Interview

Margarito (Mick) Martinez

"...we didn't immigrate to America; America migrated to where we were."

---

In the Nov. 5 issue of the Pointer an article appeared on the Chicano Seminar that was held at this university. As a follow-up to that story the Pointer interviewed Mr. Margarito Martinez, to find out some information on the basic questions of the Chicano movement. Mr. Martinez is currently the director of the Mexican-American Social Help Project in Portage and Waukasha Counties. This project primarily works with ex-migrants and Mr. Martinez pointed out that although these people are referred to as ex-migrants they in reality still migrate to work areas. Their point of origin has only changed.

POINTER: What is a Chicano?

MARTINEZ: A Chicano is simply a Mexican-American. Supposedly it is a new word or everyone thinks it is a new word. But actually Chicano is a word we've used probably since the Texas independence movement. Then it was used as a derogatory word by the Mexicans. They called the people that remained in Texas "Mexican sell outs" or Chicanos. But, when Texas became a State and these people became citizens, they realized that Mexico abandoned them so they became a whole new breed of people, the Chicanos. We have always had the word in our neighborhood and for one thing to say to people that we are Spanish speaking or are of Mexican descent. Now we only have to refer to ourselves as Chicanos.

POINTER: How much power does the movement have?

MARTINEZ: It is difficult to generalize national Chicano power. The United Farm Workers organization has legislative power, economic power, and social power. We are getting plenty of political power. There is a real political power, and in the last election in Texas they had a full slate of candidates. They won the mayoralty in 3 or 4 cities, and 4 or 5 counties. We're working toward a political power and, of course, economic power for the simple reason that without political and economic power for Chicans, we will be dealing with no one.

POINTER: What is the Chicano in the position they are now in?

MARTINEZ: The answer would have to be long, but to make it as short as possible I guess it would be the position the Chicano has had since he became a U.S. citizen. When the Chicano became a U.S. citizen, the area in the Chicano nation was switched from Spanish speaking and teaching to English. So, the people who were school age had a problem with the language. You, to a school one, two, or three years older, you had learned English and you were two or three years behind. And by that time you were almost old enough to be starting work in the fields, getting anywhere from 15 to 60 cents an hour, needs all the help they can get to support themselves. So education had a lot to do with it. If you don't have any education it is almost impossible to get any training for a job. In that time, when the schools switched to Spanish, those areas were predominately Mexican-American. But as soon as it became American territory, Anglos began moving there and they told their government to switch the schools to suit them, not the foreigners. This seems somewhat absurd since we didn't immigrate to America, America migrated to where we were.

POINTER: Would you compare Wisconsin and the mid-west to other areas in regard to problems the Chicano has?

MARTINEZ: Wisconsin is one of the better states in employment, housing, and things of this sort. The wages are good although there are still many being taken advantage of. And Wisconsin is not the only state that has now getting agencies that have Chicano's genuinely interested in Chicano's and other minority groups. Although the staff is not that big, neither is the state, so we can cover more territory.

POINTER: How can an interested person help?

MARTINEZ: There are a lot of things that can be done; especially in the summer. They could help get agencies that have proper agencies. The Department of Industry and Human Relations to pay for help. So get in touch with them or the employment service in Madison. People who are interested in health could volunteer their work. If you have a little knowledge of Spanish you could function real well with them.

Oshkosh Student Govt. Adjourns--Guiles Makes Concessions

The Student government of U. O. S. A. adjourned on Friday, Nov. 15 as a result of President Roger Guiles' statement of Nov. 10 establishing "policy positions" and the attendant rationale of the university administration in regard to the functions of the Allocations Committee. According to the Oshkosh Advance-Titan, (Nov. 11, 1971) the Allocations Committee, comprised of five students and four faculty members had been "striped of any previous power they had assumed." These responsibilities included recommending allocations of all student activity funds to the president for approval.

The limitations, which student leaders had always been concerned with payment, services, and activity program allocations, were removed from any committee involvement. These were classified into three categories of activity programs and the restriction of committed funds. The third was received with dismay by the Student government, and President. Administration spokesmen admitted that the fact that the committee could recommend budgeting for the third category only under the general guidance of the dean of students and the executive vice-president.

The president's restricted category included "long term commitments which, due to action by the board of regents, must be honored and paid. The Oshkosh stadium debt fell into this category."

The second category included those activities related to education and programs on this campus to which the university is committed. In place of the committee's recommendations, Guiles stipulated that budgets of activities in category II "will originate with the students responsible for the program and will be approved by the appropriate dean or president charged with the responsibility for that program."

