Capitalist caper opens tomorrow

"How to Succeed In Business Without Really Trying," will open Friday with a cast of 35 students who will sing and dance their way through one of the biggest musical comedy hits of theatrical history.

The show will run from March 15-21 in the Warren Gard Jenkins Theatre with an 8 p.m. curtain time. Tickets are available through the university’s Theatre Box Office in the Fine Arts Center, Monday through Friday, 1 to 4 p.m.

 Directed by UWSP drama professor Tony Schmitt, Abe Burrows’ award-winning musical is a biting but highly amusing account of the wheelings and dealings in "big business." Based on Shepherd Mead’s best-selling book of the same title, "How to Succeed In Business Without Really Trying" is the story of the rapid rise of J. Pierpont Finch from window washer to chairman of the company.

Information to be included in the written application: name, age, year in school, academic major, Stevens Point address and telephone number, cumulative grade point average and the previous three semester’s grade point averages. Also included should be a complete list of all previous journalism and newspaper experience, (campus or commercial) and journalistic course work and the institution at which the course work was completed.

For the past several weeks, WWSP-FM, the campus radio station at UWSP, has been telling its listeners that Trivia is coming. What it wouldn’t tell them is when. The dates for Trivia always remain a well-guarded secret until just a few weeks before the contest.

WWSP Trivia Chairman Tom Bedore has announced to all Trivia fans that this year’s contest will be held the weekend of April 5-7.

Trivia weekend will feature 35 hours of solid gold rock music on FM 90 interspersed with approximately 550 Trivia questions. The contest will run from 5 p.m. Friday, April 5 until midnight, Sunday, April 7. Trivia questions will be in the categories of movies, television, radio, sports and history. Trivia announcements on WWSP will be Bob O’Halloran, Bob Jansen, Phil Jackson, Jeff Van Dien, Hank Wynn and Tom Collins.

For anyone not familiar with Trivia, the questions are asked by the announcers over the radio, and listeners (usually teams) come up with the answers and phone them in to the operators who will be on duty at the station. Each question is worth a certain number of points. Every team which answers the question correctly within the time allowed receives that many points. A running total is then kept for each team and prizes will be awarded to the top scorers. The first place winner will receive a trophy.

Chairman Tom Bedore recommends that people start forming their teams for Trivia weekend. Any team, anyone is eligible.

Trivia will be the fifth annual trivia contest sponsored by WWSP. Judging from past years, WWSP expects that several hundred teams will compete in Trivia, and over 125,000 phone calls will be received during the weekend.

Anyone who has questions about Trivia 1974 may contact Tom Bedore at WWSP, 346-2606.

"Who's the savage?" - Wrone

by John Larson

"There is not a jail, a grocery store, or a house of ill-fame amongst my people; all of them exist where Mr. Martin lives... Such sentiments and actions, Mr. Martin no doubt considers the very natural outgrowth of that civilization... If such be really the case, the less my people have of it the better.

That 1868 American Indian, like others, had white civilization thrust upon him anyway. Many of our histories depict him and other Indians as primitive, savage.

Approximately 100 students and faculty led by David Wrone and Russell Nelson, Jr., history instructors here and co-authors of Who's the Savage?, met to discuss the validity of that characterization Monday evening at the University Center.

The event was the first for the week-long "Native American Days.

"This attitude of regarding the Indian as primitive or savage has resulted in the denying of a rightful place in our society to him," began Wrone.

"We must ask ourselves if this attitude is justified. Who is the savage? If it is the Indian, we should have been among my people; all of them died... We knew not but the Great Spirit had sent them to us for some good purpose, and therefore we thought they must be a good people. Yet the fact is that they have never had a council house down... where the council fire was yet burning bright... they put it out, and extinguished it with our own blood.

"You can have in the white people when Jesus Christ came upon the earth you kill and nail it on a cross, you thought he was dead but you were mistaken," said Chief Tecumseh to future President William H. Harrison in 1810.

"Continuously the Indian point of view, the atrocities of whites, blacks or Mexicans, etc. against them and the positive contributions of the Indian to society were found in our research to have been omitted from historical accounts. Yet no attempt was found to have been made to gloss over Indian atrocities in our own society. We were mistaken.

"Why should these contributions have been omitted?"

"The Indian has given us corn, pumpkins, potatoes, an idea of how to plant crops and many other useful things for our society.

"If he were a savage, he couldn't make a contribution to a civilized society, could he?

"Perhaps this made land acquisition easier and soothed our consciences that we were not taking land and goods away from another civilized people but rather primitive ones who needed to be civilized," Wrone said.

