The Student Senate met, February 18th, at 7:30 p.m., in the Mitchell Room of the University Center. The format of the meeting included the introduction of newly elected Senators: Ed McKee and Jim McGivern of District 1, Mike Peppero and Jim Pickett of District 5, and Kay Peartree from District 4.

Senator Ed McKee and Jim Pickett of the meeting included the introduction of newly elected Senators: Ed McKee and Jim McGivern of District 1, Mike Peppero and Jim Pickett of District 5, and Kay Peartree from District 4.

Scott Schultz, Student Senate President, reported two recent faculty resignations. Mr. Gilbert Faust has formally resigned from the Faculty Constitution Committee, an organization which has a sub-committee dealing with student participation in University government. Mr. Robert Baruch of the Drama Department will replace Mr. Faust, a letter addressed to President Lee S. Dreyfus from former Director of Athletics. Mr. John Anderson was also submitted to the Senate. Schultz reported new assignments to Senate Committees for the current semester and outlined the procedural functions of the committee. The committees comprised of both old and new Senate members are to meet once a week at an established time and place, appoint a secretary, and prepare a report to be submitted to the Senate for approval. The appointment of Randy Theil to the Student Faculty Senate and Athletics was announced. Theil replaces John Brenneman in this post.

In legislative action the Senate reviewed a proposal designed to aid the Board of Regents in improving dormitory life. Action to appoint the Senate Housing Committee was denied, however, as a committee from the Residence Hall Council has already begun action on such a proposal. An amendment allowing for the Student Senate to decide its own meeting schedule, as opposed to the Senate Housing Committee, was tabled to committee. Although most Senators support such a change and when in fact the Assembly is now determining its meeting time, it was decided that the Senate Housing Committee should investigate any possible constitutional contradictions which might result from such an amendment.

The Student Senate heard an appeal from Bill Prothro, a member of the campus Z.P.G. Chapter. Prothro informed the Senate of a bill pending in the State legislature which grants state subsidy to local transit systems. These new bus services would be supported through an increase in Auto license fees and gasoline taxes. The report included the failure of the public bus system of Stevens Point, the failings of a proposed solution by the City Council, and the need both economically and environmentally to support the bill in three ways. First, by issuing a letter to the State Senate in Madison supporting the Mass Transit Bill. Second, to urge other Student Senators to support the bill and finally to petition the community in conjunction with Z.P.G. in urging the State Senate to enact the bill as law.

The Student Senate decided to refer the Z.P.G. proposal to the Legislative and Research Affairs Committee. The information gathered from Madison through this committee will decide whether or not the Senate votes to support the bill at the next meeting.

Scott Schultz reported that the Globe Life Insurance Company has offered the Senate two thousand dollars for permission to send an information packet, printed under the Senate letterhead, to every student. The policy offered is a ten thousand dollar life insurance plan with annual premiums of twenty-five dollars while the student is enrolled in college and retention of the policy with an increased rate afterwards. It was reported that this same offer has been accepted in at least one other WSU University. The Senate decided to open the issue to Senatorial review until the next meeting. Professional advice will also be sought before any action will be taken.

The need for further publication of Senate goals and activities has prompted the enforcement of a Senate resolution by President Scott Schultz. Schultz has appointed Beverly George and Gene Patakas, both from District 1, to submit articles to the Pointer for "Senator Speaks" column. The column was revised to concerns and goals of the individual Senators and the Senate as a whole. Senator officers will also have articles published in the Pointer. Newly elected Senator Jim McGivern is in the process of organizing a Public Relations Board which will go beyond the Senator Speaks program.

The Senate has set next week for Committee meetings and March 4th as the date of its next business meeting.
George Mead II

President of Consolidated Papers, Inc.

George Mead II is the President of Consolidated Papers, Incorporated. Mr. Mead has been with Consolidated since 1952. He received a B.S. from Yale University and later earned an M.S. at Lawrence University in the area of paper chemistry. Mr. Mead is 43 years old and receives an annual salary of $75,000.

Pointer: How would you define conservation?

Mead: This is certainly a difficult question. Negatively, I guess it could be defined as excessive wastefulness. The natural resources should be used to serve the general good. These are, of course, very general definitions. The paper industry has worked hard toward meeting many of the objectives and stipulations of these definitions. Conservation can also be defined as a multiple use of the various natural resources. Our record of multiple use in the forest area is good. Our record on multiple use of water is probably not as good.

Pointer: What do you believe are the motivating forces behind the increasing interests in ecology?

Mead: These motivating forces are, of course, very valid. It is obvious that an increasing number of people have become concerned over ecological issues. From my standpoint, what worries me about the approach that has been taken is whether or not the correct balance will be struck between the needs of the most people. But I do not in anyway want to discredit the interest in our ecology.

Pointer: To what extent do you feel personally responsible for the current quality of the Wisconsin River?

Mead: My concern is quite deep. In fact, I would like to take a little credit for its improved condition. I think the river is cleaner than it was 20 or 30 years ago. And I claim that I had something to do with it.

Pointer: What was your opinion of the protest by area students in dumping clean water into the Wisconsin River and taking up collections to assist in pollution abatement?

Mead: My feelings about this are quite positive. I think it is always necessary for people to dramatize their beliefs. I think the protest was well handled. I would like to congratulate the students on their handling of the demonstration.

Pointer: What books on the topic of ecology have you read?

Mead: I am afraid you've got me on this one. I haven't read any that are exclusively centered on this topic. However, I have read in the area of forestry and water management.

