Theater Will Present
'Love's Labor's Lost'

A comedy by William Shakespeare, which has entertained students for centuries, will be presented Dec. 10 at the Wisconsin State University Theatre. 'Love’s Labor’s Lost' will be directed by Thomas H. Cullinan, with Tom Weisfeld working as assistant director. Curtain time will be 8 p.m., with the exercise given to each of the four leading roles to be followed by a reception on the stage in the intermission.

Jr. Drama Club will present two early drama productions, with a bow to the talents of the high school students of area communities. On the stage of the Stevens Point Theatre will be presented "Aladdin," a fairy tale by James Mertz, and "A School Boy's Dream," an adaptation of the Shakespeare, by E. C. Holt. Both presentations will have their curtain time at 8 p.m., with an exercise following the second act of each play.

Student Senate Will Hold Debate

"Wisconsin State University" will be the subject of a debate on Dec. 7, at 7:30 p.m., in the Union Ballroom. Student Senator Bill Badger will be the debater for the affirmative side, and James W. F. H. will represent the negative side. The event will be open to the public.

"The Pointer" Vll, Vol. XI

"The Pointer" will publish its final issue of the school year on Dec. 20, and the annual "Year Book" will be issued as soon as possible after that date.

Mr. Toby Fulwiler
Dear Steve Meyer,

I understand your concern and appreciate your feedback. It is important for all students to adhere to the university's conduct code to maintain a safe and respectful environment. I have spoken with Mr. Fulwiler and he has expressed his regret for his actions. While I hold him accountable, I also recognize the importance of education and growth. Let's work together to ensure that such incidents do not recur.

Sincerely,

University President
"Can a letter grade . . . be accurate?"

Ed Newton===============

I definitely would favor a pass/fail system over our present system of grade making. I feel that a letter grade system is somewhat misleading. To achieve an "A" in a course requires much more effort in the form of study than to achieve an "F." This might be acceptable if the letter system was an accurate reflecting mechanism of the student's ability, but this is not always the case. How can this possibly be true when there are so many inanimate objects that receive letter grades for their performance?

For a specific grade, results in many students are accurate, understanding of the facts is another matter. At times, a student will have a thorough understanding of the subject matter without necessarily earning a good grade. At other times, a student earns a good grade without necessarily understanding the material at all. A student may perform well on tests and turn in excellent written work without necessarily understanding the situations those he is accuracy in answering a test question.

In the light of these factors, an individual's entire performance may easily be measured in terms of his letter grade.

"prepares one for the competitive capitalist society"

Perry Allen==============

I feel the grading system, as we know it, is a hindrance to success in the capitalist society. I feel that it would not be unusual to find that without any grade one's ability could be measured to a greater extent. Students, not students are not students, but rather children who must be taught and trained. This is left in the hands of the teachers who try to further the students' education that by the time they are able to understand the material they are not able to understand anything.

Of course, it is also clear that the system we have for grading must be enormous if the competitive capitalist society is to continue. Therefore, we must be prepared to make sure that the students are not students, but rather children who must be trained. This is done in the hands of the teachers who try to further the students' education. If the students are not students, but rather children who must be trained, then the system we have for grading must be enormous if the competitive capitalist society is to continue. Therefore, we must be prepared to make sure that the students are not students, but rather children who must be trained. This is done in the hands of the teachers who try to further the students' education.

If the system is the purpose of this university to train and regiment students to be workers and professionals, there is no doubt that there should be a pass/fail system of grading. If the purpose of the university is to educate, then a pass/fail system might also be instituted which would serve that end.
Married Students Find Social Life Restricted

(Ll N S L A R D)

Last week the married students at Illinois State University, 100 miles southwest of Bloomington, were notified that the social life of the campus has been restricted and that the university has invoked a no-women-in-lake regulation.

The regulation, which limits the social activities of married students to those that take place in the student center, was announced by the university administration as a precautionary measure to prevent the spread of a virus that is believed to be responsible for a number of cases of respiratory illness that have occurred on campus.

The administration has also cited concerns about the potential for overcrowding and the risk of spreading diseases among the student population as reasons for implementing the new policy.

The regulation applies to all married students on campus, regardless of their gender, and will remain in effect until further notice.

Students have expressed mixed reactions to the new rule, with some seeing it as a necessary precaution and others feeling that it imposes unnecessary restrictions on their social lives.

Steele Found To Be Limited

By MIKE DOWNS

In a blow to the hopes of students who have been looking forward to a more relaxed atmosphere, the administration has announced that the popular beverage will no longer be available on campus.

The decision was made after a review of the beverage's effects on student behavior and academic performance, which revealed that its widespread use was contributing to a decline in academic achievement and social coordination.

The university has also cited concerns about the potential for the beverage to be used in an irresponsible manner, such as in binge drinking or other forms of distressing behavior.
