UW-SP recycling project best in nation

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has rated the UW-SP recycling program as number one among the nation's schools of higher learning.

Chancellor Keith Sanders said the recognition is appropriate in view of UW-SP's long-standing role as a leader in the field of environmental education.

"This is yet another instance in which the university practices what it teaches," Sanders claimed.

Jerry Burling, director of purchasing and risk management, and Sharon Simonis, business manager for physical plant operations, were in Washington, D.C. May 15 to receive the EPA's first annual Administrator's Award from William K. Reilly.

EPA established nine categories for recognition, focusing its first round of recognition on innovative waste recycling programs.

UW-SP was the winner in the colleges and universities category with a comprehensive recycling, reuse and reduction (3 R's) program for the total student body and all university personnel. The local program was started in late 1989, and in its first full year of operation, resulted in savings of nearly $19,000 plus revenues of $4,200.

The most notable component of the project, in the estimation of the EPA, was the use of pellets from the papermaking industry as fuel in the coal-fired boiler, displacing 313 tons of coal, saving nearly $3,500 in fuel costs in 1990 and reducing sulfur dioxide emissions. The ash was recycled as roadfill.

All told the university recycled an estimated 39 percent of its refuse during the past year and is steadily increasing that figure. "We may already be at 60 percent," according to Burling.

The university goal is to have 75 to 80 percent of all wastes on the campus recycled in some way in about a year, he reported.

Greg Diemer, assistant chancellor for business affairs, said that the level of success achieved in the recycling program "has taken a lot of cooperation and hard work of many people, particularly our custodians, union members and heating plant personnel."

He said Craig Weiss of the Bureau of Engineering and Energy Management in Madison provided invaluable assistance in developing the use of paper pellets at the heating plant.

The pellets are made from paper that goes to waste during the production process at papermaking mills in the Fox River Valley.

In the area of recycling, the university has a 30-yard packer box, which saves 24 hours of labor per month in the handling of more than 18,000 pounds of mixed paper. In addition, the machinery enables shipment of a minimum of 10 ton of paper, increasing efficiency for transportation costs and also giving better payback on paper sales.

An aspect of recycling here that is a model for other schools is a SEARCH program (Students, Employees and Administration Recycling for Community Health). It involves recovering items for reuse which are normally disposed of at the end of each semester by students moving out of the residence halls. Appliances, clothing, miscellaneous supplies such as recreation items and apartment furnishings are collected and distributed to charitable organizations instead of being tossed in garbage cans.

Volunteers, primarily members of the Wisconsin State Employees Union, do the pickup of discarded items, saving nearly $1,000 in tipping fees at landfills and adding nearly $7,000 worth of usable goods for needy people in the area.

Burling said the successes being enjoyed today in recycling came after a slow and sometimes difficult start more than one and one-half years ago.

"We struggled with market development and getting the right containers and a sufficient number of containers to get going," he explained.

Developing an arrangement with the Fort Howard Corp. of Green Bay, which began purchasing an unsorted mixture of magazines, used stationery, newsprint and other grades of paper, was an important

Fort Howard was the only other Wisconsin winner of an EPA award. It took top honors in the large business category on the basis of developing a recycling advocacy program touching all facets of its operations.

Other winners were in the area of small business, kindergarten through grade 12 education institutions, community-civil and non-profit organizations, citizen, local government, state agency and federal agency.

Burling said his colleagues decided to enter the EPA competition because the university has been receiving a large number of inquiries from people at other campuses, government agencies and public organizations.

"Apparently the word was out that we were doing something positive," he observed. ■

Despite problems, we're being recognized for fair treatment

By Chancellor Keith Sanders

In recent months, many UW-Stevens Point alumni and friends have heard and read about allegations of discrimination and sexual harassment leveled against the university and many of its representatives. Sadly, this negative publicity has, in some instances, promulgated accusations that are not true, but that nevertheless have inflicted unwarranted damage to the institution's reputation and programs. The truth is that UW-Stevens Point has been a forerunner in taking the steps necessary to provide a harassment-free, discrimination-free educational environment for all faculty, staff, and students. Indeed, our campus is beginning to be regarded as a national model in attaining this goal.

Dr. Bernice Sandler, a widely-known and respected authority on sexual harassment and discrimination, recently visited UW-SP as the keynote speaker for our fall convocation. Following her appearance at Stevens Point, she sent a letter to the "Pointer" which recognized the achievements the campus has made in ensuring fair treatment for both men and women. In her letter, she says,

"I spent two very intensive days at Stevens Point, most of it outlining and identifying the kinds of problems that exist in varying degrees on campuses around the country...

"Many of the recommendations I generally make for creating a more hospitable climate for women on campus are already in place at Stevens Point. I was delighted to learn that there are major sessions on sexual harassment, sexual assault and cultural diversity incorporated in your orientation of new students, and that some of this is directed to their parents as well.

"I was also pleased to see that there is a year-long program that Stevens Point has launched, 'The Century of Creativity: Celebration of Women's Achievements,' which will highlight some of the major historical and current contributions of women to society, and thereby further the understanding of faculty, staff and students, men and women alike...

"This is the kind of commitment that many schools are afraid to undertake. Your school is translating its verbal commitment to making the classroom, the campus and the community a place that encourages equal opportunity as a way to prepare all students, men and women alike, for life and work in the next century.

"...These things are not accidents; they are the result of tough and supportive leadership at the highest levels. Support which is essential if change is to occur."

It is gratifying to receive this kind of praise from a woman who has worked so long and successfully in improving the campus climate for women nationwide.

I am now pleased to share with you some of the activities and programs the university has undertaken in recent years to elicit so fine a compliment from an individual of Dr. Sandler's stature:

1. During our 18 months of planning which culminated in the "Action Agenda for the '90s," a process which involved over 800 people, we set as one of our major priorities the goal of helping "faculty, staff and students better understand and accept broadened, global, cultural and gender perspectives." We indicated that we wanted "the vice chancellor and deans to develop a plan to provide support and recognition for faculty who develop or revise courses to include material on ethnic and gender issues." We said we wanted to "allow all administrators, supervisors, faculty, and academic staff to participate in programs that will strengthen their sensitivity to ethnic and gender issues." And we decided to increase the number of women and culturally-diverse faculty and staff recruited and retained. No university in Wisconsin has built more firmly into its agenda for the '90s an increased sensitivity to issues of gender equity and greater determination to develop a harassment-free educational environment.

2. The Faculty Senate adopted last year a strong statement about its intent to help create a harassment-free environment. To quote from the document passed by the Senate, "It is the policy of the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point to foster an environment of respect for the dignity and worth of all students, employees and guests of the university...and to strive to eliminate bias, prejudice and discrimination and harassment in all forms and manifestations."

3. There is empirical evidence that we are beginning to make progress toward our goal of a harassment/discrimination-free environment. Each of the past three years, we have increased the percentage of women who are on our faculty and staff. This fall, more than 50 percent of our new faculty and staff hired were women. It is probable that UW-Stevens Point hired a larger percentage of women into faculty and staff ranks this year than any other university in the UW System.

Throughout my two-and-one-half year tenure as UW-SP's Chancellor, I have added my personal support to the campus endeavors aimed at ensuring a harassment- and discrimination-free environment:

1. From my inaugural speech, and in nearly every other universitywide speech I have made since I came here, I have said that we needed to do everything we can to provide a hospitable working environment for everyone, including women and minorities. I have supported this position during the strategic planning process, in appearances before the Faculty Senate, and at "Take Back the Night" rallies.

2. Upon the recommendation of the Affirmative Action Committee, I hired Judy Goldsmith, a native of Wisconsin, graduate of UW-SP and former national president of NOW, to be the university's special advisor on affirmative action and equity. By bringing to our campus someone of national stature and whose dedication to full equality for everyone is a matter of public record, I made the strongest possible statement about my feelings regarding women.

3. On nearly every occasion where the opportunity has presented itself, I have said that the way to deal with sexual harassment is to encourage people to come forward and state their case. I continue to advocate this policy.

4. I have tried to lead by example. In all of my relations with women on this campus, I have respected their dignity, worked hard to make their world here an even better place in which to work, and on the two occasions when I have had the opportunity to make direct hires on my immediate staff, I have hired women.

Whatever you read or hear from the press, the fact is that, in nearly every regard, UW-SP is becoming a national model of an institution committed "body and soul" to creating an environment free of harassment and discrimination, and respectful of the dignity of all.

I hope that you will help us convey this message to our many publics during this difficult time in your alma mater's history. ■

Laurin Palmer Gordon 'distinguished alum'

A Nelsonville native who was the longtime state supervisor of education programs for military veterans was honored June 9 by his alma mater, UW-SP.

Laurin Palmer Gordon of 4723 Sheboygan Ave., Madison, became the 60th recipient of the Distinguished Alumnus Award during UW-SP's annual Alumni Day. Gordon spent nearly half a century in the field of education, almost half of that time on the staff of the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction in Madison.

Laurin Palmer Gordon

In the early 1950s, when veterans of World War II and the Korean War were taking advantage of benefits in the GI Bill, schools were crowded by their presence. Many private schools emerged, providing instruction in business, flight, cosmetology and a myriad of other fields. The DPI chose Gordon to oversee the quality of programming provided to the veterans.

Working as the representative of a state board, Gordon traveled throughout Wisconsin to inspect facilities and evaluate curricula. He uncovered problems in recruitment, teacher qualification and other areas which resulted in passage of the first laws in this country regulating programs for beneficiaries of the GI Bill in private schools by the Wisconsin Legislature.

After attending Stevens Point High School, Gordon earned a diploma from UW-SP (then the Stevens Point State Normal School) in 1921. He later returned to spend a year completing a state graded school course and to complete requirements for a degree. He received a bachelor's degree here in 1932 and then a master's from UW-Madison.

Gordon began his career in education 70 years ago as a rural school teacher in Portage County. He then became principal of a grade school in Woodford; principal of the state graded schools in Polar and Leopold; mathematics and science teacher in Wittenberg High School; school district administrator for Johnson Creek and Mount Horeb Public Schools; and the principal of Roosevelt Junior High in Appleton.

He had logged more than 20 years of service to the DPI by the time he retired in 1973.

He has been active in community and church groups wherever he lived. After his retirement, he volunteered for WHA radio and other Madison organizations and served as president of that city's chapter of the American Association of Retired People. His 88th birthday was in November.

Gordon is the second member of his family to receive the Distinguished Alumnus Award from UW-SP. His brother, the late Royal Gordon of Milwaukee, was honored posthumously in 1989 for his innovative work as a corrections specialist who founded a rehabilitation center for inner-city law offenders. ■

Treehaven recognizes Ced Vig for service

Ced Vig, '33, Rhinelander, is the recipient of the first community service award given for volunteer work in support of Treehaven, UW-SP's northwoods natural resources field station. Vig was honored at the annual meeting of the Treehaven Information Council at the station facilities between Rhinelander and Tomahawk.

Treehaven's director, Corky McReynolds, said Vig has long been actively involved in natural resources education in this part of the state. After he retired from a 25-year career as superintendent of the Rhinelander School System, the district named its school forest in honor of Vig. He also is a past recipient of UW-SP's Distinguished Alumnus Award.

