Captive wildlife minor established

UW-SP is preparing to become one of the nation's few training grounds for managers and staff members of zoos and other facilities for wild animals.

A new minor in captive wildlife management has been approved by the UW System Board of Regents as a specialty program within UW-SP's College of Natural Resources.

No other college or university in the Midwest offers a major or minor in this field, and nationally only about two southern schools have such curricula.

Besides being prepared in how to care for and handle wild animals away from their natural habitat, students in UW-SP's program also will learn ways of using animals in educational programs, coping with nuisance wildlife, planning and administering public and private animal holding facilities.

Prossor James Hardin, who coordinates the wildlife offerings at UW-SP, said there is growing demand for professionals completing the minor because of the additional businesses, educational institutions and public agencies that hold captive wildlife.

Those places include research facilities, parks, environmental education and interpretation areas, wildlife rehabilitation centers, zoos, game farms, humane societies, animal shelters and urban wildlife control headquarters.

Hardin predicts the minor will be "popular" among students and viewed as "useful."

Many existing courses in the Department of Biology and College of Natural Resources will be used as a basis for the minor and nearly all of the expenses of getting the program in motion will be absorbed within current budgets. No new facilities or staff will be needed immediately; however, as the program develops, there will be need for animal holding facilities and special materials, Hardin reported. ■

Degree options okayed

Students at UW-SP now have the option of earning either bachelor of arts or bachelor of science degrees in all majors except music and art.

Chancellor Keith Sanders said this addition to the curriculum will be "one of the distinguishing features of this university."

In a letter to campus officials, Eugene Trani, vice president for academic affairs of the UW System, said the B.A. and B.S. degrees are differentiated primarily through mathematics and foreign language general degree requirements, and while there will be some majors in which very few students will opt for the B.S. and conversely, other majors in which very few students will opt for the B.A..

Natural resources majors, who ordinarily would receive a B.S. degree, or a philosophy major, who ordinarily would receive a B.A., "markedly enhance their preparation through meeting the wide range of liberal arts and science/mathematics components required by these combinations," according to James Schurter, representing the Office of Academic Affairs. ■

Alumni get new directors

The UW-SP Alumni Association has two new members on its board of directors who were elected at a meeting on campus Sept. 23.

They are Michael Janse of DePere and Diane Engelhard of Milwaukee.

In addition, the board includes four directors who were re-elected at the meeting: Allen Barrows, Judy Carlson and Mary Ann Nigbor, all of Stevens Point; and Gordon Faust of Madison.

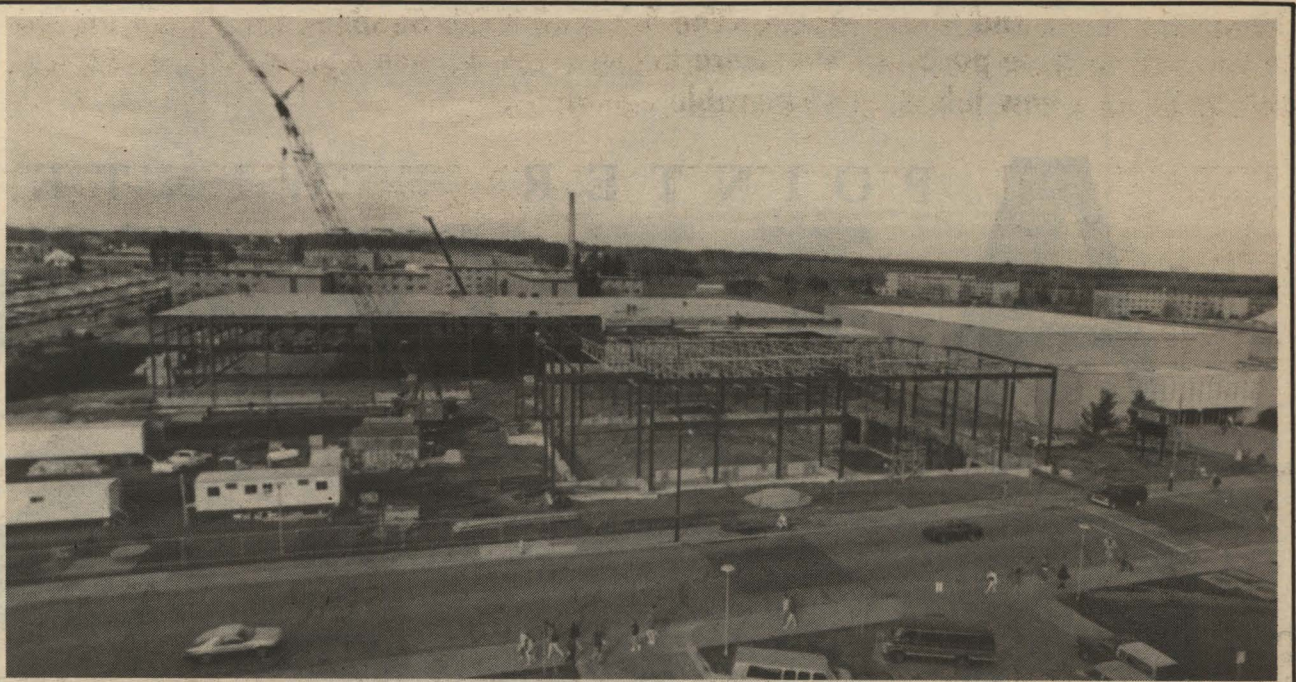

All of the terms are for three years.

Janse is a 1985 graduate with a business administration major and marketing, management and management information systems minors. He is employed by Green Bay Packaging as a sales representative.

Engelhard is a 1986 graduate with a political science major and communications minor. Since July 3, she has been director of public relations for Universal Medical Buildings in Milwaukee.

The Alumni Association board will continue during the next year with the same leaders, Ray Hutchinson of Weyauwega as president, and Carlson as vice president.

Action taken at the board meeting included a decision to continue offering a $500 scholarship to a nontraditional student through personal contributions of the directors. Groundwork was laid for events and activities planned for the next year, and a task force was formed to pursue ways of raising funds to support some of the events that are considered necessary to maintain strong alumni relations. ■

Workers have prepared the skeletal outline for the $7 million Health Enhancement Center being constructed adjacent to Quandt Gymnasium.

Huge health facility going up

Huge steel girders appeared this fall over a broad expanse of what once was a playing field west of Quandt Gymnasium.

The $7 million UW-SP Health Enhancement Center was taking form.

When it is finished by the start of the spring semester of 1991, the facility will be three times the size of Quandt Gymnasium and will embody:

- A six-lane running track with field event areas, six tennis courts, archery area, golf instruction area, volleyball and basketball courts.

- Multi-purpose area for instructional use.

- An aquatics area with two swimming pools, one that will have eight lanes plus diving area, and another that will be used for rehabilitation therapy and for teaching swimming skills to the handicapped.

There will be nothing like it in the state and an impressive home for UW-SP's rapidly-expanding and widely-acclaimed wellness program.

Ground was broken for the center on July 21 with a large contingent of dignitaries participating in the ceremony. The special guests included Kenneth Shaw, president of the UW System; Scott Schultz, mayor of Stevens Point; David Helbach, member of the Wisconsin State Senate; Stan Gruszynski, member of the Wisconsin Assembly; Chancellor Keith R. Sanders; Vice Chancellor Howard Thoyre; Joan North, dean of the College of Professional Studies; and John Munson, who heads the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics.

President Shaw recalled at the event the 32 students from Stevens Point who ran from Stevens Point to UW System headquarters in Madison in November of 1986 to lobby members of the Board of Regents to support the center's construction.

Lisa Thiel, then president of the UW-SP Student Government Association and now a downtown business advocate for Menasha merchants, organized the run and returned to her alma mater to take part in the ceremony.

Thiel and her student colleagues pledged the financial support of future students to the project. Because part of the center's use will be for fitness/recreation activities not tied directly to students' academic pursuits, it was deemed appropriate that part of the costs be defrayed by a user fee.

Consequently, officials decided that $1 million of the construction should be defrayed by users and the remainder would come out of the state treasury. Beginning in 1990, a fee of $5 per semester will be imposed on all students and it will continue until the debt is retired in about 25 years. The calculation is based on an enrollment of 8,000. Currently, the headcount is well over that.

Groundbreaking ceremony guests also heard Chancellor Sanders give a brief history lesson, reporting that UW-SP's reputation in physical and mental health maintenance dates to the school's first year, when President Theron B. Pray wrote in a report the gymnasium in Old Main had proved popular and profitable and that "muscular strength has almost uniformly been increased" among the students.

The 80,000 square foot construction project is being coordinated by Market & Johnson, Inc. of Eau Claire, general contractor.

Besides the new center, which is attached to Quandt with a wide corridor, the construction work also involves extensive remodeling of the existing Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics facilities and the installation therein of new locker room, training room, equipment issue and health enhancement instruction/activity space.

Progress of the work is watched closely by UW-SP's former chancellor and first lady, Philip and Helen Marshall. They are spending this fall here and will return each of the next two falls while he teaches chemistry, prior to entering full retirement from the university.

When the UW-SP and Stevens Point community honored him last December as he prepared to step down as the school's chief executive, it was announced that the center would be dedicated to the couple in recognition of their untiring support of the wellness program and of athletics. ■

Chemists host national polymer center

The new National Information Center for Undergraduate Polymer Education has been opened at UW-SP.

It is a source and clearinghouse for materials that can be used to advance undergraduate learning about polymer chemistry. Distribution is being done without charge to private and public colleges and universities across the country.

John Droske of the UW-SP chemistry faculty has been appointed to an indefinite term as the center director. The budget he receives will cover expenses for a part-time secretary.

More attention is being paid to polymers, he reports, in view of an estimate that at least half of all chemists will spend some time during their careers working to develop these plastic materials for diverse uses.

The American Chemical Society (ACS) Divisions of Polymer Chemistry and Polymeric Materials: Science and Engineering voted to sponsor the one-of-a-kind center in the country. Operations went into full swing this fall.

Droske believes there will be increased need for information about polymers in the wake of an ACS decision to allow the chemistry curricula it accredits in American higher education to develop options in this area.

Besides being named center director, Droske also was elevated from secretary to associate director of the polymer education committee of the ACS Polymer Divisions. ■

It's more difficult to gain entry at UW-SP

Enrollment at UW-SP this fall is 8,878, a decline of 440 students from one year ago.

Next year, there'll be another decline—if the enrollment planners are successful.

The UW System Board of Regents has its member institutions trim their populations as a means of controlling costs. The Stevens Point reductions began after the school hit an all-time high enrollment of 9,554 in the fall of 1986.

The plan for next fall at UW-SP is to bring the enrollment count down to about 8,600. Thus, prospective new freshmen or transfer students planning to arrive either in January or next fall would be wise to make plans now for their attendance.

Admission standards have been tightened and will continue to remain so, according to Registrar David Eckholm.

The number of new freshmen who will be accepted next fall will remain at 1,700, as it has been for several years. They will be required to rank academically in the top half of their high school classes or earn an ACT score of 21 (22 by a soon-to-be-revised testing system) or have a combination score of 55 when the high school class percentile ranking is added to the ACT score.

Transfer students will need a grade point average of 2.0 if they have 54 credits that were earned at a UW System Center or at Nicolet College in Rhinelander. Other transfer students need a 2.9 grade point. Re-entering students must have a 2.0 grade point, which means that if they were suspended for low grades at UW-SP, they must attend another school such as a UW Center to regain their eligibility to enter this institution.

Moreover, students who are accepted for fall semester will be required to have registered for classes by the time freshman orientation sessions end, which will be in late July.

The succinct advice continuing to be heard from university personnel involved in student admissions/recruitment: "Apply early." ■

About the cover and these photos—The faces of Keith Sanders are shown on the cover and in these portraits that were taken when he was ages 3, 10, 18, 22, 41 and now, in a new job at the venerable age of 50.

Sanders tackles planning, impending teacher shortages, minority recruitment

Chancellor Keith Sanders

- Age 50
- Native of Benton, Ill.
- Married since 1962 to Carol Dial of Decatur, Ill., an elementary school teacher. They are parents of one son, Mark, student at Miami University of Ohio.
- Degrees earned are bachelor's and master's in speech and psychology from Southern Illinois University in Carbondale and Ph.D. in communication from the University of Pittsburgh.
- Teaching/administrative experience gained at George Washington University, as assistant professor of speech, 1962 to 1967; and at Southern Illinois University, first as professor of speech, later as governmental relations officer and finally as dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, 1967 to 1989.

Keith Sanders has been busy meeting with university personnel, speaking to community groups and participating in campus events since taking over UW-SP's administrative reins on June 1.

Behind the scenes he's keeping long hours tending to day-to-day affairs of the university and spearheading a long-range institutional planning process that is being conducted by about 90 faculty, staff, student, alumni and community representatives.

"We will change the budget and make it conform to our dreams" and not the reverse, he said in September in his first major address on campus.

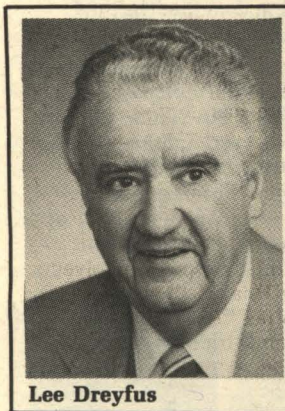

On faculty salary matters, he pledged to work toward improvements in the wage scale at UW-SP, which is one of the lowest at a public university in Wisconsin. By the mid-1990s, there is expected to be a shortage of scholars prepared to serve on American college and university faculties, he said. And to be able to compete for the shrinking pool of new college-level teachers will require major salary improvements, he has said on numerous occasions. He has expressed willingness to allow some positions to remain unfilled in order to bolster salaries of existing personnel.

