Hyier Hall took first place in the Residence Hall Council's Christmas Decoration contest. The theme which won the traveling trophy, won last year by Steiner Hall, was "S. Claus and Company."

Dreyfus Says He Won't Run For Office

President Lee S. Dreyfus has said he will not be a candidate for the 7th Congressional District seat being vacated by Rep. Melvin R. Laird, R-Marshfield.

Laird is stepping down from his seat in the House of Representatives to accept the position of secretary of defense in President-elect Nixon's cabinet.

Dreyfus decided against running "because I have expressed my complete commitment to this institution and its future."

He had been mentioned as a candidate after Laird's appointment. He reportedly had been asked to run by both the Republican and Democratic parties.

Only last Thursday, he had said his inclination was not to run but he didn't close the door completely to that idea.

"I thoroughly enjoy my job, my colleagues, my institution and my community and I have no further plans other than staying here until the day of my retirement," he explained in his decision not to run.

Student Senate Will Discuss Rental-Purchase Textbooks

By Jim Hofer

Student Senate will hold a special session this evening to discuss comparisons between the text book rental system and the text book purchase system.

This University presently uses the rental system. The Senate plans to make a recommendation to the Academic Council which is presently reviewing the rental concept.

Students are asked to attend tonight's meeting at 6:30 in the Frank Lloyd Wright lounge of the University center.

Two Senate committees, Welfare and Academic Affairs, have joined to study, compare and possibly recommend one of the two systems, rental or purchase. This joint committee will make its report to the Senate tonight.

The Senate meeting on Thursday Dec. 11 passed resolutions in its longest session of the semester.

One resolution calls for Senate meetings to be held in residence halls and student center buildings. Mark Dahl, Senate public relations chairman, said the Student Senate would meet in various residence halls starting second semester.

Another resolution passed by the Senate causes the formation

Discussion Emphasizes On Dissent

By Anita Matter

A discussion of the History of War Dissent from the American Revolution to the Vietnam War was held in the Frank Lloyd Wright Lounge Monday night.

The discussion was sponsored by Phi Alpha Theta, the national honorary history association on campus.

Ronald Hogeled acted as moderator. Steve Haines, first of three panel members to address the group, clarified exactly what dissent was and traced its role in American history from the time of the American Revolution through the much debated Mexican War.

He emphasized the role of Henry David Thoreau in establishing the basis for civil disobedience.

Robert Zieger then talked about the four basic types of protest experience regarding America's entrance into World War I. He clarified the position of the socialists in regard to the capitalist nature of the war.

He also illustrated the strong coercion and opposition met by both aliens and conscientious objectors.

Miss Carol Marion discussed current dissent and the ways it differed from previous war protest. Much of the current dissent is strongly pacifistic in nature, questioning not only the legality of this war, but the legality of all wars, she said.

Current dissent is often expressed through draft resistance. Another notable factor is that dissent has now attained to me political respectability as well as being largely supported by academic people.

She maintained that civil disobedience does not justify an illegal act just to show dissent. Many of the problems regarding contemporary dissent stems from the fact that the war dissent is often a part of a much larger protest movement.

It is also involved with a general dislike of the present foreign policy and the belief that our current policies cannot be altered without greatly changing the social structure from which it evolved, she concluded.

General discussion followed the panel members' presentations.

of a University-Community Relations committee. This committee was formed on the premises that "Both the University and the community (Stevens Point) could profit by increased co-operations," and "Much remains that can be done to increase good-will between the city and the campus."

A third resolution sets guidelines for the use of Old Main lawn as a recreational area and as location of ice-sculpturing during Winter Carnival.

During its three-hour meeting the Senate twice went into committee of the whole, first to discuss text book distribution systems, and the second time to discuss first semester commencement.

Members of Student-Faculty committees reported to the Senate.

Bunny Hoeft of the Convocation and Commencement committee told the Senate a first semester commencement would be almost impossible to hold this year but that it is a possibility for next year.

Miss Hoeft mentioned a banquet this year that could replace the graduation exercises.

Senate president Paul Schilling reported to the Senate on his attendance at the Dec. 6 Board of Regents meeting.

In an effort to discover the best form of text book distribution—text rental as opposed to text-purchase—tonight's Student Senate meeting will consist of a debate on the findings of the Senate hearing held Dec. 17.

The debate on the hearing, which included testimony from the pro- and con- factions of the faculty, headed by Dr. Morrison of the History department, and from the pro-purchase faction, headed by Dr. Lehman of the English department, will be held at 6:30 p.m. in the Wright

Lounge of the University Center.

Students are encouraged to attend the meeting, and are expected to voice their opinions on the matter. It is probable that the Senate will vote in favor of one of the proposed plans after the debate, and any indication of preference by the students will serve as an influencing factor on the Senate's decision.

If it is impossible for students to attend tonight's meeting, opinions may be expressed by contacting the Student Senate office (Ext. 739) or any Senator. The names and phone numbers of all Senators can be found in the residence halls.

'69 Carnival Button Design Announced

The 1969 Winter Carnival Committee under the direction of general chairman, Paul Piekars, has chosen the theme and button design for this year's festivities. The winning theme, DIAMOND ICE-TIVITIES, was submitted by Sigma Tau Gamma.

The winning button design (pictured) was submitted by Sigma Pi fraternity.

The 1969 Winter Carnival will commence Friday, Feb. 7 with the voting on campus for the king and queen. It will run through Sunday, Feb. 16 and end with a program featuring "Gary Puckett and the Union Gap."

Events during the week include the torch lighting in Madison and run here, torch lighting and dedication ceremony in Stevens Point, the kick-off dance at which the coronation will take place, a new apple cider chugging contest and the traditional outdoor games.

Registration blanks for organizations entering games due Dec. 19 in the U.A.B. office.

Although absenteeism is running higher than usual, classes will be held as normal through Friday, a spokesman for the Student Affairs office has reported.

The report squelches rumors that were circulating that classes would be called off because of the Hong Kong flu epidemic that is spreading across the United States and which is expected to reach its peak during the Christmas holidays.