Guiles action had left the Allocations Committee with merely 36 percent of the student service fee for recommendation to the president. The current budget is close to $61,000 dollars. Student leaders angrily by this were moved Nov. 14. In William White, the executive vice-president Jim Engmann, president of the Oshkosh Student Association, (OSA) asked if White felt there was a place for the Allocations Committee recommendations in Guiles category II. White expressed hope that there would be "some broad student input."

Later in an interview with the Advance-Titan White stated, "It would be impossible to be representative of some 7,000 students.

Equally confusing was the criteria used to formulate recommendations. For the student services activities. These were supposed to represent "either educational related services or programs to which the university is committed."

Activities in the second category, however, included cheerleaders, homecoming and convocation activities, educational or educational or non-university commitments. While Guiles was an executive vice-president, the committee to act on the Speaker's series in category III was to have the right to recommended funds for homecoming. The criteria for the first, "contain those functions and activities designed directly with student educational, social, and campus and publish on governing boards."

If area long term commitments are required by the regents, a question was, why was homecoming considered an educational commitment? White had no answer, note: Guiles, in his revision of the initial chairman's homecoming concerns, doubled its 56,000 figure.

While the Student government believed that they had an ethical right to allocate student money they did claim ultimate responsibility for state money. The students (they stated) that their allocation was based on Guiles' approval of the OSA and Allocation committee as representative student organizations. The Administration claimed that by denying the committee recommendation they were being asked for a wider base for student representation. It was "this wider base of representative student input, which made the final decision."

It hacked the OSA and the vice-president of the OSA.

On Nov. 15, the OSA moved to discontinue the "facade" of student government. The same day 3 other student groups did the same. The Allocation Committee followed suit. This is not to imply that adjournment was easy. It did not. Only after a long discussion did the Student senate assembly vote 26-4 with 2 abstaining to adjourn. The Student Senate disbanded with 18-3 count. The Student Government stopped functioning. The executive board of the faculty senate also supported the student government decision.

On Dec. 16, President Guiles issued a letter which, according to the Advance-Titan, stated that "special new unit would be set up to further clarification of the procedures which are needed." Guiles' concessions amounted to reinstating the Allocations committee recommendations privilege on all activities except for the stadium debt. The committee had originally recommended $122,500 to meet the stadium debt. When changed that to $109,000. The current recommendation should have been $161,000 if last year's payment deficit were included. The money for the stadium submitted Vice-president White. The committee adjourned until next fall."

A family that is this off the top. The committee will have no say on that specific amount other than to attach an addendum to its recommendation registering protest to the chairman's statement.

As of Nov. 18 the memorandums which had left the Allocations Committee nearly powerless had been revoked. As the Advance-Titan states on that day "...for the first time in recent memory, students forced the administration into compromise, while not complete, it showed that students could effect an administrative edict."
Reapportionment

The Portage County Board of Supervisors took no action on a reapportionment plan at their special meeting Monday, Nov. 22. The Governor investigated the city council of Stevens Point acts on it's reapportionment plan for council districts.

The county must accept a new reapportionment plan by Dec. 31 for its city council. Since the city and county wish to keep the two districts lines on Stevens Point the same, they have worked together on a reapportionment plan.

Complications arose when an alternate plan presented by George Guyart, a student, was introduced at the meeting. The county is not interested in an alternate plan differs from the city-county reapportionment committee's plan only in Stevens Point.

After a period of discussion at the meeting, the County Board felt that it shouldn't take action before the city did since it had until the end of the month to decide on a plan. Because of the wish to keep the two districts lines the same in Stevens Point the Board thought it would probably make its decision on how it wishes to be reapportioned before deciding on a plan for the county.

The County Board thought it could change its plan, if they adopted one that evening, if the city didn't want to accept it, but this was ruled out by the Assistant District Attorney. Therefore, the county had another reason for waiting.

In discussion of the two plans, John Sullivan, Chairman of the City-County Reapportionment Committee said that his plan had continuity of interest, a point of disagreement is in the city. He stated that the committee's continuity of interest was a community one, not a ward continuity of interest, as in the City Plan. He stated that the city feels the aldermen represent everyone in the ward, not just a faction in it. He said the plan he proposes for the committee has a healthy combination of student-community relationships.

George Guyart defended his plan by saying it has better served the continuity of interest of the students and he has used more "natural" boundaries in deciding ward lines. He has used streets and other physical boundaries such as the food centers in the case of the dormitory areas, for district lines.

He stated that the committee's plan did not use natural boundaries as much as was done especially in the dormitory areas by splitting the Debot complex north-south instead of east-west as Guyart has done.

