The United Council Investigates

By Dan McGlynn

The UW-SP’s University Center was the site of the 20th and final regular (spring) meeting of the United Council of University Student Governments. The United Council (UC), headquartered in Madison, has expressed a desire to hold its monthly meetings at various campuses around the state.

After a morning of individual committee sessions, the UC held its general session on the afternoon of the 24th. Most of the three-hour session was devoted to the presentation of reports and tentative resolutions which emerged from the committees.

The Finance Committee introduced a resolution, subsequently passed, that UC support the distribution, through student governments, of free birth control and venereal disease information to individual students. The latter points were in unit mission statements, considered important by UC in the process of taking a program, or “across the board” fee, to support the university's work, but would therein agree to spend an extra 15 percent of the program would be targeted largely at returning students, such as veterans, who would be saddled with a poor G.P.A. from previous performances.

A possibility under consideration at other campuses, the discussion at the campus on Monday night was that the state’s intention of implementing greater emphasis upon user fees and transferring $1.5 million from state monies (GPR) to programs of segregated fees (PRO-SEG) in the second year of the biennium. The suggested area of the transfer includes intercollegiate athletics, intramurals and recreation. Since, at most, the total allocatable portion of SEG for the entire UW System is only $6.9 million, the transfer of $1.5 million could be a major financial problem for students. The Finance Committee feels that either 1) segregated fees will be increased, or 2) present monies will have to absorb the additional costs. The latter alternative, according to the UC paper, “...will only suggest a situation where existing student programs, especially at smaller institutions, might be terminated in light higher priority athletic programs.”

After some discussion, UC passed a resolution, introduced by Finance Committee Chairman Stu Kraft, which reads as follows: "United Council opposes the implementation of user fees and the transfer of $1.5 million from GPR funds into SEG programs in the areas of athletics, intramurals, and recreation. Also, we express our concern over Executive Budget Policy Paper Number 16 which 1) questions whether athletics is directly related to the academic atmosphere of a campus, 2) has the potential to create greater institutional usage of facilities for athletics and recreation, and acts to increase, rather than decrease, the levels of student support for athletics and recreation."

In its attempt to delineate portions of the budget most closely related to students," the Finance Committee reported its discussion of other areas of the budget. The latter points were in part of financial aid packages to students (PUBLIC POLICY Paper 18 of the Executive Budget Policy Papers), new funding, for minorities and disadvantaged study programs, university efforts toward increased productivity, and student employment and service. Also mentioned was Governor Lucey’s proposed "differential" tuition policy. UC passed a resolution for the first two years of undergraduate study would be lowered, while tuition for juniors and seniors would increase. Graduate students would pay the highest rate of the three levels. If enacted into law, the system would have to go into effect by the fall of ’74-75 school year. Proponents say the new system would result in $9.4 million in tuition monies.

The Finance Committee also expressed concern that the cost of such things as dormitory maintenance charges might have to be born by students in the form of an “across the board” fee. This came in the context of the UC meeting stated that a UW-M student could do so up until the last day of classes). The UC urged the feasibility of either credit-no-credit or academic bankruptcy systems on an individual campus. UC is concerned that student input be assured in the formulation of system-wide guidelines on credit transfer.

There was little doubt that the chief concern of UC’s student representatives was the controversial “user fees.” A UC paper on user fees outlines the problem in part. "By Dan McGlynn (continued to p. 2)
A new fee proposal, which would have students pay full student fees by the end of June in order to confirm their registration for the fall semester, was rejected by Student Government. (Re: Page 1)

The proposal came out of an attempt by the registrar's office to solve the problem of knowing just how many students are registered for fall semesters. Since the student activity funds are not made available to the registrar by the time they register until the time they register until the time the school starts, many students, fall, starts, fail to notify the Registrar's Office if they decide not to come back to school. As a result, they are considered as registered students, are counted in the correct enrollment by the second or third week of the semester, this means the money must be available for those students who register in the spring for the fall semester will receive a statement from the Office of Financial Aid and cannot be refunded if the student notifies the registration office, in writing, before the first day of classes, if the registration is being cancelled.

