WHY NOT?

England has Edward, Prince of Wales: the United States has Charles Lindbergh. At last the United States has a Crown Prince. Not that he is a prince by any means, but he is a Crown Prince never-the-less. Edward was born into his position and Charles acquired his, but they are both the same now — both princes of the blood.

As the heir to the throne of Great Britain, Edward is expected to conduct himself in a manner befitting his exalted rank. He is expected to be a jolly fellow, let the newspapers picture him as he may. As the heir to the throne of the United States, Charles is expected to conduct himself in a manner befitting his exalted rank.

The early Americans thought that the best Indian was a dead Indian, and they did their very best to improve him.

Mr. Smith: "The early Americans thought that the best Indian was a dead Indian, and they did their very best to improve him."

Mr. White: "That was a student filling asleep."

Prof. Collins: "What was that noise I heard?"

Johnny John: "That was a student filling asleep."

Why not give Charles his dower? He could become a Captain in the Air Force. Mr. Smith: "The early Americans thought that the best Indian was a dead Indian, and they did their very best to improve him."

Talk about us rural collegiates when we go to the city! Whee! Setting, room 13, Hotel Randolph, Milwaukee. Scene, Harold Puckett and Elmer Holderby. Scene, playing one of his correspondence course booklets on "How to Propose in Seven Lessons". In the course of his quest for knowledge he ran across a word he never had met before, and, being of an inquisitive and studious temperament, he crossed to where a large thick book, turned a page — "Holy Smoke!" It was the local telephone directory! A few blushes, a few words, and he was on his way, and soon he was a man with a name.

Paukett's girl asked him if the homecoming game was to be played here next year! Beautiful but — was that ask?

Benny, having a few moments to himself, wandered down Vilet Street to greet some of his fellow countrymen. He entered a place formerly known as a saloon and sat in at a poker game. Gee he was unlucky! They kindly furnished him with a barrel till he could get to a second-hand store, where he provided himself with new raiment, so he could get back to the hotel. If you don't believe us look at his new clothes. He claims that a naughty big truck splashed him so that he had to get a new pair, but we know different, because he's taking poker lessons from an expert and wants him to the city slickers next time. Moral—A good pole won't sink!

Gym Is Scene Of Valentine Party

The annual Grammar Valentine Party which was held Saturday evening, February 11th, was decidedly one of the big successes of the Point College social year.

The gymnasium, the scene of the festivities, was decorated in red and white. Crepe paper streamers, a false ceiling as well as curtains for the windows, and window cards, large red heart shapes, were hung here and there from the ceiling and walls.

Novelty dances did much to break the ice the first part of the evening. The first one was a matinee dance. Each young man was given a numbered piece of a heart and required to find the other half which was held by a girl. Some of the fellows were exceptionally fortunate whereas others were seen wandering dismally around searching for their partners. Clover manipulations soon remedied this trouble. The second novelty dance was a combination Love Prayer, Valentine dance. Each girl drew a heart having on it the name of one of the young men present. It was then her duty to find him and claim him for the dance.

The first number of the well selected program was an original composition of the “Glow-Worm.” By Mr. Fryer, the pianist for the orchestra, Walter Jones played several violin solos. Miss Margaret Strick was a novel Valentine costume, entertained with a solo spot dance. She was accompanied by Marc- eni, Wyk, Leonard, Sprague chose to sing Ben Johnson’s famous “Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes!” for his vocal selection. The orchestra did “What’s New, Gandy Know?” as a feature number. An impromptu number was added to the program and very much appreciated. This was a trio composed of Homer Morrissey, Leon Van Hecke and Walter Jones. The three undertook to entertain between dances and made a fine success.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Watson and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred J. Herrick were chaperones for the evening.

The following committees had charge of the entertainments: Prizes Committee, Helen Chorke, Marjory Crawford, and Florence Demeyer. Decorations: Father Herrick, Gladys Cutler, Evelyn Elliott, Mildred Foss, Ardelle Garibaldi, Reed Hohol, Ethel Madsen, Ruth Mass, Beatrice Polley, Isabel Bayone, Leonard Stemp, Mrs. Irene Wieland, Faculty advisor, Miss Eva M. Seen, Electrician, Keith Bernes.

In late—Six piece orchestra was engaged to help while away the remaining part of evening and according to all reports it was all that could be asked.
