Klobukowski Wins Amateur Movie-Maker Award

Larry Klobukowski, an amateur movie maker living in Pray-Slims Hall, left Stevens Point on Nov. 8 for Washington D.C. to receive an international movie-maker award presented by the Council on International Non-Theatrical Events (CINE). He received the award for his picture, "For He Shall Conquer," a 97-minute, colored film. It is a silent movie with mood-music on tape. "For He Shall Conquer" is the story of a crippled boy taunted by boys of his own age because of his physical disability. This particular movie was chosen as one of the top amateur films in the world. It also won the gold eagle medal in the international competition for its production. Larry Klobukowski was named school club member not as self-conscious as the black sheep of school where he began his department; Another one that he has made is "Zip-Tang," the story of two inventors who meet in the park to challenge each other in a race. They drive along the grass on NOTHING! This one has been produced in a way that gives the effect of a living cartoon.

Larry raises money for this hobby by putting on programs at various places. If any of you are interested in seeing these pictures, you are welcome to present them at some meeting, or to some organization with which you are involved.

Snuffy Wins "Ugly Man"

Saturday, Nov. 14, 1964 was the date of the "Ugly Man" dance. The winner of the 1964 contest was "Snuffy," the Sissel's entry in the event. The Ugly Men raised $600 for the United Fund.

Williams To Present Dickens

Emlyn Williams, one of the English-speaking world's most distinguished actors will appear in his celebrated role as Charles Dickens, Nov. 20, 8 p.m. in the University fieldhouse.

Costumed as Dickens, Williams will present nine selections from the works of Dickens. In adapting freely but carefully, Mr. Williams has thought it only fair to assume that his audience knows nothing of the books, or have forgotten all they once knew. He felt that if through his treatment of the text, he could make the performance acceptable to such audiences, then there was a chance of coaxing people to lift down from their shelves what they had possibly thought of as a ponderous classic, and to turn its pages as if for the first time, with the feeling that they were about to explore a wonderful new world.

Excerpts from the works of Dickens will include: "Mowing in Society," "Paul," "Mr. Bob Sawyer Gets a Bachelor Party," "The Black Veil," "Mr. Chops," "Once Upon a Time" "Moving Higher in Society," "The Fancy Ball," and "A Bedtime Story for a Good Child" complete the conditions. All of the selections are excerpts from some of Dickens not as famous, as well as his lesser-known works, and range from riotous humor, as in "A Bedtime Story for Good Children," to spine-tingling drama in "A Call Upon a Strange Man."

Williams, who is currently starring on Broadway as Pope Pius XII in the controversial play "The Deputy," is nearly as famous as actor, playwright and songwriter as he is as an actor. His autobiography, "George," was a best-seller last season, and his plays "The Corn is Green" and "Night Must Fall" have been produced on both sides of the Atlantic, and in their film versions.

Last season Williams appeared on Broadway as Sir Thomas More in "A Man for All Seasons." In England he played Richard III at the Old Vic, led the Stratford company as Iago and Shylock, and created the role of Sir Robert Morton in Rattigan's "The Third Man."

Born in Wales in 1905, the son of a village innkeeper, Emlyn Williams today is equally renowned as actor, playwright and director. While he is on tour, two of Williams' works will be seen on the London stage: his adaptation of Henry James' "The Master Builder," the latter at the National Theatre.

Jr. Class Election

A special election will be held Thursday, Nov. 19, to fill the recently vacated position of Junior Class Representative to the Student Council. Polls will be set up in the Snack Bar area of the University Center from 9:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M.

The two candidates running for the office of Junior Class Representative are Mike Worman, the son of a village innkeeper, Emlyn Williams today is equally renowned as actor, playwright and director. While he is on tour, two of Williams' works will be seen on the London stage: his adaptation of Henry James' "The Master Builder," the latter at the National Theatre.
On The Gang

Well, gang, spirited group that you are, set yourselves down and read this:

Remember the special election the Student Council held in Oct. to fill vacant posts? Here's the way it went: The Council voted on two sophomore representatives -- a total of two volunteered; only one junior representative was needed -- only one nominated himself. And the seniors, dynamic and in charge, had eight candidates. So you see, only one representative naturally nominated only one.

More to come, folks. It seems that the seniors did lead the Juniors and Sophomores; they had a whopping 14.5% of the total which is vote turn-out only they elected a write-in. Next in this neck-and-neck race to pull votes, the sophomore class turned out in force, 11.5% to elect both of the volunteers. But the junior class was not far behind, NO siree! Why 8.1% of these super loyal students pulled out their I.D.'s and voted --

Juniors unite! It seems that fellow you gave your mandate to didn't come through. Don't you see what this means? They're election to replace him, you have a chance to topple the senior's percentage crown. How about an unheard of 15%?

