Ugly Man Contest time is here!

The Students Voice

Dear CSC’ers!

Your Student council is your voice on campus. Many students have forgotten that. Some never knew it. Thus, we will try to give you an explanation and a description of the council.

The Student council consists of one member elected at large from the student body, the president; two representatives from each class, and one representative from each of the following groups: College Women's Association, Inter-Fraternity council, Inter-Sorority council, women dormitories, men's dormitories and the 500's. All members who serve for two semesters and return to school serve for one more semester. The vice-president, the secretary and the treasurer are elected from the membership.

The Student body has representation, through appointment by the council, on the following standing faculty committees: Student Activity Fund, Social Assembly, Calendar, Public Relations and Athletics.

Cooperation Keyword

For Ugly Man Dance

BACKGROUND: The Phi Sig’s have scheduled the “Ugly Man” dance for November 21. The profits were to go to charity.

The Union board has scheduled a free All-Campus dance for that evening.

The mix-up in scheduling was caused by an oversight and the Phi Sig’s, the Union board and the Union office all share in the blame.

SOLUTION: The officers and members have worked out a solution which can benefit everyone, aid charity and provide the CSC students with a “Night to Remember.”

Both orchestras will be used. The larger, the Castillians of Wisconsin Rapids, will play for dancing in the cafeteria. The smaller, Bob Cheesboro’s combo, will be set up for listening in the snack bar. Both orchestras will be paid for by the Union board using funds allocated for All-Campus functions. Admission to both will be free.

Mr. Amsker, the Union’s director, has provided the final solution — he is giving one-half of that evening’s income from the snack bar to charity. In this way, nobody has to break a contract, charity gains and the students of CSC will be provided with a night such as they have never had.

Cooperation such as this has not happened on such a scale on this campus in a long time, especially with such rapid action, lack of bickering and with an answer which will benefit everybody.

The only fear of the two groups is that the students will not support such an event. Both organizations will handle publicity and decorations in a cooperative effort to have the largest dance ever at CSC. Will you be there?

AKL Announces Plans

On Thursday evening, November 5, AKL held a short business meeting. Mr. Bill Peterson was guest speaker. Mr. Peterson showed slides which he has collected during his work as a frat-ranger. AKL has several tentative plans for the future, which include their annual venison diner, a weekend dance and a week-end croat shoot.

The Student council conducts the elections of class officers. It appoints a Homecoming committee and assumes responsibility for the parking permits, for the parade and assemblies. It services the student and organization needs, provides for publicity and supports cheerleaders. It is responsible for programming and scheduling of student assemblies for special occasions, pep assemblies and awards assemblies. The council is the student body, the prefects and the president of the college confers upon it.

In the last meeting of the council it was decided to have the Homecoming committee remain active throughout the year for next year’s Homecoming. Various groups were given to the council’s representative to take up at the next Colleague meeting. It was brought up that Central State college is unique in that it does not have a school dance or even a schoolcrest. It was felt by the membership that the committee be set up to look into this situation.

If there are any questions, suggestions, or remarks which you would like the council to consider, please write to me, Paul Becht, we would be most happy to receive them if they are signed and placed in the appropriate mailboxes.

Let's Take Pride...

"So close and yet so far away," seems to be the motto of many CSI students about to embark on their first year in Union cafeterias. Mr. John Amacker, the Union director, has been answering questions, more often than he can answer. He said that he is very perturbed about the attitude some students and faculty members have to the Union cafeterias.

First of all, all dorm residents are required to eat in the Union cafeteria. A policy has been in effect for several years and has never been better. Mr. Amacker, the student manager of Union, Mr. John Amacker, director of the Union, Mr. Gilbert Faust, registrar, and lady, were going to the Regional Conference of the American Association of College Unions.

We left Point at 7:30 A.M. after a breakfast at the Union. After stopping at Mrs. Amacker’s home, Elizabeth Ann, in Madison, we resumed travel on the Illinois Turnpike. What a time Mr. Faust had trying to throw the towel around us! He wanted to make sure that everyone had enough to eat. After convincing the attendant who came on the run that he had put money into it. Mr. Faust proceeded to go through the tough all right. We had a picture, but nothing disastrous happened. Luckily, the attendant had managed to get the picture canceled.

The Pointers

The bulletin boards along the second floor corridor provide the visitor with an interesting, informative and amusing outlook on school life. You don’t have to be a student to enjoy the others in both beauty and simplicity, and that one is the Plymouth basement. The room is always been superb — in lighting, detail, focus, subject and clarity. It appears that — become perfect only with knowledge and practice. Also, the Plymouth basement contains a masterpiece of many Mona Lisa’s.

Would you like some reason to stay in?? Listen to “Music Beyond the Stars” on WPHI.” WPHI, known as the student radio station of Wisconsin, is a perfect match, because the music is heavenly!

What say we throw in a little bit of facts about Wisconsin State, as it is true that “one of the worst songs of the world is that of being sorry. If you can throw anything bad that it couldn’t be worse?” Who claims the “one of the worst songs of the world?”

