Purchasing:

The Purchasing Department at WSU-Stevens Point, which is the center of all campus buying, has been described as a service organization for the university. Mr. Gerald Burling is the chief purchasing agent with two secretaries assisting in office work. Purchasing responsibility is also subdelegated to the maintenance department, which is the center of all property. Routine clerks, one in the maintenance department, are in existence only because of the student body and faculty. They are in existence only because of the student body and faculty.

Madison Provides Ground rules

The Department of Administration in Madison provides the Purchasing Department with the ground rules which Burling and his staff follow. They also establish service first, quality secondly in relationship to the price of the commodity. Finally, price itself. We are in existence only because of the student body and faculty.

In explaining the process of buying, Burling stated that any vendor or person in business is eligible for state bidding. He notes that it is the responsibility of the purchasing agent to provide service first, quality secondly in relationship to the price of the commodity. Finally, price itself. We are in existence only because of the student body and faculty.

"Service First, Quality Second"

The State Department of Administration has set certain standards for purchasing. This University is only authorized to issue orders up to $500 directly to the vendor. In addition to this, are the state procurement bulletin. These bulletins list contracts negotiated by the state. Companies are pre-selected on a competitive basis and in these cases, the university may order up to $3,000 from one vendor. "Once a year we advertise in the state paper. The Wisconsin State Journal in Madison is the official newspaper for the bidding process." We look for suppliers of furniture under the standards that the state has established.

Burling then gave examples of some of the major equipment suppliers to this campus. "IBM, and Smith Corona are the major suppliers of typewriters here. Calculators are supplied by Moore, NCR, and Remington." He noted that the administration here sets some standards as to what is bought. "Standardization, I feel is most important because of the factors such as service, flexibility and price." In naming the major suppliers of office furniture, Burling said that there were numerous companies who had a hand in supplying the school. "There is no one manufacturer who has control over all the furniture sold to us, but this situation does create some problems in areas such as size and color coordination."

The Budget advisory Committee has established the allotted budget for secretarial and faculty positions. These standard stations for new faculty members and other employees have been in existence for six years.

Premise Expects Standards

Exceptions to the standards that the committee sets up include the deans, the vice presidents, and the president. Burling cited prestige as the reason for these exceptions and said that they were the only ones.

Burling stated that once a faculty member has acquired a standard station, that any additions must be made in a request to the department chairman. The chairman then would budget for the item through the department's own budget. Burling felt that chances were slim that the faculty member would get the addition because furniture is usually placed very low on department budgets.

Upgrading Program

Burling talked briefly about the upgrading program in furnishing the campus buildings. He cited the fact that his department had replaced 90 percent of the wooden office furniture at "Old Main." The current projects include the upgrading of files and bookcases. A future step will be the purchase of new classroom furniture.

In the upgrading program, old furniture is sold at auction. The money taken in from these has resulted in several projects such as a lounge in the Student Services Building and a student lounge in "Old Main."

When asked about the effects of the university systems merger in his department, Burling expressed his concern that it would result in a more decentralized system, with more responsibility going to the individual universities themselves.

Marcel Marceau Tonight

Marcel Marceau, identified in the arts world as the greatest living pantomimist, will bring his acting to SPSU tonight for two separate programs.

The Frenchman's campus visit, sponsored by the Arts and Lectures Series, will be part of the President's Program of the United States.

This afternoon (3:30 p.m.), he will conduct a lecture-demonstration for students in the College of Fine Arts and at 8 p.m. he will present a public performance in Main Building auditorium. However, Arts and Lectures Director Jack Cohen reported that tickets are sold out.

Marceau has toured the world and won rave reviews on nearly every continent. The London Times once reported that "Marceau's art does not merely survive repeated visits, it repays them. He is the greatest pantomimist since Chaplin, and in his special way, the funniest comic in the world."

Pantomime, the art of gesture, is featured by Marceau in his latest motion picture "First Class," in which he portrays 17 different characters.

Children throughout America were recently made aware of his outstanding art of silent communication with the publication of the "Marcel Marceau Alphabet Book" in which he portrays a different action or mood for each letter of the alphabet. Success of the book, in terms of sales, is said to have been closely followed by the publication of the Marcel Marceau Counting Book.

Marceau's ability to fashion concrete reality was first demonstrated to the American public during the 1955-56 season. In September of 1955, his debut at the Phoenix Theatre created such a great public demand that his engagement was extended to the Barrymore Theatre. Marceau returned to New York the following spring after a coast-to-coast tour and played a record-breaking run at the 3,000-seat City Center. His six subsequent tours were in 1958, 1960, 1963, 1965, 1968 and 1970. Marceau, who counts Charlie Chaplin as one of his early sources of inspiration, is now considered the only true successor to the Chaplin style.

LSD "Replies" To Special Comment?

Editor's Note: The following correspondence from the office of President Dreyfus is in response to our "Special Comment" printed in the last four issues. Emphasis has been placed on certain passages which the editorial staff found to be somewhat amazing.

In reading this piece of rhetoric from the President, we find that our questions have not been answered thoroughly or responsibly. We wonder if such serious problems can be shrouded off or cloaked in the guise of "formality."