The county will probably make its decision on a plan at their next regular County Board meeting this month.

Film Society: An Alternative

Film societies have originated throughout movie history as the result of people interested in creating a new awareness of the film as an art form. A film society at this university is no exception.

This university's recently formed society originated by Roger Bullis, William Kelly, and Toby Goldberg of the Communication Department. Its aim is to provide students an alternative to the type of films shown by the U.A.B. and the Fox Theatre. The society will offer 15 films during the second semester. In addition the society will offer seminars, avant garde and student produced fulms.

A sampling of the films includes Zabriskie Point: Eisenstein's Spy Who Shook the World; Potemkin; and La Dolce Vita. Season tickets for all 15 dates are $2.50. Tickets will go on sale Monday, December 6, at the Student Union Information Desk, Emmons Bookstore, City News Service, and the Communication film lab in Old Main, room 614. The second semester films are as follows:

January 18, Best Years of Our Lives; January 25, Shoot the Piano Player; February 1, The Thin Man; February 8, Casablanca; February 15, Our Man in Havana; February 22, The Great Race; February 29, The Front Page; March 7, Spellbound; March 14, Zabriskie Point; March 21, Grease; Wrath; April 4, 10 Days That Shook the World; Peterkin; April 11, L' Adventure; April 18, La Dolce Vita; April 25, Man from the West; May 2, Breathless.

Lee Harvey Oswald was not the lone assassin of President John F. Kennedy according to speakers addressing the JFK Symposium Disputes Warren Commission.

Speaking here at the symposium to commemorate the eighth anniversary of the death of Kennedy were Col. L. Fletcher Prouty (ret.), former Pentagon liaison to the Central Intelligence Agency; James Lesar and Richard Levine, members of the Washington-based Committee to Investigate Assassinations; and Faith Jones, Jr., editor of the Texas newspaper, The Midlothian Mirror and investigator of the assassination in 1964.

Prouty whose book, 'The Assassination' was published on November 19 in the Wright Lounge of the University Center, claimed that he reviewed sufficient pressures within the government that day that he concluded that there were two assassination attempts made on November 22.

Prouty cited the deteriorating relationships between both the president and the C.I.A., though he stopped short of saying that it was a conspiracy set up by organizations within the government.

On November 22, Lesar and Levine presented evidence which allegedly proves beyond reasonable doubt that Lee Harvey Oswald was not the lone assassin and did not fire the shots from the sixth floor of the Dallas school book depository building. Important in the evidence was the film of the incident taken by the late Abraham Zappruder who had come to the scene to observe the presidential motorcade. According to Levine, the Warren Commission had to ignore Newton's second law of motion in order to maintain their position after viewing this film. The president was being shot towards the rear of the limousine by the impact of the shot to his head. In order for this to be possible, the president would have to come from the front, not the rear of the limousine as argued.

On November 23, Jones, the final speaker of the program, argued that the assassination involved every major power group within the nation, excluding only the Blacks. The Syndicate, the CIA, the FBI, banking interests, and the military were among the groups to whom Jones referred. Jones showed the Zapruder film and the Nix film as part of his evidence, and then fielded questions from the audience. A position with regard to the involvement of Lyndon Johnson was met with evidence from Jones that Johnson had allowed for the destruction of material evidence. Examples cited were the Presidential limousine and the clothes worn by former Texas Governor Connally who was also struck by bullets. Jones speculated that this evidence was destroyed because it would have contradicted the predetermined findings of the Warren Commission.

No Action On Reapportionment

Menominee: 'Wards Of Wisconsin'

Miss Georganne Ignace, a Menominee, will speak on termination, its effect on her people, and her fight against Indian termination. The group will be open to all students, members of the faculty and the community, who are interested in how an entire tribe can be told that they are no longer Indians. The U.S. Government has decided to terminate a couple of the more prosperous tribes in order that they would not longer be eligible for Federal aid. Instead, the Menominee are now wards of the state of Wisconsin.

Now is the opportunity to come and hear how this "intelligent" decision by Big Brother has affected the Menominee, and of their present day struggle to make a living and still remain Indian.

This program is co-sponsored by the Dept. of Sociology and A.I.R.O. Miss Ignace will speak at 7:00 p.m. in the Frank Lloyd Wright Room on Tuesday, December 7.