Back to facts:

I overcame my fear of large numbers and figured out the average voting percentage of students in the top three classes: Junior, Senior, Sophomore. It comes to a glorious 11.5%. And in 10 or 11 years when you all turn 21 I want to see that same spirit in the national and state elections.

On the curb caravans came bearing three gifts to child: Pictures to delight; Sounds to awake, and last and most not-forgetful; Faces to open and shut heart.

We sat on the corner curb, watching the fauna of the world tramp by. If it is a sight to see smoke and sunburst valley belch from dryness then on the corner, with the foliage too, stalked belching valleys.

If child on a curve ears counting with red, yellow, blue, and black some mist as dawn fog when child asleep now night steps on sidewalks cement promises a sight of mornings to reward, so night follows morning and man child and disease germ and on the corner long past, blocks and blocks, we sit with gifts three wondering of the giver.

DOE TO A TREE

I think that I shall never see
A tree as lovely as a tree
A welcome sight, a tree to see,
Because no matter where I'll be
A tree will cling to me! And I shall walk unto that tree.
For I'm a dog — yes, can't you see?
I find relief, beneath a tree.

DON'T LET ON

Good qualities you've got.
But don't let on how good you are,
Cause then you're really not.

NOV. 22, 1943

The second "shot heard 'round the world" Rang out.
Like glass, a country shattered.
Strength was washed down;
And hope was blackened.
Youth paused to reflect.
No longer was a person
An individual.
He was merely a piece of a broken country.
And the people learned: There is always Something more important than that which Seems important.
A woman walked erect,
And slowly her valour molded together
The broken glass.
Without a spoken word,
With only silent courage.
Strength was thickened,
Hope was brightened.
Faces turned upward;
Light broke through the clouds
And shine upon the tear-soaked earth.
And the people learned: Strength is revived by Strength itself.

The Halibut

Dear Editor, and to whom it may concern:

In answer to your question, "Why do the clocks run in Alaska Center," it is probably for the same reason that those in the kennel are never right. Or for the same reason that a student drags himself out of bed at 1:35, races madly to a 1:45, and at 1:55 curses a teacher who never showed up. Or perhaps because we carry our raincoats and umbrellas when it is dark and cloudy in the morning, and carry them right back again that hot and sunny afternoon; and forget them on the bright sunny mornings when we check ourselves stranded in a downpour. In other words, it's just for the halibut.

The Case of the College Exam

Examinations are a necessary part of life, along with football, teacher's conventions and TGIF. Or so most professors think.

Nowhere on this earth does there exist a professor who has stood before a class of thirty bright-eyed, ruddy-cheeked college students and said: "The intelligence level of this group is so obviously superior that I refuse to waste your time and mine by giving an exam. I can tell by the many eager questions, intelligent discussions and after-class confabs that you have thoroughly grasped this material!"

Instead, at periodic intervals (usually right before or after a holiday, or on a day when you have two other exams), an instructor will write a fully into class and throw all of his blue exam books like confetti. "Take two," he urges ominously. "You laugh merrily and break out into a cold sweat, wondering if you can fill half of one.

And of course there are all sorts of exams. Open book exams are taken by the very broad-minded profs who think they're giving you a break. Instead of simply thinking the question through, you spend the hour paginating furiously through the book, looking for answers which you discover are not systematically naturalized. You walk out of class vowing to kick the text under your seat next time.

Objective tests are regarded with scorn by college professors. Anyone can play multiple-guess, they say. Little do they realize that all mind go haywire when confronted by a fanned fill-in-the-bling, matching, or circle a, b, or c questions. But at least you have a sporting chance with this type of exam.

The standard college exam is the essay test. Teachers hate to wade through them, students get stuck writing them, and no matter how much your instructors are finicky; they want just the facts and no more. Others want a refined form of regurgitation, the sum total of your knowledge gleaned from the class so far. Others simply look for key phrases and words, assuming you got the general drift of the subject. And if being able to read your exam gives you points with some profs.

Regardless of the type, one thing is certain: exams are here to stay.

Point of View

by George Smallen

Now that the smoke of the political campaign has cleared, the open letters have been tossed into the stuff file, and the JSONObject in the ad quieti. The time has come, the walrus said, . . . to take a look at ourselves, or to change an attitude.