To the Editor (originally, "Dear Allen"):

I am responding to the Special Comment
section of the first issue of this year's Pointer.
In it you make reference to the administration's investigation relative to the incident between Mr. Fortis and Professor Lewis of the English Department. At the end of the section of your communication you said, "We hope the administration will see fit to reply to theses questions through the student newspaper." Will you please, in the future, however, send me a direct letter for anything to which you want a reply, for the simple reason that if I took the time to reply to every charge against the administration which appears in the Pointer, particularly as I look at past issues, I would be spending an indeterminate amount of time in operating in this fashion. Therefore, please do not assume that I have read the Pointer and know on what matters you are commenting. As a matter of course, I did not read the Pointer last year
because I neither need nor interest
myself and was, in my opinion, highly unrelated
to this campus. For all of these reasons, I would prefer that you present written responses
to me by means of a letter or simply a phone call to my office.

The determination of facts to Vice President Sielstra, and asked him to carry out whatever investigation he felt necessary before making a recommendation to me. This should answer question 3, as well as question
1. There were no students on the investigating "team"; there was, in short, no team; it was simply an informal investigation carried out by the Vice President. My request was that,
You have asked several questions. (1)
"Why in the world is this information being held confidential?" I consider the investigation carried out at my request to be confidential material because the investigation was not a formal one carried out under specific rules.

Since the incident involved a student, I assumed the responsibility for making after gathering the facts, he make a personal determination and make the recommandation on the student directly to me.
His report also went to the Vice President for Academic Affairs, who reviewed it and made a recommendation to me concerning the faculty member. The confidentiality is based on the fact that we have never released for public record these kinds of informal investigations and I see no reason for doing it at this time because there was a Pointer reporter involved. I realize that he has a "special" interest for you, but as such I simply viewed him as one of our students and have treated him in this exactly the same fashion as we have treated every other investigation that involved some possible disciplinary action.

When one talks about the possibility of disciplinary action with a possible suspension
as the end result, then we are, of course, constrained to very specific guidelines under the Disciplinary Code to set up a hearing tribunal, keep a transcript, etc. Since the possibility of suspension for either party was not involved, and since I did not see this incident as having that magnitude of importance, there was no disciplinary tribunal procedure involved.

...Let me also say that I would not consider it ethical on my part to make a public record
out of informal fact gathering since the people with whom the Vice President spoke were not in any way involved. As a matter of fact, I did quit reading the Pointer last year
because I neither need nor interest
myself and was, in my opinion, highly unrelated
to this campus. For all of these reasons, I would prefer that you present written responses
to me by means of a letter or simply a
phone call to my office.

Professor Lewis, indicating the unacceptability by the University of the use of physical force as an accepted solution to conflict situations. Beyond that I am not willing to release a copy of the letter of reprimand to Professor Lewis or a copy of the letter of admonishment to Mr. Fortis. Those are personal letters to them. They are, of course, quite free to release them to you for publication if they should so desire. Neither of them received a copy of the other's letter.
Again, this follows the procedure I've followed since I arrived here four years ago,
and I see no reason for varying it in this case.
The newspaper, of course, can talk to all of the principals involved in the incident in the same manner that Dr. Sielstra did, serving as my representative. Anything that those people wish to reveal to you certainly would be part of the news coverage you can provide in meeting the students' right to know. I do believe that the students have a right to know what decision is made by the administration in any given case involving a member of the student body or a member of their faculty.

That information, of course, has been made public to your reporter and, as in the past,
will continue to be made public in any future cases. Beyond that, I think there is no further need for information. My interest relative to the release of the recommendation given to me by Dr. Sielstra did include the possibility of that document being available to court of law in the event that any incident such as this becomes a matter of court record. It was the informal opinion of the Assistant Attorney General, in consultation with various legal professionals, since it constitutes a personal investigation by an administrative member of the institution. He did not think, in fact, that this would be subject to subpoena, even in a court, and that the court would clearly be required to carry out its own investigation
under procedures involving transcripts, etc., before making its own determination quite separate from the administrative determination of the University.

Any further information as to this matter
you would have to get from all of the principals involved, rather than through Dr. Sielstra or myself.

Sincerely yours,
Lee Shermeyer Dreyfus

Mr. Robert Hensen, Area Director for Emergency Government in the north east region of Wisconsin was asked in an interview for the Pointer to comment on the Civil Defense Program. Mr. Hensen believes that Civil Defense is one of the most misunderstood programs we have today. He commented, "Civil Defense is not an organization with a command and control posture which is determined to sell civil government to stand off in a corner while it runs the whole show during an emergency. A simple definition of Civil Defense is the existing structure of civil government capable of effectively functioning under emergency situations for the common welfare of the people."

This is not easily done he added because all city and county governments have their specific departments running on a tight day to day budget. Emergency situations put a strain on that type of budgeting because they require additional manpower, resource capabilities, and prudent planning. These are the types of things Civil Defense or Emergency Government as it is now called, is training communities to cope with.

