Antell Speaks
On Indian Education

Last Thursday night, Will Antell, Director of Indian Education, State of Minnesota, addressed the group on "Indian Education in Transition", as part of a monthly series on the American Indian.

Many Indians have a "lack of confidence in public school", he stated. He pointed out that this problem is caused by institutions which do not respond to the Indian cultural needs. Teachers are given little preparation in coping with these needs.

Teachers and textbooks are guilty of inflicting "their value systems" on their pupils. "They fail to recognize that an Indian culture exists," and he went on to say, "They have no respect for the characteristics of the Indian community!" Just getting the kids to school is not the solution. Antell feels, but making the program more meaningful for them. A 64.3 percent dropout rate is not because of Indian poverty. The dropout rate for the ghettos is only 35 percent.

Antell expressed disappointment in the government spending a half million on a 3 year survey done by Dr. Robert Havighurst, on the general conditions of Indian education. A similar survey done in Minnesota was completed in 3 months. Havighurst, when asked what recommendations he could make after completion on his study reported he had none. This lack of commitment disturbed Antell. He commented, "The Indian will not vanish just because the survey is over.

There is a large amount of indifference as far as the Bureau of Indian Affairs is concerned. The top educational post was vacant for well over a year due to indecision about who was to take the vacancy. The $1 million appropriated the BIA each year should be more carefully spent.

Obey Kicks Off E Week Tonight

Final preparation for "Earth Week" was accomplished last Tuesday by the Environmental Council. It was noted that high school students in the area have been invited to attend the presentations. It was revealed that President Dreyfus would introduce Senator Nelson and Congressman Dave Obey. The revised Schedule is as follows:

Monday: 7:00 p.m. - Congressman Dave Obey, Old Main Auditorium. Also movie: "A Time for Man"
Tuesday: 7:00 p.m. - Senator Nelson "Monday, One Year Later" Berg Gymnasium Wednesday: 7:00 p.m. - Willard Johnson, National Representative for Zero Population Growth, Inc. "Food Production and Population"
Thursday: 6:15 p.m. - Philip Frey from University of Wisconsin speaking on "Landscape and Environmental Design" Classroom Center Lecture Room 125
Sunday: 7:00 a.m. - Interdenominational Worship Service

Pour Haus Burns

On April 8th at 5:20 AM the Wausau police department received a call that the Pour Haus Bar in Stevens Point was burned. The next day the fire in the Owl Barn would be next if beer prices were not antel. Arson is suspected.

The Wausau police immediately notified the police in Stevens Point and the fire was put out only after extensive damage. Sheriff Nick Check said he didn't know what the monetary amount of damage was involved but "there is no question it is in the thousands of dollars." He further noted that there were suspects but "that's as far as I can go on it."
NOW Group Seeks Women's Equality

establishing day-care facilities for the community; revising the mis-interpretation with respect to sex roles in the American educational system; revising Social Security laws which discriminate against married and widowed women who have worked, in the payment of benefits; revising tax laws to eliminate sex discrimination and to permit deduction of home and child care expenses in income taxes of working parents; NOW works for the enactment of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment pending in Congress.

NOW is a civil rights organization pledged to work actively to bring women into full participation in the mainstream of American society, exercising all the privileges and responsibilities in truly equal partnership with men.

U.S. Senator Gaylord Nelson, a leader in the national ecological awareness crusade that began last year will speak April 20 as part of Stevens Point State University's Earth Week- II—Environmental Sensitivity.

The Wisconsin Democrat will give his public address at 8 p.m. in the Berg Gymnasium of the Fieldhouse according to Earth Week planners from the University Environmental Club.

Also looked for the seven day observation of a campus as a suitable place to think of a campus as a community and therefore should offer the services of a community. This project is just a beginning.

Landlord Of The Week

Mrs. Robert Daniels has been selected landlord of the week as she and her husband rent nine apartments to students.

Most of the apartments are fairly satisfied since the apartments are close to campus, but some apartment-renting relationships and two are a little high in rent. One apartment, for example, is rather small consisting of only a kitchen, bedroom, living room combination and a new completely modern bathroom. This facility is rented to two girls at $114.00 a month.

Another apartment, two bedrooms and a bathroom, is rented to four men for $148.00 a month. This flat could use some remodeling.

There are some significant inconveniences like a bathroom off a bedroom where there are two other fellows in the apartment with early classes. One bathroom outside an apartment off the main hallway in another house. Even with these shortcomings, the apartments are fairly adequate. One explained it like this, "The apartments are not really lacquered but the landlord is slow in making repairs." Things like storm windows are put up late in the year and remain off well into the spring season.

When asked what problems she had encountered as a landlord dealing with students, Mrs. Daniels explained, "They don't seem to feel that they have to live up to the contract, but they expect to give the notice and not really look at the contract. We went on to cite a few examples, one being the contract of repair and two are a little high in rent.

Mrs. Daniels explained, "when she has encountered as a landlord of the week, All interested Social Security laws which organization. The National Organization for Women, includes men and women dedicated to action which will change the conditions which prevent women from developing to their full human potential. NOW realizes that women's problems are linked to many broader questions of social justice. Convinced that human rights for all are indivisible, it gives support to the common cause of equal right for all those who suffer discrimination and deprivation, and calls upon other organizations committed to such goals to support its efforts towards equality for women.