Pointer: Is it true that your organization made an attempt to block a forestry major at Wisconsin State University at Stevens Point in order to establish a major in paper chemistry?

Mead: Absolutely not! We are very concerned about whether there is a true need for the number of forestry students being generated in the United States. Wisconsin has not had a forestry major until recently, and yet foresters are on the low end of the pay scale because of the plentiful supply. Some two or three years ago both the University at Madison and the University at Stevens Point conceived of a concept of a forestry major. We felt the slowly growing demand for foresters could justify a single school turning out maybe 20 graduates each year. These perhaps could have been absorbed into the job market without depressing the market for forestry majors. This is honestly what we were thinking of at the time. We were also concerned about whether Stevens Point had the capability of providing a first-class forestry major. The resources at Madison seemed better. At no time did we compare this with the need for a paper school at Stevens Point. For that matter, I am not at all sure that there should be an increase in the number of paper schools. In short, we do not want to mislead students into subject areas where the need for their talents would be somewhat limited.

Mead: Your question on the student protests implies that they will stand exactly as written. The Department has been in consultation with us on these orders. They have encouraged us to get the orders changed in the past. Other organizations have gone through this same procedure. For instance, our city is appealing the current orders. Certainly, however, much work must be done. Working out our problems will prove to be expensive. I guess what I want to say is that it is difficult to appeal the orders to attain the same results as the state wishes to attain—but, through a combination of efforts at our Wisconsin Rapids, Kraft, and Byron divisions which might not follow the literal terms of the existing orders...

Cain's 17

Mr. Marvin Cain has been selected as our landlord of the week. He supposedly owns around seventeen houses although only ten are in the city of Stevens Point. Some of his property is rented to students and the rent is $180 per semester plus utilities. Though the condition of his houses are often times less than desirable, he does not harass or hassle his tenants on small matters. Little or—nothing is said about rent being paid late and, in general, Mr. Cain is a delightful gentleman. Attempting to discern his income became an impossibility as he would not state the exact number of houses he owns nor their locations. It is probably safe to assume that Mr. Cain is making a comfortable living from his approximately seventeen houses, though he complained about the taxes and cost of repairs.

Marvin Cain is considering leaving the business of renting to students because of the stringent housing standards and zoning laws. The city council recently turned down a request by Mr. Cain to have some property changed from being zoned single family to multiple family dwellings.

One student, Miss Randy Hagen, a former tenant of Mr. Cain, had this to say about the situation:

"I had the pleasure of living at 1619 College Avenue for about two and a half weeks. This was above the residence of Marvin Cain, who boasted of owning 10 or 17 houses in Point, the vast majority of which were inhabited by college students. I paid a $30 deposit. When I moved in, there was a hole in the floor wall where a wall had been torn out, creating a living room out of a closet and a bedroom. Though Mr. Cain had said this would be fixed and cleaned with in a week it was in nearly the same condition for my entire stay. Several times I appealed to Mr. Cain to finish this job, so we would not have to live in an unfinished mess. Finally, out of embarrassment and anger, I made a small announcement for our guests saying that our landlord had not finished the room. Mr. Cain became infuriated and I was told that if I didn't like the conditions in his house I should leave. I did not, so I did. My deposit was kept as rent for the time I resided in his apartment."

These photos were taken at 2124 Lincoln Ave and 2507 Warner, both houses belonging to Marvin Cain, a landlord of the city. The peeling stained plaster, and unstable stairways were two of the most glaring violations to be found.
Housing Critique

The situation with off-campus housing has reached a critical, if-then perspective after discussing the matter with dozens of tenants, several Department of Natural Resources employees, and the mayor of Stevens Point. One problem is that landlords, who have some validity, is that the exposition of poor housing conditions in the city's rezoning practices will decrease the amount of available housing facilities to students next fall.

Another landlord expressed similar concern by stating that if the city applies pressure on home less, the city council, solving our problems. This, I allow two roomers, two family aldermen speak about students. complexes most people feel it through examining the city deny that there are large as he desires providing the neglect the upkeep of their

some of my own money. Since I enough problems making the

that the city is actually working against the university by modifying some of the requirements in its zoning ordinances. At present property is considered one-family residence, allows two roomers, two family which allows five boarders, and multi-family occupancy permits the homeowner to rent his property to as many people as possible if the property meets the minimum space requirements.

Pointe r: Do you think that we can solve our country's ecology problem with a free enterprise system?

Oead: By defining the free enterprise system as the system we live in, I think that we have a basis to answer the question in the affirmative. I certainly cannot deny that we have serious problems in this country, nor can I say that these problems have been solved. I wonder, however, if the individuals of this country are working to solve their own problems. This, I think, is where the free enterprise system enters into it.

Pointe r: Governor Lucas claimed that a free enterprise system would lead to poverty. If that is true, how would you consider donating part of that fortune you have gained in politics and business into solving other people's problems?

Mead: While my personal net worth is seven digits is surprisingly low. With three kids of school age, I find enough problems making even a dime without trying to give up some of my wealth. If you have already stated my salary, I realize this seems a little hard to believe, but there is a reason for this. I believe that business today that nobody can build an estate on a salary. Generating LISTENING PROBLEMS are superficially and quickly given attention. Our company is currently in debt and trying to pay off its debt. Our earnings for the last three years have been going up. We are currently in the market to solve some of these problems, but the best we can do is to address the immediate concerns that confront Consolidated.

Pointe r: What do you believe is the highest and best use of the Wisconsin Housing?

