Bracing for a faculty shortage

by Chancellor Keith Sanders

At the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point we are bracing for one of the toughest faculty recruiting challenges in our school's history. All indications are that by the mid-1990s, competition will be fierce in races to hire professors with the level of academic preparation UW-SP has traditionally attracted. The problem is expected to touch every discipline, and it may be most pronounced in the humanities and social sciences

Why is this happening? Poor starting salaries and a glut of graduate students 20 years ago during the Vietnam War are believed to have deterred many people from careers in American higher education. Complicating the matter is the fact that the number of retirements of veteran educators across America is expected to be uncommonly high during the 1990s.

Despite the odds, UW-SP administrators aren't overwhelmed by the challenge; we believe we have some hidden aces, including career opportunities in an educational environment where the quality of life is high. Vice Chancellor Howard Thoyre, who has been involved in faculty hiring for many years, claims he is cautiously optimistic: "We'll have to be much more aggressive than ever before, and our focus will have to be more on the search process than the screening," which will be opposite of practices in the past. Thoyre, who has been on a state committee studying how the UW System will cope with the professor shortage, said national studies show that there were eight applicants for five positions during the 1980s. In the 1990s, only four candidates will be available for every five positions, he reports

The vice chancellor is hopeful, however, that if faculty salaries continually improve, some highly educated people may come out of business and industry to pursue new careers as teachers in academe. And, we're betting that more young people may begin to consider careers as professors, now that demand for them is on the rise

Alan Haney, dean of the College of Natural Resources, is optimistic that for the time being, his program can hold its own in the recruiting business "if we continue to work hard at it." He has observed that people he has brought to campus as candidates for faculty positions find Stevens Point appealing. "It's friendly, has a low crime rate and good schools." Haney says that all of that is topped by many peoples assessment that in the area of natural resources, "UW-SP's college is unquestionably the finest undergraduate program in the United States-no comparison." Nonetheless, he admits being "apprehensive" about the situation "beyond the next few years."

Our local situation is complicated by the fact that all UW System institutions lag behind many schools in faculty salaries and that teaching loads in Wisconsin universities are heavier than at most places. "I'd say our heavy teaching load is an even greater problem than our salaries," Haney contends, "because many young professors want time to do research so they can publish and thereby stay in the mainstream of their disciplines." Many promising, young scholars believe their futures are severely limited in the academic world if they are unable to spend part of their time in research and publishing." Haney adds.

Bill Meyer, who oversees faculty personnel matters as an associate vice chancellor for academic affairs, notes that "the number of applications (for faculty positions) continues to decrease. And of the pool of candidates we are getting, the people either don't have the terminal degree (usually the Ph.D.) or if they do, have very little teaching experience." Among the people whose decisions are based primarily on salaries, Meyer concedes that UW-SP is not in a strong recruiting position.

A salary schedule established at UW-SP in 1978 created an increasing problem because it was so low. In fact, if we had continued to use this schedule, a person being hired as an assistant professor with a Ph.D. degree but no teaching experience would receive only $19,309. However, this fall we decided that in order to recruit quality people, especially new minority professors who are in high demand all over, the starting wage should be raised to $25,000. Even with the sharp increase, we are at best "on the low side of acceptable."

Joan North, dean of the College of Professional Studies, oversees programs which prepare people for careers as communicative disorders specialists, teachers, fashion/interior designers, medical technologists, dieticians and wellness leaders. She reports that "when these units recruit, they not only compete with Wayne State and the University of Arkansas and so forth, but also with the professions themselves." People who work outside academe in professional fields receive, with few exceptions, better pay than the professors who prepare those specialists. North agrees with others who view the teaching load at UW-SP (professors giving lectures for 12 hours each week, not counting counseling with students, test preparation and scoring, lecture preparation, etc.) "as a very serious problem." In a positive vane, she views the safe environment at Stevens Point as an important draw for faculty, along with the community's orientation to wellness. The school itself is a "mentally-healthy place to work, and unlike many universities in the country, has a positive working environment plus a good history of collegiality where people feel they can contribute to their own future.

Another dimension of the recruitment challenge is the UW System Board of Regents' mandate for more women and minority members to be hired as faculty and staff. While we have made valiant efforts in both areas, and made some strides, carrying out this plan will be ever-difficult as fewer minorities become part of a shrinking overall pool of potential professors. Mary Williams, affirmative action officer, maintains that "we are competitive in cost of living considerations. For minorities, I think we can say it is a receptive

In the long run, I am hopeful that if faculty salaries continually improve, some highly educated people may come out of business and industry to pursue new careers as teachers in academe. And, we are counting on more young people launching careers as professors, now that demand for them is on the rise. The University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point has important benefits to offer professional educators besides salary: excellent retirement benefits; a safe, healthy environment; a receptive community; and perhaps, most important, a long tradition of supportive alumni who care about ensuring quality programs and well-prepared faculty for all future students. I know that UW-SP's alums will join with me in working to attract the best faculty and staff for our campus during the difficult years ahead.

Hall of Fame being constructed

Construction for the $130,000 Wisconsin Conservation Hall of Fame building began this fall at UW-SP.

The facility is expected to be an important tourist attraction to the campus, conveying to the public the importance of Wisconsin's natural resources; emphasizing how individuals and groups have had an impact on natural resources; and commemorating outstanding people who were instrumental in the public education and conservation of natural resources.

The 2,700-square foot structure will connect with an existing Schmeeckle Reserve Visitor Center on the north campus. The reserve covers several hundred acres of wild land devoted to the protection of native flora and fauna.

Zimmerman estimates that as many as 100,000 visitors will stop at the Hall of Fame. Signs at Highway 51 and Highway 10 will be installed, giving directions to the facility

Zimmerman envisions the displays to be developed within the new building as a stimulus for UW-SP students, particularly those in the natural resources programs. "I'm hoping the students will find this inspirational. The people who have been selected to be honored in this gallery are people who would not take "no" for an answer," he observed.

"This will give students of all ages a chance to get closer to the real events and the real people who were involved," Zimmerman continued.

Part of the new building, which will include a gallery, will be open for visitors in the summer of 1991. An exhibit hall will be completed in the ensuing year.

Wellness temple opens at UW-SP

UW-SP hosted hundreds of area residents Nov. 11 at an open house marking completion of the new $7 million Health Enhancement Center.

This sprawling "temple of wellness" is being used principally to house instructional programs in health promotion/wellness that are bringing international acclaim to the school.

Senate Majority Leader David Helbach (D-Stevens Point) State Rep. Lolita Schneiders (R-Menomonee Falls) and Stevens Point Mayor Scott Schultz, all UW-SP alumni, joined other representatives of state government and the local campus and state university system in a dedicatory ceremony.

Schneiders, who earlier in the day was given the "Distinguished Alumnus Award," suggested that the campus was fortunate to have won state support for the facility. New buildings will be increasingly difficult to secure, she predicted.

Schneiders represented the State Legislature and the State Building Commission at the ceremony.

Two track stars from the alumni ranks returned to their alma mater to run the first official laps on the 200-meter, six-lane track. They are Carlene Willkom, who was named UW-SP Athlete of the Year in 1987 after winning the the NCAA national track and field pentathalon championship, and Bruce Lammers, Athlete of the Year in 1982 who was a conference record holder in the 110 high hurdles. Bruce is now a teacher and track and cross country coach in Mukwonago, and Carlene is assistant track and field coach and residence hall director at Lewis University.

The enormous structure is an important visual reminder of the "significant commitment" UW-SP is making to the rather new academic discipline of wellness, according to John Munson, who heads the school of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics.

"This puts us at the top of many people's image of health promotion," he says of the structure that has been under construction since the summer of 1989.

Beyond the boost being experienced by the academic offerings housed within, the center is expected to be a boon to intramural teams, the men's and women's athletic programs—notably track, swimming and tennis, and efforts to involve more students, university employees and the public in fitness regimens.

People involved in tourism also have reason to applaud. The structure will be booked for a variety of sports and non-sports events never before held here and likely to draw large groups of spectators from afar. For example, the 1992 Division III national track and field contest will be held here, Munson said.

The Health Enhancement Center also is responsible for the creation of new jobs. Services of more than 25 additional students are required.