Nowadays, he is involved in developing and presenting programs at Treehaven and for groups in the Rhinelander area. He also writes a column, "Wisconsin Woodsmoke," that appears weekly in the Rhinelander Daily News, New Richmond News and Phillips Bee. He writes a quarterly column for Northwoods Almanac and has a radio show five times weekly on a Rhinelander station. Additionally, he works with several charitable organizations in his hometown.

McReynolds said he is making arrangements for the community service award to be given annually to people in the vicinity of Treehaven who make major contributions to the success of the field station operations. ■

Alumni give UW-SP high grades

More than 70 percent of alumni rate UW-SP as "excellent," the same portion would choose to attend UW-SP again, and more than 95 percent would highly recommend UW-SP to friends and family, according to a recently published survey.

Results of the "Alumni Image Study" have been published in a report to Chancellor Keith Sanders and the university community by its author, Larry Kokkeler of the UW-SP faculty and director of Communication Associates.

"Overall," Kokkeler says, "the results of the study suggest the alumni have a very positive image of UW-SP. The ratings given on '19 selected living skills' suggest they believe the education they received here was useful and valued."

The living skills section asked subjects to rate how well the university had prepared them to deal with tasks such as finding information, planning and carrying out projects, understanding written information and defining and solving problems.

More than 90 percent of the alumni identified something specific they liked about UW-SP, while 29 percent cited things they disliked. Campus size, location and the instructional staff appeared to be the most positive characteristics. Many of the negative opinions pertained to situations over which the university has little or no control, such as early morning classes or the area's climate.

In answer to the question "What did you learn at UW-SP that was especially useful to you in your career?" the number one response was "how to get along with others," followed by (2) "writing," (3) "confidence in subject matter," (4) "career information," (5) "how to communicate effectively," and (6) "management skills." Communication skills, both oral and written, were considered to be of the greatest value by most of the respondents.

In the section containing "11 characteristics used to evaluate universities," every category measuring some aspect of teaching was rated at the highest level by at least 70 percent of respondents. More than 80 percent ranked UW-SP in the top three universities in the state, with UW-Madison providing the only competition.

The professor, assisted by about 25 trained interviewers, was commissioned by the university to conduct the study. It was designed to assess how much alumni thought their education at UW-SP contributed to their personal and career growth in the "real world," and to measure their perceptions of university life. Because the campus is currently undergoing a strategic planning process and will mark its centennial in three years, Chancellor Sanders believed the timing was right for the study, which would provide important information for university planners.

About 390 telephone interviews were completed from a random sample of 1,000 names and phone numbers. According to Kokkeler, this yielded a range of .5 percent, an acceptable margin of error indicating a 95 percent confidence level in the study. Alumni who had been out of school for three years or more were surveyed.

"The vast majority of our alumni would select UW-SP again," Kokkeler says. "This indicates while UW-SP is not 'perfect' in the eyes of its graduates, they do think we have done an excellent job of preparing them for the world of work. The study indicates we are currently very competitive statewide and we hope to maintain this competitive edge and improve our position throughout the '90s," he predicts.

This is not the first research project on which the chancellor has been the professor's boss. When Kokkeler was a doctoral candidate in communication at Southern Illinois University in the early 1970s, Sanders directed his dissertation, a political study of the 1972 elections.

Their next project will involve a more extensive alumni survey of about three or four thousand individuals, accompanied with a separate questionnaire addressed to personnel directors. Sanders, through the efforts of Kokkeler and his staff, plans to generate feedback about the educational needs of business. The professor says the forthcoming survey will not be used to evaluate current employees, but will seek to obtain information about what the business world really wants from an educational institution in the preparation of its employees. ■

News Briefs

Enrollment drawn down

Enrollment for the fall semester was 8,751, down 54 from last year in compliance with the UW System Board of Regents' mandate to reduce campus size. There are 300-plus foreign students, more than at any other state campus outside Madison and Milwaukee. Minority population of Hispanics, Native Americans, African Americans and Asian Americans grew by about 12 percent to 279.

Limits in teaching program

Because of a declining demand in the state for regular classroom elementary teachers and financial constraints at UW-SP, the School of Education is reducing the number of elementary education majors it will accept. In the recent past about 180 students per year were accepted for the program--now the limit will be 100 per year. In the future, students will be accepted on the basis of grade point average, scores from a test on reading, math and writing skills, an exam determining listening ability and a pre-professional interview developed by a professional testing organization. Students who are not accepted in their first try may re-apply a second time.

Big grant from AT&T

A $350,000 equipment grant from AT&T in August will be used to enhance offerings for science students. One of the main components of the grant will be the installation of several dozen computers in a special classroom in the Science Hall for use by every member of the various chemistry, biology, physics, astronomy and paper science classes that will meet there. Objectives are for the students to be more active participants in methods of obtaining real-time data access/analysis and simulations of experiments. UW-SP and UW-Madison, which received $74,000 in equipment, were among 44 colleges and universities receiving the AT&T grants.

$10 million addition

UW-SP is planning a $10.8 million addition to its Natural Resources Building. The State Building Commission has allocated planning funds and the federal government is considering making a major investment in the structure because of the role the facility will have in environmental protection. The addition and remodeling of existing space would create a wood utilization and marketing center, greenhouse, urban forestry/recreation laboratory, computer applications lab, outreach programs complex, herbarium, ichthyology/aquatic biology complex, animal care facility, chemical and hazardous waste storage, environmental chambers, walk-in freezer and lecture classrooms.

New program in France

A new overseas program has been established in France for each spring semester that includes practicum experience in culinary arts and intensive French language instruction. This is the eighth part of the world where UW-SP sends students for a semester of study. The headquarters for the new program is St. Raphael and Boulouris on the French Riviera. ■

Laird endows $100,000 for leadership days

Melvin R. Laird announced a $100,000 gift in April to UW-SP to perpetuate scholarship and youth leadership day programs long into the future.

The endowment in the UW-SP Foundation will be used to finance the daylong sessions he has hosted on campus every other year since the mid-1960s, bringing together outstanding high school students of the area with state and national leaders.

Additional interest from the endowment will be earmarked for scholarships for students from north and central Wisconsin to attend the university.

Laird said he arranged for the DeWitt and Lila Wallace-Reader's Digest Funds, two New York City-based charitable foundations established by the magazine founders, to provide the endowment funds.

Since leaving public service, Laird, the former state senator, congressman from the Seventh Congressional District and U.S. Secretary of Defense and presidential adviser during the Nixon Administration, has been an executive at Reader's Digest.

Chancellor Keith Sanders responded to the announcement by saying this single gift will keep Laird Days going well into the next century.

Sanders thanked Laird for providing nearly a half-million dollars in support of scholarships and youth leadership programs at UW-SP since the 1960s.

During the keynote speech, Lamar Alexander, U.S. Secretary of Defense, called the Laird Youth Leadership Day one of the finest programs of its kind in the country. ■

LeRoy Bishop

Bishop fund honors star athlete of yore

A $20,000 endowment has been established with the UW-SP Foundation to support scholarships in memory of a star student athlete of the 1930s.

The gift memorializes LeRoy (Larry) Bishop, a state educator for 46 years, who died in 1984 in Colorado, where he had moved following his retirement.

Donors of the funds are Bishop's daughter and son-in-law, Beverly A. and Donald N. Lascody of Littleton, Colo.

They specified that the scholarships be given to incoming freshmen who had earned high school grade point averages between 3. and 3.5.

Bishop, a native of Pike Lake, was an all-conference selection in football, basketball and baseball and was voted the outstanding athlete with the highest scholastic record at what was then known as Central State Teachers College. The school won several conference championships during his student days.

One of his major accomplishments in basketball came in an exhibition game at Wisconsin Rapids in which the Pointers logged a surprising but convincing victory over the first squad of the UW-Madison Badgers.

In 1977, Bishop was inducted into the Pointer Athletic Hall of Fame.

His career in education was spent as a teacher in Dancy and Rothschild, the superintendent of schools in Washburn and then 15 years as a school administrator for the Sheboygan Public School System. He also had been a high school coach and later an official for high school and college sports events in Wisconsin and Michigan. ■

UW-SP receives rare Indian artifacts

A La Crosse woman has donated a collection of rare American Indian artifacts to UW-SP.

Mrs. Linda Schleiter Sherwood's gift includes nearly 50 items, including pipes, tools, baskets, articles of handmade clothing and numerous examples of elaborate beadwork.

James Schurter, dean of academic support services, which includes the university library, where the collection will be maintained, said the bead work is "pretty valuable and quite impressive."

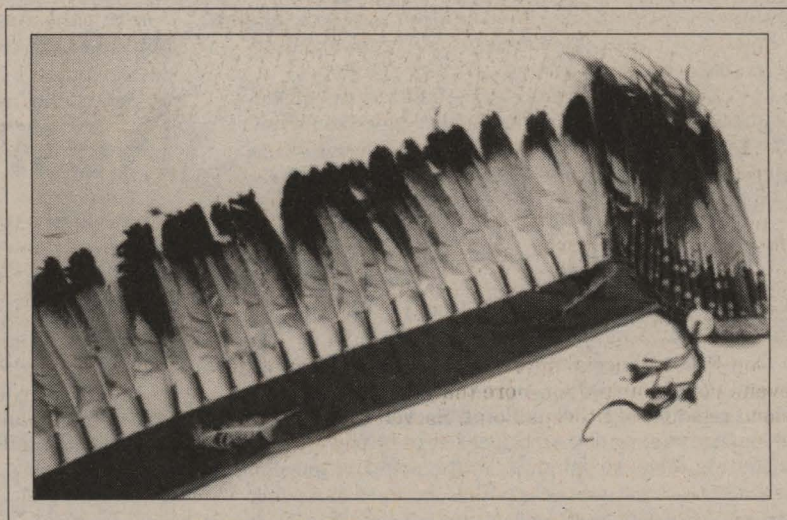

He estimated the value of one of the items to be "several thousand dollars." The total collection may be worth more than $10,000, Schurter added.

Mrs. Sherwood said the artifacts were collected early in this century by her grandfather, Dr. John Schleiter, a longtime La Crosse dentist. After his death in 1958, the items were rarely viewed and kept in storage. Her decision to donate them to UW-SP came after she learned of the school's efforts to build a major collection of traditional Native American art.

The gift was arranged by Mrs. Sherwood's friend, Professor Mark Seiler, a La Crosse native now serving on the UW-SP foreign languages faculty. Seiler added to Mrs. Sherwood's gift by donating several Indian artifacts that had been in the possession of his family for many years.

"It seemed appropriate to have this material at a state university where there is an emphasis on the American Indian," Mrs. Sherwood said. "Mark was very convincing," she added.

The items collected by Dr. Schleiter were acquired from Sioux Indians during his hunting trips in the west and from the Winnebago and Menominee Indians of Wisconsin.

UW-SP's efforts to build a Native American traditional art collection have been a spin-off of a special institutional program which provides educational and other services to Wisconsin's Indian tribes.

The James H. Albertson Learning Resources Center, which houses the university library, will be used to display the Menominee Clans Project, a one-of-a-kind set of 34 figures that represent the history of the Menominee Indians. James Frechette of Rhinelander has been commissioned to do the carving, and has completed nearly half of the work. ■

Robert Weaver

Colleagues salute Weaver

A scholarship fund has been established in honor of Robert Weaver, emeritus professor of chemistry at UW-SP.