Students to Get Part-time Lawyer

Arrangements are being made to hire a lawyer who would be available for free legal advice to WSU-SP students. During Easter break seven graduate students were interviewed and all of them said they would like them to be.

The Pointer was impressed by the improvements made the past several years and believes that if the Daniels continue at this pace, they will set a fine example of what student housing could look like.
Campus Parking: Stuck In The Big Muddy

Even with the lack of planning in the past, it seems to most students that there is no solution to the present parking problem. Mr. Specht addresses this contention by stating: "The basic problem is dollars, the prioritization of projects, as set by the Legislature and Building Commission, and I guess by anyone who reasons that this thing out, would be: 'Well if the money were available, we've got to build the buildings first.'" The result of such priorities, is that new campus parking lots, has created the present lack of parking space. The only right point from which he has always supported the idea of an open campus opposed to the closed urban "building upon building" concept. He believes that we can still salvage the parking situation. The idea he proposes for the future are of course regulated by final Legislative and Building Commission approval and formulated within the plans already set by the commission for the overall campus construction and growth. Changes made in such construction and growth afford limpid prospect to any hope for a swift and solution to the current problem. In fact the situation may indeed rectify. Following its priority list, traditionally prioritized and built before parking lots, the Building Commission contributes little to significantly improve the situation.

Along the plans now on the drawing board are three major construction blueprints which will complete a "parking lot". A great deal of parking space now ideally situated near most campus facilities. First in the line of construction, as pointed out by Mr. Specht is a plan for the building of an Environmental Science Building. The new facility, to be known as the College of Environmental Resources, is an addition to our campus, unfortunately its location will call an end to parking lot X and Z, possibly Y. The original location for the Environmental building had been east of the Science Center but home ownership pressure in that area and building pressure through the Legislature ended all hopes of construction on-bal-site. Construction of the building is now expected to begin near the end of this year at the present location of parking lot X and Y. Parking in lot Y will remain until construction begins. Lots X, Y, and Z are located north of the Learning Resources Center and Fine Arts Building.

A plan for an addition to the Science Center to be constructed was revealed by Mr. Specht. The building is expected to be on the present location of Old Main. The Science Center is a waiting pleasure, and parking spaces are distributed lot by lot in the Science Center. The expansion of the Science Center will be made under the auspices of the Science Center.

Jesus Christ: Superstar Or Supercop?

Jesus was a sailor
When he walked upon the water
And he spent a long time watching
From a lonely wooden tower
And when he knew for certain
Only drowning men could see him
He said All men will be sailors then
Until the sea shall free them
But he himself was broken
Long before the sky would open
L. Cohen

“Religion,” William James said, “is a monumental chapter in the history of human egoism.” The Church as an institution today has and will continue to undergo “ego” changes, both in its structure and its conceptions to better meet human need and spiritual guidance.

The purpose of this article is to give some insight into the religious values, concepts, and beliefs in our community. The Pointer, first asked a cross section of students to write their answer to the question, “Why might you become a Christian member of the Vets Club.” The last student the Pointer picked to answer the question was George Schumacher, a member of the Vets Club, George said, “As a non-Christian in this Christian society, the main contradiction I see between Church’s philosophy and the capitalistic conception of this country is that the beliefs are opposed to each other, so radically that they reach in finite on each end of the spectrum. You must either be a brotherhood to none other.” George seems bitter about the society as a whole and thinks we should pity not only people caught up in personal gain, but pity our children’s seeds are cast from every corner, everyday. My cave awaits me - thank you and God, he wrote.

In an age where men find themselves questioning the benevolence and institutional foundations within our society and the world, the Pointer has called upon a Minister, a philosopher and a political theorist to share with us their thoughts on religion.

Christianity: a view from the institution
There are a variety of organizations amongst this community and University that are typical of the American conception of religious experience. The three structures, crucial to Church hierarchy, and religious teaching, are ecumenical, denominational and non-denominational. All exist in Stevens Point.

The purpose of the Christian religious experience as Reverend James Schneider, affiliated with the University Christian Center views it, is to bring to the forefront the “good news” happening today in line with Jesus Christ. “Good news” is dependent upon situations and events that occur in the community and in the world each day. “Christian services create an atmosphere of becoming more humanistically and let people experience the joy there is in a Christian education.” Schneider related.

Father Brockman opened a Wednesday morning Mass in tribute to St. Patrick. “Our acts of faith should be shared on this St. Patrick’s Day. Christianity might not have survived during the Dark Ages if it had not been for Irish Catholicism.” Theurgy and prayer were immediately united in the song, “Clap your hands,” which was immediately followed in prayer.

Father Brockman read verbatim, a segment of Exodus concerning the Ten Commandments and asked if they were any questions about them.

The consecration and prayer was next and then the people in the pews greeted Father Brockman and exchanged “hellos” to each other.

In the second reading, Father Brockman discussed St. Patrick’s entrance as a vital part of the new law given to us by Christ.

The song, “Of my hands” preceded the Lord’s Prayer and the good Father left us for the day with these words, “In the Lord’s mercy, keep us free from sin. Grant us the unity and peace of the Kingdom.

The future of institution of religion
From a man who works inside and within the institution, Schneider thought that we could foresee “no great growth of church membership, in terms of people, but the church will always exist. If it dissolves as a structure, something else will take its place.”