I believe the main reason why our school is not so outstanding in the intellectual academic world is because of the belief of some professors and many students that the situation is not good enough. I've heard professors talk about the culturally deprived student body and the students talk about the many poor professors. To both of these professors this is not diluted and as such these students that think the level is not high enough, I can only say that the best probable solution is to bring our students up to that level.

But let it not be like this. Let us discuss this thing and bring the more eager students in and see if we can interest them.

I believe that the average student has to work harder to succeed in school. The average student has to work harder to succeed in school. And he who is the extra that we're talking about is the one who is going to do the work. And the extra that we're talking about is the one who is going to do the work.

And to the sororities and the fraternities. If you think the independent student has to rely on your criticisms, you are better off, because, sisters and brothers, any male can wear a suit and tie on Tuesday, and I do believe that blue jumpers and white shirts are a sight a quiet adieu.

If we don't appreciate genius.
We ought to be on the job in the office.
If we don't print contributions,
We don't appreciate genius.
And if we don't print them, the paper is filled with junk.

If we edit our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
If we don't read our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
We print our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
If we don't appreciate genius, we don't appreciate genius.

-We print our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
If we don't print our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
We print our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
If we don't appreciate genius, we don't appreciate genius.

Now, like as not, we are stuck with this type of exam.

And if we do print them, the paper is filled with junk.

If we edit our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
If we don't read our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
We print our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
If we don't appreciate genius, we don't appreciate genius.

Wretched

Getting out this wretched newspaper is no picnic.
If we print jokes, people say we are silly.
If we don't we say we are too serious.
If we stick close to the office all day,
We ought to be around hunting material.
If we go out and try to hustle,
We ought to be on the job in the office.
If we don't print contributions,
We don't appreciate genius.
And if we don't print them, the paper is filled with junk.
If we edit our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
If we don't read our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
We print our fellow student's writing, we are too critical;
If we don't appreciate genius, we don't appreciate genius.

Attention!!

Due to Thanksgiving vaca tion there will be no EDITOR next week. November 25. The next issue will come out on December 2. THE POINTER staff would like to wish you a happy Thanksgiving.

—Sue Stanko
by Jan Rasmussen

Grey clouds blanket the sky and chill winds swirl around brown, brittle leaves. Shocks of corn stand in vibrant orange, sunflowers and multicolored gourds in the fields. The calendar says that it's November and the filled corn cribs say that it's the completion of harvest. People say that it's Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving is the oldest of our national holidays, beginning with the first full year that the Pilgrims spent in North America. Pilgrim history and turkey and pumpkin pies are so much a part of the American tradition that it is difficult to realize that the holiday is not a part of America but also in the Old World and in the early world.

The people living in the ancient settlements surrounding the field were known today, all thanks to them, who the Christians, or for the bounty harvests. Roman Mythology often mentions festivals held in honor of Ceres, goddess of the grain, and Greek mythology is famous for the festival in honor of Demeter, goddess of the harvest.

Moving past many centuries and past the coming of Christianity one sees the Old World's first celebrations, too. In Eastern Europe the reaper who cut the last load of straw and stored the load was accompanied from the field to their home by the reapers and their friends who sang the harvest song. Afterwards the Harvest Home supper was held as the tables were covered with the fruits of their work.

The Pilgrims undoubtedly brought memories of such English Harvest Home celebrations with them when they traveled to New England a year after they had passed and a bountiful harvest had been stored away, the Pilgrims proclaimed the first holiday which they observed in their new home.

Starvation no longer plagued them, and they were at peace with the Indians, who welcomed them with open arms and food, but the government set aside one day anyway to give thanks for the few blessings they did have. Thus, the true spirit of Thanksgiving was born.

From colonial days till the 1800's Thanksgiving was not an official holiday. The Pilgrims who, as mentioned before, originated Thanksgiving in this country, felt that holidays and religious observances were ways to bring the actions of the day into the past. They objected to fixed calendar dates and regarded such calendar dates in honor of Ceres and Demeter.

Thus, it was not until just a few hundred years ago that Thanksgiving became an annual, nation-wide event.

On September 25, 1789 at the suggestion of the newly formed First National Thanksgiving day to be held on Thursday, November 26.

Later presidents viewed this custom with indifference or even complete disregard. Jefferson declared that "moral practices" and many other "sentiments" did not interfere with the separation of church and state.

Nevertheless, local, state and private days of Thanksgiving continued to be held in the following years; this established a strong tradition which could be ignored or forgotten.

Sentiment was continually growing stronger towards making Thanksgiving an annual holiday on which Americans of all faiths could join in offering thanks to their Creator for their homes, their country and other blessings.