An endowment has been established in the UW-SP Foundation that will be used to provide an annual monetary award to an outstanding upper-class student in biochemistry.

Jack Reed, chairman of the chemistry department, said nearly $1,500 has been donated to the fund by friends and colleagues of Weaver. Tax-deductible contributions are continuing to be received by the foundation in Main Building.

At its present size, the endowment will generate an annual scholarship of $100.

Weaver, who lives at 609 Green Ave., retired in the spring of 1990 after serving UW-SP for 29 years as a specialist in biochemistry. He also had logged several terms as his department's chairman. ■

$20,000 fund for Rice scholarship

A $20,000 scholarship fund has been established at UW-SP in honor of a retired mathematics professor.

The Orville Rice Family Scholarship was established with gifts from the professor, his son, Alan, of Littleton, Colo., and expanded by a two-to-one matching gift by the son's employer, Martin mathematics student recognition dinner next spring.

The professor being honored in the scholarship was a mathematician on campus from 1956 to 1984. He began his teaching career on the high school level in his native Illinois and then spent four years at Flat River Junior College in Missouri before joining the UW-SP faculty. During World War II, he served as a meteorologist in the South Pacific.

Rice and his wife, Marjorie, live at 832 Indiana Ave. in Stevens Point. ■

Zellmer award for grad students

A newly established fund in memory of a Nekoosa woman will provide special recognition to graduate students at UW-SP.

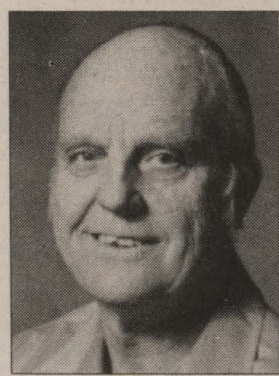

Gij Zellmer Awards will be given in the name of a program assistant who served 17 years at UW-SP prior to her death on June 22.

About $1,000 given by friends, relatives and co-workers has been used to establish the fund in the UW-SP Foundation. Contributions are continuing to be received there.

The UW-SP Graduate Council will develop criteria for the awards, which will be given to graduate students.

Zellmer, who lived at 1521 S. Hollywood Rd., Nekoosa, had been serving in university administration offices since she joined UW-SP in 1974. Since the mid-1980s, she was a program assistant in the Office of the Dean of Graduate Studies, where she helped students make arrangements to pursue master's degrees. ■

Marietta Corporation.

Interest from the endowment will be used to finance scholarships for high-achieving mathematics majors in their junior and senior years.

The number of awards will depend on the income by dividing it into equal awards each year not to exceed two thirds of the UW-SP tuition for one semester. The scholarship charter also states that for approximately equal qualifications, preference is to be given to minority students or any other student receiving few monetary awards.

David Worth, left, announced a $20,000 gift in honor of Professor Robert Kase.

Worth Company supports jazz program, prof

Appreciation for the performance and teaching skills of a UW-SP jazz trumpet professor has prompted a fan to pledge $20,000 for scholarships to the professor's top students.

David Worth said the Worth Company, of which he is president, will provide annual contributions of $4,000 to the UW-SP Foundation for at least the next five years as a means of honoring "the tremendous talent" of Robert Kase.

Half of the money will be used to establish a perpetual scholarship endowment that will give preference to jazz trumpet students. The first winner will be chosen in the spring of 1992, and each subsequent annual honoree will receive a larger amount as the endowment grows.

The other $2,000 of Worth's annual gifts will be used in full for the immediate support of student scholarships that will be based on these priorities: selected jazz trumpet student or students; trumpet major or majors; and selected jazz musician or musicians.

Worth said it is not unlikely that his company may continue to make annual contributions to the endowment after the five-year pledge period.

Moreover, the eligibility for recipients may be expanded to include students who play other jazz instruments or are pursuing vocal jazz studies. Music major performers, not necessarily in jazz, may also be considered.

Worth said few universities have a faculty member with the performance abilities possessed by Kase, adding that he hoped providing special support to help the professor attract top students will be an incentive for him to remain at UW-SP.

Kase joined the UW-SP faculty in 1986 after earning a D.M.A. degree from the University of Minnesota, where he also taught. He has had many years of professional performing experience and has toured with Joel Gray in "Cabaret," played lead trumpet for several performers, including Sammy Davis Jr. and Lola Falana, and has done recording studio work. In addition, he has traveled for Yamaha as a trumpet soloist, published a method book and written several articles for professional magazines.

His students have won several prestigious jazz awards.

Worth's support of the jazz program follows by several months a challenge made by his father, Robert Worth, who is chairman of the board of Worth Company.

Robert Worth established a $3,000 endowment and pledged to expand the fund for the support of students pursuing jazz percussion studies. He said he would personally recruit other sponsors of scholarships for such performers as outstanding clarinetists, pianists, trombonists, trumpeters and so forth.

About 20 years ago, the senior Worth established a $10,000 endowment to support fisheries students in the College of Natural Resources as a memorial to his brother, Joseph.

David Worth said that beyond his own interest in Professor Kase's work, he was motivated to become involved in support of the music program because it had added much to his own collegiate experience. He said he valued friendships made there and that it had the makings for some of the most vivid memories of his days at UW-SP. He played with the University Jazz Band, Concert Band, Pep and Marching Bands, and sang in the University Choir, graduating in 1974. ■

Actuarial science award set

A fund of $4,000 has been endowed in the UW-SP Foundation to sponsor an annual award for a student who expresses interest and promise in pursuing a career in actuarial science.

Relatives and friends of Charles H. Johnson have donated to the endowment in honor of a professor and sometimes chairman in the UW-SP Department of Mathematics and Computing.

Johnson retired in 1988 after serving on the faculty for 21 years.

Johnson's first professional position was that of an actuary and he developed offerings in that field after coming to the university. ■

Eight new inductees in 'Hall of Fame'

Seven former Pointer athletic greats and one longtime local sports editor make up the 1991 class of the UW-SP Athletic Hall of Fame. The eight were inducted during homecoming festivities Oct. 12.

A total of 90 former athletes, coaches and special admittances have been named to the hall; following is a sketch of each of the 1991 inductees:

Chuck Braun, football, class of 1981--First-Team NAIA and Kodak All-American as a wide receiver. Holds single-game record for receiving yardage with 303 vs. Superior in 1981. Three-time team Most Valuable Player, three-time All-Wisconsin State University Conference, three-time All-NAIA District 14. Led NCAA Division III in receiving yardage and touchdowns in 1980. ## University has new A.D. and hockey coach

UW-SP has a new interim director of athletics and a new hockey coach.

In addition, its men's and women's athletic teams have had a successful fall season.

Frank O'Brien was named interim athletic director this summer following the resignation of Mark Mazzoleni, who accepted a hockey coaching position at the University of Minnesota. Mazzoleni also served UW-SP as coach of its hockey team and led the squad to three straight NCAA Division III national championships.

O'Brien served one year as associate director of athletics under Mazzoleni and before that was executive director of administration for the National Wellness Institute in Stevens Point. He holds two degrees from James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va., and a second master's degree from UW-Oshkosh.

Joe Baldarotto assumed the head hockey coaching position after being the assistant to Mazzoleni for five seasons. An alumnus of UW-SP and former hockey player here, he served as the assistant and then head coach at Madison West High for a total of eight years. He coached the state high school championship team in 1983 and the runner-up championship team in 1986.

Here's a capsule of team results for the fall semester:

Football Coach John Miech and his Pointer team completed the 1991 season with a 34-18 trouncing of UW-River Falls. The Pointers finished the campaign with an overall record of 6-3-1 and a WSUC mark of 6-2, good for a second place behind UW-La Crosse. The Pointers featured a balanced ground and air attack led by senior Barry Rose, who hauled in 63 passes for 1107 yards and 10 TD's, while earning 1st Team All-WSUC laurels and taking home the league's Most Valuable Player award.

Soccer The women's soccer team completed the season with an overall record of 11-4-2. The Pointers achieved a top 20 ranking in the NCAA Division III poll for the first time in history. Never before had a Wisconsin women's Division III soccer team achieved such lofty ranks.

Men's Cross Country Coach Rick Witt led his charges to the NCAA Division III National Cross Country Meet in Newport News, Va. and came home with a 4th place finish. Pointer Rod Garcia repeated his All-American status by placing 21st with a time of 25:04. Kevin Mahalko, Jason Zuelke, Jeremie Johnson and Jason Ryf also scored for the Pointers.

Women's Cross Country Pointer Coach Len Hill just missed sending his team to the national meet by one point. But the Pointers did qualify three runners for the national meet. Suzy Jandrin placed 17th there with a time of 18:09, good for All-American Honors. Aimee Knitter and Marnie Sullivan also participated in the meet and placed 39th and 49th respectively.

Men's Golf Coach Pete Kasson led his linkster's to their first WSUC Conference Championship in 10 years. Stevens Point beat UW-Eau Claire by 1.5 points based on the three tournaments and conference meet that all of the WSUC schools participate in. Pointers Jason Allen and Jason Summers paced the squad with 5th and 6th place finishes.

Women's Tennis Danyel Sweo became the first UW-SP womens tennis player to win a singles conference title. She rallied to defeat Tanya Stellmach of UW-La Crosse 0-6, 7-5, 6-0 at No. 6 singles. Not to be outdone, Shelly Locher won the NAIA District 14 championship by defeating Carol Wall of UW-River Falls 6-1, 6-0. She then teamed with Sarah Bather to win the District championship in doubles by upending Karen Wall and Jenny Anderson of UW-River Falls.

Women's Volleyball The Pointer spikers made huge strides over last seasons 3-31 mark. UW-SP moved up from 9th to 7th in the conference from the previous year.

Notables Pointer head coaches garnered several awards and honors over the past few months:

Red Blair, longtime head swimming and diving coach, was honored by his alma mater, MacMurray College in Illinois, with its Distinguished Alumnus Award;

Bob Parker, head men's basketball coach, a standout basketball player at UW-River Falls, was named to the school's Athletic Hall of Fame;

Shirley Egner, women's head basketball coach, was honored by her peers, being named the 1991 Wisconsin Basketball Coaches Association College Women's Coach of the Year;

Sheila Miech, head women's soccer coach, was named the NCAA Division III West Region Coach of the Year. ■

Homecoming

Warren Lensmire, '40, left, who spends winters in Spring Hills, Fla., and summers in Knowlton, was joined at homecoming by his daughter, Lisa Lensmire Murman, '83, of Largo, Fla., and Orland Radke, '46, and his wife, Marge '46, of Park Ridge. Besides being alumni of UW-SP, Lensmire and Radke are retired members of the faculty.

Gerald, '70 and Marlene Ritzenthaler Natvick, '84, live in Plover. He teaches in Amherst and she in the Stevens Point Public School System.

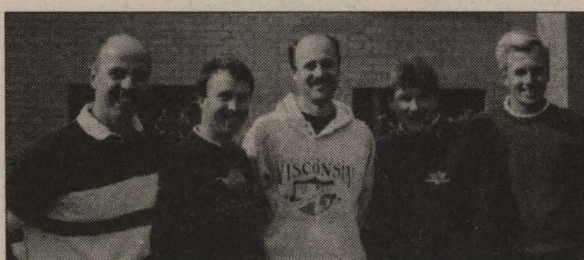

Ray McMillion, '72, and his wife, Linda, '69, live in Crandon where he is a member of the high school faculty and she is a homemaker.

