NOTICE

Students who wish to work on the weekly POINTER editorial and business staffs should see Doris Ubbehode and Eulah Walter at once.
For once the sun shone this past weekend, and didn't all the girls look cute in their colorful spring attire? Dorm life generally looks out across to the East Shop, it rather seems as if the sweaters and skirts are back again.

Several of Dormites went to the Pointer banquet Sunday night. From the comments that were heard everyone had a grand time, even though they didn't compete with the photographers who were ban­queting in the main dining room. When we were speaking, they were singing and reviving.

You girls who were away for the weekend, look at the bulletin board. Don't forget that hayride party this coming Friday night. Dormites are planning to have it at Bu¬tterfield sometime between 8:30, so put on your blue jeans and best straw hat and come on along. Soot's refreshments will be provided.

While you're looking out, notice the seating arrangement for the Mother and Daughter banquet to be held Saturday evening at 6:30 p.m. The Dormites have kept the telephone wires busy ordering flowers, candles, and favors for the dinner. Committee members are writing the big announcements which were sent to our mothers, or mother substitutes. To date, the reservation list adds up to 15. It's more than surprising, but what the decorations will be, is even though some of us aren't telling. That goes for the menu, too. Needless to say, we are doing everything to show our Moms a good time. We'll even clean our rooms.

If anyone accidentally wandered into Nelson Hall on Sunday, April 29, and wondered why we had turned co¬rdinal, that was a silver tea which was given to aid Chinese nurses. The girls were very much in­terested in the curriculum which the committee gathered from here and ther e.
Class Tree Planting Project Is Enjoyed

Thirteen Conservation students, armed with pails and shovels, boarded the college bus last Thursday morning bound for the annual tree-planting project which is a part of the Conservation course taught by Fred J. Schmeeckle.

Approximately 1000 Norway pines were planted on the school forest acreage, which is near Plover. Planting trees was a new experience to most of the students, who eyed the shovels somewhat dubiously at first. However, after Mr. Schmeeckle demonstrated the proper way of planting the seedlings, the students teamed up and worked with a right good will.

After the trees were planted the class went through the school "for­set", which was begun eight years ago, and examined the growth of the trees planted since then. All of the students agreed that planting the trees was a constructive job and also a lot of fun.

From March, 1943 to May, 1944, when aviation students of the 97th College Training Detachment were here, he taught physics to the trainees in addition to his other duties.

Mr. Herrick's plans for the use of his leisure time after July 1 are indeterminate.