Wrone quoted an American governor's statement in 1869 as typical of the so-called civilized attitude that existed toward the Indian at that time.

"The Indian race-on this continent has never been anything but an unmitigated curse to civilization... and must remain so until the last savage is translated to that celestial hunting ground... and to which every settler on our frontier wishes them individually and collectively a safe and speedy transit.

"I see no difference in the historical systematic subjugation and extermination of the American Indian and the situation for Blacks in Mississippi from 1866-1915, the American attitude and conduct toward the Vietnamese in Vietnam or the Jewish extermination of the Arabs in Israel from 1945-55," said Wrone.

"Today," say Wrone and Nelson in their book "This inhumanity is enounced in rigid bureaucratic forms where misguided and mediocre federal and local agencies afflicted the Indians with malnutrition, starvation, disease and poverty- an impact more brutal in terms of lost and twisted lives than any previously mentioned..." Black are not exempt.

"We hope this kind of thing will increase awareness and induce more critical thinking as to the reasons for the Indian and his position in relation to American society is concerned," said Wrone.

"Perhaps this thinking will bring some adequate and fair solutions," he added.

Copies of Who's the Savage?, a documentary history of the mistreatment of the Native North Americans, are available at bookstores throughout the nation.

The National Student Lobby (NSL) discussed day care centers and student staff members at the annual meeting of their various workshops when they met in Washington, D.C., a few weeks ago.

The day care center discussion centered around the establishment of the centers and the possible availability of federal funds.

The NSL delegates were especially interested in the UWSP Day Care Center because this center is funded through student activity fees, money from the parents of children in the day care center program and donations from people in the community, said student government senator Bill Tice.

This generally amounted to donations of furniture and other operating equipment. Interested students from across the nation will be provided to help with demonstrations.

Parking problem penetrates pocket

by Marc Vollrath

Some students at UWSP look upon the car as a “ticket to escape.” Others, however, find that a car is nothing more than something to get a ticket with. Just like antiques collect dust, student cars collect parking tickets.

Getting a ticket is easy. Finding a spot to get one isn’t, because finding a place to park near campus is like trying to find the proverbial needle in a haystack. “No Parking” signs dot the campus perimeter, and the limited number of metered parking slots are usually filled early. People, waiting for a spot to stash their car away, circle the blocks until they’re dizzy.

In the meantime, meter maids get writer’s cramp filling out parking tickets. According to the City Treasurer’s Office, last year their busy little fingers wrote out $17,096 worth. How much of that bundle came out of student pockets is uncertain. How much of it that came out of THIS student’s pocket, though, is substantial—perhaps enough to make a payment on the meter maid’s car. (The one that seems to spend most of its time on Fremont Street).

All the things said about meter maids can’t be printed.

“I can’t blame the students for their attitude,” said Lt. Len Hucke of the Stevens Point police department. “People, waiting for a spot to stash their car away, circle the blocks until they’re dizzy. They’ve had it with the university.” Hucke added, “They’re just like parking signs dot the campus perimeter.”

“Parking problem” was not his, but rather that of a committee appointed by the mayor. University officials had not requested that areas be posted against parking. A student faced with three straight classes has about three choices. To park at a meter and accept his ticket, or get up early, park on an unpaved street, and then walk a few blocks to campus.

“Getting a ticket is easy.” A survey was conducted, and the city determined that such action should be taken. Hucke also pointed out that the decision for the “No Parking” zones was not his, but rather that of a committee appointed by the mayor. University officials had not requested that areas be posted against parking. A student faced with three straight classes has about three choices. To park at a meter and accept his ticket, or get up early, park on an unpaved street, and then walk a few blocks to campus.

McCaffery’s sentence may have been a little strong, but that court costs and filing fees are paid by the defendant if he is found guilty. Since McCaffery refused to pay the costs, he was sentenced to a four day jail sentence instead.

“Maybe the university should take another look at their parking situation. They certainly need to.” Hucke said.

In the meantime, “little pink tickets” will still make people see red. But as the student fishes his last dollar out of his wallet, he has one consolation: at least he found a place to park his car.

“Maybe the university might be constructing metered lots in the future, one next to the Learning Resource Center, and one behind Deetzell Hall. As far as the university is concerned, the police lieutenant said that the city may re-open some of their new-posted parking zones in the near future. Some areas will be “re-surveyed” because they sympathized with the students on their “no parking problem.”