Jesus Christ is a needed structure because it serves the world. Many people who have joined a church are those who “want to get away from involvement,” instead of realizing the future is a vital involvement in the world. To be involved, one must perpetually keep the “tensions” between Individual - Society, Faith - Work, God - Man, conscious. For us to move toward a more human world we must keep testing the Pointer and keep a sharp edge in order for imagination and thinking to exist.

The question was asked of Reverend Schneider how he felt about the current and popular trend of youth directed self centered religious practice, “Jesus freaks,” “I think it’s a trip related to drugs. Those people are looking for simple answers and are just escaping. Mainly, they seem to be fundamentalists, and they miss a lot of what it is to be alive in a Christian society. These people become, consciously or unconsciously become pawns of the system.”

Miracles: Christ’s significance?
Q. What is a miracle?
A. It is something which we cannot explain away. The congregation itself hinges upon our ignorance. In Jesus’ life more people were much more ignorant than today, so more “miracles” were being performed. Jesus was not the only person performing “miracles” at that time. Something else was important about a miracle was its purpose, there was nothing unique about Jesus performing “miracles” but what they proclaimed - the presence of the “breaking” of God, this created a new power at work in the Universe and this is what is so significant about Jesus Christ.

I believe in just the miracles of Christ, Schneider said, “I am not to believe in God since those things don’t happen anymore, faith would be gone. On the other hand, if we believe in the Universe and this is what is so significant about Jesus Christ.”

Dr. A. Herman of the philosophy department was asked by the Pointer if he could find some relationships, if any, between our everyday experience and the influence it has on Christianity as a whole. Dr. Herman - respond by saying that the western religious consciousness was influenced directly through England’s confrontation with the politically non-violent action
High Enrollment Brings More Faculty

Bracing for another big freshman class here, campus officials announced today that 63 new positions will be required to handle the extra work load next fall.

According to Controller Paul Kelch, 63 new jobs will be added in the faculty ranks and 29 in the classified civil service. The total numbers will then be 561 faculty and 344 in the classified and self-sustaining category.

Kelch said the state legislature's joint finance committee must approve the positions before hiring can get underway, however, he's optimistic that action favorable to the university is forthcoming simply because of the need factor.

The enrollment is expected to increase at least by 500, and as of March 1, the campus is leading the nine-member Wisconsin State University System in the number of new freshmen admitted for fall.

Last fall's enrollment was 8,720.

Consequently, the increase in new jobs here will be the largest at the UW-SP campus. To compensate for gains at schools expecting more, one of the positions will be staff reductions at several others where enrollments are either leveling off or heading downward, it has been learned.

Kelch said new classified positions here probably will be filled almost exclusively by central Wisconsin residents because most of these jobs will involve either clerical or

Special Ed Classes Planned

Stevens Point, which in recent years has emerged as a leader in the field of training specialists in the field of communicative disorders, is making plans to establish a special evening class next fall for pre-school deaf and hard of hearing children of the area.

The plans aren't definite; however, because, according to the school of communicative disorders, are not certain of the need. Dr. Gerald Johnson, who heads the division, issued a request that parents wishing to enroll their children contact him either by phone or letter. The latest telephone number is 346-3667.

There is a special class of that nature offered regularly in Wausau, so Johnson expects students will be coming from the Wisconsin Rapids-Marshfield area.

The class will be geared for children up to age 6, but Johnson encourages anyone who seeks assistance in deaf education contact him.

Stevens Point State has a speech and hearing clinic which for several years has served children from a wide area. The school offers the only deaf education major in the state University System and has developed its clinic for instructional purposes as well as a community service.

Crow Elected

Faculty Chairman

Dr. Frank Crow, who this fall will begin his 25th year as a professor in the Wisconsin State University, is the new faculty chairman here. The group he heads involves more than 500 persons serving in teaching assignments.

He will assume duties this summer, replacing Richard Schneider of the art department, who held the post for two years. Dr. Crow, who teaches history and served many years as chairman of his department, described Dr. Robert Engelhard as the new faculty chairman here. The group he heads involves more than 500 persons serving in teaching assignments.

juniors. Opening of a new Professional Studies Building in August will create a need for four new men in the cuspidal corps, he added.

Not included in the new positions will be two openings for physicians and one for a nurse. The university authorized the three posts last year from the self-sustaining budget (money coming in from student activity fees and dollars) but had difficulty finding interested candidates.

However, one medic signed a contract recently and will join the health service in April, and another hopefully will be hired later in the year. The nurse is expected to be hired this summer, too.

Kelch said even though the university is authorized to add new positions to an already rapidly growing staff, it will continue to strictly adhere to Governor Lucey's austerity program. There has been a sharp cutback in many activities involving students and faculty, such as travel, use of supplies and contractual services.

The controller noted that Stevens Point will get operating funds from the state based on a formula of $125 for each student. That figure is $5 more than received in 1970, but with six percent rate of inflation is considered, Kelch said the raise is diminished and the school actually has less in operating funds this year than in the past.

The Phosphate Society

There is a relatively new organization here on campus which will probably interest people studying Natural Resource and Biology in particular. It is a student chapter of an international professional society.

The International Phosphate Society is simply called the Phosphate Society. It is a longstanding professional society of people begun as the Society of Phosphate Specialists in 1936. From there it has developed to what it is today.

