I like to learn. You see, I got cheated - the school I came from was only about making pupils safe from democracy, all-day-sleeping situations, and all the rest. You see, and they made me write to that. So when I woke up, I was very, very glad to have it. It was a kind of bargain. If I did - for I - for me I would be able to change the situation. It was a kind of bargain.

Otherwise, the worst FIRST FEAR OF CHANGE - the fear of what people think of you. Teachers and students - self-contained - afraid. I don't mean afraid to make a fool of a. For they're worse off than this were taught. Right as well as tall. Right as well as tall. Right as well as tall that, amazingly, CHANGE actually does occur.

"All War Is Immoral—Missey"

By Mike Seidemann

A position is one who believes that war and killing is wrong, that violence of any kind is unnecessary and immoral, and that non-violence is the ultimate force to achieve world peace. Such a man is Dr. Jansen Missey.

Missey, a professor of Eng.

ish here at WSU, in his words, "that all war is immoral." TAT Presents Two Plays

"The Tuesday Afternoon Club" and "The Rose Tattoo," two dramatically different presentations, opened last week at the Theatre Arts Center.

"The Tuesday Afternoon Club" was written and directed by Ollie Milholland of the University of Idaho. The play centers around a group of people who gather to discuss the latest news and events of the day.

"The Rose Tattoo," written and directed by Leonard Barnett of the University of Idaho, is a play about a family in the south who is dealing with the aftermath of a tragedy.

While the two plays were different in style and subject matter, they both were well-received by the audience.

JAMES MISSEY

Missey places himself in the "intermediary link" and as a step between the students and the world. As his students, he shares in the "love and the people who are around you."

During this speech, Dr. Missey had something very important to tell his students. He said, "You have to love and live life to the fullest."
