CONFERENCE RACE OFFERS THRILLER

INJURY WEAKENS LOCAL SCORING

Free throws, which totaled up 14 points for the Central Staters, helped oblige the Indiana Hoosiers. The Central States had to contend with Friday night, and as a result of these efforts, Whitewater and State Teachers College won its third Conference game of the season by outpointing the Indiana Hoosiers 34 to 23.

OFF TO GOOD START

The trip up to Michigan did not disable the local boys because they began to function well and effectively soon after the first tip off. ’Ollie’ forward and high point man of the evening for the home team, passed the ball through the ring for the first counter. Balancing the successful efforts of the Indiana Hoosiers was the great defense of the Whitewater guard, found the loop before Coach Agnew’s center, Schwagman, found the path.

Then came the first of which appeared to be the everlasting contribution times for the Indians. Sturdevant, Whitewater’s guard, fouled, and made good the two attempts, making the count 4-0. Finding the Indiana Hoosier center from the mid court followed by Schwagman with a field goal, Charleworth drifted through to the quarter line, and Schroeder received the ball at the pick-up, taking a short shot before the visitors scored.

SCHROEDER INJURED

Schroeder who had been playing ‘hung up ball’ was injured by the location of the right arm. He was forced out of the game and Albate took his place.

Before the boys left the floor at half time, ’Ollie’ had caged a field goal, while Klappa a charity toss, with four free throws and one field goal for the visitors. The half count was 7-0 at the semi-time 15 to 10 with the Pointers in the lead. A shot by Newberger soon after seemed to have extinguished the Indiana Hoosiers but it was soon to be cut off when the Indiana Hoosiers center, Perry. Charleworth sank a long shot, a gift shot by Neubarger and one by Klappa made the count 21 to 10, five minutes to go. Loemer added another two points, and Sturdevant one, and his contribution point climaxed the Whitewater Students’ scoring of the night with 24 point total.

MARBEL STILL OUT

Captain Richard Marshall, center and ace was still unable to play because of the broken bone in his heel. The team seems to be getting banged up badly, but nightly the doctors are losing. The row will go ahead without him, it is anticipated.

Local Decorator Meet; Eats Served

Last evening the Juniors turned out en masse to hangary along thedecorating of the gym for the prom. When the ambitious ones had tired their fingers so that they could work no longer, they were rewarded with doughnuts and coffee.
ART EDUCATION IS GAINING IN FLUENCE

A very important influence in turning educational policies toward developing the capabilities of the child for longer living has been the introduction of expressive subjects into the schools — art and occupational training.

A generation ago, when manual training opened the way, it was regarded as the appearance of the "ugly duckling." At last, however, the expressive subjects are gaining rightful recognition, not merely as an adornment of the student's work, but as a way of developing his powers of appreciation for the finest things.

Art education is important and up to the present time, several states, including our own, seem to be far behind. However, some very astounding movements have been taking place which are opening the eyes of the public to the importance of the field.

Recently the Department of Superintendent of the National Education Association at the Dallas meeting passed a resolution recommending that each state should have an education committee and adequate support for other basic subjects. Also a committee of twenty outstanding educators of the Middle West, recently passed a resolution recommending that a unit of art be developed as a major subject for the Junior High School.

This would seem to be evidence of a definite point in progress along this line.

YOU'RE A 'PEACH' WHEN YOU WIN, BUT A 'TURNIP' WHEN YOU LOSE.

THE boys are again in that dismal gloom that prevails when any team loses several times. Glancing at the various members of the team, one is able to tell that they are in a "blue mood." It should be our aim and desire to encourage them to a small degree at least, but here we sit and laugh and give them the occasional "Ha ha," when they won the first game we threw roses and sent many telegrams, but when they lost we threw a cowslip and a poor word for the whole team. The boys have had a series of tough, yes darn tough, luck. Who wouldn't feel discouraged with not a single word of encouragement. All the games which the boys lost were played against those it was supposed to be a joke that we lost to White water by a close score. One feels much better to finish a hard task successfully than we would if it were an easy task. We like to see them win, indeed, but why give them up for lost when they are doing wonderfully. Then we criticize the coach, he is given more than ten men should get. He has one of the hardest and worst jobs in the entire school, yet we criticize him for trying to do good.