Mead: I really don't feel qualified to answer this. I can, however, tell you what my own personal belief is. The best use, from my viewpoint, is the best use for the people. The policies which are current, and the best of my knowledge, is limited.

The mayor and the city housing inspector again stated that their offices will do all they can to prevent students from being evicted. If you are one of these victims who, due to rent control, refuse to report your substandard living situation, then wait until April, or May, or do call the Pointer office or city inspector as students next fall will not have to live under the same adverse conditions.

Though we realize as a result of these exposes and tighter city laws some apartments will no longer be available for rent. But, we believe it is necessary to bring housing up to a decent level and work toward encouraging contractors to build the student city community to compensate for the housing that will no longer be available.
There is no question that the pilots were suffering serious deprivation— the mere fact that they are 12 months old and the soil around them does not permit any possibility of them suffering in any way, as families would be agony temporarily.

Yet, most of the evidence before Frisman's return indicates that, if the prisoners have been treated, the prisoners meager as it was, was at least as plentiful—if not more plentiful—than in the North Vietnamese regime was giving its prisoners to prisoners.

In addition, the isolation reported by the six men was not as great as it had appeared. One returned pilot told how he had been living quarters with three other pilots; he said, often noisily among themselves. Many of the casu- lives apparently were living in groups of two and four, although each usually were careful to be isolated from others.

There is some evidence that military officials were aware of the strained case that was being presented at the press conference. In a private letter sent by the military on June 5, wives and mothers of the missing Air Force pilots told that they were told to be a person visiting the prison, or prisoner situation.

The letter also enclosed copies of the details supplied to the press, with this ex- portation: "It was specifically designed to bring the pressure of the world opinion to bear directly on the Vietnameses. Hopefully, it will result in more information about and better treatment for the prisoners in their situation.

The letter concluded with this remarkable sentence: "We are certain that you will not come under any abuse of this kind; it is a brefing if you keep in mind the purpose for which it was written.

Despite the new Nixon Administration's description of the prisoners, the issue still hadn't evolved into a major public debate. By mid-March, when Hanoi released Frishman and two other pilots into the hands of the United States, the issue still hadn't evolved into a major public debate. By mid-March, when Hanoi released Frishman and two other pilots into the hands of the United States, the issue still hadn't evolved into a major public debate.

Even the wives and mothers of the prisoners, who had begun to organize in 1968 in protest over the Johnson Administration's war policy, had failed to arouse sufficient interest with their occa- sional picketing of government build- ing and in their letters to the Administration for their release.

"There was an absolutely valid case that somebody had to make," against the North Vietnamese, one State Department official said, recalling those days. "But we didn't have the political environment for it."

After his appearance in Washington, Frishman was required to make his testimony public to the Senate Select Committee on Military Personnel, according to the chairman of the committee, Senator Blaine J. Larrimore.

"We, Frishman's testimony came at a critical time in this war, the United States. The White House had been pushed to a major change in policy on the prisoner issue just a few months earlier.

No American officials had attempted to negotiate privately with or restraint—and the United States, in order for the release and safety of the prisoners, had encouraged American pilots known to be captured by the North Vietnamese.

Frisman had told a Washington, D.C., newspaper reporter that in May, before his release, he was forced to give confessions against his will.

It happened when (a fellow pilot, Lieutenant Commander Richard A. Stroton, refused to make a statement.

He had been tied up with ropes to such a degree that he was barely able to move his arms from his body when he was questioned. He was deprived of sleep, beaten, had his fingers broken, and he was placed in solitary confinement, but the North Viet- namese immediately requested to see the statement, and it was taken away.

Henry Cabot Lodge, then President Nixon's Ambassador to the United Nations, replied that the prisoners were entitled to treatment in accordance with their status as prisoners of war.

But when the prisoner was questioned, it was with the purpose of learning what was happening and what had been the treatment and conditions of the prisoner in the hands of the North Vietnamese, according to a State Department official who attended the briefing.

It was a front-page story around the nation.

Little Tony to be Awarded

WASHINGTON, D.C. Two students at Washington University at Stevens Point are eligible for the "Little Tony Award," which is given to the two students with the best accomplishments in the third annual American College Theatre Festival. The festival is the first national program under the overall auspices of the new John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C.

The festival, which is also sponsored by the Kennedy Center, gives college and university students the opportunity to compete in a national competition for achievement in the performing arts.

Three corporations—American Oil Company, American Express, and American Telephone and Telegraph—are sponsoring the event by contributing $225,000 to cover expenses of ten regional festivals as well as the national finals. Students at Wisconsin State University, Stevens Point, passed the first preliminary when their production of "Romeo and Juliet," which is a brilliant production of the American College Theatre Festival, was selected to participate in the festival in Washington, D.C.

The "Award of Excellence" is being recognized by the American College Theatre Festival. The award is given to the best production of the festival, according to a statement by the National Capital, according to the Kennedy Center president, Blaine J. Larrimore.

"Additional," Larrimore said, "the American College Theatre Festival will be awarded to the various theatre departments of colleges and universities involved in the festival. Six successful teamworks are being recognized, also."

In the spring I’ll talk about raising zucchini in your land­lady’s flower gardens. Until then, you’ll have to use the store­bought versions for this recipe. Try to find squash that are generally quite firm, and free of soft, mushy spots.

This casserole is spiced in the Middle-Eastern manner, and its taste is similar to Srehaa of Column. 2. I am especially proud of my creation. It served me as a basis for status—of which you’ll find in last week’s column (omit the evaporated milk). This recipe for his casserole is also very cheap.