Main components of the facility are a multipurpose room about the size of a football field, an Olympic-sized pool for competition and a therapeutic pool that will enhance instructional programs for training professionals to serve the handicapped, elderly and children.

During the building phase, considerable interior remodeling was done to the adjacent Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics Building or "field house" to improve locker rooms for men and women athletes, and to create entirely new equipment, training and weight (fitness) rooms.

In order to win support from UW System and state governmental officials, UW-SP's Student Government Association offered to pay $1 million of the health enhancement center's cost. The strategy was developed to offset efforts from foes who were opposing the building because it would be used, in part, for recreation.

Consequently, each student will be charged $6 per semester until the structure is paid off.

Private funds beyond the student fees have made possible several embellishments and equipment purchases that otherwise would not have materialized.

A weight room is also equipped with cardiovascular and other monitoring systems.

Munson lauded several booster clubs that support athletic teams for contributions they made in locker room development. The groups are the Women's Athletic Fund, Football Booster Club and Take Down Club for Wrestling. Together they contributed more than $25,000.

"One of the finest training rooms you can find at any Division III school," according to Munson, has been developed in part of what used to be the practice area for track and field events. The remodeled section contains a whirlpool, taping area, treatment and physician examination areas, and an instructional section with a complete CYBEX therapeutic rehabilitation equipment system.

A large equipment room, where uniforms, towels and other items as well as athletic equipment are maintained and dispensed, has been developed in another part of the old annex area, at the rear of the original phy ed

The weight room has been renamed the fitness center and reestablished in another part of the annex. The old weight room adjacent to Quandt Gym is named "Visions 2000," and it is devoted to health assessments for faculty and students alike. Users will be given assistance in monitoring the level of their blood pressure and cholesterol. Further screening, with the use of computerized equipment, will explore cardiovascular systems and general strength.

The old swimming pool has been filled in and converted to a multipurpose room with a hardwood floor and mirrors useful for the dance program. The area also is expected to be scheduled for classes in aerobics and martial arts plus rehearsals by pompon squads.

The huge multipurpose area in the new section is 300 by 180 feet with a seamless rubberized floor. The material is believed to be unusually durable over a long period. Munson is hoping the covering will have a 30-year life.

Here is the only indoor track in the Wisconsin State University Conference that meets national standards. Space for six tennis courts in the interior of the room is separated from the track by electronically driven netting that can be easily dropped from the ceiling or pulled back up. There are six lanes in the 200-yard meter track that extends around the outer section of the room.

Two pits have been installed on the west end for long jumping.

The therapeutic pool for the handicapped, elderly and small children, will contain warm water and have a maximum depth of three and one-half feet.

The main pool has eight 25-meter lanes and is separated with a movable bulkhead from the diving well, which is 14 feet deep. Surrounding bleachers can accommodate about 600 spectators. Veteran swimming coach Lynn (Red) Blair led planning on this area and is now overseeing its maintenance, including the scheduling of a minimum of two lifeguards whenever the facility is open. ■

NFL team being recruited

Do you remember the days 40 or so years ago when UW-SP was the summer training camp for the Green Bay Packers?

A few Pointers do and they are in a group that has begun work to restore Stevens Point's connection with an NFL team.

UW-SP Chancellor Keith Sanders and Stevens Point Mayor Scott Scultz announced this fall that efforts are underway to attract a team to locate a preseason camp at UW-SP.

Sanders said, "We have a slightly better than 50 percent chance of being successful—and it may take three to five years because the competition out there is severe."

They acknowledged being starry-eyed over the idea because of the income potential for renting UW-SP facilities, the public relations, economic development, recreational, cultural diversity and educational benefits that would accrue to the community each summer.

Dennis Tierney, executive director of student life and longtime head of the career services office, is chairing a task force that is conducting the search.

Contacts have been made with several teams, and in some cases, Tierney reports the discussions have been fencouraging."

Active lobbying will be done in January when a delegation from Stevens Point attends the Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala. All NFL teams have representatives at that contest.

A 15-minute video about the advantages Stevens Point can offer a team has been developed for the recruitment

Four of the 28 NFL teams have already established training bases in the state. The Packers are at St. Norbert College in DePere, Chicago Bears at UW-Platteville, New Orleans Saints at UW-La Crosse and Kansas City Chiefs will move to UW-River Falls next summer.

With a fifth team in Stevens Point, there would be a bonafide "cheese league" that could even support summer exhibition competition, Tierney suggested.

Environment gets boost from center...

Randy Champeau has confidence in the idealism of children and their desire to reverse environmental problems.

"Kids like talking about issues and getting involved," he says as he assumes leadership of a new state program aimed largely at making young people aware of the ways they can help save their planet.

Champeau has been chosen to direct the Wisconsin Center for Environmental Education, which was established by legislative directive this year and located in UW-SP's College of Natural Resources Building.

The center's purpose is to help instill in the public an "appropriate and environmentally sound lifestyle" and to help "resolve and prevent environmental issues," the new administrator reports, adding:

"The atmosphere is just right for this."

People from a broad base of the body politic are sending a message to public officials, he explains, that the way to achieve positive results on behalf of the environment is through more education instead of more laws.

Since the 1930s, Wisconsin has mandated its schools to teach about the importance of conserving natural resources. The law was in place, but Champeau explains that teachers received little direction about how to proceed from anyone in the know. Consequently, it took one more law to advance the current effort.

The most recent legislation, which went on the books this spring, takes the schools beyond a "minimal effort" and puts them "on the front line" of environmental education, according to Champeau.

As director of the new center, he spent much of his time this fall recruiting people who will be on the staff, including coordinators of secondary and elementary school projects.

Twenty-four other specialists, all with master's degrees, also were hired to teach the four one-credit courses that will be pursued by state teachers who are required to incorporate environmental issues into their curricula. Also, two UW-SP graduate students and a half-time secretary were hired.

A major project of the center will be the immediate development of a resource library to serve school districts throughout the state. The intent, according to Champeau, is to acquire one of the best collections of materials that can be found anywhere for kindergarten through grade 12 instruction.

There are three components of the legislation that created the center and gave it a $135,000 annual budget. The other provisions call for establishment of a state environmental education board and a $200,000 annual appropriation for distribution to innovative programs in environmental education. The grants support projects at colleges and universities, school districts and nature centers.

There is wide interest in the center.

Some of the calls coming into the facility are from out of state where environmental education advocates would like to reproduce the facility and programs emerging at UW-SP.

Champeau's current activity is forming an approximately 10-member steering committee.

The staff will be steadily on the road to conduct preservice and in-service programs for teachers, consult with school officials and staff, assess student and teacher environmental literacy and develop new

Champeau says he is confident the center will be successful because its staff will focus its efforts on motivating teachers and providing them with materials to enhance their efforts.

Moreover, he expects students will be receptive to any new initiatives directed to them.

"Teachers who do it (teach about environmental issues) say it is extremely popular," he contends. "After all, kids are more concerned than ever about social issues."

Champeau brings broad experience to his appointment as center director. He currently serves as chairman of the board of the Wisconsin Association for Environmental Education and is active in several other professional organizations.

Additionally, the Sheboygan native has two degrees from UW-SP and a Ph.D. from Michigan State University in environmental education. He was a high school teacher in Marshfield and Sheboygan, an elementary teacher at St. Stanislaus School in Stevens Point, and a member of the geography department faculty at UW-Eau Claire before returning to UW-SP in 1984.

...so does economy

A Center for Economic Education to serve the north central part of the state has been established at UW-SP.

Its director is Lawrence Weiser, an economics professor who has taught on campus the past 18 years.

Announcement of the center's formation was made this fall at meetings in Wausau and Stevens Point, hosted by Sentry Insurance and Consolidated Papers Inc. The firms are among the corporate sponsors of the Wisconsin Economic Council for the purpose of advancing economic education.

The center is another example of new partnerships the university is interested in forming with its service area, according to Chancellor Keith Sanders. He said the value of UW-SP's in-kind support of personnel and space amounts to more than half of the total costs of operating the new unit.

Weiser will be working largely with elementary and secondary teachers of the area to help them in their efforts to improve the understanding of economics among young people.

Students are getting into the act, too.

Weiser is overseeing a project that involves 25 teachers and their students in a stock market game that will continue through this fall. Teams of the students will use $100,000 of fictitious money in the development of a make-believe stock portfolio that will be revised each week. The groups will receive periodic updates about how they are faring compared with teams elsewhere in the state and nation. Awards will be presented to the winners at the end of the year.