Since training has become an essential part of Civil Defense the United States Government has contracted fifty state universities to offer a Civil Defense University Extension Program to fulfill the educational needs of civil government. W.S.U.S. P. has the federal contract for the C.D.U.E.P. in this state. Don Heimlich is the director of the program and coordinates the teaching of the plans and operations of Civil Defense as it may relate to the Administrative offices of the community. The C.D.U.E.P. holds emergency operations training exercises simulating emergency situations from which Civil Department Heads learn emergency government procedure. Heimlich also coordinates Public Official Conferences designed to keep the legislative end of government briefed as to the currency of the program.

The organizational structure of the Civil Defense program is a complex network of communications activity. The United States is divided into eight regions. Wisconsin is a region and recognizes Battle Creek, Michigan as its federal level office coordinating the responsibilities of the five state region. Wisconsin itself is divided into six operational headquarters which share facilities with the State Traffic Patrol offices. Mr. Hensen maintains his office at Stevens Point as the coordinator of the municipalities in northeast sector of the state. Hensen's office in Stevens Point is an important one because, should communications with Madison be cut off, Stevens Point would become the alternate state capital and coordinate the information for 72 counties and 117 municipalities of the state. Hensen's office is located in Old Main. He stated because it is a state office it has eliminated the necessity of usurping city government space. Hensen's office as all Civil Defense offices are additional administrative assistance, and professional expertise to agencies of government. Furthermore, civil government into a state of preparedness and they reserve constant command or control assistance.

Mr. Hensen indicated a change in the original Civil Defense Program. It can no longer be directly related to defense from nuclear attack. Henson said, "That is 1956 type thinking." He added, "With the advent of the CDM and nuclear technology there no longer is such a thing as a defendable country. So we worked on the premise of, if other countries have the capacity we do to deliver a type of weapon with this phenomenal characteristic and there is not an absolute positive defense against the system, that it was very prudent that we undertake as much of a program as possible to enhance the survivability of the citizenship through military means."

This according to Hensen was the original basis behind the Defense program. However, Hensen added, "Recognizing that natural disasters are much more prevalent and yet require the most fundamental concept we've said that the Civil Defense program is geared for any contingency that require more than one specific Department of government for in excess of 2,000 people. Civil Defense now is involved with emergencies stemming from all natural disasters. It also plays a role in solving civil disturbances."

When asked to evaluate how much money is spent for nuclear war preparedness as opposed to natural disaster aid, Hensen said this could not be done. He remarked, "The philosophy of preparing for a nuclear disaster is contingent upon the fact that a community is prepared for nuclear war it is in effect more than capable of sustaining a natural disaster that comes along. So if we were to spend one dollar for a shelter fall we would also have spent one dollar for a shelter fall is a person to go to in case of a tornado." Hensen remarked on these facilities as they exist on this campus by saying that, "The university here has a knack for cutting up good buildings." He stated that this campus has an tremendous shelter capacity and could provide safe shelter area in excess of 2,000 people. This is not only in underground facilities but in core areas and intermediate stories of multi-storied buildings. All buildings have been surveyed by professional engineers with ventilation taken into account.

Hensen was asked what he felt should be done to alleviate the apparent ignorance of students and faculty concerning this activity in case of an emergency. He replied, "You're never going to get completely educated in the program. I don't think they require this depth of knowledge, but I do say that they should know the war "the putting up of the "signs and what the words on the "signs should be."

Hensen indicated that a new Emergency Operation Program will be implemented on this campus to complement the educational problems involved. (See E.O.P. Article Pointer, Oct. 1 issue.) We are unable to outline the role business plays in Civil Defense. Hensen maintained that, "Business and industry play vital, vital roles in our program. He emphasized that one of the most evident outgrowths of a disaster can be the end to production by business. This itself could according to Hensen, "Put us all out of a job." Industry is probably the most obvious of Civil Defense said Hensen and is equally aware of the role it would play in achieving economic stabilization in the aftermath of a large scale disaster. "Industry is the most important because the time it takes to prepare for an emergency is proportionate to the time it will take to implement a swift recovery from a disaster. Civil Defense offices and the C.D.U.E.P. work closely with industry management on such disaster planning and for the educational needs of key personnel in disaster preparedness.
"Twenty-One Wisconsin Artists" Reviewed

"Horse's Head" by Joellen Vanouwerkerk

By Bill Sadowski

"Pregnant with force and coignant as a bolt of lightning" seems almost inadequate to describe fully the rich embellishment of art work covering the interior walls of the Edna Carlsten Gallery in the New Pine Arts Building.

The exhibit is a fitting addition and focal point to the dedication of the new W.S.U.-Fine Arts Building. As Richard Sauer, Gallery Director has stated of the exhibit, "I drew up a tentative list of fifteen artists who either received some university training in Wisconsin or are teaching at a university in Wisconsin. In contracting the artist they were allowed the opportunity to recommend others for inclusion in the show, thus giving the exhibit a broader viewpoint."

The total ideal presented as a result of this extraneous effort, brought forth work that possesses a quality of finishness and an essence of precision. As a student of art or any path or field in life, one only has to see this exhibit once, but all will be thunder-bolted back for glance after stare after glance. Such is the case with this fine collection of craftsmanship on canvas.

