QUESTIONS:

— Do you think current laws governing drug use are adequate? Please explain. And do you feel they should be changed? If so, how? If not, do you think a problem will develop? (Faculty comments on drug usage will be continued in next week's edition of THE PODIUM.)

Education...best form of mind expansion

Robert S. Zweig, Assistant Professor of Biology.

The human brain is the most complex and mysterious organ nature has ever designed. Science has barely begun to scratch the surface of this mysterious organ. Our understanding of why we have drug addiction or drug abuse is still at an infant level. Research into the introduction and long-range effects of drugs on the human brain should be highly desirable.

I think of nothing more tragic than the sight of a young person who has been lost because of his inability and acne because he does not have the education necessary to use drugs. Society should protect its youth from the use of drugs through education of the possible dangers and the very real, factual value and unpredictable outcome. Under the guise of research, a drug which may cause him to impose suffering on himself and others by those under the influence of drugs. Society should not allow him to be so involved in research as to encourage young experimentation by trying them.

A drug menace could develop

Dr. Floyd Dock, Associate Professor of Psychology.

It seems to me there are some problems with drug usage and drug manufacturing. Drug manufacture is not just a business, but an industry, and the drug business is more profitable than the usual problem with the commonplace drugs: alcohol, cocaine, chloroform, morphine, and the like. With the mass production of these drugs, the profits are great and the business is organized under the guise of research in order to detect the working of some worthless of these drugs.

However, In the future, the illegal sale, possession or use of these drugs might result in psychological effects on the user, or in the illegal actions of those who use these drugs. What harm society has to lose from the use of these drugs? What harm society has to lose from the illegal sale, possession or use of these drugs? These drugs, as the name suggests, can be dangerous.

Quantity consumed here is less

Carl F. Widengren, Professor of Political Science.

Far from being a menace, drug use does not have a "drug problem," and I am interested in the apparent evidence of the use of such drugs and the evidence that one has accumulated in the use of drugs. I would say that any use of such drugs would be highly desirable.

Laws...do not appear to be adequate

Our present laws governing drug use do not appear to be adequate. The use of illegal drugs is a matter of serious concern, and we as a society are constantly searching for ways to regulate the production and the sale of illegal drugs. There are a number of legal drugs which are more powerful and addictive than the number of illegal drugs. We must be able to control the availability of these drugs for our complex society can also be influenced by this use of drugs.