In addition to developing special instructional programs for the teachers, Weiser will oversee the formation of a resource room in the Collins Classroom Center that will contain teaching materials that can be signed out.

The center is one of six of its kind throughout Wisconsin.

Weiser received a special orientation for his new assignment when he was chosen this summer as one of 73 American educators to attend a leadership institute in Indianapolis sponsored by the Joint Council on Economic Education. The council is the national umbrella organization for all state centers.

Dean, lawmaker given 'Distinguished Alumnus Awards'

The dean of Marquette University's Law School and a member of the state Legislature were honored in separate ceremonies in November with "Distinguished Alumnus Awards" from UW-SP.

Frank DeGuire, class of 1953, former president and chairman of the Pabst Brewing Company who now heads the Marquette Law School in Milwaukee, received his citation during a UW-SP Board of Visitors dinner Nov. 15.

Lolita Krell Schneiders of Menomonee Falls, class of 1952, who has represented the 97th District in the Wisconsin Assembly for a decade, was honored at an Alumni Association Board of Directors luncheon Nov. 11.

They are the 58th and 59th winners of the award, which was established in 1969. Both of them attended UW-SP when it was known as Central State Teachers College.

Chancellor Keith Sanders thanked both winners for "the good example you are for our students to follow." He further commended Schneiders as an exemplary role model for women.

She responded by calling the university "my incubator, greenhouse, rearing pond and launching pad." DeGuire said the award reflects the work of outstanding teachers on campus and "affirms the historical excellence of this institution."

DeGuire, who grew up in Stevens Point, was active on campus in the Newman Club, Alpha Gamma Honorary for Social Science Majors, Young Republicans, Men's Glee Club, Panhellenic Council, intramurals and Chi Delta Rho fraternity. He was a star member of the Pointer golf team.

After graduation, he served three years in the U.S. Naval Reserve and then earned a law degree from Marquette. As an attorney he has served the firms of Michael, Best & Friedrich; Davis, Kuelthau, Vergeront and Stover; and Hughes, Hubbard & Reed, all in Milwaukee. He also has been general counsel for Del Chemical Corp. of Menomonee Falls.

DeGuire has a 12-year association with the Pabst Brewing Company, in which he rose from assistant general counsel to chief operating officer and board chairman. His ties to Marquette began in 1966 as a part-time lecturer and led to his appointment as law school dean in 1984.

The dean has received Marquette's Distinguished Law Alumnus Award and chaired the school's board of trustees. He has served on the boards of several charities, professional organizations and corporations. He is a current director of Bank One Wisconsin Corporation and a member of the UW-SP Board of Visitors.

His mother, Lucille DeGuire of 1700 Wyatt Ave., was present for the award ceremony.

After receiving her citation, Schneiders was a special guest at the dedication of the $7 million Health Enhancement Center, which she helped make possible with a vote of approval several years ago as a member of the Wisconsin Building Commission.

Before her election to the Assembly in 1980 as a Republican, she was a teacher, licensed insurance agent and industrial salesperson.

Schneiders, who was elected to a sixth term this month, continues as a member of the Building Commission and is the ranking Republican member of the Urban Education and Financial Institutions and Insurance Committees. She chairs the State Capitol and Executive Residence Board and Higher Education Subcommittee and is a member of the Criminal Justice and Public Safety Committee and Legislative Council Committee on Homelessness.

Schneiders, a native of Chicago who spent some of her early years in the Minocqua area, was involved in the Newman Club, Mixed Chorus and Omega Mu Chi sorority during her college days. Her husband, Don, operates Schneiders Vetter Glass Co. in Milwaukee.

New Appointments

Easterner leads student teaching

Massachusetts native Henry St. Maurice, who has more than 20 years of experience in education, is the new director of student teaching at UW-SP.

He succeeds Annette Stanutz, who left because of her husband's job transfer to Chicago.

St. Maurice is overseeing a program in which well over 300 students will be completing certification for teaching positions. In addition, he is serving as an assistant professor in the School of Education.

St. Maurice and his wife, Mary Arnold, and their son have moved to a home in Plover.

A native of Worcester, Mass., where he was reared on a farm, St. Maurice received an undergraduate degree in comparative literature and a master of arts in teaching degree, both from Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., and a master of education from the University of Vermont. In 1989, he earned a Ph.D. in curriculum and instruction, with an emphasis in teacher eduction, from UW-Madison.

From 1969 through 1982, he was either a teacher or an administrator of special education programs in Vermont. He served during the same period on the school board at Stockbridge, Vt. Later, he was involved in the operation of a privately owned education consulting firm, specializing in computer applications, in Vermont and Massachusetts.

St. Maurice was a teaching assistant and coordinator of the elementary teacher education program at UW-Madison while doing his doctoral study, and was on the faculty of Rockford College in Illinois during the past year.

David Chitharanjan

He succeeds Donna Garr, who has become the executive assistant to the chancellor.

The 50-year-old Chitharanjan is a native of Madras in southern India. He earned bachelor and master of science degrees at the University of Madras, and began his teaching career when he was 21 at Presidency College in his home community. He served there three years before coming to the United States and earning a Ph.D. degree from Wayne State University in Detroit.

While completing his doctorate, he did some teaching at Wayne State and at the Detroit Institute of Technology. He joined the UW-SP faculty in 1968. ■

Bullis on committee

A UW-SP communication professor has been appointed to the newly established Special Committee on Privacy and Information Technology.

Roger Bullis was chosen for the 21-member group by the State Legislative Council. The group is charged with studying Wisconsin laws, policies and procedures for protecting citizens from invasions of their privacy which may result either from the collection, processing, use or sharing of personally identifiable information by state or local units of government, or from providing access to that information; telephone caller identification services; and other related issues.

An alumnus who holds bachelor's and master's degrees from UW-SP, Kraft plans to complete a Ph.D. at UW-Madison this fall. All of his degrees are in soil

Before joining the DNR at the beginning of last year, Kraft spent three years conducting research for the Wisconsin Geological and Natural History Survey on the migration and persistence of aldicarb residues in groundwater near Plover. Prior to that, he had worked for the DNR as a hazardous waste specialist.

He plans to continue the center's main emphases, on educational programs, including information on how to protect wells and maintain septic systems, and on the promotion of sustainable agriculture to prevent the contamination of groundwater by overuse of pesticides.

Brant Bergeron, a 1985 graduate of UW-SP who has worked as a radio news reporter and communication specialist, has returned to his alma mater as the new associate director of alumni relations.

A native of Coleman, Bergeron was a communication major at UW-SP and served as a residence hall president, staff member of radio station WWSP and member of the national residence hall honorary. He was a winner of a Leland Burroughs Scholarship and Chancellor's Leadership Award.

From the time of his graduation in December of 1985 and December of 1988, Bergeron worked as a news reporter/anchor for radio stations KIXS in Killeen. Texas, WSPT in Stevens Point and WNFL in Green Bay. Before returning to the university, he spent the past year and one-half as communications director for the Green Bay Area Chamber of Commerce.

Susan L. Raab

Alumna heads med tech program

A UW-SP alumna, who has taught and been a student adviser on campus since 1977, is the new chair of its medical technology department.

Susan L. Raab was appointed to a three-year term overseeing offerings for 65 student majors. In addition, she has become local coordinator of a consortium nursing program involving UW-SP, St. Joseph's Hospital of Marshfield and UW-Eau Claire.

The new chair succeeds David Chitharanjan who has become the university's associate vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Raab's selection as an administrator on campus follows on the heels of her election as president-elect of the Wisconsin Association of Medical Technologists. She was chosen for that position at the organization's recent spring meeting in Madison and will assume the presidency in 1991.

Raab lives at 920 Bertha Circle, Wausau, and was supervisor of the chemistry department of Wausau Hospitals for seven years before joining UW-SP in 1977. In addition to her teaching and advising, she has been the faculty leader of Sigma Mu Tau, student organization for UW-SP's medical technology majors.

The medical technology program at her university is the largest in the state outside of Madison and Milwaukee.

The association she will head has about 650 members and serves as advocate for many hundreds of other unaffiliated peers in the state. It is active in developing continuing education programs and deals with state regulations affecting the medical technology

Raab holds bachelor's and master's degrees from UW-SP and a doctorate in education from Nova University.

