Nextly ten months ago, the European Recovery Plan was offered to the United States Congress, for their consideration, by General Marshall. The ERP was not proposed for the mere economic recovery of Western Europe but for the prevention of a future war. It was pointed out that the restoration of a sound economy in Europe would reduce the possibility of future aggression and ensure peace for the world.

However, this idea was not entirely accepted by all nations. The United States, France, and Britain were the major supporters of the ERP, while the Soviet Union and other Eastern European countries opposed it. The ERP was not a simple solution, and many challenges lay ahead. One of the major challenges was the need for the support of the other nations.

It is useless to publish the story at this late date because it has appeared in every publication from the DAILY WORKER to the COLBY PHONE-GRA.PH and every college student who has been endowed with the gift of reading, knowledge, and the ability to think will be none the worse for having had the story blasted home to them.

We must prove to the continent, the most rigid of controls must accompany its dispensation.

The people of Europe is going to need a lot of help in the future. We must prove to them that we are willing to help them.

The ERP was not just a plan to help Europe recover economically. It was a plan to prevent future wars. The Fifth Quarter

Some of you probably remember Pete Terenzini, one of the better cage stars turned out at CSTC. Pete came back from his Army foot and never expected to play again. Because of his success in the game, however, he was asked to coach the Rhinelander Legion team. His coaching ability was proved this year, as his Legionnaires swept through victory after victory and ended up winning the state Legion championship. They were later defe-bated by the Wilson Legion team in a close see-saw battle. As Pete watched his players he grew restless and decided to give the game another try. He tried all—by finishing the season, the 20 point per game average in a tough Milwaukee league. Pete says he was feeling a fighting heart and a true sporting spirit. We are proud that he calls CSTC his alma mater.

Ted Fritsch, another college alumni now with the Green Bay Packers, has a hard time with his diet. He stated that one easy way to get out of pro football is to graduate with a proficient level. Pete through the Wisconsin state have acquired new positions.

The teams were placed for couples who will also be honored in the co-champion basketball series was third high. The tall, towering one in the front row at any of the performances of the Men’s Glee club is Jim. He has been singing with the club for two years.

Socially, he is associated with Chi Delta delta of the Phi Kappa Psi, a national fraternity. He also has been a member for two years and was its president for the first semester of this year.

Between 1938, the year he went to Whitewater, and those in the present operation or tain a balance of living trees on the campus so the remaining trees must be substituted for old.

A wide variety of trees can be used in the campus and the present operations will give the Conservation boys a further reason than ever. Campus trees do more than add beauty and shade to the living class-room where forestry and conservation majors have been patiently studying and be-

What's the new look for men?

What will the well dressed male of '48 be wearing? Well, if he is 18 years old, he will probably wear the proposed Universal Military Training uniform, "it may very well be khaki and olive drab.

Seriously, the Universal Training bill is an important and widely discussed plan that will have a significant bearing on the lives of all of us. Just how do the students of CTSY stand on the issue? To attempt to determine this, a number of people were chosen at random and asked the question, "Do you favor compulsory military training?" Here are a few of the answers and reasons behind them.

Said Eliot Riggs, "In view of the present situation, something must be done. CTSY is not that something. It is a part of the duties of an American citizen.

Preparation Necessary

Jerry Gertschen, a veteran, answered, "Yes, I'm in favor of it. The best reason for my answer is Pearl Har- bor. The moment that we aren't prepared will be our weakest."

When questioned in the silence of the library, William Jensen replied, "Yes. By preparing the individual, we can prepare the nation for any eventualities.

Another veteran, Leonard Jacoby, said, "Yes, a strong military force is the only basis for a feeling of security. It is a protective weapon."

Between cackling, Gary Nold answered, "Yes, I think that the least we can do is to prepare for any emergency, and this training plan is the way to prepare."

Strong National Guard

Athletic Director Berg, when asked to give his opinion, stated that he was in favor of universal military training, but not in the form in which it is now proposed. He believes that the placing of more stress on the National Guard might be a partial solution to the problem, and that some type of legislation that would not affect college students would be more favorable.

"The majority of the ex G.I.'s seem to agree with LaVern Rick, a veteran of four years in the Army, who asserted, "I am definitely in favor of universal military training, because if war is inevitable, a trained man will have a better chance of coming back alive."

Lloyd Peterson, who is among the group that would most likely be affected by the passage of a compulsory military training bill, declared, "Yes, I'm in favor of universal military training. I'd like to go to war and want to go as a trained soldier rather than a person with no military experience."

Not Likely to Work

Mr. Crow expressed his opposition to universal military training by stating that, "Peace-time universal military training in the past has brought neither security nor peace, nor has it contributed to enlightened patriotism or the character of any nation. It is not likely to do so here today."

David Richmond, a member of the local National Guard unit, believes that compulsory membership in the National Guard would be the right answer to the problem. He states that, "one night a week would be much better than three hundred and sixty-five days in a row."

Geography Enters

Mr. Specht joins Mr. Crow as a member of the opposition. He expressed his ideas on the subject in the following statement: "There are three stages in the life cycle of a nation; youth, maturity and old age. It is my belief that a nation needing compulsory military training is at the age of dozy diapers. I hate to think that the United States is there."

There seems to be no doubt in the minds of the majority of those interviewed that some type of universal military training is a necessity. This is posed in a different form: "What form of universal military training would be best for the country, and for those individuals who would be affected by it?"