Weisberg Speaks

The Symposium on Assassinations will continue next week with the arrival on campus of Mr. Harold Weisberg, who will discuss the mysterious events surrounding the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King. Mr. Weisberg will be available all day Monday to speak to any class, seminar, or individual who is willing and interested in listening to the former Senate investigator, OSS intelligence and anti-war activist, Whitewash, Volumes I, II, and III (concerning John Kennedy's assassination) and Frame-up (which deals with the King assassination.) There is no doubt that his work is authoritative, well documented, and thorough. It was his investigative work which blew wide open the Smedley D. Butler information about the Tonkin Gulf conspiracy that against Franklin Roosevelt, just as later it was his investigative work which reopened Kennedy's assassination in the form of Jim Garrison's Clay Shaw conspiracy trial.

Mr. Weisberg's record is impressive. He is a former Senate investigator, OSS intelligence and political analyst, and author of several books on assassinations, including Whitewash, Volumes I, II, and III (concerning John Kennedy's assassination) and Frame-up (which deals with the King assassination.) Mr. Weisberg is a most interesting person. He will speak on Monday evening at the address the public at 7:00 p.m. in the Wisconsin Room on the Martin Luther King assassination, its connection with power of the United States, revolutionary forces working against King, and the present case against James Earl Ray.

EDITORS NOTE: A More detailed account of the assassination of President Kennedy will be included in the first issue of the POINTER during the second semester. It will be in the form of an essay based mainly upon the evidence provided by the speakers at the Symposium. We also hope to be able to provide a bibliography on the topic at that time.

Steal Away: Stories Of The Runaway Slaves

So well programmed and sensibly edited is this collection of excerpts from fifteen original slave narratives, many of which are "rare books," both in sens and all of which represent what Chapman calls a distinctive literary form, projecting the slave as hero — that it warrants a place in the forefront of the growing group of such anthologies.

The more popular writings of the more prolific writers are eschewed, thus, since "the full text of (the) illuminating Narrative of William Wells Brown is currently available in a number of reprint editions... .I have selected a sketch of slave life from a later, lesser-known, and not easily accessible book... but Armstrong Archer suggests in his sometimes ironic piece about his father's capture immediately by Rousquaqua's incest tale, on being 'Tempted' (tricked and ensnared, per Chapman) and Sold Away."

Chapman offers "The Heroic Slave," "The first significant novella by a black writer in the US; it alone constitutes Part III, "History in Fiction," which follows the penetrating "Memories of Africa and the Slave Ships" and the eminently varied stories of "Slave Life and Stealing Away."

The early memories of Euphania Gustavas Vassa, while commonly reproduced, are justifiably included here: they are the genuine, keen observations of a man emotionally tied to, yet physically and collectively miles from his

and

African home culture. Ottobah Cugoano, lamenting his betrayal by his own countrymen, once notes that if "there were no buyers there would be no sellers," but Armstrong Archer suggests in his sometimes ironic piece about his father's capture immediately by Rousquaqua's incest tale, on being 'Tempted' (tricked and ensnared, per Chapman) and Sold Away.

Briefer are the words of Austin Steward, Thomas Jones, and Peter Randolph (whose ed lampoon recapitulates auction-block procedure); also Belinda, in a petition to the Massachusetts legislature, Jourdon Anderson in an ever-so-gently sarcastic "Letter from a Freedman to His Old Master," two well-chosen interviews from Benjamin Drew's compendium, four succinct "Tales of Oppression" (Isaac T. Hopper from L.M. Child's revision), three of Josiah Henson's chronicles from what Chapman believes to be the most probably authentic version.

Narrow View Of Indians

To the Editor,

I picked up a copy of the Pointer and was reading with Vice-Pres ident Gordon Hafer becker. After reading the article a few lines, I was shocked and horrified at what I was reading. The item appeared in the UWSA edition on the front page.

I would like to react to a number of things stated in the article. One which poignantly struck me was his statement of what Indians have done.

To the point: When the Indians were brought to the white man, he was an ignorant savage in no way capable of doing anything to the white man. He has leant his medicine on the white man. He has leant his knowledge on the white man. He has leant his medicine on the white man. He has leant his knowledge on the white man. He has leant his medicine on the white man. He has leant his knowledge on the white man. He has leant his medicine on the white man. He has leant his knowledge on the white man.

Therefore, such a statement or a line of reasoning may lead to frustration on both sides or a student getting into trouble as a paw.

Sincerely yours,

Joseph B. Harris

300 Watt Rubber?

To the Editor:

"Take the worry out of being close - contraceptive counseling and info" as an advertisement (November 19, Pointer) from the University Health Center is subtle encouragement of sexual promiscuity. This ad promotes the image that being close leads to sexual activity - a concept which Student Welfare (housing) superficially, at least, would like to discourage.