Barbara Mancheski Szypes, '80, is a wife and mother living in Milwaukee.

Lois Holubetz Cable, '61, lives in Stevens Point and teaches at Roosevelt School in Plover.

The Vaughn family, whose members are always in the audience at each Pointer homecoming, were represented this year by father Pat, '38, a retired Wisconsin Rapids insurance agent, and his wife, the former Helen Knapp, who attended UW-SP with him, and from left, their daughter Patsy Vaughn, '70, an elementary teacher in Wauwatosa; daughter Linda, '70, who is working in sales in Chicago; daughter Penny Parsons, '65, Madison, who recently completed a Ph.D. degree in education at UW-Madison and teaches at La Follette High School; son-in-law, Tim Parsons, '65, a stockbroker in Madison. They came to this year's parade bedecked in shirts they had specially made for the occasion.

Faculty Retirements

Robert Engelhard, forestry professor

Robert Engelhard has assumed a new, part-time position as executive director of the Wisconsin Woodland Owners Association since ending a 25-year teaching career at UW-SP in May.

The forestry professor has arranged to bring the office of the woodland owners group to campus, where he will continue to work.

Engelhard left his classroom with an excellence in teaching award, recognition he has received twice before.

Engelhard has been one of the key players in the development of the College of Natural Resources from what was originally a Department of Conservation Education. Besides handling some administrative duties, he also had a hand with the late James Newman and others in the creation of an undergraduate forestry major, which became the largest-enrolled program of its kind in the United States.

A native of Milwaukee, Engelhard entered the Army immediately after graduating from Washington High School and served in a medical detachment in France after the close of World War II. Upon his return home and graduation from Utah State University, he was called back to military duty during the Korean War and was stationed at Fort Sill, Okla. After being mustered out a second time, he earned a master's degree in plant ecology from the University of Denver.

His forestry career was begun in 1952 as a staff member of the U.S. Forest Service in the Deep South for three years. In more recent times, he was chosen by the agency for two summer visiting scientist programs in San Francisco and New Orleans.

Back in Wisconsin, he spent nine years as a forest manager for Trees for Tomorrow out of its Merrill office. He made a career change in 1965 when he joined the conservation faculty at UW-SP, later taking a leave to pursue a Ph.D. in forest economics from Michigan State University.

As a professor, Engelhard for many years was coordinator of the forestry program within his college and served a stint as assistant to the dean of the College of Natural Resources. In 1972, he was one of the leaders of the summer program for his students in the Black Forest of Germany. ■

Carol Marion Wick, historian

Carol Marion Wick, a professor who taught history as well as made it during a 26-year career at UW-SP, retired in May.

A native of Cambridge, Ohio, she earned her bachelor's degree from St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, Ind., and her master's and doctorate from Indiana University. Twentieth century American constitutional history and diplomatic history are her academic specialties.

Her early career in Stevens Point was during a period of rapid growth and change at the university. She was active in campus governance and became part of a very small group of women in the school's history ever elected to chair the faculty. In that position, she appointed committees that led to the formation of the present Faculty Senate.

In what is now The Association of University of Wisconsin Professionals, she served as local president, state secretary and member of the state executive board. The organization backed the controversial proposal to merge the two public university systems then operating in the state, and Wick had a hand in drafting some of the regulations that became law regarding faculty matters. ■

Roy Van Dreser

Roy Van Dreser, a traveling auto parts salesman turned professor, retired last spring after 25 years on the UW-SP faculty.

Van Dreser, who is a specialist in educational media/audiovisual services, is a native of Chippewa Falls and a combat veteran of the Korean War.

He leaves the university with the distinction of having pioneered the development of educational television on campus. Van Dreser and his longtime colleague, Harlan Hoffbeck, who retired last year, used their own tools to build the university's first TV studio in the late 1960s in what then was the library building (now Park Student Services Center).

When the university established a department of instructional learning resources, he was appointed its first chairman and remained in that office for several terms.

He did not pursue higher education until after serving about four years as a salesman for a wholesale auto parts firm and as an infantryman in Korea. He then attended UW-Stout, where he earned bachelor's and master's degrees, and did graduate study at several Midwestern campuses before completing a doctorate from the University of Nebraska. ■

Fred Leafgren

Fred Leafgren, assistant chancellor for student life, announced in August he would retire after serving 26 years on the school's administrative staff.

William Meyer, associate vice chancellor for personnel and budget, was appointed to succeed Leafgren on an interim basis, while a search and screen committee seeks a permanent replacement.

Leafgren has been one of the university's three assistant chancellors since 1980, overseeing a broad range of operations serving students from health and counseling centers, housing, admissions, registration/records, financial aids, career planning/placement and student activities. He was one of the founders of the National Wellness Institute, which is headquartered at UW-SP and received national recognition for that activity.

He began his career here in 1965 as director of housing. ■

Mary Shumway

Professor Mary Shumway left her UW-SP post this spring after 26 years of teaching creative writing, American literature and freshman English at the university. She plans to spend most of the time practicing her craft at her home on Pine Drive in Plover.

Her retirement coincided with her selection as an excellence in teaching award winner based upon evaluations by students and colleagues.

Her career at UW-SP also has included a two-year stint as affirmative action officer, and several nominations for teaching excellence from her peers in the English department.

As a published poet, she has been recognized by the Academy of American Poets, the Society for the Arts, Religion and Contemporary Culture, the Council for Wisconsin Writers, and Midwest Publishers. She has been a Robert Frost Fellow at Bread Loaf and a fellow at the MacDowell Colony.

After earning a bachelor's degree from the University of Chicago, Shumway pursued graduate studies at San Francisco State College. Upon receiving a master's degree there, she was offered a teaching job in California, but returned to Wisconsin to be close to her father, who was ill. She later garnered a Ph.D. from the University of Denver. ■

Charles O. Reichl

Charles O. Reichl, who developed the university's vocal jazz program retired after 16 years of faculty service.

With his wife, Deborah McComas, he has formed a cottage industry, Carlanna Gardens, for the manufacture of "Fresh Pesto," an Italian sauce which is sold in Central Wisconsin and Madison.

During his career at the university, Reichl has taught the opera workshop and courses in conducting and music education. He also has given voice lessons and directed the Oratorio Chorus, Concert Choir and the Mid-Americans.

He served three years as chairman of the music department, from 1980 to 1983, and previously was assistant chairman.

After stepping down from administrative duties, he was active in the development of the university's jazz studies program, specializing in the vocal offerings. He converted the Mid-Americans organization from a swing to a jazz group and received several awards for its performing achievements.

Reichl, a native of Wausau spent four years in naval aviation. He earned two degrees from UW-Madison and began his teaching and choral directing career at Central High School in West Allis, where he served nine years. ■

Charles La Follette, business student adviser

Charles La Follette, director of advising and assistant professor for UW-SP's Division of Business and Economics, retired in May.

For the past eight years, he has been responsible for coordinating the advising of the division's 1,200 majors, counseling students with special problems and requests, and training about 40 students each semester to serve as peer advisers to freshman and sophomore pre-majors. In addition, he has taught classes in general business, real estate finance and appraisal, and personal finance.

After coming to UW-SP in 1968, La Follette served for four years as assistant director of the Office of Student Financial Aid, followed by 12 years as assistant director in charge of teacher placement for UW-SP's Office of Career Services. Earlier, he was assistant registrar at Madison Technical College from 1965 to 1967, a high school counselor, teacher and coach of track, baseball and softball in Bettendorf, Iowa. During the Korean War, he served four years with the U.S. Navy's 77th Task Force.

An Iowa native, La Follette received two degrees from Drake University and did additional graduate studies at Drake, Syracuse, State University of Iowa, UW-Madison and Indiana University. ■

University honors outstanding faculty

UW-SP saluted eight members of its faculty May 19 during spring commencement exercises, and again on Oct. 1 at the annual academic convocation.

They were cited for outstanding teaching, service and scholarship.

Recipients of the Excellence in Teaching Awards were:

- Joan Karlen, lecturer in the Department of Theatre and Dance since 1988;
- Robert Engelhard, professor of forestry in the College of Natural Resources since 1965;
- Douglas Post, professor in the Department of Biology since 1969;
- Mary Shumway, professor in the Department of English since 1965;

•Roger Wood, professor in the School of Education since 1966.

Engelhard and Shumway retired from the faculty at the end of May.

The University Service Award winner was:

•Robert Knowlton, professor and chair of the Department of History, recognized for long service in faculty governance, the past two years as chair of the Faculty Senate. He has been on the faculty since 1962.

The University Scholar Awards went to:

•Michael Danahy, professor of French since 1990 and chair of the Department of Foreign Languages, whose recent book, "The Feminization of the Novel," won the Chinard Prize for Literature in recognition of outstanding scholarly writing. The book, which traced the history of the French novel, was in competition with 100 other works done in this country.

•Carl Lee, professor of forestry in the College of Natural Resources since 1966.

Two-hundred-dollar prizes were given to the winners, who were nominated by their departmental colleagues and then chosen by a university committee. ■

Aga Razvi

Big title for big garbage challenge

Aga Razvi, initiator of a program to help the nation cope with its growing mounds of garbage, was designated Sept. 6 as the UW-SP second "Distinguished Professor."

The UW System Board of Regents made the appointment as part of a relatively new program involving a maximum of 25 faculty members throughout the state.

"Distinguished Professors" are determined on the basis of national and international recognition of their scholarly work and having the potential to significantly increase economic development in the state.

The regents make special appropriations of $25,000 for each professor's position and the honored faculty members are asked to raise at least another $25,000 in non-tax dollars from industry and other sources to support their work.

In July, Robert Govett, a faculty member at the University of Idaho, was named UW-SP's first "Distinguished Professor" in the field of wood use and marketing.

Razvi has "pioneered the research and continues to point the way toward reducing the solid waste impact on our environment and our natural resources," according to Alan Haney, dean of the College of Natural Resources in which the professor serves.

In a letter supporting Razvi's nomination, Timothy J. Draeger of the National Corn Growers Association in St. Louis, argued that the professor's work "could provide the needed research and information that would tear down the barriers for both Wisconsin and national entrepreneurs, lower economic risks for investors and create job opportunities for many. In addition, many small engineering firms, unable to afford full-time technical staffs, could locate in Wisconsin in order to be closer to the university's Waste Management Center and its technical expertise."

Razvi is a founding member of the National Solid Waste Composting Council and serves on its board of directors. He also is vice president of the Associated Recyclers of Wisconsin and a former chairman of the Intra State Recycling in Stevens Point.

The professor became widely known for research he conducted in composting/recycling in a pilot project on garbage at Lodi earlier in the 1980s. Last year, the State Legislature established its first solid waste center, situating it on the Stevens Point campus with Razvi as director.

One of the center's major projects is an ongoing study on solid waste disposal involving city of Portage garbage. Specifically, he and assistants, including students, are exploring the feasibility of composting various kinds of wastes and then returning them to agricultural land.