The Flapper Age was born by Sarah Joseph Hale, who, after 17 years of unfruitful work, paid a personal visit to (then) President Lincoln and put before him a proclamation, the first such since George Washington's, Lincoln set aside the 4th Thursday of November as a legal annual holiday on which to "express gratitude to the Deity with sincere hearts and voices of thanksgiving for the blessings of our country and for the joy of human beings in coming together for the purpose of asking and giving this country's blessings on all." Probably Thanksgiving has changed the least in its intention and in its manner of celebration than any other of our holidays. The 400 founders of America had never heard of most of the things we do now at Christmas or Easter, but Thanksgiving is still very much of what the Pilgrims Old World inhabitants, and ancient men have made it; a giving of thanks for Divine bounty together with a practical demonstration of that bounty.
How's Your Knowledge Of Architecture

Small businessman, company executive, purchasing agent, home owner, or you might be, you will someday be able to save yourself real money by improving your knowledge of architecture. This 10-minute quiz will help.

First, a tip on the skyline.

The architects of the "Chicago school," in the 1880s developed a new type of construction — the flat roof, the curtain wall, and the "fireproof" building. Building with massive supporting walls became a thing of the past, as leading Chicago architects like Jenney and Sullivan built their structures on a basic framework of steel. Peggy McNally To Visit University

Miss Peggy McNally, a Peace Corps Volunteer who has returned from the Philippines, will visit our campus on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Dec. 3 and 4.

During her college summers Peggy worked as a tour guide in Denver. Four years later her interest changed considerably — she was playing the tourist herself in Hong Kong, Taiwan and Japan, having just completed a two-year teaching assignment as a Peace Corps Volunteer in the Philippines.

Peggy graduated from Loretto Heights College in Denver in 1960 with a major in English and minors in Drama and Education. She then taught for one year at a private school in San Jose, Cosmopolitan pageant and directed six one-act plays, including one written by one of her literature students. She helped to coach the debating team and assisted in training speakers for participation in inter-collegiate competition. She worked on the college newspaper at the Cebu Normal College in an advisory capacity. Peggy also started a rental library in her home for the use of her students, using books and magazines supplied by the Peace Corps, as well as her own collection.

Peggy has this to say about her term in the Philippines: "There were moments of deep satisfaction, unlike any I have ever known. There were also moments of frustration and loneliness. I will always feel a deep love for the Philippines and the Filipinos. The Peace Corps experience itself is intense — it is a period of constant discovery about yourself and others. I almost envy those who are just beginning to explore it."

"One wonders if the modern dances of youth, in which they get through gyrations separately and without hardly ever looking at the partner, are not an indication of the terrible loneliness that poses the modern soul in which each one is alone together."

The Love of Love by Bishop Fulton J. Sheen

UC Discuss Problems

Some of the more pertinent subjects discussed and carried up at the United Council meeting held recently at Oakhurst were:

Motion to present to the President of the Wisconsin State Association of the University of Wisconsin and the Joint Finance Committee, a plea for additional financial assistance to Wisconsin State University students.

A motion to relieve the 3% sales tax on meal tickets, the money to possibly be used for a scholarship fund.

Motion to the Board of Regents to study the problem of married couples housing.

If you have strong feelings or are just concerned about any of the above mentioned motions or any other problem you feel that the United Council could help you or your school with, express your views to any council member or come to the next United Council meeting to be held at Stevens Point, and express your views yourself. Active participation is the quickest means to a final answer.

Those attending the United Council meetings from Stevens Point were Judy Christensen, secretary of the United Council, Steve Hansen, Ellen Brusk, Barb Foxe, Nobby Gould, DuWayne Derickson, Carla Schultz, Pat Miller, Karen Jepsen, Caroline Sopa and John Priss.

PROPS TRAVEL

One night each week professors from the nine Wisconsin State Universities teach extension classes in 50 communities throughout the state.

The 75 WSU faculty members drive a total of some 4,800 miles a week to teach the evening classes. Nearly all of their 1,352 students are classroom teachers from elementary schools and high schools in the area.

The main purpose of the program, explains Eugene R. McPhee, Director of State Universities, is to enable classroom teachers to continue university studies in their special fields during the school year. Fees cover the cost of the program.

WSU-Stevens Point sends professors out each Tuesday night to teach 18 classes, including mathematics at Adams, Antigo, Clintonville, Medford and Wisconsin Rapids; history at Medford and Rhinelander and art at Merrill, Neillsville and Shawano.

In addition to the off-campus courses, similar classes for teachers are conducted on the State University campuses at night for 442 students and on Saturday mornings for 1,061.