Former Oneida planner joins university staff

Carl Rasmussen, who spent the past 15 years as a planner for the Oneida (Indian) Tribe, is the new director of space management and facilities planning at UW-SP.

Rasmussen will coordinate planning for and construction of new facilities on campus. He also will be responsible for allocations to meet space needs within existing structures.

Carl Rasmussen

His immediate responsibilities will involve supervision of a nearly $3 million renovation of the DeBot Center, replacement of the roof on the University Center and replacement of steam pipes along Reserve Street. Work on all three projects will begin this summer.

A native of Oconto, Rasmussen grew up there and in Green Bay and was graduated from UW-Green Bay in 1975 with a degree in urban studies. He has been a member of the tribal administrative staff since, serving as director of his office through most of his tenure with the Oneidas.

UW-SP's best

Eight UW-SP faculty members are winners of the highest awards the institution gives each year in recognition of outstanding teaching, scholarship and service.

The honorees, who were introduced at spring commencement ceremonies May 20 are:

For excellence in teaching, Edward Gasque, Richard Ilkka, Thomas Mc Caig, Jan Seiler and Robert W. Miller.

For scholarship, Katherine White Ackley and Frank Bowers. For service, Eugene Johnson.

Each of them will receive a $200 prize.

Gasque is an associate professor of biology and has been a member of the faculty since 1978; Ilkka, associate professor of communication, 1983; Mc Caig, professor of education, 1966; Jan Seiler, associate professor of foreign languages, 1969; and Robert W. Miller, professor of forestry, 1973.

A committee that selected the winners noted that in addition to being highly rated for their work in the classroom, the outstanding teachers also are active in special projects, serve as advisers to student groups and do

Ackley, associate professor of English and a faculty member since 1979, was cited for her authorship of "The Novels of Barbara Pym," the editorship of "Women and Violence in Literature: An Essay Collection," and for her work in promoting incorporation of information about ethnic minority women into the curriculum. Bowers, professor of biology and a faculty member since 1975, has won national recognition for his research and extensive publishing about bryophytes (mosses). His work has led to the development of a major moss collection for the UW-SP Museum of Natural History.

Johnson, professor of chemistry and associate dean of the College of Letters and Science, has been active in faculty governance since arriving as a faculty member in 1978 and has served on numerous committees. He chaired the search and screen committee that recommended Keith Sanders for chancellor in the fall of 1988

Service to Indians cited

A program coordinator at UW-SP has been cited by a statewide organization for innovations in economic development programming and commitment to the Indian community.

Gary Mejchar of the Wisconsin American Indian Economic Development Program (WAIED), headquartered at UW-SP, received an Innovation Award from the UW-Extension Small Business Development Centers. He was recognized at a recent state coordinators meeting in Green Bay

The economic development program was begun in 1986 to assist Indian tribes or individuals with entrepreneurial endeavors. Developed by staff members at UW-SP's Native American Center to help bolster distressed economies on or near the reservations, it was originally funded by UW-Extension on a short-term basis. Now permanently sponsored by Extension, the statewide program is affiliated with Continuing Education and Extension and the Small Business Development Center at UW-SP.

Several of the program's clients have launched successful enterprises, including construction companies, a restaurant, a bingo hall, traditional dance performances, a crafts store and a wood products company.

An alumnus of UW-SP, Meichar also holds a master's degree in community economic development from UW-Madison. Before joining WAIED, he worked for the UW-Extension Community Dynamics Institute, headquartered in Madison.

Faculty Recognition

Nancy Kaufman of the UW-SP faculty was honored in October as the state's Teacher Educator of the Year.

Herbert Grover, state superintendent of public instruction, who announced her selection, presented Kaufman with a $1,000 prize.

The Department of Public Instruction sponsors the recognition program, soliciting nominations of outstanding professors who train and supervise beginning teachers. This is the fourth year of the Leslie McClain-Ruelle, a colleague of Kaufman who wrote one of the letters of recommendation, noted that, "Nancy has made significant contributions to teacher education through countless in-service presentations in various districts. She has been active in presenting at local, regional, national and international professional conferences.

Sara Bilbrey of Plover, a student of Kaufman, added that, "She is the perfect model or mentor; not only the kind of teacher one would like to have, but the kind of teacher one would like to be.

Besides serving in an administrative capacity as head of the UW-SP School of Education, Kaufman is a specialist in preparing collegians in how to teach students with exceptional educational needs. She has been at the university since 1981

Kaufman has published articles in dozens of journals and periodicals and is co-author of the Department of Public Instruction's new publication, "Educational Assessment of Emotional Disturbance: An Evaluation Guide." She is a frequent presenter at state and national meetings on special education issues.

In 1986, Kaufman received the award for outstanding performance and service in the field of learning disabilities from the State Council for Exceptional Children, and later was chosen as the organization's president. She also is a past winner of several citations for excellence in teaching.

Before coming to UW-SP, she taught at UW-Madison and in the public schools of Menominee, Mich., Madison, Marinette and Fond du Lac. She holds a Ph.D. from UW-Madison.

Environmentalist Champeau wins award

Randy Champeau, an environmental education professor at UW-SP, is the 1990 winner of the Facilitator of the Year Award given by the state's Project Learning Tree.

This kindergarten through grade 12 program uses trees and forests as a "window" to the natural world. Participants are helped to develop skills and knowledge to make informed decisions about use and management of the environment.

Randy Champeau

He was cited for his role in getting Project Learning Tree re-established in Wisconsin and in promoting its use in pre-service and in-service teacher education at UW-SP.

Champeau, an alumnus of UW-SP who returned to be on its faculty in 1984 with a Ph.D. from Michigan State University, is chair of the Wisconsin Association for Environmental Education.

Nostalgia

New role for faculty's senior member

There's no business like show business, except for teaching, according to Professor Joseph Schuler of LIW-SP

Now the most senior member of the UW-SP faculty with 33 years of service, Schuler has made a partial career change by assuming the chairmanship of the Department of Philosophy.

As he shifts into a new role with administrative responsibilities, the move is considerably less dramatic than when he left the stage for the classroom.

Schuler's story begins in the small towns of his native Oklahoma, where he lived as a child while his father served as a minister in Disciples of Christ churches.

He had a good voice, and his father encouraged his use of it in church choirs. A star was born.

By the time he was graduated from high school in 1948, the family had settled in Fort Worth, and Schuler availed himself of educational opportunities at neighboring Texas Christian University. But he also had a yen for "show biz," and went in pursuit of it as a means of supporting himself.

Schuler organized a jazz combo that performed in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, featuring the future professor as spokesman, master of ceremonies, stand-up comic, vocalist and, sometimes, piano player.

Nowadays, he enjoys matching wits with colleagues near his own age about lyrics of songs popular more than 40 years ago.

His comedy routine? He remembers little of it.
"I used a lot of one-liners from joke books," he admits with laughter.

Sometimes, the material wasn't suitable for the ears of Sunday School students, he further concedes. Like the time he was asked to prepare a lively act for an Elks convention without being told a group of clergymen would be sitting in the front row. He did, however, go ahead with the show and had no complaints from those members of the cloth.

As a popular local entertainer, his career took a new turn with the advent of commercial television. In 1949, he was hired to do a monthly show for station WBAP of Dallas entitled "Joe Schuler and Company."

TV was such a new mode of communication in those days, he wondered if his audiences were larger in nightclubs than on his broadcasts in one of the nation's larger metropolitan areas.

Meanwhile, Schuler was pursuing a major in mathematics and was fast tiring of life as a student. After all, he was carving out a future for himself in the entertainment world and didn't need a degree, he concluded. So he joined the U.S. Army.

There were opportunities for entertainers in uniform, but such practitioners had little chance of moving up in rank. Hence, a decision to earn a commission, which led to an assignment with a training unit.

The subject of his instruction was the use of machine guns. Voila! He developed an interest in and fondness for teaching. Maybe the focus of the education wasn't his strongest interest but he was, nonetheless, loving the art of teaching. The entertainment world was behind him.

In 1953, when, as a husband and father of an infant daughter, he was mustered out of military life, he returned to Texas Christian as a student and supported the family with a lucrative newspaper route.

