquet Room, followed by a dinner at 7 p.m. The after-dinner program will include brief "reflections" from the school's faculty and alumni. A disc jockey from Radio Station WSPT will play popular music from the past 25 years beginning at 9:30 p.m.

Throughout the evening, a slide show of candid shots and program highlights will be presented.

The cost is $15 per person. Reservations are required through the School of Communicative Disorders, UW-SP. Checks should be made payable to the UW-SP Foundation, Communicative Disorders Fund. ■

Trip planned to Costa Rica

The tropical ecology of Costa Rica will be the focus of a three-week trip from Dec. 27 to Jan. 18, sponsored by UW-SP's Office of International Programs and the College of Natural Resources.

Mary Duritsa, director of the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station, will lead the tour to Costa Rica, "an island of calm and democracy in the middle of Central America." Duritsa describes the country as "a haven for biological research," because of the diversity of its flora and fauna and its traditions of democracy and hospitality to visitors.

Students may earn three credits in natural resources for exploring the country's cloud forests, active volcanos, rain forests, estuaries, mangroves, coral reefs, beaches and dry forests and for studying the Costa Rican model for managing its resources. Leading biologists and environmentalists will accompany the group which will observe the country's fauna, including leatherback turtles, anteaters, quetzals, coatis and howler monkeys.

The tentative cost is $1,595. The air fare between Chicago and San Jose, lodging and nearly all meals are covered by the fee. Applications with $100 deposits will be accepted until Oct. 31 by the Office of International Programs. Inquiries can be made to Duritsa, Phone (715) 824-2428, or to Director Helen Corneli, phone (715) 346-2717. ■

Chancellor Philip Marshall

—Our athletic program has won two consecutive state, all-sports awards, and the Lady Pointers are the reigning National Basketball champions.

And we're working hard to do even better!!

That's why we need your involvement and support of the new fund-raising campaign. Our university is not content with its current level of accomplishment ... as solid as it is. Our present source of revenue will enable us to continue to do a good job. However, we need to go beyond that level to prepare for the future.

What do you need more money for?

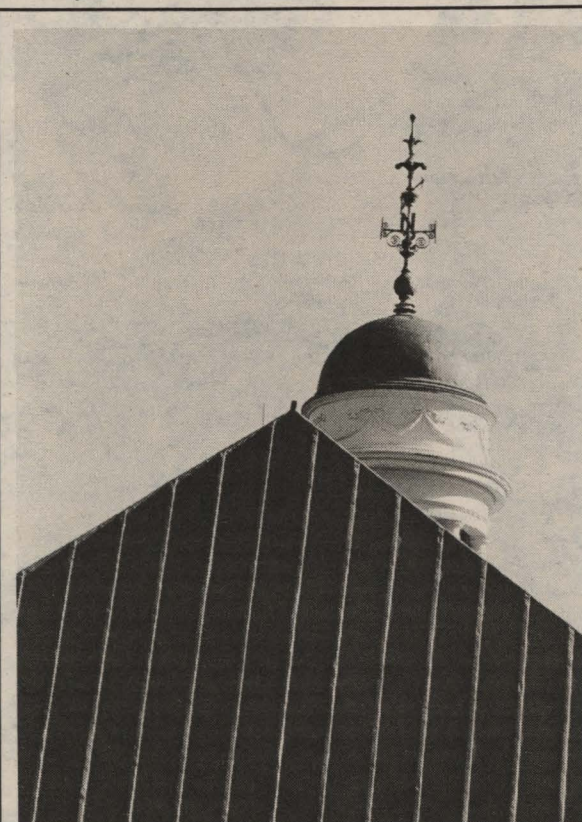

To strengthen:

1. Faculty development.
2. Student achievement programs, e.g. scholarships, research, etc.
3. Academic programs.
4. Improve campus facilities.
5. Provide for immediate needs.

Your involvement and support will enable our university to continue to build on the high standards you helped create.

In October, we will contact you with an exciting package to encourage your support. We also plan our first telethon to personally get in touch. It will be a thrilling time for all of us on campus to reach out to you.

Your support and "investment" in your alma mater is most needed. With your active involvement and support, the current generation of Stevens Point faculty and students will, indeed, build an even greater university that reflects so positively on you and your achievements. ■

The cupola of Old Main remains UW-SP's symbol.

MasterCard service for alumni

The UW-SP Alumni Association's board of directors has voted to use the services of First Financial in making available MasterCard to the school's alumni.

"We've joined forces with First Financial, the state's largest savings and loan, to bring you this distinctive MasterCard, which features our alumni association logo. Now, whenever you make a purchase, you'll be able to display your association with UW-SP and its alumni," said Karen Engelhard, director of alumni relations.

An important aspect of this arrangement, according to Mrs. Engelhard, is the fact that the UW-SP Alumni Association receives a portion of the proceeds from the MasterCard program.

More details on this program will be mailed to alumni in the weeks ahead. ■

University gets AIDS policy

UW-SP has a new policy statement and guidelines to use in responding to the growing threat of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS).

They call for a comprehensive educational program on the disease and related conditions that will center on legal, administrative, personal as well as medical aspects.

The UW-SP Faculty Senate approved the plan in May upon the recommendation of its University Affairs Committee.

Dr. James Zach, a physician for the student body, did much of the writing, basing the policy largely on what has been instituted at California State University. He said he also utilized materials from the Wisconsin Division of Health, the U.S. Center for Disease Control and the American College Health Association.

"It's as much an education effort as it is a plan to provide rationale for how to handle problems in the future," Zach said. ■

Tighter admission, suspension policies

While tighter admission standards have been established at UW-SP, students are learning that it also is increasingly difficult to stay in the school's good graces, academically.

A more rigid suspension policy — tied to grade point averages — is being phased in.

Registrar David Eckholm said new rules determining which students enter and which ones are then allowed to continue studying on campus is in response to Chancellor Philip Marshall's call of "managing our enrollment downward."

Officials of the UW System have determined there is not enough money to maintain enrollments statewide at current levels and that most member institutions should, therefore, reduce their ranks.

Dennis Tierney, who oversees overall student recruitment efforts, said the recent curbs on new freshman applications have gained more public notice than the suspension policy. Well over 500 prospective students either have been denied admission or were discouraged from making application, he reported.

Meanwhile, the tougher suspension policy states that freshmen who do not earn a C or 2.0 average will be immediately placed on academic probation. Previously, students could earn as low as a 1.6 grade point in their first semester and avoid probation. Students with between 18 and 43 earned credits could avoid problems with 1.8 grade points.

Those who are placed on probation must have at least a 1.0 grade point for their first semester or they will be suspended without any trial period. The university previously allowed students to try a second semester if they had achieved at least a .75 grade point, below a D average.

The number of suspensions for substandard course work during the past academic year mirror the new policy. The count is up by 225 over the previous year for a total of 955.

"We allowed students in the past to have a poor semester. Now we have cut that out. We will suspend the poor student faster," Eckholm explained. "We found from research that it is inevitable that nearly all of these students will be suspended eventually, anyway," Eckholm added.

On matters related to freshman admission, Tierney said the policy in effect during the past academic year of requiring prospective freshmen to pay $100 toward their tuition at the time of acceptance will, hopefully, reduce the number of "no shows" this fall. "This helps us better manage our enrollment — we know where we're at now more than in the past," he added. The money will not be refundable if students fail to start classes this fall at UW-SP.

It has not been decided whether the $100 down payment will be required again during the ensuing year. On a related matter, Tierney said a letter is going to UW System Administration from Greg Diemer, assistant chancellor for business affairs, urging that the application fee of $10 charged at all UW campuses be increased to $25. Local administrators believe the higher fee would discourage students from applying at more than one campus.

UW-SP and most other UW campuses have been growing in recent years but have not been receiving budget increases at corresponding rates. That prompted UW officials and chancellors of the various schools to project lower enrollments for the future.

The total count last fall at UW-SP was 9,554. The recommended enrollment for this fall is 9,418, and Eckholm believes that the tougher regulations will help the university come quite close to that number. The drop suggested for 1988 is to 9,281 with a leveling off figure of 8,911 by 1990. ■

New wellness, phy ed, recreation center approved

The Wisconsin Legislature has given the green light to a new physical education/wellness/recreation facility at UW-SP but has trimmed the original construction budget by three percent.

The $6.8 million structure will include a new swimming pool and multi-purpose complex.

Mary Williams, assistant to the chancellor and coordinator of facility planning, said university officials have decided to scale back the project and reduce expenditures of movable equipment in order to achieve the $576,000 mandated savings.

The multi-purpose area will be reduced from 55,000 gross square feet and the aquatics unit will be trimmed from 28,000 to 27,000 gross square feet. Equipment budgets will be trimmed by $80,000.

New construction will connect with the Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics Building, and the total project will include some remodeling of classrooms, offices and locker rooms in the existing HPERA building.

"It won't be easy to do, but we'd still like to keep this project moving ahead so we can begin construction in 1988. We are badly in need of the new facilities," Mrs. Williams continued.

Though the new facilities will be used extensively for instructional purposes, especially for UW-SP's rapidly growing wellness major, they also will be open for recreational activities and for that reason the student body agreed to assume part of the cost.

Consequently, it was decided by the governor and others that $1 million be raised from student fees and that part of another project at UW-Platteville be similarly financed.

It had not been determined, when this copy was being edited, if the fees will be levied to students at the two campuses or to students across the UW System and a precedent be established to pay for part of future buildings in the same manner. ■

Clean sweep for Jensens

It all started in 1940 when Janet Thompson of Tomahawk won a scholarship to pursue her interest in becoming a teacher.

The money she received covered her $28 tuition bill for the fall semester at Central State Teachers College where 768 students were enrolled.

Today, the school is known as the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. The tuition/fees are 30 times higher than what Janet paid. The enrollment is 12 times larger than it was 47 years ago.

Meanwhile, Janet, who graduated in 1944, is now Mrs. Charles Jensen of Stevens Point, and the matriarch of one of the largest families with ties to the school.

Her late husband, a longtime Stevens Point attorney, received part of his collegiate education at UW-SP and all of the couple's seven children attended the institution.

As of the UW-SP spring commencement in May, six of the children received degrees from the institution. The most recent degree recipient was Kathryn, the youngest, who ranked third in the class academically. The seventh Jensen, Fred, was enrolled here two years before transferring to Eau Claire and receiving a degree there in 1985.

Mrs. Jensen said that after she and her husband were married, they lived six years in Tomahawk where he practiced law. "I've always been so grateful we moved back to Stevens Point. It certainly turned out to be advantageous for the children's education."

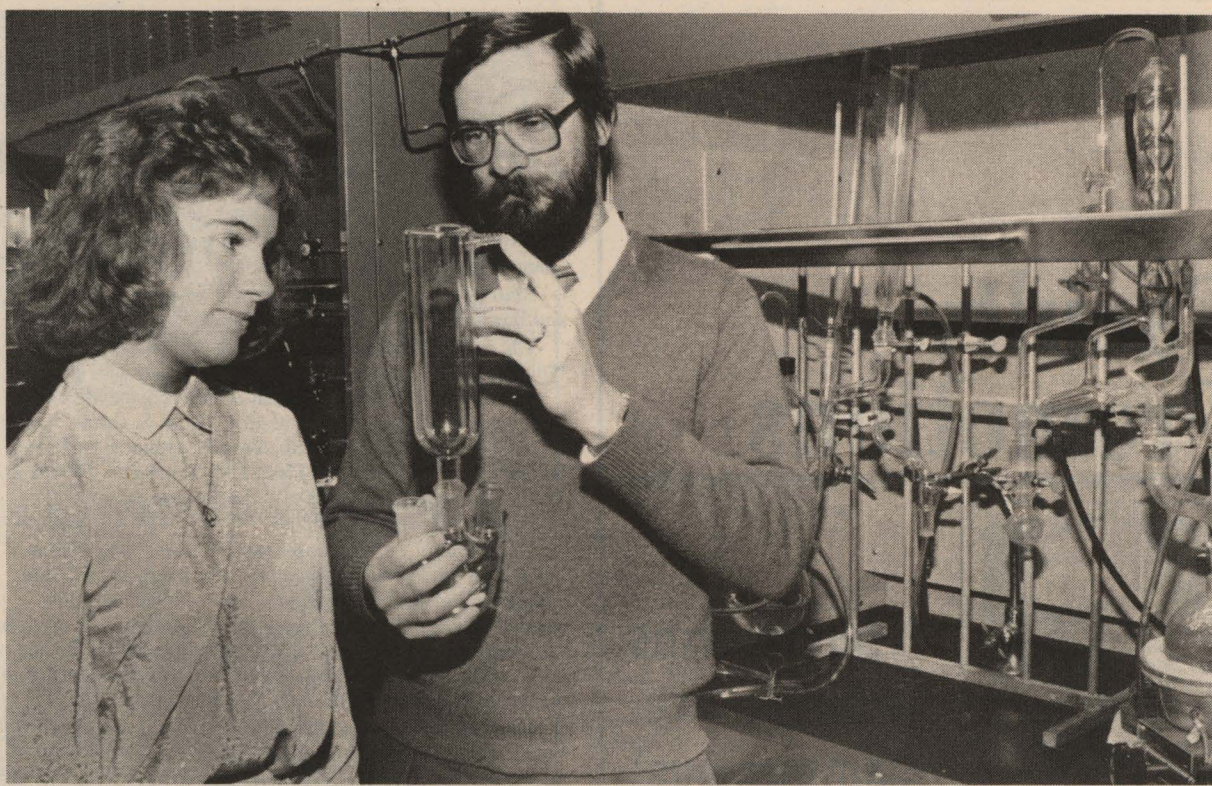

A large house awaited the expanding Jensen family in Stevens Point.