As highlights of the show, each work is a major attraction, but certain pieces seem to draw the viewer's inner emotions in an upward wonderment and thrust, more than others. This is more simply stated, as saying motivation of the artist forces itself upon the viewer consequitively in piece after piece.

The works by John Colt of Milwaukee, working on unbleached canvas checker-boards, mushrooms out as a burst of subtle enjoyment in a unity of form that is soft yet stretched to the point of breaking into a thousand pieces.

Michel Drought of Madison, as if encased in a dream has provided a stigma of aura- and exultation in a painting that reminisces planks of wood that breathe an inner fire. This painting is almost painful to look at, because of the strong death emotion imposed into the living skyline and charred wood enthusiasm.

Vernal Funk of Whitewater, used his brush to create paint in a most unique blend of mirror images of reality. These lend themselves to a great extent to a versatile mind that makes the viewer so totally involved in the realism and depth that for a viewer to want to reach out and touch the image on canvas, thinking it a real object, is not unknown. This feeling of deep realizations toward reality trends in a different degree exhibited and manifested in Irene Kebota of Oshkosh. She has painted an image that is floating away into space as if a whimsical death is siphoning life into space! The viewer feels dismayed when the eye reaches the climax of the final floating and disappearing image. A freedom of sadness overcomes the viewer.

One of the larger pieces in the show by Roland Poska of Milwaukee, tends to keep the fantastic movement it created within itself, but still lends itself to the movement of earth and rumblings of mountains, as if it were going to break apart and crumble before the viewer is finished glancing at it.

Probably the most popular painting in the show, by Joseph Rozman of Kenosha, is "Year in Year out" because of its wild and ecstatic array of enamel colors in fine point technique. Lawrence Rathbuck of Milwaukee, has uniquely blended the technique of Turner from the 1800's and the contemporary Rothko style to give not only a sense of inner vibrance, but a stillness and beauty that is refreshing to look at as an inner glow from within the soul. Probably the most erotic of all pieces are the almost metallic and tin-foil like people created in black and white with the air-brush technique by Joellen Vanouwerkerk of Madison. The body forms created in the two pieces exhibited are as strong on canvas in dimension and depth as Michelangelo's sculptures were in his highest point of production.

Included in the show are drawings with watercolor, done for the costume design of the current W.S.U. production of "Mass of La Mancha" done by Frieda Etes Faust. These designs show her concern for costume fitting the character and part it takes in the total network of cohesion that has gone into the La Mancha production.

John Colt of Milwaukee, one of the exhibiting artists, has summed up in total the spirit that the show is befitting dedication ceremonies. "The work for this exhibition was selected from artists representing several communities throughout the State. Although it does not indicate a distinct Wisconsin direction, it is reflective of contemporary painting concerns." There are twenty-one Wisconsin Artists included and represented in this exhibition.

If you are conscious of the contemporary movements in art or life, you must definitely see this fine coalition of life giving and taking thoughts brought to the surfaces of paper and canvas!
Police or, the sheriff knew about the building. According to Claude Aufdermauer, the office of Protection and Security knew nothing about the recent drug raid at Burroughs Hall.

He said no Campus police officers were present when arresting officers entered the building. Aufdermauer said that campus officer, Danielski saw a city police car at the dorm; he said the department is concerned about Arntz and John Frodermann, both of Burroughs Hall, are out on bail. According to the District Attorney’s office, Frodermann will have his preliminary hearing Oct. 5. Frodermann’s preliminary hearing will be Oct. 21.

Aufdermauer said the raid was, “out of my hands; out of my hands from the very beginning.” He said the raid was run by the Attorney General’s office and fear of a possible “leak,” could have kept Campus police uninformed. He added, the Chief of Police nor the sheriff knew about the raid. You’ll have to know us to know?”

He said the department is concerned about the drug problem on Campus, but never used to feel it was significant. He added, “but I guess it is.”

As to what action the Office of Protection and Security can take to prevent possession of drugs on Campus, Aufdermauer said, “I don’t really know. We don’t go into rooms...don’t infringe in that area.”

He said he has “no idea” how had the drug problem is at WSSU-SF. He said he is not in a position to say how the drug problem at WSSU-SF relates to other Wisconsin Universities.

According to Claudene Aufr dermauer, the Aufr dermauer said the raid was run by the Office of Protection and Security and fee d the chief of police uninformed. He added, the Chief of Police nor the sheriff knew about the raid. "You’ll have to know us to know?"

The Office of Protection and Security called city police the morning of the raid. According to Auf dermauer, city officials said, they were “busy on the raid.”

At present, defendants, Robert Cesario and John Frodermann, both of Burroughs Hall, are out on bail. According to the District Attorney’s office, Cesario will have his preliminary hearing Oct. 5. Frodermann’s preliminary hearing will be Oct. 21.