From Texas, he went to UW-Madison for graduate work in philosophy and psychology. And in 1957, he joined the faculty of what was then a state college in Stevens Point with 1,200 students.

"It was a neat place," he recalls. All of the faculty members and their spouses could fit, on special occasions, into the basement cafeteria of Nelson Hall.

Though a few courses had been taught in philosophy at UW-SP before his arrival, Schuler was the first specialist in that field on the faculty. For the next decade, his offerings were part of the psychology department. By 1966, the school had added several additional philosophers and a new department was established with John Zawadsky as chairman. Today, the Department of Philosophy has 12 teaching members and ranks among the largest, and, according to Schuler,

Joe Schuler

"one of the best" departments nationally among universities the size of UW-SP.

He takes particular pride in the work of Arthur Herman in Eastern philosophies, Baird Callicott in environmental ethics and Thomas Overholt in religious studies. "They are regarded as outstanding internationally," he explained.

Schuler believes the late Warren Jenkins, first dean of the College of Letters and Science, was largely responsible for the department's development because of a belief in the value of promoting the study of philosophy.

Schuler has devoted most of his teaching to the philosophy of law, religion and modern history. In his early years, he also doubled as UW-SP's tennis coach.

"I teach what I enjoy and what I'm thinking about and let the students come along for the ride," he says of his career.

The father of three and grandfather of five also harkens back to his days in show business when explaining the reason he has found so much satisfaction in the classroom.

"It seems there's a real continuity (from comedian to teacher). What I've done all of my life is stand in front of people and discuss things I enjoy doing. After all, philosophy lends itself to humor. There are many humorous, ludicrous things in philosophy."

Schuler, who was elected chair by his colleagues and appointed by Justus Paul, dean of the College of Letters and Science, succeeds Richard Feldman. The outgoing chair has served six years, the maximum amount of time the faculty allows one of its colleagues to head the unit.

If he continues in the post that long, Schuler said it will be time to retire and step up his involvement in stamp collecting.

Edna Carlsten – she made art classes fun

At Christmastime many years ago, an art teacher at the Stevens Point Normal School worked diligently to create festive yuletide sets for music productions directed by one of her faculty colleagues.

Today, more than half a century later, visitors to UW-SP's Fine Arts Center may still attend festive shows in facilities named after these two good friends—the Edna C. Carlsten Gallery and the Peter J. Michelsen Concert Hall.

Upon Edna Carlsten's retirement in 1961, she spoke fondly of Michelsen and recalled the holiday preparations as "some of my fondest memories" of her 38-year teaching career at UW-SP.

Carlsten came to Stevens Point in 1923 to serve for a year while the school's only art teacher was on leave. When the other woman was unable to return, Carlsten took over and remained in the post for almost 40 years. She had formerly served for five years in rural schools of Illinois and five years as supervisor of art for the schools of East Chicago, Ind.

A native of Paxton, Ill., she was born 100 years ago to a Swedish immigrant couple. She studied at the Art Institute of Chicago and earned a master's degree from the University of Chicago. She did additional graduate studies at the University of Illinois, Colorado State College and the School of Crafts in North Carolina.

Carlsten served as Stevens Point's only art professor for 30 years until she was joined by Henry Runke in 1953, Norman Keats in 1956 and Herbert Sandmann in 1960. Her duties included preparing future art teachers, conducting classes in the old Campus Laboratory School and handling some administrative assignments.

In 1943, the supervisor of art for the Wausau School System wrote to W.C. Hansen, the college's president:

On reviewing the teachers whom we get from Stevens Point, I can conclude that all have fine backgrounds in art education. With the background given them by Miss Carlsten, the girls just out of school are ready to go on with teaching art in their own rooms as we would like to have them do in the Wausau Schools.

Some of her former students called her "grand," a teacher who made art classes "fun," and a believer in "original drawings and designs." Her art philosophy included individual development of each person's creative ability, a belief in free expression and an admiration for simplicity.

In 1932 Carlsten and about 100 other teachers from throughout the country embarked upon an "art pilgrimage" to six European countries. One of the places she visited before returning home was her mother's birthplace in Sweden.

In 1937 one of her paintings, "Gladiolas," was selected for inclusion in the 18th Annual Swedish-American Art Exhibition in Chicago.

Carlsten was a longtime Girl Scout volunteer who led numerous craft workshops, a charter member of the Stevens Point chapter of the Business and Professional Women's Club, and one of the founders of the Wisconsin Art Education Association. Other activities included the Stevens Point Art League and the Retired Teachers Association.

For nearly 40 years, she maintained a summer home near Florence on the Spread Eagle Chain of Lakes.

Edna Carlsten

In 1969 Carlsten was honored by the university when it chose her name to be affixed to the gallery in the Fine Arts Center which was then under construction. She received a second tribute the same year when students dedicated their winter carnival to her and made her a special guest at events.

She died in early December, 1977, at her home in Stevens Point.

Homecoming'90

Brenda Leahy delayed her scheduled graduation in 1990 for one year to serve as state president of the organization that unites all of the student government organizations in the UW System. She returned for homecoming with Bob Peterson, '88, now a graduate student in counseling at UW-Platteville; Mary Reinholdt, '88, manager of Braun's Fashions in Madison; and Paul Stollenwerk, '88, regional sales manager for Woodlore Division of Allen-Edmonds Shoe Corp. in Milwaukee.

From left, Henry "Tiny" Bannach, '22, '30, and '34, Marshfield; Greg Charlesworth, '31, of New London; and Guy Krumm, '35, of Kaukauna, recalled bygone athletic teams.

From left, Dave Marshalek, '88, kneeling, is an environmental monitoring technician in South Milwaukee; Bill Poole, '85, is an environmental consultant for a Madison firm; Jeff Taylor, '85, is an environmental consultant for a Chicago firm; Greg Knight, '85, is a soil scientist for the U.S. Forest Service in Medford, and his wife, Barbara Robinson Knight, '86, is a purchasing assistant at Hurd Millwork in Medford.

Richard Farvour, '74, of Waukesha, requests there be 100 alumni of the University Band participating in the 1994 centennial homecoming parade.

Ellsworth Gaulke, left, of Lac du Flambeau, and Richard Berndt, of Stevens Point, both of the class of '50 took part in a luncheon for Pointer athletes of yore. Ellsworth retired this spring after a checkered career that included a stint as a restaurateur, a term in the State Legislature and 35 years as a junior high school teacher in Lac du Flambeau. Dick, who is one of the founders and longtime committee persons for the Pointer Athletic Hall of Fame, retired two years ago as head of Berndt and Associates, a Stevens Point insurance agency.

Celebrating Larry Ironside's induction into the Hall of Fame were, from left: Ironside, '67, Bernie Christianson '67, Pete Seiler, '67, Leonard Ironside, all of Wisconsin Rapids, Richard West '68, Stevens Point and James Peterson '67, Pittsville.

Mary Ann Peterson Steinberg, left, '52, of Appleton, and Margaret Mlada Polansky, '53, of Wisconsin Rapids attended the alumni coffee homecoming morning. Mary Ann is a second grade teacher at Highland School in Appleton and Margaret is a Chapter I teacher at Mead School in Wisconsin Rapids.

Karl Blahnik, '66, of Appleton, is a property and casualty insurance agent in Appleton. One of his three children is a student this year at UW-SP.

Old vet recalls campus role in WWI

Though ever so small, an Army base was in operation 72 years ago at UW-SP during the closing weeks of World War I.

Robert Andrews, 91, who may be the last survivor of the 100-plus member unit, remembers it well.

In early October of 1918, young women who occupied Nelson Hall were told to find other living accommodations in the community, and the building was turned over to the Student Army Training Corps. The commander was K. C. Kaufman, a regular Army officer from San Diego. The unit remained in existence through the end of December, more than a month beyond Armistice Day.

Robert Andrews

Andrews, who lives on Division Street with his wife, Susie, remembers how the unit fulfilled his desire to be involved in the war effort. "You know how kids are at times like that. They only see the excitement and the opportunity for experience. No one thinks about getting killed," he mused.

Andrews, who was a graduate of Oxford High School, was bound and determined to be a soldier as hostilities in France mounted. When he volunteered for duty, his county was not taking volunteers, so he attempted to join a student training contingent in Madison. However, that unit was full. News of a training corps to be organized at the Stevens Point State Normal School (now UW-SP) attracted him to this campus, where he served as a private during the program's entire existence. He then remained to graduate from the host school in 1922.