One of the most spacious residential properties in the city was built by J. L. Jensen, a Main Street grocer, in 1901 and was later occupied by his son Gereld, a dentist, and family and then by grandson, Charles, his wife, and the great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Jensen, a teacher at Roosevelt School in Plover, said that because Kathryn has graduated and is leaving Stevens Point, the house is too large for one person. She has sold it to Bill and Bonnie Maher.

Her other offspring who have graduated earlier are Jim, now a home builder in Basalt, Colo.; Tom, a P.A. at the UW-SP Health Service; John, an art instructor at Armstrong State University in Savannah, Ga.; Mary, a teacher in a day care center in Woodruff; Mike, a medical technician at University Hospitals in Madison; and Fred, with a telecommunication firm in Santa Clara, Calif.

There are other Jensens with ties to UW-SP. Mrs. Jensen's brother-in-law, William, his wife and some of their children also attended the school. ■

Professor John Droske and student Paula Johnson in UW-SP's new polymer laboratory.

Polymer expert makes discovery

A faculty member and two of his students at UW-SP have developed a plastic material that has the capacity for high electrical conductivity.

Professor John Droske has reported his findings in the recent issue of "Macromolecules," a professional journal for specialists in polymer chemistry.

"This holds promise for lightweight batteries which will make electric cars more practical and for applications in the aerospace industry. Anywhere you can replace metal with plastic, you reduce the weights and that is particularly important in transportation," Droske said. "Of course, the technology is so new it is difficult to predict what will come out of it."

His research during the past three years included assistance from Paul Engen, Westby, now a graduate student at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Paula Johnson, Wisconsin Rapids, who is planning a career in industry following graduation in December.

Droske, who joined the UW-SP chemistry faculty five years ago, received a $15,000 grant from the American Chemical Society - Petroleum Research Fund (PRF) to support his experiments, which were conducted in the university's new polymer laboratory.

Since it was first discovered in the late 1970s that polymers could conduct electricity, "this has been a very hot area," according to the professor. Since then, several materials treated with an appropriate chemical dopant have been shown to be comparable to copper wire in such capabilities.

Droske said he and his students developed a new way of preparing fluorinated polymers which exhibit electrical conductivity. "Our synthesis is versatile and should lead to further development of theories of conductivity in these materials."

The synthesis utilizes tetrafluoroethylene, the same ingredient found in Teflon. However, Droske prepared new polymers by adding tetrafluoro-ethylene to aromatic dianions, thus developing a previously unreported polymerization reaction.

Because the discovery was made in research supported by a PRF grant, Droske is not eligible to receive a patent on it. However, he is hopeful it will lead to additional grants.

"Our efforts in the future will be directed towards furthering the structure-conductivity relationships and to improving the processability of these materials," he explained.

Droske said he was pleased to be able to involve students in his projects. Since coming to the university, he has developed a chemistry course in polymers which attracts about 10 to 15 junior and senior chemistry students each year. The lab that has been built for both faculty and student research and teaching in polymers is one of few of its kind in the state.

While Droske has special interest in research, he concedes that "I really enjoy teaching and put it first." ■

About the cover — a donation

Seventeen original paintings, published as illustrations for an astronomy magazine were donated this summer to UW-SP.

They have an appraised value of nearly $100,000.

The paintings will be exhibited in rotation in newly constructed showcases outside the UW-SP Planetarium in the Science Building.

The collection was donated to UW-SP by David Walther, a Milwaukee attorney and brother of the late Stephen A. Walther, founder of "Astronomy Magazine." David Walther also pledged major financial support for the purchase of a new planetarium projector.

Artists John Clark, Jim Hervat, Anne Norcia, Mark Paternoster and Adolph Schaller did the paintings for "Astronomy Magazine" covers, utilizing space and astronomy-related themes.

A Stevens Point native, Stephen Walther graduated from P. J. Jacobs High School in 1964 and earned a bachelor's degree from UW-SP in 1971 with a major in communication and a minor in German.

His older brother, David, who also grew up in Stevens Point, recalls that Stephen was interested in astronomy from childhood and at the time of his graduation from the university had completed a research project on a proposed magazine for amateur astronomers.

Stephen borrowed money to purchase mailing lists and then collected 14,000 subscriptions at $12 apiece by the time he turned out his first edition in Milwaukee in 1973. The publication underwent rapid growth and its editor commissioned paintings to better illustrate complex astronomical principles. The artists worked with astronomers to create pictures that were both beautiful and scientifically accurate. Some of these works are now widely recognized because they were used in national advertising campaigns, in movies and as posters.

Unfortunately, Stephen's life was cut short by a malignant brain tumor that was diagnosed in the late summer of 1976. He continued working several months and died in September of 1977.

He had lived long enough, though, to see his creation surpass the circulation of "Sky and Telescope," which is produced in Cambridge, Mass., and become the world's largest publication of its kind. The magazine, printed on slick paper, contained about 100 pages in each monthly edition. Another magazine, "Odyssey," was created for children and other smaller publications were designed for more advanced hobbyists. The magazines were sold two years ago to Kalmbach Publishing Co. of Milwaukee.

However, the finest pictures from the publications were reserved from the sale to establish a memorial to Walther. Despite interest in the collection by other institutions, including the Aeronautic and Space Museum of the Smithsonian, the family elected to give the works to UW-SP. Because the paintings were done under the direction of astronomers and are scientifically accurate, they were deemed "uniquely suited to educational purposes."

David and Stephen's family roots run deep in Stevens Point. Their mother's ancestors, the Van Heckes, the Nugents and the Boyers came to the area in the mid-1800s. David and Stephen's father, Louis Walther, came to Stevens Point from Merrill in 1931 to attend the university, where he met their mother. They had a further tie to UW-SP. Their mother's cousin, Bertha Glennon, taught on campus for many years.

The space/astronomy art display is the second memorial at UW-SP to Stephen. About two years ago, David provided a $10,500 endowment to generate money that can be distributed annually in Stephen's name to needy students in the Division of Communication. ■

Faculty Promotions

Howard Thoyre

Thoyre wins number two campus post

The appointment of Howard Thoyre as vice chancellor for academic affairs/dean of faculties, the number two position at the UW-SP, was confirmed June 5 by the UW System Board of Regents.

After advertising the position throughout the United States, a local search and screen committee evaluated applications and nominations of 81 candidates.

Thoyre has three months of experience in the vice chancellor's office. He took over the duties on a temporary basis on April 1 when Irving Buchen left to become president of Westfield State College in Massachusetts.

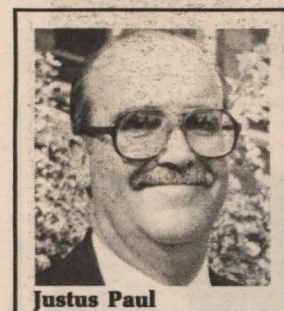

Chancellor Philip Marshall said Thoyre is "highly regarded at the university and is probably considered to be the best administrator on our campus. He has great integrity, empathy for individuals, sensitivity to the needs of others...This (appointment) is one of the most widely accepted things I've done here."

Thoyre, who will head the university's total instructional program and its faculty and staff, has 25 years of experience at UW-SP.

A native of Wing, N.D., he is 53 and holder of a bachelor's degree from Minot State College in North Dakota, a master's degree from Louisiana State University and a Ph.D. from UW-Madison. He is a mathematician whose specialty is preparing teachers for elementary school positions.

Before coming to UW-SP in 1962, he taught on the elementary level for three years and on the high school level for two years.

His administrative experience on campus has been as chairman of the mathematics and computing department for two years, as assistant dean of the College of Letters and Science for five years, and as dean of the college for six years. ■

Justus Paul

Historian new dean of college

Justus Paul, a longtime history professor at UW-SP has been named dean of the College of Letters and Science.

Paul, 49, served the past year as the acting dean while a search and screen committee conducted a nationwide search for a permanent successor. Eighty-one men and women either applied or were nominated.

The College of Letters and Science is the largest of UW-SP's four colleges and has about 225 faculty members or about half of the total faculty on campus.

Paul succeeds Howard Thoyre who resigned the position and has since become vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Chancellor Philip Marshall said Paul has been well received as an administrator during the past year. Marshall also reported that chairs of departments and members of the advisory committee in the college evaluated Paul's job performance and gave him a high rating.

A native of Boonsville, Mo., Paul grew up in Peterson, Iowa and Hankinson, N. D., where he graduated from high school. Holder of a bachelor's degree from Doane College in Nebraska, Paul also has a master's degree from UW-Madison and a Ph.D. from the University of Nebraska.

He has been a member of the history department at UW-SP for 21 years. Before coming to the university, he taught at Wausau Senior High School and at the University of Nebraska.

Until he was named acting dean, Paul served more than 15 years as chairman of the history department and headed the UW-SP Faculty Senate during four one-year terms. He also represented his university at meetings in Madison with UW System officials.

Paul is the author of a book published in the mid-1970s on "Senator Hugh Butler and Nebraska Republicanism," and he is the co-editor/author with his wife, Barbara, of the 550-page documentary which narrates and interprets significant events affecting lives of Wisconsin residents. "The Badger State" was published in 1979. ■

Board of Visitors appointed for UW-SP

A 15-member board of visitors, which will meet about three times per year to provide advice and counsel to the chancellor and his staff, has been approved for UW-SP.

Among its members are leaders in government, industry and business in Wisconsin and beyond.

The UW System Board of Regents approved Chancellor Philip Marshall's nominations to comprise the new group.

The appointees are William A. Bablitch, John M. Baumgartner, C. D. "Buzz" Besadny, James S. Crane, Frank C. DeGuire, Judy A. Goldsmith, Vern H. Holmes, William J. Horvath, Marian G. Joanis, Martha M. Kronholm, Patrick D. McDonough, George W. Mead, John E. Regnier, John E. Roberts and Dorothy K. Vallier.

The "visitors" will meet on campus about three or four times each year to be oriented on the institution's mission, achievements and problems; to advise Marshall and his administrative staff; to suggest ways the university's services and relationships with students, faculty and the public can be improved; and to conduct inquiries into specific matters whenever requested by the UW System regents.

Marshall said he was pleased to be able to assemble "such an impressive list of good friends of UW-SP to serve on the board."

He said he looks forward to learning of the "visitors'" ideas and suggestions and expects it will be "helpful as we move into a new phase."

Helen Godfrey, assistant chancellor for university relations, has been designated by Marshall to do the organizational work in forming the board and to coordinate its future activities. The first meeting is expected to be this fall.

"We want to provide the board members with meaningful experiences, and we look forward to receiving recommendations from them. Each one of them already is well acquainted with UW-SP through some very special connections with specific programs or as alumni and/or friends of the school," Miss Godfrey said.

She reported that nominations for board members were solicited last fall from committees and units across campus. The chancellor's cabinet assisted in the screening of 54 nominees to seek representation linking all major areas of the university.

The UW System regents approved a resolution in 1978 empowering chancellors of their campuses to form boards of visitors, subject to regent confirmation. Since then, such bodies have been organized at Green Bay, Madison, Milwaukee, Superior, Whitewater and the UW Center System.

Stevens Point's visitors and their ties to the school: —Bablitch, Madison, is a justice of the Wisconsin State Supreme Court who received part of his undergraduate education at UW-SP and is holder of the UW-SP Distinguished Alumnus Award.

—Baumgartner, Chicago, is speech pathologist and assistant professor at Rush-Presbyterian St. Luke's Medical Center and a recipient of the Alumnus of the Year Award from the UW-SP School of Communicative Disorders.

—Besadny, Madison, is secretary of the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources and the employer of scores of UW-SP graduates serving his agency.

—Crane, Appleton, is president of Crane Engineering Sales and a former president of the UW-SP Paper Science Foundation.

—DeGuire, Milwaukee, is dean of the Marquette University Law School and holder of the Distinguished Alumnus Award from UW-SP.

—Ms. Goldsmith, Arlington, Va., is a political consultant and activist who is the immediate past president of the National Organization for Women (NOW) and a graduate of UW-SP.

—Holmes, Stevens Point, is executive director of the Portage County Economic Development Corp., a retired executive of Sentry Insurance.

—Horvath, Stevens Point, is regional representative for the National Association of Conservation Districts, a former member of the Wisconsin State Assembly and a former president of the UW-SP Alumni Association.

—Mrs. Joanis, Stevens Point, is a homemaker and active member of community betterment organizations including groups supporting programs at UW-SP.