When the revolution's finally over
And all the people have been killed
We'll call up a convention
to help us with our load

Twisted oak trees rolling grey
Steel beams in tortured agony
The death land glowering in the sight
America come help us now
We stand in need of aid
Freedom land of liberty
We now can see your light
We wish to strive for purity
To be as pure as all of them
great and small we are dead

Birth Of A Notion

On September 21, 1971, at 6:30 p.m., The U.A.B. and University Center at WSSU-SF, gave birth to the Rut Cellar. As an enthusiastic throng of students wished the new born good health. But, as everyone knows, growing things need more than good wishes. Only a few have been nursing the new born and receiving the benefits of learning through their experience. In just a few hours with the Rut Cellar, they are already making belts, wall hangings, Indian bead-work pieces and leather pieces. These few are helping the cellar to get through its first growing pains, but more people are needed to help the cellar develop into a strong arts and crafts center.

If you think it's too late to get into the pioneering spirit and help to develop your potentials in the cellar, don’t. Each person gets individual instruction in the basic skills needed for macrame, leatherwork or beadwork if he wants it. So, come to the cellar and help develop your potentials and the cellar's.
The Student Press: Another Question

The Pointer believes that all future Homecoming traditions can be called a pseudo-liberal, traditional entertainment which culturally links the student with his economic milieu. The only way to turn a passive student body into a working body of people concerned with life and work is to sponsor an ecological beautification day. The UAB Service System, which is responsible for funding Homecoming, has a responsibility to promote activities that are in the best interests of the university. The importance of this idea is that it will help to maintain the dignity of a university.

Letters

Register and Vote

To the Editor:

The following letter came as a direct reaction to the action by the Congress of the United States in the selection of the draft on June 30, 1973.

Dear Sir: I have hesitated writing this letter for some time because I am well aware of the consequences of the action I am contemplating, but on the occasion of the reinstatement of the draft, I feel that my time to act is now.

As you have seen I am returning my draft cards: a symbolic act of civil disobedience. I see it as my refusal to play this particular game of the world as we play it. I am aware of the logical fulfillment of the beliefs I now hold: this alley is the only one open to me. In my opinion it is the only one that leads to a present moment.

Upon looking at my records, you will find that my draft number is 325 and that I am presently available for the Army. I have always been concerned that I was the only one personally certain of winning when my hearing comes up. So I decide whether you are returning your cards when you'll never be drafted. Now I want to answer this question so that.

Homecoming: An Objective Criticism

As the alumni pace the grounds and walkways this week, they will not only notice a change in the campus, but also in Homecoming itself. It is a change that can be called a pseudo-liberal, tradition-breaking escapade. Even though these traditional bonds were not completely severed, the Pointer credits the University Activities Board with 'a good try.' The variety in entertainment offered this week presents a case for objective criticism. This marks the first year that Homecoming has supplied entertainment which connects with the purpose of the university; the acquisition of knowledge and the broadening of cultural experiences. Unfortunately, all the entertainment did not hold up to these ideals.

The Pointer believes that all future Homecoming events should be centered around the university as an institution of learning, not as an institution of fun and games.

Homecoming can no longer be allowed to center solely on the relaxation of the student from scholastic work. It should, instead, be a continuation of the student's learning process via cultural awakening. It is an excellent time to incorporate plays, movies and entertainment that will intellectually stimulate the student as well as the alumni. Both Hair and Marcel Marceau are steps in this direction. The fact that they are both world-renowned performances denotes a form of entertainment which culturally links the student with every other person that has gone to the performances. Homecoming, then, has served two positive functions: cultural broadening of the student and entertainment at the same time. It not only gives something for the student to look forward to, but something for the alumni to come back to an institution whose main purpose is education.

However, the positive attributes of holding a circus on campus are few. The Pointer finds the quality of the circus similar to attending a bar on any given Thursday night. We seriously question the intellectual or cultural stimulation that any circus might promote. A circus is the epitome of every Homecoming ever held at Point and signifies the traditional tie to all that is absurd in pancake eating contests, greased pig races, and queens. It upholds neither the goals nor the dignity of a university.

The circus, obviously being a negative quality, should be replaced with a corresponding positive action. An activity that would better the university and all its working facilities. Every department, facility, administrator, professor, student and alumni should be incorporated in the scheme. The UAB need not plan all activities. The departments could hold open houses and feature interesting guest speakers. We suggest holding a series of forums discussing problems and goals of the university between all concerned. Homecoming should sponsor an ecologically beneficial day. The university book store and food service should hold sales. The only way to turn a passive student body into an active one is by incorporating everyone's interest, and adding to their education while they are being entertained. This, in no way, hampers dances or any other Homecoming activity, but positively adds to the week for all concerned.

It is about time that all Homecoming traditions were considered by all Homecoming participants and everyone concerned, and why we are all here. The universe is not a circus, but a working body of people concerned with life and education. Homecoming should emphasize these points, and again become relevant to the student body.
negative policy. If there is to be peace in the world, if the UN is to grow in importance, the United States must do more than recognize the Chinese regime de jure. It must recognize that China has a right to rule its own destiny, that Communist regimes of various kinds are in the world to stay, and that no world order can survive that does not permit the coexistence of different social economic systems.