At one meeting, he told a questioner that "athletics is about in the right perspective here—I feel good about the balance." To another sports booster who asked if Sanders would be monitoring athletics in the wake of a player ineligibility scandal two years ago on the football team, he said: "Every chancellor with an active sports program had better keep an eye on it."

Sanders has been lending strong support to campaigns to improve the number of minority faculty members and students throughout the UW System, to nurturing the well-established system of faculty governance on his own campus, and to the continued development of private funds for UW-SP.

"UW-SP is poised to become the best university of its kind in Wisconsin," he has predicted. Among its great strengths, he adds, are the "foundations of a long tradition in liberal arts in a safe, friendly, clean, pleasant and encouraging environment." ■

Red Vest takes on new hue

Lee Sherman Dreyfus, away from academia since resigning as chancellor of UW-SP in 1979 to assume the governorship of Wisconsin, is back.

He's now a member of the UW System Board of Regents.

Dreyfus was appointed to a seven-year term on the board by Gov. Tommy Thompson and was confirmed by the Wisconsin State Senate, 28-2, following a couple of skirmishes by challengers from within his own Republican party.

A couple of lawmakers, sore over the fact Dreyfus did not seek a second term as governor, had opposed the nomination.

Dreyfus, who has a lucrative public speaking business and now lives in Waukesha, said that serving as a regent would cost him $50,000 to $60,000 a year in lost income.

Prior to his confirmation as a regent, Dreyfus expressed concern for rising student tuition costs. He suggested the UW System return to the "tradition of having students who are state residents pay about 25 percent of the cost to instruct them, he said. The students' share now is about 34 percent.

He spoke in defense of solid athletic programs at the various universities, contending that victories in football and other major sports attract contributions, faculty and students to campuses and draw attention to academic programs.

To restore momentum to the UW-Madison football program, Dreyfus suggested that the team play a post-season game against all-stars from the other four-year UW campuses. Such a game would be a sellout at Camp Randall Stadium, he predicted.

Dreyfus said recruitment of minority students and faculty into higher education is important, but he opposed the idea of programs that involve recruiting faculty and students from one campus to another. ■

Grant boosts paper science program

The Lake States Section of the Technical Association of the Pulp and Paper Industry (TAPPI) has given $16,000 to UW-SP for an endowed scholarship fund.

When the professional organization meets its own goal of donating $50,000, the endowment will generate funds to provide three annual scholarships for students in the sophomore, junior and senior classes.

TAPPI's previous contributions to the endowment amounted to $20,000.

Scott Stimart, Appleton, of J.M. Huber Inc. and chair of Lakes States TAPPI and Bill Bliesner, also of Appleton, of Thilmany Paper and a representative of the UW-SP Paper Science Foundation, made the presentation to UW-SP officials.

The UW-SP Paper Science Foundation has been accepting funds for several years from donors for an endowment, and TAPPI has been one of the most active participants in this effort. ■

New chancellor pledges to raise value of your diploma

By Keith Sanders, Chancellor

Very special places like the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point make it easy to be the new "kid on the block."

Long before we moved to Stevens Point, Carol and I were assured that this community and university are filled with warm, friendly people. And indeed, we shall always remember the kindnesses and hospitality that we've been shown as newcomers.

An old Chamber of Commerce slogan touts Stevens Point as a place "Where People Make the Difference." But we also appreciate the beauty of the countryside in Central Wisconsin, the security of living in a safe environment, and the good will that is so evident between town and gown. Few heads of schools this size can make such broad claims.

Getting to know your alma mater and its many assets is quite a task. The school is steeped in a history filled with success stories from 1894 to the present. The curriculum is diverse, with an impressive variety of nationally-acclaimed programs. The excellent teaching at Point is a hallmark of our greatness.

But these are features about UW-SP you've known all along. For us, they confirm our enthusiasm for Stevens Point and the commitment we made to the campus when I was selected as chancellor last January.

Undoubtedly you are interested in the direction I would like to take UW-SP. Yes, you can expect some changes to occur in order for the university to remain a vital institution as it moves into the 21st century. We will make tough decisions and be responsive to a changing society. Challenges will be met positively, but not precipitously. You can be certain that we will always honor UW-SP's traditions and respect her institutional strengths. We are now in the midst of the most extensive planning process in the history of the institution. It will produce a new set of priorities for the 1990s.

The record of my predecessor poses a great challenge to us. Chancellor Marshall brought UW-SP forward in any number of areas despite some very difficult financial constraints. During his administration, curricular advances occurred including the development of a wellness program that has gained national prominence. Major construction was requested from and later approved by state officials, notably an addition that doubled the size of the library, a new home for the paper science department and the Health Enhancement Center currently in progress. The school was applauded for its efforts in advancing uncommonly high levels of writing and computing competencies. Faculty governance, ever strong here, was further strengthened. Progress was made in improving salaries of faculty and academic staff. And, student activities were encouraged; both athletics and the arts enjoyed a golden age during the Marshall years.

Just this fall, the resourceful faculty and staff I inherited from Phil Marshall pulled off an academic coup that pleases me very much: the high school scholastic rank of the new freshman class they recruited is superior to any entering class in memory, maybe even in the history of the school. So, I do believe the timing of my arrival offers special opportunities for all of us. We are very close to our centennial, a time for new commitments to UW-SP on the part of everyone associated with it, a time for a leader to rally constituents.

As graduates, I invite you to view our approaching 100th anniversary as an opportunity to be involved with your school in very special ways. Please remember that we need your help, and we hope you'll find it personally fulfilling to support us. I intend to play an integral role in encouraging your continued involvement with your alma mater, particularly through Traditions in Action campaigns.

In this, my first letter to UW-SP's alumni, I wish to thank all of you for your help in the past. You are graduates of a very fine university, one that commands respect not only across the United States but in many foreign lands as well. I believe this university is even greater than the public realizes. The value of your diploma from UW-SP will continue to increase as our school's reputation grows. As your new chancellor, I plan to work hard to foster this growth. It's a great pleasure for Carol and I to join all of you as part of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. ■

Mason bequest provides for video encyclopedia

What is billed as the state's first installations of the Video Encyclopedia of the 20th Century is now available in the Learning Resources Center at UW-SP.

About 2,200 separate video segments, totaling more than 77,000 hours of original newsreel and documentary footage from public and private collections, are included in the system.

Arne Arneson, library director, calls it a "fantastic resource that will really make history come alive for people."

Creators focused on science, technology, sports, foreign affairs, politics, inventions and social trends—basically all aspects of life—in this century. The material is stored on about 38 silver discs, which are approximately the same size as long-playing records.

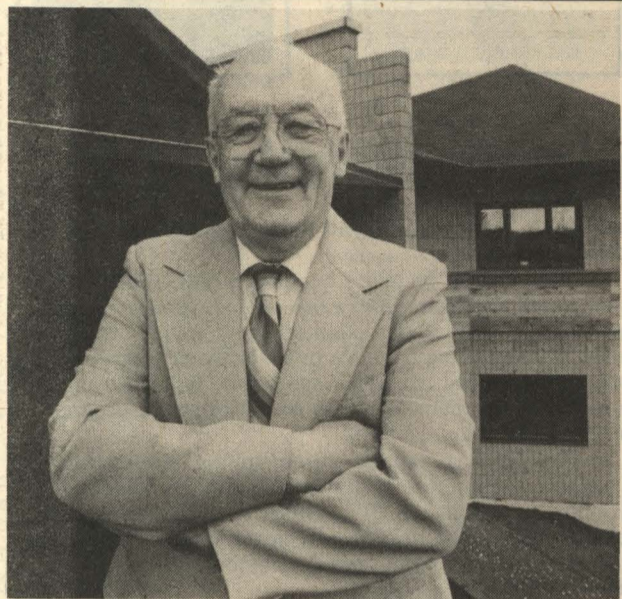

Arneson said he doubted that it would have been possible for the university to buy the system had it not been for a bequest received some time ago from the late Syble Mason, a longtime librarian at UW-SP.

The $12,000 cost was defrayed by a fund she provided for library use at the time of her death in August of 1987. She left her entire estate to charities, including the university. UW-SP was her alma mater as well as her employer, from 1930 to 1969.

The new teaching tool is a product of CEL Educational Resources of New York City, and its representatives informed Arneson that the system in Stevens Point is one of the first in Wisconsin.

Included is a master index with an alphabetical listing of people, subjects and categories plus a daily index of significant events for each day of the year. An accompanying reference set contains four volumes which give detailed identification and background information on all of the 2,217 film segments in the system. Those printed materials accompany the videodiscs and the laser player, which transfers the images to a monitor. ■

Awards

William Sylvester

New Treehaven hall named for Sylvester

William Sylvester was publicly thanked in May for his role in transforming a marginal cow pasture into a natural resources field station that is bringing international recognition to UW-SP.

Treehaven's newly-constructed assembly hall, with seating for 125 people, was dedicated in his name on the nearly 1,000-acre nature preserve east of Tomahawk.

Sylvester, who lives at 211 Green Ave., in Stevens Point, is a retired forestry professor at UW-SP who had a longtime association with Jacque and Dorothy Vallier, donors of the field station land. The Valliers also have been major contributors of funds for construction work that has been underway at Treehaven since the early 1980s.

The assembly hall was filled with Sylvester's friends, former colleagues and family members in a dedication ceremony marking the completion of a nearly quarter-million-dollar addition connecting a main lodge with a classroom building. The William Sylvester Auditorium is on the ground level and the Irvin Young Dining Room is on the second floor.

The Irvin Young Foundation of Palmyra provided about one-third of the money for the new addition and has made contributions for previous construction. Treehaven's main lodge also bears the name of Young, who was an inventor.

Dorothy Vallier announced the naming of the Sylvester Auditorium after telling of the assistance the longtime forester gave in the early 1950s when she began searching for land to use in establishing a tree farm. He remained involved in the transformation of the property from pasture land to a protected area for wild flora and fauna.

Sylvester was on the staff of Trees for Tomorrow, Inc. for 23 years before taking a position on the natural resources faculty at UW-SP in 1969. He was in his former position when Treehaven was being founded and at UW-SP when the Valliers decided to arrange for an organization to take over the property and continue their philosophy of its management. Sylvester suggested Treehaven become a natural resources camp for students.

Leonard De Baker, past president of the UW-SP Foundation, said at the dedication/naming ceremony that Jacque and Dorothy Vallier of Tomahawk and Mequon, provided $90,000 toward the building; Mrs. Fern Young who heads the Irvin Young Foundation which memorializes her husband, donated $70,000; Kopmeier Family Fund of the Milwaukee Foundation, $10,000; Norman Bassett Foundation of Madison, $5,000; Margaret Rivers Fund of Stillwater, Minn., $2,500; George Kress Foundation of Green Bay, Nekoosa Packaging Corp. of Tomahawk, Thomas H. Jacob Foundation of Wausau, all $1,000; and six individual contributors of smaller amounts.

Corky McReynolds, director of Treehaven since it opened in 1985, said that in addition to the use by UW-SP students during the summer camp season, it is booked much of the time for adult education, Elderhostel, governmental agency and professional organization meetings.

But its greatest value is for the students, McReynolds continued, in providing a place where they "don't just see a single tree, but everything and the tree." The curriculum is integrated, he explained, so regardless of the major being pursued, the student sees the interrelationship between forestry, wildlife, soil, water and so forth. ■

State superintendent among latest 'Distinguished Alumnus' designees

Five graduates of UW-SP, including the state superintendent of public instruction, were given "Distinguished Alumnus" awards June 12 at the school's annual reunion day.

The honorees bring to 53 the total number of former students who have been cited by UW-SP since the recognition was established in 1969.

Award recipients are:

Ruth Johnson Cady, Shoreview, Minn.; the late Royal Gordon, Milwaukee; State Superintendent of Public Instruction Herbert Grover, Madison; Marjorie Warner, Stevens Point; and Inman Whipple, Rohnert Park, Calif.

They were among about 175 alumni and friends of UW-SP who participated in a full day of activities on campus.

Mrs. Cady, a native of Wausau, was a member of the class of 1939 in home economics and taught that subject in public schools for many years in Minnesota. She was one of the key planners of the 1988 International Federation of Home Economics Congress in Minneapolis. This year, Phi Upsilon Omicron, the honorary society in home economics, named a scholarship for her. She also is a former 4-H club leader with 20 years of service, a life member of the American Home Economics Association, and a member of the Associates 1000 of the University of Minnesota, where she earned a master's degree.

Royal Gordon

Gordon, who died in January near his 90th birthday, grew up in Nelsonville and Stevens Point, and made his mark as an official for the state in probation and parole matters. He served as the Milwaukee County supervisor for the Department of Corrections. His most notable public service was serving as co-founder of Next Door Foundation in Milwaukee, a rehabilitation center for inner city residents. He will be honored posthumously by the foundation later this year on its 20th anniversary. Gordon, who was a 1921 graduate of UW-SP, was a talented vocalist who sang with the Viking Quartet of Madison, which gained popularity in New York City in the 1920s. He also had his own radio show for a time and was in a traveling musical company. His widow, Donna, and a daughter, accepted the award.