“Why should I have to pay the penalty on a parking ticket that I never received?” asked Jenkins. “It’s just ridiculous,” said McCaffery.

“A student faced with three straight classes has about three choices. To park at a meter and accept his ticket, or get up early, park on an unpaved street, and then walk a few blocks to campus.”

by Terry Witt

Wayne McCaffery, a UWSP junior was jailed last weekend for refusing to pay the late penalty on a three dollar parking ticket.

McCaffery claimed that he never received the ticket and would contest the late penalty on that basis.

McCaffery was sentenced to four days in the Portage County Jail by Judge Robert C. Jenkins. "In default of court costs and late penalty that amounts to twenty-three dollars."

Jenkins said that it was possible that McCaffery never received the ticket but that it wasn’t the fault of the Stevens Point Police Department. "The arresting officer need only follow proper procedure in placing the ticket on the car," said Jenkins. "After that, the burden rests on the plaintiff."

McCaffery called the sentence a "very harsh and unfair penalty. I simply can’t raise that kind of money and there is also a very important principle involved here," said McCaffery.

"Why should I have to pay the penalty on a parking ticket that I never received? It’s just ridiculous," said McCaffery.

"If the police don’t have to prove they put a ticket on your car, they could just write out tickets at random and how would you prove them wrong?" said McCaffery. "It’s been a month since they said I received that ticket. I can’t even remember if I was parked on that street at all!"

After the trial, Jenkins told the Pointer that he imposed the harsh penalty as a matter of practicality. "After all, what would happen if every word got out that we had let someone off because he never paid the ticket on the car. Well...half of the people who received tickets in Stevens Point would be ripping tickets off cars or saying they never received the ticket."

The judge agreed that McCaffery’s sentence may have been a little strong, but that court costs and filing fees are paid by the defendant if he is found guilty. Since McCaffery refused to pay the costs, he was sentenced to a four day jail sentence instead.

"The costs are standard whether the trial be for a parking ticket or a much more serious offense," said Jenkins. "It is regressive because it does tend to discourage anyone from contesting violations with all the other expense. But the judicial system isn’t perfect."

Jenkins admitted that he had also received a parking ticket last year for parking in Chancellor Dreyfus’ spot near Old Main.

"I never paid the ticket," chuckled Jenkins. "And for some reason, the university didn’t contest it..."
Unclaimed Vet's checks amount to about $1,500

by Lloyd Nelson

There is about $1,500 sitting around the campus office that seems to want someone to claim it. The money is in the form of 70 unclaimed veteran's checks. Rick Adams, student veteran's advisor, said that both G.I. bill and Wisconsin veteran grant checks are among those that have not been claimed.

If the checks are not picked up soon, they will be sent back to either the Madison or Milwaukee veteran's offices, said Adams.

Billiards drops in popularity

The new Games Room, located across from the old Bookstore and downstairs from the Gridiron, is operating Monday through Friday, 9-10 p.m. and Sunday noon - 9 p.m.

"Requests for longer evening operating hours have been received," said Rick Thomas, games room manager, "but this would pose a problem for the person on duty. A later time would not allow for closing procedures before the building closes at midnight.

"Questions have also come up concerning the decrease in pool tables in the room. We have gone from 11 to 7 tables since pool dropped off in 1970 and 1971. This occurred not only here but across Wisconsin as well.

"If an upsurge in billiards occurs, we can pull out more tables for use," said Thomas.

Thomas indicated additional equipment will be installed in a number of areas in the near future.

"The three table tennis tables which were to arrive two weeks ago were finally shipped," said Thomas. "We are also planning to add another football table to the pair we have now.

"Checker and chess sets, cribbage boards, cards and frisbees are also available free with student I.D.'s. We have ski reports, snowmobiling conditions and fishing prospects posted with a number of excellent books on nature and outdoor activities available for checkout," said Thomas.

Thomas issued an invitation for all students to stop and look the Games Room over.

Available Games Room Equipment:

- Table tennis
- Billiard table
- Chess
- Checkers
- Cribbage boards
- Cards

Question: What is your opinion on streaking?

Kathy McCormick - Junior
"I’d do it myself, but I’m scared I’d be embarrassed if someone recognized me."

Mike Hahn - Senior
"If people want to streak, let them streak. I don’t think it’ll last very long, in about a week or so it’ll be over. But if they want to streak, it’s fine."

Gail Beier - Senior
"It was funny the first night but now it’s getting a little much. It looks like they’re trying to be exhibitionist when they go walking down the sidewalk at night."