However, Dr. Leonard Gibb, associate dean of students, noted absenteeism has not reached high enough proportions to warrant suspension of classes.

The University Health Service has indicated that it is treating more cases of colds and the flu than it did at the same time last year.

It also reported that it has sent some samples of a flu culture down to Madison but it has not received a lab report on the sampling. Hong Kong flu can only be detected by laboratory research.

In the city of Stevens Point, city health officer, Dr. Frank Rier, said that there were no reported cases of the Hong Kong virus as of Monday and there was little flu vaccine available here for the Hong Kong virus if an epidemic did break out shortly.

He did say that he expected the flu was certain to arrive here sooner or later and asked people who do get the flu to "go to bed and rest and try not to fight it. Drink plenty of fruit juice and try to maintain a high humidity in living quarters."

Area schools have been reporting higher absenteeism in the last week, sometimes running twice as high as normal.

The state of Wisconsin has had several outbreaks of the flu and some Milwaukee schools have closed a week early for Christmas vacation. Many hospitals have put restrictions on visiting hours to take precautions against patients getting the virus.

The Pointer has also learned that rumors concerning early Christmas recesses at the other state universities because of the flu epidemic are false. The State Board of Regents office in Madison reported that all state universities will begin their Christmas recesses as scheduled.

Many schools and colleges in other states throughout the nation have already recessed for Christmas vacation because of high absenteeism due to the flu.

Upon checking with Mrs. Dixon, the office learned that she had made no prediction and if she had it is her policy to insist the local police of any predictions she makes of this nature.

Check also reported that he found out that this type of rumor was circulating in university towns throughout the United States for the last year.

The prediction was supposedly made on a late-night talk show.

Students Share Responsibility In Financial Aids Proposals

By Don Baumann

A financial aid proposal is in essence a two-way proposition. The school aid office must process and allocate the aid while the student must agree to use the money he receives for the right purposes.

To the degree that this relationship can be fostered is the degree to which the financial aid program will remain a sound organization on this campus.

The Financial Aids office will be extremely busy between Mar. 1 and May 1, 1969. This is the critical span of time in which financial aid applications for the greater majority of participating students will be evaluated and processed.

Soon after May 1, written aid proposals will be sent to the students at their campus addresses with tax and other living expenses, his future pay checks may be seriously affected.

"An attempt is being made, to do a better job of informing borrowers about the impact of repayment on their future lives. A projected repayment program would eliminate most difficulties that might arise."

All students who are withdrawing or graduating and aid borrowers must be notified of their financial aid obligations. Thus, basically fulfilling their part of a financial aid agreement.

The recipient agrees to use the money for educational purposes only, he testifies that information in his aid proposal was valid to the best of his knowledge, and he promises to inform the financial aids office of any unforeseen circumstances that would effect the amount of aid he needs.

When changes occur after a proposal has been made the student is expected to report them to the aids office. If he is unable to do so, he must be able to enable a re-evaluation to be entered in them.

Some types of aid, especially loans can accrue to a surprisingly large debt for a student before he graduates or leaves school. It seems that the easier it is to borrow, the harder it is to repay.

A serious attitude concerning the repayment of a loan must be taken by the student. If he is irresponsible with repayment policies, the lending agency cannot be expected to continue offering funds to this institution, thereby depriving upcoming students with the benefits of this aid.

Repayment may be complicated by involvement in more than one program. Each loan has separate interest rates as well as variations in the amount due on the repayment schedule. A borrower might have to pay a minimum to each of three or four different lending agencies plus individual interest. Along with taxes and other living expenses, his future pay checks may be seriously affected.

Working Together Gains Improvements

The students of this university have something to be thankful for with the announcement that Dr. Donald Johnson will begin working Jan. 20 as a full-time health service physician. Dr. Johnson will be coming here after student questioning and administrative action brought about improvements in the health service.

The students did not riot to get the doctor. Administrative offices were not broken into. There was instead intensive open discussion such as the Student Senate's forum on the health service and articles in The Pointer. Students raised the question and it was heard by the administration.

Our administration did not act like other administrations around the system have acted. With the intensified questioning going on, action was taken and the improving of the health service and the securing of a full-time doctor were placed at the top of the priority list.

Through the efforts of the Student Affairs office, Dr. Johnson's services were acquired. Now WSU-Stevens Point is the only state university to have a full-time physician.

Students at WSU-Stevens Point should be thankful the administration does listen to the students' voice and will take action to improve this university. But, above all, the students should be commended for the action taken to bring this all about.

Question of the Week

Are term papers and finals really necessary?

Pointer Gives Gifts of Sprigs of Holly

We've been told this year that The Pointer has been too critical. While we believe that the criticism directed toward us has been narrow and excessively critical in itself, we're not ones to complain.

In any case The Pointer staff would like to get into the holiday spirit by offering some praise instead of criticism. In keeping with the Yuletide mood we'd like to offer the First Annual Pointer "Sprig of Holly" Awards.

A Sprig of Holly to the staff of WSUS-FM, the new university radio station. Despite a traumatic beginning, the radio station has become a dynamic and imaginative source of entertainment and news.

A Sprig of Holly to President Lee S. Dreyfus for his battle to get the Board of Regents to rewrite the state universities' mission plans. Most of the schools now will be able to develop master programs in a core group of English, history and biology.

A Sprig of Holly to Jack Cohan and the Arts and Lecture Series under his direction. The series has presented an excellent array of programs on an almost weekly basis.

A Sprig of Holly to Point's basketball team who has gotten off to a great start. We hope we can dig out those old "We're Number 1" buttons by season's end.

A Sprig of Holly to all teachers who hand back term papers and test to students before Christmas vacation.

A Sprig of Holly for the new and liberal visitation hours in the residence halls.

And we finally even have a Sprig of Holly to all the members of the Board of Regents. May they all turn into sugar plums on Christmas Eve.

A Senator Speaks -

Bad Mood Might Mean Bad Grade

Dear Editor,

I am writing this article in regard to final grades at this university. Last semester, upon walking down the hall of the Classroom Center I came upon something which I felt was great interest to all students. I was on the fourth floor where many of the offices are located. Upon passing by an office, whose name I will not mention, I saw a note posted on the door. This note read as follows: "Enter at Your Own Risk. I reserve the right to either raise or lower your grades and I am in a bad mood."