Let's hand our word of encouragement, and if we do it sure as can say that we helped win the game — we who sit on the side lines and criticize...

"It takes a good loser to win." Remember.

"What line do you think you are on anyhow?"

"Well," said the man, "I am not sure, but judging from what I've heard, I should say I was on the clothes line."

EDUCATION FOR LEISURE NEXT STEP FOR SCHOOLS

Food, clothing, shelter, tools, temples, schools, transportation — these has man sought through the centuries. And now comes leisure, the fulfillment of an ancient longing. Within a generation the working day has been reduced from ten hours to eight hours and the forces which have brought that change are only beginning to make themselves felt.

A work period of six hours a day, five days a week, forty-eight weeks a year for the masses is a possibility by 1940. The factors which have caused the production interaction upon each other again at one point means gains at several other points. Among these factors are the lifting influence of universal education; the development of automatic machinery; scientific factory management; the reduction of ill health and disease; changes in home occupations which send women into office, shop, and factory; the elimination of parasitic industries such as the liquor business; and the reduction of warmaking activities.

What new heights may the race not reach if one generation of The February meeting of the Margaret Ashman Club (Sigma Tau Delta) was held in the Rural Assembly. The interesting program was entirely under the direcction of Miss Hann. A profitable discussion of current topics was led by Professor E. T. Smith. The subject of Modern Drama was discussed in detail by Miss Hann. She reviewed the most popular plays of 1925 and 1926, analyzing the reason for their popularity.

Rural Life Enjoyed
Talk By Schmeecke
Professor F. J. Schmeecke was the speaker at the first Rural Life Club meeting of the semester. The meeting was held at 7:30 in the Rural Assembly on Monday evening. He illustrated his talk with pictures which he took himself. These pictures were projected on the screen and illustrated the actual photos of the most historic, famous places in New England. He also had some views of a very beautiful rose garden in Connecticut which greatly interested his audience.

The second semester officer of the rural organization were elected at the meeting. The results of the election were — Elizabeth Broekhoven, President; Verna Smerling, Vice-President; Edward Giese, Secretary; Margaret Rassky, Treasurer. The best wishes of the college go to the new officers.

Boys Of Rural Life
Enjoy Card Party
In order not to have some of the Rural Department boys get too homesick, Irving Meinck invited some of the boys to a party given at his home Thursday night. Cards were played the first part of the evening, and luncheon was served at midnight. The party was closed with the boys singing our old favorite college songs, with piano accompaniment. The following were present:

Edward Giese
Irth Thober
Henry Hubelz
Edward Joosten
Reinhard Latitz.

Hello, Everybody.

Where? At last we can breathe! We’ve been working so hard—the end of the semester, y’ know—that I just couldn’t tell you what’s been happening at the dorm, here. Forgive me if I don’t say much today. I’ve got a rotten memory. (You’d know that if you could see my semester grades, too. I shouldn’t tell you.)

—Well, I do know that there are some new faces at Nelson Hall and some old ones missing. Marguerite Patten, who’s been staying at the House, is back here again. Her old roommate, who is rooming with Elizabeth Broekhoven, Elizabeth’s former roommate, graduated at the end of the semester.

—Blau, of Green Bay, is beginning the Home Ec. course here. Some of the “kids” shifted roommates too. Lydia Lewey and Leila Johnson room together now.

—We miss the girls who graduated this semester. There were three of them from Nelson Hall — Cecille Stephens, Dorris McVay, and Verna Burmeister. A few days before they left, Miss Hus-y entertained the ‘sweet girl graduates’ to a special dinner. Each girl received a gift and the rest of the girls sang farewell songs.

The skating is still fine out at the fair grounds. The kids have been out there every time they have a chance to go. Some of the dorm girls have been tobogganing at Red Bridge. A few went with their lamps and I guess there were a couple of spills.

The other night at 11:30 I smelled pancakes. I couldn’t resist my own nose! Imagine pancakes in a dorm at that hour! It was a feat, though. Several girls on second floor were making good use of pancake flour and the grill.