Grover has served as Wisconsin's chief school official since 1981 after having been in the Wisconsin Legislature as a representative from Shawano and Menomonie Counties for nearly a decade and a school superintendent in Monona Grove and Niagara. He has a doctorate from UW-Madison, a master's degree from American University and a bachelor's degree from St. Norbert University and chose UW-SP to do his academic work leading to teaching certification in the 1960s. It was reported that Executive Educator Magazine has named him one of the top 100 scholastic executives in North America. Today, he helps oversee his alma mater as a member of the UW System Board of Regents.

Warner, a Stevens Point native and 1940 graduate, has strong family ties to the school throughout its history. She is the retired director of the Charles M. White Memorial Library in Stevens Point, and during her tenure the Mail Box Library program was begun for residents throughout Portage County. She credits her career decision on the fact that, as a student, she was given employment in the college library here for 25 cents per hour. Her work in behalf of historic preservation was cited by the university as one of her notable public service achievements. While serving as president and director of the UW-SP Alumni Association, Warner was one of the leaders in the campaign to save Old Main from the wrecker's ball. Likewise, she has worked for preservation of architecturally-distinctive and historic buildings throughout the area and has compiled information about them, particularly those in Stevens Point's downtown.

Whipple, class of 1938 and a state champion boxer for his school, is a native of the town of Lanark. He began his career as a coach and teacher at Viroqua High School and then went into factory management and eventually into independent sales work, particularly with furniture. He has been a director and vice president of a savings bank in New Jersey. His public service has included work as a speaker on Americanism, history and business; as a counselor to young business people for the Senior Corps of Retired Executives; through active participation in the Masonic Lodge and its related Scottish Rite and genealogical organizations. The city of Rohnert Park, Calif., cited him in 1982 for heroic effort in the saving of a human life and the California Writers Club gave him the Jack London Writers Award in 1983. ■

Foytek

Roman

Vercauteren

UW-SP cites coaches

UW-SP has given its annual "Coaching Excellence Award" to three alumni who serve on high school or university faculties in Prentice, Oshkosh and Stevens Point.

The honorees are:

—Joe Foytek, class of 1975, head girl's basketball coach at Prentice High for nine years.

—George Roman, class of 1958, baseball coach at Stevens Point Area Senior High for 11 years.

—Deb Vercauteren, class of 1976, head women's cross country and track coach at UW-Oshkosh for eight years.

They were honored at UW-SP's recent homecoming banquet at the University Center.

Foytek has amassed a record of 207 wins and 13 losses during nine seasons at Prentice. His teams have won eight Marawood Conference Titles. The teams have an 80-0 record in regular season play in the last four years. His 1981, 1982 and 1989 teams won the Class C state championships. His most recent honor was his selection in March as the 1989 Associated Press Coach of the Year for girl's basketball.

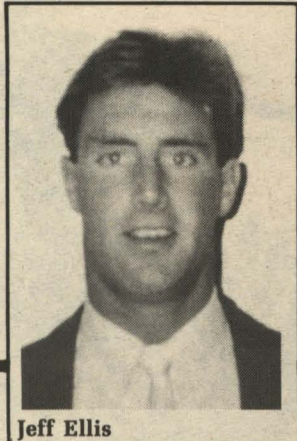

Roman has been a coach for 24 years, and during his tenure at SPASH, his baseball teams have gone to the state tournament six times and won the top prize in 1979, 1987 and 1989. Roman was chosen as the Wisconsin High School Baseball Coach of the Year for 1989 after winning the District 2 Coach of the Year citations for three successive years.

Vercauteren coached three successive Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference cross country championship teams, beginning in 1986. In 1987 and 1988, her UW-O squad won the NCAA Division III National Championship. She was named the WWIAC Coach of the Year in 1983, 1986, 1987 and 1988. In addition, her Oshkosh track team won conference championships in both indoor and outdoor competition the past two years, and both times she was the WWIAC Track Coach of the Year.

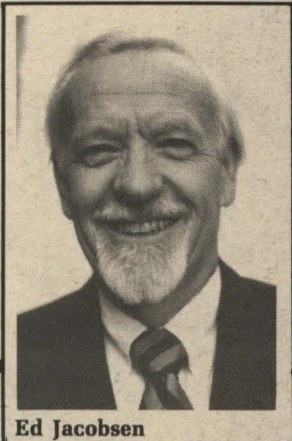

Vercauteren and Roman were previously honored by their alma mater as inductees into the Pointer Athletic Hall of Fame in recognition of their athletic prowess while students on campus. ■

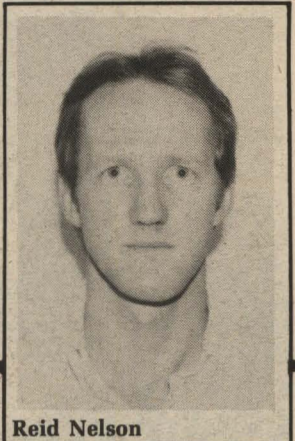

Lori Vanden Bergh

Jeff Ellis

Ed Jacobsen

Reid Nelson

Six more sports greats honored

Six former sports standouts at UW-SP were inducted into the school's athletic hall of fame Oct. 7 in conjunction with the annual homecoming celebration on campus.

Honorees were:

Lori Cox Vanden Bergh, 2475 Bluestone Place, Green Bay; Jeff "Bo" Ellis, 14230 W. Armour Ave., New Berlin; Ed Jacobsen, 7 Bis Rue Paul Bert, No. 9200, Nanterre, France; Reid Nelson, 2912 34th Ave. S., No. 4, Minneapolis; Ron Ternouth, 5936 N. 42nd St., Milwaukee; Bill Zuiker, 303 W. 17th St., Marshfield.

The inductees were special guests at several homecoming events during the day, including the afternoon homecoming football game at Goerke Field and UW-SP alumni dinner in the evening at the University Center.

Vanden Bergh was UW-SP's first All-American in volleyball. The Green Bay native lettered all four years and earned All-Conference honors in 1977 and 1979. She was named to the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, Division III team in 1979 and was given the Pointer MVP Award in 1979.

Now a teacher of physical education of health at De Pere High School, she also is the varsity volleyball coach there and assistant coach in basketball and track. She returns to UW-SP each summer to assist in staffing the university volleyball camps.

Ellis won national championship honors twice in 1980, in the two-mile indoor walk (in NAIA record time) and the 10,000 meter outdoor walk. He earned All-American honors in each of his four seasons, for a total of nine times.

He was named the outstanding freshman male athlete at UW-SP in 1978 and the outstanding male athlete of all classes in 1980, the same year he was placed on the Wisconsin State University Conference Scholastic Athletic team. He was an all-conference winner 12 times in five different events and set four conference records. He also was a co-captain of both the track and cross country teams.

The New Berlin native now is a pilot with United Airlines, based at O'Hare Airport in Chicago but returns to campus as chief coordinator of the Pointer Track Alumni Association.

Jacobsen, who grew up in Wisconsin Rapids, was a track star who was unbeaten during his campus career, winning eight conference titles in the mile and two-mile runs. He also set conference records in the mile (4:28.2) and two-mile (9:55.4). In 1954, he was named the outstanding senior male athlete, elected captain of the track team, named to the Dean's Honor Roll and elected president of the Pointer Student Council.

Jacobsen continued his running while in the U.S. Army, finishing fourth in the 5,000-meter run in the Fourth Army Championships and fourth in the 1,500-meter run in the All Army Championships with a time of 4:10.

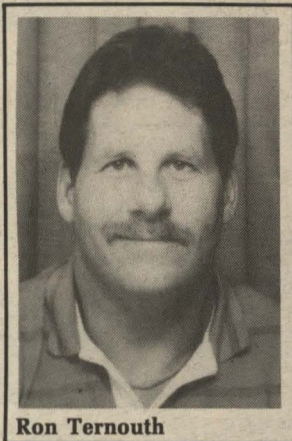

After military service, Jacobsen earned a master's degree in mathematics from UW-Madison and a Ph.D. from the University of Kansas and began an overseas career in math education in 1958, lecturing in Turkey, Spain, Kenya, Swaziland, Lesotho and Botswana. He now is stationed in Paris at the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization where he is responsible for its mathematics education program.

Nelson, who is originally from New Richland, Minn., capped his four-year baseball career on campus in 1977 by earning All Conference and All District 14 first team for a second consecutive year. During those seasons, he set records for runs batted in with 33 in 1976 and 34 in 1977. Currently, he holds the school record for games played in a career with 115 and most total bases in a single season with 85. Until broken in recent years, Nelson held records for hits in a season (43) and career (115), doubles in a career (21), triples in a career (4), career home runs (27), career total bases (225), career slugging percentage (.659), bases on balls in a career (68) and career on-base percentage (.452).

Today, he is on the staff of a cardiology clinic in Minneapolis, holding a master's degree in exercise physiology from Illinois State University.

A unanimous All-WSUC choice during his senior season in 1985, Ternouth accomplished a rare feat by leading the Pointers in rushing (559 yards) and interceptions (4). He earned four letters in both football and baseball.

Ternouth, a Milwaukee native, was given a tryout with the Minnesota Vikings in the fall of 1966 and was one of the team's last cuts and was sent to its farm team, the Richmond Rebels of the Continental Football League. There he was started as a safety and was invited back to the Vikings' tryout camp in 1967 but was drafted into the U.S. Army in May of that year and spent two years in the service. Ternouth then returned to football, spending three seasons with the West Allis Spartans of the Central States Professional Football League from 1969 through 1971 but gave up the game after having knee surgery.

He has been a teacher of physical education in West Allis and currently is in sales and distributing for a major liquor distributor and resides in Greenfield.

Zuiker was a four-year letterman and earned three all-WSUC awards, and was twice named the team MVP and member of the All-District 14 squad, finishing his career as the school's number two all-time scorer. Following his senior season, he was named to the Academic All-American team by the College of Sports Information Directors of America.

During 1979-80, he set a school record for free throw percentage (91 percent) in season, a record which stands today. He was only the third player to ever lead the Pointers in scoring for three consecutive seasons and finished his career with 1,396 points, then second best on record, and currently fifth on the school's all-time list.

The Minocqua native also lettered one year in track and field, finishing fourth in the WSUC outdoor meet in the high jump. He recorded a career-best jump of 6'8."

His career since graduation has taken him to the University of Wisconsin, where he served as a graduate assistant basketball coach for two seasons before earning his master's degree in English literature in 1986.

Zuiker spent the next two years as an assistant coach at Illinois State University before beginning his career as an English teacher at Marshfield High School. He began his first season as the head coach of the UW-Marshfield basketball team this season. ■

Albert Croft

Toby Goldberg

Facilities named for Goldberg, Croft

A ceremony and reception April 29 commemorated the naming of two campus facilities at UW-SP for communication professors who died in 1984.

The memorials on the second floor of the Communication Arts Center are for Albert J. Croft and Toby Goldberg. A seminar room now bears Croft's name and a lecture hall with 100 seats honors Goldberg's memory.

Croft came to UW-SP in 1967 as professor and chairman of the speech department. Under his leadership, a major revision of the curriculum was done and the communication department was established two years later, integrating journalism, speech, broadcasting, public relations and other broad areas into one overall program. He was the first chairman of the new department and during the mid-1970s was the architect of the graduate program in communication.

Croft's specialty was organizational communication and rhetorical criticism.

His career included teaching appointments at Northern Iowa University, Northwestern University, Loyola University, Southern Illinois University and the University of Oklahoma. He also served as chief of communication for the U.S. Agency for International

Computing network cited

Readers of nationally-circulated business magazines were introduced throughout much of 1989 to a computer network that has been developed at UW-SP with assistance from AT&T.

A two-page ad began appearing in the spring in about 20 publications, featuring a large photograph and the text of a conversation between an AT&T representative and a university computing specialist about why and how the network was established.

Forbes, Fortune, Scientific American, Business Week, ComputerWorld and Chronicle of Higher Education are among the magazines carrying the ad, which was paid for by AT&T.

AT&T expressed pride that UW-SP has been designated as a Center of Excellence for Distributed Academic Computing by the UW System Board of Regents. "The majority of the 9,000 students on campus regularly use the network for coursework and homework. Faculty have integrated computing into 41 percent of their coursework," it was reported. ■

UW-SP and Point Beer make 'Time'

Stevens Point, its brewery, university and most important agricultural product, the potato, were the subject of a nationally-circulated news story this fall.

America's suds lovers were informed that the Stevens Point Brewery had marketed a new product, Spud Premier, to coincide with a scholarship fund-raising effort at UW-SP.

The Associated Press story appeared in daily newspapers across the country and even made its way into the Sept. 11 edition of "Time."

The event in the spotlight was the third annual Spud Bowl, featuring a football game, pre-game picnic and party at which potato products were served. The beverage was a locally-made beer made from the apple of the earth as opposed to the staple base of corn.

The brewery gave UW-SP a cut of its pre-game sales in local stores and provided a large supply that was sold the day of the Spud Bowl. All told, about $11,000 was cleared, nearly all of which was earmarked for scholarships to students from the area's agricultural community.

At the pre-game activities, potato beer drinkers watched students compete in a variety of games including dunking for gum in a vat of mashed potatoes.

Incidentally, the entire affair was a success. The Pointer football team defeated the Crusaders of Valparaiso University of Indiana, 49-15. ■

Development in South Vietnam and as executive vice president for a Lansing, Mich.-based consulting firm that evaluated training centers for the hard-core unemployed.

"Above all, whether as a teacher, colleague, or nationally recognized scholar, he was a visionary," the plaque states.