The proposal was put before the Budget Advisory Committee (BAC) in October. Eckholm commented on the plan saying the problem was to create a better alternative isn't possible as long as we live in the practical world that we live in, we had to be able to come to a position which was still acceptable to us, which would get student's attention that the student situation and the things we want, and still be able to come to a position.

The proposal, Eckholm said, was enough incentive for students who had paid the $50 fee, which students who had paid the $50 fee, in advance, so they don't have to track down the money if the student is registered, was not a consideration but the not only consideration. He mentioned that many students had the $50 cont. from page 1

UC Outlines Statement on Elections

Students who register in the spring for the fall semester will receive a statement for $50. This money is due by June 26 in order to confirm their registration. Failure to make this payment by June 26 will result in cancellation of the student's registration. The money would be refunded if the student notifies the registration office, in writing, before the first day of classes, if the registration is being cancelled.

The proposal was approved by the Budget Advisory Committee (BAC) in October. According to Eckholm, assistant registrar, the reason the proposal was put forward was that the controller and registrars didn't want to confuse students into thinking the policy was being changed. If the student notifies the registrar that they no longer want to be registered, the proposal was disapproved by Student Government.

Bringing Food To The People

by Al Jenkins

Although the membership records of the co-op do not have a precise breakdown of members, the cooperative system in the Midwest, a lot of big trucking networks that operate "once in awhile" but not on a highly regularized schedule. He stated the amount and form of organization varies with the area; he mentioned the Inter-Community "co-op" in Madison as an example of a co-op that specializes in trucking alone.

The cooperative works out of a warehouse at 2001 Welby on Patch St., which is rented for $50.00 a month; that figure does not include heat and utilities. According to Tom Rothrock, an economics instructor at the university and a representative of the Work Committee, job descriptions are set up by that committee to correspond to the three-day work week at the warehouse.

Food Ordering

Prior to Tuesday of any given week, a neighborhood group signs up for order and give that order to the group leader for that week. This group leader turns in the order at the warehouse between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Tuesday. At that time, a member of the Finance Committee along with two other workers collect all the orders and the money, total the orders onto a master list and count the money. This totaling process is the key to fair distribution and members point out this is one of the most difficult tasks to learn.

The master list is given to the Food Committee, which places the orders on Wednesday. After the Trucking Committee brings the order to the warehouse on Friday, workers spend the afternoon unloading and taking inventory; packaging and weighing of goods is done on Friday night. On Saturday morning food is distributed to the neighborhood groups along with a food sheet for the following week. The membership is working on establishing a "surplus sale" on Saturday afternoon; at this time, specialty items, like spices, would be sold.

According to the principles of the cooperative, in order to eat, you must participate in the work. Once a month each neighborhood group signs up for a certain number of work hours based upon the number of members in the group. Tom Rothrock estimated the average adult member should work an average of two hours per month, not including committee work. He added, he does not think the 2-hour figure will grow proportionately to the expansion of the co-op. He described the setup as "a kind of specialization." In the cooperative system in the Midwest, a lot of big trucking networks that operate "once in awhile" but not on a highly regularized schedule. He stated the amount and form of organization varies with the area; he mentioned the Inter-Community "co-op" in Madison as an example of a co-op that specializes in trucking alone.

The reason for all of the work and organization is, of course, the food; but the cooperative differs from the regular supermarket. As presently constituted, the co-op does not deal in the processed foods characteristic in the American diet. According to Tom Rothrock, "A lot of things that you buy at the grocery store; that the average household makes a very big use of in their diet, we don't. Natural foods, grown by "organic" and "non-organic" methods are offered by the co-op along with information on the uses and preparation of certain foods.

Chad Hagen, a former student at this university and representative of the Food Committee, explained the selection of the food is based upon what the membership wants to purchase as determined by food "votesheets." She does not force a move toward processed foods but stated, "the co-op is the members. If they want that food they should get it." Berkowitz concurred in this thinking: "If enough people wanted white sugar, we would try to locate a source for white sugar. It's what the members want." Sources of supply are primarily local: several products come from Artha Farm, Stevens Point; all dairy products from West's Dairy, Stevens Point; cheese from Rudolph Cheese Co. Rudolph; potatoes from Ben Klimstein, Stevens Point; and eggs from Ervin Miachech, Stevens Point. Grains and flours are obtained from two sources outside the immediate area: Common Market (co-op) in Madison, and People's Warehouse in Minneapolis.