Frequently University personnel project their own fantasies onto students. If the student does not have them, more subtle pressure may be applied. An Impasse may lead either to frustrations on both sides or a student getting into trouble as a pawn.

Sexual fantasies are common. A condom is enough for a pane-watt bulb was recently displayed in an introductory biology course.

Since reports show that in the past illegitimacy has been increased with sex education, there is reason to believe that we must prepare for an expanded University health service, more abortion counseling and increased welfare expenditures to take care of the problem we create. In the area of sex education, preventive medicine may still be in the witch doctor stage.

Sincerely yours,

Joseph B. Harris

Who's Red?

To the Editor

In handing out Socialist Labor Party leaflets, the students often say, "Young people have good reason to rebel!" It is gratifying to note the favorable reception given by young folks, including students.

On the other hand, some adults are so immature and emotional that as soon as they see the name: Socialist Labor Party" they rip the leaflet in pieces and resort to name-calling.

What gets me is that President Nixon, knowing that capitalism is in deep trouble, is rushing for an increasing trade with mainland China and nobody is accusing him of being a Red.

Yet here I am, a member of Socialist Labor Party, founded right here in these United States by Daniel De Leon and put down by the Socialist Labor Party takes some orders from Moscow! What ignorance!

A Word

We must extend our compliments to Student Senate and the University Activities Board for the sponsorship of one of the best critical presentations on this campus in recent years. The astounding revelations of the Kennedy Assassination Symposium can be gleaned from printed matter for those who missed the program. (We hope to print a bibliography soon.) Needless to say, questions were raised that rattle Nixon's sabers. Our point, however, is not to recount the evidence nor the allegations of the symposium.

We think that the Senate and UAB, though coming to the fore late in the semester, have taken a significant step, devoting their resources to the development of a highly sophisticated and politically relevant activity of a critical nature. We say it is the task of those organizations to support activities that will leave students thinking sharply about questions instead of contemplating a "psychic ice age." In fact, we compliment Student Senate and UAB and ask that these organizations continue to issue their resources for such programs. Furthermore, since we are all in it together, we offer the following suggestions for similar activities that UAB and the Senate might consider for "symposia" next semester.

We would suggest a symposium on each of the minorities, with a variety of speakers who would seek to clarify the problems and to develop solutions

Editorial Feature/Department Of The Month

Business Administration:

The Pointer has attacked the institution of business repeatedly throughout the semester. Although we have never received a letter to the editor criticizing our position in regard to business, we sense that not everyone on campus is in agreement with our thoughts. In order to clarify the Pointer's position we asked the economics-business administration Department Chairmen, James E. Jensen, to participate in the Department and the Month feature. Mr. Jensen was kind enough to answer a number of Pointer questions which we think have helped bring to the surface many of the ideas behind the institution of business.

Mr. Jensen identifies education for business as being "comprised of a package of principles, concepts, and skills which will aid a manager in successfully administering a firm."

He continued, "our business major is principle-oriented and is not focused toward narrow specialization in vocation." Mr. Jensen seemed to be trying to put across the idea that a business major can be a knowledgeable vocational training. With this idea we must offer some thoughts. How much more specialized and narrow-minded can a person be who is trained to administer a firm? The nature of the training is designed to blind a person to the world outside the sphere of a particular business.

One is trained to think in terms of what is good for his business and nothing else. To operate successfully as a business administrator one must act according to what supports business. For example, if a new machine is developed which replaces fifty men and saves the company $20,000 annually, a good businessman will purchase and implement the machine. The fate of the fifty men does not even enter into consideration. Similarly, if a particular war or governmental policy enhances private business, will support it. This is evidenced by the fact that armament businessmen lobby to support continued defense spending regardless of the social consequences.

This kind of narrow thinking and specialization led companies to help destroy the very country in which they were located. An example from history is the growth of American business prior to the Second World War. Standard Oil of New Jersey helped Hitler build oil refineries and General Motors sold Germany tanks just prior to the declaration of war. Each of the previous acts was carried out because a particular business believed it was good for business. And indeed it was. Not only did both make millions, but in Germany enabling the Second W war, they then hit the U.S. government with a demand for the return of the military cost of the war.

Mr. Jensen expressed the idea that the Department should exist on education required in business as a separate discipline. He also said that citizens, parents, and student necessitate an undergraduate supported universities. This idea questions, why is it that a public which teaches private ends? In business, students are taught "money," they are not taught to think public most. If "successful dumping pollutants into the waste in a more costly form of dog."