Upon reading this note I thought it occurred to me that a person's grade could very well be influenced by the mood that a professor is in. This in itself is certainly no way to be graded. It is the right of the student to consult with his teacher about his grades, or any behavior of this sort, completely unrelated to the professor's grade. Just because a professor "got up on the wrong side of the bed," or just because he is not entirely satisfied with the performance of his students, he does not have the right to let his own problems reflect upon the student. Finally, I have one final caution to the students: In the nature, whenever it is necessary to consult your professor about grades, maybe it would be a very good idea to bring along with you, a Shiny Red Apple, or a bottle of Excedrin when you enter your teacher's office!

Sands Brings Beliefs of God and Hard Work

By Scott Schutte

It is still impossible for me to believe that if I thoroughly enjoyed listening to Bill Sands, I sat in the audience and listened to what, by a different speaker, might have been the type of poor lecture program that all Wisconsin students have to sit through in high school. Sands hit us with the values of hard work, a belief in God, and the most persuasive disputation on the values of positive thinking since Norman Vincent Peale opened his mouth. Anyone that has read past reviews by this reviewer must be thinking that one of his radical, ultra-liberal blasts is coming. Not so.

It is hard to believe that any one man could live as colorful a life as Bill Sands has. His lecture was a history of torture, sorrow, parental abuse, a miracle, success and luck. On stage stood a man who had lived half a century of action packed life, retaining a body of broken bones and the physical appearance of a thirty-five year old. In person he is a charming, joyous human being who is fighting for his fellow man in the best of altruistic traditions.

Mr. Sands hour-and-a-half lecture, concentrated on the conditions that exist in America today. He named names and pointed out brutality and ignorance that exist in every prison system in the country. He told of his baptism to prison police and his first-hand view of a knifing that led to his torture by the prison "bulls." He told of enforced homophobia, electric wires attached to the genitals by the guards and the effects of caging a human being. He became a hard core convict, which he differentiates from an inmate, and soon was classified as incorrigible; beyond all reforming.

His miracle was the famous Warden Duffy of San Quentin who walked unguarded through the prison and acted as a human being to his prisoners. The fearless and unprecedented actions of Duffy led Sands to cover three consecutive years in prison in seven years and 42 years probation in three. Today he is a fearless crusader and wealthy man. Mr. Sands' lecture was impressive because he did not hit the audience with a hard-line, preacher's type of support for his Seventh Step organization. He blended a subtle humor with the fascinating story of his life while asking for no sympathy, no overt help, just understanding. When he said, "I involuntarily groaned, but his presentation was marvelously pragmatic and he never stopped to preach." I asked Mr. Sands about the recent political emphasis on "law and order" and "crime in the streets" as an effect on future prison reform. He answered that he felt that the place, would be harmful. "I hope," he said, "that people will effect more emphasis on working to cure people, rather than caging them."

Puertas Proves Flamenco is Art

By Scott Schutte

There are many arts that are associated with countries and regions, but none has the same excitement and excitement of flamenco which shows "Spain" to even the most uniformed listener. It is distinctive but also hauntingly beautiful and subtle as an excellent exponent, Adonis Puertas, proved. Dec. 4 in the latest presentation of the Arts and Lectures Series. Puertas performed his own work and modern pieces, by such composers as Sor, Tarrega, Albéniz, de Sanlúcar, Villalobos, and Escudero. His selections provided a good sample of traditional, classical and contemporary styles of flamenco guitar and all were embellished by Puertas' own distinctive phrasing.

The famous "Romance de Amor," an anonymous classic that you may remember as the title of the movie "Forbidden Games" was one of the arrangements that Puertas performed well. Another selection that I enjoyed was the haunting "Zapaleado" by Escudero. On the surface, all of the music was distinctive but the flexibility of the style and the melodic possibilities were vast.

I doubt that the ability of the young Spaniard was questioned by anyone in the large audience. Adonis Puertas had fleet and nimble fingers that were so sure that I am sure that he could pick up any change by lifting wallets or opening combination locks, if he had the inclination.

I must report, however, that I am most happy with the voluntary pursuit that he has chosen. The type of fingering that was required from this Adonis of the guitar is spectacular, a feat which he undoubtedly led to the popularity of flamenco.

Puertas was during the evening three separate parts at the fullest possible speed with the use of the last few weeks. Here he would not be too surprised to learn that the artist practices by cracking walnuts with his fingers. Two weeks of rhythm and one of melody were hard enough, but on several occasions, he switched to two of melody and one of rhythm.

All the color and flash of the flamenco were present at the concert, but the artist also provided a generous sample of all the possibilities that a wooden box and a pair of strings can offer. I hope that Puertas will be on campus again in the near future.

Player's "Antigone" Reviewer Praises

(Editor's Note: The following review of "Antigone" appeared in the (Hilly) Daily Chronicle of Dec. 11. Daily players were competing in the Regional Drama Festival.)

By La Verne Kingstadt

WSU Players' presentation of Sophocles' "Antigone" as translated by Elizabeth Wyckoff was the second offering of the three-day Regional Drama Festival being held at the Northern Illinois University Fine Arts Auditorium.

A large audience watched silently for a short one hour and 45 minutes as this Greek tragedy unfolded. From the beginning the lights slowly rose on Antigone placing the first mask on the pillar were taken back into original Greek-style theater.

The actors in subdued colored togas and character masks with excellent movement and just-right arm gestures made the masks of the platform set to act out of the classic tale of death, love, and justice. The play was flowing, effortless manner.

Difficulty in understanding some of the individual characters through the masks was the main criticism of this fine performance, but was not the case. The music and lighting performances given by Blakey in the role of Antigone and Mark Niedzowski in the role of Creon.

Both Miss Blakey and Niedzowski masterfully made the masks of the platform set to act out of the classic tale of death, love, and justice. The play was flowing, effortless manner.

A well-deserved hand greeted the Wisconsin State University Players at the end of the play.