Because there are few people in the country who possess practical waste management expertise, Razvi is increasingly being called upon for advice.

For example, representatives of the city of Philadelphia sought his assistance in reducing costs of disposing of sewage sludge. After testing the sludge and examining a system used to add wood chips to the waste, he offered a plan that would reduce three-quarters of the $7 million cost.

For Weyerhaeuser of Marshfield, he found a way to turn a $120,000 expense of disposing of a waste to income by selling the material for agricultural lime to area farmers.

In the future, Razvi would like to be involved in special projects for the Environmental Protection Agency, a unit of the federal government, because of the major impact that would be made on the nation's industries.

The professor, who is a native of India, received his bachelor's degree from an agricultural university in his homeland. He earned the M.S. in soil science and water chemistry and the Ph.D. in soil science with an emphasis in environmental engineering, both from UW-Madison.

He has taught in the UW System for 15 years, for one year at UW-River Falls and since 1977 at UW-Stevens Point.

Razvi has won several awards for outstanding teaching and service at UW-Stevens Point and has been recognized by the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources for outstanding contributions to the state in the area of solid waste composting. ■

Faculty author scholarly books

Scholarly books continue to be written and edited by UW-SP faculty.

Literary criticism of the French novel and its relationship to underlying discrimination toward women is the subject of "The Feminization of the Novel" by Professor Michael Danahy. He has been chair of the Department of Foreign Languages since joining the university in 1989. The book, published by University Presses of Florida, won the 1989 Chinard Prize for Literature, an award recognizing outstanding academic writings.

The National Council of Teachers of English has published a textbook edited by William Wresch, chair of the Department of Mathematics and Computing, titled, "The English Classroom in the Computer Age: Thirty Lesson Plans."

Arthur Herman, professor of philosophy, is author of "The Ways of Philosophy—Searching for a Worthwhile Life" published by Scholars Press. Herman explores the way 16 of the world's most noted philosophers pursued the question of how to pursue the most worthwhile life.

John Vollrath, professor of philosophy, has penned, "Science and Moral Values," published by University Press of America. This work is a textbook focusing on ethical and moral issues encountered by people in the sciences, including medicine. ■

Ilkka leads division

Richard Ilkka

Richard J. Ilkka became the new head of UW-SP's Division of Communication, effective at the beginning of the fall semester.

Ilkka succeeded James Moe, who held the post for three years and returned to full-time teaching.

A native of Chisholm, Minn., he holds three degrees, including the Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota. Ilkka has taught in public schools in Minneapolis and Edina, Minn., and at the UM-Minneapolis and Morris, and UW-La Crosse. He came to Stevens Point in 1983 as a specialist in organizational communication, rhetorical criticism, interviewing and conflict management. His rank is associate professor.

In 1990, he was one of five winners of the UW-SP Excellence in Teaching Award. This year, a continuing education and drug and alcohol abuse prevention program for high school students that he helped devise with several colleagues was given two national awards. ■

Greene cited

Donald Greene

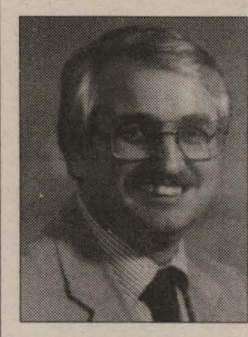

The portrait of a longtime music professor at UW-SP was placed on permanent display June 15 at his alma mater in Pennsylvania.

Donald E. Greene was named an outstanding music alumnus of Mansfield University on the 40th anniversary of his graduation. He was honored at a dinner in Mansfield, Pa., during the school's alumni weekend.

Greene has served UW-SP since 1967, much of that time as an administrator as well as a teacher. He is chairman of the music department. In addition, he has provided public service as conductor of both the Central Wisconsin Symphony Orchestra and the Stevens Point City Band. He is the founder and conductor of the UW-SP Wind Ensemble and Jazz Ensemble, a major architect of the university's master of music education degree, and initiator and chair of the committee that designed the school's jazz studies degree. For more than 35 years, Greene has performed on saxophone, clarinet and piano in New York, Pennsylvania, Las Vegas, and several Midwestern cities with such artists as Rosemary Clooney, Mimi Hines, Phil Ford, the Modernaires, The Four Tops and Rodney Dangerfield. ■

Munson named fitness fellow

John W. Munson

John W. Munson, UW-SP faculty member, was inducted as a fellow of the Association for Fitness in Business during its national convention Sept. 21 in Phoenix.

Munson heads UW-SP's School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics, which includes 38 faculty members. In that role, he has been a leader in the development of the university's widely acclaimed academic program in health promotion/wellness.

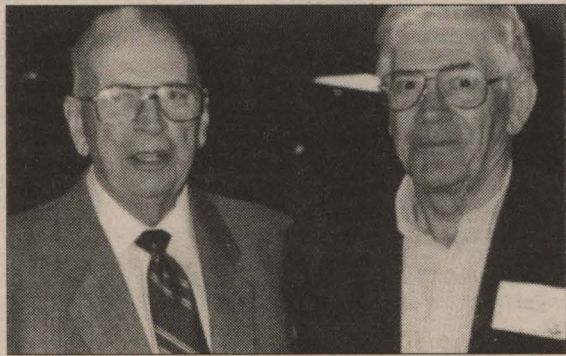

The association honoring him has designated approximately 60 fellows among its 3,000 members. The recognition goes annually to about five professionals in the fitness field. ■

Reunions

Mary McGinley, '63, and her brother James, '35, attend the Alumni Day on campus.

Mason Atwood, '40, at right, and Laverne Swanson, '37, greet each other at Alumni Day.

Ruth Johnson Cady, '39, Leota Brandt Stapel, '41, and Arthur Stapel, '40, are pictured at Alumni Day last June.

At the Boulder/Denver area reunion in July, Jackie Chop Shank, '75, of Lyons, Elly Weaver, '74, Boulder, and Fred Offenkrantz, '89, Golden.

Attending the Boulder/Denver reunion are four alums who have settled in Colorado: Sharon Malmstone, '78, of Littleton, Brad Hoffman, '84, and Judy Nickel Hoffman, '83, Fort Collins, and Mike O'Halloran, '75, Broomfield.

Deborah Jansen, '79, master's, is a wildlife biologist for the National Park Service, working with two endangered species—the Red cockaded woodpecker and Florida panther—in the Big Cypress National Preserve in Florida. In August at the reunion of former students who studied in Germany, she told friends of her optimism for the future of the woodpeckers she is working with, adding however that she wouldn't bet on the panthers. Road construction, logging and other human activities have had negative impacts on the habitats of both species, leaving the panther population somewhere between 30 to 50 in Big Cypress. The woodpeckers live in about 35 colonies of three to five birds apiece in the refuge. Deborah has been in Florida more than a decade, working the first seven years as a wildlife biologist for the state. She lives in Ochopee, Fla., which has the smallest post office in the United States.

Stein Innvaer, '80, bachelor's and '86, master's, and his wife, Lisa Gelvin Innvaer, '85, visited campus in August for a reunion of the UW-SP natural resources groups that have spent 20 consecutive summers in Germany and Poland. Visiting with retired Dean Daniel Trainer, the Innvaers told of living in a house in a wildlife refuge, near Dover, Del., that is more than 270 years old. Stein is a regional wildlife biologist for the State of Delaware. Lisa is responsible for Delaware's nongame and endangered species program. She is currently developing a list giving the status of all the species.

Faculty and former students who participated in the first Natural Resources summer trip to Germany assemble in August at the 20th anniversary celebration of the program. Visiting campus are Professor Robert Engelhard of UW-SP, now retired, Rev. Thomas G. Groth, '74, Bruce H. Schmidt, '74, Armin Ott, Forest District Administrator, Altensteig, Germany, Keith Thoreson, '72, and John Hjorth, '71.

John Radd, 57

John Radd, who taught in the jazz studies program within UW-SP's music department, died unexpectedly March 9, while on a Caribbean cruise. He was 57.

Radd was working on the ship as a pianist while on leave from the university.

A burial service was held May 16 at Greenwood Cemetery in River Falls.

Radd was born June 8, 1933, in Buffalo, N. Y. He earned a bachelor's degree from the State University of New York in Fredonia, a master's degree from the University of Buffalo and a second master's degree from the Eastman School of Music and pursued jazz studies at the University of Indiana.

He served on faculties of schools in the Buffalo, N. Y., area for several years and spent from 1957 to 1968 as the musical director-pianist and arranger for a professional jazz quartet, which did public school concerts and clinics in Western New York State.

Radd taught music at UW-River Falls from 1968 to 1986 when he came to UW-Stevens Point as a specialist in jazz piano. While in River Falls, he was staff pianist for the season at Guthrie Theatre in Minneapolis-St. Paul, where he accompanied many of the nation's best known entertainers.

Radd's survivors are three children. ■

A. Irene Gray, 78

A Lutheran funeral service for Miss A. Irene Gray, 78, was held May 9 in Grand Junction, Colo., where she had lived since her retirement from the faculty of UW-SP.

She died in Grand Junction on May 6.

Miss Gray served UW-SP from 1961 to 1976, most of the time as a speech/communication arts specialist in what is now the School of Education. After the closing of the Campus Laboratory School, where she served both elementary students and collegians preparing to become teachers, she was on the staff of the Office of Alumni Relations several years. Miss Gray also was a faculty leader for two overseas study groups in England.

Born Oct. 1, 1912 on a ranch in Carter County, Montana, she began her teaching career in 1932 in a converted granary on a South Dakota Indian Reservation. She later taught on the elementary level in Spearfish, S.D., and on the elementary and junior high levels in Lamar, Colo. Miss Gray was instrumental in the development of speech as an academic subject in Colorado secondary schools during her 15-year career at Grand Junction High School, from 1945 to 1961.

A graduate of Black Hills State University in South Dakota and UW-Madison, she was Western Slope director of the Colorado State Speech League many years. In Stevens Point, she was a member of several education organizations and of Trinity Lutheran Church.

Miss Gray is survived by nieces and nephews. ■

Tribal, safety-health, environmental programs gain approval

The University of Wisconsin System Board of Regents has approved new minors for the Stevens Point campus in tribal sovereignty, safety and health protection, and environmental education for elementary and middle school teachers.

The additions to the curriculum were implemented during the fall semester.

The tribal sovereignty minor, to be coordinated by the Department of History, is the most unusual of all the new offerings. It was developed in response to UW-SP's most plentiful minority group—American Indians.

The minor addresses the breadth of tribal government jurisdiction in such diverse areas as criminal and civil law, regulation of the land and environment, establishment of social welfare systems, profit and non-profit corporations, educational systems and the like.

A faculty committee that developed the program noted that many American Indian students at UW-SP intend to use their college education in serving their tribes, hence the need for instruction so they better understand special laws and governing procedures relating to tribal governments across the country.

The safety and health protection minor was developed at the urging of federal officials to fulfill a national need.

The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health sought out UW-SP, largely on the strength of its offerings in health promotions/wellness, to train specialists in a "synergistic approach of risk prevention for the work force."

Because there are few experts in American higher education in the area of occupational health and safety, UW-SP has made arrangements to hire an adjunct associate professor and also use consultants from area businesses in this unique program.

The federal government has provided the university with a $100,000 grant to assist in the development of this health-related program.

