EDITORIAL.

The Iris managers very modestly presented their subscription terms at General Exercises last Wednesday. All students who were absent will be visited within the next few days and asked to buy an Iris or two. The Pointer need not act so modestly in this matter, and so we will attempt to tell you a few things about the fine book which is to be published by the Senior Class this year.

We think that it is to be the best ever published, although the Editor-in-chief has stated to the contrary. The book is to be eight inches by eleven and a half, and will be bound in three-quarter leather. Its material will be the best, its pictures the most real, and its jokes the funniest. All events and sub-events of Normal life in 1914-15 will be recorded in splendid style. Every body in school surely will want one or more copies of this, "Our School Annual." The Seniors will, of course, each buy one, as this is their last year at S. P. N., and then you know—each Senior has a fine individual picture which he will be proud to look at when he gets out into life.

Every Junior will surely need a few copies of this year's Annual in order to have something to guide him in the intricate Senior Life.

The Sophomores, Freshmen, and Sub-Freshmen ought to buy one to prove that they are as school spirited as the upper classes.

Everybody who wants to leave a good impression, or who feels that he needs good literature to better himself, and laughable jokes to refresh himself, should buy an Iris.

Don't delay. The price is only incidental—a Dollar twenty-five.

Some Photographs

The following "word pictures" are taken from Mr. Hippensteel's Composition Classes:

The Old Fisherman's Cottage.

LEONEL. S. HOGUE.

I found the old fisherman living in a small cottage containing only one room, but a perfect curiosity in its arrangement. It was on the skirts of the village, on a green bank, a little back from the road, with a small garden in front, stocked with vegetables, and adorned with a few flowers. The whole front of the cottage was overrun with a honeysuckle.

The interior was fitted up in a truly nautical style, the old fisherman's ideas of comfort and convenience having been acquired on a man-of-war. A hammock was slung from the ceiling, which, in the day-time was lashed up so as to take but little room. From the center of the room hung a model of a ship of his own workmanship, Two or three chairs, a table, and a large sea-chest, formed the principal movables. The mantle-piece was decorated with sea-shells. His implements for angling were carefully disposed on nails and hooks about the room. On a shelf was arranged his library, containing a work on angling, much worn, a Bible covered with canvas, and oil volumes or two of voyages, an almanac, and a book of songs.

A Pioneer's Cabin.

FLORENCE SCHIEGEL.

The Pioneer's cabin is situated in the midst of a large pine forest. It seems like a mere speck among the trees. The brick chimney stands out against its back ground of green. The smoke can be seen as it curls upward, and losses itself among the tree tops. As we approached, one of the first things that greeted us was a bump on the head from one of the roughly hewn beams that supported the low ceiling. The windows were very small and every other pane was patched with a piece of card board. Fresh air and sunshine was not present in great quantities. In the farther end of the room was a fire place, piled up with immense logs, the flames of which were blazing up the wide mouthed chimney. On the mantle above lay the family Bible, and near by stood a candle stick containing a tallow candle, the only evidence of illumination of the room. On one side of the fire place hung an old rustic musket, probably used ever since the days of the Revolution. The furniture was scanty, the few pieces the room contained were of the rudest sort, surely not very comfortable. The floors reminded one of waves, there being numerous upheavals and depressions. A ladder lead to the upper apartment.

THE ATTIC

EMMA FUNK.

The attic was to me one of the most fascinating rooms in which I had ever been. As soon as I had climbed the wide ladder leading into it, a feeling of losing myself in imagination came over me. Here was the place to dream over the things you have read. The shape of the room was very fanciful in itself. From the square opening in the middle of the floor, it spread out in three wings of equal dimensions, one lying directly before me, one to the right, and the other to the left. The bare ceiling and the plastered walls covered with various kinds and sizes of pictures, added to the fancifulness of it all. Seated in the large, old, sprawly arm chair by the little double window which opened from the middle wing, you could get a view of the little village and feel yourself to be a king, surveying from his tower his great possessions. Or you might be the little lame prince, and one of the many old coats hanging back in the left wing, might be the magic coat upon which you could float up and out of the sky-light in the middle of the roof. Over in the right wing you might see Priscilla working at that old spinning wheel and singing to its monotonous accompaniment. Whenever the imagination wanted new pictures, the various kinds of magazines piled high against the wall behind the wheel, furnished all the material that was needed.

The local High School broke even with Marinetta on Friday night, the sixteenth, when the home team unanimously defeated the visitors, and the team which went to Marinetta lost by a decision of two to one.

Lecture on Germany.

Last Friday evening, we had the pleasure of hearing an illustrated lecture on the subject of Germany, given by Miss Gray. Slides were shown of the four cities of Berlin, Hamburg, Munich, and Dresden; and bits of Rhine scenery, including several historic castles, and the cliff where "Die Lorelei" was supposed to have sat and combed her long golden hair and lulled the fishermen and boatmen to destruction by her sweet melodies. As many of the scenes shown were familiar to Miss Gray, we came away with a vivid impression of these four German cities.

Forum—Athenaeum

The Ohiyese Society has decided to uphold the Negative Side of the question submitted to them by the Forum—Athenaeum Debating team. This question reads as follows:

"Women should be granted full suffrage by Constitutional Amendment."

The Ohiyese girls cannot be Suffragettes if we can judge from suffrage by Constitutional Amendment.

This issue is for debate between the three societies while the boys will uphold it.

The date for the Tri-angular debate between the three societies of the school has been fixed as Friday, April 23. This will be an open meeting, held in the assembly room, and every body is invited to be present.

The program will consist of three musical numbers, three literary numbers in the form of Readings and essays, and a debate. The question for debate is as follows:

"This emphasis on extra curricular activities is undue."

The question will be debated by teams consisting of one member from each society. The affirmative side will be upheld by Lucy Smith, Bertha Fossage, and Carl Nelson; the negative side will be upheld by Caroline Haas, Eileen Bohan, and Frank Wood. The question is one which has grown in importance during late years, and it is a prominent question at the present time among leading educators. This insures a lively and interesting debate, which can be enjoyed by each and every one of you.

ARENA

The Society has decided upon a common seal to be used for all Arena pins. The order will be sent in this week, and the Arenas expect to be wearing their pins the first of next quarter.

A small boy kept begging his teacher to let the class read the story about some one who ate a ribbon and it made him sick. It was only after persistent questioning that the bewildered teacher discovered that the child wanted to read "A Visit from St. Nicholas," the particular lines which he had in mind being these:

"Away to the window I flew like a flash, Toore open the shutters, and threw up the sash."

Item from Alexander Parkhurst's diary:

"Got a hair-cut on the South Side."

Hard luck, Alex. Better get some hair restorative at the counter. When my last thot in vain is thunk, And my last wink in vain is wunk, What saves me from an awful flunk? My Pony! —KODAK.

Father — "Young man, were you out after ten last night?"

Son — "No, father; I was only out after one."

—EXCHANGE.

"An old Professor of mine at college, was walking down the street one day, when he met one of his students whom he thought was enjoying too many worldly pleasures. He greeted him thus:

"Good morning, child of the devil!"

To which the young lady replied:

"Good morning, father!"

LITTLE JOHNNY — Dad, there's a girl in our school whom we call Poscript.

DAD — Poscript! what do you call her Poscript for?

LITTLE JOHNNY — Cos her name is Adeline Moore. — Ex.

TEACHER — What are the four Seasons?

FRESHMAN — Must for every one.