Penal System Fails: Sands

By Bill Meissner

Bill Sands, ex-convict, author and penal reform advocate, spoke of how the penal system fails to do its job because it dehumanizes men instead of reforming them. In his presentation on Wednesday, Dec. 11, he told the audience how "Our basic prison systems are obsolete."

Sands, giving a dynamic and well-delivered talk to a large crowd in the Main auditorium, began by telling about his background in crime. He explained how he started out as a "thrill bandit" attempting to gain recognition, and then later progressed to armed robbery, for which he was sentenced to life imprisonment in San Quentin Prison.

He explained the fact that many penal institutions practice "behavior therapy," the technique of teaching a man to react in a certain manner. "The problem is," said Sands, "that they are not turning destructive men into constructive men." He went on to explain that society was "very slow to believe that a bad man can ever be good again."

Sands told of how the prisons of America fail to do their jobs of rehabilitating criminals. He explained to the audience, for example, that according to President Johnson's crime commission, 80 percent of the 300,000 males who will be released from maximum security cells will return to crime. Thus, continued Sands, "Eight men out of ten come out worse than when they went in."

The speaker then cited many shocking examples of how the prisons of today treat inmates in a cruel, inhumane or sadistic fashion. He told of the physical punishment and torture inflicted by the guards and of the poor living conditions of many prisoners.

Next, Sands told of his years in San Quentin prison, and of what he saw and experienced there. He explained how he became "classified as incorrigible" by the prison staff, and how he was "in and out of solitary like a yo-yo." He told the audience of how he was very severely beaten and tortured for 19 days by the prison guards for a mere joking remark.

Then he praised Clinton T. Duffy for his reforms in the prison as a warden. Sands also explained how he was rehabilitated by Duffy so he could eventually get his freedom.

After Sands obtained his freedom, he founded the "National Seventh Step Foundation" to help prevent crime in adults as well as juveniles. He told of his difficult road to success and acceptance and how he was forced to write a book, "My Shadow Ran Fast" because he was bankrupt.

The autobiography was a best seller, and so he wrote "The Seventh Step." He explained how he now is dedicated to making speeches all over the country in order to let people learn from his experiences. He told the audience that they should "become involved and go to work in order to attain their goals."

He also emphasized that love was an important factor in any relationship between people. "Love without work is as useless as work without love," said Sands.

He concluded his speech by commenting on the youth of today and the generation gap. He included many of his philosophies on life as he explained that the young and young people lack communication and honesty.

Sand's speech was part of the WSU-Stevens Point Arts and Lecture Series.

WSU's UW Rank High In University Enrollments

Wisconsin's public university systems are among the largest in the nation, a survey reveals.

The Wisconsin State Universities system this year ranks No. 5 in the nations in full-time enrollment, up from sixth place last year.

The University of Wisconsin is sixth largest in the nation in total enrollment, the same position it held last year.

The enrollment figures for colleges and universities throughout the United States were announced by Dr. Garland G. Parker of the University of Cincinnati in his 1968 survey for the educational magazine, "School and Society."

In full-time students described by Dr. Parker as "the group commanding first consideration in academic, physical and fiscal planning," the nine Wisconsin State Universities and their branch campuses are topped only by the California and New York systems of higher education. The University of Wisconsin ranks eighth in full-time enrollment.

In total enrollment, which includes part-time students, the University of Wisconsin has more students on its campuses than any other university or system except the California or New York systems and the University of Minnesota. The Wisconsin State Universities system ranks eighth in total enrollment.

The nation's "top 10" in full-time enrollment were listed by Dr. Parker as: State University of New York, 159,153; California State Colleges, 143,043; University of California, 92,090; City University of New York, 71,828; Wisconsin State Universities system, 51,619; University of Minnesota, 47,534; University of Texas system, 47,061; University of Wisconsin, 46,932; University of Illinois, 43,527; Ohio State University, 41,555.

The "top 10" in total enrollment are: California State Colleges, 266,396; State University of New York, 259,548; City University of New York, 157,336; University of California, 97,046; University of Minnesota, 66,824; University of Wisconsin, 62,206; University of Texas system, 58,616; Wisconsin State Universities system, 58,242; Indiana University, 52,101; University of Illinois, 50,983.

Debate Team Completes First Semester Competition

The Pointer debate team made its final trip of the first semester last weekend when eight students traveled to WSU-Whitewater with Dick Rogers, Director of Forensics.

Teams competed in both varsity and novice divisions against schools from throughout the mid-west. Some schools were debated with more than one time as the draw placed them against different Stevens Point teams. The total record of the squad was 11 wins and 13 losses.

The best record of the weekend went to novice debaters Mark Haebig and Jim Dusso as they defeated Northern Illinois University, Thornton Jr. College, WSU-LaCrosse, and Winona State College. They lost to WSU-Whitewater and Calvin College. This 4-2 record placed them twelfth out of 40 teams.

Rogers praised their overall record to date which is now ten wins, five losses and announced with regret their second semester transfer to different universities.

The team of Cherie Choudoir and Dean Zimmerman were also praised for an excellent showing in the varsity division. Both debaters were ranked in the top twenty-five speakers of the varsity division out of the 72 competitors. They posted a 3-3 record in a series of close debates. They lost to Central Michigan University with equal point rankings. In debate, tie point scores are decided in favor of the negative, in this case Central Michigan. They defeated teams from Eureka College, Wayne State University, and Malone College. The other two losses were to Albion College and Eastern Michigan University.

The other two teams representing WSU-SP were Sherril Ray and Mark Dittman in the varsity division and Don Skalecki and Richard Johnson in the novice division. Both teams scored 2-4 records.

Wins were posted over Upper Iowa University, Ball State University, Eastern Michigan University and Eureka College. Losses were to Malone College, WSU-River Falls, Ball State University, WSU-LaCrosse (twice), Iowa State University, WSU-Oshkosh and Bradley University.

Rogers is still seeking persons interested in the debate program for the second semester. The debate topic concerned the reduction of executive power over United States foreign policy.

Plans are now underway for travel to tournaments at Ohio University, and the University of Kansas at the end of January.