Brown in 2 T olive oil:

1 b. ground lamb
1/2 to one third C almonds (or pine nuts)
2 T finely chopped green pepper
1/2 finely chopped onion
1 finely chopped garlic clove
1/2 C long-grain rice

Turn off fire and mix in:

1/4 C chopped fresh parsley (or 1/2 dried parsley)
1 large tomato, chopped
1 T lemon juice
1 T vinegar

To a 1 b, 1 b, 1 cayenne pepper
1 c chopped green pepper
1 tsp salt
1/4 C chopped parsley (or 1/2 dried parsley)

Uncover when mixture is colled, stir in lightly beaten egg.

Thickly slice 1 lb. of zucchini, lengthwise. Lightly oil medium­sized baking dish (or pan) and line it with the zucchini, lengthwise on the bottom. Salt and pepper to taste. Add half of the lamb mixture, the rest of the zucchini, and then the rest of the lamb mixture.

Cover with ground chicken bouillon and bring to boil on top of stove. Cook covered in a 350 degree oven for 45 minutes.

World Wide Crops Inc. 2500 Euclid Ave. Cleveland plus 1 T grated Parmesan cheese, and 6 T fine bread crumbs. At the end of 45 minutes, remove cover, add crumb mixture, and bake another 15 minutes with the cover off. Serve with yogurt. (Very simple servings.)

The best inexpensive cookbook which I have seen is McCaU’s World Wide Cooking. It includes representative recipes from various areas of the world. Specifically, Scandinavia, Scotland, Italy, France. If you are interested in exploring various types of cooking, I urge you to begin with this book. As you find that a particular kind of food does greatly interest you, you can consider buying a more specialized cookbook, perhaps from the Time-Life series.

A fourth session is entitled “Society Reaches Out for Those Without”, and will be resided over by Mrs. Barbara Hickman, Director of the ESEA Title I program, Beloit Public Schools. A 1960 graduate of WSU-Stevens Point, Mrs. Hickman is a winner of the title I/II CAROL award in the field of education.

Reservations for the in­formative, women-oriented program will be filled on a first­come, first-served basis. Deadline for registration is March 1, Fee for the event is $5.00, and includes the sessions and luncheon.

Ramsey Clark Speech

Last Wednesday, February 17, Mr. Ramsey Clark, well known for his part­ cipatJion in the National Organization for Women (NOW), the original “Women’s Liberation” organization. Now a national consultant for the Commission on the Occupational Status of Women, Dr. Clarembach has served both the Wisconsin and Interstate Commission on the Status of Women, and is presently at the University of Wisconsin, as a specialist in women’s education. The topic she will discuss is: “Women Are People”?

The education day, open to all interested women, is being sponsored by the Stevens Point alumni association and ex­tended services division. Their goal is to provide an opportunity for women who have been away from college for some time, and for those who have never at­tened a University, to par­ticipate in discussions on the Concerns of the 70’s.

The program will be the issues discussed by five authorities in their fields. Women interested in hearing about the changing ideas in the marriage of today will be able to hear Mr. Ian G. Keith, psychiatric social worker, af­iliated with the Marshfield Clinic, Department of Psychiatry.

WINTER CAMPINA INCOME AND EXPENSES

Ramsey Clark, who believes “common sense is the truth coming through,” spoke to a large crowd, stating the facts of over-population like a typical ecologist and then always changing society. “I think we live in an unique time, we don’t study how very different these days are, immense sweeping change is the fundamental fact of our time. We always look for easy answers.” Ramsey said we have to “ponder” upon what our problems mean to us, we must care about people and deny the realities of becoming dehumanized. The “mastering” of the science of human attitudinal change is crucial to understanding man’s violent inherent instinct in mass society.

To “master” man’s violence Clark stated, “I think we are going to start standing for something, I would suggest we stand for People. Just start revering Life. People should be at the center of the Universe, the thing we really care about!”
It will be a year this coming April 25 when the Albertson Center for Learning Resources has had its doors open for student, faculty, and administrative use.

On April 25, 1967, the plane carrying Dr. Albertson's team crashed into a rainy mountain near Da Nang, killing seven educators and their pilot instantly. Dr. Albertson was 41 years old, yet in that time his professional achievements created a list longer than many men can compile in a lifetime twice as long.

Use of the new library will be a four-day schedule of events. It begins Thursday, February 23, and runs through until Sunday, February 28. The dedication ceremonies will be on Sunday, February 26.

Schedule of Events for Dedication Activities of James H. Albertson Center for Learning Resources

Open to the public without charge. President and Mrs. Dreyfus will host an invitational dinner at the Hoot Fish Shop after the address.

Sunday, Feb. 26, 2 p.m.: Dedication Ceremonies; Reserve Reading Room of Albertson Center, followed by a public open house and coffee-hour in the after-hours study room.

The Counter-Part Complex

by Ron Ridenhour

Dispatch News Service

SAIGON, SOUTH VIETNAM—"See that little guy over there," Major Joe McNeil said enthusiastically as he pointed toward a slender young Vietnamese officer. "If we had 10,000 like him, why—heh? We could all go home tomorrow!"

McNeil, a senior district advisor in Pleiku province, is intense, intelligent, and capable—the type of young officer the Army desperately needs. He was talking about his counter-part in the thanh An district, province chief Major Nguyen Long Hai.