Meyer contented the cooperative's primary source of supply is from a big egg farmer somewhere else and they will be sitting on your grocery shelves for a month. We get our eggs from local farmers; we know they are fresh within the week. Tom Rothrock described the "haul-backhaul" arrangement as being desirable and the potential base for mutual trucking networks in the future. Berkowitz added there are, in the cooperative system in the Midwest, a lot of big trucking networks that operate "once in awhile" but not on a highly regularized schedule. He stated the amount and form of organization varies with the area; he mentioned the Inter-Community "co-op" in Madison as an example of a co-op that specializes in trucking alone.

How To Join

In order to become a member, an interested party must first contact the membership committee, currently chaired by Gina Meyer, who has handled many calls through her home committee. Committee chairpersons rotate regularly. This form of organization is intended also to solve the problem presented by transient members. Joan Rothrock, a graduate in social work from the University of Missouri, explained "getting people to learn the ropes" of the cooperative structure is the greatest problem involved in the system. She argued, however, this is not an insurmountable problem and can be ironed out as the work of the cooperative continues. Working as a member of the Food Committee at the time of this inquiry, she said, "getting people to feel part of the co-op" is the important factor. According to Paul Berkowitz, who has worked in the co-op system in Madison, the co-op is "a whole new thing for Point!" and, consequently, it will take time for people to understand its operation.

Broadly speaking, the cooperative here is organized on a committee form of government that requires that every member of the co-op learn every basic job in the organization. The Pointer is a film preview book review of a country home, to the city, where through realistic action in the Wild Strawberries, directed by a doctorate, and some of the naught backs, all the seats are good seats. Every student, keeping your eyes open for posters advertising their shows. Studio Theatre is like trying to compare tea and crumpets with a cup of coffee and a good cigarette.
Seek More Local Suppliers

The co-op hopes to be able to deal with more local suppliers in the future; especially in commodities like honey, syrup, molasses, and sorghum. Oshkosh Sausage Co. has offered them a deal on their products but, according to Kathy Wendt, who spoke on the subject, the company wanted to be sure of their market, so they offered to give them a discount on a tryout order. The only expertise in nutrition that the management of the co-op has is of the general type. They must move away from the idea that nutrition is a science and turn to the question of nutrition. The nutritionists and biochemists that the co-op will be hiring will be trying to set up a clearinghouse project for information on food.

The present newsletter is a fly-by-nail kind of summary of the co-op's existence. It was summed up by Kathy Wendt, who spoke on the subject. She pointed out that while the co-op is in its infancy, it is not yet aware of the co-op's existence. Tom Rothrock and Berkowitz both argued, competition is a basic factor. Since the co-op is not competitive, it cannot be able to raise funds. Wendt pointed out that no one small group with a cause is going to be able to do this. The whole membership must be the one small group within the co-op structure. Responsibility for the communications link within the organization lies with the Nutrition and Publicity Committee, currently chaired by Kathy Wendt. The library assistant at the Learning Resource Center, stated, she has no background in nutrition but she is "willing to publicize events." She further added, as far as she knows, there are no nutritionists or biochemists presently connected with the cooperative. The only expertise in nutrition that presently exists, she said, is "an interest in living correctly."

Food Cooperative Opens Locally

There are tentative plans to hold a bake sale and a sock hop to raise funds. Wendt pointed out that no one small group within the co-op will have means to be employed to raise funds; the whole membership must agree on this, she said. This is intended to eliminate the possibility of control by any one small group within the co-op structure. The majority of the membership, that is of utmost importance the residents strive to fulfill the needs of the community beyond those supplied by the planners. It is hoped that indifference will not be the prevalent attitude of the times and that man can transform this cold, expressionless environment into a warm and enthusiastic home.
The United States has once again mulled into economic problems which reflect the country's general lack of thought and intelligence. One of the main causes of feeding the American public.