The soldiers in Stevens Point, considered on active military duty, rose at 6 a.m. each day, hiked to the fair grounds (now Goerke Park) for their physical training, and then took classes in mathematics, surveying and mapmaking. Bedtime was always 10 p.m. The group had rifles but never fired them. "I remember they were a Russian style—very heavy," Andrews says. Everyday life in the training unit lacked frivolity, he recalls. There were no social events or organized forms of recreation. The unit was to serve as a screening program in which men would be selected to advance to officers' training school, he recalls.

A happening in the corps that stands out most vividly in Andrew's mind occurred Nov. 9, 1918. News arrived at Nelson Hall that hostilities had ended in Europe and peace was at hand. The Stevens Point soldiers went into a special formation and marched through city streets to the cheers of townsfolk. It was a cold, rainy day, and the men were drenched. Two days later, when the real armistice took place, it was raining again, and a similar, though anti-climactic, parade took place. Exposure to the elements had been too great in the two outings for most of the men, and for the duration of the fall, many of them were ill. A virulent strain of influenza was extracting a horrendous toll of human life across the county, but Andrews believe all of the soldiers in Stevens Point survived.

The remaining three years of Andrews' stay on the campus were more eventful then his two and one-half months here in uniform. He played basketball and football and became well acquainted with many members of the faculty "who made a very good impression on me."

After his graduation with a certificate to teach, he served through the 1920s on the faculties at Phillips High School and later at Westfield High School. Next he spent a decade on the staff of the Milwaukee County Department of Public Welfare followed by a stint with the State Division of Corrections as a probation officer. He ended his career as a supervisor for the State Department of Public Welfare, overseeing programs in an eight-county area in central and northern Wisconsin. He and his wife have lived in Stevens Point since the late 1950s. Since retiring in 1964, Andrews has provided public service by acting as a guardian for nearly 40 residents of the Stevens Point area, who because of illness, age or handicaps, have required social studies instructor in Mosinee. Joswick then was employed as a high school principal in Door County for two years before moving to Pulaski in 1935. As superintendent of schools, he was one the first state school administrators to reorganize the numerous country schools in the area into a single school district. Joswick received his master's degree from UW-Madison in education administration in 1948, and continued to oversee Pulaski Community Schools until 1970. Throughout his tenure, he remained an active participant with the student body, founding the Pulaski News, a school and community newspaper written and produced by students. At the time of Joswick's retirement, Pulaski Community School was the largest rural high school in the state. He was honored for his accomplishments by the Wisconsin Association of School District Administrators, when he was named the 1987 Outstanding Wisconsin Educator. He is involved in several community groups and remains interested in bringing new industry to the Pulaski area. He serves on the board of directors of the Pulaski State Bank and Brown County Housing Authority as well as vice president of Pulaski Industries.

Nowadays, Andrews enjoys telling stories of his alma mater's role in World War I. Because of his own involvement, he is officially ranked as a U.S. Army veteran, which occasionally generates this quip from him: "I could even be buried in a National Cemetery." Andrews, however, is a survivor, and takes particular pride that he ranks among fewer than a dozen Portage County men who had assignments in the war that was to "end all wars."

Six star athletes from past honored

Six former UW-SP athletic standouts were inducted into the Pointer Athletic hall of Fame during homecoming day on October 13.

The inductees, Larry Ironside, Gary Muchow, Phillip Rodriguez, Mary Schultz, Becky Seevers and Dan Wilcox, bring to 81 the number of members in the "hall."

LARRY IRONSIDE, 1963-66: After transferring from UW-Madison, Ironside established a three-season wrestling mark of 38-5-1, including a pair of state collegiate championships and, in 1966, the state conference championship. During his senior season, he compiled a record of 21-1-1, being named NAIA District 14 Wrestler of the Year. Following graduation, he returned to his hometown of Wisconsin Rapids, where he is presently the co-owner of an Oldsmobile and GMC truck dealership.

GARY MUCHOW, 1977-80: Muchow was both an NAIA and NCAA Division III All-American swimmer for UW-SP. During his career, he won NAIA District 14 titles in the 400 free relay, the 800 free relay and the 200 butterfly as well as capturing conference championships in the 200 butterfly and 500 free. To cap off his final season, he helped lead the Pointers to a ninth place finish in the NCAA Division III championships. Following graduation, Muchow coached the Iowa City Swim Club for one and one-half years, earned his master's degree in counselor education, and is presently a family therapist in Cedar Rapids, Iowa while working on his doctorate.

PHILLIP RODRIGUEZ, 1977-81: A standout for the Pointers on the basketball court, Rodriguez currently ranks as the No. 6 all-time scorer in Pointer history with 1,283 points. He was a two-time first team All-WSUC pick as well as being named to the NAIA District 14 first team. As a junior, Rodriguez led the team in steals with 25 and then, as a senior, blocked 18 shots to lead the squad. He was also the Pointer of the Week three times during his senior season. Rodriguez has continued his basketball playing since graduation, playing in leagues in the Chicago area and in tournaments throughout Wisconsin. He is presently an aerial specialist for Time Savers, Inc., a business consulting firm.

MARY SCHULTZ, 1977-80: A leader for the Lady Pointer field hockey team, Schultz is currently No. 2 on the all-time scoring list with 56 goals. In her final season, she set the single season scoring mark with 35 while being named team MVP as well as first team All-Conference. In 1980 the Lady Pointers won the Wisconsin State University conference championship and also participated in the national championship of the AIAW. She has remained active in field hockey, and has completed several marathons since graduating from UW-SP with high honors. She now has her master's degree in exercise physiology from the University of South Carolina. She is presently the exercise test coordinator in the cardiac rehabilitation unit at Swedish Covenant Hospital in Chicago.

REBECCA SEEVERS, 1975-80: A two-sport standout for the Lady Pointers, Seevers earned four letters in both track and field and basketball at UW-SP. As a track athlete, she earned most valuable player and Female Athlete of the Year honors as well as winning the conference championship in the discus and qualifying for nationals four times. In basketball, she led the Lady Pointers in rebounding during the 76-77 season, helping lead the squad to a 16-2 overall record. Following graduation, Seevers worked as a medical technologist and, in 1988, earned her master's degree in environmental and public health from UW-Eau Claire. She is presently an environmental consultant in St. Paul.

DAN WILCOX, 1979-82: A four-year starter at second base for the Pointer baseball team, Wilcox compiled a career batting average of .324. He was voted the team's most valuable player twice, in 1981 and 1982, as well as serving as captain for two seasons. He was a four-time All-Conference pick and also earned All-NAIA District 14 honors twice. He is the Pointer baseball career record holder in games played (103), at bats (339), hits (110) and runs scored (68). Twenty-seven of his 110 hits were for extra bases. Since graduation, Wilcox has remained close to athletics, both as a coach and teacher as well as his involvement with the YMCA. He is presently executive director of operations for the Charlotte, N.C. YMCA 7,000-member

Summary of fall athletic achievements

Here's a summary of how UW-SP athletic teams fared this fall:

FOOTBALL The 1990 football team, struggled to 6-4 overall and 4-4 in the State University Conference.

Freshman Roger Hauri emerged as the team's No. 1 signal caller and saw action in all 10 games, completing 102 passes on 259 attempts for 1,772 yards and 12 touchdowns.

The defense was led by all-conference senior linebackers Craig Verhagen and Bob Bostad. Verhagen, an outside linebacker used primarily as a pass rusher, posted a team leading 12 sacks, 14 tackles for loss, and two safeties. Bostad led the Pointers in total tackles with 128, including 75 solos, 46 assists, and seven for loss.

Offensive lineman Pete Lucas of Jefferson also earned All-WSUC First Team honors.

MEN'S and WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY The men's cross country team finished 10th in the nation at the NCAA Division III Cross Country Championships at Grinnell College in Iowa. Rod Garcia led UW-SP with his All-American finish. Bill Dean was second, finishing 49th in 25:56, followed by Jason Ryf, who finished 85th in 26:24.

UW-Oshkosh, the 1990 WSUC Champion, won the Championship, while UW-La Crosse finished third.