As we walked around the perimeter of the district headquarters compound, Major McNeil described his counter-part as the type of young officer South Vietnam must produce by the thousands in order to survive.

McNeil pointed to the improvements Hai had made in the compound's defense. He spoke of Hai's other qualities: his honesty, his integrity, his "hurtles," his ability to work with the people.

"He's talking about how hard it is to be a district chief to live on his government salary and why most district chiefs are "at least a little dishonest" out of necessity.

"He never met a more honest man. We even found out that he was going with meals because he couldn't afford them every day...so we made him start eating here with the (U.S. Advisory) team."

When Joe McNeil talks about Major Hai he makes you believe; he makes you want to believe. You find yourself saying, "yes he is, he's the best,"—but what about his predecessor, you ask, the man who let the defenses fall into such a sorry state, who couldn't afford to work with the people, who lines his pockets with U.S. loot.

McNeil looks at the sky and rolls his eyes. "Boy" he says, "the stories I could tell you about that guy."

I left Joe McNeil remembering all the conversations I'd had with American advisors about their counter-parts. A major in Quan Nai Province, had said "If we only had 10,000 like him, we could all go home tomorrow!"

Another advisor said, "If he knows what's good for him, he makes you want to believe. You find yourself saying, "yes he is, he's the best,"—but what about his predecessor, you ask, the man who let the defenses fall into such a sorry state, who couldn't afford to work with the people, who lines his pockets with U.S. loot."

Karnival Krap

It is with no small degree of difficulty that we approach the subject of Winter Carnival, an archaic campus tradition that appears to be in its death throes. Let us hope. However, since the frost fest is a part of the raison d'etre for the portion of the student (?) community during last week, we shall briefly survey the wreckage left in its wake.

The University Activities Board has informed the Pointer that when the account books are closed on Winter Carnival 71-72 there will be a net loss of roughly $600.00 to the university. An insignificant sum? Perhaps, but there are undoubtedly areas of need for the money that are much more important than the Carnival fun and frolic.

Carnival has been defended as an outlet for stored winter energy and, referring directly to the ice sculpure, for creative abilities. The ice sculpture can hardly be held up as representative of creative abilities for the University's environmental and ecologic and aesthetic disaster. Furthermore, that stored winter energy directed toward goring down pancakes (and subsequently vomiting) 'creates' nothing but a pointless example of our wasteful, consumer-oriented culture.

There appears to be a trend toward ending this unproductive campus ritual. Hopefully, next year the students at Stevens Point will find more meaningful ends for their time and resources.

LRC Dedication

Still another incongruity has arisen from the business world here at WSU-SP. It appears that our administrators have developed a strategy to expedite the dedication (and public relations extravaganza) of the James H. Albertson Learning Resources Center. In order that dignitaries and awe-stricken housewives might swarm through Stevens Point's "tallest building" ( sigh ) without obstruction, the library will be closed. The Pointer has had difficulty predicting the success of this strategy, for obvious reasons. There is no wisdom involved, closing the library in order to dedicate it (especially on a weekend!) exemplifies the public relations perversion of the business ethic, which, in turn, has replaced scholarship as the primary influence in the university. Closing the library to dedicate it demonstrates the same mentality of the military leaders, who will order that "we must bomb the village to save it." The strategy to offer that will not interrupt the purposes of the library and will still be in keeping with the "spirit" of public relations mania. We suggest that a platform be erected on the roof of the LRC and at the appointed hour President Donaldson can proceed to the platform ceremoniously break a bottle of muscatel on the wall. We might add that this will be in keeping with Governor Patrick ("I'm Your Buddy") Lucey's Austerity Program.

definition of the ego is a matter of much academic debate. However, for the purposes of this essay, the ego is defined as the personality traits that are specific to an individual.

Memorial Forum

An outdoor "memorial forum" between the Fine Arts Building and Albertson Learning Resources Center was held at Stevens Point State University last spring at a cost of $49,200. The Campus Planner Raymond Specht said the State Building Commission had accepted a low bid from Burmeister Construction Co. Madison to do general contracting.

The project was delayed because of school construction and was completed before opening of school next fall.

The forum will be a huge circular area of surface that he believes will be ideal for outdoor concerts, theatrical productions or student gatherings. It will have a special draining system.

Extending from a 60-feet-in-diameter circle of poured concrete will be walkways of exposed aggregate pavement interchanged with plain concrete to form a design. Three diagonal walkways will be constructed from the center to the main walk along Portage and Franklin Street and be completed later under a structure contract.

The total distance across will be nearly 150 feet. Part of the project will include two small stairways leading to a platform that will connect with the existing stairway leading to the west entrance of the library and learning resources building. A planter will be part of the platform.

In keeping with the forum, a section of the proposed lawn will be left from the edge of the fine arts building so that a circle of space might be reserved for use in connection with the forum. Also, lighting facilities will be installed later under a structure contract.

Specht said the forum will be the first area on campus with a completed landscape between one building and another.

Death to the Ego

To the Editor:

Tonight I feel bursting with thoughts, one that keeps bouching through is it's hell to think you are "sane". Of course I said to think, for "sanity" is a chore to the Eastern Philosophies, now under self inculcation, spew forth much food for the mind.

A major point of contemplation is the goal of Moksa, complete unattchment to the outer "thing world". This involves the destruction or better disembowlement of the "ego". The pilgrimage towards this thought action is more complicated than momentarily realized. Is the "ego" innately inherent or an imprinting through socialization, which makes it more than just a state of mind or physical response, I fear to ask the latter contention. But if this is so can't it be combated by simple conscious denouement? I think not, for obviously the "ego" is no recent specter and man has been reacting for some time now going so rapidly in the opposite direction of real life of that ego fortification.