Goldberg came to UW-SP in 1971 after serving as an interviewer for American Research Bureau in Maryland, publicity writer for a public relations agency in Boston and continuity writer for WHA TV in Madison, where she also taught and did research.

She was involved in the development of the film program and was one of the founders and early faculty advisers of the University Film Society.

In her teaching, she raised awareness to gender equality and introduced a course on women and the media. She also established special sections of communication fundamentals for international students.

The plaque noted that her human rights convictions were "grounded in the Jewish experience and her identity with the Holocaust. 'Do you believe that I am the same person I would have been had this not taken place?' she asked. 'It shadows my life; it has shaded my encounter with the world.' " ■

Focus on Marriage

Professor sees fewer divorces

By Sarah Clanton

"Till death do us part," vow the bride and groom who expect their relationship to last that long. But in recent years, the couple's chances of actually realizing a lifelong commitment have been 50-50, at best.

However, it now appears marriages are getting stronger and lasting longer in this country. National divorce statistics are beginning to change, and a human development specialist at UW-SP believes the number of marriages ending in divorce will continue to decrease over the next several years.

According to Professor James Gingles, the divorce rate has leveled off throughout the United States and in some regions of the country it has started to drop. He says this recent movement toward more stable marriages will continue and marriages of the future will become more durable and longlasting.

Gingles cites 10 reasons for this trend. They are, according to the professor:

- The divorce "boom"—Ironically, one of the major positive effects on the longevity of current and future marriages may be the unstable marriages of the recent past. Young people, especially those whose parents have divorced, seem increasingly concerned about building successful relationships. They are becoming more thoughtful and less emotional about choosing a partner. In the last few decades, young people may have been anticipating too much from their spouses, expecting their mates to fulfill all of their emotional needs. Today's marital unions seem to be based more on practical considerations such as compatibility, financial security and a desire to have children. This indicates a return to the more traditionally based marriages of earlier eras.

- Older couples—Americans are waiting longer to take the big step. The average age for a bride is now 24 and for the groom, 26, and the averages continue to rise. This is a positive trend—generally speaking, older partners are more mature, have a good sense of self, are more settled, and will make better spouses and parents. The more mature the couple, the better they are prepared both professionally and personally, for a successful relationship. People who marry as teenagers have a 100 percent greater chance of splitting up than couples who wed in their 20s or 30s.

- More education—Nationally each year a larger percentage of young people are pursuing higher education. In Wisconsin, for example, 65 to 75 percent of high school graduates are choosing to attend vocational school or college. Statistically, men and women with a high school education are more likely to divorce than are college-educated individuals. Research has shown that the more educated people are, the more likely they are to develop stronger and less stressful intimate relationships.

- Financial security—Along with increasing maturity and educational levels, people who marry later are better established in their careers. Generally, the more occupationally established people are, the less financial stress they will experience in marriage. The more secure a couple is financially, the less prone they are to divorce. The exception to this involves high-income women, who are less likely to marry in the first place and are more apt to divorce if the marriage relationship is not satisfactory.

- Religious activity—A current national upsurge in religious activities is creating a sense of tradition, solidarity and support for couples. The husband and wife are identified as a unit within the religious community and this involvement helps to add union and cohesiveness to a marriage. Research has shown the more isolated a family is, the more likely it is to be a dysfunctional unit, especially in a transient society. Membership in a church can provide needed support similar to that of an extended family. This sense of community tends to build rituals and traditions into the life of a family which adds to its stability.

- Less role confusion—The transition to egalitarian relationships with broader roles for both men and women has largely been accomplished in this country. Between 60 and 70 percent of women with preschool children are currently in the work force, and 50 percent of women who give birth to a child return to the job within a year. Consequently, both father and mother are sharing child-care duties. For women who work outside the home, a career enhances their self-concept and sense of identity. This is especially important when the children are grown. Women who have pursued other interests experience fewer problems with the "empty nest" syndrome. For men, having more involvement with home and children has proved to be enriching and rewarding. For children who grow up in dual-career households, sharing domestic and financial obligations are normal and realistic expectations.

- Acceptance of different lifestyles—Only about 15 percent of the families in this country are "monogamous units"—a father, a mother and 1.7 children. Singles, couples without children, single-parent families, extended families and reconstituted families now make up the vast majority of American households. People are living in a variety of situations and selecting alternatives to wedlock. For instance, many individuals are choosing to remain single. More than 15 percent of the total population is unmarried, and many couples are opting to live together outside the bonds of matrimony. Because other alternatives are becoming more acceptable, people are not rushing to the altar as quickly as they once did. The couples who do marry appear to have more stable relationships and make the decision to have children only after considerable forethought.

- Uncertain economic conditions—Traditionally, divorce statistics decrease during periods of fiscal uncertainty. Couples can't afford to split up or may feel financially insecure, so they work harder at staying married. Even though America has experienced a relatively long period of prosperity, the economic climate probably will not continue to improve and may very well decline. People will be more prone to stay married because they are afraid of the financial risks of divorce.

- The statistical crunch—The population is aging and so are its marriages. People are 25 times more apt to divorce in the third year of marriage than they are after 30 years. For instance, in the United States in 1987, 50,000 divorces occurred after three years of marriage; 47,000 after four years; and 2,000 after 30 years. Also, since the birth rate has declined in the recent past, there will be fewer young people, fewer young marriages and fewer divorces. Young relationships experience more stresses—the husband and wife have not adjusted to each other and are usually involved in achieving occupational success to the detriment of their relationship. By the time couples have been together for many years, they know themselves and each other well. They seem to be more concerned with keeping their marriages vital and alive.

- Conservative sexual climate—The current generation of young people appears to be more interested in establishing friendships and less interested in emotionally charged romantic relationships. Surprisingly, extended adolescence has been accompanied by healthier attitudes toward dating and more conservative sexual behavior. Research by Bernard Murstein of Connecticut College compared the sexual experiences of teens in 1979 and in 1986. In 1979, 66 percent of the female respondents had lost their virginity by age 16; in 1986 the figure was 20 percent. For men in 1979, the loss of virginity by age 16 was 70 percent; in 1986, it was 43 percent. "Cinderella" stories have been replaced by friendship, companionship and a healthier attitude toward sexuality. One of the few positive things to come out of the AIDS crisis is a more open atmosphere, including discussion about venereal diseases and taking responsibility for sexual behavior. These conservative attitude and behavior changes are supported by Murstein's research. Among young women who were sexually active in 1979, their last sexual experience had been with their steady boyfriend 39 percent of the time and with an acquaintance, also 39 percent. In 1986, 74 percent had been with their steady boyfriends and only 18 percent had relations with someone they did not know well. Young people today are better adjusted socially and sexually, more open about intimate subjects, and also more responsible. This bodes well for the future of marriage.

In general, Gingles says, marriages are healthier than they were 20 to 30 years ago. In the past, couples tried to hide their problems and pretended to be happy. "There are few Donna Reed or Ward and June Cleaver marriages out there," Gingles quips. Open communication and commitment to work things out means stronger relationships and better families.

Of course, badly dysfunctional families will always exist, but the professor believes past research has tended to concentrate too much on relationships that don't work. He says more emphasis should be placed on the strength and the vitality of the American family ■

New Appointments

French scholar wins appointment

Michael Danahy

Michael Danahy, a specialist in French who has won awards for his teaching and writing, is the new chairman of UW-SP's Department of Foreign Languages.

He succeeds Mark Seiler who returned to full-time teaching of German after heading the department for 15 years.

Danahy began his duties in July after serving the past two years as head of the French program at Hollins College in Roanoke, Va.

From 1974 to 1987, he was on the faculty of Pennsylvania State University and for seven years before that he taught at Wesleyan University in Connecticut.

Danahy is the winner of the Gilbert Chinard Prize of the American Association of Teachers of French (AATF) for the best book manuscript of 1988 entitled, The Feminization of the Novel.

He also has received the Distinguished Teaching Award given in 1984 by the Penn State Liberal Arts Alumni Society and the Chinard Prize for Pedagogical Scholarship from the AATF and the Alliance Francaise de Washington.

A native of Massachusetts, Danahy received his bachelor's degree summa cum laude from Fordham College in 1963. He then studied at Columbia University and received his Ph.D. in Romance languages from Princeton University. As an undergraduate he spent a year in France in the honors program at La Sorbonne.

He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Sigma Iota and the Fordham Honors Program. ■

Bowen heads international study offerings

Robert O. Bowen, a longtime health education specialist on campus, is UW-SP's new director of the Office of International Programs.

He is responsible for the administration of permanent semester-long study programs throughout the world—in England, Poland, Germany, Spain, Australia, Taiwan, Greece and New Zealand—plus several others that are held in shorter durations during midyear breaks and summer sessions.

Bowen is the third person to head the office since its establishment about 20 years ago. He succeeds Helen Corneli who has returned to the English faculty as a full-time teacher and the founder, Pauline Isaacson.

A professor of health and physical education, he will continue in that role on a one-quarter time basis by teaching a course on "Introduction to Health Promotion."

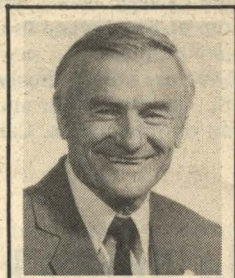

Bowen's international experience began when he was a member of the armed forces in the Pacific during the Korean Conflict. He has since been a faculty leader for a group in the United Kingdom for one summer and for one semester-long program in England. In 1988, he became a temporary administrator of international programs and has traveled to East and West Germany and Poland to review UW-SP's offerings in those places.

About 400 students take part in the program during the regular school year. The various offerings are one of the university's more effective avenues for attracting collegians here from across the country. About half of the enrollees for overseas study are from other campuses.

Bowen, a native of Curtiss in Clark County, has held several administrative assignments at UW-SP since he joined the faculty in 1966. He has directed the Administrative Management Training Program here for the Indian Health Service for two years and been head of the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics for five years.

The professor has had a major role in the development of UW-SP's wellness program and has been president of the Wisconsin Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. For the past five years, he has been chairman of the Wisconsin Legislative Health and Fitness Day in the State Capitol.

The holder of two degrees from UW-Madison, Bowen also has a doctorate in health from Indiana University. He was a teacher and coach for the Brown Deer Public School System for eight years before coming to Stevens Point. ■

Gerard McKenna

Milwaukee music chair named dean

Gerard McKenna, 47, chairman of the Music Department at the University of Milwaukee, assumed duties Aug. 1 as dean of the College of Fine Arts and Communication at UW-SP.

He was one of 91 candidates from across the country who vied for the position to succeed the late Paul Palombo. Roger Bullis of the communication faculty was the acting dean for one year after Palombo's death on July 4, 1988.

"Professor McKenna is widely known and highly respected not only throughout this state but in this region of the country as a music educator for all levels," said Vice Chancellor Howard Thoyre in announcing the appointment.

"The fine arts area of this university has undergone considerable growth and development in the past five years. Faculty members worked tirelessly to improve each of the programs within the college, and under Dean McKenna's able leadership, I am certain these strengths will continue to be built upon," Thoyre added.

In addition to his appointment as dean, McKenna will have faculty status in the Department of Music. Also in the college, are the Departments of Art and Design and Theatre Arts and the Division of Communication.

McKenna, a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., has spent the past 15 years on UW-Milwaukee's music faculty. He has been department chairman since 1981 and served during the 1984-85 academic year as acting dean of the School of Fine Arts. From 1979 to 1981, he was associate dean of the school, and before that a full-time teacher.

He holds a Ph.D. in music education from the University of Nebraska, master of music and bachelor of music degrees from Kansas State College. He has taken performance training in bassoon and piano.

McKenna began his career in education in 1965 by teaching and establishing the string program for the public schools of Neosho, Mo. Three years later, he became supervisor of music for College High Laboratory School in Pittsburg, Kan. In 1971 and 1972, he was a humanities specialist on a Title III project in the public schools of Parsons, Kan., followed by a two-year stint as visiting instructor of music education at the University of Nebraska. Since then, he has been in Milwaukee as a specialist in instrumental and general music methods.

In recent years, he has been involved in the graduate music education program at UW-M, specializing in curricular planning plus general and instrumental music. He has written many successful grant proposals and articles for professional journals and played key roles in the development of centers advancing excellence in teaching, music curriculum and chamber music.

He has served or currently is on the boards of the Wisconsin Music Educators Conference, Civic Music Association, Wisconsin Alliance for Arts Education and The Undergraduate Teaching Improvement Council for the UW System.

He and his wife, Alice, have two daughters. ■

IBM appoints Wresch

William Wresch, chairman of the Department of Mathematics and Computing, has been named a consulting scholar by the International Business Machines Corporation (IBM).

One of about 20 IBM instructional computing experts in the nation, Wresch will serve as a consultant on computer uses in university settings. A specialist in the use of computers in writing, he will assist personnel on other campuses throughout the United States.

Additional duties will involve planning, organizing conferences and workshops, and working with professional societies. ■

Aerial Circus ringmaster back on job

Monte Charles, ringmaster of UW-SP's potent "Aerial Circus" football teams of the early 1970s, returned to campus last fall to be a teacher, coach and administrator.

Charles is the school's new offensive football coordinator, director of the intramural program and a teacher of physical education.

His return is a victory, of sorts.

After serving four years on UW-SP's gridiron, Charles was forced to resign his coaching duties in 1976 after it was learned he had chronic lymphatic leukemia.