The minor in environmental education for elementary and middle-level classes will provide an option for future teachers who are now being required by the Department of Public Instruction to complete a minor in a specialized field to fulfill certification requirements.

Among other new additions to the curriculum are options for the fashion merchandising major in retail/wholesale management, international merchandise management and store planning. The business administration major has new concentrations in fashion merchandising, forest recreation, technical foreign language—French, German and Spanish, and social gerontology. ■

Mary Shorey Samter, 84

Mary Shorey Samter, 84, an alumna and longtime faculty member at UW-SP, died Sept. 10 at a nursing home in Green Bay where she had been a patient for a short time.

She had been a member of the education faculty at UW-SP for 30 years prior to her retirement in 1973.

Mrs. Samter's funeral was at St. Jude's Catholic Church in Green Bay and burial was in Greenwood Cemetery in Platteville. Her son and only immediate survivor, the Rev. James Samter, officiated at the rites.

Mrs. Samter was born in Coloma on March 24, 1907, and grew up there and in Argonne. She received a two-year diploma from UW-SP in 1927. Family tradition played an important role in her decision to become a teacher. Both of her parents and all of her five siblings had such careers.

In addition to her diploma from UW-SP, she earned a

B.E. degree from Western Illinois State Teachers College and a M.S. degree from State University of Iowa.

Mrs. Samter's 46-year career included stints at elementary schools in Crandon, Menomonie and Wheaton, Ill. She taught at the State University of Iowa's elementary school and was a supervising teacher at Eastern Illinois State College before coming to Stevens Point in 1943. In subsequent years, she held special summer assignments at Eastern Illinois State College, the University of Maine and UW-Madison.

Mrs. Samter had been a specialist in language arts and reading for the young child as well as children's literature in the UW-SP School of Education.

"Reading is the most precious gift our culture has to offer its youngsters," she told future teachers.

Mrs. Samter was married in 1930 to Gerry Samter, a native of Platteville, who died in 1936 while serving as a junior high school principal in Wheaton, Ill.

After her retirement, she moved to Green Bay to live with her son. ■

Helen I. Hansen, 73

Helen I. Hansen, 73, retired UW-SP nurse, died Nov. 5 at St. Michael's Hospital in Stevens Point.

She had served on the staff of the UW-SP Health Service from 1958 to 1982. Her tenure overlapped with that of her father, William C. Hansen, who was president of this school from 1940 to 1962.

Services for Miss Hansen were held at the Boston Funeral Home. Burial was in the Nazareth Lutheran Cemetery in Withee.

Born July 5, 1918, in Milltown, she was graduated from UW-Madison and served in the Army Nursing Corps during world War II.

Before coming to Stevens Point, she served as a nurse in university health services in Cedar Falls, Iowa, and Platteville.

Miss Hansen was a member and past officer of the Portage County Democratic Party, Business and Professional Women's Club, University Women, League of Women Voters, American Nursing Association and Portage County Humane Society. She did volunteer work for those groups as well as the Retired Senior Volunteer Program and the Red Cross Donors Drive.

Her survivors are three sisters, Ann Buck of Plover, Ruth Sanderson of East Jordan, Mich., and Kay Dean of Schofield, and nieces and nephews. ■

Robert Wilde, 77

Robert F. Wilde, who taught biology at UW-SP from 1957 to 1985, died Nov. 21 at St. Michael's Hospital in Stevens Point. He was 77.

A requiem Mass was said at the Episcopal Church of the Intercession in Stevens Point. Burial was in the Cooksville Cemetery.

Memorials were established for the church and biology programs on campus through the UW-SP Foundation.

Wilde, who lived at the Whiting Inn, was born in Milwaukee on Oct. 30, 1914 and received degrees from UW-Madison and Marquette University. In the early 1950s, he spent two years studying in Scotland at the University of Edinburgh.

During World War II, he served in the Army Medical Corps in England, France and Germany and participated in the invasion of Normandy.

Before coming to UW-SP, Wilde taught at Knox College in Galesburg, Ill., for 10 years and at Bradley University in Peoria, Ill., for two years.

His specialty areas were physiology and genetics. At the time of his retirement in 1985, he said that college freshmen were arriving in his classroom with more skills than their predecessors. "Yes," he emphasized, "the high schools are improving—some don't think so, but I do."

His only survivor is a brother, John, a noted Wisconsin artist and retired chair of the art department at UW-Madison. ■

Exceptional education major wins approval from regents

The University of Wisconsin System Board of Regents approved a new undergraduate major in September for the Stevens Point campus in the field of exceptional education.

Under the direction of UW-SP Professor Darwin Miller, the major was developed in response to a severe shortage of special education teachers in the state, including this area.

The curriculum emphasizes building on abilities of special education students as opposed to thrusting them into a remediation of their weaknesses. It further places emphasis on the value of integrating exceptional education programs for special students with activities in regular classrooms.

This focus, according to Miller, is new in the state's special education teacher training programs.

Previously, UW-SP's offerings were limited to minors and/or specializations in early childhood—exceptional educational needs, emotional disturbance, learning disabilities and mild-moderate mental retardation. ■

First Financial supports specialized banking offering

The specialized retail banking major was developed from proposals offered by John Seramur, president of First Financial Bank, headquartered in Stevens Point. He suggested that students need more problem-solving skills and effective human relations/interpersonal skills than are developed in conventional collegiate business programs.

To fulfill the recommendation of Seramur and others working as a committee representing the university and First Financial, the existing business administration major and communication minor were linked, and additional classes were added in psychology and communication.

About five students will be accepted for the program each year, with a maximum enrollment of about 20 when it gets into full swing. Most of the actual work experience will be gained during summer months, when the students are in paid internship positions. ■

In the Spotlight

When ground was broken in 1968 for construction of UW-SP's Fine Arts Center, an old man with expertise in the use of explosives ignited a small charge of dynamite to initiate the project.

Reason for such an unconventional ceremony? School president, Lee Sherman Dreyfus, explained that when completed, the facility would create a cultural explosion in this part of the state.

That's exactly what has taken place. Gerard McKenna, dean of the UW-SP College of Fine Arts and Communication since 1989, oversees the departments of art and design, communication, music, theatre and dance, most of which are housed at the center.

Artists from these units are largely responsible for either staging or arranging many of the important cultural events offered to people in Central Wisconsin.

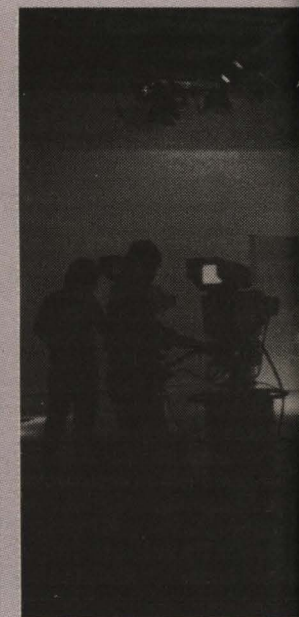

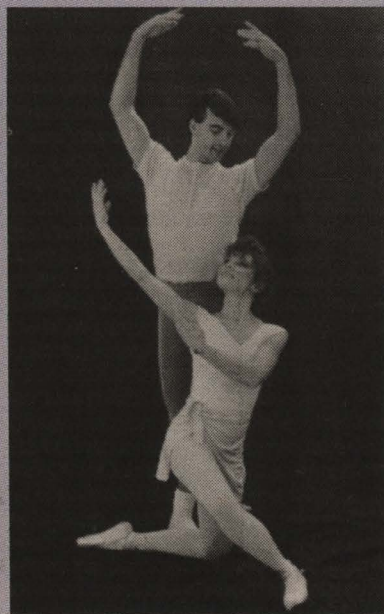

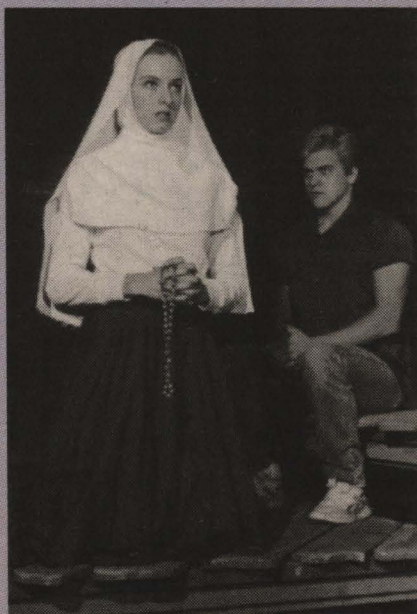

"We have a great deal of activity, and it is providing excellent laboratories for our students. In fact, that's why we are involved in so many things here," McKenna reports.

"So many things" include more than 200 public events each year presented by the college under the banners of the Performing Arts Series (professional entertainers brought here from all parts of the world), music recitals and concerts, theater productions, and programs--usually lectures and films-- arranged by the communication faculty. Moreover, the communication program is home of "The Pointer" newspaper and WWSP-FM radio station, which sends a signal throughout the midstate area. Students are involved in an experimental television program aired on the local cable outlet. Faculty have a Communication Development Institute which, among other projects, sponsors a summer program in alcohol and other drug abuse for Wisconsin high school leaders. Several national organizations have given awards to this project.

The dean, who came here after serving 15 years on the UW-Milwaukee music faculty (half of that time as department chair), reports that the art and design, theatre, music and dance programs are all nationally certified by accrediting organizations.

The career-oriented curriculum in the college includes an undergraduate arts management offering, which is the only one of its kind in the UW System. Linked to the music program is the American Suzuki Talent Education Center, which sponsors the largest and oldest summer international music education institute outside of Japan.

"There's a lot of pride about what is happening in the fine arts and communication here," according to McKenna. ■

Right

Stevens Point Wis. Innovation, fed by consensus, is the signature of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

The 97-year-old campus has built a reputation for creating programs, and doing it with the help of students, faculty and administrators. For example:

■ It was the nation's first campus to establish a conservation education program, which has grown into the 1,300-student College of Natural Resources. The program has become the largest in the nation. It includes majors in forestry, resource management, water resources, soil science, wildlife and offers one of only seven paper science majors in the United States.

In the northeast corner of campus is the 126-acre Schmeeckle Nature Reserve, named for the late Fred Schmeeckle, who established the conservation program in the 1930s.

■ Fifteen years ago, UW-Stevens Point was among a handful of universities that pioneered a program to improve the writing skills of undergraduates.

The Writing Across the Curriculum program, in addition to the two required semesters of English composition, requires students to take two writing intensive courses taught by professors in various disciplines. About 50 professors now teach courses where grades are determined not only on mastery of the subject, but on writing competence.

■ The university has forged an alliance with AT&T, which makes computers widely available on campus and allows students in dormitories to retrieve information from the most highly automated library system in a six-state region. There are 1,500 computers available on campus for student use.

The campus computer system, Writing Across the Curriculum, and the forestry program have received Board of Regents designation as centers for excellence in the UW System.

"A good idea can be explored," Chancellor Keith R. Sanders said. "The faculty is as open to new ideas as any faculty I have ever been associated with."

Sanders is trying to strengthen consensus on campus through a strategic planning program that is exploring new directions for the 1990s. The program includes 850 students, staff, faculty and administrators.