A sense of disembowlement of the "ego" is obtained in the visualization of a man reaching a crossroads, yet as soon as this is accomplished there appears another he must face, but for that moment between reaching the first crossroad and the appearance of another, lives the feeling of destruction.

Upon considering minds innate affinity for nature, it almost appears as if there is a divine scheme to unbolt man from the plight of "ego" "ego"... Reflecting upon a walk in the woods or around some birds or lakes there is an ability to let the mind be absorbed. If we are abstracted, this I propose is a minute form of "ego" disembowlement. For in relating to nature, we are without clothes, brains, or even bodies, which are really only socially conscious imprinments.

Why this feeling of inner tranquility? For it is in these moments we or better the "ego" doesn't exist only our human soul pervades. This may be the real source or action of happiness, mind-you man has corrupted and perverted our senses to the point of almost complete numbness to nature or ourselves. We see worldwide not as our own spirit, but in the terms of habits or what is left of the latter conention. But if this is so can't it be combated by simple conscious denouement? I think not, for obviously the "ego" is no recent specter and man has been reacting for some time now going so rapidly in the opposite direction of real life of that ego fortification.

So what must we do? First denounce the "ego" exists, to the point where ones intrinsic communion with beauty and love shall flow into life effortlessly. It will require more, perhaps a habit of mind, for if we can possess so many anti-life habits of thinking (?), I don't think those that are positive to life. If we struggle to over come mans evolutionary loneliness to create an indestructible "ego" we will only more tenaciously insist anti-life habits. There is no real struggle to overcome this life fact and then and only then shall a man progress to Moksa (unattachment).

At times I get the scary feeling that there is anything real, in a sense of something naturally creative or spontaneous and not just for eye and thought consumption by others.

So what is necessary, first to realize that happiness is not paratonic, second to stand outside our trapping's, our bodies, then our thoughts, for all these are only abstractions that have no real existence in our world. It is in the struggle to overcome man's anti-life habits. We must cease the thorny notion of the "ego", our soul pervades. This may be the real source or action of love, creativity and happiness, the reverse would simply flower in bountiful beauty.

I welcome your thoughts?

Edward Meister

Don't Free Bobby

Dear Dennis;

Free Bobby is apparently soliciting support for his point of view. He desires to favor imperialism and genocide since he supports the black panthers and other similar groups. Can you show that these groups are more humanitarian than those he opposes?

It is a fact that democracy and capitalism in action are not perfectly humanitarian. But this is not the fault of the systems. It is the fault of people who use them. These and any other such systems will become perfect as fast as people become perfect. I favor the perfecting of people as a means of perfection of systems. Would "Free Bobby" be willing to help with this?

Sincerely yours,

Joseph B. Harris

Sanctified

Dear Editor,

In an editorial which appeared in the Feb. 8 edition of The Pointer, there is a reference to people that are that are positive to life. If we struggle to overcome man's anti-life habits of thinking, we must face the fact that we are living in a world of hatred and war.

What must we do? First, denounce the "ego" exists, to the point where one's intrinsic communion with beauty and love shall flow into life effortlessly. It will require more, perhaps a habit of mind, for if we can possess so many anti-life habits of thinking, we must face the fact that we are living in a world of hatred and war.

I welcome your thoughts?

As the editor of that paper, I would like to correct some of the distorted statements made in the editorial. The purport of the article was to provide members of the university community with information in the form of Associated Press news items and other features. The goal was not to provide advertising in the Stevens Point area, a ready outlet for area campus market. Thirdly, the publishers of the paper, the Stevens Point Daily Journal, hoped to make a profit on their venture.

As to the paper's journalistic and typographical quality, I would argue that that was high in comparison with other campus papers.

The paper was designed to provide students information that they would not see in a regular campus paper. In that function, we fulfilled our job superably.

STEVEN'S POINT—The vice president for student affairs at Stevens Point State University, Dr. William Stielstra, announced today that he will relinquish his administrative duties, effective February 21, to full-time teaching in the history department.

He will hold the post exactly six years when he makes the change next Sept. 1. His move, while not unprecedented on American campuses, is the exception rather than the rule because most high ranking officials who are not asked resign apparently stay on board until they are 65. Stielstra is 55.

President Lee S. Dreyfus said, "I will consider the absence of Mr. Stielstra on my central administrative council as a key loss. We shall all miss his presence on a regular basis; however, he has agreed that his advice and counsel shall continue to me, the administration and faculty alike. He has desired for some time to return to his teaching. He is not making his change at my personal request. But I now feel I no longer can insist on his administrative assistance and services. His personal desires involve a call back to the classroom—a call which I very much understand since the same goal exists for me." Stielstra said consideration for filling the vacancy is being "taken under advisement." Shortly I will announce methods for making a selection of a new vice president for this office which differs some from others in the university."

Sigma Pi

The Brother of Sigma Pi held their annual meeting for the election of new officers this past Tuesday. The new Executive Board of Gamma Lambda Chapter at Stevens Point is as follows:

Jerry Kehl - President
Dave Davel - Vice President
Bob Good - Secretary
Chris Mears - Treasurer
Nicky Schmal - Herald
Paul Pennhorn - Librarian

The new officers are as follows:

President - Jerry Kehl
Vice President - Dave Davel
Secretary - Bob Good
Treasurer - Chris Mears
Herald - Nicky Schmal
Librarian - Paul Pennhorn

"I must add further that 'I sense a personal regret in losing him from my staff.' the president concluded.