The stated objectives of the society are to (1) maintain and extend the highest possible professional standards; (2) to provide for all phases of phosphate management along sound biological lines; and (3) to disseminate publications and other information that will accomplish these ends.

The Wisconsin State University - Stevens Point Student Chapter of the Phosphate Society, Inc. hopes to accomplish these objectives at the local level. To quote Dr. Anderson, of the Natural Resource Department here, "Although we are concerned about the total ecological picture in the world, we are concentrating our efforts in the form of service, education study and action on those areas that relate directly to the status of phos., This, by its ecological nature is a broad area. We hope to be of service to the state of Wisconsin in this respect."

The student chapter here at Stevens Point is the first student chapter of The Phosphate Society in the great lakes area. One of its immediate objectives is the discontinuation of bounties in Portage county, and making Portage county a leader in destroying bounties in the state. Another immediate goal on the local level is the management of 3,000 acres of public land here in Central Wisconsin; a project too often left under any type of management at the present time.

Open Letter From Gleason

Ladies and Gentlemen:

This is a direct appeal to you members of the student body! Please do come to Gleason on April 23 or April 30. Here are our reasons for making this request:

1. Gleason is primarily a retirement community in which we enjoy our quiet atmosphere. It should not be difficult for you to understand the frightening and unpleasant aspects of having a large crowd converging on us.

2. Last year, many village residents worked hard to feed and house you and there were many reports of fine friendships developed through this effort. In spite of this spirit of cooperation, the community experienced just too much trouble during the weekend. There was property damage to several businesses, numerous thefts, and wholesale littering of the roadways and private property.

To illustrate our present feelings on the matter: this year, most of the businesses in the village, including all three taverns, will be closed if you visit us. In addition, many property owners have already stated their intention to post their lands against trespassing.

We realize that many of the incidents described above were simulated by students from other schools, as well as nonstudents, who were attracted to your gathering. However, it is your help that we most need to prevent a recurrence of the problem.

3. The extra expense and drain on the resources of the law and many Harm agencies involved in an event of this nature affect you as much as they do us.

4. The news media have, in recent years, given broad coverage to the activities of students in the fight to improve our environment, and your school is acclaimed throughout Wisconsin as a leader in natural resource management and education. With these facts in mind, we hope that you will realize that the promotion of a gathering which could attract two or more thousand people into a village of 200, whose sewage system is designed to accommodate a maximum of 800 people, does too things to public opinion; first, it gives the impression that the school is not reaching its students with regard to the seriousness of environmental problems and, secondly, it indicates that the students themselves do not practice what they preach.

In conclusion, Gleason is a clean, quiet, friendly and uncrowded village— that's why we live here. We invite you individually, or in small groups, at any time, but please do not force a mass gathering upon us.

Approved by the qualified electors and entered into the official minutes of the Annual Meeting of the Town of Russell, Lincoln County Wisconsin on April 6, 1971.

American Failure In Vietnam

Don Lace and John Sommer, Viet Nam - The Unheard Voices; Cornell University Press, Ithaca and London.

Reviewed by Brent Hanson

The United States is greatly concerned about the political situation in South Viet Nam due to its support of, or opposition to, the Saigon government. This is the basic theme of a most enlightening book entitled Viet Nam - The Unheard Voices. It is also a statement that I agree with wholeheartedly.

Before I can reveal the reasons why Lace and Sommer give for stating that the U.S. is undermining its own mission, I will have to determine what that mission is which we are undermining. I am positive that our cause was not purely a military one, at least at first. Of course during these few troubled years many Americans, sick of war, died, of the whole Southeast Asian Situation - may have come to this frame of mind. It is evident that many people have probably reduced the problem down to one of ending the Vietnam War and the immediate cost (to Viet Nam - The Unheard Voices) of this, so because it is on the lips of many of my university friends. They certainly comprehend the mission in complete pull-out, or else an overtaken Vietnam in the ghosts of their superiors - their inexperienced estimations - demolish the Viet Cong once and for all. But when we first entered Vietnam, as guests, I believe that our mission was much more admirable than one of purely military considerations or more terrible than what we have gleaned from the speeches of various politicians, such as President Johnson. I do not remember the words of any before; I can only say that I was a younger - as was I. At any rate, at that time we entered the country in order to ensure that the Vietnamese people would remain free to determine their own future. This would not be true, from terror, and tyranny, as is the case today. It is what I have come to understand of our policy. An open letter to President Johnson, which is printed in this book and which was written by forty-nine International Voluntary Services workers, said the same thing most movingly: "Our primary objective as 'helping the people of Vietnam' (p. 315)."