We will arrive in Madison at 8:30 P.M. just in time to register and freshen up for the banquet. At the banquet we came into contact with the 200 other delegates of the University of Wisconsin, Wisconsin University of Wisconsin and River Falls also were represented.

One of the causes of great confusion was the omission of the white glove at the Wisconsin state college was located. Therefore, Mr. Faust closed the Wisconsin State College, Delegates from Indiana and Illinois were represented. There could possibly be nine separate foods in this entire banquet.

The Purdue Men’s Glee club entertained us after the banquet. The band is always an over and certainly displayed its versatility and skill in the preparation of their individual recording stars. The members of the band impressed me the most when they were dressed in white ties and tails and white gloves. The men also arrived early and got off the stage in “true Purdue fashion.”

After the address by Mr. Stewart, conductor of Purdue University, Mr. Faust proposed a discussion in the Castillians, a 4 piece combo from Milwaukee. This is a most delightful group. We can put it use here at the games and tournaments. I have no chance to discuss administrative problems. The assistant was amazing that even though they were not a tremendous difference in the size of the band one in front. Any assistant officers still have problems which are very similar.

A favorite was a jazz concert with Purdue’s own “Salty Dog” and a midnight snack offered. We can see when a big university extreme remains, it does it to its utmost!

"Devil's Disciple" is a story about the struggle the American colonists faced when fighting for their independence against Britain.

John F. Fitzgerald, movie critic has this to say: "You'd think you could use a good story... But you can't." He adds, "It's a tale about a man who is more interested in making a buck than he is in fighting for his country."

"Devil's Disciple" is a play by Terence Rattigan, author of "The Winslow Boy." It was first produced in London in 1941 and later adapted for the screen by the same name.

On Monday, John F. Fitzgerald, movie critic will be back with his next movie review. We hope you enjoyed this one!"

"Neither rain nor snow nor sleet nor hail shall deter our footsteps from these paths" is the creed of the U.S. post office. With the addition of "... nor broken speedometer cable," this was also the slogan of the Coeds as they discussed with their faculty adviser in reaching the Inter-Collegiate Association Women Student's convention which was held in Milwaukee on October 23 and 24.

Mary Jane Martinson, Joan Doyle, Marilyn Spear and Miss Marjorie Schefelhuff, representing the local CWA, were the only 250 delegates from Wisconsin universities attending the convention at the University of Wisconsin Milwaukee and Milwaukee-Downer college.

People Never Learn

By Lloyd Merrins

Recently our country laid to rest one of the finest men of the civil service -- Bill Kuse.

General Marshall was everything a man of his training shouldn't have been. He became General of the Army, but never attended West Point. He became Secretary of State at Virginia Military Institute.

Marshall was a man of wide knowledge, a soldier and received what so few diplomats have ever received, the highest award for promoting peace -- the Nobel prize. Marshall received the award in 1953 for the Marshall plan.

Marshall’s worst sin against being Secretary of State, of course, shouldn't have been when he became Secretary of State, but when he stood up for peace and the rule he should have attended an "Ivy League College" where he could have received an education which would have been more like his training. Many lawyers aren't supposed to have any diploma.

Marshall was a man who suffered from many disappointments.

But, like most men of his caliber, he stood straighter and grew in spite of them. One of these failures was eratation of the streams occurs. Michigan.

Note Progress on Gym Plant

By Bernard B. Coulthurst

The physical education building project, which is — and will be supervised about four times daily, but nobody knows it.

It started in the early spring of 1959 when the survey students of Mathematics 120 did a profile survey of the building site and Moses Creek, the unpredictable little monstert located in the same area. This supervisor (sidewalk type) has been observing the construction everyday — four times a day, six days a week. He re-calls walking in the muddy bot to of the building site, carrying a Philadephia-Rod in one hand and signaling with the other. They were determining the elevations of differ-ent important points. A few weeks later, the engineers came into the area; then the excavators moved in; and finally, the construction crew entered the picture. Slowly, the shape of the new building took place.

The gymnastics is the major attraction this week. Most of the crew works on this complicated job as each steel girder is set into place to form the dome.

What will happen next week? He doesn’t really know, but if he is sure it will be interesting. Why don’t you walk or drive past the new physical education building occasionally and see a “monument grow.” I enjoy it and I am positive you will too.

Stage Comments

By Jim Haughey

On Tuesday and Wednesday, November 10 and 11, Alpha Psi Omega presented “The Diary of Anne Frank” by Francis Good- rich and Albert Hackett.

The curtain opens and Jack McKenzie (played by Mark bank enter the rooms where he had spent nearly two years and his mother flooded his mind as he looked solemnly, played. I came to the story begins. Jack did a very apt portrayal of Mr. Frank.

Pat Jones did an extremely terrific portrayal of the young girl, Anne Frank. Her reactions were real and the audience truly seemed to appreciate her great ability. Her part was one of many emotions and each was done well. Hats off to Pat for a job well done.

Angela Zink as Mrs. Van Daan did some fine acting in her por- trayal of a nagging woman. The coat scene was well done as were her other emotion scenes.

Pat Kaminski as Mr. Frank seemed to carry her part very well. The mother-daughter scene and the scene when a man gets away with her were really good. Her nose was displayed with much emotion.