The public is being betrayed university which allows tax most interests. How can this be? Perhaps universities no longer exist for the enhancement of pr Business and is business ideology and action that they are moral. He stated, "that the economy or business gen In my view there is nothing new business of the economy. Fact nothing but people. People suffer, and human faults show up in the churches, and the family.

The above idea represented by our society. In our opinion, it is business is foolish to bring up some idea that "Business is the Public is good people;

olutions. We feel, however, that if Student Senate and UAB are to sponsor such activities, they must recognize that their role would be only that of providing necessary resources. The minority leaders must act to organize the program and select the speakers.

Another area of concern, especially at the local level, would be that of farm problems. Today's students will soon have to confront the food shortage crisis and ought, therefore, to be concerned in being critical questions facing the farmer. A symposium on this topic would also involve the working people of the Portage County area with the university community.

Decent public health and care for the aged are two related areas that could be covered in a symposium program and would be of interest to students and local people as well. Such a program could include critics and defenders of the American Medical Association, alternate health plans, (e.g., "free clinics"), critical evaluations of health insurance and so forth.

These suggestions represent but a few of the possibilities available to the Senate and UAB. To estate our point, we think that the two organizations have taken an important first step. We deplore the absence of a Rabbi Symposium on the Kennedy assassination and that they should not allow the momentum to decrease. We further hope that students will seek out mentors and Board members with ideas for future programs of such fine, critical quality.

Mr. Jensen believed accept the proposition a dirty, rotten system, moral or unethical in because business is going to business: government, institution which has developed over hundreds of years. Today it has come to mean primarily traffic in goods, the mere process of buying and selling, or in other words, the control of the processes of industry. For most people born into our society today, the only means of livelihood is dictated by business ideology. One has to survive, so one goes into business for himself or works for a firm. While pursuing a living, people are forced to act in terms of business ideology. The institution of business molds people and not the other way around. Therefore one does not examine the morality or immorality of business by looking at "human faults." One looks at the ideology of the institution and the actions which emanate from it to make a decision as to its morality.

It is our contention that business ideology is amoral while business actions fall into the moral and immoral sphere at random. The ideology is amoral because the straight-jacket of business necessity dictates the businessman's actions. The extent one is a businessman, to that extent there is no choice available, one must act in terms of what is good for business to kill blacks, while on the other hand it may be good for business to run a theatre. The decision to kill blacks or open a theatre is made upon the basis of what is right and good for society, but upon that enhances and protects business interests.

Although business can act morally, it has throughout history acted immorally with the use of force and fraud to achieve its ends. In the name of business interests, Indians were killed and their civilizations destroyed. Blacks were enslaved, beaten, and exploited, union organizers were killed and repressed, wars were supported, air, water, and land was destroyed, crimes of business policies were forced out of jobs, and on and on. Today many of the same practices are being employed. Whole segments of our country are forced to become poor, forced to lead boring and meaningless lives, and forced to conform to business interests. And the slaughter of Attica inmates. Many other forms of murder also exist in the fact that Indian infant mortality rates sometimes double the national average. All this we believe in the name of business interests. Ask yourself this question: if business actions are inherently good, why do we need to do a task force of regulatory government agencies trying to watch them and keep them from acting in such a way as to harm public interests?

Vol. XIX No. 19

The notion that the U.S., through inadequate defense expenditures, is about to become a second-rate power, is now being propagated by the Pentagon to prepare the way for a bigger arms build-up this year. This is neither true nor reasonable. Here are some basic figures, as culled from the latest edition, just arrived from London, of the Military Balance study for 1971 by the International Institute for Strategic Studies.

The Dollar Figures Tell A Different Story

In the fiscal year 1972 U.S. military expenditures continue to be far greater than those of the Soviet Union. The U.S.S.R. is spending $55 billion this year, the U.S., $78 billion. Soviet per capita defense expenditure was $2222; U.S. $8273. The USSR was spending a larger portion of its Gross National Product on defense (11 percent as against our 7.8 percent) but the Soviet GNP was $303 billion, or less than a third of the U.S. GNP which was $977 billion.

In nuclear strategic forces the U.S. continues to be several years ahead technologically. This is reflected in our ability to deliver a far larger number of nuclear warheads. The USSR is trying to catch up in quantity of ICBMs for this disparity. Soviet ICBMs rose in number from 50 to 600 between 1961 and 1967 while ours rose from 63 to 1,054. In 1967 we set out to develop multiple warheads instead of increasing the number of missiles. By this year the Soviets had 1,510 ICBMs while we still had only 1,064. But all but 10 of our missiles were sold for $222 and only 46 of the Soviet's were the quicker-firing solid fuel variety.