Having reviewed America's participation in the Vietnam War, I am positive that the United States government - which the United States has so bitterly supported now matter what happened to be in charge. The lack of responsibility on the part of Vietnam's public officials really is the prime cause of corruption. Here again, say the authors, the Americans are at fault. We are told that the whole economy is based upon serving the American troops. They tell us that bar girls, black market people, and prostitutes are among the highest paid people in the country. Certainly, explain the authors, we cannot blame the poor inhabitants of this war-torn land. The writers skillfully recount the events which have led from one corrupt government to the next. At one time there were ten different governments in twenty months. The corrupt provincial officials, who do not bother with responsibilities because they feel that the Americans can take care of their problems, just slide from one regime to the next, and the they tell us of one Vietnamese journalist who had been able to remember their crattered rice fields and defoliated forests, ravaged villages, and lives that seem at war with the very land they had grown in. As I read this book, I gradually become aware of the fact that at last someone was revealing the truth about the American role in Vietnam. The co-authors are both distinguished former members of International Voluntary Services. They both have spent many years in the rural villages, and both speak the language fluently, enabling them to understand the things that were happening around them. The credibility of their facts, in my opinion, is almost beyond doubt. They have written with much fervor and feeling. In addition to this, I can find no instances where the truth has been stretched. Concerning the conclusions that the authors draw from this evidence, I must say that they are unequivocal in my opinion. They, and their IVS co-workers, have given five recommendations to the American government. Briefly these are: de-escalation of the war, discontinuance of defoliation, a halt to the bombing in North Vietnam, recognition of the National Liberation Front, and, finally, turning the Vietnam War issue over to an international peace commission. Almost every facet of the war, as it applies to the Vietnamese people, is covered in Viet Nam - The Unheard Voices. The book begins with several candid remarks concerning the ticklish circumstances under which IVS has to operate. From there the discussion goes on to Viet Nam - The Unheard Voices become apalling when the reader realizes how responsive the Saigon government really is. The authors do not come right out and say it, but at times they do imply that the South Vietnamese people might be better off under the Communists. Dear President Dreyfus,

The following recommendations are being forwarded to you to bring to the attention of students. Student recommendations are reviewed by the faculty, placing student opinion on the bottom of the University totem pole. In bypassing the faculty, we are changing the traditional channels of recommendations and increasing the student input.

This University has a tradition of involvement with our natural resources. We feel it is only fitting that our concerns about the environmental crisis be voiced and that ecologically unsound practices be reduced whenever possible. Presently, we are consuming thousands of metal soft drink containers each week. The hazards of such actions have been pointed out on many occasions. Therefore, we believe that before vending contracts for academic year 71-72 are approved, safeguards against the existing situation should be developed which would require all soft drinks vended on campus to be vended in reusable glass bottles.

Students are currently represented in less than half of our academic departments, some with voting privileges. We feel it is important to allow at least minimal student participation at the department level and have received little cooperation from the faculty. This is not a demand for voting student representatives in department matters. It is simply a request that students, in any manner an individual department desires, be represented in some departmental affairs.

As you know, there has been considerable student opposition to the existing physical education requirements. Student Senate has devised several alternatives to the present situation. We feel it would be appropriate for you to examine the situation and proposed changes. Perhaps a student-faculty committee could be created by your office to further investigate and make recommendations to you. In any event, we feel the issue is important to the students of this university and should not be swept aside for another year.

These recommendations are intended to give you an indication of student opinion on several key University issues. Be advised that we will continue to pass recommendations on to your office without approaching the faculty, which is free to issue dissenting opinions on any or all recommendations.

Sincerely,
Scott Schultz
Student Senate President

Slob Of The Week
To The Editor:
I applaud the Pointer photographer assigned to expose the "landlord of the week." If he has any time to spare I suggest that he train his camera on some equally disgraceful scenes on campus. For a starter he might report to the classroom center about midway through any school day, sitting in the nose guide him to the heaviest concentration of cigarette smoke on any floor of all "air classes" are passing. I promise it would be hard to capture on film the transformation of breathable air into dense clouds of nicotine poison, forced on smokers and non-smokers alike. But at least the camera could record the flotsam and filth that accompany the habit...floors strewn with matchbooks, wall-to-wall scatterings of ash, dead stubs ground into the floor with heavy black heels and resultant indelible foot-stains which no amount of scrubbing will ever remove from the virtually new floor covering.

How about a "slob of the week" award to playfully single out the slob-smokers? Then, perhaps, the school psychologists could conduct follow-up studies to determine how a tiny roll of tobacco can induce a normally considerate human being to callously inflict headaches and nausea on his fellow-man with hilarity and glee.

Governments, large and small, seem to have a built-in penchant for approaching societal problems, large and small, with the application of force, in its many forms. We witness this daily in news reports from Southeast Asia to Mifflin Street. To develop an argument, outlining the nature of force in government, would require far more time and space than available here, but we may note that even the most trivial "governing" body is susceptible to the use of coercion. A case in point is our own student government.

Anyone acquainted with the student government here cannot be overly impressed with its mechanical approach to university problems and, by recent indications, this has caused some frustration within student government circles. We refer specifically to student Senate Resolution No. 36 and a proposed Student Assembly resolution calling for obligatory Student Assembly representation. As the status of these resolutions is undecided as of this

Merging The Systems
A week ago, the state senate's education committee conducted a public hearing here at the university as an attempt to ascertain public sentiment regarding Governor Lucey's plan to merge the two university systems. Like most committee meetings this one was very tedious, but very disturbing.

The key word in almost all of the discussion was 'prestige.' We do not want to dilute the prestige of the University of Wisconsin at Madison. The state universities want the opportunity to develop their own prestige. They don't want to borrow it from Madison by simply borrowing the name. Most of the other problems concern faculty teaching loads, salaries, tenure procedure, bureaucracy, and other incidental matters.

What is not a major talking about it, is State of Wisconsin. However, the question in the system does is with the issue of quality. Madison is a quals prestigious and bec

Thai Facts Questioned

To the Editor,

I was outraged after reading the article "War in Thailand" in the March 29th issue of THE POINTER. The writer took a very unrealistic view towards the problems facing that country. As a Thai, I feel that it is my duty to defend the position of my government against such accusations.