Jonis Crocker - Junior
"I think it’s really disgraceful and I don’t think it’s very interesting. I don’t think it should be done at all."

Deb Bonsen - Freshman
"It’s kind of funny, but if they do it a couple more times it will be overdone, right now it’s O.K."

Janis Crocker - Junior
"I think it’s really disgraceful and I don’t think it’s very interesting. I don’t think it should be done at all,"

Allen Wiedenbeck - Freshman
"It was interesting in the beginning, but now it’s getting sickening."

Steve O’Malley - Senior
"It’s a functional part of student life, I mean, with exams and everyday troubles it surely doesn’t hurt to enjoy yourself by engaging in the outlet of inhibition."

Anne Vachon - Sophomore
"It’s kind of dumb. I think it’s just ridiculous, it’s such a dumb thing to do."

Briigit Sawatzki - Junior
"Streaking the way it’s been going now is just been carried out too far. The way they’ve been doing it, it has become sort of a group event."

Amy Vachon - Sophomore
"It’s kind of funny for awhile, then it gets to a point when it gets gross. It’s a fad and it’s not going to last."

Cindy Perron - Sophomore
"It’s interesting in the beginning, but now it’s getting sickening."

Steve O’Malley - Senior

Back in the spring of 1971, Joe Papp (one of New York's new all-around boy-wonders) was struck by an unusual idea. What was wrong with taking one of his "free Shakespeare" productions of the summer, and turning it into a musical? But wait! It would have to be a very special musical and one that could tour in the several Street Theatre programs sprouting up about New York City. Ideas were quickly tossed around, writers and composers were quoted as being very interested in the project, and lo, in July of 1971, the musical version of Two Gentlemen of Verona was born.

And a rousing production it most certainly is. And not that it owes one whit to Shakespeare or any other Elizabethan writer for that matter. Aside from the most basic of original story outlines and the original character's names, the writers of this wacky graffiti show have tossed the pages of the bard's comedy to the winds, catching them (in no real apparent order) as they fall, and draping them in that language, style and humor of the black neighborhoods and Puerto Rican communities of New York City.

John Guare has written some low, broad, garly street humor that somehow tags along quite well in a kind of merry, drunken way. For the show is always ripping or sliding along to the sambas, bossanova's and bouquets of Galt MacDermot's Latin Flavored score. The score's base is not rock at all, but touches upon the many aspects and textures of Spanish music and people, more specifically, Spanish Ghetto music and her people, as does the book.

Hence, the casting is an interesting conglomeration of various Ghetto types to be found predominantly in New York, from the aforementioned Blacks and Puerto Ricans to Asians and Jewish-Americans. And the company was certainly an energetic one. A surprise too, considering it was the bus and truck edition. This type of company (as witness the recent productions of Sheba and Godspell) is a second string edition in nearly every respect. The sets are broad and immediate. The costumes have undergone much wear and tear, the direction has usually been handed down from the stage manager and is now all but out of control over performances. But out of this box, a better cast right here on the campus. Overall, these tours bear more resemblance to the original productions.

Here was a genuine surprise. Oh, there wasn't much of Ming Cho Lee's original set left. But Theoni V. Aldridge's colorful costumes were gaudy and shiny bright; the small pit band was amusingly together (probably because it was still under it's original conductor) and the cast delivered a performance of high-blown spirit, making up in life and energy what they might have lacked in excitement or talent. There were no outstanding contributions from the cast but all carried themselves competently, with the exception of Rozan Wortham who, despite solid singing and dancing, never really made the dazzling impact she should have made of the part of Silvia.

The audience was slow to warm to the musical, but out of control over performances. This type of company (as witness the recent productions of Sleuth and Godspell) was the bus and truck edition. Frederic Chrislip and Jack Abell gave an excellent recital for classical guitar and violin Monday, March 11 in the Program-Banquet Room of the new University Center.

Chrislip, a graduate of the Music School of Northwestern University, has performed in a master class under Christopher Parkening. He has been a tenor and guitar soloist with the Chicago Symphony, and has played with the Great Park Symphony and the Santa Fe Opera.

Chrislip's voice was very smooth and relaxing, fitting well with the numbers he chose to play. Two of the songs, "The Willows Are New," by Alan Stout and "Bozrah," by James Hopkins, were transcribed by Chrislip in the classical guitar mode.

ROTC asks for support

by Jim Habeck

"We need community support if we are to increase ROTC (Reserve Officers Training Corp.) in universities today," said Major General James Smith. Smith was the guest speaker at the March military ball held at the Stevens Point Country Club.