A country with the wealth and technology of the United States cannot properly feed its citizens. We find people starving for want of food, or forced to rely on food which does not properly maintain the body. We find nutrition in the hands of business, which is profit. The United States has no national policy which gives intelligent direction to the problem of feeding some 300 million people daily. It is left merely to whim and caprice of profit, and individual "initiative."

We are currently faced with the effects of this ignorance in the form of rising food prices, while the government offers its excuses but takes no positive action. The Secretary of Agriculture merely blames it all on the urban press and tells us that the cost of food is a segment of our collective imagination. President Nixon sympathetically suggests that the public eat more fish (red snapper almondeine at $7.00 per plate?). We are told that is all rests upon the famous law of supply and demand--we must accept it in the conferencce of supply and demand; we must merely have faith in the magical wand-waving of American business. But note a curious point: The "law" has little practical implication to the American businessman. He may worry about profit, but not about the impact of rising food prices on the public. And he certainly does not worry about the prospect of eating pig ears and pinto beans. Supply and demand is a "law" that has never applied to the wealthy in America, even in times of severe economic distress.

The U.S. economy functions with respect to one overriding end, profit, and private gain. Food and the other basic requirements of human life--clothing, shelter, education, health, work--are a matter of whim and profit; access to them is restricted by a system of caste, class, power, and privilege. The moral question, the question of maintaining human life of quality and decency is of no concern to the economic "cyclical"s.

The opening of China to the United States could have profound implications for American life, assuming that intelligence and thought have not been irrevocably lost. From the accounts of American journalists and scholars, one clear and important fact emerges: China is meeting the basic requirements of human life and, from that, moving to develop a significant civilization. America has the thought have not been irrevocably lost From the accounts of economic distress .

Enrollment has dropped off in the past year due to draft decreases and job scarcity for graduates, authorities say, in a means to solve enrollment problems the university has again miserably failed. They have failed in that they cannot see it is the university itself that must change. You cannot help a business that is not healthy. And the only way that will occur in this country is to improve the educational system. A university should be built such that people would want to attend it. America should be aesthetically beautiful, properly ordered and embody that which is good in the world.

Instead, the university keeps subscribing to the true principles of business--like, business to, control. It. Like, business, produces a marketable product. And education, like business, can be purchased just as a mink stole can be purchased. Instead of accepting without taking a personal stance on this issue, Eric Nelson's return of scholarship money a cheap shot automatic. They wish that the university (rather the students and tax payers) would accept the idea that a free press cannot be shackled as an individual stance on this issue, Eric Nelson's return of scholarship money.

To the Editor: Eric Nelson's return of scholarship money a cheap shot automatic. They wish that the university (rather the students and tax payers) would accept the idea that a free press cannot be shackled as the chancellor suggested, and still provide the kinds of information needed by the citizen to make the kinds of decisions world policies demands of him.

In this letter I have been basically concerned with foreign affairs, but many of the arguments carry over into the domestic realm. And, obviously, these arguments can only be effective to those who accept the idea of a multi-party, responsible democracy. The chancellor then suggested that the public can never be kept ignorant because the foreign news media always leak the news back to the United States, in any event. There are several problems involved with this thesis. One, the chancellor is just xenophobic enough to distrust anything a foreigner says that might reflect poorly on the leadership of the United States.

Three, the government, in the hands of somebody who might have something to hide, could play on this latent xenophobia to discredit accurate but damaging reports from abroad. Now, all of these demands, I feel, that the public's right to know expanded the present delineations, not necessarily to be decreased. It is, of course, not necessary for the average citizen to know the technology behind the supercarriers, but it is important, even vital, that the citizen know the supercarrier exists, and that it is being used to apply pressure during some ongoing negotiations.

The best vehicle for this information is obviously not the PR man at the Pentagon, but the free, and often critical, media. We cannot be shackled as the chancellor suggested, and still provide the kinds of information needed by the citizen to make the kinds of decisions world policies demands of him.