Three Faculty Attend Seminar

Three faculty members from WSU-Stevens Point were among college and university physics teachers from a three-state area attending a recent National Science Foundation seminar on astrophysics.

Attending the program for which Beloit College served as host institution were Monica Bainter, Allen Blocher and Gregory Kulas. Guest lecturer Professor John Mathis of the Department of Astronomy at the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

The shock effect of such subjects was lost due to the atmosphere of the museum and the attitude of the observers. The public was expecting unusual objects and had made up their minds that they were unquestionably good art. Thus the Dada spirit was lost.

The surrealists, which grew from the dada movement faded slightly better since their aims conform more to the accepted tradition of art.

The surrealists emphasized the unconscious world of the world of dreams. They had many great works on display. Among the most impressive was Salvador-Dali's "Rainy Taxi." It parallels many of the things being done today with environments.

The English Department has announced the winners of the Creative Writing Competition.

Joseph Blanchard, Nancy Lotto, Bill Meisner and Bruce Lotto were selected by a panel of five judges as the winners.

They will read from their works on the English Department Bookshelf program broadcast on WSU-FM at 7 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 19.

Coeds Win Two Dietetic Internships

Two coeds at WSU-Stevens Point have been awarded $3,700 to serve as dietetic interns following their graduation in January.

Linda Lockwood, Markean, received $1,930 to serve one year at Barnes Hospital in St. Louis, and Judy Sontag, Milwaukee, won $1,750 to join the Milwaukee County Institutions.

Completion of the internship will qualify them for membership in the American Dietetic Association and a brighter future in their field because of the prestige of their association with the professional group, the coeds said.

They are the sixth and seventh students in the history of Stevens Point State to receive such honors.

Dr. Agnes Jones, home economics department chairman, said Stevens Point graduates in this specialty are finding vast opportunities because there is a critical shortage in allied health professions.

Choice of careers in dietetics is in hospitals, government and educational services, food service in nursing homes and institutions, food product research and development, business and industry, positions in public health, teaching and research.

Stevens Point State's program included four years of academic work and one year of internship with an affiliated institution for the American Dietetic Association.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Whalley, Rt. 1, Hancock, he plans to graduate next August with a biology major.

After finishing at Tri County High School in Plainfield in 1962, he attended the University of Wisconsin in Madison for one year and then served as a military policeman in the Army. He was stationed in this country during his entire enlistment.

Since 1965, he has been active in Sigma Zeta national honorary science fraternity and the 550 Vets' Club at Stevens Point. He also served as a student residence hall assistant.

His plans are to become a high school guidance counselor. The scholarship is in memory of Meier, a WSU student who was killed in a car accident in Stevens Point nearly four years ago. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Meiers of Skokie, Ill., and friends established the fund and specified that preference be given to candidates who are military veterans.

Most students will leave on Friday, Dec. 20. Classes will resume at all the State Universities and branch campuses on Monday, Jan. 6.

The recess begins officially at noon on Saturday at Eau Claire, La Crosse, Oshkosh, Platteville, Stevens Point and Richland Center, but most students will leave on Friday because few classes are held on Saturday.

The recess starts officially at 1:30 p.m. at Menomonie (Stout) and Rice Lake to go to the Dada and Surrealist show on display at the Institute on Dec. 8-9.

The students observed a large number of works by the man of these groups, but it is questionable as to whether anyone could realize the true essence of the movement from a show of this type.

In order to understand this, one must first realize the idea behind the movements. The Dadaists were searching for complete freedom from a state of mind, from the conventional, the historical and the immediate present.

They wanted to shock the public into a new awareness. Good examples of this idea are Kurt Schwitters' collages made from scraps of old paper and an even better one is Duchamp's "Battle Rock."

The shock effect of such subjects was lost due to the atmosphere of the museum and the attitude of the observers. The public was expecting unusual objects and had made up their minds that they were unquestionably good art. Thus the Dada spirit was lost.

The surrealists, which grew from the dada movement faded slightly better since their aims conform more to the accepted tradition of art.

Off Campus Landlords Should Have Understanding

Persons who provide off-campus housing to students at WSU-Stevens Point have been encouraged Thursday night to have "clear-cut understandings" with their young tenants before any rental contracts are signed.

Melvin Karg, a university housing official, said problems can be avoided if landlords and tenants are honest, open and discuss mutual expectations in their first order of business.

Difficulties usually are the product of communication blocks, he said.

A program was held Thursday in the University Center and included a panel discussion led by Mrs. Chester Wisniewski, and Mrs. Harry Bronk, from the city and students Paul Heiman and Jean Smekal.

After 15 years as a landlord, Mrs. Wisniewski said she finds students more independent because of their greater affluence.

He also reported the university is making attempts to WSU and landlords also understand mutual expectations.

He said when approved housing is established, consideration is given to the owner as well as the faculty.

Karg said those few persons who have constant trouble with their tenants probably haven't made a reasonable effort to get to the heart of the matter.

He also reported the university is making attempts to WSU and landlords also understand mutual expectations.

The next matches will be held at 7 p.m. on Feb. 2. The schedule is Watson at Schmeckle, Steiner at Baldwin, Hansen at Delzell, Smith at Neale, Roach at Pray-Sims, Burroughs at Hyer and Knutzen has the bye.

BALDWIN HALL

The men of Baldwin participated in the wing decoration contest last week. Third South won the competition for the second straight year. Third East was very close behind. Mr. and Mrs. Scalise judged the competition during open house on Sunday afternoon.

The movie, "The Thin Blue Line" was shown on Thursday and Friday evenings in the hall. This week the movie "Mayhem on a Sunday Afternoon" will be shown. Dave Flahive is chairman of the film committee.

The Baldwin Hall bowling team is currently tied for first place in the campus Bowling League. The team is composed of Tim Lash, Dan Tepeski, Al Prochnow and Steve Elmer.

NEALE HALL

Neale has two new student assistants for the second semester. They are Carol Schultz who will be on Third East and Kathy Abele, Second East. The retiring SA's are Shyla Gregerson and Gail Miller.