There was some breaking of character in this play, and this sometimes spoiled the effect altogether, but throughout the play the characters held the in- terest of the audience. The scenes when Anne started talk- ing before curtain time was pulled, it was somewhat difficult to hear the characters. Unfortunately, the curtains were pulled a little too slowly.

The set construction was well done by Dave Roush and his men. They worked many long hours building the set, but the audience could not have been more pleased. The set was in three levels above the stage and below the first floor. It gets to be a little embarrassing if one gets her- self sprawled out and finds herself looking at the feet of members of the opposite sex.

For short-calls, most of the girls do stand up. But for those others, one surely can get into some contorted positions.

Another thing which is interest- ing to look at is the facial ex- pression of the girl at the phone. The tone of her voice is im- portant, too, in finding out who is at the other end of the line. A smile and a soft, sultry voice usually mean that there’s a male at the other end. This could also mean that she has just answered the phone.

When's a girl on the line the voice drops back to normal. You can always tell when a girl is calling because you can hear the person talk. Soft tone is reserved for men only.

There are many problems in- volved with using the phones in the dorm.

Why is it that when you’re on first floor, checking out, you get a phone call on third floor? This gets to be disgusting when you trot up there and find that it’s only some girl wanting your Eng-ish assignment.

Why, too, don’t girls near the phone answer it after it rings ten times? As soon as it rings fourteen, someone from the other end of the bell will answer it!

Another problem is that of privacy. Where can one tag that phone that’s on the wall when the wants to talk to that special person? No matter how soft and sultry her voice is, there’s some woman nearby who wants the phone not after she’s done.

It has been discovered that the second floor extension almost reaches the pay phone booth and the first floor extensions almost reach the fire escape. What is needed in these places is a longer extension cord. But for those girls on third, they’ll have to practice talking “softer and softer.”

The long arm of progress.

Attention Men! At Last

Coed Secrets Exposed

Isn’t it strange that the most popular position for talking on the phone is that of lying on the floor? No doubt, most of the girls in the dorm who use this position miss the car- pets that they had at home. It gets to be quite cold on the dorm floors.

It’s been noticed that the girls on second and third seem to get more comfortable A the phones than those girls on the bottom floor.

It gets to be a little embarrassing if one gets herself sprawled out and finds herself looking at the feet of members of the opposite sex.

For short-calls, most of the girls do stand up. But for those others, one surely can get into some contorted positions.

REVÉILLE

What's new for 1960 besides clothes and bicycles? The 550's. They have formed a new policy, program and approach in the planning, trying not only to cater to a large number of vets in their hands and activities, but also are trying to promote their good will on the campus. New moves are being made in the meetings, trying to cut down on the boring business end, and creating better programs and fun for all who attend. A rundown of our last meeting follows which we hope will acquaint others at CWG with what we do.

The meeting started with a "Gung Ho" patriotic note of unison singing. First branches of the services present were honored. A tear would have been brought to the eye of an innocent bystander when the ex-diggers let out with "The Marines Keep Rolling Along" in B-4. Not to be outdone, the ex-servicemen sang "Anchors Away" in C-3 minor. From the bottom of their hearts, the ex-flyboys sent forth the musical strains of "Up in the Air, Junior Birdman," Up in the Air, Upsidedown" in F with a raised fifth. Last but not least, the ex-servicemen standing attention in a well disciplined military manner, sang "The Moron Corps Hymn" in just a measure. These were all sung in unison and to a stone deaf individual this was a most delightful free concert!

After the chorus was finished the more serious business was started. First of all the usual reports were presented and accepted.

Then the old business was taken up. A great round of applause was given by the men when they were told that we officially were to receive fifteen dollars for winning the humorous flag division at the Homecoming festivities. Harley Lichtenthaller, one of our devoted members; was awarded life-time membership for as long as he lasts in school, for service above and beyond the call of duty. He had gone out of his way to lose his extension cord valued at six dollars (but which had depreciated in value to 96 cents) while constructing the Homecoming float.

This is the first time in the history of the 550's that such an honor was bestowed on any man.

Also brought up during the old business was that of the 550's sweatshirts. The question was raised whether we should buy new ones or just wash the old ones. One of the married men was kind enough to volunteer his wife's services so that business was quickly settled.

Also brought up was the misuse of cards from the 550 bulletin board. They aren't put up there for scratch pads. Please use them for ads and rides only. Further abuse will result in drastic action.

After the old business was settled, the new business was discussed. A Thanksgiving party was decided on for November 17. The program committee is lining up slides of pictures taken in travelers around the world so any vets who had the misfortune of being stationed "state-side" can see how good they had it. They also decided to have refreshments at the meeting. Please refer to the 550 bulletin board for further information on this issue. Like all good things, the business meeting finally came to an end.

Due to a mixup in schedules a program which had been planned had to be postponed to a later date.

The meeting was adjourned and "ugly items" topped the refreshments. The 550's have changed from slumbering coconut milk. In keeping with our new policy, we believe it will be better health, better wealth, better grades. That is why the ex-graduates wake up and refreshed the "morning after."