The Soviet Union is still testing and has yet to deploy a multiple cluster warhead while we have passed that stage and are already deploying multiple independently targeted vehicles, the MIRV. Of our 1,064 ICBMs, 500 Minutemen are being equipped with 3 MIRVs each. By 1975 our ICBM force will be able to deliver 2,064 separate warheads on separate targets. It will have doubled its striking capacity.

The same disparity in our favor exists in Europe and at sea. The U.S. and the NATO forces have some 7,000 nuclear warheads in the European theatre as against about 3,500 in the hands of the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies. At sea, the Soviet nuclear strategic submarine fleet may soon draw closer to that of the U.S. in numbers but is far out-distanced in warheads and in range. The Soviets are now testing SLBMs with an estimated range of 3,000 miles which would make it comparable to our ICBMs. The Soviets have about 350 unbuilt submarine launchers as against ours 656. But 432 of our launchers are the Polaris A-3 with triple warheads and 64 are the newer Poseidon with at least 10 MIRVs each. The Soviets may catch us up in numbers of nuclear submarines by the mid 70's but by that time we will have substantially increased our strategic ballistic missiles. "From about 1,500 (capable of attacking 656 separate targets) to over 5,400 (capable of attacking some 5,000 separate targets)."

As similar proliferation of warheads is taking place in our bombing fleet through the addition of the new Short Range Attack Missile or SRAM. This will do as much as the MIRV to our Polaris. The Soviets have about 200 Polaris A-3I nuclear submarines by the mid 70s but by that time we will have Vintag e Press (th e price $1.95 ) . Business Continued
Business and Industry

Mr. Jensen was asked what he felt was the difference between business and industry. He did not reply to each specific question, but he wrote an essay in which he incorporated answers to the Pointer questions. In his essay the Pointer could not discern a specific reference to this question so we will assume he thought the question was of little concern. The Pointer believes, though, that is of major concern. The distinction between business and industry will help clarify and answer the question: "without business where would our progress be?"

Business is the control of the processes of industry. Industry is the process of production, exchange, distribution, and appropriation of goods. It has been and still is the business control of industry which has brought about many of our problems. Our society can easily maintain a high standard of production without private business control. Industry should be directed toward public ends and not private ends. From business control of industry we have received faulty products like cheap, resource-wasting, polluting cars. It also has led to the dehumanization of work life, the absence of quality and creativity, the growth of war production industries, and general pollution. To make more profit, business will impede the best possible distribution of a needed product. Instead of distributing food according to need, business has destroyed food to make the prices higher. Also, the government, representing business, has paid farmers not to produce needed food. Why is it that in a country with an abundance of food there exists a huge segment of the population that is malnourished? We believe it is because the control of industry (production and distribution of goods) is in the hands of business.

Our country does not need business to maintain a high standard of living. The technology exists in industry to produce a great quantity and high quality product without business' private control of resources. The sooner our society can wrest the control of industry from the hands of business, the sooner we can begin to use industry as it should be used.

What Causes Poverty?

"The cause of poverty", stated Mr. Jensen, "is that people, often through no fault of their own, do not have sufficient productivity or have somehow been excluded from the labor force." Jensen went on to say that reasons for poverty include age, health, lack of education or training, and shifting demand and supply situations for certain occupations.

We agree fully with Mr. Jensen that poverty is not caused through faults of the individual. Whose fault is it, though, if it is not the fault of the individual? Why are people allowed to become poor because of age and health? Why do people lack education and training and why is it that those who do have such deficiencies are forced to bear the burden of poverty? These further questions must be answered if one is to better explain the reasons for poverty. It is our belief that poverty exists because business has deemed poverty necessary for "good business". The more it can cut labor costs and wages the more it will. Business will in fact as many burdens on the population as it can bear. This kind of institutional framework is crazy, and it leads to a dehumanized society.

Expulsion

In view of the arguments presented above, we call for the expulsion of the economics-business administration department from this university. A university exists for public interests, not for private welfare. A university exists to critically evaluate institutions and ideas, not to train people for narrow vocational interests. A university exists to produce scholars and thinkers not business managers. The only hope for modern civilization is the elimination of business ideology and actions. A truly intelligent philosopher once said, "Either some way must be found to destroy business or business will destroy man."

The department or economics was established in 1960 and in 1964 the department added a major in business administration. Since then the economics-business department has been an integral part of the university. Today there are fourteen full-time professors on the payroll bringing in salaries somewhere in excess of $100,000.