—Mrs. Kronholm, Vesper, is a fourth grade teacher at Mead School in Wisconsin Rapids, holder of a master's degree from UW-SP and winner of the UW-SP School of Education Outstanding Practitioner Award.

—McDonough, Battle Creek, Mich., is program director for education and leadership at the W. K. Kellogg Foundation and a former vice chancellor for academic affairs at UW-SP.

—Mead, Wisconsin Rapids, is chairman of the board of Consolidated Papers, Inc.

—Regnier, Stevens Point, is the retired director of human resources at the Sentry World Headquarters and member of the UW-SP Academy of Letters and Science and senior citizen participant in the campus foreign language program.

—Roberts, Stevens Point, is the retired executive director of the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association, a member of the UW-SP Athletic Hall of Fame and former football coach, director of physical education and dean of men at the university.

—Mrs. Vallier, Mequon and Tomahawk, is a homemaker and active participant in conservation organizations and donor with her husband, of approximately 900 acres of land that became UW-SP's natural resources summer camp and field station, Treehaven, near Tomahawk. ■

Paul Schwiager

Psychology department chooses Schwiager

Paul Schwiager, 35, will become chairman of UW-SP's psychology department at the beginning of the fall semester.

He will succeed Jack Holmes who has headed the 18-member department faculty the past seven years but did not seek re-election.

In his administrative role, Schwiager will work for the further development of a new specialty track within the psychology major in the area of health psychology/behavioral medicine.

There are only about three schools in the United States which have developed offerings in health psychology, and the one at Yale University is being used as the model by planners at UW-SP, he reported.

In a related matter, the department is exploring the possibility of developing a core of courses that could lead to the students being certified as biofeedback technicians. These practitioners would work with people who want to find ways of exercising voluntary control over ailments that, among other things, may be related to stress or are tied to psychosomatic problems.

The new chairman is a specialist in the areas of cognitive processes, experimental and statistical design and pain control among the elderly. He has a B.A. degree from Clemson University and a Ph.D. from the University of Notre Dame.

He taught two years at Indiana University and was on a National Science Foundation post-doctoral fellowship for two years at Ohio State University before coming to UW-SP in 1979.

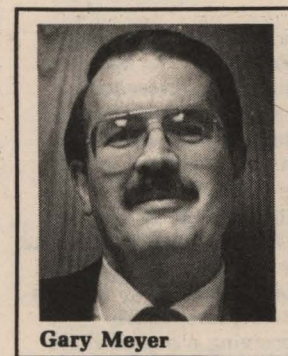

Schwiager has been active in faculty governance at UW-SP and has served as assistant dean of graduate studies under a special internship program for administrators; chairman of the review committee for the UW System Undergraduate Teaching Improvement Grant Program; and an editorial reviewer for various professional journals. He has published more than 30 scholarly papers.

In 1985, he was one of the two first recipients of awards from the Academy of Letters and Science at UW-SP in recognition of work in promoting the value of a liberal education. ■

Ten given professorships

Ten members of UW-SP's faculty have been promoted by the UW System Board of Regents to the rank of professor — highest title for a member of the teaching staff.

They are Richard Behm and Daniel Dieterich of English, Gary Meyer of geography/geology, Jeffrey Olen of philosophy, Dennis Riley of political science, William Kirby of education, David Beadle of music, William G. (Pete) Kelley of communication, Aga Razvi and Stanley Szczytko of natural resources. All of them had been granted tenure in regent action in previous years. ■

Gary Meyer

Planning specialist receives promotion

Gary C. Meyer, whose specialty areas include urban and regional planning, will become the new chairman of the geography/geology department at UW-SP.

Meyer, 46, will begin his three-year term in August, succeeding Thomas Detwyler who declined to continue in the administrative post after holding it since joining the university faculty in 1981.

Meyer holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Idaho, in his native state, a master's from Southern Illinois University and a Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota.

He began his teaching career 22 years ago at Georgia State University in Atlanta and later taught at the University of Minnesota part of the time while he was pursuing his doctorate there. Meyer joined the faculty of UW-Superior in 1973 and advanced to the chairmanship of the geoscience department. While there, he was involved in a research project for UW Extension related to the economic, social and environmental impact of non-resident property owners in northern Wisconsin. He also served as a visiting lecturer at the neighboring University of Minnesota-Duluth. ■

Million-dollar collection

Professor Robert Freckmann's enthusiasm for gathering and preserving vascular plants has made UW-SP $1 million richer.

Not too shabby when you consider that his development of a herbarium for UW-SP was done in his spare time.

Whenever he's on a trip, he invariably brings home specimens of plants for the university, and he has his students trained to do the same thing. He has done much of the cataloging on weekends.

Today, Freckmann's collection is second only in size in Wisconsin to its counterpart at UW-Madison. Moreover, it includes one of the finest assortments anywhere of U.S. grasses.

The facility has emerged as an important appendage of UW-SP's Museum of Natural History, Department of Biology and College of Natural Resources. It is housed in a room on the fourth floor of the Natural Resources Building.

After using guidelines from the International Association of Plant Taxonomists to place monetary value on his facility, even the professor is in awe of the dollar amount attached to his life's work. About 130,000 specimens are worth an average of $8 apiece.

Travel costs incurred during the collection process are taken into consideration, he explains. Therefore, vascular plants he and his wife, Sally, gathered several years ago when they explored life in Eskimo villages may be among the most valuable.

But the real worth of the herbarium, in Freckmann's estimation, is the data base and research opportunities it provides and the influence of its presence on his best students who assist him with curatorial duties. Work in the facility has been a passport for numerous students to gain prestigious experience.

"We've had a whole slew of students at the Smithsonian as interns in the grass herbarium," the professor explains.

UW-SP has had a foot in the door at the national museum in Washington, D.C., since one of his former students, Mary Sangrey, joined its herbarium staff several years ago and, among other duties, was charged with coordinating an internship program.

Freckmann believes his approach as curator of the UW-SP facility is "still sufficiently classical" which appeals to scientists at the Smithsonian. "Besides, they like the work ethic of Midwesterners."

Ties created between Freckmann's students and Smithsonian staff members have resulted in UW-SP receiving gifts from the museum including a rare historical collection of native American grasses. The 800 specimens were mounted between 1875 and 1930.

Those items aren't the only parts of the collection dating from the last century. The professor recalls that upon his arrival as a new member of the biology department in 1968, he discovered 1,000 very old mounted plants stashed away in a cabinet. They had been collected by C. H. Sylvester, one of the original faculty members of the Stevens Point Normal School, who served the institution from 1894 to 1900.

Sylvester apparently was a very serious botanist — in addition to being a student of literature and physical education — who maintained contact with some of the country's leading plant collectors. A few of the specimens he acquired date from shortly after the Civil War.

With his own specimens and those of Sylvester's, Freckmann had the basis for a herbarium. "I'll never forget my first Christmas here. I decided I liked Stevens Point and might stay, so I started to work on this project. I bought my supplies out of my own pocket and used my apartment for laying out all my work. I could do that because I was single then."

As it turned out, even if he and his wife had been married at the time, there probably would have been no problem with the mess. She's a plant collector, too. The former Sally Kauss of Tigerton had mounted some plants for Professor George Becker when she was his student at UW-SP, which was before her husband joined the faculty.

Today, Freckmann estimates he has personally collected about one-fourth of the specimens in the herbarium and collected other plants that were used to trade for another fourth. Donations from other institutions, museums and individuals plus plants found by students account for the remainder of the collection.

The plants are mounted on large, heavy sheets of stiff, all-rag, acid-free paper and stored in a room crammed full of rows of metal cabinets in which moth balls have been placed to ward off beetles and book lice, the most prevalent insects in places of this kind in northern climates.

A specimen may include several sheets hinged together with packets of loose flowers, fruits, seeds and so forth. Or it may be large fruits, cones or stems kept in separate boxes and cross-referenced to the mounted specimen.

"What we do is a lot different from collecting things like stamps. You don't stop with just one," Freckmann explains.

Developing a herbarium is like soliciting public opinion, he continues. "You don't save one sample or ask one person." In the collection of Wisconsin flora, he says he "feels comfortable" with about 50 examples and "I feel real good if I have 100 or more."

In addition to specimens mounted on paper, Freckmann has overseen the preparation of about 2,000 jars of fruits and seeds, about 200 cone collections, a few hundred pollen slides and miscellaneous materials stored in alcohol or other preservatives.

Freckmann has devoted most of his own collecting to the flora of central and northern Wisconsin. Work in this area is nearing completion, and the specimens for this region are more extensive than at any other herbarium. He has used many of the duplicate items he has gathered for swaps; hence, one of the reasons the U.S. grass collection here is so highly touted.

Speaking of grass, there are any number of specimens that could be smoked. The professor laughs when he tells visitors to his bailiwick that students in his botany classes are always required to locate, identify and mount a certain number of plants. "I tell them I don't care where they get them, so I have any number that are identified as marijuana and grown in the student's room."

Though plants he gathered in the arctic region may be his most valuable, the ones which are most highly prized by the professor include some very rare grasses that were found in the state in the last 45 years. There are numerous examples of endangered plants including a coastal plain orchid and a tubercled orchid which are remnants of the end of the last ice age.

Freckmann's work has been complemented by the development of a collection of mosses by Professor Frank Bowers. Its largest component is a set of specimens from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Mexico and Costa Rica. "This can be considered the center for research and data on Wisconsin mosses."

Incidentally, the professor's wife has developed her own collection of about 5,000 specimens of mosses which are kept at their home. There's no getting away from a herbarium environment for Freckmann.

A native of Milwaukee, Freckmann says that since he was 10 he has pursued with vigor any subject that captured his interest. When he was a freshman at UW-Milwaukee, a brother sought assistance on a leaf collection. The future professor was hooked on plants. He subsequently landed a position as assistant curator of botany at the Milwaukee Public Museum before joining the biology faculty at UW-SP. He now holds a Ph.D. from Iowa State University and is credited with more than 35 articles on plant taxonomy (identification and classification) in professional journals.

He has authored two books that contain scientific material which is presented in topics of interest to laymen. With former student Steven Krause, he has penned "In Search of the Wild Dewberry: Making Beverages, Teas and Wild Syrups from Wild Ingredients" and "Wine from the Wild."

Now that his Wisconsin collection is about complete, Freckmann is looking ahead to new projects in the herbarium. His attention is focusing on plants of the tropics. ■

Retirements

Accolades for Lois Low

Mrs. Lois Low, who retired in January as secretary to the chancellor of the UW-SP, received the Carolyn Rolfson Sargis Award during a reception held in May in her honor.

Mrs. Low, who lives with her husband, Jack, at 6167 County Highway A, Amherst, is the third person to receive the award since it was established in 1985. Named for a Park Ridge woman who served UW-SP more than 40 years, most of the time as business manager, the recognition acknowledges outstanding contributions to the school by members of the classified civil service staff.

During a presentation ceremony, her former boss, Philip Marshall, said she "set the standard" for a chancellor's secretary during her seven years in his office.

In her acceptances, she called for greater public support for higher education and expressed regret that student costs have risen to their present levels and that politicians have increasing influence on campuses.

Her career at the university spanned 23 years in the offices of the dean of men and dean of women, vice president for student affairs and assistant to the chancellor. She became secretary to the chancellor two months prior to the arrival of Marshall. ■

Eleven faculty members mark retirements

Eleven faculty members who have served the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point a total of 243 years have retired so far in 1987.

They are:

- Henry Runke, professor of art, 34 years.
- Hazel Koskenlinna, professor of English, 26 years.
- Robert Krueger, assistant professor of health, physical education, recreation and athletics, 25 years.
- John Weiler, associate professor of mathematics, 24 years.
- Wacław Soroka, professor of history, 23 years.
- Dan Houlihan, associate professor of communication, 23 years.
- Alice Clawson, professor of health, physical education, recreation and athletics, 21 years.
- Virginia Kemp Fish, professor of sociology and anthropology, 20 years.
- Winthrop Difford, professor of geology and geography, 19 years.
- Allen F. Barrows, director of the library, 18 years.
- Jay Cravens, professor of forestry, 11 years.

Runke, who came to campus after three years as art supervisor for Antigo Public Schools, was chairman of the art department for 23 years. A specialist in art metals, he created the James H. Albertson and William C. Hansen Medallions given by UW-SP as among its highest awards, and the ceremonial chancellor's medallion and academic mace used for graduations and convocations. He drafted the proposal for UW-SP's art major nearly 30 years ago.

Koskenlinna, who has an incurable wanderlust, enlivened her classes with stories of her travels to all parts of the world. She is a former chairman of the English department and before joining the university was a officer staffer for the U.S. Army and U.S. Air Force in South Korea, a personnel specialist for the State of Wisconsin and a French and English teacher at high schools in Marshfield and Racine. She is a past president of the Wisconsin Federation of Business and Professional Women and received its "Woman of the Year" Award in the mid-1970s.