Ideas include requiring students to take ethics and conservation courses to help strengthen values and improve the environment.

"We're really fortunate here, because we have more power than students on other campuses," said Tami Butts, president of the student government and a member of Sander's cabinet.

Students have also cooperated with administrators in making brick-and-mortar projects possible.

Two years ago, the university built a $7 million Health Enhancement Center featuring an Olympic-sized swimming pool and other athletic facilities. Students agreed to contribute $1.1 million for the project through fees. They were also active in its planning and design.

Stevens Point's mission is teaching, and officials here have no intention of changing.

The university does not want to be a research-oriented school, Sanders said. "It wants to be an institution where teaching is the most important thing we do. People here are not just happy with that mission, they are delighted with it."

Few students at UW-Stevens Point ever see a graduate teaching assistant, and the student-faculty ratio is 19.5 students per full-time faculty member.

"I've never had a graduate assistant teaching a class," said Dawn Day, a junior anthropology major from Union Grove. "I've never had a problem with the quality of instructors. They are very concerned."

Howard Thoyre, vice chancellor for academic affairs, said that although there were some graduate assistants on campus, none is the instructor of record in any class.

A survey of alumni conducted for the university last November gave teachers good grades. Of those surveyed, 81.7% said instructors' knowledge was good to excellent and 73.3% rated the overall quality of instructors as good to excellent.

The survey also reported that when respondents were asked what university they would choose if they could start school again, 73.4% of the alumni said UW-Stevens Point. Showing up the most often among the rest was UW-Madison, at 17.6%.

PROGRAMS OF NOTE

In addition to its well-known natural resources program, UW-Stevens Point is noted for its philosophy department, which is one of the largest in the Midwest. The department has wide ranging offerings, including courses in environmental, Russian, American Indian, Chinese and Indian philosophy.

Also, the physics and astronomy department operates the state's most active university-based planetarium programs.

The university also offers a wellness concentration in its health promotion/physical fitness program; fitting, since the campus is home to the National Wellness Institute.

UW-Stevens Point is the only four-year college in the nation to offer an undergraduate degree in zoo-keeping, which it calls captive wildlife management.

LOOKING FOR THE BEST

Campus administrators are trying to boost the quality of incoming freshmen. The average freshman last year was in the top 34% of his or her high school graduating class. This year, that student was in the top 29%. By 1994-95, officials expect the average to be in the top 25%.

One way the university has sought to increase the quality of its students is by offering scholarships and honors internships. They're awarded based on nominations by high school counselors.

"This empowers the counselors to reward their own students," said Dennis Tierney, deputy assistant chancellor for student life.

Fifty $1,000 Counselor's Choice Awards were made this year to students in the top 5% of their senior classes.

Another 30 from the top 10% were chosen for training as residence hall assistants and will receive room and board in return.

"The average high school counselor knows that person far better than we would in an interview situation," Tierney said.

Stevens Point, both campus and community, sell themselves on safety. Campus security supervisor Velma Jain said one rape had been reported on campus in the last 19 years.

"We have very few reported sexual assaults, although I'm sure there is unreported date rape, as on many campuses," Jain said.

To help control campus crime, especially vandalism, the university has established a uniformed patrol consisting of students. It operates from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m.

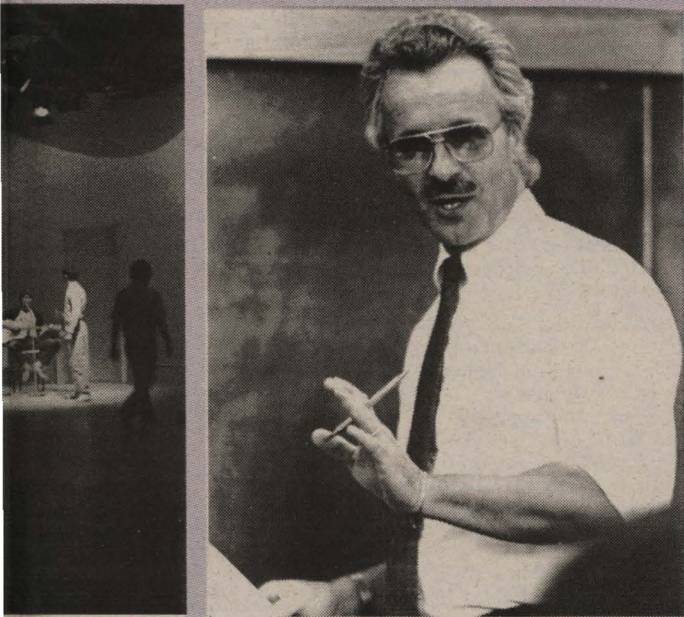

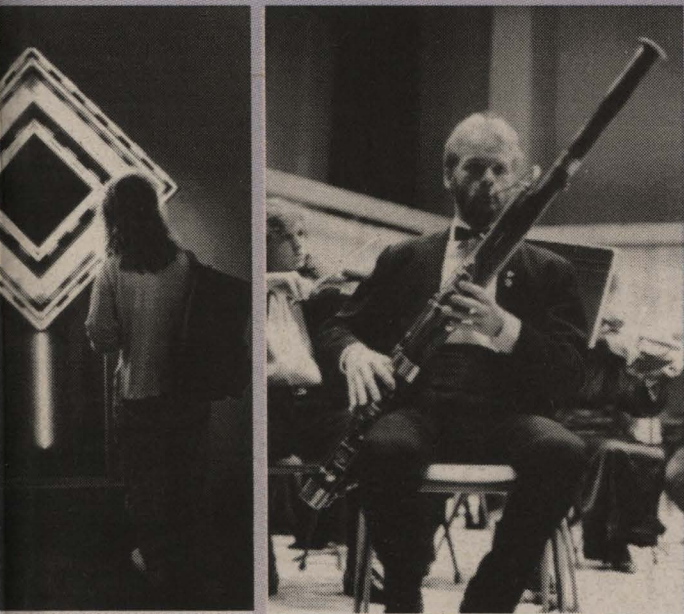

According to the state Office of Justice Assistance, the Stevens Point Police Department reported 55 violent crimes in 1990, a 26.7% drop from the previous year.

The university has established a mentor program for minority students that involves professionals in the community.

Junior forestry student Lamin Bojang, a black student from Gambia, said he had been warmly accepted on the predominantly white campus.

"In two years here, I have never experienced racism," he said. "In fact, I went home to Gambia this summer and I couldn't wait to get back here. When I leave, I will miss this place greatly."

She teaches fifth grade at St. Joseph's School, Baraboo. She and her husband, Steve, live in Portage with their three children.

Jon-Paul Patrik, '69, a native of Stevens Point now living in Austin, Texas, was featured in April and May at an exhibition in Chicago sponsored by the Consulate General of the Republic of Poland. The show represented nearly 30 creations that have been done in the past 15 years, including a partially-completed though magnificent likeness of the Black Madonna of Czestochowy, which is being done for presentation to Pope John Paul II for the Vatican collection. Patrik says public recognition and appreciation of needlework as a fine art have grown significantly in recent years. When he began working with needle and thread in the mid-1970s, "it was impossible to get an exhibit," Patrik says working with needle and thread is often viewed as something done exclusively by women. However, knitting was a pastime of sailors, he emphasizes. "I've experienced discrimination in needle shops," he adds, explaining that he has been asked more than once in those places what his wife would like. Patrik's needlework is being done today to simulate "the great classical tapestries of Europe," he says. "Using the Goblein stitch, a straight vertical stitch which mimics the tapestry weavers' technique, I have spent thousands and thousands of meditative hours creating my art, often using over 600 stitches per square inch." Much of his work reflects three main areas: nature themes featuring the likenesses of birds, flowers and insects; use of unusual threads, materials and textures and innovative techniques; humor and whimsy. Patrik says he is exploring new career options after having had successes in business as an importer of goods from Scandinavia, as an artist and as an interior designer. With a new interest in becoming in touch with his Polish heritage, Patrik has studied and toured Poland and taken particular interest in ancient tapestries being kept at Wawel Castle in Krakow. He would now like to lend his expertise with needle and thread to the conservation and preservation "of these fragile and irreplaceable national treasures from the extreme ravages of Krakow's industrial pollution. Ultimately, I hope to become the premiere spokesperson and fund-raiser for the protection of these rare art forms from their harsh environment." Initially, though, he intends to photograph, reproduce and create in chart form the flora and fauna and "birdies and beasts" found in those tapestries and then establish a cultural exchange with Poland's fiber artists.

Dale Rapin, '69, is a soil scientist with the USDA Forest Service's Soil, Water and Air Unit. His work address is 1720 Peachtree Road NW, Atlanta, Ga.

A teacher and teacher educator on Long Island, N.Y., he received his master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Northern Colorado. He is also the chair of the department of curriculum and instruction at Long Island University. His wife, Louise, is an English teacher in the New York public schools.

Cathy Clark Spatz, '65, comes from a long line of former Pointers, including three uncles, Gerald

Duaine Counsell, '49, retired from the faculty of his alma mater in 1988 not to a life of leisure but a more than full-time job as proprietor of the Midwest's largest Indian trading post.

Counsell is the owner and manager of Parson's Trading Post in Lake Delton adjacent Wisconsin Dells, a business that his father became involved in more than 60 years ago.

Today, Counsell deals in jewelry, leather, wood items, moccasins, souvenirs, pottery, baskets, costume pieces and Indian antiques.

Many of the items are authentic Indian crafts which Counsell purchases from Wisconsin Dells area Winnebago Indians, including baskets, beadwork and leatherwork. He also buys from tribes throughout the country.

In addition to maintaining a large inventory of merchandise in his sprawling building, Counsell operates a museum of Indian artifacts at the trading post. The displays include items that the owner began collecting when he was 6 years old.

As a youngster growing up in Wisconsin Dells, Counsell recalls visiting at the home of an Indian classmate where the friend's mother presented the guest with an authentic beaded bracelet.

"I couldn't help thinking that this was the only one like it in the world, and there were millions of other stamps and coins like the ones in my collections. That's when I started this hobby," he explains.

Torkelson, '41, Seattle, Harold Torkelson, who attended for two semesters in 1939-40, and Carl Torkelson, '47, Merrill; three aunts, Helena Torkelson, who attended in the summer of '32 and the fall of '36, Elidia Torkelson Hanson, '40, Merrill, and Eloise Torkelson Sampson, '40, Sun City West, Ariz.; her mother, Margaret Torkelson Clark, '42, Merrill, and her sister, Johanna Clark Rosby, '62, of LaGrange, Ill. Spatz, her sister, and her mother all served as presidents of Nelson Residence Hall while attending UW-SP. She says the dormitory, now used as an office building, holds many fond memories for the three of them. Stricken with polio at age eight, Spatz has spent many years as a disability consultant involved with groups on both the local and state levels. She and her husband, Kenneth Spatz, '65, an elementary teacher in Two Rivers, live at 1828 Clermont St., Manitowoc.

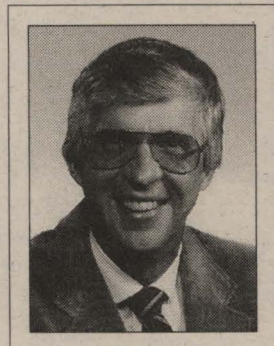

He and his wife, Helen, a nursing instructor at Northeast Wisconsin Technical College, have a teenage son.