He fought the disease with his own brand of determination, recovering enough to resume his coaching career several years later. He then spent nine years coaching with various clubs in the Canadian Football League as well as the new Arena Football League.

Charles was with the Montreal team in the CFL when the Alouettes folded early in the 1987 season. He then returned to Stevens Point and served as a volunteer assistant for the Pointers as they went on to win the national championship in the NAIA Division II. (The title was later forfeited because of two ineligible players on the team.)

Back at UW-SP, his boss in the coaching role is John Miech, who played for Charles as a student here from 1972 to 1974. Later, Miech was an assistant to Charles as a graduate student during the 1975 and 1976 seasons.

Charles was a coach at UW-Superior and UW-Platteville for a total of 10 years before coming to UW-SP in 1972 and establishing a winning program here, as he had done at the two previous WSUC conference schools. ■

Staal serving AT&T

A member of the mathematics and computer science faculty at UW-SP is the nation's first AT&T Consulting Scholar.

Professor Bruce Staal, who came to Stevens Point in 1970 and served for many years as department chairman, is currently headquartered at the company's western regional office in Oakland, Calif. He is on sabbatical from his teaching duties throughout the academic year.

The new consulting scholar program represents a cooperative effort between the university and AT&T to share knowledge about academic computing. Staal will visit several universities in the western region, including campuses in California, Nevada and Washington State, to gain a better idea of how campuses are using the new technology in an academic environment. He also will attend national meetings, training sessions and workshops to acquire further knowledge about computer systems. He says he hopes to bring back information which will lead to even more useful applications at UW-SP.

In return, AT&T will utilize Staal's expertise gained during the computerization of the campus at UW-SP. He will make presentations and work with AT&T clients in regard to setting up systems at their own institutions.

Staal was invited by the communications company to be its first scholar. They have reimbursed UW-SP about $50,000 for his services and have provided Staal and his wife with moving and housing allowances. ■

Tropical forest advocate

The new Journal of Tropical Forest Science has three Americans on its 16-member editorial board, including Professor Hans Schabel of UW-SP. His involvement in the Malaysian-based quarterly comes at a time when tropical forests are being decimated worldwide at the rate of 50 acres per minute.

But the problem is showing signs of easing, he adds, and the establishment of the journal is a "reflection" of the concern.

Schabel serves on the editorial board with a representative of the U.S. Forest Products Laboratory in Madison and a professor from Harvard University. The other members are from nations surrounding the globe.

The journal is being sponsored by the United Nations and related organizations, German Agency for Technical Cooperation, Winrock International and the International Development Research Centre of Canada. Its office is in Malaysia.

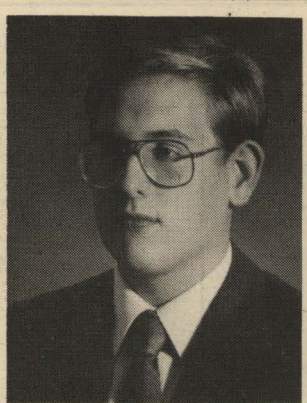

Schabel, a forester, brings unique credentials to the board. At UW-SP he serves as the founder/coordinator of the international resource management minor, a one-of-a-kind offering on this continent. The curriculum is designed to promote global awareness of environmental issues and aims to prepare students for overseas volunteer and work experience. ■

Allen Blocher

John Blocher

Steven Blocher

Tragedy befalls Blocher family

A friend, exceptionally fine teacher, trusted mentor who could soothe the roughest situations, a voice of calm who saw good in all occurrences, a man of love and compassion.

Those were descriptions of Professor Allen F. Blocher that were used in a memorial resolution by the UW-SP Faculty Senate following a boating accident near Stevens Point that claimed the life of the longtime member of the physics/astronomy faculty and his two sons, John and Steven.

They all drowned May 31 when their small vessel was swept over the spillway on the Wisconsin River, a short distance southwest of Stevens Point, during a period of high water.

Allen Blocher, who had served UW-SP for 31 years, was 56. His son, John, a UW-SP alumnus who was employed as manager of Point Bowl, was 28, and another son, Steven, a student at UW-Platteville, was 21.

Their funerals were held jointly at St. Paul United Methodist Church followed by burial in St. Joseph's Cemetery. Memorials were established with the UW-SP Foundation for Allen and Steven to support student scholarships, and with the Stevens Point Area Foundation for John to support annual competitions for local youngsters involved in junior bowling programs.

Allen Blocher was born November 6, 1932 in Minneapolis and was graduated from North High School there. He worked in Minneapolis one year at Westinghouse Corp. before enrolling at McPherson College in McPherson, Kan. He later did graduate study at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, earning a master's degree in physics. Blocher did additional study at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., and was twice chosen as a National Science Foundation fellow, for workshops at the University of Kansas in Lawrence and the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee.

He had most recently been involved in introducing the use of computers in physics instruction here and in studying whether pollutants in the environment are causing a greenhouse effect that, in turn, is leading to changes in the world's climate. Early in his campus career, he was instrumental in organizing the planetarium and served as its director.

He ranked among the five most senior full-time faculty members on campus and had served in a variety of offices in faculty government throughout his career. He was the current chairman of the Faculty Affairs Committee. Several years ago, he and his wife, Jean, led a group of UW-SP students on a semester abroad program to England.

For The Association of University of Wisconsin Professionals, he served as the local president and for the statewide group was vice president and membership chairman. In the later position, he was on leave from teaching post about two years to promote the organization among UW faculty throughout Wisconsin. He also participated in the American Association of Physics Teachers and its Wisconsin chapter.

The professor was one of the founders of the UW-SP Credit Union and a former president. He also took part in the Professors Investment Club and served for a time as a consultant on investment matters to the Oneida Tribal Council. He had taught courses in investments at Mid-State Technical College here.

In community affairs, he was a lay leader at St. Paul's United Methodist Church, past president of the Portage County Beekeepers Association, and longtime officer of the Wesley Foundation.

He and his wife, the former Jean Cullen of Lincoln, Neb., were married March 15, 1957. She survives.

Allen never served in the U.S. military. He was registered as a conscientious objector.

Besides his wife, his survivors are one daughter, Nancy Perri; two sons, Bill, Anoka, Minn., and David, a graduate student at Yale University in New Haven, Conn.; five grandchildren; three brothers, and two sisters.

John Allen Blocher was born here Feb. 21, 1961, and was graduated from Stevens Point Area Senior High School in 1979. He later completed a geography degree with emphasis in cartography from UW-SP.

Well known as a bowler, he took first place at two consecutive state tournaments in the junior league and later had logged perfect 300 scores in league play. John Blocher had coached junior bowling teams about 10 years, and led one of them to a state tournament Class E championship in 1986.

He was married to Kay Jacobson of Schofield on March 22, 1986. She survives.

John never served in the U.S. military. He was registered as a conscientious objector.

Steven Mark Blocher was born here April 15, 1968, and graduated from SPASH in 1986. At high school he excelled in tennis, sang in the Concert Choir, was a peer counselor and member of the National Honor Society. He attended UW-SP two years before transferring to UW-Platteville and had recently been initiated into membership in that school's chapter of the American Society of Refrigeration, Heating, and Air Conditioning Engineers. He also sang in the University Choir and was a member of its tennis team.

In Stevens Point, he had worked since 1984 at McDonald's Restaurant.

Steven had never served in the U.S. military. He was registered as a conscientious objector. ■

Franceschi-Stoll

Music prof dies at 42

Kathleen I. Franceschi-Stoll, 42, a cellist and assistant professor of music at UW-SP, died of cancer July 7 at University Hospital in Madison.

A memorial service for her was held at the St. Joseph Convent Chapel, and a fund was established in her honor with the American Cancer Society.

Franceschi-Stoll had served UW-SP since 1978, teaching college-level students in the Department of Music and area musicians enrolled in the American Suzuki Talent Education Center. She also was the principal cellist with the Central Wisconsin Symphony.

Throughout her career here, she appeared in numerous faculty recitals and was a member of the former American Arts Trio and Bukolt Trio.

The local chapter of Pi Kappa Lambda, an honorary music fraternity of which she was a member, cited her this spring for outstanding musicianship, and she was given a silver tray from the Department of Music in recognition of her service.

Born March 22, 1947 in Berkeley, Calif., she was the daughter of Alfred A. and the late Isabel Franceschi. She grew up in Oakland, Calif., and was graduated in 1969 with a music degree from San Francisco State University. She later earned a master of music degree from Northwestern University.

Franceschi-Stoll spent the early part of her career as a cellist with the Oakland Symphony, San Diego Symphony, San Diego Opera Orchestra and California Ballet Orchestra. She also taught for the San Diego Community College, was a founding member of the Fine Arts Forum of San Diego, and operated a private teaching studio there.

Her survivors are her husband, Jon C. Stoll, 2917 Algoma St., and her father and step-mother, Margot F. Franceschi of Sacramento, Calif. ■

Linda Burch killed

Lt. Col. Linda G. Burch, 44, a former member of the military science faculty and women's swimming coach at UW-SP, was killed April 28 in a one-vehicle accident in Leavenworth, Kan. She was traveling alone.

Funeral services were held at Fort Leavenworth, where she was stationed. Burial was in Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia. A memorial was established in her name for the Women's Army Corps Museum at Fort McClellan, Ala.

Burch, whose death occurred three days before she was scheduled to be promoted to the rank of full colonel, served at UW-SP from 1972 to 1975. When she arrived on campus, she was the only female faculty member of an otherwise all-male Army ROTC unit in the United States. She headed the women's swimming program two seasons.

After leaving, she commanded a military police unit at Fort McClellan and then became the first woman staff leader at the Combined Arms and Services Staff School at Fort Leavenworth. She was scheduled to assume command of the 14th Military Police Brigade in West Germany.

A native of Canton, Ohio, she had served in the Army for 23 years, beginning as a recruiting officer in Fort Jackson, S.C. She had two tours of duty in Germany. Besides graduating from schools operated by the military, she held bachelor's and master's degrees in education from Kent State University and the University of Southern California, respectively, plus degrees in military justice from Wichita State University and public administration from Golden Gate University.

Her only survivors are two brothers, David of Seattle, Wash., and Mark of Canton, Ohio. ■

Remembering our home ec matriarch

Bessie May Allen

In 1916, Bessie May Allen, director of the home economics department at the Stevens Point Normal School, and four of her students journeyed to Morristown, N.J., to set up a program offering "balanced meals at a moderate cost" for 25 persons, including 10 children and 15 adults."

Described in the local newspaper as "an experiment in home economics which may prove to be of great value to the public," the program was financed by "a wealthy lady of New York City."

"An engagement of this nature speaks well for the reputation of the home economics department of the Normal," the newspaper continued, "the staff having been chosen in preference to students from Columbia University, Pratt Institute, and Drexel Institute, which are much nearer Morristown. Besides their experience, which will be of considerable value, and the trip east, the young ladies will receive $50 a month."

Head of the home economics department at Stevens Point for 39 years, Bessie May Allen believed in practical, hands-on experience for her students. And as archaic as the old newspaper account sounds, Allen and her "young ladies" apparently were among early humanitarians who provided meals for the poor and homeless.

An Iowa native, Allen came to the Stevens Point Normal School in 1913. Her arrival coincided with the Board of Regents' approval of a major expansion of Old Main which added the east wing for "domestic sciences and arts" and an auditorium.

In 1915 the John F. Sims Cottage, where Allen supervised her students in the practice of household activities, was opened. Once again, she spearheaded a program in which students learned first-hand skills which enabled them to become effective home economics teachers.

A staunch champion of the area she headed, Allen fought to keep home economics as a viable offering at the university. In the 1930s the regents voted to curtail the program, but Allen mustered her forces and ensured that the decision was quickly reversed. Though the curriculum has changed significantly over the past 87 years, the School of Home Economics and the Division of Fashion and Interior Design continue to enroll more than 600 students in a variety of majors each year.

In an era when women traditionally served behind the scenes and men assumed leadership roles, Allen became the first female president of the college faculty. She also was instrumental in organizing the Wisconsin Home Economics Association which she served as president from 1924 to 1927. In addition, she was state founder and first president of Delta Kappa Gamma sorority.

While still serving as chairman of the department, she established an anonymous scholarship to recognize an outstanding junior student majoring in home economics. Following her retirement in 1952, she gave her consent to having the award called the Bessie May Allen Scholarship. About five years before her death, one of the two residence hall dining centers was named in her honor—Allen Center.

She died in 1969 at age 86. ■

Faculty Retirements

Oliver Andrews

Oliver Andrews, who spent 29 years as a chemistry professor at UW-SP and who won the campuswide competition for the "Excellence in Teaching Award" twice, has retired.

If he enjoyed popularity among students, he says it was because he tried to be empathetic with them. "You've got to put yourself in their position, at their level and then ask yourself, what am I going to get out of this class?"

He believes he has been fortunate to have an interest in chemistry because the subject offers "endless opportunities—if you can touch it or see it, it's chemistry."

His ties to UW-SP spanned 40 years. In 1949, after graduating from high school in his native Plymouth, Andrews came to the then Central State Teachers College because of an interest in its conservation program and the opportunity to play football. The team he joined was a conference champion that fall.

After graduation in 1953, he spent three years teaching science and coaching at Bonduel High School and two years at Green Bay West High. Sandwiched into the next decade were several stints with the National Science Foundation.