Activities held during the ball included dinner, a dance, honoring senior cadets and speeches by Chancellor Dreyfus, Smith, and Dennis Block, the master of ceremonies.

"ROTC products form the backbone of today's Army officers," stated Smith. He defended his statement by quoting statistics showing ROTC had produced 65 per cent of today's lieutenants, and had graduated 88 presently active army generals.

Chancellor Dreyfus praised the cadets for their part in the nation's defense. The chancellor quoted President Washington's second inaugural address, stating, "Those who accept the benefits (of a nation) must accept the responsibility to defend it."

Dreyfus cited ROTC as beneficial to the citizen-soldier concept. Having citizens prominent in the military has been a major factor in the U.S. military's relative nonintervention with our form of government, he said.

The plants will be a great help in preparation for the building open-house dedication weekend.

Double dippers double in Dancy

George Janz has been alive for about 83 years now. He has lived through two world wars, a few major depressions, 15 different presidents of the United States and one rise in the price of ice cream cones at his general store in Dancy.

Less than a year ago George started charging 10 cents for those double-dip delights that used to put smiles on young faces for only a nickel.

It was a matter of economics. "I kept the price at a nickel for as long as I could," he explained. "It was sort of a draw. Advertisement. In summer when the tourists are around I average 60 gallons a week. Hell, I can remember one hot summer day when we were here till damn near midnight selling ice cream cones and everybody was sitting around out there on the front porch. Had to call the milkman a couple of times that week. Ended up going through 80 some gallons."
George Janz, this astute eighth-grade graduate, talked about a lot more than ice cream cones. He told us about the land that he has lived on for the past 83 years. We talked about fishing on Lake DuBay. We even talked about some of the important disciplines studied in college. None of the titles assigned to those disciplines were used however.

These are some of the things that this man who has been getting up at six o’clock in the morning for the past 83 years talked about:

Ecology

"The fishing has dropped off around here the past years. Consolidated (a paper company headquartered in Wisconsin Rapids) has opened up a dam upriver and the water level has dropped off...used to get some whoppers out of that pond."

"We used to get up to 18 deer coming to our back yard. My wife puts out an orange crate full of feed for 'um. Been doing it for years. Past couple of years we haven’t seen quite as many."

Political Science

"I’ve never in my 83 years seen a president and a congress squabbling back and forth like a bunch of school kids like they are today. Seems to me things would be a whole lot better if they took all that energy and used it to improve things in this country.

"Energy crisis!...hell they ain’t no such thing.

"Me run for office?....(smile) Hell I’m too honest to be a politician."

Economics—“the bolony principle”

"I was working for the railroad back when I was just a kid, fifteen-years-old. Got 15 cents an hour and that was for ten, twelve hours a day. I lived three miles down the road and didn’t have time to walk home for lunch so I’d go to one of these stores here and get myself a ring of bolony for 15 cents. I’d have to work one whole hour for that ring of bolony. Well, now when one of these guys from the railroad comes in here and buys that same ring of bolony it costs him $1.29. He’s making four, four and a half bucks an hour. If you figure that out it works out to damn near 30 times as much in wages and a whole lot less in prices."

Philosophy

"Being honest. That’s what life is all about.

"There’s not another man in Marathon County...now I could say the whole state of Wisconsin but that might be stretchin’ things abit.... that’s friends with as many people as me. Hell there’s a whole lot more people that know me than I know them."
I never had one to take advice when it is offered to me. So it was, when I had expressed my desire to go fishing with a friend of mine. I told him that I was going to try below the dam on the Eau Pleine River northwest of Stevens Point. "Did you hear? The Wisconsin Valley Improvement Corporation (WVIC) began lowering the water out there back in December," he said. "It's in pretty bad shape right now."

"What do you mean?" I queried.

"When the water level was dropped, problems developed and a fairly sizeable fish kill occurred," he answered.

"That certainly wouldn't have affected the water below the dam would it?" I asked.

He just shook his head and I was determined to go fishing Saturday morning. I was told that every year the WVIC drops the water level on the Eau Pleine to accommodate the needs of power company dams located below the dam would surely occur."

So Saturday morning I went fishing. I can think of more pleasing sights to behold than a river bank lined with dead fish. To be perfectly honest, it almost made me wish I had foregone that morning's breakfast. That was the way it was, however, when I arrived at the dammed sight on the Eau Pleine River.

