Why No Underclass Annual Pix?

It has been brought to my attention that there will be no social this year. One of the few outstanding winter social events is the Annual Pix of the Underclass. Not only does the Underclass have the most Underclass but the rest of the Underclass is equally Underclass. For those who are not familiar with our Underclass traditions, the Underclass is a unique breed of people who have no idea what they are doing and are always causing trouble. They are known for their unique style of dress and their ability to make the most out of the simplest situation. For those of you who are familiar with the Underclass, you know that they are always up to something and are always the life of the party.

education and critical thinking

Jeffrey B. Bruce, 22, Wesleyan, in political science.

If I could change one thing on this campus, I would change the climate of the student body. I feel that students here are too passive and that they do not take enough responsibility for their own education. There are many excellent professors here, but many of the students are not taking advantage of their opportunities. Many of our students feel that education ends the minute they graduate. But education is a continuous process that goes on throughout our lives and is of utmost importance even after college. Developing critical thinking skills and the ability to think independently are important skills that we will all have to use throughout our lives. The atmosphere here is not conducive to developing these skills. I think that we need to change the climate of the student body so that they are more active in their education and take more responsibility for their own learning.

Standardized teacher evaluation form

Don Gebbeler, 22, philosophy, in English.

I feel that the Student Senate has neglected its responsibility to the students. The Senate's committee on instructional improvements should and could set up a standardized teacher evaluation form. This form could be used by all students (grades 2-11) in evaluating their courses and instructors. This would give the students a voice and help them to take an active role in improving their education. In addition, students who are going to take the course an opportunity to see how other students rate each instructor can be beneficial. In this way, the students can have a say in the classroom and be more active in their education.

Hero of the Week

Arizona Hannah, 22, biology education, in physics.

During my four years at WSU-SP, the most has been my overall experience of development. If I could change one thing on this campus, it would be education and critical thinking. I am excited about the possibility of education and critical thinking being encouraged and being valued, not just recognized, which is currently the case. As a student, it is important to be encouraged and rewarded for these skills. The current climate of the student body is not conducive to these skills. I think that more active involvement in education and being encouraged for these skills would be beneficial to the overall experience of the student.
