DeBot Talkback Features Dreyfus, Regent Williams

By Paul Jesty

"Each university should be beholden to the world to do what women have," said Regent Williams.

Regent Williams noted that prior to World War II women did not academically make the same educational demands as men but do so now.

Haines questioned if there should be a limit to women's capacity to do this.

One of the questions asked was why, if women are the same, they may not be exposed to the same curriculum. Dr. Dreyfus said that the colleges believe that men and women have different curricula.

Regent Williams stated that a woman's achievement is "wrestling" with what men have achieved. "Women are not major literatures or major movements, but the position of the MSU Student Senate is to be academic and for better literature.

The college did not pass if Dr. Dreyfus was not a woman and that the college will keep the same name.

The college has many handiwork teachers.

"If anything," said Mrs. Lorna, "I'd like to see this university teach handiwork and the arts, as well as the liberal arts teaching the academic, liberal arts students.

I want to be very, very much a part of this when my husband and I are retired."

Dr. Dreyfus also noted that there is no comprehensive class taught in the world of music and art.

The director expects his work to comprise this production much longer than the one in Tuesday's presentation.

Looking back at the time when I was a freshman in Madison, I remember that everyone there had some idea of what they were going to major in. But I was going to work in college. I was ready then because I had the feeling that if I couldn't do what I wanted in college, I couldn't ever do it. I also knew that I would probably be a college student for the rest of my life, so I wanted to be sure that I was doing something I could enjoy doing.

Brass Quintet Will Perform In Auditorium

Chamber music by the Brass Quintet will be presented at 8:30 p.m. on May 2 in a double bill with the Wisconsin State University-Platteville String Ensemble.

The evening's events will be the last of the Arts and Letters series, sponsored by the physics and music departments.

Dr. Donald D. Wilson, chairman of the physics department, said that the Brass Quintet, consisting of five players, will perform in the auditorium at 8:30 p.m. with the String Ensemble.

The performance will feature a variety of music, including works by Beethoven and Stravinsky. Wilson said that the quintet is renowned for its virtuoso playing and has performed in many prestigious venues around the world.

In addition to the music, there will be a discussion following the performance with the performers. Wilson encouraged students and community members to attend to enjoy the art and engage in meaningful conversation.

Tickets are available for $10 at the door or in advance by contacting the Box Office at 608-472-2000. The event is free to students and faculty with a valid ID.

The EASTERN BRASS QUINTET will perform in concert on Sunday night at 8 p.m. in the auditorium.

In the midst of pandemics, political strife, and civil unrest, there are still many who feel "uncomfortable." I am not one of them. I find solace in reading a daily dose of the latest, and I believe, most comforting news. The editor of the Wisconsin State Journal, in a recent issue, highlighted several important stories that have been missed by the mainstream media. It's a reminder that even in the darkest of times, there is still hope and progress to be achieved.

The Wisconsin State Journal is a daily newspaper that covers local and national news. It is owned by Gannett, a media company that publishes more than 350 newspapers and websites across the United States.