There was a pretty good representation of the river's fish population laying on the banks. Bullheads, crappies, suckers, walleyes and northerns to name a few species, all stared up at me with shriveled, milky dead eyes. Undaunted (well, maybe) I began getting the boat ready to launch. I was there to get fishing and wasn't about to be put off by a few dead fish. Besides, I had already paid the "keeper of the dam" a buck to launch the boat.

To be perfectly honest, if I hadn't known better I would have bet that someone had pulled an overnight switch and refilled the river bed with creamed coffee. I remember muttering to myself something about if the fish can't see my lures through the clouded water how in hell would I catch them. But, I reasoned, if there are dead fish there surely must be a few live fish. If there are a few live fish I might be lucky enough to hit one in the mouth with a hook.

As I rowed the boat through gently bobbing forms of other lifeless fish, I began questioning my hypothesis concerning live fish. I began half-heartedly casting anyway. As my eyes scanned the placid surface, I noticed that something was dimpling the water similar to the way a surface feeding trout does. Rings were appearing all over. Obviously the Eau Pleine is not known as a trout stream. Further inspection showed that the object was active to be bullheads gasping for air. Hmmmm?

Now I knew that bullheads could survive in water with an oxygen count low enough to put the clamps on most other species of fish. I took it as a sign from the Almighty that I should gather up my assortment of minnows, lures, rods and reels and resign myself to the fact that I had paid a dollar to fish in a spot full of rotting fish and light brown water.

A League Against Nuclear Dangers (LAND) proposal for a high-level public debate in central Wisconsin on the safety of nuclear power plants has been stymied by Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) scheduling difficulties. A telephone call from the AEC, March 7, informed LAND that Dixie Lee Ray would not be available until March, 1975, put the initial halt on the proposal.

According to the AEC spokesman, Ray's schedule is full until the second week of March, 1975. A request from LAND that a date be set for that time was rejected by the spokesman on the basis that plans could not be made that far in advance. Upon questioning concerning the nature of Ray's scheduled appearances, the spokesman indicated that none were of a debate nature with any nuclear opponent. No substitute speaker from the AEC was offered.

John Gofman, bio-physicist and M.D., university of California, Berkeley, was sought as the opponent in the debate. He had informed LAND he would appear at any time convenient for the debate. Gofman, co-author of Poisoned Power, has been actively seeking an open, public debate with the AEC for many years. "I would be delighted to debate with Dixie Lee Ray concerning nuclear energy," said Gofman. "I just name the time and place. I do not believe she has presented the true picture fairly and therefore an open forum debate is essential."

"Moreover, I'll be perfectly happy to conduct the debate with Dr. Ray having her entire staff of experts along with her."

The proposal was prompted by evidence that utilities were unwilling to meet opponents in public confrontations. In January, managers of Wisconsin Power and Light (WP&L) and Wisconsin Public Service Corporation (WPSC) in central Wisconsin disqualified themselves in a "neighbor to neighbor" public debate. They later cooperated in sponsoring closed, invitational workshops on nuclear energy in five Wisconsin cities. In Stevens Point, LAND Executive Committee members were not invited. No response has been received from WPSC in reply to an offer to provide interviewees with two hours of reading material detailing health and safety effects of A- plants, according to Gertrude Dixon, executive secretary. LAND proposed the debate last month noting that the proposed town of Rudolph A-Plant of 4,000 to 6,000 Mwts, larger than any in existence, had also generated more grassroots opposition through petitions than elsewhere.

A meeting of the state-wide United Nuclear Opponents (UNO) was held for Stevens Point on Saturday, March 9.

Intramural playoffs reduce competitors

In the final quarter games the ReJECTORS hammered 2 S. Burroughs, 86-40. Mike Lynott again led the REjectors with 32 points. A determined 4th Avenue team outscored S. Smith, 49-39 behind 16 points by Al Ashbeck. An aggressive BSC squad hammered 2 W. Baldwin, 73-31. Gary Moore had 20 points for BSC. In the 3rd quarter final the Athlete's Feet outscored Council, 56-30, as Roger Buss and Denis Peters each netted 15 points for the Feet.

The ReJECTORS, in a semi-final game, used a full court press to outscore 4th Avenue, 64-44. The ReJECTORS won by converting on a number of turnovers by 4th Avenue, scoring several times on breakaway baskets. Consequently, the game was put out of reach midway through the second half. John Josten up 18 points for the ReJECTORS.

In the second game BSC got past the Athlete's Feet, 51-49. The ReJECTORS remained close to start, but BSC almost put it out of reach by halftime. Very early, however, the Feet scored three quick baskets to come within two points. The ReJECTORS still have their desire on the part of BSC proved to be the determining factors in the contest. John Josten led the winners with 13 points.