In 1956, he was one of about 50 teachers chosen for the first NSF program nationally to advance the status of secondary science instruction. The participants were enrolled at UW-Madison, where Andrews attended and received a master's degree, and the University of Oklahoma. Later, he was appointed to represent the NSF giving science demonstrations to high school groups in this part of the country. Then he did additional study at Kenyon College, Michigan State University, University of Kansas and Brown University.

He joined UW-SP's faculty in 1960 and was an ambassador of good will for the discipline of chemistry from UW-SP for several years as a conductor of programs for high school science classes throughout the state.

Accomplishments in which Andrews takes pride are the publication three years ago of his book, Basic Chemical Concepts, by Ginn Press of Lexington, Mass., and his selection in 1968 and again in 1975 as UW-SP's best teacher. ■

Russell Oliver

Russell Oliver's last official act as a UW-SP professor was to present a diploma for a bachelor's degree to his daughter, Karen, at the spring commencement.

After 25 years at the university and a total of 33 years in the field of education, Oliver retired and moved with his wife, Jean, to a home on Lake Wissota, near Chippewa Falls, where he spent part of his childhood.

Meanwhile, his daughter, one of his four children, went in search of her first teaching job.

Oliver has held several high-ranking positions at UW-SP throughout his career.

In 1967, as a relatively new faculty member, he was chosen as dean of UW-SP's then new branch campus at Medford and remained there until 1973. Some years later, the campus was closed for budget purposes. From 1978 to 1987, Oliver was head of the UW-SP School of Education and associate dean of the College of Professional Studies. In addition to teaching, his most recent administrative assignment was coordinating the graduate program for elementary and secondary teachers.

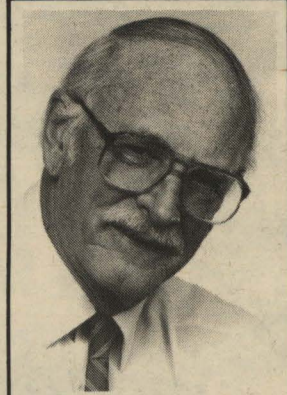

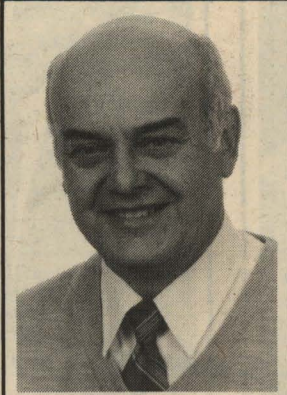

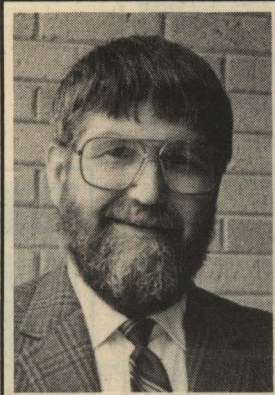

He says he is encouraged by the advances being made in public education and by the quality and desire of the students preparing to become teachers. UW-SP is well-positioned for its role in teacher education, he contends, because of high marks it consistently receives in evaluations by accreditation and professional organizations and the State Department of Public Instruction.

Oliver, a native of Eau Claire, served four years of Navy duty and then became a teacher of history and mathematics upon graduation from UW-Eau Claire in 1956. He served five years at Stanley High School, including a stint as principal and guidance director. He then spent three years as a counselor at Baraboo High School until joining the UW-SP faculty in 1964.

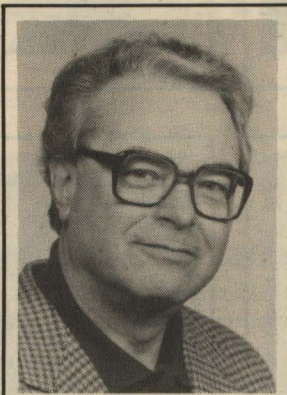

Sandwiched into his early career was graduate work leading to a master's degree in education administration from the University of Minnesota and a doctorate in curriculum and instruction from Northern Colorado University.

In retirement, he intends to do some consulting work for educational firms and school districts and renew his involvement in photography and piloting small aircraft. ■

Delmar C. Multauf

Frederick M. Hilpert

Delmar C. Multauf

Delmar C. Multauf's retirement ended a 23-year association with UW-SP.

From the mid-1970s to the early 1980s, he served as the geography department's chairman and was active in the development of new geography major options in cartography, urban/economic activities and physical environment. The expanded curriculum provided career opportunities for students in addition to teaching.

In his studies on political aspects of his discipline, he concluded that town government in Wisconsin should be abolished. "It served grandpa well in horse and buggy days, but it's now archaic," he said. Among other things, he charges it is "tremendously inefficient."

Multauf concurs with those who claim school children are faltering in their geographic literacy. His recommendation is for school boards to pay more attention to the matter and "university people" to be more aggressive in seeking action on the problem among officials of state departments of public instruction.

A native of Hartford, Multauf served in the Army Air Corps during World War II, spending about three years in western Europe.

Upon his return, he was graduated from the UW-Oshkosh with a bachelor's degree, the UW-Madison with a master's degree and earned a doctorate from Columbia University in New York.

His teaching career began 35 years ago as replacement for a faculty member on leave from UW-La Crosse. He held similar temporary assignments at UW-Whitewater and UW-Oshkosh before settling at Danbury State College in Connecticut. He taught both history and geography there between 1957 and 1962, then spent one and one-half years at Mankato State in Minnesota and another two and one-half years at UW-Oshkosh before coming to Stevens Point.

In retirement, Multauf intends to spend more time with his hobby in horticulture. He said he is interested in "almost anything that grows," though he has a fondness for roses. ■

Donald Hoff

Donald Hoff's service to UW-SP as a physical and driver education specialist spanned 25 years.

He is now turning his attention to his family's business of growing Christmas trees on 22 different plantations throughout this part of Wisconsin. The trees are shipped as far away as Florida, Arizona and Alaska.

Hoff and his wife, Bernice, will maintain a permanent residence here but spend winters in Freport on the Bahama Islands and summers at a cottage on Lake Tomahawk.

A native of Cuba City, Hoff grew up in Platteville and received his bachelor's degree from UW-Platteville. He later earned his master's degree from the UW-Madison and a doctorate from the University of Utah.

His career began in 1955 at Lodi High School. He later served at the now defunct Racine County Agricultural School and at Brillion and Portage High Schools. He received awards for teaching and coaching and led the Portage football team to a conference championship in 1961.

After joining the university faculty in 1964, Hoff spent several years as a defensive football coach, head track coach and founded and coached the men's gymnastics team. He has prepared hundreds of education students for careers as driver training and physical education teaching positions.

He served from 1977 to 1980 as head of the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics and has been coordinator of the safety education minor since it was established in the early 1970s.

There are attempts by some school districts to eliminate driver training from the curriculum and "farm out the courses to commercial firms. In that case, the kids are the losers," he observes. ■

Jon Borowicz

Professor Jon Borowicz spent 14 years on the UW-SP music faculty, during which time he was director of the University Orchestra and orchestral studies and conductor of the Central Wisconsin Symphony Orchestra.

Borowicz and his wife, Marilyn, plan to move to a small city in northern California to found a conservatory of music. His specialty area is community music development. He also hopes to start a vintage-1900 band, complete with period uniforms, instruments and music.

The professor looks forward to his retirement as an opportunity to pursue both longtime and new interests. He says he has always been a "railroad nut," but never had time to become involved with the hobby. In California, Borowicz plans to help with projects to restore old steam trains. Historic restorations, including excursion railroads, are popular in the old gold mining region where they plan to live.

An Ohio native, he holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the Cleveland Institute of Music and a Ph.D. from UW-Madison. He founded the Vermont Philharmonic Orchestra in 1959, which he led until 1974. He came to UW-SP in 1975 after serving as a consultant for the Wisconsin School Music Association. Conductor of the Central State Youth Orchestra for several years, he led the Wausau Symphony from 1979 to 1981. ■

Frederick M. Hilpert

Frederick M. Hilpert, who retired in June, was one of the pioneers in the computer movement at UW-SP. He served the institution for 19 years, first as associate director of academic computing and since 1983 as director of institutional research.

He and his wife, Pat, a nurse at St. Michael's Hospital, intend to continue living here in Stevens Point. However, he has assumed new duties as a long distance manager of a family-owned farming operation in Scottsbluff, Neb. And, he's pursuing his hobby of cutting and polishing stones.

Hilpert came to UW-SP in 1970 when the computer was in its infancy as an instructional tool. About 40 jobs were handled per month for professors and their students. Today, the same amount of work can be processed in a couple of minutes.

In his last position in institutional research, he gathered, processed (with computer) and interpreted various kinds of data to be used by campus administrators in making management decisions.

Hilpert had a checkerboard career. He was born in Lincoln Neb., and served two military stints: in the U. S. Navy in stateside service during World War II and in the U. S. Air Force in overseas intelligence assignments during the Korean Conflict.

He earned bachelor's and master's degrees in geological engineering from the Montana School of Mines in Butte and began a career with the Marathon Oil Co. in 1954 on exploration projects in Western states for oil and uranium.

After deciding in midlife to pursue a career in education, he received a second master's degree from Western Montana College and a Ph.D. from the University of Iowa. Since then, he has complemented his administrative duties at UW-SP by teaching a research design course to natural resources graduate students and a computer course for undergraduate students. ■

Hildegard Kuse

UW-SP's best

Winners of the highest recognition UW-SP gives members of its faculty for outstanding teaching, scholarship and service have been honored at two campus events.

They are John Curtis, Richard Face, James Haney, John Houghton, Hildegard Kuse, Stephen Odden, Thomas Overholt and Robert Wolensky.

Introduced at the university's commencement ceremonies in spring, they also were platform guests at the annual Academic Convocation in September.

The University Awards Committee made the selections based on recommendations from units within the institution.

Face, Haney, Houghton, Odden and Wolensky were cited for excellence in teaching.

Kuse's award was for service, specifically in recognition of her many years of consistently providing a high level of support to her students who are preparing for teaching careers, to area schools and to community groups.

Curtis was designated a university scholar on the basis of his work in botany developing papers and publications and making presentations about his research for professional organizations. He has served as a visiting scholar at Iowa State and North Carolina State Universities and as a consultant for the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Overholt, also named a university scholar, was cited for his continued work in religious studies, particularly the development of a manuscript for his latest book, "Channels of Prophecy," and his writings about the prophet Jeremiah in the new "Harper's Bible."

Face is a professor of history who has served UW-SP since 1963; Curtis, a professor of biology, here since 1976; Houghton, associate professor of forestry, 1983; Haney, associate professor of communication, 1981; Odden, associate professor of English and chairman of his department, 1970; Kuse, professor of education, 1957; Overholt, professor of philosophy, 1975; and Wolensky, professor of sociology and co-director of the Center for the Small City, 1976. ■

Randlett dissertation wins praise

The International Reading Association, which annually cites 10 outstanding doctoral dissertations in its field, has given one of the 1989 awards to a faculty member at UW-SP who also holds two degrees from the school.

Alice Randlett received the recognition at the association's annual convention in June in New Orleans.

She is a professor who serves as the university's acquisition librarian and coordinator of reading programs in the Mary Croft Academic Achievement Center.

Randlett's dissertation for a Ph.D. from UW-Madison is entitled, "Learning to Be Remedial." It concludes that students who are put on a track of remedial instruction because of inadequate literacy skills experience long-term negative effects as a result of the labeling.

Notably, adds the professor, these students are usually taught differently than peers in regular classes. Remedial English deals in fragmented instruction that often limits a student's opportunity to experience the richness of the language, she charges.

Randlett further contends that in the case of students she observed, the only ones who benefitted from being on a track at a certain level of ability were those who are the highest achievers.

"That's because of the enriched curriculum they are given," she continues.

Her research was done in a high school among four different English classes over the course of one semester. She made an agreement with representatives of the school system not to identify the community or the students.

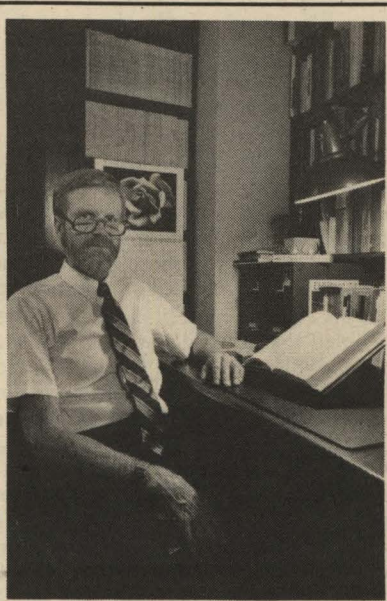

A member of the UW-SP library staff since 1970, Randlett is a native of Chicago. Before earning her Ph.D., she earned bachelor's and master's degrees from UW-SP in 1964 and 1974, respectively, and a master's degree in library science from Rosary College. ■

Plaudits for Faculty

Rick Wilke

Wilke heads international organization

Rick Wilke, an alumnus of UW-SP who is a professor and associate dean in the College of Letters and Science, was installed in August as president of the North American Association for Environmental Education.

He assumed leadership of the 1,000-member organization at its annual meeting in Estes Park, Colo.

Wilke's group met jointly with the Conservation Education Association of which Joseph Passineau, another member of the College of Natural Resources faculty, is a director.

Wilke said in an interview that followed his installation that environmental education is on the brink of major expansion across the United States. The result, he added, should be a bright employment future for people pursuing this field.

Public interest in protection of natural resources has ebbed and waned since UW-SP established the first conservation education major in the country in 1946. But Wilke believes Americans are fast reviving their concern about the quality of their surroundings in view of persisting problems such as oil spills and widespread reports of groundwater contamination.

