Our Student Senate should demand from the Board of Regents representation in their deliberations which has occupied an area of student concern for some time. As it stands now, the United Council students may not be represented at all.

If Senate takes the initiative, it could be a meaningful year for students.

Women Haven High Demand

By PAUL WASSERMAN

We would dearly love it to be true, but it isn't. At least, not in the college situation.

And it is in the college setting that we are all too often faced with a host of problems stemming from the lack of personal communication or stimulation.

"Life is the sum of all our experiences," wrote the poet, "but it is the sum of all our experiences that makes life worth living." And if our experiences are to mean anything at all, we must learn to communicate with each other.

So, what happened to our friends? Where are all the conversations, the spontaneous sharing of ideas, the intimate discussions about our concerns? Where are all the meaningful relationships, the personal connections that make life worth living?

The answer lies in the fact that we no longer have the time or the incentive to communicate. Our lives are too busy, too hectic, too full of other things.

And so, we are left with our own thoughts, our own problems, and our own personal struggles to deal with. But is that really what we want? Isn't there more to life than just us and our problems?

The answer is yes. There is more to life than just us and our problems.

And one way to ensure that there is more to life is to communicate with each other. To share our experiences, our thoughts, our feelings. To make our lives richer, more meaningful.

And that's what the Student Senate can do. By demanding representation in the Board of Regents, they can ensure that the concerns of their constituents are heard.

So, let's support the Student Senate. Let's demand that our voices be heard. Let's demand that our lives be enriched.

Thank you.

Department Establishes Program To Widen Exposure To Students

The drama department at Purdue State University has established a program to make college drama more accessible to interested students.

The program, called PRIDE (Program to Reach with Involuntary Drama Enthusiasts), will be offered in two formats: a traditional play and a workshop-style session. The traditional play will be a classic American comedy, while the workshop will focus on modern, avant-garde plays.

The program is open to all students, regardless of major or academic background. Participants will receive credit for attending the events.

For more information, please contact the drama department at 765-494-1600.

Woods And Waters

By Dave Crehore

The future of hunting

For the third time that month, I stopped near a family of pheasants crossing the road. The first atmosphere was on the one hand, the wildness of the woods nearby.

There were no signs of human habitation. The hunting season had just ended, and the woods were deserted. I heard the sounds of pheasants chirping in the bushes nearby.

I rang the bell, and after a minute or so, an elderly, middle-aged lady came to the door. She asked me what I was doing there. I explained that I was there to interview her for a magazine.

She seemed surprised, but she welcomed me in.

The newspaper I was holding was one of the few on the stand at the local store. I started to

... A friendly expression

I asked her about hunting, and she told me that she usually hunted with her husband. She explained that he had passed away a few years ago and that she now hunted alone.

It was dark, and it was raining heavily. The sound of raindrops on the roof was so loud that we could hardly hear ourselves conversing.

It was raining and cold, and the lady seemed to be enjoying herself. The sound of raindrops on the roof was so loud that we could hardly hear ourselves conversing.