Wisconsin Administrative Code WCD 10.30 requires that, “each person who has killed a deer or bear during the open season for hunting such animals with guns shall enter such results with his name and deer tag attached as required by subsection 29.04 (1). Wisconsin Statutes, or such bear to an authorized registration station or an authorized registration station or abon quarterly registration department employ within the area included within the open season zone of quota area in which such deer or bear was killed including cities or villages adjoining such areas and in which an official deer registration station located in the last 5-900 p.m. of the first day following the close of such season.”

Rugby Anyone?

Rugby is a game similar to football that originated in 1883 at the famous English school, Rugby. It seems that a football player, William Webb Willis, became dismayed when his attempts to kick the ball failed. In those days the ball was made of leather, and it was quite difficult to place the ball on the ground for extra points. Willis decided to try the idea out on a school friend, and the two boys soon invented the game of rugby.

Mike Jeffries, a senior living at 921 Main, has killed his deer for the season. Mike, a biology-conservation major, shot the deer approximately 1 1/2 miles north of the North Campus on Nov. 9. The deer had six points, weighed 140 pounds dressed. He reports having seen several deer in this area.

Cage Team Features 9 Lettermen

The Stevens Point State University 1964-1965 basketball team will go into its first basketball game, Tuesday, Nov. 24, against Winona, with nine returning letter winners. Coach Robert Krueger will lead a squad of seven seniors, six sophomores, and thirteen freshmen.

The returning lettermen are Pat Dan, Howard Oaks, Grant White, Bill Borcherdt, Bill Weisenberg, Mike Fortune Doug Johnson, Jerry Lewetlari and Wes Zarger. Coach Krueger expects the going to be rough in the whole conference this year, as each school has many returning lettermen and there are also some transfers to the varsity team that tend to strengthen their team.

Speaking Of Sports
by Duane Clark

Undoubtedly when you were in high school you heard the familiar chant, "1 ... 2 ... 3: Kill the referee! 1 ... 2 ... 3: Kill the other one!"

The officials of a basketball game, as do the officials of a football game, have already pointed out in a previous column, have more to do than just trot their whistles and call violations.

The officials include a referee and an umpire, who are assisted by two timers and two scorers. However, only one scorer and one timer need to be used if they are acceptable to the referee.

The referee inspects and approves all equipment, including the court, baskets, ball, backboards and rings and scorers' signals. He designates the official time piece and its operator. No player can wear equipment that in the referee's judgment is dangerous to other players. He is responsible for notifying each captain three minutes before each half is to begin.

The referee tosses the ball at center court to start the game. He decides whether a field goal (basket) will count if there is a disagreement between officials. He has the power to forfeit a game, on matters upon which the timers and scorers disagree. At the end of each half he checks and approves the score. When he appeals the score at the end of a game the jurisdiction he holds during the game is ended. The officials penalize unsportsmanlike conduct by any player, coach, substitute, team attendant, or officer. If flagrantly takes place, the officials penalize by removing any offending player from the game. The same goes for any anthropoid or follower. Any player committing his fifth personal foul is also removed from the game.

There are a few of the more important duties of the men in the black-and-white striped shirts. The rest of their many duties can be found in the basketball rules book set up by the National Basketball Committee of the United States and Canada.

W. R. A. Activities

Another sports note which has shaken up many people involved in the world of baseball was the sudden death of Fred Hutchinson, former manager of the Cincinnati Reds, whose baseball career was ended abruptly by chest cancer only last week.

As a manager, Hutchinson was sometimes rough and tough, sometimes cool and patient. After losing a game he believed he should have won, he would often stride into his office, slam the door and start throwing the furniture around. Sometimes windows were broken.

When the storm broke, he would shower, shave, dress and step out calm and smiling. Because he never exposed anyone to public embarrassment, all his players liked him as did the other people who knew and worked with him.

Attention Men

The United States Marine Corps is seeking qualified college seniors and graduates for the officer candidate course which convenes in March.

Applications are still being accepted for the program which leads to a marine commission after completion of a ten-week training period at Quanico, Virginia. Applicants must be physically qualified and possess leadership potential.

After pinned on the bars of a second lieutenant, the officer commands his three years of active duty by attending the Marine Corps basic school for lieutenants. He then is assigned to one of the marine units stationed throughout the world.

Highly qualified applicants may become marine aviators by attending an 18-month flight training program at Pensacola, Florida.

Marine Corps officer selection places emphasis on leadership potential and motivation. Further information may be obtained from the local marine recruiter or the Marine Officer Selection Office, Room 402, Enterprise Building, 219 West Michigan St., Milwaukee.