The ABC team has a 3-0 record thus far in competition, which has placed Neale in first place in a tie with Smith Hall.

The first Neale Hall formal was held Saturday, Dec. 14, from 9-12 in the Blue Room at the DeBot Center. The theme for the dance was "Fantasy in Frost" with music provided by the Ross Konikoff Quintet. Jena Tierney was the general chairman.

Pam Sanders has been selected as the Winter Carnival chairman for Neale Hall. Pam is a mathematics major from Merrill.

Student Serves As Pastor In Milladore

Ken King, a senior majoring in business and economics, has been serving as a minister at the Milladore Methodist Church for the past semester.

This is a small church with a membership of 28 — mostly older people. It is about 20 miles west of Stevens Point. Ken is their full-time minister, responsible for sermons every Sunday.

He also is involved in church activities such as their all-church Christmas party.

His sermons have covered subjects of love, patience and the myth and fact of the miracles of Christmas.

Ken's hometown is Coloma and he is a member of the United Methodist church there. Ken is the present president of the United Christian Movement on campus, which is the largest inter-denominational religious group on campus.

He feels that he expresses traditional theology with contemporary interpretation.

Ken's other church oriented commitments include working with the Junior Youth Fellowship of St. Paul's United Methodist Church of Stevens Point, a group of eighth graders he helps counsel.

As a college student, representative of the Wisconsin Conference of the Methodist Church, Ken serves on the Committee for Reconciliation. He also is a member on the Methodist's board of the Ministry for Higher Education and was former president of the U.C.C.F., the University Campus Christian Fellowship.

Although he feels serving as a minister has given him valuable experience, Ken plans to go into business sales work after graduation in June.

ORGANIZATIONS FEED ON MONSTER GRINDERS

Words And Pictures

By Mike Dominowski

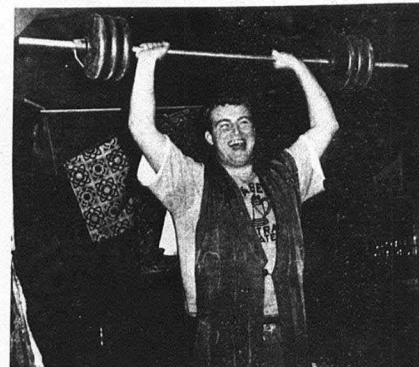

A monster grinder is a sandwich the size of your forearm. As served at the Eternal Hunt of the Sun coffee shop, it is a mass of sausage, spices and assorted goodies all encased in a huge envelop of French bread. For a person to completely consume even one "grinder" is something of a herculean task. The object of a contest held at the Hunt, Monday, Dec. 9, was to determine who could down the largest number of monster grinders in an hour's time. The contest was open to any university organization. Entries, however, included only Boris Trutenko of Phi Sigma Epsilon and Tom "Tube" Shipe of the Siasefis. A third entry from Steiner Hall never showed up.

The Sefis had the cheering section, but the Phi Sigs had Boris, who won by outeating the "Tube" three and two-thirds grinders to three and one-third grinders. Upon being declared the winner, Boris roared "Let's go loading!" With that, the whole contingent evacuated the building without so much as collecting the prize, a life-size paper mache statue called Molly. She was claimed the next day.

"TUBE" SHIPE, the Siasefi contestant, loosens up for the event.

At the 1½ grinder marks "Tube" feels the need to relieve some inner stresses, much to the amusement of his trainer, Tim Mertens.

Steve Peck (seated) and Dan Haulihan, two owners of the Eternal Hunt of the Sun, discuss the proceedings.

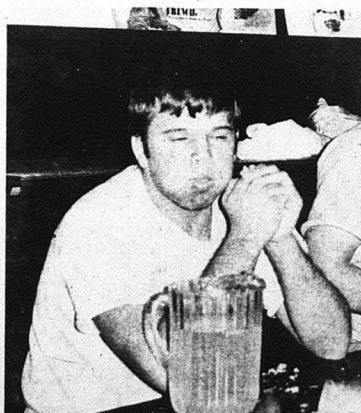

Time out while the two contestants re-cycle their stomachs.

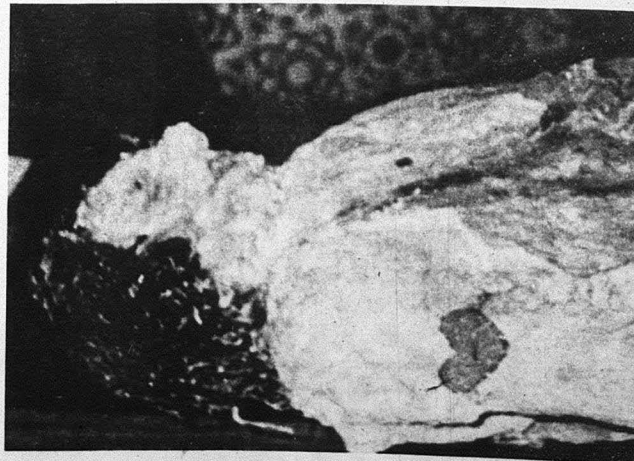

The strain of excitement begins to tell on the crowd.

THE SIASEFI cheering section watches tensely in the closing seconds.

PHI SIG, Boris Trutenko with victory and the final half-pound of monster grinder in his jaws. Upon being declared the winner Boris declared, "Let's go out loading" and raced out the door leaving Molly, the traveling trophy (right) standing alone.

Lasch's Sports Flashes

By Tim Lasch

I'm sure the Pointers got a much rougher basketball game against Superior than they had reckoned for. The Yellowjackets are a young team with three freshmen starting and will pull off a few surprises this year.

After another cold spell against Superior, the Pointers regained their composure and took over in the second half. Again it was that fine team balance and spirit that made the difference. As several members of the team so aptly put it, "We may not have any of the leading scorers or all-conference choices this year, but we'd be happy with the championship."

With as many dependable men to choose from as Coach Krueger has, opposing coaches cannot resort to keying on any one or two players and expect to beat the Pointers. Just take a look at the statistics for the first seven games—I think you'll find them a bit astonishing.

