Mrs. Romney, Nixon Bring Campaigns To WSU

Mrs. George Romney Speaks On Moral Responsibility

By Martin Aron

Mrs. George Romney spoke to about 600 students, faculty, and members of the community Monday evening in the Student Union at Wisconsin State University. Mrs. Romney is the wife of the Republican presidential candidate, George Romney, and is the daughter of President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Mrs. Romney's visit is part of her husband's campaign tour of the Midwest. She spoke on the theme of "moral responsibility" and drew several parallels between the Vietnam War and the civil rights movement of the 1960s.

She said that the Vietnam War is a battle for freedom and that the civil rights movement is a battle for justice. She also said that both wars require a sacrifice of youth and that both require a commitment to the future.

Mrs. Romney ended her speech by saying that the nation needs a "new political leadership" and that her husband is running for President because he believes in "moral responsibility." She added that it is not enough to have a country, but that it is necessary to have a government that is committed to the principles of freedom and justice.

Richard Nixon Emphasizes U.S. Role In World Peace

By Mike Donovan

President Richard Nixon emphasized the United States' role in world peace during a speech delivered Monday evening in the Student Union at Wisconsin State University. Nixon spoke on the theme of "United States in the World Peace Mission." He mentioned the importance of the United States in maintaining world peace and the need to work towards a world without war.

Nixon said that the United States must be prepared to face any threat to world peace and that the United States must be ready to use force if necessary. He added that the United States must work towards a world in which all nations live in peace and harmony.

After his address, Nixon was asked by a student if he would be able to win the election. Nixon responded, "I think so. It is not certain, but I think so." He added that he hoped to win the election for the country's sake and that he would continue to work towards a world without war.

The student asked if Nixon was worried about the possibility of a nuclear war. Nixon responded, "I am not worried about a nuclear war. I am worried about the possibility of a world war. I believe in a world of peace and I am working towards that goal."
The PODIUM

Willing to stand up for beliefs

Lyle Tuttleko, 21, junior, majoring in business education, from Independence.

Lyle: I characterize this student, the one I called "draft dodger," as one who is hiding somewhere. I don't believe he is really afraid, but he is afraid of being drafted because he may go and do things that he doesn't want to do. So he is trying to avoid doing this by hiding somewhere. If he is lying about his draft status, he is lying because he does not believe in the war.

When he is called up, he will be afraid to go. So I think he would have no objection to standing up for his beliefs. He would have no objection to staying in the country if being drafted means that he has to fight. He would have no objection to being drafted if it means that he has to fight for a cause he believes in.

Escape from other realities

Steve Goodman, 21, junior, majoring in psychology, from Boston University.

Steve: I feel that if we have a war, we will have to escape from other realities. We will have to escape from our problems here, and escape from our own lives. We will have to escape from the war.

As for me, when and if the time comes that I am called up for military service, I will go. I will go to war. I will go because I believe in the cause.

Proud to serve my country

Bruce E. Anderson, 21, junior, majoring in physics, from Milwaukee, U.W. College Ave.

Bruce: I feel that if I am called up, I will be proud to serve my country. I feel that I will feel good about serving my country in time of need.

But I would go to any extreme within the bounds of the law to avoid being a part of a little-liked regime, even if it meant going to jail.

The Pointer

The PODIUM

Willing to stand up for beliefs

Lyle Tuttleko, 21, junior, majoring in business education, from Independence.

Lyle: I characterize this student, the one I called "draft dodger," as one who is hiding somewhere. I don't believe he is really afraid, but he is afraid of being drafted because he may go and do things that he doesn't want to do. So he is trying to avoid doing this by hiding somewhere. If he is lying about his draft status, he is lying because he does not believe in the war.

When he is called up, he will be afraid to go. So I think he would have no objection to standing up for his beliefs. He would have no objection to staying in the country if being drafted means that he has to fight. He would have no objection to being drafted if it means that he has to fight for a cause he believes in.

Escape from other realities

Steve Goodman, 21, junior, majoring in psychology, from Boston University.

Steve: I feel that if we have a war, we will have to escape from other realities. We will have to escape from our problems here, and escape from our own lives. We will have to escape from the war.

As for me, when and if the time comes that I am called up for military service, I will go. I will go to war. I will go because I believe in the cause.

Proud to serve my country

Bruce E. Anderson, 21, junior, majoring in physics, from Milwaukee, U.W. College Ave.

Bruce: I feel that if I am called up, I will be proud to serve my country. I feel that I will feel good about serving my country in time of need.

But I would go to any extreme within the bounds of the law to avoid being a part of a little-liked regime, even if it meant going to jail.
WSU Students Obtain Degrees

(continued from page 3)

President James F. Perton, Kansas; Richard C. Witherspoon, Walla Walla; and Dr. Benjamin F. Metz, Moscow.

Soroka Discusses Stalinist Terror

By Bill McInerney

Dr. Wadsworth S. Soroka, a U.S.-based Russian historian who has written extensively on the subject of Soviet history, will present a lecture on Stalinist terror on Monday, May 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the University Union. The talk will explore the extent of terror during Stalin’s rule, focusing on the years 1937-1939 when millions of people were arrested, tried, and executed for so-called political crimes.

The lecture is part of a larger series of events being held to commemorate the 70th anniversary of the end of World War II. Soroka’s talk will provide a deeper understanding of the historical context in which Stalin’s terror occurred and the impact it had on Soviet society. The event is free and open to the public.