Krueger served as a high school teacher and coach at Columbus, La Crosse Central and Janesville Senior High Schools before coming to UW-SP. He was the university's athletic director from 1968 to 1976 and its men's basketball coach from 1962 to 1975. His team advanced to NAIA District 14 playoffs in 1969 and 1971.

Weiler, who was one of the architects of the mathematics education curriculum, taught at two parochial high schools in the Green Bay area and at Crivitz, Elroy, Kiel and Union Grove high schools before joining the university faculty. He has been active in the development of the Central Wisconsin Mathematics League.

Soroka, who founded and directed the UW-SP Russian and East Central European studies program, gave an additional dimension to many of the classes he taught as he described his own harrowing experiences as a leader in the Polish Resistance Movement during World War II. After fleeing Poland with his wife, he lived in Belgium and France studying law and serving as secretary general of the Polish Peasant Party for Western Europe. In New York City, he was chief executive officer of the International Peasant Union, and after additional study at Indiana University, he was a librarian at the University of Illinois before coming to Stevens Point. He was instrumental in drawing attention to the richness of the Polish culture, thereby bringing ethnic pride to thousands of central Wisconsin residents.

Houlihan was an elementary teacher, operator of a nursing home in Valley Stream, N.Y., when he and his wife decided to make a new life in a small community in the Midwest — for the sake of their nine children. One more child was born after they arrived in Stevens Point. He taught briefly on the elementary level, then had a public relations position at Sentry Insurance before being hired to develop a news, publications and public relations office at UW-SP. For the past 16 years, he has taught communication and journalism classes in addition to serving as faculty adviser to editors of "The Pointer."

Clawson served the UW System a total of 32 years, first at the Eau Claire campus and from 1966 at UW-SP. When she was a new faculty member here, she helped initiate the newly established physical education major. As she prepared to retire she was involved in the development and implementation of the new wellness major. Clawson has been UW-SP's director of women's physical education, coordinator of professional studies for men and women preparing to become physical education teachers and was head of the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics from 1980 to 1985.

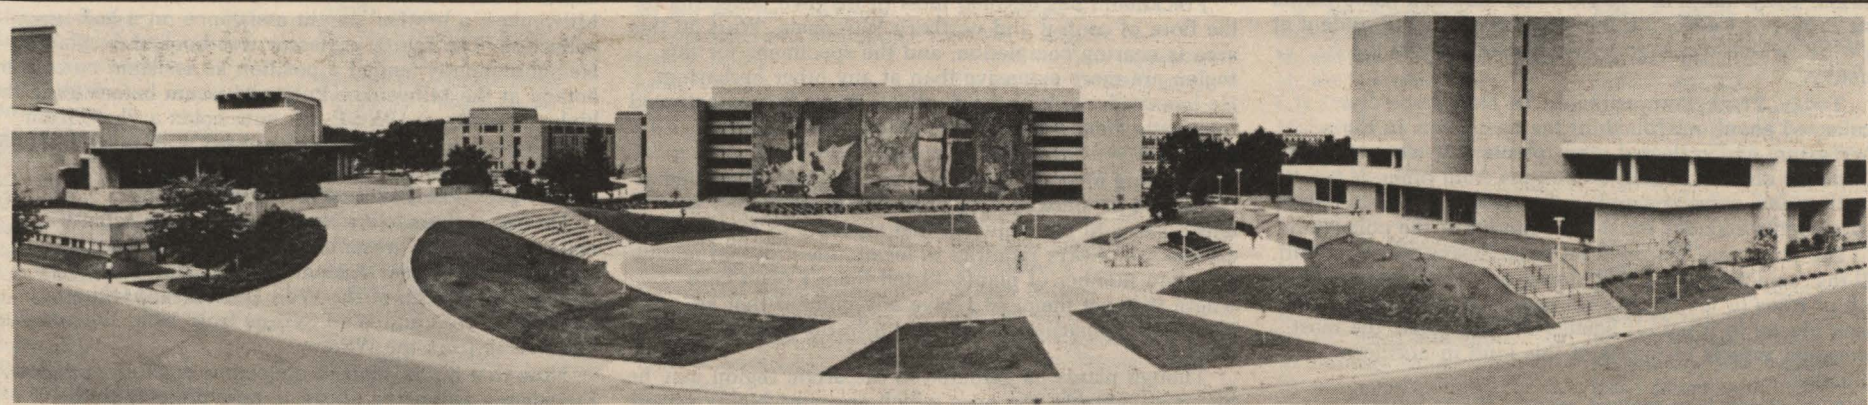

Fish received several awards for excellence in teaching and in scholarly research at the university as an expert on contributions women have made to American society. She was in public relations work for the U. S.

Office of Military Government in Germany at the close of World War II and later a faculty member at Central Michigan University before coming to Stevens Point. In 1980, she was one of 15 scholars selected nationally to participate in a two-month Research Institute on Women's Public Lives at the University of Kansas.

Difford is an oceanographer who developed the first offerings in that subject within the geography/geology department. He came to UW-SP to serve as dean of the graduate program and director of the summer session and served in those capacities for 10 years. His previous experience was on the faculties of Dickinson College in Pennsylvania where he established the geology major and was the first chairman of his department; at the University of Rhode Island where he was one of the planners of the first national meeting for educators focusing on a proposed federally-funded Sea Grant Program; and at the University of Bridgeport where he was coordinator of graduate programs in the College of Letters and Science.

Barrows is an alumnus of UW-SP, class of 1949, who operated a restaurant, The Pal, in downtown Stevens Point, until 1967 when he decided to make a career change. He attended graduate school at Indiana University in library science and returned to his hometown to join the library staff of his alma mater. He was director of public services for most of his career, stepping up in 1986 to the position of director of the university library.

Cravens served for 28 years in the U.S. Forest Service and rose to the position of associate deputy chief for resources before retiring and starting a second career as a faculty member at UW-SP. His experience as a federal employee included being a forester in the southwestern part of the country, supervisor of the Coconino National Forest in Arizona, director of the Division of Flood Prevention and River Basin Program and regional forester in charge of the forest system's 20-state Eastern Region, based in Milwaukee. When he was deputy chief for resources, he was responsible for all natural resources, including timber management, on the 190-million acre tract of national forests. He had a $1 billion budget. He brought all of those experiences into his classroom for a decade and was honored several times for excellence in teaching and in support of the Society of American Foresters. ■

Curriculum Development

Fashion, interior design unit started

A new academic division of fashion and interior design has been established at UW-SP as part of the reorganization of the home economics program.

The changes, approved by the UW System Board of Regents, are intended to provide visibility and nurture further development of six diverse majors formerly under the administrative arm of the School of Home Economics.

Mary Ann Baird has been appointed head of the Division of Fashion and Interior Design, and Diane Libby has taken over leadership of the School of Home Economics. They have been assigned to half-time teaching and half-time administrative responsibilities with the titles of associate deans and unit heads.

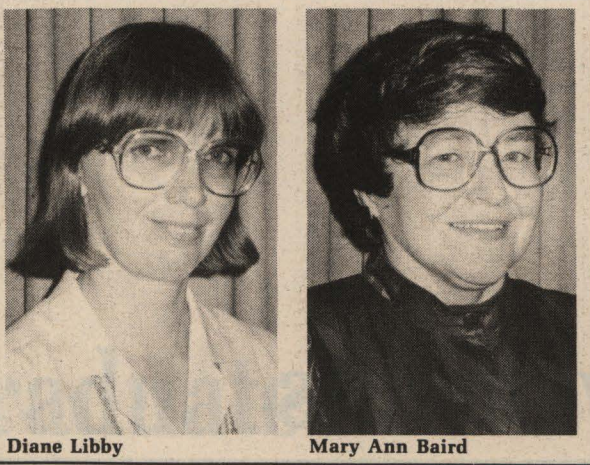

Before reorganization, the School of Home Economics had a full-time administrator. Billie Lou Sands held the post two years before taking a special assignment in the chancellor's office, after which retired administrator Mary Croft was asked to temporarily head the school.

A faculty committee recommending the reorganization noted in a report that, "We are aware of the vast changes in technology and life-styles which require new and sometimes risky solutions to problems...In keeping with our tradition, we hope to meet the challenge of a changing world by providing, for our students and community, a service which will help to improve the quality of life and the management of the resources of the state of Wisconsin."

Joan North, dean of the College of Professional Studies of which the fashion and interior design and home economics units are a part, said she encouraged the reorganization because it was obvious to her when she arrived about two years ago that "the quality and reputation of the home economics programs were less than the quality and reputation of its individual faculty."

The new School of Home Economics has 13 faculty and academic staff members serving about 350 students majoring in early childhood education, home economics education, dietetics, and food service management. Master's degree programs are offered in home economics education and nutrition/food science.

Libby said immediate plans of her faculty colleagues involve updating their existing curriculum "to make it more in tune with career fields," particularly as it relates to early childhood education and dietetics. The two graduate offerings will be revised so, for example, in the nutrition and food service program students will be eligible to become registered dietitians while they complete their master's degree.

The school operates a cafeteria on the first floor of the Professional Studies Building in which students in food-related programs receive practical experience. The facility serving the public will undergo an expansion of seating, Libby said. Any additional profits from food sales will be used for the purchase of "state of the art equipment," she added.

In the same building, an observation booth will be installed in the Gesell Institute for the Study of Early Childhood for use by early childhood education majors.

Eleven faculty members in the Division of Fashion and Interior Design are serving about 300 students majoring in fashion merchandising and interior design.

The curriculum revisions to be done in this area will include the development of new offerings in computer-aided lighting technology and design.

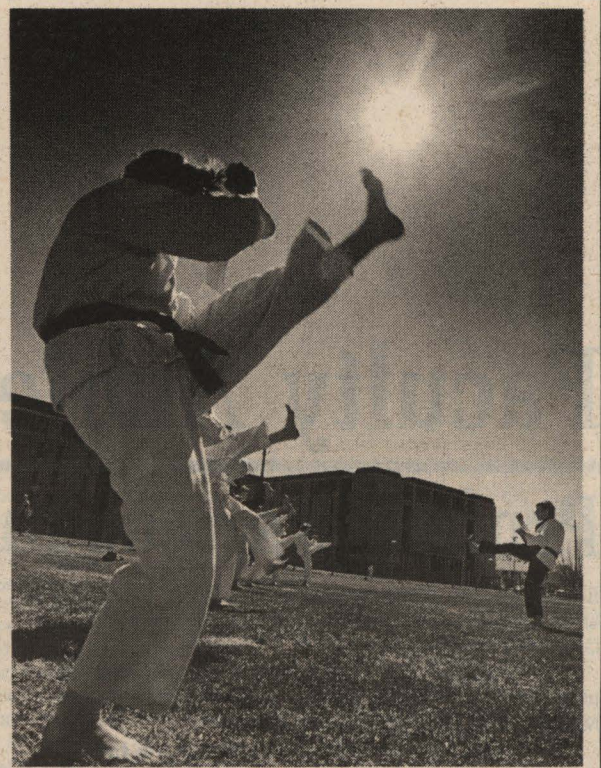

Additional financial support will be given to the Historic Costume Collection so its 2,000 pieces of apparel and accessories can be utilized more for instructional purposes. The collection is among the largest of its kind in Wisconsin with items dating from the early 1800s. Students will gain experience in the development of exhibitions by using the items for displays that will be open to the public.

In a related matter, usage of the Agnes Jones Gallery on the first floor of the Professional Studies Building for various kinds of exhibitions will be expanded.

Baird also reports that involvement between her students and faculty and representatives of business and industry will continue to be emphasized.

A native of Minneapolis, Libby has two degrees from the University of Minnesota and a Ph.D. in nutrition from the University of Tennessee. She has taught in public schools in Millinocket, Me., at the University of Minnesota and at Mid State Technical and Adult Institute in Wisconsin Rapids before joining UW-SP in 1977.

Baird, whose hometown is Greenwood, holds degrees from UW-Stout and UW-SP and has had prior teaching experience at John Edwards High School in Port Edwards and Thorp High School. She joined the university faculty in 1962 and besides her teaching was involved in residence hall development and then as assistant campus planner, from 1969 to 1975. She most recently has been coordinator of the fashion merchandising and interior design programs and has been the leader of five summer study tours on architecture and design to England and the European continent. ■

Classes in karate can be taken as part of the health promotion wellness program

Wellness/health promotion program fully operational

UW-SP has received final approval to establish a new program in health promotion/wellness.

When it becomes fully operational this fall, there will be nothing like it in higher education because of the multi-disciplinary components, according to John Munson, head of the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics.

"In view of the fact the wellness movement got its start on this campus, it's appropriate we should offer the most sophisticated, the best program in the country," Munson added.

Students will have opportunities to specialize in child and family, gerontology, nutrition, psychology, social foundations of health, sport specialist and youth agency programming and camp management. There are separate course requirements for each of these areas.

In addition, students will be encouraged to earn minors either in business, communication, gerontology, health education, nutrition, psychology, recreation, sociology or youth agency programming and camp management.

Wellness and health promotion is an option within the physical education major. The second option in the major leads students to certification as kindergarten through high school physical education teachers.