A change for the better

Sports

by Joe Duffy

"The injury jinx has put a damper on Pointer gymnasts' preparations for the conference meet. Norm Olsen injured his ankle and has been declared out of the conference meet to be held at Eau Claire on March 15-16.

Coach Bob Bowen said, "This injury to Norm really hurts our chances in the team competition. Norm is worth 30 points to his team. We were hoping for a third place."

The Pointers will go into the meet with an emphasis on individual performances. Even without Olsen, Bowen can rely on some fine talent for the meet at Eau Claire. "Greg Hansen in the still rings has been very consistent," said Bowen. "I can rely on some fine talent for the meet at Eau Claire."

Even without Olsen, Bowen was hoping for a third in the conference in this event and could take first. Other Pointers who can figure in the state competition are Craig Hagen and Todd Dillman, said Bowen. Hansen has performed well on the parallel bars throughout the season. Dillman, a freshman from Homestead, has been very strong in the side horse event. A sleeper for the team may be senior Mike Weiss. Weiss has improved throughout the campaign and may surprise us in the still rings.

The Pointers will also be shooting for spots in the National Meet to be held at Fort Hayes, Kan. on March 25-24. Greg Hansen has already qualified for the nationals. A gymnast must record a score of 8.0 or better in an event both in a home meet and an away meet.

In the 1947 National Meet, the ReJECTORS had a full court press to hammer SPE, 86-48. Mike Lynott netted 46 points for the ReJECTORS. Ross LaFond scored 20 points to lead S. Burroughs past 4 W. Fray, 63-47. Fourth Avenue Express, in a low scoring battle, outscored W. Northern, 47-34. Carl Luzimeir had 12 points for 4th Avenue. In a hard fought battle, the P-T's could not stay with 2 N. Smith, losing 64-53 with 29 points for 2 N.

The ReJECTORS, a consistent team, outscored 2 E. Watson, 53-36 behind Chuck Johnson's 14 points. The Cedarburg team also improved their position by 5 points in the conference. On the evening of the 2, W. Baldwin squeaked by 1 W., 34-32. Mike Lynott scored 15 points for 2 W. The Canadian Club surprised 3 N. Sims, 63-41 with Steve Klingsinsmith scoring 19 points. For the Owls, Steve Norlin's 10 points, led the Athlete's Feet past a bated 3 S. Knuteson 59-36.

In the final quarter games the ReJECTORS hammered 2 S. Burroughs, 86-40. Mike Lynott again led the ReJECTORS with 32 points. A determined 4th Avenue team outscored 2 N. Smith, 49-39 behind 16 points by Al Ashbeck. An aggressive BSC squad hammered 2 W. Baldwin, 73-31. Gary Moore had 20 points for BSC. In the 3rd quarter final the Athlete's Feet outscored Council, 56-30, as Roger Buss and Denis Peters each netted 15 points for the Feet.

The ReJECTORS, in a semi-final game, used a full court press to outscore 4th Avenue, 64-44. The ReJECTORS won by converting on a number of turnovers by 4th Avenue, scoring several times on breakaway baskets. Consequently, the game was put out of reach midway through the second half. John Josten led the winners with 13 points.

Two Pointers swim in nationals

by Tom Enland

Mike Slagle became the first UWSP swimmer to place in a national meet in three years when he finished 12th in the 500 freestyle last weekend. Slagle, a freshman from Cedarburg, earned the Pointers their only team point with his performance.

Slagle and freshman Jeff Hill were the only two Pointers swimmers to compete in the Dowers Grove, Ill. meet. They swam in five events between them.

Slagle's time of 4:53 in the 500 freestyle shattered his previous best, which was set in the conference meet, by five seconds. Hill was 13th in the 1600 freestyle, the top 12 place, and improved his previous best time by .2 seconds. His 4:53 in the 400 IM was also his career best.

"Slagle's times this year would have been good for fourth in the 500 free and fifth in the 1600 year ago. The important thing is that their times kept improving, right up through the season. I think Slagle had excellent years," said Bowen.

Big Red is not dead

For the last few cons the NCAA basketball tournament has been nothing but a four-letter word: UCLA. But the 15 other teams that join the Bruins Thursday night in regional action all have hope that this might be the year that the Wickers from Westford fall from their throne.

The basis for this optimism is the fact that UCLA actually lost games this winter. However, the Bruins’ nationally televised disembarrassment of Southern California Saturday night proved that they will take quite a team to prevent them from taking their eighth consecutive crown.