"Stielstra, a native of Michigan, came to Stevens Point State in 1968 when there were about 3,000 students. The enrollment has more than doubled since then.

He attended Calvin College, the University of Michigan and Michigan State University and began his career as a teacher in higher education 24 years ago, spending nine years at Alma College as assistant professor of history and dean of men and nine years at Purdue University as assistant dean of men and director of student loans.

Stielstra said he made his decision to return to the classroom because "it's time for someone new to have a crack at the job" which has grown significantly the past few years. He said that student enrollment has more than 50 professionals in the divisions of housing, admissions, financial aids, health services, student activities, University Centers, placement, and career center.

"Many institutions, whether the college, professional athletics, or corporations change chief administrators at regular intervals. Input of new people provides new insights, new vitality and fresh energies. And in student personnel work, there are many capable people whose talents should be used," he said.

Stielstra said the job has been "very demanding and very rewarding—prize the experience of the last six years." He commended his staff as being "superior, energetic and enthusiastic.

As for change in the make up of students, Stielstra believes today's students are more sensitive, knowledgeable, vocal, attuned to social issues, more honest about themselves and issues and hold a stronger sense of right and wrong.

Stevens Point State has experienced student activism in the past few years, but has remained unscathed by any significant violence. The outgoing vice president says students of the future probably will "settle down in erratic and destructive behavior and take more positive and rational action to solve problems."

He now looks forward to more free time for more travel, reading and independent study.

Artists Display Works

STEVEN'S POINT—Three students from the Fine Arts Building in Stevens Point State University's fine arts building on display Sunday when the Edna Carlson Gallery was opened to the public for the first time in Stevens Point State University's new $1 million Fine Arts Building.

Most of the works are by three seniors, Edward Wilk of Milwaukee, Barbara Alison of Stevens Point, and Karen Seegers of Lombard, III.

There are also several black and white prints by Harry Callahan, faculty member at the Rhode Island School of Design, and Elliott Schnackenberg, faculty member at the Milwaukee Technical College.

Also utilizing photography are works by 12 other Stevens Point students in Professor Dan Fabiano's painting class. The theme is "environmental concepts."

The gallery is 60 by 60 feet and has entrances on either end plus a front opening which overlooks an in-door courtyard. The entire front side, facing east, is enclosed in glass, and there are arrangements on display, moveable panels inside to divide the gallery.

The ceiling is about 15 feet high.

On November 24, 1971, which was Barbara Alison when she was a student at Stevens Point State, was attended by her father, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Alison, and his sister Dr. Anna Alvis, both of Stevens Point.

The gallery is 45 by 60 feet and says, "Through my photographs I try to show the beauty which is present in those ordinary things around us which all too often thought of as an eyesore, the abandoned car or trash can, the peeling paint holds great possibilities for the creation of visually exciting photographs."

Fabiano's students' photographs and ideas that were presented in such a way as to verify the existence of the idea. The ideas presented by these students are based on a sense of competency of the art as a possible result of our technological society. Thus it may be that in some cases the process of working the idea is more important than the end result.

All of the work will be on display until February 28.
As a newcomer to Stevens Point, I view the winter carnival as a dis-oriented and somewhat futile surge of creativity on the part of a predictably small number of students.

Instead, perhaps the campus beauties could flash their winning smiles in a children's hospital or orphanage, and make someone happy besides proud parents and smug boyfriends. The many other talents apparent here could in a similar way be re-directed as the good accomplished and the satisfaction achieved would be recognized long after the sun had erased all signs of February.

A winter carnival is a great event for a campus with so much snow and ice as ours. It brings out creativity and sportsmanship, along with the fun and pleasure of either witnessing or experiencing the crazy contests that make college life more than just books and beer.

Tech School Need

"Many students who come to Stevens Point didn't want to come here but did so because of social pressure," stated Dr. Dallas Pankowski, assistant director of extended services. Advised by guidance counselors, pressured by parents and assured by misconceptions many students enter college each year and fall.

A position paper released in November by Dr. William Clements, director of institutional research, indicates that many students lack academic qualifications to be college-bound. "As an ideal I would support the volunteer concept, but as a practical matter it won't work out. Let's be realistic and extend this draft thing for four years and see what you can do with volunteer incentives. Just to extend this draft for two years is impractical."

"The army's at the bottom of the ladder of volunteerism and the voluntary concept will destroy the army. We've got a war on. And I'm going to fight this voluntary concept as long as I can."

Once teachers are certified to teach "Capstone" courses high school curriculums can do more for youths who are less academically inclined. It is estimated that less than 20 percent of the labor force needs a college education. Most of the rest needs other training than college. To accomplish this there is a high demand for technical school teachers, some of these jobs pay more money than college professors receive. To teach a technical skill properly, practical experience must be involved before one is qualified. This naturally takes some time.

Vocational training not only involves teaching new skills but trains youths to be responsible for the eventual labor force to keep them up-dated on the latest advances in progress. As the demand for technicians by industry increases so does the demand for teachers by technical schools.

At WSU-SF the two curriculums slanted in this direction, are Business Education and Home Economics.

Time will soon tell if students will be made aware of changing job opportunities and can be properly motivated soon enough to fill the large gap for vocational-technical positions.
Jorge Morel to Play

Argentinian guitarist Jorge Morel will be featured in the continuing Arts and Lectures Series at Stevens Point State University on Wednesday night, Feb. 24.