Students participating in the department number about 600. There are about 550 students majoring in business administration and about 150 in economics. About 160 of these are double majors in both areas and are therefore double-counted. This number compares with 351 majors and miners in the department of English.
Superpickers Shoot For Perfect Week

By Tim Sullivan, Mike Habercan, and Guest Picker George Glodosky

George Glodosky, an avid football fan, has been following our predictions faithfully for weeks. We believe in fair play, so we are allowing him one correct prediction in picking the three toughest games this week. The regular Superpicking games will be handled by the regular superpickers. Here now, is the way the three of us see the upcoming contests.

San Francisco Over Chiefs - George takes the 49ers, because he thinks the Chiefs are in a late season slump. We chuckle at his decision, but his choice is freedom in picking the three of us see the upcoming contests.

Phoenix Over Giants - George thinks Virgil Carter of Cincinnati should win the Heisman Trophy. The Browns are lousy when they play anybody fairly decent. Cincinnati by 3.

Dallas Over Jets - Dallas is back for New York, but Duane Thomas returned to do a great job for the Cowboys. Dallas finally has made Roger Staubach the number one quarterback. Cowboys by 6.

Cincinnati Over Buffalo - We're taking this one on a hunch, hoping that Kent Nix plays the whole game for the Bills. If Bobby Douglass quarterbacks, our perfect record is indeed in trouble. Bears by 7.

Detroit Over Philly - The Eagles are no longer pushovers, but the Lions never were. Detroit and Errol Mann by 13.

Miami Over New England - The Dolphins are Super Bowl bound, while the Patriots couldn't even beat Buffalo last week. Miami by 15.

Rams Over Saints - The Saints beat the Packers, but then again, who hasn't? The Rams should be up for this one. Los Angeles by 10.

Pittsburgh Over Houston - The Steelers are playing bad lately, but they usually beat leasy teams, and the Oilers definitely fit in this category. Steelers by 12.

Baltimore Over Buffalo - The Colts have a great zone defense, and Buffalo can't throw very well against zones. Come to think of it, Buffalo can't throw against anything. Baltimore by 14.

Packers Over Cards - Now that Starr's had his fan, the Packers might be able to get the offense going again. We suggest letting Donny Anderson quarterback, thus allowing Bart to back up Ray Nitschke baritons outside the stadium during game time. The Pack is back in the pack, but St. Louis is having great success losing games, the Charger event notwithstanding.

Washington Over Giants - The Redskins' best fan, a Mr. Dick Nixon, thinks Washington is the team to beat. All we ask is that the Redskins' offense doesn't freeze before it starts to roll. Washington by 9.

From now on, there’s a better way to buy stereo equipment at tremendous discounts than consulting a mail order catalog. You just consult Fisher’s student representative, instead.

He’ll show you a catalog of Fisher equipment, and give you advice on the equipment that suits your needs. And, if you want, he’ll arrange for a demonstration so you can hear what you’ll be buying. Then, he’ll process your order, at a tremendous discount.

Fisher selected this student because he is uniquely qualified to act as your Fisher representative. He knows a lot about high fidelity. He’s a reliable person. And since he’s a student himself, he knows what students need in the way of stereo equipment.

And since he’s the Fisher representative, he’s got what you need. Because Fisher makes practically everything.
Dowling: Champ Of The Courts
by Tim Sullivan
Dr. Fred Dowling, a professor in the Communications Department, somewhat hesitantly entered the all-campus intramural tennis tournament. When the racket finally quieted, Dr. Dowling was declared the official champion.
Dowling's tennis feat was most remarkable, because several players from the university's tennis team were among the 34 netters participating. Never-the-less Dowling was simply not to be denied. He rolled over his opponents faster than Sherman marched through Atlanta. Completely disregarding his age disadvantage, Dowling outplayed and outwitted all of his foes. Dr. Dowling clearly established himself as the Pancho Gonzales of Stevens Point.
Dowling began his bid for the title by beating John Trupe, 6-1 and 6-0. After this convincing win, his next opponent had second thoughts and failed to show up, so Dowling won by forfeit.
Dowling then ran up against Ken Poch, a star of the Pointer tennis squad. The communications teacher disposed with him, winning 6-4, 6-1. Dowling's next win, 6-1, 6-3 over Dick Walther, earned him a spot on the championship court.
The title match was settled quickly, as Dowling defeated Joe Welset, 6-2, and 6-1. One of Dowling's opponents said, "Mr. Dowling plays tennis like a relentless machine. He doesn't try to overpower you. He simply hits back everything you slam at him, just waiting in the weeds for you to make a mistake. When you make the mistake, it's all over. Wham! Dowling smacks it by you."