Of Coping

I've always been conscious of the necessity of being in a group. A group is the only way in which we can work together and achieve anything of significance. This is why I believe in a cooperative approach to life. In a group, we can share our experiences and ideas, and communicate without fear of being judged. This is why I look at Robert Redford or Ali as role models. They represent the kind of people I strive to be.

One comment I've heard from women is that guys just won't talk to them. Who, me? I've never had that problem! I've always been comfortable talking to women.

Open Letter From Winters

To the Editor:

It seems I've gained some notoriety after my comments were published in last week's issue of the Pointer. I've received comments which have ranged from very complimentary, such as, "someone finally said it like it is," to extremely critical in mentioning, was a "male chauvinist pig.

I am not writing to either blast the Pointer for taking my statements out of context—I am writing to further illustrate a few points.

I just wonder if, because of the shock value of a few of my remarks, some have off-handedly dismissed my entire reason for speaking. The essential situation I sought to deal with, involves how lonely some people are at this time of the year. At the start of and at the end of the school year more people are out meeting, falling in love, partying and beginning relationships. But in the few long winter months, we seem to experience a low tide where activity dries up. This has many lonely people somewhat stranded and frustrated. They want someone to communicate with and need someone to understand them—just to "be there" as some have interpreted.

Think what you like, but the majority of the women I talk to feel I have a point. They think about this situation and may do something about it. Maybe, even just a smile, a hello, a little courtesy, or in some way show you care, can make this campus a little brighter by making someone a little happier.

Sincerely,

Gary F. Winters

additional comments

For those who seek to rationalize what I've said either above or last week on the grounds of my own psychological or physiological needs—you can dismiss those ideas. Because, I was last week thinking about the amazing new way the use of the computer has never before been used to make the world a smaller place.

To All Faculty And Staff

I wish to affirm this University's official policy which prohibits discrimination against any individual because of race, color, religion or creed, age, sex, handicap, or national origin or ancestry. Thus equal opportunity for employment is extended to persons applying for all faculty and staff positions, including graduate students who apply for University employment.

I wish to make clear to faculty, administration, students, members of the community and potential employees of this University that we are personally committed to increasing the numbers of minority group members (Native Americans, Chicanos, Blacks, Oriental Americans) for which this University is already known.

Winner Carnivale? I thought it would be a great altemative experience!

Record Review

Barefoot Jerry

by Ron Martzab

Barefoot Jerry is a collection of four Nashville studio musicians who felt they could speak for themselves if they formed their own group. Individually, Barefoot Jerry is: Wayne Moss on guitar and bass, John Harris on keyboards, Russ Hicks on pedal steel, Kenny Malone drums and percussion. The group itself can be classified as "country rock." "Castle Rock" establishes the group's potential to perform rock the way it was used to be played. "In God We Trust," which reminds me of "Lament of the Cherokee Indian Reservation," with its twanging guitars and deep resounding bass. It discusses the Native Americans plight today.

"Message" is a song truly for "the body and soul" as the lyrics state. "Some other time we'll enlighten your mind," but right now they're more set on displaying terrific talent. Mostly instrumental it has deep valleys of darkness and peaks of brightness.

Side two begins with a country music groupie "Snuff Queen." A whole fifty-three seconds of country music with the aid of a mini moog. "Little Maggie," traditionally country is performed with country flavor minus the banjo. "Fish 'N Chips" has certain connotations, as displayed by the title. This song is in the best the album offers. Once again the country guitar sound comes out along with harmonious singing. If, like the other songs of the album, lack very meaningful lyrics.

"Elmeezer" where it starts out like the theme from the movie MASH...and into an unusual country tune. But it's not all that typical because the moog is again used to create a unique sound. Instrumentally done it is the second best of the album. Barefoot Jerry are going to be heard of more in the future. Their country flavor reminds me a little of Poco. You may not like country-rock but give it a listen and find out.

Lettuce Boycott Meeting

There will be a lettuce boycott meeting at 7:30 Monday night March 5th in the LaFollette Lounge in the Student Union.

WV-Oshkosh Vienna Study Abroad Program

The University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Department of Foreign Languages, will sponsor a Vienna Study Abroad Program for the third time during the 1973-74 academic year. Students from other state universities who have had at least one semester of university level German are also invited to apply.