"Now with President Bush saying he wants to be the environmental president and the education president, things are really looking exciting for us," he reported.

Coupled with the Bush rhetoric is information from the Environmental Protection Agency whose officials are pledging to emphasize education as opposed to enforcement in future activities.

Wilke hold bachelor's and master's degrees from UW-SP in 1973 and 1975, respectively, and a Ph.D. from Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. ■

Diane Gillo's name placed on local award

Diane Gillo

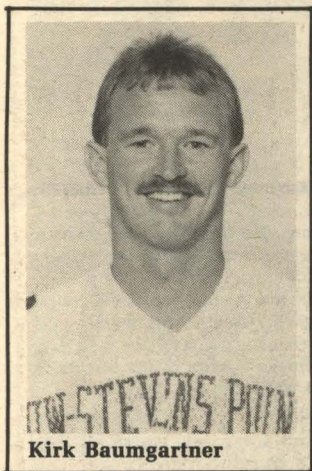

A member of the business faculty is the first recipient of an award which will be given annually in her name to faculty members who show an interest in and commitment to students living on campus at UW-SP.

Diane Lloyd Gillo of the Division of Business and Economics has been recognized by UW-SP Division of Residence Life organizations for her "commitment to the well-being of students and excellence in student-centered scholarship."

The professor has been involved in conducting a longitudinal study which began in 1987 with a group of about 1,200 incoming freshmen. Subsequent sampling of the same group will be done before they graduate from UW-SP and during their first five years in the workplace. Richard B. Judy, chairman of the Division of Business and Economics, is collaborating on the project.

A business management specialist, Gillo is attempting to measure attitudes toward work and family and how those attitudes change over time. She is interested in assessing what conditions help people become productive workers and how the ability to combine personal and professional obligations contribute to an individual's success both as a student and as a worker.

She is a native of Pittsburgh and holds a doctorate from Western Michigan University, where she taught before coming to Stevens Point in 1983. ■

Star quarterback charms Wisconsin

Football fans across the country were casting their eyes this fall on UW-SP and its star quarterback, Kirk Baumgartner.

So were all of the scouts in the National Football League.

Baumgartner, a record-shattering athlete from the small Central Wisconsin community of Colby, was ranked in the October NFL Draft Report as one of the nation's top five collegiate quarterbacks.

And, in mid-November, the softspoken, unpretentious sports star was the first athlete from the Wisconsin State University Conference to be chosen to participate in the Senior Bowl. He and Notre Dame's Tony Rice were the only quarterbacks from the North chosen for the game to be held in Mobile, Ala., on Jan. 20, beginning at 1:30 CST.

"Kirk is definitely one of the classiest individuals I have ever coached, and he's probably the most talented athlete I'll ever have the opportunity to coach," says the Pointer football chief, John Miech.

There's little wonder this 6-4, 200-pound senior is drawing so much attention and praise in view of the national records (NCAA Division III) he holds: 17 for total offense; 23 for passing; one for scoring and one for passing. In the NAIA, he holds three records in offense and seven in passing.

As the season ended, Baumgartner ranked second in career passing among all quarterbacks in NCAA history, trailing only Neil Lomax of Portland State (1977-80) by 192 yards.

In his total collegiate career, including post season competitions, Baumgartner attempted 1,949 passes, completed 997, experienced 70 interceptions, had a success rate of .512, logged total yards of 14,847, threw for 122 touchdowns and averaged 315.9 yards per game. Wow!

Adds Coach Miech: "Kirk has things you can't coach. He can launch a football 75 yards, but he also has a good touch. He can drop a pass in between the linebackers and the secondary, and that's something you can't coach."

Baumgartner came to UW-SP four seasons ago as a high school star in basketball as well as football. Why did he choose Stevens Point? He liked the kind of football played here, an offense that consists of passing, passing and more passing. His high school team hadn't been oriented in that way.

Why didn't the larger schools pick him up? Miech believes they were leary of his slight build—slight, that is, for the gridiron.

UW-SP's sports information coordinator, Scott Roeker says Baumgartner has "the perfect personality for what he is going through. He has taken all of the publicity and hoopla in stride and always keeps in focus what his coach is asking him to do. His goal is to have his team do as well as it can, and once the season is over, then he'll start worrying about his personal stuff."

Adds Roeker, "Kirk is the hottest thing that Division III has going right now."

Meanwhile, Pointer fans anticipate with considerable interest the NFL draft to be held next April. Miech says Baumgartner is being described by the pro scouts as the greatest quarterback prospect since Ken Anderson was picked at Augustana College for what became a long, successful career with the Bengals.

The betting right now, according to observers, is that Baumgartner will be a third or fourth round choice and the fifth quarterback to be chosen. ■

Sports record

The Pointer football team ended a spectacular season Nov. 18 in rugged tournament playoff competition at UW-SP.

The gridders had a season record of 8-2-1, having its only loss in regular season play to La Crosse.

Here's how other teams fared this fall:

Volleyball—seventh place finish in the WWIAC with a 10-28 record.

Women's soccer—sixth place in the NCAA Western Poll with a 14-5-2 record.

Men's cross country—finished fourth in the WSUC.

Women's cross country—finished in third place for the season in the WWIAC.

Men's golf—finished third in the WSUC and second in District 14 NAIA competition. ■

Whatever happened to good Ol' Joe?

1989

William M. Culek, '89, is a process engineer with Scott Paper Co. in Marinette.

Lori Staudinger, '89 lives at 1212 Grand Ave., Apt. 31, Wausau.

1988

Amanda Cynthia Honkomp, '88, is a nanny for the David Kendell family, 2 Eisenhower Drive, East Quogue, N.Y.

John P. Kirchner, M.D., '88 master's, a hepatologist/gastroenterologist at the Marshfield Clinic, received the 1989 University of Wisconsin Medical Alumni Association Award for Distinguished Teaching. This is the third year he has received the honor, given by a vote of the medical student body of the UW Medical School in recognition of his outstanding qualities as a teacher. Dr. Kirchner is doing additional graduate work in communication at UW-SP with an emphasis in interpersonal communication.

Brenda Steward, '88, is a teacher at St. Mary's School in Colby. A former first grade summer school teacher in Rhinelander, she is married to David Steward, a supervisor at Sentry Insurance.

Thomas Wengelski, '88, is a process engineer for Mosinee Paper Corporation's Pulp and Paper Division. He previously was employed at the mill as a summer intern.

Lori Schwab, '88, is a fourth grade teacher at St. Mary Catholic School in Random Lake. She formerly was a part-time music teacher.

Eric Shurter, '88, is a chemistry, physics and mathematics teacher at Kewaunee High School.

Rebecca Berceau, '88, is a physical education and health teacher at Waupun Middle School.

Joseph Zakovec, '88, is the assistant manager at the Plover Waste Water Plant.

Kay Kremer, '88, is a staff accountant with Wipfli Ullrich Bertelson CPAs in Marshfield. She and her husband, Peter, and their son live in Marshfield.

Valerie Hamre, '88, is a staff accountant in the Wisconsin Rapids office of Wipfli Ullrich Bertelson CPAs. She and her family live in Wisconsin Rapids where she is a member of the After Five Business and Professional Women's Club and is active in her church. Her husband, Gil, is principal of West Junior High School.

Gary Van Drisse, '88, is an agent with Van Drisse Insurance.

Susan M. Michelkamp, '88, has joined the controller department of Nekoosa Papers as a cost systems analyst.

Greg D. Fictum, '88, is a marketing representative for the Kiel Tri-County Record, a division of Keilpress Inc.

Robert Rosenberger, '88, and Suzette DesArmo Rosenberger, '88, have accepted two-year Peace Corps assignments in Burundi, Africa. They will teach rural Burundians the basics of fishpond site selection, construction and management, and fish harvesting and marketing. Robert says both he and Suzette wanted to "do something adventurous with our educations in a way that would benefit others. We don't expect to change the world, but maybe help some people's lives become easier." Of the current 6,000 Peace Corps volunteers worldwide, 214 are Wisconsinites.

Randy Korb, '88 master's, a zoological consultant, has written a 16-page booklet, "Voices in the Night," to encourage Brown County residents to listen to the area's spring choruses of breeding frogs and toads. The book includes illustrations and descriptions of eight frog species, a calling calendar, and a county map with information about 14 listening sites. Korb currently is promoting a public aquarium in Green Bay.

Karen Urban, '88, has served for a year as interim Oconto County 4-H and youth agent.

Gail L. Paschall, '88, is teaching 10th grade English at Waupaca High School.

Denise Boos, '88, is a fourth grade teacher in Verona.

Denise Kabara, '88, is a Peace Corps volunteer, serving as a science laboratory specialist in the Marshall Islands for two years. Her address is Box 5, Majuro, Marshall Islands.

Todd A. Quick, '88, is a process engineer with Champion International Corp. and his wife, Susan Gara Quick, '88, is a process engineer with Temple-Inland Forest Products. Their address is Route 1, Box 145A, Hull, Texas.

Paul D. Secker, '88, is marketing director for SAS, an auto and truck parts firm, in Luxemburg.

Brenda McGregor, '88, is an elementary teacher in Wittenburg. She plans to pursue a master's degree at UW-SP.

Jeffery Pelot, '88, is an intern at the Wausau YMCA. He also is employed as a motorcycle license examiner by the Wisconsin Department of Transportation in Marshfield, Wausau and Wisconsin Rapids.

James Patterson, '88, is a process engineer trainee at the Wisconsin Rapids Division of Consolidated Papers Inc.

Andrew J. Weyker, '88, is a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army Chemical Corps. His wife, Kimberly (Bagewski), '87, is a medical technologist at the UW-Madison hospital and clinic. They live at 5154 Anton Drive, Apt. 309, Madison.

Margaret (Szitta) Linzmeier, '88, is an elementary teacher of the mentally handicapped at Washington School in Stevens Point. Her address is 6991 Hwy. Q, Custer.

Michael J.L. Schultz, '88, is an assistant in the technical department of Westvaco Corp. Prior to joining the firm, he gained experience during summers at P.H. Glatfelter Co. and the Weyerhaeuser Co. He and his wife live in Covington, Va.

Helen Nelson, '88, recently received a master's degree in communication from UWSP. At 71, she is the oldest person to earn a graduate degree in the university's history. She will continue to coordinate enrichment programs for senior citizens through the Portage County Commission on Aging. She received her bachelor's degree in communication in 1980.

Geraldine Hackbarth, '87 master's, is an English and Spanish teacher at Little Wolf High School in Manawa. She and her husband, Ross, and their two children have a home on Bear Lake.

"The most tangible sign of my commitment to this university is the fact that I've brought my son to Stevens Point to be educated at the same school I attended," says Charlie Jitcharoongphorn, '73, marketing executive from Bangkok, Thailand. Marketing manager for Pepsi-Cola International in Thailand, Charlie spent two weeks last summer in central Wisconsin helping his son, Sarayut, get settled at UW-SP. Charlie also spent part of the time getting reacquainted with old friends such as Rick Wilke, his former roommate who is now assistant dean of the College of Natural Resources at UW-SP, and members of the business faculty. Charlie says being educated in the "States" is a definite plus when Thai graduates return to their home country and look for employment, especially if they want to join a multinational corporation. He has worked for Eastman Kodak, for Johnson & Johnson, and for Pepsi Cola International for the past seven years. He is in charge of marketing in Thailand for Pepsi which he describes as the leading soft drink operation in his country. Concert promotion is one of Charlie's responsibilities, so he has been involved in bringing stars such as Tina Turner, Robert Palmer and the Miami Sound Machine to Bangkok. He also coordinates sweepstakes contests for Thai people to attend other Pepsi-sponsored concerts throughout the world. Charlie says his nation is popular with foreign investors because it is economically and politically stable and tourism is encouraged. He describes Bangkok, which has a population of more than five million, as a westernized city, "like Chicago with lots of traffic jams." When members of the Jitcharoongphorn family decided where Sarayut would go to college, they were unanimous in choosing UW-SP. They believe it is good for international students to attend school in the Midwest where it is necessary to speak English and to mingle with American students. In larger cities on the East and West coasts, there are many Thai people and Charlie says there is the probability of associating mainly with your own ethnic group. He wants his son to become acclimated to American culture and to pave the way for his two younger siblings to eventually attend UW-SP.

The process by which things are done matters, and that is one of the truths "you may find advantageous to remember as you pursue your destiny," the president of the UW System Board of Regents told spring graduates here. Paul Schilling, '69, an attorney with the Milwaukee firm of Quarles and Brady, was speaking at commencement ceremonies for about 1,000 degree recipients at UW-SP. It was a homecoming for Schilling on the 20th anniversary of his graduation from UW-SP. The crowd of spectators spilled beyond the open-air Specht Forum in what may have been the largest gathering ever for a local graduation. Schilling suggested that the graduates might pay special heed to four basic truths: —"One person can make a difference."

—"Hard work does pay off."