Approximately 84-85 percent of Thailand's 31 million people are ethnic Thais. Compared to the American standard, Thai farmers are very poor. But except for the people in the Northeastern part of the country, they can survive in content with their living. The Northeastern part of the country has not been neglected. A $30,000,000, 3-year program was initiated in 1962 to improve the living condition of the people in that area. It was followed by many other programs. But our efforts may not have affected everyone person living here but it shows that the Thai government is concerned about the problems of the Northeast.

"Unresponsive to the needs of the peasants" as Miss Murray suggested. The fact is, the administration now is how to find sufficient funds to help those farmers.

When Miss Murray called the Thai government "extremely unresponsive" she was unaware of the fact that the present Thai government was elected by Thai people and was endorsed by the Thai king. Traditionally, Thai people support the government which their king has accepted. Like most other national government it is a headache within the Thai government. This is a problem which is not solved. If we have any idea of what quality education is can we begin to ask how can we best (and most economically, if you wish) bring this about.

If one wishes to venture the remark that we already do have quality education, perhaps he should visit the highschools and speak to the graduating seniors and ask them what they think of education. If one is till not convinced that our educational institutions are failing, he need only look at the mess our world is in.

Earth Week

To the Editor,

This is not a letter concerning the Greeks, Residence Hall Council, Student Senate or Student Assembly, or any program held by these groups. This concerns us all.

The week of April 19-25 has been designated as Earth Week by Senator Gaylord Nelson. The environmental action goes on campus (ZPG, Environmental Council) have planned various speakers and panel events. We each would like to hear about student activity and the fact that nothing is being done well some are doing things. If you are concerned about yourself, you too will participate. Not only during Earth Week, but every day of your life.

Remember, the week to actively start showing your concern is EARTH WEEK April 19-25.

Respectfully yours,

Leos Wipachanin
If officers of a newly-formed foundation can swing it, students on campus will get free legal assistance, more opportunities for scholarships and financial aid, and even special rates on merchandise from local stores.

The youths, all members of the student senate, are having papers unopposed filed this week with Wisconsin's secretary of state and hope to be in full operation next fall.

They believe their organization will be unique in higher education throughout the country by the nature of services offered. Money will be earned through special projects, gifts and membership dues at a rate of $2 per year from any interested student.

The treasury already has $2,000 with funds received from Globe Life Insurance for a list of every student on campus and their address, which will be used in a selling campaign by company representatives.

When Old Main, the university administration building, is torn down presumably later in this decade, the foundation plans to salvage bricks, mount a picture of the building to each block and sell them to alumni.

To be known as the Stevens Point University Student Foundation, the charter officers are Ray McMillion, sophomore secondary education major and son of Mr. and Mrs. George McMilion of 100 A W. Glen St., Creadon, president; Mike Papero, senior psychology major and son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Purcell of 4263 S. Lenox St., Milwaukee, vice president; W. Scott Schultz, junior political science major, and son of Mr. and Mrs. William Schultz of 1231 W. W. I. building and controller; James McGivern, sophomore communications major and son of Mr. and Mrs. William McGivern of 3131 N. Bartlett, Milwaukee, public relations director; and Anna Sparks, sophomore English major and son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Sparks of 328 E. Doty Ave., Neenah, recording secretary.

Schulz, president of the senate, said that governmental body is not officially dealing with the foundation by avoid establishing ties between the state and the foundation and thus assure total independence.

However, senators have passed resolutions which make it possible for the foundation to be established and members of an older and more powerful university foundation, which supports university pursuits of a nature different than the new organization, are also helping.

As described in Army training manuals CS is also used in conjunction with artillery and air strikes. If the chemical agent is placed on the target immediately prior to bombardment with anti-personnel munitions the enemy may be panicked into leaving his cover to escape the CS and thereby be rendered more vulnerable to conventional arms.
Anti-pollution On Campus

Students in Pray-Sims have formed an anti-pollution committee and are engaging in various activities to help stop the pollution on the WSU-Stevens Point campus. And what are they doing to help? How are they helping? Perhaps the point isn’t in what they are doing, but why they are doing it.

Although the methods involved to help stop pollution in Stevens Point appear insignificant and minor at the moment, it is not necessarily the method behind it, but the fact that someone, somebody, has actually started to do something. Pray-Sims, and now Roach Hall, have helped to start the campaign. Hopefully, it will flourish and spread out to not just two halls, but the entire campus.

It is an anti-pollution committee engaged in various activities to help stop pollution on campus and in the city itself. The brain-storming began at a retreat, at which Pray-Sims attended. After the retreat was over, a representative from Pray-Sims talked to the Resident Hall President Councils from Roach to help promote the idea. Resident Hall President Janet Johnson started the ball rolling for Roach. She asked a representative to come to a meeting at the hall to talk to the girls about the ideas. The plans were backed up by Roach, and Sheila Hilgers became chairman of the committee for ecology for Roach Hall. The procedures began at Roach, like the procedure at Pray-Sims: collecting papers to send to the paper mill for reprocessing, turning the bubblers off when not in use; stressing the use of using one shower at a time, especially in the men’s dorms, where several showers are turned on at the same time to start warming up the area, keeping the lounge lights off during the day, and many other little ways to save on electricity and power, in turn to help diminish the pollution problem.