His performance, to be assisted by Johnny Rodriguez on percussion, will be at 8 p.m. in the Peter J. Michelsen Recital Hall of the Fine Arts Building.

The duo will perform 14 selections including two original compositions by Morel, a waltz by Chopin, themes from the West Side Story by Bernstein, numerous South American favorites and one of George Gershwin’s works.

This a return visit for Morel, who performed to a capacity audience on campus last year. He also played recitals in Marshfield and Wausau.

A recent performance in Tully Hall in New York prompted New York Times reviewer Robert Sherman to call Morel’s show the most enjoyable guitar recital of the season. The reviewer added: “His program contained no old Spanish sonatas, no Bach transcription, not a single quaint Elizabethan galliard. Instead, Mr. Morel opened with a couple of palatable encores – A Paganini Romanza and Schumann’s Traumerei – and then turned happily to a parade of delectable second-rate folklore and popular style pieces by Latin American composers.

Arts and Lectures Director Jack Coban said the same kind of program is on tap for Stevens Point. Tickets are available in Cohan’s Office in Room B119 of the Fine Arts Building and may be obtained via letter or a phone call.

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION NEWS...

Veterans benefits are generally exempt from taxation and need not be reported as income on income tax returns, the Veterans Administration announced today.

The VA said the only reportable item is interest earned on GI insurance dividends left on deposit or credit with the VA since this is considered earned income and a veteran’s benefit.

GI insurance dividends themselves are not taxable, VA said, nor are proceeds from GI insurance policies.

Other major tax exempt benefits are compensation and pension, GI Bill and other educational assistance, subsistence payments to vocational rehabilitation trainees, and grants for homes or autos to severely disabled veterans.

BUTCHERING
Orchestra Review

The Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra, which appeared in concert about two years ago in Stevens Point, made a return visit on Friday, February 19. The concert was held in the Berg Gym, in the Field House and the orchestra performed to a large and attentive audience.

The orchestra was directed by Kenneth Schermerhorn, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, and the orchestra director for three years. In 1959, Schermerhorn was appointed Assistant Conductor of the New York Philharmonic under Leonard Bernstein.

The concert opened with "Tragic Overture", Opus 81, by Brahms. The title, suggesting great intensity and dynamic range, was misleading as the orchestra played without much use of these. The Overture lacked a certain fire that one finds in Brahms' music if it is performed that way. Next on the program was "Violin Concerto No. 2" by Bartok. The violin soloist was James Oliver Buswell, a recent graduate of Harvard University. Buswell made his first recording debut with Andre Previn and the London Symphony Orchestra. His performance Friday night was dynamic, musical, and thrilling to watch. However, the audience must have thought Buswell was finished at one point as it is not customary to applaud between movements during a performance.

Constituting the second half of the concert was a beautiful performance of the Shostakovich Symphony No. 1, in F minor. Much more exciting than the Brahms, it was played professionally and characteristically.

Prompted by the audience, the orchestra performed the light and lively "Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz for an encore. It was an enjoyable addition to a beautiful evening of music.

James Buswell, Solo Violinist

J. Edgar Hoover Issue Campaign in 72?

By William W. Turner

A few weeks ago the California Democratic State Central Committee passed a resolution calling for the disbarment of J. Edgar Hoover, because of his open hostility toward Robert F. Kennedy and his political allies, Attorney General King, Jr., and Ramsey Clark.

The move was unprecedented. for a party that prides itself on its broadmindedness. As more than a few television that Hoover “might conceivably” become a California Democratic State member, Mrs. Ann Alanson of San Francisco, who happen to be the wife of President of the F.B.I. in the Lee Harvey assassination, bringing renewed drive and money, he told a Senate group “which included priests” and Puerto Ricans “don’t shoot the theological anti-Communism “jellyfish.” He remarked to and:I would have

But time and his own time workings are sure to change the facts, but not necessarily the implications.

In a memorable 1964 outburst he called Supreme Court Justice singer's hearts” for insipiently prompt arraignment of prisoners, scolded the Warren Commission for its wrist-slap of the FBI in the Lee Harvey Oswald affair, and branded Dr. King “the most notorious liar in the country.

This chief has been in the FBI. In a 1965 and unseemly flap with Robert Kennedy over who authorized them in the first place. In 1966 it came to light that the Bureau had maintained electronic surveillance on Dr. King to the moment of his assassination, bringing renewed demands for Hoover’s ouster from moderate and minority and civil rights groups.

All of this is the assumption that FBI popularity was as high as the reputed purity of Ivory soap. A Gallup Poll last August revealed that although the Bureau still commanded a “highly favorable rating” of 71 percent nationally, it had slipped dramatically from 1964. Only results from the South and Midwest, stronghold’s of the theocracy, were unaffected by the fiasco symbolized by Hoover, kept the drop from being precipitous.

Certainly it is in the eye of the storm. He indulged in an about-face soon after his recent recriminations, with Ramsey Clark, calling the former attorney general a “government official” who is “a remarkable figure” to Time magazine that Mexicans and Puerto Ricans “don’t shoot very straight” but beware “if they come at you with a knife,” referring to himself in the first person. Then, in seeking more agents and money, he told a Senate subcommittee that an “anarchist group” which included imprisoned Roman Catholic priests in California was a “threatening situation.” In the same line, Philip Berrigan was hatching a bizarre kidnap and bombing plot, stirring charge a grandstand