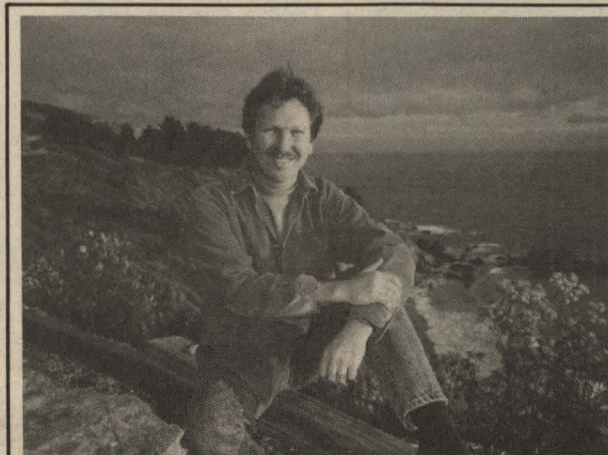

—"Freedom not exercised is soon lost."

—"Ends don't justify the means."

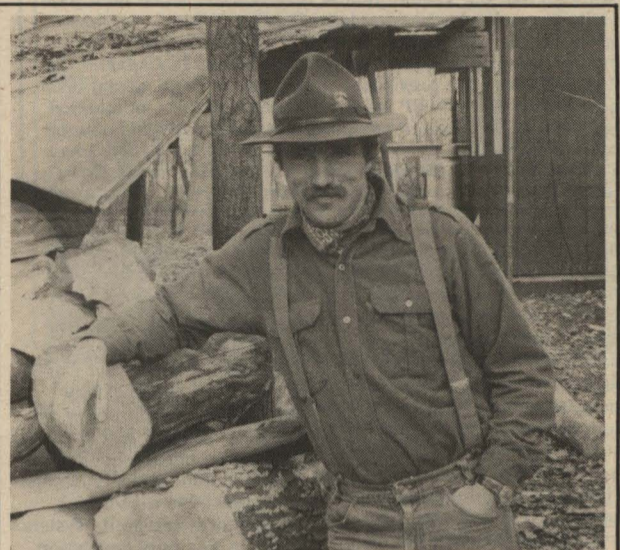

In the area of protecting basic freedoms, Schilling charged that "we all have an obligation to our free society that goes beyond participating at the polling place." Being college educated places "special obligations" on individuals to be stewards of these freedoms, he continued.

The ultimate question that class members should continue asking themselves, said the regent, is, "Have I made it better?"

Thank You for Gifts to Our Foundation

Thank you.

Without the scholarships received by some students, attendance at UW-SP would be an impossibility or, at best, a financial struggle. Without grants to departments, some of the most up-to-date equipment necessary to enhance an academic discipline would be out of reach. Without your monetary support, UW-SP wouldn't enjoy its reputation of excellence.

Your generosity has made a difference in the lives of scholars and in the health of UW-SP, and we are extremely grateful.

The enclosed list records names of all donors to university causes, programs and activities. Asterisks in front of names identify donors to the Traditions in Action, UW-SP's main fund raising campaign.

About $20,000 raised for Baird memorial

Nearly $20,000 in contributions and pledges have been used to establish a scholarship fund in memory of Jerry Baird, one of UW-SP's most active athletic boosters.

The longtime Sentry Insurance employee, who lived in Plover, died unexpectedly last January at age 54.

Jerry Baird

Jerry Baird Memorial Scholarship Fund in care of the UW-SP Foundation, Main Building, Stevens Point, 54481.

The fund will provide financial assistance to scholar athletes who have completed their eligibility for WSUC Conference competition but are continuing to work toward a degree, were major contributors to the Pointer athletic program and have scored successes in the academic arena.

Tax deductible contributions for the fund continue to be received.

Teachers to benefit from Pearson award

A fund has been endowed in the UW-SP Foundation to support an annual scholarship in memory of Franklin Pearson, an alumnus and former faculty member of UW-SP.

Pearson was retired from a longtime career in education and living in Marinette at the time of his death in April of 1988.

His family and friends provided nearly $2,000 that has been invested and will provide awards to students preparing for teaching careers in music or general education. Seniors and graduate students near the end of their work toward a master's degree will be eligible to complete the recognition. Special consideration will be given to financial need.

Pearson was a 1948 graduate of UW-SP and had a master's degree from Northern Colorado University. His 37 years in education included a stint from 1955 to 1965 as assistant professor of education at UW-SP after which he was involved in public school administration in Marinette. ■

Baird's wife, Mary Ann, a UW-SP faculty member of 27 years and head of the Division of Fashion and Interior Design, is serving on the scholarship committee with faculty colleagues Joan North, Paul Doebler, John Larsen, Cal Kuphall, Virgil Thiesfeld and Robert Engelhard.

Baird, who excelled as an athlete in football and basketball and baseball at Greenwood High School and in basketball at UW-Eau Claire and UW-Whitewater, had been a staunch supporter of Pointer athletic teams since moving here about 30 years ago. He took part in numerous activities to support the university's athletic program and was loyal in attendance at games. ■

Scholarship honors two early graduates

A scholarship in memory of two sisters from Loyal who attended UW-SP has been established to support future teachers.

An endowment of $3,000 in the UW-SP Foundation will generate funds for an annual award to someone intending to specialize in teaching children with learning disabilities.

The memorial is in the name of Nina Castner Wolter of Loyal, who died in 1975, and Hazel Castner Roesler of Thorp, who died in 1986.

Diane Schuette, Rt. 1, Unity, established the endowment. She is the daughter of Wolter and a niece of Roesler.

Schuette participated in the presentation of the first award recently at the UW-SP School of Education recognition dinner. The winner of $200 was Lillian Primmer, Clintonville, a nontraditional student who is a senior.

Both of the sisters had teaching careers that spanned about 30 years apiece. Near the end of her career, Mrs. Wolter specialized in teaching the learning disabled in Loyal, and after Mrs. Roesler retired, she was a volunteer tutor in Thorp for children with learning problems.

Roesler received a teaching certificate from UW-SP in 1922, a 2-year diploma in 1925 and a bachelor's degree in 1944. Wolter's teaching certificate was earned in 1932, her two-year diploma in 1934 and her bachelor's degree in 1971. ■

Professor sees fewer divorces

By Sarah Clanton

"Till death do us part," vow the bride and groom who expect their relationship to last that long. But in recent years, the couple's chances of actually realizing a lifelong commitment have been 50-50, at best.

However, it now appears marriages are getting stronger and lasting longer in this country. National divorce statistics are beginning to change, and a human development specialist at UW-SP believes the number of marriages ending in divorce will continue to decrease over the next several years.

According to Professor James Gingles, the divorce rate has leveled off throughout the United States and in some regions of the country it has started to drop. He says this recent movement toward more stable marriages will continue and marriages of the future will become more durable and longlasting.

Gingles cites 10 reasons for this trend. They are, according to the professor:

- The divorce "boom"—Ironically, one of the major positive effects on the longevity of current and future marriages may be the unstable marriages of the recent past. Young people, especially those whose parents have divorced, seem increasingly concerned about building successful relationships. They are becoming more thoughtful and less emotional about choosing a partner. In the last few decades, young people may have been anticipating too much from their spouses, expecting their mates to fulfill all of their emotional needs. Today's marital unions seem to be based more on practical considerations such as compatibility, financial security and a desire to have children. This indicates a return to the more traditionally based marriages of earlier eras.
- Older couples—Americans are waiting longer to take the big step. The average age for a bride is now 24 and for the groom, 26, and the averages continue to rise. This is a positive trend—generally speaking, older partners are more mature, have a good sense of self, are more settled, and will make better spouses and parents. The more mature the couple, the better they are prepared both professionally and personally, for a successful relationship. People who marry as teenagers have a 100 percent greater chance of splitting up than couples who wed in their 20s or 30s.
- More education—Nationally each year a larger percentage of young people are pursuing higher education. In Wisconsin, for example, 65 to 75 percent of high school graduates are choosing to attend vocational school or college. Statistically, men and women with a high school education are more likely to divorce than are college-educated individuals. Research has shown that the more educated people are, the more likely they are to develop stronger and less stressful intimate relationships.
- Financial security—Along with increasing maturity and educational levels, people who marry later are better established in their careers. Generally, the more occupationally established people are, the less financial stress they will experience in marriage. The more secure a couple is financially, the less prone they are to divorce. The exception to this involves high-income women, who are less likely to marry in the first place and are more apt to divorce if the marriage relationship is not satisfactory.
- Religious activity—A current national upsurge in religious activities is creating a sense of tradition, solidarity and support for couples. The husband and wife are identified as a unit within the religious community and this involvement helps to add union and cohesiveness to a marriage. Research has shown the more isolated a family is, the more likely it is to be a dysfunctional unit, especially in a transient society. Membership in a church can provide needed support similar to that of an extended family. This sense of community tends to build rituals and traditions into the life of a family which adds to its stability.
- Less role confusion—The transition to egalitarian relationships with broader roles for both men and women has largely been accomplished in this country. Between 60 and 70 percent of women with preschool children are currently in the work force, and 50 percent of women who give birth to a child return to the job within a year. Consequently, both father and mother are sharing child-care duties. For women who work outside the home, a career enhances their self-concept and sense of identity. This is especially important when the children are grown. Women who have pursued other interests experience fewer problems with the "empty nest" syndrome. For men, having more involvement with home and children has proved to be enriching and rewarding. For children who grow up in dual-career households, sharing domestic and financial obligations are normal and realistic expectations.

- Acceptance of different lifestyles—Only about 15 percent of the families in this country are "monogamous units"—a father, a mother and 1.7 children. Singles, couples without children, single-parent families, extended families and reconstituted families now make up the vast majority of American households. People are living in a variety of situations and selecting alternatives to wedlock. For instance, many individuals are choosing to remain single. More than 15 percent of the total population is unmarried, and many couples are opting to live together outside the bonds of matrimony. Because other alternatives are becoming more acceptable, people are not rushing to the altar as quickly as they once did. The couples who do marry appear to have more stable relationships and make the decision to have children only after considerable forethought.

- Uncertain economic conditions—Traditionally, divorce statistics decrease during periods of fiscal uncertainty. Couples can't afford to split up or may feel financially insecure, so they work harder at staying married. Even though America has experienced a relatively long period of prosperity, the economic climate probably will not continue to improve and may very well decline. People will be more prone to stay married because they are afraid of the financial risks of divorce.

- The statistical crunch—The population is aging and so are its marriages. People are 25 times more apt to divorce in the third year of marriage than they are after 30 years. For instance, in the United States in 1987, 50,000 divorces occurred after three years of marriage; 47,000 after four years; and 2,000 after 30 years. Also, since the birth rate has declined in the recent past, there will be fewer young people, fewer young marriages and fewer divorces. Young relationships experience more stresses—the husband and wife have not adjusted to each other and are usually involved in achieving occupational success to the detriment of their relationship. By the time couples have been together for many years, they know themselves and each other well. They seem to be more concerned with keeping their marriages vital and alive.

- Conservative sexual climate—The current generation of young people appears to be more interested in establishing friendships and less interested in emotionally charged romantic relationships. Surprisingly, extended adolescence has been accompanied by healthier attitudes toward dating and more conservative sexual behavior. Research by Bernard Murstein of Connecticut College compared the sexual experiences of teens in 1979 and in 1986. In 1979, 66 percent of the female respondents had lost their virginity by age 16; in 1986 the figure was 20 percent. For men in 1979, the loss of virginity by age 16 was 70 percent; in 1986, it was 43 percent. "Cinderella" stories have been replaced by friendship, companionship and a healthier attitude toward sexuality. One of the few positive things to come out of the AIDS crisis is a more open atmosphere, including discussion about venereal diseases and taking responsibility for sexual behavior. These conservative attitude and behavior changes are supported by Murstein's research. Among young women who were sexually active in 1979, their last sexual experience had been with their steady boyfriend 39 percent of the time and with an acquaintance, also 39 percent. In 1986, 74 percent had been with their steady boyfriends and only 18 percent had relations with someone they did not know well. Young people today are better adjusted socially and sexually, more open about intimate subjects, and also more responsible. This bodes well for the future of marriage.

In general, Gingles says, marriages are healthier than they were 20 to 30 years ago. In the past, couples tried to hide their problems and pretended to be happy. "There are few Donna Reed or Ward and June Cleaver marriages out there," Gingles quips. Open communication and commitment to work things out means stronger relationships and better families.

Of course, badly dysfunctional families will always exist, but the professor believes past research has tended to concentrate too much on relationships that don't work. He says more emphasis should be placed on the strength and the vitality of the American family ■

By Karen Engelhard, Director
Alumni Relations

The fine response to my request for assistance in keeping the Pointer Alumnus coming to you - by sending $10 - deserves applause.

To date, more than $1,300 has come in to support future issues of the "Alumnus". . . and those checks are still coming. It is not too late!

Many kind letters accompanied those checks and we certainly have our mission reaffirmed as it relates to communicating with all of you. Those living a great distance from campus, as well as those living in and around Wisconsin, were all equally supportive.

Our immediate goal is to increase publication to three times a year. We want the news you send us to be as current as possible when we publish it. That is as important as you receiving news about the campus while it is still timely news. You will probably be surprised to learn that each issue is published at a cost of just under $8,000 for the 35,000 copies — including typesetting, graphics, printing, postage and labor for labeling and mailing. So, . . . you can expect to hear from me again. I will ask for your continued support and want you to remember, as you write that check, that we are here for you — your link to your alma mater.

Another very surprising, even overwhelming, response came with your orders for the items offered on the cover of the most recent "Alumnus." We were not prepared for your enthusiasm nor was the bookstore prepared. Some of you had to wait for items ordered. My apologies for that. However, now that we have been through the process once, we have a clear idea of what sells, what you want.

The items available are once again offered in this issue. . . . I hope your response is again as overwhelming.

It brings you pleasure and it assists your Alumni Association. Our thanks! ■