The idea of anti-pollution on campus should not be restricted to only two halls. Janet Johnson, and also Larry Oberman of Pray-Sims, who helped to “begin it” there, feel that it must be a universal idea. The plans must be accepted and put in use throughout the campus. The plans are being passed along to the Allen Center side of campus now, but soon hope to be distributed on the Deltob side, also.

A collection of photographs illustrating lumbering activities in Central Wisconsin between 1890 and 1940 has been added to the area depository of historical materials at the University.

United States v. Abbott is a good example of how this rule operates. Abbott sought the C.O. exemption but his request was denied. He was ordered for induction, refused, and was prosecuted.

For C.O. status he was in- terviewed by his local board. The file indicated that Abbott had made out a legally sufficient case of conscientious opposition to participating in war in any form by reason of his religious training and belief. The only question was whether he was sincere. At the trial it came out that the board members had found Abbott to be sincere at his interview. This conclusion, however, and the reasoning behind it, were never recorded in the file.

The Court recognized that a local board may find that an applicant lacks sincerity in his beliefs because his demeanor demonstrates a shiftiness or evasive attitude which would substantiate irreliability. However—and this is the key point—the Court added: "(It) is uniformly held that a mere disbelief is not sufficient support for (rejection of a C.O. claim) without some affirmative evidence . . . Fundamental due process requires that the defendant be entitled to either know or be able to infer from the file itself the basis for the rejection of a conscientious objector claim."

There fore, if your claim for deferment or exemption is rejected, the reason must be somewhere in the file. A competent draft counselor or attorney can, therefore, tell you looking at the file whether the board has acted unlawfully. The mere statement that a registrant was insincere is not enough; the board must explain why they came to that conclusion and this explanation must be in writing in the file.

Of course, boards can be expected to create standard rejection phrases which they will tack onto each file. This rule has occurred already in at least one case. But a conscientious draft counselor can often detect such procedures. If you feel you have made out a sufficient case for any deferment or exemption and your claim is denied, get a copy of your file and bring it to a draft counselor or attorney. Boards are not free to reject claims without explanation. And very often when an explanation is forced out into the open, it will not withstand the scrutiny of court.

We welcome your questions and comments. Please send them to "Mastering the Draft," Suite 1202, 60 East 42nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Vets News

Veterans in training under the G.I. Bill were reminded by the Veterans Administration today that they are entitled to more money when they get married or have children.

For example, VA said, a full-time student in school will have his $175 a month increased to $205 if he becomes a father.

Veterans taking cooperative, apprenticeship, on-the-job or farm cooperative training also have their VA payments increased when they get married and have children. Apprenticeship and on-the-job trainees get additional payments for only two dependents, while the others get them for all dependents.

Previously, VA said, veterans could be paid the additional amounts only from the date they notified the VA of their new dependent. Under legislation effective Dec. 24, 1970, however, students have one year from the event to present the marriage license or birth certificate to the VA.

Since the new law is not retroactive, veterans students who were married or had a child before Dec. 24, 1970, and failed to notify the VA, can be paid only from that date, VA said.

Veterans who are eligible for increased payments were urged to contact their local VA office.

Portage County Veterans Service Officer, Ernest P. Marchel announced today that many Vietnam veterans are now eligible for state of Wisconsin veterans benefits.

Department of Defense instruction dated 4 January 1965 indicates that service in Cambodia, Thailand and Laos from 3 July 1965 to a date to be announced will qualify for the Vietnam Service Medal. The area of service is designated in the instruction. Air Space and Contiguous Waters are included. Service is specified as being "in direct support of operations in Vietnam."

Veterans with such service are now eligible for State of Wisconsin benefits under Wisconsin statutes. Corrections to the Veterans separation papers can be made at the Veterans Service Office, County Building and will finalize Wisconsin eligibility.

Editor's Note:

Why disregard those fine fighting men who served there prior to 3 July 1965?

If you haven't yet discovered Mexican food—other than the ubiquitous and bastardized "chili"—its time that you did. Mountain Pass Canning Company produces a use of canned Mexican ingredients, "Old El Paso Vibrant Mexican Foods," which is generally available in grocery stores. But their sauces are probably too highly spiced for you to begin with, and homemade tortillas are much preferable to their canned ones. They do however provide a good set of recipes—using their ingredients. Write them at P.O. Box 226, Anthony, Texas 82021, if you're interested.

My good friend Shirley suggests the following two recipes, which use familiar ingredients.

Mexican Meatball Soup

1 lb. ground chuck
1/4 C corn meal
1 egg, lightly beaten
2 cloves garlic, finely minced
3/4 t crushed corn meal
salt and pepper to taste
1/4 C chopped onion
2 T olive oil or butter
21 chili powder or more, to taste
1 1/2 C chicken broth
1 1/2 C tomato juice

Combine meat with corn meal, egg, half the garlic, cumin, coriander, salt & pepper. Mix well and shape into balls about 1/2 to 1 inch in diameter. Heat oil in a medium-size saucepan and cook onion and remaining garlic in it until wilted. Stir in chili powder, chicken stock, and tomato juice. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, and simmer 10 minutes. Add meat balls, cover and cook 10 minutes longer. 4 to 6 servings.