Miss Marie Brackman, of Madison, who is doing practice work in the library, will stay at Nelson Hall for a few weeks. Although a semi-tragedy marked her first week here, we hope that the rest of her stay will be peaceful.

She now needs a new set of Encyclopedias for our reading room, so we are raising money for the set. Wednesday we had a special program on apple pie and ice cream! Everyone else must have liked it too, for a great profit was made on the sale.

Believe it or not, “when the wind blows the roads fill with snow.”" Agra Rhindt and Blanche Tyler came back from Crandon through drifted highways and wooded roads. Although Irene Tew-tan didn’t have quite so long a journey she had difficulties. She arrived safely and says, “It can’t be done except in a Ford.”

Misses Davis, Gehringer, Rauloth and Sullwold were dinner guests at the dorm on Sunday.

The English 201 class and Miss Hus-y entertained the international students children in Washington and Garfield schools. Thursday afternoon this class went out to the rural house at Nelson Hall living room. The guests were, the teachers of these schools, the Cardinal officers of the fraternity, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Delzel.

Marine Tavish left us several weeks ago because of mastoiditis. In the past few weeks she has been a patient at the Marshfield Hospital. We were all very glad to hear that she is on the road to health and will perhaps be back soon.

Cupid reigned king at the delightful valentine dance sponsored by the fraternity one Saturday evening. The rec room was festooned with hearts, hearts and more hearts. A charming gate of hearts was in the center of the room. This party overwhelmed the account for our new encyclopedia.

Some of the girls will have another source of income if they should every once in a while of teaching, seeing as how our class turned saleswomen at the opening of the local Montgomery Ward store on the first of February. All came back boasting of the results of high-powered salesmanship. Estelle Hall and Elizabeth Patten both sold with a record of forty-six sales.

This week end was an ideal one for sales. Patricia Cowan’s guests can testify to the fact that fried chicken makes a very delicious dinner.

Ann Jesenich’s birthday was the occasion for another welcomed spread. Valentine decorations added much to enjoyment of the birthday cake.

Activities Are Varied In C S T C

The activities of students of Central State are divided among organizations of various sorts, and membership or participation are athletic teams, department clubs, musical organizations, Women's Auxiliary, student journalistic work, honorary fraternities, and religious organizations.

Membership on the athletic team is obtained in the usual way, and may be held for three years. There are also women's athletic teams representing various departments or classes. Through participation in athletics and the maintenance of a scholastic average of at least 70, one is eligible to hand her name to a member of the Women's Athletic Association and be voted upon by the membership. If she is approved, she is invited to join the club.

Every student in the school is a member of one of the departmental clubs. The purpose of these clubs is to promote professional spirit and interest, and to provide a social bond for the members of the various departments. For students taking music, there is the Primary Council, under the direction of Mr. Dehler. The Grammar Round Table, under Mr. Fischler, is open to students enrolled in the intermediate, upper grade, and junior high school courses. Staying with the high school four years, students of music and art make up the four year high school teachers' course. "The Young Ladies" is a special student group of Forum. Mr. Smith, is the director. The girls majoring in Home Economics are members of the Home Economics Club. Rural Life Club is for students enrolled in the one-year rural life course, the supervisory course, and the state graded school courses.

For those students who have musical ability, there are several organizations. The "Young Ladies' Chorus and The Men's Quartette" are very popular, and active. The orchestra plays at the student dramatics, commencement and other events of the school year.

The student publications offer a challenge for the literary students. The Iris, the college annual, is a splendid book, produced by the students under the direction of Miss Inez Houghton. It received an All-American honor rating in 1928. It was entered in 1929 also, but its rating has not yet been received. The Bellhop, published weekly, is the school publication is directed by Mr. Rightsell. Members of the Pointer Staff are selected by the editor from those students recommended for their high scholastic and literary ability.

There are now two honorary fraternities with chapters in the college. For students proficient in science and mathematics there is Sigma Zeta. Margaret Ashburn Club and Sigma Xi are chapters in Sigma Tau Delta, a national literary fraternity. Students of high scholastic average and ability in literary lines are eligible for membership.

Y. W. C. A. is open to every college girl and meets weekly at the dormitory. Loyola Club is an organization for Catholic students. Both these organizations provide social inspiration and fine social contacts.