Suzy Jandrin, the only member of the 1990 UW-Stevens Point women's cross country team to qualify for the championships, finished in 35th place with a time of 18:41.1, five seconds off her personal best WOMEN'S SOCCER The women's soccer team won the state tournament for the second consecutive year. The Lady Pointers competed against many Division I and II scholarship schools, as well as many top NCAA III schools on their way to posting a 11-4-3 overall record.

VOLLEYBALL The young volleyball team struggled through the season to a last place finish in the WWIAC at 0-9, while compiling a 3-31 record overall.

First year head coach Sharon Stellwagen, faced with an abundance of first-year players as well as numerous injuries throughout the season, looks forward to returning all but one player for next year's squad.

WOMEN'S TENNIS The women's tennis team held its own against an experienced schedule during the 1990 season. Despite recording a 1-9 overall record, including 0-6 in the WWIAC, head coach Nancy Page saw plenty of promise from her freshman-dominated squad.

The Pointer's lone victory came against UW-Platteville, but the team also finished third of eight teams at the UW-Oshkosh doubles tournament.

UW-SP receives rare bird collection

Nearly 450 mounted birds with an appraised value of $87,000 have been given to UW-SP.

The donor is Dr. R.J. Mathwig, a retired physician in the Chippewa County community of Stanley, who established his collection in the early 1930s and continued developing it until the late 1980s.

Nearly all of the specimens are waterfowl or upland game birds from all parts of the globe.

Kirk Beattie, a wildlife professor at UW-SP who has represented the school in receiving the gift, says it will be particularly useful for instructional purposes and serve as a special attraction to the Natural Resources Building.

Students are currently assisting Beattie in the development of an inventory of the birds, and it's not an

"I don't have the foggiest idea what most of them are," he quipped. He doubts whether he has ever seen the likes of 80 percent of the specimens.

A few of the birds are hybrids such as a cross between a Chilean Teal and a Baikal Teal.

Beattie explains that the curriculum in the College of Natural Resources has a global focus, therefore teachers need examples of wildlife from every continent, as are represented in the Mathwig collection.

During the six decades Dr. Mathwig pursued his hobby, he secured many of his exotic birds from game farms and then personally mounted each one.

To view his gift to UW-SP as a whole gives people "a better perspective and probably more appreciation for game birds around the world," Beattie suggests.

"Our students who will be future game managers should be especially interested in this," the professor adds.

It is common for schools such as UW-SP to have "fairly good" collections of mounted wildlife from this continent. However, it's rare for schools to have such a large representation of exotic species, he continues.

Beattie has chosen a few favorites from the lot that are displayed on his desk. They include the Baikal Teal, Moluccan Jadjah, Shel Duck and Bahama Pintail, all ducks. Some of the most valuable specimens are a pair of red-breasted geese worth $1,700.

Besides his office and classroom, some of the specimens will be used at Treehaven, UW-SP's field station near Tomahawk, and at educational facilities in Stevens Point, including the university's natural history museum.

Dr. Mathwig's total collection of about 1,300 birds has been divided between UW-SP, the high school and historical society and hospital in Stanley, and the College of Lake County in Grayslake, Ill., where his son, John, is a professor. Members of his family arranged the donations. Dr. Mathwig is now a patient in a nursing home

$1 million scholarship goal

The new president of the UW-SP Paper Science Foundation said September 20 that he would strive to build the organization's endowment fund to $1 million.

The foundation currently has slightly under $200,000, which is used to support student scholarships and laboratory equipment purchases purchases.

Robert Mauszycki

Robert Mauszycki, general manager for pulp and paper chemistry at the Nalco Chemical Co. in Naperville, Ill., told fellow officers of the foundation that the quality of the UW-SP paper science program makes it ripe for major contributions from corporations and alumni.

He pledged to help the foundation reach the $1 million endowment mark within the next three years.

Mauszycki was elected to a two-year term as foundation president during the organization's annual meeting. Donald Stein, vice president for manufacturing at Consolidated Papers in Wisconsin Rapids, was chosen as vice president. Larry Graham, chair of the paper science department, and Gary Keller, executive director of the UW-SP Foundation, Inc., were chosen to continue as secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Eight new directors elected to the paper science foundation's board are Glendon Brown, technical director of Mead Papers in Escanaba, Mich.; Donald Churchill, director of basic research, and Arthur Rankin, senior papermaking supervisor, both for Appleton Papers in Appleton; Kenneth Sievert, vice president of Lakes States operations for James River Corp. in Green Bay; Charles Stahr, mill manager for Packaging Corporation of America in Tomahawk; Scott Stimart, sales representative for J.M. Huber Corp., Macon, Ga.; George Story, vice president of Simons-Eastern Co., Decatur, Ga.; and Robert Tracy, manager of technical services for Boise Cascade in International Falls. Minn.

The foundation voted to use the services of The Common Fund in the investment of its endowments as a means of having its savings grow with the national economy.

Officers of the organization also toured the new facilities of the Department of Paper Science in the Science Building, which are almost fully operational. Part of a $2 million addition, which is used exclusively by the department, was occupied nearly two years ago.

At a dinner concluding a day of foundation annual meeting activities, it was announced that North Central chapter of Paper Industry Management Association (PIMA) has given another $7,500, bringing to $15,000 the amount it has given in support of scholarship endowments.

Since the university graduated its first four paper science majors in 1973, more than 320 men and women have earned degrees in this field and now are scattered in 29 states.

New microscope to be purchased

UW-SP has received more than $60,000 from the National Science Foundation to purchase new microscope equipment.

Professors Richard Roller, Sol Sepsenwol, C. Edward Gasque, Joseph Harris, and Steven Taft, all biologists, are co-writers of the grant, which will help finance purchase of a scanning electron microscope (SEM), devices for SEM preparation, and a multifunctional light microscope. UW-SP has pledged a matching amount toward the purchase cost of more than $125,000.

The faculty members will integrate the new equipment with present equipment to develop and upgrade courses in light and electron microscopy; improve existing laboratories in cell biology, genetics, recombinant DNA, histology and immunology; and provide further opportunities for student research projects.

Gifts

Foundation marks 25th anniversary

The UW-SP Foundation is now 25 years old, and it has four new members of its board of directors.

The organization was established to collect funds from private sources to support special campus activities not ordinarily financed through state tax dollars.

In its quarter-of-a-century of existence, the organization has collected a total of $16 million which has been spent in support of the university, it was reported at a recent anniversary dinner. A Stevens Point attorney, Hiram Anderson, addressed the board about the foundation's history, telling that it started with assets of $13,000.

Today, there are endowments totaling $1.18 million, largely for the support of scholarships. In addition, there is $652,000 in restricted funds and $118,400 in unrestricted monies, $710,000 worth of land and equipment and $215,000 in a custodian account for the paper science program. The current president is UW-SP alumnus Frederick Wenzel of the Marshfield Clinic.

The new board members who will begin their service as directors in January are:

—Harry Colcord, president of Apogee Wausau Group and a 1973 graduate of UW-SP.

—Don Kropidlowski, president of American Equity Bank of Stevens Point and a 1974 graduate of UW-SP.

—D. David (Dewey) Sebold, past president and chief executive officer of Tombstone Pizza Corp of Medford, member of the UW-SP class of 1967.

—Louis Wysocki, chief executive officer of Wysocki Farms in Custer.

The foundation has been conducting a $250,000 fund drive this fall for student scholarships and other special projects. The goal is $50,000 above revenues received in last year's appeal, according to Executive Director Gary Keller.

It has been decided that 50 percent of the foundation's endowed funds be invested in The Common Fund, an organization that manages more than $10 billion for nearly 1,200 institutions. Among them are several private colleges and UW foundations in Wisconsin. The fund has a long history of providing a larger return for foundations than is available in such investments as certificates of deposit.

NSF grant for teachers of environment

The National Science Foundation has awarded nearly $189,000 to UW-SP to provide in-service training in environmental education to 400 state teachers.

Providing the instruction will be the first major project of the state's Center for Environmental Education that began July 1 under the aegis of UW-SP's College of Natural Resources.

The grant will cover the cost of tuition and books for the teachers taking courses and the salaries for those who will be leading the instruction.

The courses will satisfy requirements of teachers whose school districts are being mandated by the state to beef up offerings in environmental education.

Project Director Rick Wilke said the majority of kindergarten through grade 12 teachers have misgivings about their competency and preparation to teach environmental education effectively. A need for many of them is a stronger scientific foundation, he explained.