Another big area of improvement in this year's team has been the free throw shooting. Free throws have accounted for the margin of victory in three of the Pointers' six wins. For example, over the weekend in the two wins, the Pointers sank 39 of 54 attempts, an excellent 72.0 mark. Contrast this with last year's .620 mark from the charity stripe and the difference is wide.

It was certainly poetic justice that the Packers whip the Bears in their season finale. The breaks have gone against the Pack all year, and it did appear the Bears might yet pull it out. It sure would have been a pickup for young Don Horn. Playing with only two days' practice, he picked the "great" Bear defense like Bart Starr does.

His two play-action passes had to be the best calls all day. The Bears were busy picking up their shoes as Grabowski and Dowler casually crossed the Bear goal.

If Horn isn't named player of the week on offense, I want to know why.

Yes, Bear, Viking and Lion fans, the Green and Gold are still the best in the game. The Lions won only once in their last nine games and the Vikings backed into the title.

The University of Wisconsin has one of the finest hockey teams in the nation this year. Last Friday and Saturday, they knocked off North Dakota, ranked Number 1 in the nation twice. If you ever get a chance to see a game down in Madison, don't miss it.

The Badger cagers were not exactly overpowering against Northern Illinois, but they should improve considerably in time. They will have their hands full this weekend against Florida. The Gators' 6-0 record, Neal Walk will most certainly be one of the first college players to go in the pro draft next spring. There is more than an even chance that the Milwaukee Bucks may take him if they don't get Al Kildor.

The Bucks have been hanging in there every game, but losing the majority of them with cold spells or turnovers. I have been pretty well satisfied thus far that they are doing as well as could be expected.

It is time for me to stick my neck out once again and make a prediction on how the WSUC basketball race will come out. Luckily, all you readers, fans, enemies, etc., will forget this predictions and I may not tell you how close I actually come out at the end of the year.

Seeing this is the last issue of the semester, I suppose some of you will be graduating, quitting and leaving for other obvious reasons. One blessing is that you won't have to read any of my gossip anymore. I suppose I better give you one last battery of predictions after picking all eight games right last week.

WRA Sponsors Competition In Athletics Every Monday

By Cindy Mielke and Renee Wrzesinski

Volleyball and cage ball tournaments brought Women's Recreational Association activities for this semester to a peak. The final contest of the volleyball tournament was held Monday evening, Dec. 2, and last Monday concluded the cage ball tournament.

Miss Mary Mullen, advisor for WRA, is attempting to get as much enthusiasm as possible for paddle ball contests, apparatus and tumbling, trampolines and swimming. She stressed the importance of getting as many as possible over to the Physical Education Building on Monday evenings to participate in the many activities and to take advantage of the facilities available from 6:30-9 every Monday evening.

All WSL-SP women have access to the pool every Monday evening. If enough interest is raised, Dr. Harold of the Phy Ed Department will help women with any advanced skills, such as synchronized swimming, diving and endurance from 8-9. Also, individual darts and organizations will be invited to have private pool parties in the future.

Second semester will bring many more tournaments and contests with the completion of the annex to the Phy Ed building. WRA will be the most stimulating of these. Others scheduled are table tennis, badminton and archery.

Any swimmers or divers interested in competing in a swim meet at River Falls on Feb. 15, should contact Miss Mullen as soon as possible.

WRA spring sports include golf, track and field, and softball. Also, the bowling tournament with other schools takes place in March. Watch The Pointer for future WRA events!

Voices From The Past

Here are two excerpts from articles in 1882 editions of the old Lorain, Ohio, Times Herald:

"The party of hunters of which mention was made in our last issue as being overdue, returned about 6 o'clock last Wednesday evening. Their cruise on the point on Pelee marshes was a very successful one, the twelve bagging 118 ducks in one day. Game was not very plentiful the first week, but toward the last they had plenty of shooting."

They were delayed by contrary winds and were unable to leave the marshes before the day they started. They traversed the distance from Point at Pelee to Lorain via Sandusky, about 85 miles in all, in 10 hours, in the yacht owned by Truman Moore. Altogether the trip was a very pleasant one."

The second clipping is from a letter to the editor written by Stephen A. Moore:

"I am located 12 miles southwest of Hays City, Kansas. I have got 160 acres of homestead land and am leading a hermit's life. For the benefit of Lorain duck hunters—those who think all the ducks are at Crane Creek or Point at Pelee—I would say they are mistaken for I went out the other day and got three shots and got 33 ducks. I got 20 the first shot, 8 the second and 5 the third. They say it is the best duck shooting on record in Kansas. I shall be 68 next February."

Truman Moore was my great-great-grandmother's brother and Stephen Moore was his cousin. Neither of these men were market hunters. The huge numbers of ducks they took back then were not considered unusually large, but were merely the result of a successful hunting trip.

We will never see hunting like that again in this country, nor should we. The real importance of these old tales lies not in their account of the hunting skill of some long-dead relatives of mine, but in their testimony to the quantities of wildlife that the wetlands of the United States and Canada could produce before they were drained, plowed, polluted and covered with concrete and civilization.

Truman and Stephen, I salute you across the years. Yours was a good time to be alive. You probably would not like the world of today, and, Lord knows, not all of us like it either. But, old-timers, if you were the kind of men I think you were, you would have enjoyed those cold, grey days, the marshes whether you took 118 ducks, or only three, or none at all.

You and I know that the kill isn't everything; that the going, and being there, and the coming back is equally as important. As much pleasure as any weight of ducks strung on a rope and thrown over your shoulder. I like to think that Truman Moore's return trip wasn't delayed by contrary winds; that he stayed an extra day or two in the marshes for the same reason his cousin Stephen went out in the cold November weather at the age of 67: because they sensed that the beauty, profundity and plenty of nature as they knew it was passing away, and wanted to drink deeply of it once more before it was lost and gone forever.

Cagers Have Busy Schedule

Coach Bob Krueger's WSU-Stevens Point basketball squad will have little time to relax over the Christmas holidays as they will be defending the championship they won last year in the Beloit Holiday Tournament.