To take such an attitude, to vote for the new China's admission to the UN Security Council, would be to take a step that would do much to revive China's older friendly feeling for America. The friendship of 40,000,000 people is not likely to be brushed aside; its cultivation may prove fatal for the future. And if we fear a solid Russo-Chinese bloc, the best way to preserve Chinese independence is to give it our friendship. The Manchurian question may prove the Achilles' heel of Sino-Soviet relations even under Communism. But dabbling in intervention, economic blockade, and hostility can only cement the solid bloc we fear, and set in motion a course that may ruin America in the next fifty years.

The Chinese Giant Reawakens

From: The Truman Era

Washington, January 1, 1950

This theory of war policy debate on which the curtain is rising with the new Congress may easily prove to be the Great Debate of this century. The success of the Communists in China has unified the most powerful country on earth around a unified Communist leadership; a corrupt ruling class has been swept away. Russian experience has shown what a Communist dictatorship can do in peacetime, and it is now the armament race, the arms race of the cold war, that is building up a powerful new beast to be unleashed when the going gets rough. Stalin's rubles, the inevitable results of the Hoover policies.

There was no talk of war; there was no talk of war in the Selective Service. But the Selective Service was not bowed down by the inevitability of war. The Selective Service was not to be stopped, first, because with no people coming into the army, the war could not begin.

A goal has been set and now I will try to put it in an entertaining way (not new by any means, but a method I think will work).

As I see it, in the contentions we must begin with is that we are all people, each one of us is an individual, and each one of us is unequaled in the universe. Now we are all living together in a world-wide community.

With this system, it becomes easier to see the evils of war and its tools. I mean, what right do we have of shooting anyone or seeing their deaths? Am I God? Can I say to the man over here that anyone else is? The way to come to see the Selective Service system as acquiring Godlike powers - is to think that man is a prisoner here alive and the rest won't - that looks mighty divine to me.

It's not you, the men and the women of the Draft Board and Office of Civilian Defense - the Selective Service people that make the Selective Service.

So first of all I feel that for the draft to end, all employees of the Selective Service system must have come to take their places. Boss, deputies, thousands of clerks and the clerks stop working Now as a symbol of your respect for the Selective Service System and peace in the world.

Finally, I feel that all men should refuse to co-operate with the system: no more registrations, no more drafts, no one should have to do all I am now and Turn in the Uphill Struggle.

When these things have happened the draft will end, the army will be reduced - we will have a very small army - and then we can live in peace.

I have been called a radical, or better yet, a harmonizer and non-pacifist. Although I do believe that the Selective Service system is a power of evil and is a part of the Selective Service System, its directives etc., and all its functions as they apply to me.

Understand that I am not doing this in a spirit of hatred towards you or any other people in the Selective Service, but rather, in a spirit of love for all my brothers, and in hope that you and the other Draft Boards will see the violence and evil of the military and its tools and reign as administrators of this evil.

I've turned away from the evil and pray that you will decide to do the same.

I close now with the love and hope for a truly peaceful world.

Good fortune to you,

David G. Johnston

THE MAKING OF THE ENGLISH WORKING CLASS
(The book is available in our library.)

ROBERT ZIEGER.
Mr. Ziegler, an associate professor of history here, is a nationally recognized authority on American labor history and has published books and articles on the subject.

In America, "labor" is a term commonly applied to the unions. In Europe, however, it is commonly used more broadly to denote the working class and all of its social and political manifestations. It is in this latter sense that E. P. Thompson's The Making of the English Working Class is one of the most important recent publications in labor history on either side of the Atlantic.

Thompson is concerned with the way in which English workers in the 18th and 19th centuries responded to industrialization and the means by which they fought against its physical and cultural ravages.

Historians have too often viewed "class" as a static or mechanical term, automatically to be applied at a certain time and place when specific changes in the relations of production have occurred. To Thompson, however, the birth and growth of the working class is a dynamic and complex phenomenon. While acknowledging the importance of economic factors, Thompson depicts efforts of workers to defend themselves in broad cultural terms. Emerging industrialism threatened them physically, and English workers were willing to fight back. They formed labor organizations, and manifestations of popular protest from the eighteenth century. Thompson is concerned with the workingmen's "inarticulate" only in the sense that historians have neglected their utterances. Although often crude and ungrammatical, their protests and bitter condemnations bore eloquent testimony of their toughness and vitality.

English working class grew from the native soil. Its creation owed to more than simple economic protest. Its great contribution was to keep alive and to translate into a modern idiom the long British heritage of popular protest, religious dissent, and forthright radicalism. Its continuing function has been to criticize the fruits of industrialism and more than the churches, the universities, or any other institutions—to resist the inevitable tendency of capitalism to impose its one-dimensional definitions of man and society. It has played its role partly through the trade unions it helped to create, but it has an identity somehow separate from them, and at times its wrath has been as bitter against its "leaders" as against capitalists and politicians.

Thompson's working class is not an ideological abstraction, but rather a living organism. Its making was a product of social and economic forces, historical traditions, and human will and energy. Its rebellions and incentives were the dynamic manifestations of an active social movement, one that bore no resemblance to the "condition" or, alternately, "improvisal" workers depicted by factory owners or to the gaping objects of charity that middle class reformers saw in the mines and factories.