Fierce Family Is Blessed With Baby

Once more there is a proud papa and doting papa in the college. Mr. Burton B. Fierce, principal of the junior high school, has a baby girl. The young lady arrived Saturday and began her life weighing seven pounds. The student body congratulates the parents and wishes a life of happiness to Kathleen.

Squad Returns From Trip North

On a barnstorming trip up north in Michigan, Feb. 3 and 4, Lady Luck frowned on the Pointer squad and then the short end of a 37 to 20 score at Marquette, and 41 to 28 against Milwauk.

The big boys of Marquette made our team look like midgets, but those same midgets played a great game and made several "sneakers" a run. Only Marquette's ability to make long ones and to follow in the ones that weren't made defeated the Pointers, who were hindered by size. A bad first half caused by the mistakes of the Central defense was made good, while the Northerners relaxed in from everywhere, lost the game in the second inning and half was even.

At Holland, after being eight points behind at the half, the Pointers staged one of the greatest comebacks ever seen on the Tech Field. Over, by over-taking the Hopeful bunch and obtaining the lead with two minutes to go our own leading 28 to 27, Lady Luck again favored the opponents who closed their eyes and threw the ball wherever, and anyway, each time dashing the net from the inside.

Co-Ed Basketball Teams Are Formed

Basketball season for the girls has started. Four teams have been organized which meet for practice on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. An invitation in the basketball work is the student coach. Members of the coaching line are Mrs. Berthold, Mr. Rightsell and Reverend Williams.

The teams are as follows:

Grassmans — (2 teams)
T beaten, Baird, Skinner, A. Bellman, M. Bellman, Davies, Dent, Ferman, Sorell, Miford, Schaal, McLain, Cowans, Ruals
Clegg, Kepeczy, Larson, Martin, Senn, Smelting, Wilson

Dalton, Hawkes, Enge, Kenyon, Leipsins, Newsome, Tyler
The student coaches are Crystal Joseph, Ann Williams, Esther Sorenson, Ethel Kelley, Estelle Buhl, Genevieve Pulda, Ann Jocesan and Marilla Roberts.

New Room is Opened For Students

Several faculty members have been occupied with rooms vacated by the training department. Some of these changes were announced in a past issue of the college paper, and since that time the other rooms have been assigned. The professors and their new rooms are as follows:

Mr. Lindesmith — Room 123

Doctor Carstairs — noted handsome, ex-schoolmaster, of Springfield.
Mr. Kary — Lifelong friend of Nan Carol. Well known tailor of Bevare, interested in the health of his town. He is too poor to contribute any money.
Nan Carol — School teacher, in the small town of Bevare. Her husband has been dead two years. Nan feels that her death was caused by the unsanitary and unsanitary conditions of the hospital together with improper nursing. Her one ambition since then has been to get enough people interested in her idea and to try to carry them out. The citizens of Bevare, however, are too narrow minded and too poor to be interested in a hospital and Nan is ready to give up in despair, but decides to try one more plan.

ACT I

Scene I—Tailor shop in Bevare. The tailor is seen pressing a suit. Nan enters.

Nan — How do you do, Mr. Kary. How business is it with you?

Mr. Kary — Well, well. It's Nan Carol, eh? Business is as bad as ever, but there's a tailor's shop up the walk from the door. (Chuckles) Are you still enjoying the teaching business, Nan?

Nan — Well, at times I get out of patience with my pupils. I want to do bigger and better things.

Mr. Kary — Still after the idea of building a hospital, Nan?

Nan — I am, Mr. Kary, and I intend to try one more plan before I give up trying to convince people of this community that they need one.

Mr. Kary — You're a plucky girl, Nan, and I hope you succeed. I'm in favor of the idea, but when no money comes in, on money can come out. What are your plans this time?

Nan — It's a secret which I will not divulge until I am successful. You can help me carry it out though by fitting me with a distinguished looking dark suit and not telling a soul about it.

Mr. Kary — (Looks at her blankly) Well, I trust you.