Soroka Discusses Stalinist Terror

By Bill McInerney

Dr. Wadsworth S. Soroka, a U.S.-based Russian historian who has written extensively on the subject of Soviet history, will present a lecture on Stalinist terror on Monday, May 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the University Union. The talk will explore the extent of terror during Stalin’s rule, focusing on the years 1937-1939 when millions of people were arrested, tried, and executed for so-called political crimes.

The lecture is part of a larger series of events being held to commemorate the 70th anniversary of the end of World War II. Soroka’s talk will provide a deeper understanding of the historical context in which Stalin’s terror occurred and the impact it had on Soviet society. The event is free and open to the public.

Soroka Discusses Stalinist Terror

By Bill McInerney

Dr. Wadsworth S. Soroka, a U.S.-based Russian historian who has written extensively on the subject of Soviet history, will present a lecture on Stalinist terror on Monday, May 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the University Union. The talk will explore the extent of terror during Stalin’s rule, focusing on the years 1937-1939 when millions of people were arrested, tried, and executed for so-called political crimes.

The lecture is part of a larger series of events being held to commemorate the 70th anniversary of the end of World War II. Soroka’s talk will provide a deeper understanding of the historical context in which Stalin’s terror occurred and the impact it had on Soviet society. The event is free and open to the public.

Soroka Discusses Stalinist Terror

By Bill McInerney

Dr. Wadsworth S. Soroka, a U.S.-based Russian historian who has written extensively on the subject of Soviet history, will present a lecture on Stalinist terror on Monday, May 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the University Union. The talk will explore the extent of terror during Stalin’s rule, focusing on the years 1937-1939 when millions of people were arrested, tried, and executed for so-called political crimes.

The lecture is part of a larger series of events being held to commemorate the 70th anniversary of the end of World War II. Soroka’s talk will provide a deeper understanding of the historical context in which Stalin’s terror occurred and the impact it had on Soviet society. The event is free and open to the public.
Demonstrations And Boycott Of Nixon Fail To Occur

By Paul F. Haisty

The students of the Emmons University College of Law were involved in a number of activities last week, but the most notable was a non-violent demonstration at the President's House. The demonstration was organized by the Student Action Committee (SAC) and was aimed at protesting the Vietnam War.

The demonstration began with a march around the Emmons University campus, starting at the Student Union Building and ending at the President's House. The march was led by the SAC and was joined by a large number of students, faculty, and community members.

At the President's House, the demonstrators held a rally, addressing concerns about the Vietnam War and the impact of the war on the students and faculty of Emmons University.

The demonstration was peaceful, with no violence or disruptions. The SAC organizers were happy with the turnout and the positive response from the community.

"We are glad to see so many people join us in our protest," said SAC President Jane Smith. "We hope that the President will listen to our concerns and take action to end the war."
WSU Enrollment Drops to 500

Self-employment rates grow

Of course, virtual tete- a-tete are often in new ways that we are not were ever designed. For WSU enrollment is on the decline, and the university is looking to attract more students.

Some students are choosing to self-employ themselves, which may be a sign of the times.

According to the university's latest numbers, enrollment has dropped by 500 students in the past year.

This is a concern for administrators, who are working to find new ways to attract and retain students.

During a recent meeting, university officials discussed the need for innovation in their marketing and recruitment efforts.

"We need to think differently about how we reach out to potential students," said one administrator.

"We can't just rely on the same old tactics."

Others agreed, saying that the university

needs to be more creative in its approach.

Still, some students are excited about the possibility of self-employment.

"I think it's great," said one student.

"It allows me to be more independent and in control of my own destiny."
Lunches

The school's cafeteria was buzzing with activity as students and staff alike gathered for their midday meal. The chefs were hard at work, preparing a variety of dishes to satisfy everyone's taste buds. The aroma of freshly baked bread filled the air, mingling with the scent of sizzling pans and simmering pots. Students chattered excitedly, anticipating their favorite dishes and sharing stories from their day so far. The cafeteria staff worked tirelessly to ensure that everyone's needs were met, from serving hot plates of steaming food to refilling condiment holders and keeping the dining areas clean and inviting. It was a bustling scene of camaraderie and nourishment, a moment of respite in the daily grind of school life.

Rebounding Power Defeats Falcons

By Tom Lasche

With a strong performance, the Pointers overcame the Falcons in a thrilling match. The Pointers' defense was unyielding, forcing the Falcons to struggle for every point. The Pointers' offense, on the other hand, was sharp and efficient, capitalizing on every opportunity to score. The final score was a decisive victory for the Pointers, 84-70, showcasing their talent and teamwork.

Intramural Scoring:

Point Goes On Scoring Spree

Trowens Undefeated, 123-79

By Tom Lasche

The Trowens continued their dominate performance, scoring a record-breaking 123 points against the Falcons. Their defense was impenetrable, shutting out the Falcons' attempts to score. The Trowens' offense was unstoppable, with every player contributing to the team's success. The final score of 123-79 was a testament to their skill and dedication.

Swimmers Finish Second

Hamline University was victorious, clinching the title with a score of 123-79. The Pointers fought hard, but were unable to match the Trowens' dominance. Despite the loss, the Pointers' performance was commendable, showing their potential for future competitions.

RENEW

President's Report

The Pointers are off to a strong start this season, with victories in both their home and away games. Our focus is on building on this momentum and preparing for the upcoming competitions. We encourage all members to stay committed and support the team in every way possible. Together, we can achieve greatness.

The Winona State Bulletin - October 1999