A resident director from Oshkosh will accompany the group, private housing will be arranged with Austrian families, and students will attend classes at the University of Vienna. University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh credit is granted for all courses.

Natural Resources Assistantships Available

Graduate Assistantships are available at the College of Natural Resources at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. The College has one full-time and one-half-time assistantship available. Applicants must be accepted by the Graduate College and the College of Natural Resources at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point to be eligible for consideration. Application forms may be obtained from these offices.

Nine hours of graduate credit must be carried and completed each semester. The graduate assistant will spend an average of 18 hours per week on duties required by the College. He will not receive compensation for work on his own research. The assistantship will normally be extended until the holder completes the M.S. degree provided that the work of the assistant is satisfactory to the College.

The graduate assistant compensation will be $2,225 for a full academic year assistantship or $1,115 for a half assistantship. Out-of-state tuition will not be waived.

Complete applications for assistantships must be received by March 15, 1973. Applicants will be notified of the results by April 1, 1973.

Application forms may be obtained from:
Chairman, Graduate Program Committee

Mall Financing A Problem

financed 100 per cent by HUD funding, but that the alternate route would have to be paid for by the college. Colestock said that beginning July 1, 1974, the city would provide $500,000 for the adjoining of Fourth Avenue and Ninth Street with special revenue sharing funds. However the project might still be paid for with general revenue sharing funds today. Colestock wasn't certain as to why the city is hesitating on the project, but he said that apparently the Stevens Point City Council wants non-city tax dollars to take care of the entire cost of the project. A catch here is in the financing of the mall itself is a HUD rule that states that before any funds can be given, the project must be approved by at least 2/3 of the City Council's members. If the 7-5 vote that conditionally approved the project on February 18 holds as is, the mall project will die because of lack of funding.

Colestock concluded by saying, "I can't tell if there is going to be a mall built at all, and if so who will finance it and when the project will start. The Council will probably vote on the funding in late March, but nothing will happen using HUD funding until we have their approval.

He added, "I believe that UW–Stevens Point is a part of the city of Stevens Point. The city benefits by having not only a comparable sized city without a college."

Women's Intramurals

Here are the league leaders in the women's basketball competition:

The Bucketeers and Shahnumb share the league 1 leadership with perfect 5-0 and 4-0 records respectively.

League 2 is led by the Zoo which has a 4-0 record.

The Schmucks hold the lead in league 4 with 4-0 record, while league 5 is controlled by the Norwood Nilt-Norts and their 5-0 record.

The following is a policy statement concerning Women's Intramurals participation:

"Girls participating on an extramural or intercollegiate team will not be eligible to participate in Women's Intramurals in that sport. This policy applies to all sports, and becomes effective in the first semester of the 1974 school year."

Oshkosh Slips By Pointers, 87-86

by Al Pavlik

"Anytime you turn the ball over it is going to hurt you," was Pointer Coach Bob Krueger's logical summation of an 87-86 loss to Oshkosh here Saturday night.

UW-Oshkosh shot poorer from both the field and the free-throw line and was outrebounded distinctly, but 21 Pointer turnovers allowed the Titans to set the stage for a second half surge together to outscore the Pointers, 8 7-86.

The first segment of the second half belonged to Point, as the hosts put a 5-minute surge together to outscore Oshkosh, 15-4. Just when it looked like Point almost had the game wrapped up, the Titans came back with seven straight points to stay in the game as an upset.

Steven Point averaged 52 per cent on field goal attempts and 68 per cent figures respectively.

The Pointers held a dominating 45-21 rebound edge, but the big difference was in the turnover category, as the Pointers had eleven more mistakes than the Titans.

Seibold led all scorers with 29 points while adding eight rebounds. Seibold received scoring help from Rocky Jiroch with 16 points and John DeYoung with 13.

The Pointers' balanced scoring attack was led by Mike Stanse ll with 20 points. Cal Kuphall was next in line with 19, while Mike Hilgendorf and Tom Siron~ with 18 and 16 points finished on the scoresheet.

The loss dropped Point's conference record to 4-11 while the overall mark slipped down to 7-16.