Nan — Don't be shocked, Mr. Kary. I think you can't trust me. Mr. Kary — Well, I always did and I guess I always will. (Shakes head but proceeds to measure)

Scene II—Doctor's office in Springfield, a town ten miles from Bevare. The doctor is seated at his desk writing. Nan enters in man's attire, cap in hand. Her hair is cut short and combed straight back. The doctor rises as she enters. She shows embarrassment as she meets his gaze. As she directs her to a chair she notices that he is tall and handsome.

Doctor Carstairs—You are, I presume, the man who called me this morning? Nan—(Voice trembling) Yes.

Doctor—(Smiling) What can I do for you?

Nan—(Avoids his gaze). My name is John. I am writing to you in behalf of all the good citizens of Bevare. It is important that you should be one of the noted doctors of this city. I have some plans which I am wondering if you would be interested in them.

Doctor—(Looking up) Are you the very place for one. Let me see your plans.

(John. Looks steadfastly at her.)

Nan—(Looking at him) Why ah—(fidgets in brief case) Here they are. (Hands the plans to him.)

Doctor—(Browsing through them, looks, traces with finger for a few minutes.) These are excellent. You have incorporated some good ideas and judgment. A few changes will fix these plans in fine order. However, if you will pardon my curiosity, before we pro-

QUE SERA-T-IL!

By FRANCIS GALLAGHER
(Written For Sigma Tau Delta)

The evolution of the length of mily dress's earliest dates to the present day has been one of continual change. The early Egyptians were among the first to start the ball a-rolling. They introduced a garment so tight that it was difficult to take a step. The Assyrians adopted pantaloons which reached to the ankles. The Greeks are responsible for introducing frouces, while the Romans turned to a long flowing robe which made them appear very dignified. In the 15th century garments were so long that they had to be carried on the arm while walking. The coming of the sun-dered tailors was like an elec tor descending from the top floor of the Woolworth building—sudden, shocking, heart-rending to some, but much to the joy and relief of others—meaning the knee-knack and bow-legged.

Will our "beloved" short skirts fade away in the gloom of history? Will women give up the comfort they have enjoyed with the short dresses; the sanitation of the short as compared with the long; the appearance, which is easier, more chic and more trim? The short dress is partly responsible for women taking part so whole heartedly in modern sports. With her entrance in the world of commerce, "la femme" must appear unsuitable, and not as a fashion plate. Can you picture a cool dashing headling (as an "o'clock", or a "stump") trying to make a 7:45 car, clambering on and off with a long

"rig" dangling around her legs, incon veniencing her in every way possible,

as well as impedng her would be hasty progress. Then too, there is the all important question of women's desire to charm, as well as the question which is the boon of feminine existence—that of trying to keep young. Which is more preferable in each instance, the short or the long of it? Another thing that will have to be done away with in the advent of long dresses is the care free flapper stride that has enabled the feminine sex to really get there. Long skirts require dignity and grace so now women will have to acquire more poise

in all their actions.

We know, as the saying goes, that "fashion is fleeting", but "que sera-que" will femininity yield to the dictates of fashion in this modern age when women are supposed to be so self-sober self-reliant and self-reliant. Will they not re volt against the incoming rush of the long dress and show that they really have the "backbone" with which they are credited as having.

Mallery Urges Boards To Rush Construction Of School Buildings

"Build now not only for the sake of the child, but for the sake of the workers of the nation," says Otto T. Mallery in the February Journal of the National Education Association in an appeal to school administrators and school boards to speed up school building programs. "Construction wages released is purchasing power which will lure in New York, cotton fabrics in Georgia, and in Maine the paper to wrap them. Building in a town three states away will create purchasing power for the products of your fields, but if the reasons for building that school were good six months ago, the reasons are better now."
The Ties That Blind

Some may long for the soothing touch Of lavender, cream, or mauve. But the ties I wear—just must possess The bale of a red hot stove. The life I lead—the books I read Are sensible and mild—I like calm hats—I don’t wear spats, But I like my neckties wild!

So give me a loud tie, brother, One with a cosmic urge, One that will swear and rip and tear On the blaze of a red hot stove.

Mr. Percival—“What are the payouts?”

Kit Navitski—“They grow on cats.”

Chorus:
So give me a wild tie, brother, One with the scarflet of sins. A tie that will blaze—in the hectic haze Down where the Vest begins.