1960

A. Dean Hawks, '60, recently retired from his position as guidance director at Marshfield Senior High School. His wife, Dorothy (Wilson), is an administrative secretary for the Marshfield Medical Research Foundation. They have four children and eight grandchildren. The couple resides at 1201 East 18th St., Marshfield.

1950s

Jim Miller, '58 is the forest fire prevention and forestry law enforcement specialist for the Bureau of Forestry in Madison. He transferred from the North Central District office in Rhinelander where he was the forestry supervisor for fire management. He also has been an instructor at the National Advanced Resource Technology Center in Marana, Ariz., for six years. He received the Golden Smokey Bear Award for his outstanding work in railroad fire prevention in 1985.

Frank Brocker, '56, a graduate of Luther Seminary, St. Paul, Minn., is pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, Tacoma, Wash. A teacher, coach, farmer, and Lutheran minister for 28 years, he recently added "author" to his list of credits with the release of his new book, "My Saints and Me." Published by Fairway Press, Lima, Ohio, the book is about people who have profoundly affected Brocker's life, or, as the author describes it, "brought a spiritual kick in the pants to this pastor who frequently moved from degrees of all importance to no importance." His address is 5411 110th St. SW, Apt. 16, Tacoma, Wash.

Lucille (Eskritt) Mortensen, '56, master's '90, is retired from 37 years of teaching in Wisconsin. She is self-employed as a writer and lives at 1102 W. Queens Way, Nekoosa. Her husband, Donald L. Mortensen Sr., a longtime employee of Consolidated Papers, died last January.

Felisa Borja Gutierrez, '55, one of the first international students to graduate from UW-SP, traveled here in July from her home in Sinajana, Guam, to visit campus and participate in a reunion with classmates. She has been serving the past 14 years as associate superintendent of the personnel services division for Guam's Department of Education. Her husband, A. B. Gutierrez, is director of the territorial government's retirement fund. Felisa, who is believed to be UW-SP's only graduate in Guam, spent part of her trip to the United States mainland recruiting teachers. She left information about teaching opportunities on her island home in the office of alumni services at UW-SP, where interested people may secure copies without charge. Starting salaries for teachers are in excess of $24,000, she reported. Felisa, who was a teacher before going into educational administration, holds a master's degree from the University of Guam. She has six daughters, all with at least bachelor's degrees, and four grandchildren. During her trip to Wisconsin, she was hosted at a reunion in Rhinelander that was attended by her classmates Charlotte Forth Krumm and Leona Forth Schumacher, twin sisters who live in Rhinelander, and Ruth Charlesworth Hackbart of Hartland, Beulah Huettle Brandner of New Franken, Janice Schroeder Jesse of Neenah, and Gladys Lehman Smith of Appleton. Felisa made her first return visit to UW-SP in 1969 and would like to come back for the university's centennial in 1993-94.

Reta (Fontaine) Bellis, '52, is a career trainer for the Cooperative Educational Service Agency. She and her husband, Neil, a vocational rehabilitation counselor for the state of Wisconsin, live at W5802 County B, Fond du Lac. She helps "at-risk" high schoolers to graduate with the skills to find and keep a job.

John F. Check, '52, former chairman of the psychology department at UW-Oshkosh who holds a Ph.D. from UW-Madison, has been inducted into the International Polka Hall of Fame. The leader of the Wisconsin Dutchmen for 31 years, he has composed more than 150 original polkas, waltzes and schottisches. Check and his orchestra have recorded 21 albums, cassettes and compact discs. In 1981 he was inducted into the World Concertina Congress Hall of Fame. A native of Rosholt, Check has two daughters and two sons. His late wife was the former Teckla Kurzinski of Stevens Point.

1940s

William Golomski, '48, is a senior lecturer in business policy in the graduate school of business at the University of Chicago. Since graduating from UW-SP, he has received degrees from five other schools. The recipient of many quality control awards, he is vice president of the International Academy for Quality. Among other honors received, Golomski has been named honorary chief of both the Choctaw and Seminole nations. He resides at 1228 Middlebury Lane, Wilmette, Ill.

Dolores (Rondeau) Woolley, '45, is a retired auctioneer who enjoys running into fellow alums. She lives at N13 W24610 Bluemound Road, Pewaukee.

Robert W. Menzel, '42, is a retired school social worker from White Bear Lake, Minn., who spent 22 years with the Minneapolis public schools and nine years with United Way. He and his wife live for several months of the year at their cabin on the Snake River in east central Minnesota. Their two sons reside with their families in the Twin Cities.

Gerald Torkelson, '41, is a professor emeritus at the University of Washington, where he has retired after teaching education for 20 years. During his career, he also taught at Pennsylvania State University, Drake University and Fresno State College in California. Torkelson also taught high school in Wisconsin and has been involved with numerous organizations in the education field.

The most prominent display cases are antiques made of cherry wood that Counsell purchased in the 1950s when the Arenberg Jewelry Store in Stevens Point went out of business.

Unlike many of the Wisconsin Dells-Lake Delton businesses, Counsell keeps his operation going throughout the year. Each fall, since the early 1980s, he has sponsored what has become a popular fall harvest festival to thank his suppliers of goods and customers with a meal and treat them to programs featuring expert Indian crafts people demonstrating their skills. This year, an authentic wedding ceremony was held in conjunction with the festival.

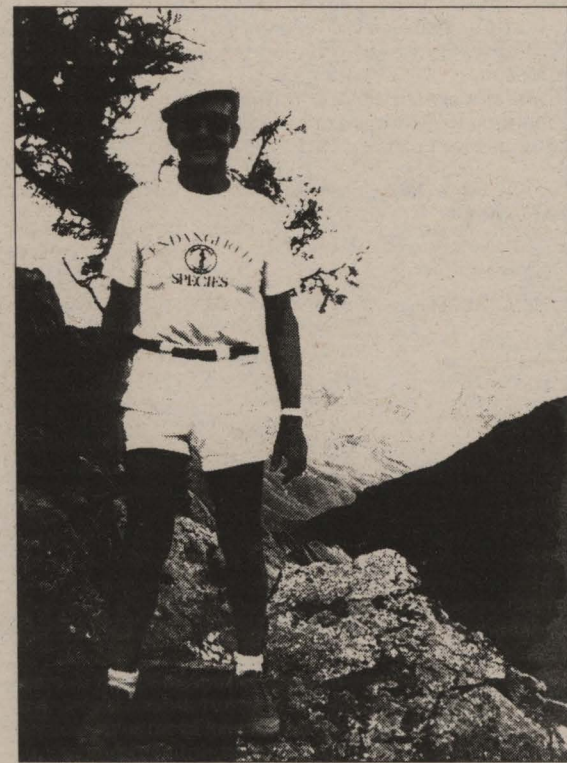

Serving tourists has changed a great deal in the time Counsell has been involved in the business. Today, many of his customers are members of minority groups—blacks and Hispanics from the Chicago area. "They are very interested in the Indian items," says the professor turned salesman.

The trading post has a rich history, being one of the oldest, as well as largest operations of its kind in this part of the country.

Counsell's father was a teacher who worked part time at the post until purchasing it in the 1940s. Counsell spent his summers and weekends in the business throughout his adult life until he purchased it from his mother, Pricilla, in 1981.

After graduating from UW-SP, Duaine was a high school teacher and coach for several years at high schools in Wisconsin Dells and West Allis. He taught in the physical education program and was a coach of several sports—including being a highly successful football mentor—for 11 years on campus. He spent a total of 31 years at the university.

Today, with the field of education behind him, he employs upwards of 25 people during the tourist season. His daughter and son-in-law are among them and grandchildren also are beginning to lend a hand as fourth generation trading post employees.

George Sappenfield, '47, the first graduate of the conservation education program (now the College of Natural Resources), has become an active mountain climber in his retirement. He lives in Arizona, spending winters in Mesa and summers near Flagstaff. In order to "prove I was there," he has his picture taken atop each mountain he has conquered. Here he is shown on Brown's Peak near Phoenix. Sappenfield retired in 1984 after serving 28 years as a history teacher at West High School in Phoenix. Soon thereafter, he took up his hobby as an active member of the Endangered Species of the Squaw Peak Skamps Mountain Climbing and Hiking Club. In the past five years, he has made it to the top of nearly every major peak in Arizona. One of his most important climbing accomplishments was logged in 1987 when he scaled the highest point in the contiguous United States, Mount Whitney in California. "We did it in one day," he says proudly. Sappenfield, who "tries to stick to mountains that have trail systems" has concluded from his experiences in the wild that rattlesnakes won't necessarily leave hikers alone if they don't disturb the snakes. He also has learned that each mountain creates its own weather. Rain has met him at the end of many of his climbs. Sappenfield enrolled at UW-SP in 1938 but had his education interrupted by military service in the South Pacific during World War II. Before settling in Arizona, he taught for several years in San Diego, Calif.

Margaret Maslowski, '41 (rural education certificate) and '53 (bachelor's degree), lives in Racine where she spent 32 years as an elementary school teacher. Since her retirement in 1984, she has been active in several education organizations and serves as state secretary of the Wisconsin Retired Teachers Association. She also is a volunteer at St. Mary's Medical Center in Racine and enjoys cooking, reading and visiting a cottage on Lake Helen in Portage County. Margaret began her teaching career being responsible for eight grades in the Fleming School near Amherst. She later taught in Mosinee and Lake Geneva before going to Racine in 1952. Margaret was in the first class of graduate students at UW-SP in the 1950s and eventually earned her master's degree from UW-Milwaukee. One of the highlights of her career was her nomination by the Racine unified schools as its nominee for the state "Elementary Teacher of the Year Award."

The award consisted of a plaque and a check for $5,000. He and his wife, Joan, and their daughter live in Madison.

Eldon Ziegler, '62, has been elected to a three-year term on the governing board of the Insurance Crime Prevention Institute. He is vice president of property-casualty claims services for Nationwide Insurance which he joined in 1987 after serving four years as vice president of claims for Wausau Insurance. A Chartered Property Casualty Underwriter (CPCU), he and his wife, Mitzi, have four children and live in Worthington, a suburb of Columbus, Ohio.

1961

George F. Howlett Jr., '61, is the Menominee Tribe's hydrologist, in charge of reviewing water quality and assisting the tribe with management practices. He formerly was a consulting forest ecologist, instructor of water quality chemistry at Spokane Community College and project leader for the Fallen Timber Association of Black Creek and Seymour.

Gifts to Our Foundation

Thank you.

The University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point Foundation acknowledges with deep appreciation the broad base of support it received from graduates, friends, faculty, staff, parents and corporations during the 1990-91 Traditions in Action fund drive.

At a time of keen competition in state government to support many vital services, we are especially grateful for and in need of the private funding you provide.

Scholarships for students facing ever spiraling costs of higher education, worthy projects which are not pursued because of state funding inadequacies, equipment and other supplies to enhance student and faculty research have all been financed through your generous gifts.

We value not only your contributions of money but also your continued support of legislative efforts to support the UW System and your kind words to prospective students and their parents.

(Contributions to the Traditions in Action drive that began in the fall of 1991 and continues through this spring will be listed in a later edition of this publication.)