Further training in the "issue investigation model," on which environmental education is based, will enable the teachers to lead their students "past the frustration of merely identifying problems to the actual implementation of solutions," he continued.

The College of Natural Resources will be assisted by 25 adjunct faculty/educators with master's degrees who are in school, nature center and other related positions throughout the state. They will teach four one-credit courses to state elementary and secondary teachers.

Thank You

by Frederick Wenzel

On behalf of the Board of Directors of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point Foundation, Inc., I thank each donor for the decision to support UW-Stevens Point. We also appreciate the contributions from many corporations that are listed as well.

As an alum of UW-SP, class of '56, I am particularly delighted to see the impressive numbers of alumni who are contributing to our alma mater. Your gifts are an affirmation of the difference our faculty and the Stevens Point community have made on our lives. I also want to thank the many UW-SP faculty and staff who contribute to our annual appeal. Your contributions of time, talent and treasure are especially noteworthy.

Since its founding in 1965, the Foundation has served as an advocate for and a partner of UW-Stevens Point. It has raised over $16 million for scholarships, faculty and staff development, and property acquisition and construction of facilities to advance the university's mission.

We are delighted and gratified by the generosity of each donor who has helped us and the university. We look forward to even more exciting opportunities as UW-SP nears its centennial.

The Foundation's mission is simple and clear. We want to help UW-Stevens Point become the finest undergraduate university in

I invite you to join us in this important venture! Once again, thank you so much.

Scholarship funds started

Betz Lab gives $10,000

Betz Laboratories, Inc. of Trevose, Pa., has established a $10,000 endowment at UW-SP for the Paper Science Department. The fund will support student scholarships.

In a letter to the foundation, Donald Riggs, director of industry marketing for Betz Industrial, and Robert Mackey, director of corporate accounts for Betz Paperchem, Inc., announced that $5,000 is being given to the fund this year and another $5,000 will be donated in 1991. ■

Joerns firm honors Nass

Joerns Healthcare has established a scholarship fund for children of its employees at UW-SP in honor of longtime company executive Raymond D.

Nearly $8,000 has been contributed to the fund in the UW-SP Foundation, and the amount will continue to grow thanks to pledges from Joerns officials. Nass, members of his family, and others are also supporting the program.

Nass said he hopes the endowment becomes large enough to generate "more than one substantial scholarship per year." After Nass moved from

Annual winners of the awards will be children of current full-time employees of Joerns Healthcare and its subsidiaries. Selection will be based on past academic performance and community service. Financial need will be considered in cases where a choice based on general performance is not

Nass, who has spent about 30 years with the company, which is now the nation's largest manufacturer of nursing home beds and furniture, said he appreciates the firm's unusual gift because it provides important opportunities to Joerns Healthcare families.

Indian students aided

Raymond D. Nass

An anonymous donor has established a $5,000 endowment at the UW-SP to support scholarships for Native American Recipients are to be from Wisconsin tribes or bands, enrolled on a full-time basis with declared majors and grade point averages of at least 2.5, "of good character," and with status of sophomore class membership or above.

Loretta Webster, associate vice chancellor for the advancement of cultural diversity, said need for scholarships to assist minority students is greater than ever. There have been cutbacks in some financial aid programs that have caused hardships for many minority students, she explained.

UW-SP has three other endowments supporting scholarships. They are named for the late Raymond Gotham, for Henry Runke and John Messing, all longtime members of the faculty.

Webster said members of the public interested in providing financial support to minority students may wish to do so by contributing to the endowment funds already established. Tax-exempt gifts may be sent in care of the UW-SP Foundation, Inc., with information identifying which scholarship the money should support.

Dorothy Newell Bourn

Granddaughter remembers Bourn

A scholarship fund has been established at the UW-SP as a memorial to a longtime Stevens Point home economist.

A $2,500 endowment in the name of the late Dorothy Newell Bourn will be administered by the UW-SP Foundation. It will support scholarships for nontraditional, upper-class students in the fashion merchandising major. Recipients are to demonstrate outstanding leadership skills and community involvement besides having at least a 2.8 grade

The fund donor is Mrs. Bourn's only survivor, Debra Boehmer, a granddaughter and a UW-SP alumna who now lives in Holland, Mich.

Mrs. Bourn was a Merrill native who graduated from UW-SP in 1928 and worked nearly 40 years throughout this part of the state as a home economist for the Wisconsin Public Service Corp. She died in February of 1989. ■

Monica E. Bainter

Bainter award established

The first winners of student scholarships from an $85,000 fund bequeathed by the late Professor Monica E. Bainter have been announced at UW-SP.

All told, four students were given awards at a spring UW-SP Department of Physics and Astronomy recognition party at the Newman Center on campus. They shared a total of $1,900 generated by the endowment.

Francis Schmitz, department chairman, announced that in the future, income from the bequest of Professor Bainter will be divided, one-third going to a Monica E. Bainter Memorial Scholarship to an outstanding junior student; one-third for Bainter Scholarships for several outstanding upper-class students; and one-third for purchase of equipment for the Bainter taught physics at UW-SP from 1947 to 1980, having the distinction part of that time as the only woman chair of such a unit in an American public university. She died two years ago.

Party exchanged for scholarship

Maurice Mead, of Neenah, a 1951 graduate of UW-SP, observed his 35th anniversary of employment with James River Corp. in a novel way that benefitted his alma

When his supervisor suggested that a party was being planned in his honor, Mead asked that an amount of money equivalent to the cost of the celebration be sent to the UW-SP Paper Science Foundation. The money will be added to an endowment fund for student scholarships

Mead, who grew up in Wausau and Rhinelander, was a chemistry major and math and physics minor in secondary education as a student at the old Central State Teachers College. He had been part of Professor Gertie Hanson Halstad's radio workshop, and after graduation took his first position at WHA Radio in Madison. He served in the Korean War and later was a salesman in Canada before joining what today is the James River Corp.

March 15...Central Wisconsin Educators Conference/hospitality event, Wausau

Following a reunion of UW-Stevens Point alumni in the

Washington, D.C. area last July, I received a letter that

It was a great idea. And it was a thrill to find out that many UW-SP grads here helps me to say what I want to: that, when I was there, I underestimated Point, the so many of 'us' are in the area . . . That there are so university and the community. . . . I was a big city-turned suburbanite, middle-class student who hadn't been around as much as I thought I had. . . . In any case, since having been around this country and the

just as distinguished as those of many institutions, much more reputable than those of some schools.

Never to be underestimated. As to students' or degrees . . . as from some of the more celebrated world, I grew to appreciate Point. The UW-SP faculty is graduates' academic or intellectual achievement, I know of as many people proportionately who have graduated from Point who now have master's, doctorates or law

... and thanks again for the 'reunion' here in D.C.

institutions "There was a symbiosis between the university and the city: Point wasn't as 'small townish' as I once felt. In how many towns the size of Stevens Point could people, even those having nothing to do with the university, be walking by a gym one night and stop by to hear a concert by the Vienna Symphony? Or Maynard Ferguson? Or a speech by Hubert Humphrey? Or George McGovern? . . . Or see some Siberian dancers?" Nice words for an alumni director to hear and to share. We know it's important for us to take UW-SP on the road, to bring the campus to those of you unable to come back for a visit. The warm reception we receive from our alumni as we travel around the state and country is overwhelming and we really appreciate it! Events (on and off campus, in and out of state), alumni record keeping, communications by phone, mail and sending you the POINTER ALUMNUS will continue to be our primary responsibility.

However, you know that communication in an extremely mobile society, whether by phone or mail planning events and keeping track of the membership is expensive. Costs are increasing faster than our budget. You have been generous in your support for your subscription to the ALUMNUS and to alumni activities and alumni scholarships. We ask that you continue and that you consider yet another avenue of support. Endowment gifts are productive forever. Your Alumni Association has recently received one from the estate of a longtime librarian, Syble Mason. Miss Mason has made it possible for us to continue reaching out to you through her enduring gift. As we grow in numbers and activities, our expenses also grow. We must look to you for added support. An endowment similar to hers could be the answer.

Would you consider establishing such an endowment, leaving a gift for the UW-SP Alumni Association so that we may continue our mission of reaching out to all alumni of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point? ■