In the opening round of play on Friday, Dec. 27, the Pointers will meet a tough North Park College (Ill.) team and the host Beloit squad will tangle with St. Mary's of Winona, Minn., a team the Pointers defeated two weeks ago at Winona.

The championship may well be decided in the first game of the tournament. North Park is rated as a strong contender in the College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin, a conference which includes Carthage and Carroll of Wisconsin and Millikin, North Central, Augustana and Illinois Wesleyan of Illinois.

Beloit, which competes in the Midwest Conference, lost its leading scorer from last year's championship squad, Jim Jones.

But has his 6-7 brother, Kit Jones, back this year. Guard Pete Chatlowe is the only other returning starter and the Buccaneers are not rated as a contender in the Midwest Conference this year. Beloit will play its first game of the season in the tournament.

Stevens Point won last year's tourney by defeating Macalester, 79-70, and Carthage, 96-84 in overtime.

Winners and losers in the opening round will be paired on Saturday evening.

The Pointers have an earlier date before the Beloit engagement this Saturday when they will travel to western Minnesota to meet Le College of Albert Lea, Minnesota. Little is known about Lea's squad as this is the first time ever that the Pointers will meet them. They have met one common opponent this year, however. Both teams lost to the touring Czechoslovakian National team, Lea by a 95-75 score and the Pointers 94-75.

Basketball Team Sweeps Pair, Swimmers Win Overpower Falcons For 6th Win, 86-52

By Tim Lasch

WSU-Stevens Point remained in a tie for first place in the State University Conference last Saturday evening by crushing WSU-River Falls, 86-52, at River Falls.

The win was the Pointers' fourth straight in conference play and kept them in a first place tie with Eau Claire, which defeated Plattville and Whitewater over the weekend. The Pointers now stand 6-1 overall. The Falcons dropped to 3-2 in the WSUC and 4-3 overall.

The Falcons stayed with the Pointers for the first ten minutes of the game, but Stevens Point then took charge and turned the contest into a rout.

After the Pointers jumped off to a 9-1 lead, the early going, River Falls came back and took the lead at 12-11 with 13:00 left in the half. The Falcons managed several three point shots before the Pointers knotted the score at 10-10 with 10:30 left.

The Pointers superior height and rebounding power soon began to tell when the Falcons began to cull down on their outside shooting. The Pointers grabbed almost every rebound, usually allowing River Falls only one shot on each trip down the floor. On offense, the Pointers got hot and led by the shooting of Mike Hughes.

Clements, Hughes and Ken Ritzenthaler led the Pointers attack with 8 points each in the first half. All conference Bill Vanduyke had 9 in the first half to top Falcon scorers.

The Pointers picked up right where they left off in the second half. A tight zone defense forced the Falcons to shoot from far outside and the Falcons were very cold in the second half.

River Falls did score the first five points of the second half to narrow the Pointers lead to 20-14, but the Pointers pulled away by scoring ten straight points and were never headed again.

Stevens Point increased its lead to 21 points, 57-36, with 10:50 left, and the rest of the contest was rather loosely played, with many turnovers by both teams and even a fight broke out between two athletes.

The Pointers stretched their edge to 34 points by the end of the contest to post their most decisive win of the year to date. Unselfish, spirited team play was again the key to Point's win, as the balanced scoring testified. There were "only" three Pointers in double figures in the contest, but three others had nine points and one had eight. The great depth of the squad allowed Coach Bob Krueger to rest all of his players, and the tactic clearly wore down the undermanned Falcons.

Hughes took game honors for the Pointers with 21 points and snared 14 rebounds in the process. Ken Ritzenthaler followed with 15, Bob Henning added 11 points and 10 rebounds and Quinn Vandenhuevel, Russ DeFauw and Tom Ritzenthaler each netted 9 points. Clements finished with 8.

George Voss, Falcon guard, topped River Falls with 11 points. Van Dyke, who entered the contest with a 29 point per game average, did not score a field goal in the second half and was held to 10 points.

Defeat Yellowjackets After Nightmare First Half

By Tim Lasch

The WSU Pointers basketball squad suffered through another nightmare opening half but recovered and then held off a late rally to defeat WSU-Superior in a conference clash last Friday evening at Superior, 79-72.

The win was the Pointers' third in as many outings in conference action and fifth in six starts against all competition. The Yellowjackets are now 0-4 in the WSUC and 1-4 overall.

The Pointers started out fairly well, but an inspired Superior squad soon began to dominate play with fine shooting and surprisingly strong rebounding against the taller Pointers.

After Tom Ritzenthaler's three point play put the Pointers in front, 20-18, with 7:30 left, Stevens Point hit a cold streak much like the one they experienced against Whitewater last Tuesday.

The Yellowjackets, on the other hand, got hot and led by the long-range shooting of Don Hartlund, outscoring the Pointers, 14-1, in the next three minutes to lead, 32-21.

The Pointers added to their problems with many costly turnovers in the cold spell. They did manage to regain their composure somewhat by halftime and narrowed the Superior lead to 37-32 at the half.

Hartlund connected on 7 of 11 attempts from the floor in the first half and added a free throw to total 15 points.

The Yellowjackets paced the Pointers attack with nine markers in the opening half. The Pointers were a different ballclub in the second half, however, and scored the first six points of the half. Bob Bottcher countered with a long jumper to give the Yellowjackets a 39-38 lead, but it was destined to be the last lead Superior held.

The Pointers took over control of the rebounding in the final half and the overall experience of the team began to tell. The Yellowjackets on the other hand had three freshmen in their starting lineup and their inexperience was evident in the second half when the Pointers took control.

Stevens Point gradually increased its lead until it reached 71-56 with only 4:52 left, but Superior was not about to give up and put together a rally that several times cut the Pointers lead to only seven points.

The Yellowjackets closed to 71-62 with 3:30 left, but Ken Ritzenthaler countered two Superior baskets with a basket and pair of free throws to maintain the eleven point lead. A basket by Hartlund narrowed

The two Whitewater players are Pat Walsh (41) and Bob Johnson (35). The Pointers beat the Warhows, 81-62, and are presently tied for the conference lead with a 4-0 mark. (Photo by Mel Gladowski)