The new program builds on courses that have been added to the curriculum in the wellness area since the early 1980s. Student interest in them has grown dramatically, Munson reports, and last fall about half of the 360 majors in the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics indicated they intended to complete a health promotion/wellness option. By this fall, Munson estimates about 60 percent of 400 majors will be in the new offerings.

One of the big attractions, he says, is the fact there are good job opportunities in the field and their numbers are expected to increase as the nation's population pays more attention to physical fitness.

New jobs are being created in such places as hospitals, YMCAs, corporations and human service agencies, many with starting salaries in the $18,000 to $22,000 range. "We even have graduates running wellness weekends at the ski slopes they manage in Colorado," says Munson.

Part of the impetus for the jobs is the spiraling cost of health care. "The logical thing to do in response is to work on prevention," the professor emphasizes. "It's been said that Americans can prevent at least 50 percent of major diseases just by changing their habits."

Munson expects UW-SP to continue in a national leadership role in wellness in part because it will be able to hire four to five new faculty specifically prepared in this field. That is possible, he explains, because of anticipated retirements of professors in the general areas of physical education within the next three to four years.

Also added will be several new courses plus a full semester internship program. Students will be required to have an overall cumulative grade point of 2.75 to be accepted as an intern.

Munson says that "With what we have going for us, we're looking forward to being the premier place for training future health promotion specialists." ■

UW-SP establishes four new minors

New minors in child and family studies, international resource management, nutrition and camp and youth agency administration have been added to UW-SP's curriculum.

The UW System Board of Regents approved them at the request of the Stevens Point faculty.

Child and family studies is a new offering in the School of Home Economics, representing a grouping of existing courses into a formalized structure. With preparation in this field, graduates will be eligible for positions to help individuals or families "reach their potential," according to the planners.

International resource management is an interdisciplinary program to prepare professionals as providers of assistance on environmental matters in developing countries. A curriculum has been established to "sensitize students of various intents to global resource issues, enable language training and foreign experience, instill cultural perspectives and broaden aspiration and career choices at home and abroad," its architects wrote.

The nutrition minor is an extension of the university's long-established major in dietetics. Students have options to pursue an emphasis either in general dietetics or community nutrition. But Diane Libby, who heads the School of Home Economics, says there have been requests from faculty members who are interested in adding a nutrition component.

For example, faculty members in wellness, sociology and psychology have begun encouraging students who will be in counseling roles to gain a broader background in nutrition.

The camp and youth agency administration and programming minor has been developed through the cooperation of the College of Natural Resources, the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, the department of psychology and the department of sociology. It is open to majors from all four disciplines but is administered by the College of Natural Resources.

It is aimed at providing basic learning in environmental education, program planning and administration related to youth agencies and camps.

People wishing specific information about the new programs are being encouraged to write to the Office of Admissions, Park Student Services Building, UW-Stevens Point, 54481. ■

Forestry program reaccredited

Accreditation of UW-SP's forestry program has been continued for five years by the Society of American Foresters.

The university has had the endorsement of the national organization for approximately 10 years.

Daniel Trainer, dean of the College of Natural Resources, said a team of evaluators expressed concern in 1981 that the student-faculty ratio in the program was too high. Consequently, several new faculty members who have expertise in diverse aspects of forestry were added.

With the new staff, the College of Natural Resources has been able to establish its Fire Science Center, one of few facilities of its kind in the United States plus specialized offerings in forest recreation and urban forestry.

"We were told that we have a relevant program for the 1990s," Trainer reported.

Though student enrollment in the undergraduate forestry program has declined here in recent years, it still ranks number one in size nationally. About 400 students have declared themselves as forestry majors, down from an all-time high of more than 500 in the early 1980s.

The drop here, though significant, was not as sharp as at other universities, Trainer said. Across the country, enrollments in all natural resources offerings have declined about 40 percent in recent years. At Stevens Point, student population in the total natural resources program, which also is larger than all others, has been remaining constant. ■

Students get software

UW-SP will begin providing many of its students with computer software this fall in a program billed as a model in America's collegiate scene.

Chancellor Philip Marshall signed an agreement in July to purchase rights to use SmartWare products from the Innovative Software, Inc. of Lenexa, Kan. at a cost of $50,000 per year.

The expenditures will be made from reserves in the textbook rental fund and will not involve additional fees to students in the immediate future. They cover the cost of using the software on every one of the 700 to 800 computers on campus (those in laboratories for students as well as in faculty and administrative offices).

Marshall said the purchase will further enhance UW-SP's reputation as "a leader in the use of computers and software in higher education." ■

Faculty Achievements

Professors recognized for teaching, research, service

Eight winners of the top awards given to its faculty by UW-SP were announced at the spring commencement ceremony on May 17.

The recipients are Said Abubakr, Frieda Bridgeman, John Droske, Michael Gross, Leslie McClain, James Moore, Jack Reed and Karen Studd.

The University Awards Committee made the selections after seeking nominations from academic departments and student leaders.

In addition to the commendations they received at the commencement, the winners will be honored guests at the academic convocation in September and at a luncheon that will follow. Their photographs will be featured in a new display in the University Center that is being developed by staff members in the Division of University Relations.

They also will receive $200 in prizes and plaques.

Mrs. Bridgeman, professor of theatre arts, was given the University Service Award for her longstanding leadership in promoting the cause of educational drama throughout the state. During many of the summers since her arrival on campus in 1965, she has directed a Library ShoWagon that has involved high school, university undergraduate and graduate students in drama productions for children. The ShoWagon has been taken throughout a large section of Wisconsin.

The University Scholar Awards went to Droske and Moore.

An accomplished ballet dancer and choreographer, Moore was cited for his role in the development of the dance program at UW-SP, which is the only accredited offering of its kind in the state. The award also acknowledges the extensive historical research Moore has done in preparation for the ballets he has mounted here. He joined the faculty in 1975 after serving as artist director of the Royal Swedish Ballet in Stockholm and as ballet master of the American Ballet Theatre in New York City.

Droske, who came to UW-SP in 1982, is a member of the chemistry faculty who has done extensive research in polymers. He recently published an article in a professional journal announcing his discovery of a plastic material that has capacity for high electrical conductivity. He said his finding is significant in that it holds promise for the creation of lightweight batteries.

The University Teaching Excellence Award went to Said Abubakr, assistant professor in the paper science department where he has been a member since 1985; Michael Gross, professor of environmental interpretation and part of the College of Natural Resources faculty since 1977; Leslie McClain, assistant professor of education who has served as a reading specialist on campus since 1985; Jack Reed, professor of chemistry and chairman of his department, on campus since 1967; and Karen Studd, since 1983 an instructor of dance in the theatre arts department. ■

Writers win prestigious fellowships

Governor gives $5,000 to Lawlor

A faculty member at UW-SP is one of three state writers who received $5,000 literary fellowships in January from Governor Tommy Thompson.

William Lawlor, an associate professor of English, received the award for three stories he has written and published over the last three years. The fellowships were sponsored by the Wisconsin Arts Board and presented by the governor in ceremonies at the WHA Television Studio in Vilas Hall on the UW-Madison campus.

Seventy-one writers competed for the prizes, winners of which were chosen by a national panel of judges.

Lawlor's award-winning stories are historical and anthropological, focusing on a Vietnam veteran, the voyages of Columbus and the 1965 U.S. intervention in the civil war in the Dominican Republic. A dramatization of one of them will be presented at the televised ceremonies which will be taped for later broadcast on public television.

The professor plans to complete a collection of his stories for publication as a book. ■

Clark is honorary secretary

William L. M. H. Clark, an English professor at UW-SP, is the new honorary secretary of the state branch of The Oxford Society. The worldwide organization is comprised of former students at Oxford University in England who were members of the Oxford Union. In 1976-77, Clark was part of the union at St. Peter's College at Oxford, where he studied theology. In his new position, Clark will arrange social events to bring together society members living in Wisconsin and promote the school's scholarship program. ■

Hettler cited for wellness work

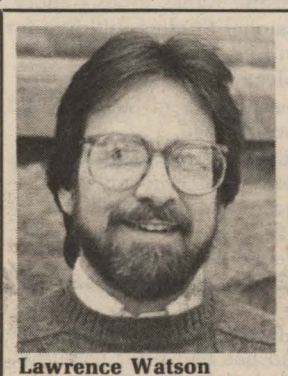

The American College Health Association has honored Dr. Bill Hettler, director of health services at UW-SP, for his work in promoting the concept of wellness among his colleagues across the country.

The Edward Hitchcock Award was given to Hettler during the association's 65th annual meeting in May in Chicago for "outstanding contributions to the field of college and university health."

Hettler, a staff member at UW-SP for 15 years, was commended for providing "the first insight into the wellness concept for many association members," his citation states. ■

Educators honor Nancy Kaufman

Nancy J. Kaufman, associate professor of education at UW-SP, has received the annual award for outstanding performance and service in the field of learning disabilities from the State Council for Exceptional Children. ■

Watson receives $20,000

Lawrence Watson, associate professor of English at UW-SP, has received a $20,000 creative writing fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts.

An independent agency of the federal government, the National Endowment recently awarded about 100 fellowships to writers across the United States who work in the areas of fiction, poetry and other creative prose.

Watson's fellowship will make it possible for him to devote at least this summer and next summer to writing his fourth novel. "I received the money with no strings attached," he explained.

His book is about a young man who falls in love with his father's mistress.

The work is expected to be "quite lengthy," according to the author. "I know what's going to happen for the next week, but that's it." He writes six days per week — anywhere from 15 minutes to six hours each day.

Watson, who was on a sabbatical from his teaching last spring, has maintained a journal of his project for future use in developing a course in the UW-SP English department on writing novels.

In 1983, he received a $2,000 grant from the Wisconsin Arts Board to support his writing. The grant was earmarked for the completion of about 12 stories for submission to various publications. The topics ranged from experiences of a baseball player, a child who is kidnapped by his father following a divorce of the parents, and a man in bed with a fever recalling his life.

Some of the works later appeared in "Modern Review," "Black Warrior Review" and the "Great River Review."

Watson's first novel came off the presses of the Charles Scribner's Sons Publishing House seven years ago. "In a Dark Time" is about the murder of three girl students in a small, Midwestern town and the effects the killings have on the community.

In a review of the book, Robert Wells, writing in the Milwaukee Journal, observed that, "...a first novel that demonstrates that we have another name to add to the limited but growing list of talented Wisconsin writers." ■

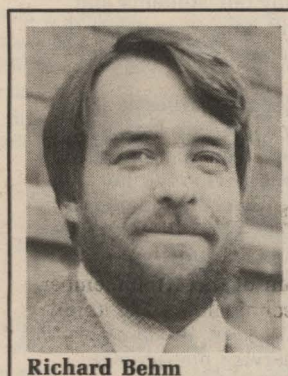

Fabiano designs for Art Center

Daniel Fabiano, professor of art at UW-SP, has been commissioned to design a piece of neon art for installation in the Milwaukee Performing Art Center. ■

Haney leads broadcasting unit

James Haney, a member of the communication faculty at UW-SP is the new chairman of the education committee of the Wisconsin Broadcasters Association.

Haney is a specialist in radio and is adviser to the student station, WWSP-FM and has administrative duties for Wisconsin Public Radio's regional office for central Wisconsin, which is headquartered at this university. ■

Behm's poem rated among 'the best'

A poem by a professor at UW-SP has been selected for inclusion in an anthology of "the best" essays, short stories, poems and art work published in the United States in recent years.

Richard Behm's work entitled "A Message for Summer in the Suburbs" will appear in "Editors' Choice II" which will be published this year by The Spirit That Moves Us Press of Iowa City, Iowa.

Editors of literary magazines in the United States were invited to recommend what in their estimation were the finest pieces of work they have published recently. From a pool of 2,400 submissions, adjudicators of the materials for "Editors' Choice II" made the final selections.

The professor's poem had originally appeared in "Nit and Wit," a Chicago arts magazine. Behm refers to it as a "political poem" which makes comparisons between people living in contentment in this country and others who are experiencing repression elsewhere in the world.

Behm is a writing specialist in UW-SP's English department who also serves as director of the Academic Achievement Center which includes the Writing Lab. ■

Rossmiller receives award

A retired UW-SP professor who has been called the "father" of gifted and talented education in the state received one of UW-Extension's top awards at a recognition banquet Dec. 3 in Madison.

Robert Rossmiller, longtime professor of education, was given the Wisconsin Idea Award in recognition of his pioneer work in the field and his commitment to extension programs. The other recipient of UW-Extension's highest recognition was the Wisconsin Power and Light Co.

Rossmiller was the first chairman of the State Advisory Committee on Gifted and Talented which was founded in 1970. During the course of several years, he has worked throughout Wisconsin, assisting administrators and faculty with curriculum development.

In addition to his 21 years of teaching education courses at UW-SP, he instructed more than 100 off-campus credit courses and inservice workshops in more than 50 state communities. ■

Trout Unlimited honors Heaton

Jack R. Heaton, for 21 years a fishery and water science specialist in the College of Natural Resources at UW-SP, has received the "Educator of the Year" Award from the State Council of Trout Unlimited.