Tamale Pie

Filling:

1780
2 onions, finely chopped
1 lb. cloves garlic, finely minced
1 green pepper, chopped
1/4 C ground chuck
17 T chili powder
1/4 t ground cumin
1 t oregano
2 C tomato sauce
1 1/2 C corn (12 oz. can, drained)
1 t sugar
salt and pepper
1/2 C grated sharp cheddar cheese

Crust:

3/4 C corn meal
1/2 t salt
2 C water
2 T butter

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. To make filling, cook onions, garlic and pepper in oil until wilted. Add meat, and cook until it loses its red color. Sprinkle with chili powder, oregano and cumin, and stir in tomato sauce, corn, sugar and salt and pepper. Cool slightly. Make alternate layers of the filling and grated cheese in a 1 1/4 quart greased baking dish. (To make crust, stir corn meal, salt into water. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Stir in butter. Spread mixture over casserole. Bake 40 minutes. 6 servings. Serve with a hot sauce such as tabasco.

Frijoles en Casserole

1/4 C finely chopped onion
1 clove finely chopped garlic
1/4 lb. ground chuck
1/4 t basil leaves
1/4 t oregano
1/2 t cumin
1 t crushed cumin seed
1 t chopped green chili peppers
6 tortillas
3 C cooked pinto beans, drained
4 oz. sharp cheddar cheese, grated

Guacamole

Mash together: the pulp of 1 avocado, 1 finely-chopped tomato, 1 finely-chopped very-small onion. Add 1/2 lemon juice, a shake of tabasco sauce, and salt to taste. Serve with fried tortillas.

Milwaukee baseball fans are in store for a real treat this year. For atime ever, Ken "Hawk" Harrelson will make an appearance at County Stadium. The Hawk, healthy once again, has returned to decorate the American League diamonds. Harrelson is easily the most colorful player in baseball today. His trademark is a fabulous nose which resembles a hawk's beak and gives him his nickname. Here is how the Hawk describes his nose:

"There's no doubt about it, the nose makes the man. Nowhere, the Hawk is the noblestRoman of them all. Durante and Hope are pikers compared to me. My nose is my bag, my thing, my trademark, and my life. It makes me what I am today."

Needless to say, the Hawk is not the most bashful person in the world. He seems to attract attention wherever he goes, and he loves it.

"Long hair only partially draws the eye away from my fantastic nose. My clothes do the rest. I am an absolute nut on clothes. The hair and the clothes pay off, believe me. You know what they say now? Look at the Hawk. What splendor! What class! What perfection!"

"Just to give you an idea, I showed up at a Boston Braves game in an outfit of my own design with a touch of Nehru, a touch of Edwardian, and a nice big splash of Hawk, pure Hawk."

"It was a gold and white silk brocade suit. The pants have 12-inch pleats up the sides. The best were the shoes. They were made of silk brocade, too. People in the Boston Garden murmur and pointed as I casually strode to my seat. To a ham like me, those are supreme accolades."

Combined with all this splendor is a fantastic amount of talent. Hawk was an all-state football and basketball player in high school. He is the best golfer in the major leagues, and he once beat Lee Trevino.

Harrelson is the retired arm-wrestling champ of baseball, a cunning pool shark, and a terrific bowler.

"Hunters of all denominations hide when the Hawk comes to town. Among his other various talents are tennis, bullfighting, boxing (which accounts for part of his beard), racing, and mule-riding. He and Charley O. Finley, the Oakland A's mascot, are great friends."

When Harrelson isn't involved in his side hobbies, he plays baseball. In 1968, the Hawk was voted player of the year in the American League. In 1969, prior to a trip to the Ioneymountain in Boston traded him to Cleveland. He bailed at first, but finally agreed to join the Indians. Harrelson was a key member of Associated Press covering his arrival in Cleveland:

"There was driving rain at Cleveland, but it was a grand reception. Ken "Hawk" Harrelson drew more people to the Indians' game than the Indians lured to an afternoon game last week. The mop-haired outfielder was ramped in an Edwardian suit with bell bottom trousers, white turtleneck and white cowboy boots. He emerged from a jetliner to a roar from the mod fans. They rushed to the plane, where he accepted a bouquet of flowers and a kiss from a pretty model. The Hawk responded graciously. He flashed the "V" sign as the crowd chanted, "Love the Hawk."

On May 31, this remarkable talent arrives in Milwaukee. His presence alone should sell an extra thousand seats for the Brewers. If you decide to see him in person, his number is 40. But just look for the nose. It's worth the price of admission all by itself.

In a sport that lacks color, Harrelson stands out in the crowd. You might say he's a nose above the rest.

THE POINTER

Johnny Carson, talking to former Braves catcher Bob Uecker on the Tonight Show: "Carson: "Bob, how did you know you were almost finished as a ballplayer?"

"Uecker: "I walked into our clubhouse before a Cub's game and our manager said, 'What the hell are you still here for?'"

From Sport Magazine:

"During a game this past season, San Diego running back Russ Smith came back into the huddle after carrying the ball. He was bleeding profusely from a cut over his eye that later required thirteen stitches to close. Charger quarterback John Hadl looked up to him and said, 'You're bleeding pretty bad. I think you ought to go to the bench.'"

"'No, no,'" said Smith. "'I'm all right.

"'You may be all right,' said Hadl, 'but you're making me sick.'"
