Fitch Talks On Dissent, Pollution At Laird Day

BY PAUL FANT

"Can a Nation exist if its citizens are not related to a common faith?" is the question posed by President John F. Kennedy in his recent address to the nation. Fitch, who is a member of the University's Department of Religious Studies, centered his talk on the question of the role of religion in society.

Fitch spoke on the topic of dissent in American society. He argued that dissent is an important tool for the development of democracy. He cited examples from American history, such as the Civil Rights Movement, to illustrate his point.

Fitch also spoke on the issue of pollution, particularly as it relates to the environment. He presented statistics and facts to show the magnitude of the problem and the need for immediate action.

Fitch's talk was well-received by the audience, who were impressed by his clear and concise presentation.

Culture of Silence

Editor, The Pointer:

I would like to bring to your attention the growing problem of silencing in our society. It seems that everywhere we turn, there are efforts to stifle free speech and压制 various viewpoints. I believe it is crucial that we as a community work together to preserve our rights to express ourselves freely.

Rowland Evans Discusses Current Political Questions

By ELLIC PETERSSON

Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird arrived late in the meeting room, but caught up to the main thread of the discussion. The audience was engaged in a lively debate on the role of government in education and welfare. The session was part of a larger series of discussions on the future of the educational system.

Mr. Evans started the session by introducing the topic of education and welfare. He explained that the definition of education and welfare is ever-changing, and that the role of government in these areas is constantly under review.

Several students expressed concern about the growing emphasis on standardized testing and the impact it has on students and teachers. Mr. Evans acknowledged the importance of testing, but emphasized the need for a balanced approach that values both test scores and the overall educational experience.

The discussion then turned to the issue of welfare. Mr. Evans argued that welfare programs need to be reformed to ensure that they are effective in helping those in need. He noted that the current system often fails to provide adequate support to low-income families.

The session concluded with a call for a more inclusive and equitable educational system. Mr. Evans encouraged the audience to think critically about the role of government in education and welfare and to engage in the ongoing dialogue on these important topics.

MADISON—Reserve Officers' Training Corps programs at four of the Wisconsin State universities enrolled a total of 686 new cadets yesterday, the WECO university official said.

Students in the ROTC programs are enrolled in an effort to fill the vacancies of Superior, Oshkosh, Neenah, and Whitewater.

The oldest, and for 25 years the only existing ROTC program, is the one at Whitewater. In 1942, a reserve laboratory was established at Whitewater, and since then, the program has grown to a present size of 1,600 cadets. The program is administered by Lt. Col. Richard S. Beach, assistant professor of history.

At Oshkosh, the program is headed by Col. Robert G. Hites and has more than 1,000 cadets. The program is administered by Maj. Robert G. Hites, assistant professor of history.

At Superior, the program is headed by Lt. Col. Richard S. Beach, assistant professor of history.

Schedule Addition For Student Union

Professor Charges 'Deluding Action'

A Stevens Point University professor last week charged the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) with "unauthorized deliberate action" against a meeting on the use of DDT in Wisconsin.

Dr. Frederick Baumgartner, acting attorney for the state of Wisconsin, said attorneys for the state and the NAACP are making plans to settle the dispute over the NAACP meeting on the use of DDT in Wisconsin.

The dispute arises from a suit filed by the state against the NAACP, alleging that the NAACP has been deluding action in Wisconsin.

Dr. Baumgartner said the NAACP's activities in Wisconsin are "inconsistent with the state's policy on the use of DDT in Wisconsin.

The NAACP has been alleged to be deluding action in Wisconsin by making false statements and by engaging in activities that are not authorized by the state.

A meeting of the NAACP in Wisconsin was scheduled for last week, but it was postponed due to the dispute.

The NAACP has denied the charge and said it will continue its activities in Wisconsin.