Besides his work in the classroom preparing men and women for careers that, in many cases, have been involved in the management of fish habitat, Heaton has conducted workshops for professionals and advocates for improvement of cold water fishing sources. He organized the first international workshop on trout stream habitat improvement in 1978. ■

Helen Heaton given English award

Helen Heaton of the UW-SP English faculty is the 1987 winner of the Chisholm Award for meritorious service to her profession.

The recognition is sponsored by the Wisconsin Council of Teachers of English. UW-SP professors who have won the award earlier are Lee Burrell, an expert on school censorship, and Mary Croft, a promoter of writing and founder of the UW-SP Writing Lab. ■

Graham leads papermaking group

Larry L. Graham, who heads UW-SP's Paper Science department, is the new chairman of the 1,100-member Lakes States Section of The Technical Association of The Pulp and Paper Industry (TAPPI).

The organization serves professional scientists and engineers employed in the paper and allied industries within Wisconsin and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. ■

Harris is 'member of the year'

The Midwest Society of Electron Microscopists has given its "Member of the Year Award" to Professor Joseph Harris of UW-SP's biology department.

The citation, presented during the group's annual meeting at Chicago Medical School, acknowledges Harris' work in developing specialized continuing education offerings for society members in the fields of cell biology, pathology, technology and material science.

The professor is a past president of the society and its former life science director.

UW-SP offers a course in which biology students are trained to use electron microscopes. Harris, who teaches the course, says it is uncommon for an institution of higher education to have such an offering on the undergraduate level. ■

Amen to Pearson's achievements

The National Clergy Economic Education Foundation has commended leaders of its programs in two states — including John C. Pearson of Stevens Point — for developing "the most notable" offerings of their kind in the country.

Pearson and Jon P. Gunnemann of Atlanta, Ga., were cited in the most recent edition of the foundation's publication for their work in arranging and conducting conferences for men and women who staff religious organizations. ■

Fang holds Methodist leadership posts

An administrator at UW-SP has been chosen to lead delegations of state Methodists in 1988 to one national and one international meeting of their religious body.

Marcus Fang, who directs the foreign student programs at UW-SP, will head a group of 32 representatives to one of five jurisdictional conferences to be held in the United States primarily for the purpose of choosing new Methodist bishops. The meeting of the North Central Jurisdiction will be in July of 1988 in DeKalb, Ill.

Next April, he will be in charge of a 16-member delegation to the general conference of world Methodists to be held in St. Louis, Mo. The 1,000 participants at that event will chart the future of their church for the next four years, discussing everything from budget matters to new programs and thrusts, personnel rules, agency services and so forth. ■

UW-SP establishes network for 'gifted'

State Superintendent Herbert J. Grover awarded $20,000 to UW-SP in January to use in establishing a Network for Gifted and Talented Education.

"We are delighted to assist UW-Stevens Point in the area of gifted and talented programming. Many of the pioneering activities in the state for gifted and talented children and their teachers originated here," Grover said.

The grant will finance several projects including a national survey and the development of a videotape series.

Janet Boyle of the UW-SP faculty has been appointed director of the network. An appendage of the UW-SP School of Education and College of Professional Studies, the network will coordinate programs on campus for the gifted and talented, serve as a clearinghouse for inquiries and materials on gifted and talented education, and carry out tasks from the grants it receives. The university reports the Department of Public Instruction grant is the first of several anticipated sources of outside funding to help maintain the network.

The network office, located in Room 468 of the Professional Studies Building at UW-SP, will be maintained by Charlene Laurent, program director. She and Boyle will initially conduct a telephone survey of the other 49 state directors of gifted education. They will identify legislation, funding levels and sources, state services, teacher training, state standards on definition, identification, programming, and evaluation of other gifted and talented programs.

A report on those findings and recommendations will be made to DPI. In addition, a series of videotapes will be produced for use in staff development. The tapes will brief teachers and school administrators on identifying and serving gifted and talented children. ■

Students used sophisticated, new equipment to monitor the various body responses their classmates had to exercise. The experiments were done in UW-SP's new exercise physiology and rehabilitation lab.

Exercise lab enhances wellness offerings

UW-SP formally opened a new exercise physiology and rehabilitation laboratory in April to complement expanded offerings in the field of health promotion/wellness.

The facility contains nearly $150,000 worth of equipment and improvements in an area adjacent to Quandt Gymnasium. Therein, students will learn how to measure body responses ranging from muscle stress to lung volume and capacity.

John Munson, head of the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, said the lab is one of the best facilities of its kind on a state campus.

But it wouldn't have materialized, he explained, without a $90,000 grant that was received from the UW System as part of a laboratory modernization project.

The science base for wellness and physical education programs is based in this lab, "that is why it is so important we now have a state of the art facility," Munson reported.

The lab contains a Cybex system for rehabilitation of joints and muscles. Wellness majors are gaining experience by using it to provide therapy to UW-SP athletes as well as any members of the student body who seek assistance in their recoveries from various kinds of injuries.

The Cybex equipment enhances the instruction in several courses including exercise physiology and care and prevention of athletic injuries.

There are other machines used to measure people's lung volume/capacity and gas expiration, their aerobic capacity and body response to exercise. Some of the devices are incorporated with stress testing on tread mills, and one stand-alone unit has computerized components which monitor heart rates.

"We can measure just about every body response there is," according to Munson. "Our students are really benefitting from opportunities to do tests and research that they could not do before. This is really helping our program."

To assure the availability of having controlled air quality in the lab, a special air conditioning system was installed.

Wellness students will have a similar lab — named the health enhancement center, to conduct activities related to what is being done in the their exercise physiology and rehabilitation projects.

To date, about $80,000 in machinery for resistive exercise, such as weight lifting, has been installed in a health club-type atmosphere of the center. Located off the Quandt Gym balcony, it has mirrored walls and a sound system. A nutrition assessment service and fitness-testing booth will be operated there to analyze body fat and test cardiovascular efficiency, lung volume and skeletal flexibility.

For yet another facility, Munson said he will join the psychology department faculty in lobbying for development of a biofeedback laboratory in that academic unit. It would be used for the study of body response to stress and stress reduction activities. "It would definitely benefit our program, too," he added.

"There's no question that our university has one of the top five wellness programs in the country. We want to keep working so we are unquestionably the best," Munson continued.

Two physical education specialists on his faculty are retiring this spring, and he said one of the positions will be filled by a new leader for the wellness program. ■

Lady Pointers get coach

Ruth Kaiser

Ruth Anne Kaiser has taken over the reigns of the Pointer women's basketball team as it defends its NCAA III national championship.

Kaiser, 24, has been an assistant women's basketball coach at the University of Arizona.

At Arizona, Kaiser was part of a staff that took over a squad which compiled a 7-21 record the previous season. The women's team finished 19-9 during her first year and after joining the Pac 10 Conference, concluded this past season with an 11-18 mark.

Kaiser replaces Linda Wunder who resigned to take on similar duties at Miami (Ohio) University. Wunder led the Lady Pointers to the school's first-ever national championship this past season, compiling a 42-9 career record in two years at UW-SP.

Kaiser's preference for a defensive-minded system will fit in well at Stevens Point.

"The programs I've been associated with have favored an upbeat game. I thrive on defense and that will be a key in the program. We had quality athletes who worked very hard on defense at Arizona and it led to some real positive results for us. I have learned a great deal about many different aspects of the game of basketball."

Kaiser holds impressive credentials as a player, having spent four years at the University of Notre Dame.

Kaiser, who will teach in the UW-SP School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, has a masters degree in education from the University of Arizona with an emphasis in sports sciences. She received her bachelor of arts degree in psychology at Notre Dame. ■

Parker succeeds Eck

Bob Parker

Bob Parker has become the head coach of the defending champion men's basketball team at UW-SP.

He succeeds former coach Jay Eck who left in May to become head coach at the University of Toledo.

Parker was named District 12 "Coach of the Year" for 1987 at Valley City State University in North Dakota where he amassed a three-year record of 52 wins and 29 losses. His team went to the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics national tournament this spring and advanced to the second round by defeating the Blue Golds of Eau Claire.

Parker is a graduate of Alma High School where he was named second team all-state while garnering two all-conference awards. At UW-River Falls, he scored over 1,000 career points en route to earning two most valuable player awards and being named All-WSUC, All-District 14 and All-American honorable mention.

After earning his degree in 1973, he spent 10 years at Arcadia High School where he recorded a 123-71 career record including a 69-12 mark during his last five years.

Twice Parker coached his Arcadia squad to a top 10 ranking among Class B schools. His team won back-to-back Coulee Conference championships in 1981 and 1982 and the Regional championships in 1978 and 1980. They were also sectional runners-up the following year. In 1981, he was nominated for the United Press International's Wisconsin Basketball "Coach of the Year" award. He coached the Wisconsin Basketball Coaches Association North All-Star Team the following year.

In 1984, Parker was chosen to coach in the Wisconsin Junior College All-Star game following an 18-11 record with the Western Wisconsin Technical Institute Cavaliers.

The Pointers have won six straight WSUC titles and during that span have amassed a 146-32 (.820) record which includes a sparkling 83-13 (.865) mark in league play. UW-SP represented District 14 at the NAIA National Tournament in 1983-85 and were the runners-up in 1984. ■

National champs

In March, women brought home the first national championship trophy ever won by a UW-SP athletic team.

The Lady Pointers basketball squad whipped Concordia College of Moorehead, Minn., 81-74, at the NCAA Division III National Tournament in Scranton, Pa. They made it to the finals after scorching the No. 1 seeded University of Scranton, 74-59.

Earlier, the women had captured their first Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title with a 15-1 record.

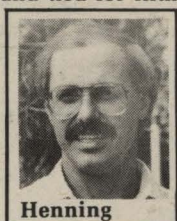

Junior Sonja Sorenson of Manawa and seniors Karla Miller of Kaukauna and Donna Pivonka of Cato earned all-conference and All-Great Lakes Team honors. Sorenson, who led the team in scoring and rebounding, also was named a Kodak All-American and Miller and Pivonka were named to the all-national tournament team. ■

Pointers win All-Sports trophy

Shares of the football and basketball championships led Stevens Point to its second straight Wisconsin State University Conference All-Sports Trophy.

Pointer athletes for the 1986-87 school year finished 2½ points ahead of runner-up Eau Claire, which finished third a year ago. Final standings showed Point with 59½ points, Eau Claire 57, La Crosse 55½, Stout and Whitewater 53½ each, Oshkosh 45½, River Falls 37½, Platteville 27, and Superior 12.

Stevens Point shared the football crown with La Crosse and River Falls, while tying Eau Claire for the basketball title. The Pointers also finished second in cross country, tied for second in track, third in swimming, fourth in tennis, fifth in golf and wrestling, and tied for fifth in baseball. ■

Six inductees chosen for 'Hall of Fame'

Two women and four men, whose prowess in intercollegiate athletics brought recognition to the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point, will be inducted Oct. 10 into the UW-SP Athletic Hall of Fame.

They are Dawn Buntman Leaver, Baraboo; Debra Vercauteren, Oshkosh; Bob Henning, Chesterton, Ind.; Dan Jesse, Rhinelander; Jim Notstad, Madison; and Charles Houck, Green Bay.

Induction ceremonies will be held at the UW-SP Homecoming banquet on campus the evening of Oct. 10. Earlier in the day, the inductees will be special guests at several homecoming events including the afternoon football game at Goerke Park.

Leaver, home economics teacher and coach of the girl's cross country and three-time championship girl's track and field team at Baraboo High School, received her degree from UW-SP in 1982. A native of Green Bay, she was UW-SP's first woman to earn All-American status, competing in cross country and finishing sixth in a national meet. Leaver won a total of eight Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference championships and continues to hold the school and conference track record in the mile.

Jesse was defeated only once in the 200 breaststroke during four years of dual meet competition for the Pointers. Within the Wisconsin State University Conference, he went undefeated throughout his collegiate career in the 100 and 200 breaststrokes. His WSUC record in the 200 breaststroke of 2:09.80 still stands. An 11-time All-American, Jesse was chosen as UW-SP's outstanding male athlete in 1979. He graduated in 1980 and returned to his native Rhinelander where he has been coaching the boy's and girl's high school swim teams.

Vercauteren, a 1976 graduate and also a native of Green Bay, is now the head track and cross country coach at UW-Oshkosh. She will be honored as a track star who lettered four years in that sport and was the first collegiate woman in Wisconsin to break 60 seconds in the 60-yard dash. She still holds the school record of 57.8 seconds in that event. Her post-collegiate athletics include competitive distance running in such contests as the New York, Boston and Chicago Marathons. Her best time is 3 hours, 11 minutes and 56 seconds.