This is a brilliant book. Through radical insights, old fashioned research into forgotten pamphlets and labor records, and unemotional compassion, Thompson has helped to rescue the English working class from sociological modeling, pseudo-Marxist history, and historical oblivion. At the same time, the book is an important step in the effort to illuminate the historic traditions and patterns of protest and dissent available to us today. Although some American historians such as Herbert Gutman and Stephen Thernstrom have begun explorations of American working class culture in a manner parallel to that of Thompson, this approach to history is in its early stages in this country. If American labor historians follow the lead of Thompson (and of their colleagues in this country) and investigate the history of working people from an equally broad and wise perspective, The Making of the English Working Class may well be one of the most important books in American social and labor history to be published in recent years.

Voter Registration Drive

"It's not going to be much of an effect if they don't vote," Nancy King commented on the possible power of the newly enfranchised 18 to 21 year olds. Heading the Voter Registration Committee, Miss King expressed hope that students will register and be able to vote in the 1972 primary and election. Registration will take place during mealtime October 12 in Allen Center, October 13 in Debol Center and all day at the Union October 14. On the night preceding registration a rap session will be held at each registration point.

Students will be allowed to vote in local election as well as state and national. Students with the proper qualifications are allowed to run in these elections. The two houses of the state legislature have not passed a law concerning the voting rights of students in a college community but bills requiring residence are in discussion.

"The groups working with me have been very enthusiastic," commented Miss King. The ZPG is handling the publicity. Some members of the Student Veterans for Peace and the Stevens Point League of Women Voters will be deputized to register students.

Indians Scalp Pointers
by Jim Suski and Tim Sullivan
The Lacrosse Indians waited in ambush for the Pointer football team Saturday, and when the Memorial Field battle was over, Point was left at the end of a 21 to 0 score. The Pointers' defense turned in its best performance of the season, but the Stevens Point offense obviously failed to show up. Although the defense was shaky in the early stages of the game, it settled down and played what can only be termed an outstanding second half. Coach Pat O'Halloran commented, "We played a very explosive team. Although we let them score early, I thought that our defense played well, especially in the second half." The fact that the Indians fumbled five times proves that the Pointer defense was hitting hard. Point recovered two fumbles, one of them in its own end zone.

La Crosse's first touchdown came after a 52-yard march. Key plays in the drive were a 7-yard run by quarterback Joe Wagner; a 17-yard run by full back Kurt Kreuger; and a 16-yard pass from Wagner to tight end Steve Wallak. On third down and goal to go, Larry Myhra ran a power sweep to the right and scored. Gary Zauner's PAT put the Indians ahead, 7 to 0.

Following a second quarter punt to the Pointer's 43, La Crosse put together another scoring drive. Dave Jaeger and Wagner took turns rushing, and the Indians were soon on the Pointer's 8-yard line. Then Wagner connected with Wallak in the end zone. Zauner added the point after, and La Crosse led, 14 to zip.

During the first half, the Pointers' offense failed miserably. Point's deepest penetration was only to its own 39. The team could only gain two first downs, one by passing and the other by means of a La Crosse penalty. With the ball on their own 34, after an Indian punt, the Pointers came to life early in the second half. Steve Groeschel carried twice to the 40. Gary Sager then found split end Joe LaFleur open for 14 more yards and a first down. Behind some great rushing by Groeschel and a beautiful run by Sager, Point moved deep into Indian country. Two carries by Groeschel gave the Pointers a first and goal at the eight.

The Indians' defense then toughened and held Point to one yard in three tries. On fourth down, Sager was nailed by John Richmond before the play could even start to unfold. Later in the quarter, Mark Bellussi recovered a fumble on the Indian 34. Dave Caruso had replaced Sager, who was shaken up trying to pass. Caruso hit La Fleur for a first down, but after that, Point's offense stalled.

On fourth down, Pat Robbins came in to attempt a 44-yard field goal. On the snap of the ball, the Indians came blasing in and Dan Tork blocked the kick. O'Halloran said, "If one or maybe two guys get in there, I can see why. But when four players blow through, something is terribly wrong." After a 22-yard punt by Point's Ken Breese, La Crosse took over at the Pointer 30. Jaeger went off tackle for two yards. On an option, Zauner, who had come in at quarterback, kept the ball and raced down the right side for the game's final touchdown. His conversion made it 21-0.

Now 0-2 in conference play and 1-4 on the season, the Pointers will try to change the picture on Saturday afternoon when they host Stout State in the annual Homecoming game at Goerks Field. A good crowd-turnout might help Point to its first win.

Point
Downed By Oshkosh
WSU-UP Soccer Club drove down to Oshkosh in search of its fourth straight victory, but came away on the short end of the 3-1 score. With this win, Oshkosh People's Brewery avenged an earlier 5-1 loss. The Oshkosh offense clearly dominated the game, aided in part by the absence of several Point defenders. With barely two minutes gone Ray Barron kicked in the first Oshkosh goal. In the second period Klaus Kroner tied the score with a penalty kick, but Oshkosh came right back. Gerd Seidel charged in from his wing position to score, giving Oshkosh a 2-1 half time lead. The third period was evenly played with both sides showing several chances. Then, with just a few minutes left in the game Oshkosh put on a final charge. Ray Barron made his second goal look easy by walking the ball past two Pointers to score on a short boot. For the game the Point club was outshot 31-10. Next Saturday the Soccer Club plays Ripon College at Ripon.