Henning, who sells yearbooks for a Missouri-based publishing company, lives in Chesterton, Ind., where he is active in amateur softball and played on a team that finished fourth in the national tourney of 1982. A 1971 graduate of UW-SP, he played basketball and baseball. On the court, he and Quinn Vanden Heuvel gave the Pointers the best backcourt in the WSU Conference during his senior year. Henning now ranks 28th on the all-time scoring list with 713 points. His 106 completed free throws in 1970-71 is the fifth highest total in the school's history. His average of 9.6 assists/game the same year is still tops on the all-time list. In baseball, Henning hit .289 for his career (59-204) and also had a team high 53 total bases in 1971. He had seven home runs that year and nine in his collegiate career. His hometown is West Allis.

Notstad, a pilot for Northwest Orient Airlines and a flight examiner for the Federal Aviation Administration, lives in Madison which is near his hometown of Cambridge. He, too, is a 1971 graduate who earned 11 letters in wrestling, football and track. Wrestling was his premier sport and he participated in it as a two-time captain and most valuable performer. A national qualifier at 177 pounds in the 1967-68 season, he placed second in the WSU conference. Other honors included being outstanding freshman athlete on campus and the Goodrich Award winner as a senior.

Houck, who grew up in Stevens Point, is a retired locomotive engineer for the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad now living in Green Bay. He graduated from UW-SP in 1939 after having been an all-conference performer three years as a fullback. He was ineligible to hold the recognition one of those seasons because the Pointers were ruled ineligible after playing practice games with the Green Bay Packers and Chicago Bears. ■

Gary Keller and Karen Engelhard and in front, Terri Taylor and Kevin Tarvid.

Alumni, annual giving coordinators chosen

UW-SP has new coordinators of alumni programs and annual giving.

They are Kevin Tarvid, register of deeds for Adams County the past 10 years, who will assume the alumni position Aug. 10, and Terri Lynn Taylor, staff member of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin who recently was hired to fill the new fund-raising position.

Tarvid succeeds Scott Schultz who was elected mayor of Stevens Point. Coincidentally, Tarvid declined to seek re-election to a second political position this spring similar to the one now held by Schultz. Tarvid was president of the village of Friendship.

"I have mixed emotions about leaving my hometown and the register's office," he said, "but my wife and I have always talked about coming back to Stevens Point." He received his bachelor's degree in history from UW-SP in 1974.

Tarvid won every election for register of deeds after Gov. Martin Schreiber appointed him to the position nine years ago to fill a vacancy.

Besides holding county and village positions, Tarvid has been a Vista volunteer teacher for one year, from 1976 to 1977, at New Ways Learning Center in Wisconsin Rapids. Beyond the bachelor of science degree he received from UW-SP, he did graduate study in management at Cardinal Stritch College in Milwaukee.

He was graduated from the Adams-Friendship High School when he was 16 and completed his collegiate work in three years, thus ranking at age 19 as one of UW-SP's youngest degree recipients.

His community service beyond being an elected official has included membership on the long-range planning committee of the Adams-Friendship School District, chair of the Adams County Youth Association and vice president of the Adams County Historical Society.

He and his wife, Sally, have a 6-year-old daughter.

Tarvid will have the title of associate director of alumni relations, serving with Karen Engelhard, who is the head of alumni relations. In addition to being in charge of maintaining a computerized record of UW-SP alumni, he will be responsible for arranging special events for them such as homecoming and reunions.

Taylor is assistant to the executive director of university advancement, Gary Keller. She will oversee the university's annual appeal for money done via mail and a follow-up phone-a-thon, the first one of which will be held this fall.

Taylor grew up in Madison where she earned a bachelor's degree in humanities from Edgewood College. She also has a master's degree in community arts management from Sangamon State University in Springfield, Ill.

Her position at the State Historical Society was as research assistant in the fund-raising division.

Taylor previously was an Arts Management Fellow with the National Endowment for the Arts doing a study of the distribution of federal funds to arts organizations throughout the United States.

As a graduate student at Sangamon State, she served as the auditorium assistant in charge of a corps of 300 ushers and in the preparation of grants for its tour program. She also served an internship as communication coordinator of the Illinois State Board of Education-sponsored art train.

Taylor has done volunteer work for numerous volunteer organizations, including arts organizations, assisting them in developing lists of sources of prospective funds. She was one of the organizers of the Springfield, Ill., theater organization's season ticket campaign.

Since overcoming physical handicaps of her own, she has become active on the state level as an advocate for both the physically and mentally handicapped. She is on the long-range planning committee for the Wisconsin Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities and hopes to assist in the development of a chapter in this area. ■

New home in London for UW-SP

A new home awaits UW-SP students who will be spending future semesters of study in England.

Helen Corneli, director of UW-SP International Programs, announced that an agreement has been finalized to house 45 students each fall and spring in the French Center of London.

"It's a former hospital that is being converted into a very well-equipped hostel," according to Mrs. Corneli. It will have a library, cafeteria, lecture room, restaurant, a night porter and warden on duty at all times.

Located in the Bayswater section near Hyde Park, the center accommodates about 120 students. The UW-SP students will share the facility with students from France.

Several university officials were in London recently to select a new headquarters for their offering there and to pay tribute to the International Friendship League and its staff at Peace Haven for hosting several thousand UW-SP students the past 18 years.

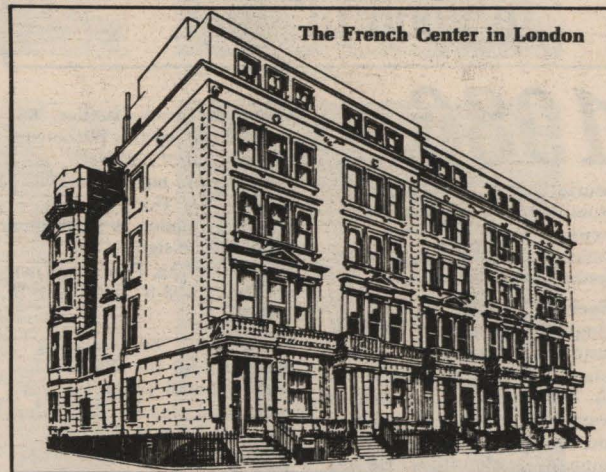

Since the first group went to England in 1969, P.O. Nath, director of Peace Haven, has assisted faculty in providing special opportunities for students. In recent years, his wife, Maria Barber Nath, has assisted him and has been closely involved with visiting students and faculty from Stevens Point.

In appreciation of their contributions, Chancellor Philip Marshall hosted two special events in honor of the couple.

Marshall presented Nath the William C. Hansen Distinguished Service Award, calling him an "Ambassador of Friendship" who has been influential in helping students develop a broader view of the world. It was the third time the award has been given since being established about four years ago.

The chancellor also presented a James H. Albertson Medallion to Mrs. Nath, introducing her as "Hostess for the World" for her role in providing a home setting for young people from all parts of the globe. Marshall recognized her for leadership and for being an exemplar and model for guests at the friendship house.

Others participating in the program were Mrs. Corneli and Helen Godfrey, assistant chancellor for university relations, Lee and Maxine Burress, representing the English department, plus the current contingent studying at Peace Haven.

"Peace Haven has been ideal for us all these years. We received an extraordinary bargain and a homey atmosphere which were very important to our students," Mrs. Corneli explained. The organization was no longer able to serve groups from Stevens Point because it will be attempting to broaden its services to more varied groups staying for periods of time considerably shorter than a four-month semester.

Mrs. Corneli said it was difficult finding an acceptable, new headquarters because competition for space is great in London. About 50 American universities now have programs there, for example. While costs will be higher in the new place, the central location will make it possible for students to save a considerable amount of money in their transportation budgets.

With a more centralized location, "we'll be able to use the resources in London more effectively," Mrs. Corneli added. ■

Homecoming is Oct. 10, other events listed

Here's a calendar of events for UW-SP Homecoming '87 and for several other gatherings and special programs which alumni and friends of the university are encouraged to attend:

—Sept. 5, UW-SP alumni reunion in Portland, Ore.:

Terry Porter of the Portland Trailblazers, UW-SP's most illustrious alumnus in the world of sports, Chancellor Philip Marshall and Athletic Director Don Amiot will be among the guests at a reunion from 4 to 6 p.m. Sept. 5 at the Ramada Inn Coliseum (Salon I), 10 N. Weidler, in Portland. The reunion will precede a football game at 7 p.m. in the Portland Arena featuring the UW-SP Pointers and Coach D. J. LeRoy, one of the youngest head football coaches in the nation, facing the team from Portland State University.

—Oct. 9, Pre-Homecoming Events:

Women's volleyball games for UW-SP alumni will begin at 7 p.m. in Berg Gym.

Performance of the play, "Brighton Beach Memoirs," begins at 8 p.m. in the Warren Gard Jenkins Theatre.

Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity's annual meeting begins at 10 a.m. in the Green Room of the University Center, another reunion at 4:30 p.m. as part of the Fifth Quarter Reception in the University Center and a banquet at 6 p.m. in the Heritage Room of the University Center.

The 1977 championship football team, which advanced to the NAIA national tournament in Texas, has a brunch at 11 a.m. in the Heritage Room of the University Center and its members will join the Fifth Quarter Reception and Homecoming dinner.

College of Natural Resources alumni will hold their third annual reunion at 4:30 p.m. Saturday in the Hospitality Room of the Point Brewery.

—Oct. 29, Reception for teachers:

UW-SP participates in Wisconsin Education Association Convention in Milwaukee by sponsoring a hospitality room for UW-SP alumni and friends from 5 to 7 p.m. in the Monarch Room of the Marc Plaza Hotel.

—Oct. 31, 25th anniversary of School of Communicative Disorders:

Specialists in speech and hearing disorders who have been trained at UW-SP will mark the 25th anniversary of the School of Communicative Disorders with a social hour at 6 p.m. in the University Center Program Banquet Room, followed there at 7 p.m. by a dinner, program and dance.

—Feb. 2, Reunion in Oshkosh:

UW-SP alumni living in the Oshkosh area will meet at a dinner preceding the UW-SP and UW-Oshkosh basketball game in Oshkosh. Details will be announced later.

—Feb. 19 through -21, Cross country ski outing:

The College of Natural Resources will sponsor a family cross country ski weekend for alumni and friends at Treehaven Field Station near Tomahawk. For more information, contact the College of Natural Resources office at 715-346-4617.

—April 8 and 9, Fast Track State Convention:

The Fast Track Honorary for students in the Division of Business and Economics will host a second annual statewide collegiate conference, sessions of which will be open to alumni and interested members of the public. ■

News of Alumni

Whatever happened to good ol' Joe?

1986

Laurie Geary, '86, was promoted to administrative assistant at the Baraboo National Bank. She lives at 707 Seventh St., Baraboo.

Mack R. Winkel, '86, completed an infantry officer basic course at the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga. The training is designed to prepare students for the duties and responsibilities of a company grade officer. He is a second lieutenant.

Boston Celtics draft Tim Naegeli

For the second time in its history, UW-SP has had one of its basketball players drafted by the NBA.

Tim Naegeli just squeaked in, being chosen by the Boston Celtics in the sixth round of the draft as the 137th choice among 161 players.

Since the "happiest day of my life" on June 22 when the pros recognized the Pointers' all-time high scorer, he's been working out in university facilities on a near-daily basis.

As Naegeli waits to be called to the Celtics' rookie camp, he is aware that he has big odds to overcome if he is to have a career in the big league. Only 31 percent of all players drafted last year were offered contracts. The margin of success is less than 4 percent for sixth round picks such as himself.

Naegeli was the 1986-87 Wisconsin State University Conference Player of the Year. He shot 57 percent from the field and 89 percent from the free throw line his senior season, averaging 20.6 points and 6.2 rebounds per game.

Two years ago, Terry Porter made history by becoming the first Pointer chosen in an NBA draft. The Portland Trailblazers chose him in the first round. At that time, Porter was the all-time Pointer scorer with 1,585 career points. Naegeli topped that record this spring with a total of 1,649 points.

Weighing 185 pounds and standing six feet, seven inches, Naegeli majored in business administration at UW-SP and says in retrospect that coming to Stevens Point and playing Division III ball "was the best thing for me."

He is a native of Racine and attended Racine Lutheran High School. ■

Tim Naegeli, foreground, was a star of Pointer basketball games.

Donald N. Varney, '23, of Stevens Point, died Feb. 21 at St. Joseph's Hospital in Marshfield. He was 84. Services were held at St. Paul's United Methodist Church with burial in St. Stephen Cemetery in Stevens Point. Born in Greenwood, he was married in 1929 to Ann Massmann, who died in 1952. Varney was employed for 35 years as a fire underwriter for Hardware Mutuals, now Sentry Insurance. Remarried in 1957 to Ramona Zakrzewski, he and his wife later moved to Milwaukee, where he was manager of fire underwriting for Badger Mutual Insurance Co. In 1964, he became manager of fire underwriting for Badger State Mutual Casualty Co., working there until his retirement in 1972, when the couple returned to Stevens Point. In addition to his wife, survivors are a son, two daughters, nine grandchildren, four great-grandchildren and a brother.

Doris (Buchanan) Benton, '19, of Appleton died May 11 at Americana Health Center. She was 88. Born in New Auburn, she was married to Dr. Joseph L. Benton, who died in 1965. Benton was a home economics teacher in the Appleton High School for many years. Services were at the Wichmann Funeral Home with burial in Highland Memorial Park, both in Appleton. Survivors include a son and a granddaughter.

Louise (McDougal) Nelson, '19, of Sheboygan Falls, died Oct. 26 at Greendale Nursing Home. She was 87. A teacher at Moundville, Packwaukee and Oxford, she later worked as an aide at Sheboygan Memorial Hospital. Her husband, William H. Nelson, to whom she was married in 1919, died in 1980. Survivors include two daughters, three sons, two sisters, two brothers and grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Services were held at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Sheboygan Falls with burial in the Sheboygan Falls Cemetery.

Lydia (Bauer) Dickerman, '15, died Oct. 24, 1986, at St. Mary's Hospital in Madison. She was 91. Born in Lowville, she was married in 1935 to Mancel Dickerman. The couple lived in East Troy until his death in 1976 when she moved to Madison. Dickerman had taught home economics in schools at Poynette, Verona, Livingston, Blue River and East Troy. Survivors include a sister and nephews and nieces. Services were at the First Congregational United Church of Christ, East Troy, with burial in Oak Ridge Cemetery.

Grace (Fries) Heyer, '14, of Walworth, died Sept. 17, 1986, in Lakeland Hospital, Elkhorn. She was 93. A native of Richland Center, she was married in 1917 to Jacob Heyer, who preceded her in death in 1951. The couple moved to Walworth in 1923, where they owned and operated Heyer Hardware Store. Surviving are two daughters, six grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren and a sister. Burial was in Darien Cemetery.

Eva (Bernier) Deutsch, '09, of Wausau, died March 3 at age 97. From the time of her graduation until 1919, Deutsch served as assistant county superintendent of schools in Marathon County, except for one year when she was principal of Rothschild Grade School. A native of Mosinee, she was married in 1919 to Roman C. Deutsch, who died in 1952. After her marriage, she worked as secretary and treasurer of the Ritter and Deutsch Funeral Home, which was owned and operated by her husband. She was active in several women's organizations, acting as president of the Catholic Women's Club. Services were at St. James Catholic Church. Survivors include three daughters, 16 grandchildren and 20 great-grandchildren.

Blanche L. Merrill, '08, of Abbotsford, died Nov. 24, 1986, at St. Joseph's Hospital in Marshfield at age 96. Services were at the First United Presbyterian Church in Abbotsford with burial in the Abbotsford Public Cemetery. Merrill had been a teacher for 49 years, first at Rice Lake, then at the third grade level in the Minneapolis school system until 1957 when she retired. Surviving is a niece. ■

Arol Eppe 1909-1987

Arol Eppe, 77, a retired biology professor at UW-SP, died May 29 at St. Mary's Hospital in Madison of injuries received in a fall three days earlier at his apartment in Janesville.

Eppe, who lived in Stevens Point until last December, was carrying groceries from his car when he fell, striking his head. He never regained consciousness.

He served on the UW-SP faculty for 26 years and also was a state leader in ornithology and education organizations.

A memorial service was held at St. Paul's United Methodist Church in Stevens Point. Following cremation, burial was in Elmwood Cemetery in Antigo.

A fund has been established in Eppe's name at UW-SP to support student involvement in research and protection of bird populations. Contributions may be sent to the Eppe Memorial in care of the UW-SP Foundation, Old Main Building, Stevens Point, Wis. 54481.

Eppe was born Dec. 7, 1909, in St. Paul, Minn. Because his father was a veterinarian and meat inspector for the federal government, the family moved constantly. Eppe once estimated he had lived in 30 different cities in all parts of the country by the time he had graduated from the Marinette High School. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees at UW-Madison.

He married Doris Maxson of Antigo on Aug. 12, 1936. She died here Sept. 4, 1986. She, too, was a teacher, and had served for a time on the mathematics faculties at P.J. Jacobs High School and UW-SP.

His career in education, which spanned 40 years, began in 1932 when he joined the faculty at Berlin High School. He later served at Antigo High School from 1934 to 1941 and at Beloit High for the next five years. His tenure at the university was from 1946 until his retirement in 1972 when he was given the honorary title of emeritus professor.

Eppe was the state treasurer and executive committee member of the organization now titled The Association of University of Wisconsin Professionals, from 1955 to 1958. He chaired its Stevens Point chapter from 1954 to 1956.

For the Wisconsin Education Association, he was chairman of its science division from 1943 to 1944, and for the UW-SP Biology Department, he served as chairman from 1965 to 1966. He was active in faculty governance on campus and served with his wife as a longtime adviser for the Wesley Foundation, an organization of Methodist college students.

In the community, he was an officer of the Mental Health Association and a volunteer coordinator of Red Cross Blood Mobiles.

Photography, beekeeping and bird banding were his hobbies. However, he also had an academic interest in birds, serving additionally as Wisconsin coordinator from 1964 to 1972 for the Cornell University Nest Record Study. He published several papers in professional journals on related research. A highlight of this involvement was his service in 1965 and 1966 as president of the Wisconsin Society for Ornithology.

During their retirement, Mr. and Mrs. Eppe spent summers at a college overlooking Spring Lake in Minocqua and winters in Rockport, Texas. They returned to Stevens Point in 1980.

His survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Burton (Margaret) Erickson, Xenia, Ohio, and Mrs. Gary (Barbara) Ertl, Janesville; four grandchildren, and one brother, Lewis Eppe, Mesa, Ariz. ■

Robert Schmatz 1929-1987

Robert R. Schmatz, 58, a retired education professor at UW-SP, died June 6 at St. Joseph's Hospital in Marshfield, of complications that developed after heart bypass surgery.

A memorial service was held at the Nelsonville Lutheran Church. A memorial was established with the UW-SP Foundation for a student scholarship fund in his name.

Schmatz served the university from 1970 until his retirement in 1986. He and his wife, Ruth, accepted an invitation to be leaders of a UW-SP semester abroad program in Australia during the spring semester. He became ill soon after arriving home.

He was born March 2, 1929, in Dunkirk, N. Y., served in the U. S. Army as a young man and married Ruth Hofer in Fredonia, N. Y., on Dec. 18, 1953.

He received his bachelor's degree from the University of New York at Fredonia, his master's degree from Southern Illinois University in Carbondale and his doctor of education degree from Michigan State University.

Schmatz began his career in New York State and was principal of an elementary school there before he joined the faculty of the State University of New York at Brockport to teach in its laboratory school. He then served on the faculty of the Harrisburg Public Schools in Harrisburg, Ill., and went from there to Michigan State University in East Lansing where he was a teacher and administrator, serving as coordinator of student teaching and assistant to the department chairman.

At UW-SP, he served a time as chairman of the former elementary education department. He also established laboratory experiences for future elementary teachers in real classrooms.

Schmatz and his wife were regular columnists for a time for "Instructor," a leading national magazine for teachers. He authored two textbooks on elementary school curriculum that came off the presses of McMillan Publishing Co.

He had ties to the Stevens Point area several years before he came here as a faculty member. He and his wife purchased a private camp for boys, Camp Miquano, near Nelsonville in 1966 and operated it for 13 summers.

The survivors besides wife, Ruth, are his mother, Mrs. Gertrude Schmatz of Dunkirk, N. Y.; one daughter, Patricia Schmatz, Emeryville, Calif.; one son, Jeffery, Brownsville, Texas; three grandchildren and one great-grandchild; and one sister. ■

Foundation assets reach $2.8 million

Assets of the UW-SP Foundation, Inc. increased by 11 percent during the past year to an all-time high of nearly $2.8 million, directors were told at their annual meeting in February.

The growth resulted largely from an 18 percent increase in income which totaled nearly $1.7 million.

The organization raises money from private sources to supplement money the state allocates to the institution from its tax collections. Campus officials have said that many past activities and special projects would not have come to fruition without foundation backing.

Chancellor Philip Marshall told the directors that because state support per student has dropped significantly among publicly-financed colleges and universities in this region of the country, "we can make excellent use of all funds you give us."

About a third of the foundation's income is from the self-sustaining National Wellness Institute, which operates a large institute on campus each summer, provides consulting services on fitness-related topics to the staffs of governmental, independent and private enterprises; develops computer-assisted wellness assessment programs and conducts programs at various parts of the country.

Institute Director David Emmerling told directors that expansion of the offerings is continuing.

The board elected Leonard De Baker, president of the M & I First National Bank of Stevens Point as president, succeeding David Miller of Stevens Point. De Baker has served on the board for 10 years, most recently as vice president.

Fritz Wenzel of Marshfield was chosen as vice president; Robert Worth of Stevens Point, re-elected treasurer; Karen Engelhard of Stevens Point, re-elected secretary; and John Buzza of Stevens Point, re-elected corporate counsel.

Re-elected for three year terms were Dr. George Anderson, Edwin Karlen, James Neale, Robert Taylor and K. B. Willett, all of Stevens Point, and Wayne Hochmuth of Wisconsin Rapids. Gene Katz, a past president, was named a director-at-large.

New board members are: Marsha Lindsay, president of Lindsay & Stone, a Madison-based communication and public relations corporation, and James K. McGinley, retired president of the Durant Digital Instruments of Watertown. Ms. Lindsay is a 1974 UW-SP graduate and the 1984 Wisconsin Woman Entrepreneur of the Year. McGinley is a 1935 graduate of UW-SP and a past national president of Pi Sigma Epsilon, professional marketing and sales management fraternity and holder of the Distinguished Alumnus Award from his alma mater.

It was reported that the foundation has $1.8 million of its assets in portfolio investments, and 94 percent of that amount is held in financial institutions of the Stevens Point area.

Besides the National Wellness Institute, the foundation's major appendages are the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station near Nelsonville and Treehaven, an environmental field station/summer camp near Tomahawk. On campus, the foundation during 1986 awarded more than $125,000 in scholarships from endowments and provided more than a third of a million dollar support to a variety of other projects. ■

Hegg family gives $10,000 for scholarships

The family of an alumna of UW-SP has established an endowment of approximately $10,000 to support an annual scholarship for a student pursuing a teaching career on the primary level.

The first winner of the $1,000 Esther Gavin Hegg Memorial Awards was announced this spring.

Recipients are required to have at least a 3.0 grade point and will be chosen by a faculty committee in the School of Education at the end of their sophomore year. Candidates' personality, character disposition, verbal communication skills, financial need and handicaps are to be considered by the committee, the donors have specified.

Contributions from Mrs. Hegg's husband, Erling, of Fair Oaks, Calif., her three children and friends formed the endowment, which family members are continuing to enlarge.

A native of Stevens Point, Mrs. Hegg died in 1986 at Fair Oaks at the age of 82. She graduated from the primary education program at what is now UW-SP in 1923 and taught at Marshfield, Fond du Lac and Milwaukee before her marriage. The Hegg family lived in Stevens Point and Wheaton, Ill., before moving to Fair Oaks in 1975. ■

Arthur Pejsa

Arthur Pejsa, a Custer native who became a pioneer in the nation's aerospace program, has established a $12,000 endowment at UW-SP for student scholarships.

The $1,000 UW-SP Aerospace Scientist Award will be given annually in his name, beginning this fall. He has informed campus officials of his plans to continue expanding the fund.

Pejsa, an alumnus of UW-SP, retired last year as a senior staff scientist at Honeywell in Minneapolis. He was director of guidance system development, and devised the re-entry guidance for the space shuttle. Later, he was in charge of software development for Honeywell's new aircraft navigation system, which has been adopted by Boeing and the U.S. Air Force for long-range aircraft.

During his 25-year career as an aerospace scientist, he had key roles in the analysis and design of control systems for Gemini, Apollo and other projects. And, he pioneered the development of accurate guidance systems for long range missiles. Pejsa headed the System Design and Evaluation Section for the Thor Missile, the world's first successful long-range guidance system. He had a similar role for the Titan II ICBM.

His career has also involved classroom teaching. He has conducted advanced engineering mathematics and physics classes at AC Electronics and at UW-Milwaukee, mathematics and mechanics at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., and math, physics and computer science at Augsburg College in Minneapolis.

After completing his bachelor's degree at UW-SP in 1947, he did graduate study at Marquette University and the University of Maryland, where he earned his Ph.D.

Pejsa, who was given the UW-SP Distinguished Alumnus Award about seven years ago, is holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross for flying 400 combat hours over Asia and Japan during World War II.

He most recently has been doing research in ballistics. He has developed and marketed a ballistics program for personal computers, for use by hunters, marksmen and military personnel. He is currently writing the manuscript for a book on "Practical Ballistics." ■

Hanford scholarship established

A $1,500 fund has been established in the UW-SP Foundation to support an annual scholarship for an art student.

The award will be made in the name of William J. Hanford, who served the university from 1968 to 1986, when he retired. He was dean of the College of Fine Arts during most of his career at UW-SP.

Members of his family and friends contributed to the fund, and additional donations will be accepted at the foundation office in Main Building.

Interest from the scholarship will be given annually to a junior or senior art major chosen by the art department faculty. ■