Superpickers Predict Point Spreads

by Tim Sullivan and Mike Haberman

Our predictions for the 3rd week of pro football proved to be mildly accurate, as we correctly called the shots for eight games. The Giants, Jets, and Redskins all did their best to make us appear ignorant, as they each won when they were supposed to get slaughtered. There was one tie, and the Denver team-up went to Haberman, as the Steelers squeaked by San Diego, 14 to 10.

Going into the 4th week, we find the home teams clustering their visiting opponents.

Kansas City Over Chargers - San Diego hasn't scored much in its last three games, and a good football team is tough to hold down forever. Unfortunately, San Diego isn't a good football team, so look for the Chiefs to maul Hadl and his boys. The Chargers beat K.C. the last time out, and a few of the Chiefs weren't too happy about it. Chiefs win by ten.

Cleveland over Pittsburgh - The Browns can't miss. They have a receiver named Fair Hooker, so you know he has to be good. Pittsburgh's ace runner, John Pagua (Feb-kwah), was ruled out of the game and might be missing Sunday. Looks like the Steelers get the shaft.

Miami over Bengals - The Packers had great success running through the Bengals, and there's no reason why Miami's Jim Kiek and Larry Csonka shouldn't do the same. One thing to keep in mind: If Cincinnati has 4th down and one yard to go inside the ten, don't look for the Bengals to go for it again. Paul Brown's teams only make that mistake once every thirty years.

Vikings over Philadelphia - The Eagles will be fired up for this game, having learned that they are rated the fourth best football team in Pennsylvania, behind the Steelers, the University of Pittsburgh, and Penn State. Nevertheless, the Viking's ferocious front four will help the Eagles chalk up another impressive goose egg. The only way Philadelphia can prevent its own execution is by refusing to kickoff, and they really should consider doing it. Vikings by 20.

Dallas over Giants - Last week, Tarkenton gave it the Giants a "ho, ho, ho" and scrambled for a win over St. Louis. This time, watch the Cowboy's Doomsday Defense scramble frantic Fran. Dallas will win by tuning up against Pacelli in its annual Homecoming battle. Cowboys win by ten.

Houston over San Francisco - The Redskins are now football's only undefeated team, and they must get their tomahawks razor sharp when the Oilers come to enslave their oppressed. The Houston running backs better have their helmets on tight when they meet Pontiac, Diron Talbert, and the rest of the Redskins gang. This should be another Custer's Last Stand, with the Indians running wild and kicking up dust.

Chicago over New Orleans - The Bears went into the Rams game hoping to mutilate Roman Gabriel, but instead came out of it with four injured players. Luckily, Chicago is a team that can win without its favorites. The Bears will cheerfully help Manning and the other Saints get a quick jump into the life beyond. If you know of anyone who has insured a New Orleans' player, now is the time to cancel all policies. Chicago wins by eleven.

Cardinals play Falcons - This is an all-important toss-up. Haberman believes the Falcons are for real. Atlanta has been very consistent with its offense. Sullivan looks for the Cardinal attack to ring. St. Louis has the best ends in football with Gilliam, Smith, and Williams.

Jets over Patriots - This is a game which nobody but the owners and the players care about. The loser of this one will probably play the Eagles in the "Amateur Bowl". We pick the Jets by six, because they have better looking helmets.

Lions over Packers - The Packers emerged from the Bengal game in great physical shape. The entire coaching staff came out injury-free. Credit an excellent blocking job to the taxi squad who kept players from both teams away from Devine for the entire game. Detroit's Errol Mann will be out to show the Pack why he shouldn't have been dropped by them. The Lions already put Namath away for the rest of the year, and might do the same to Hunter. Looks like Zeke sees action. Lions by 2.

Baltimore over Buffalo - The Bills will be running for their first win, but they won't get it against the Super Bowl Champs. Philadelphia, maybe, but never the Colts. The Buffalo offense is extint, and Baltimore's StorkPhiladelpia shows up, and they should because they play at home. It would be tragic if the Viking's bus crashed on the way to the stadium.

Oakland over Denver - The Raiders have too many offensive weapons to play with. Besides, Oakland plays dirty every so often, and Don Horn hates the sight of blood. Horn once injured himself on the sidelines warming up when he was a Packer. If Oakland ever played the Bears in an extra-long game, neither team would have enough players left for the next week. Oakland slugs Denver by 12.

San Francisco over Rams - Los Angeles has excellent runners in Ellison, Rentzel, Josephson, Snow, Williams, and Smith. However, the Rams passing attack leaves something to be desired. When a Ram receiver gets open every other quarter, Gabriel usually throws the ball to the fans with the hotdogs in the third row. To make matters worse, they usually drop his passes too. Brodie and the 49ers should have a field day. 49ers by 8.

All things considered, we think this week's predictions will be very accurate. We know there will be one right if Philadelphia shows up, and they should because they play at home. It would be tragic if the Viking's bus crashed on the way to the stadium.