Bill (Big Red) Walton and company should steamroll through the West Regional at Arizona. The probation of awesome Long Beach State rids UCLA of their biggest regional threat. Long Beach is so far inside the NCAAs’ doghouse, they may end up playing their home games in a kennel.

UCLA’s first round foe in the final at Greensboro, N.C., will be the Eastern Kentucky, probably North Carolina State. The Wolfpack must first clear a rugged hurdle in Florida State. That team has Marvin Barnes, Kevin Stacom and nobody this side of the Rhode Island National Guard capable of stopping David Thompson.

State’s ace-in-the-hole is their home court regional advantage, and it’s tougher to win in Raleigh than it is to oulepse Richard Nixon. And from there it’s just a hop, skip and jump to Greensboro and another friendly arena.

Tuscaloosa’s Mideast Region is probably the toughest of the four. It should also provide the best side show with Norte Dame’s Digger Phelps and Marquette’s Al McGuire gyrating along the sideline.

The Irish should manage to squeeze past the Big Ten champ, Michigan, while Marquette probably has too much beard power for a miraculously balanced but small Vanderbilt team.

A Notre Dame-Marquette rematch should go to the team that wins the rebound war. The last time the two powers met, John Shurnate handled Maurice Lucas his head on a platter as the Irish won a thriller.

The Midwest winner will be at Greensboro to take on the Midwest victor, and if motherhood, apple pie and Oral Roberts have anything to say about it, that will be Oral Roberts University.

The Titans have already upset kyrusos but will they take divine intervention to get them to Greensboro, even though they are hosting the regional. Louisville’s Missouri Valley champs should sideline ORU while Kansas can probably handle nomadic Creighton.

Since the MVC representative usually turns up in the final four, our vote is for Denny Crum’s Louisville Cardinals to dash within thriller distance of a final.

No matter who wins at Oral Roberts, that team will be the underdog against the Midwest king in the Greensboro semi-final. But forget that one, the big game will be the other semi-final at Greensboro against NC State.

Should this dream pairing come about, UCLA will not only have to contend with Tommy Burleson, David Thompson and Monte Towe, but with about 1,000,000 Jeanie Carolinians.

State’s only blemish in two seasons has been UCLA and the Pack is primed for an upset. The key match-up will once again be Keith Wilkes against Thompson. Wilkes won the earlier battle, but Thompson might win the war.

Meanwhile, Walton and Burleson will be hammering each other inside while “Captain Crazzy” Towe will be careening his 5-5 frame all over the court.

The conqueror in this titanic struggle might not have enough left left over for the final. The only team that can match Muscle will be the UWSP women’s team.

The Poetess experts see it this way, Wave and Sullivan will go in and take advantage of the time remaining.

Women upset LaRrosse

by Diane Fless

Showing great overall team balance, the UWSP women’s track team upset UW-LaRrosse by a score of 64-32 on March 6. LaRrosse is the defending conference champ, but was unable to handle Point who chalked up seven firsts in 13 events. According to Coach Judy Tate, “This is the first time LaRrosse has been beaten in about 10 years.”

Capturing firsts for Stevens Point were Jane Adams in the 440 yd. dash (58.4), Kim Shouse in the 220 yd. dash (24.1), Debby Vercauteren in the 440 yd. dash (63.4), Kim Thompson in the 880 yd. run (2:34) and Kathy Grobeck in the shot put with a heave of 34’ 4”.

Also, taking top honors were the 440 yd. relay team of Sheila Shoulter, Lynn Herrmann, Mary Vanderie and Ms. Zuehdorf, and the mile relay team of Ms. Fletcher, Ms. Vercauteren, Bev Brienfeldt and Ms. Zuehdorf.

Upcoming action for Stevens Point finds them traveling to Madison March 29, where they will compete in a quadrangular meet with Oshkosh, Carthage and the host team.

Dear Editor:

I wish to use the Pointer as a means of reaching all of the students on this campus relative to the issue of campus parking.

As I think most students know, the legislature in its wisdom decided that all parking facilities at institutions like ours were to be self-supported. For that reason we have had to stop the improvement of parking facilities and allow some gravel lots to remain in that condition. We have also had to raise fees by an inordinate amount in order to meet the economic demands of paying off the land mortgage, the maintenance and snow removal, and the salary of the officer for parking enforcement.

There are two key problems now involved and I believe that the students without having to think too hard to do something about it. The first problem is one of inequity. There were institutions within our system which were given a priority simply on a basis of time to have their parking lots developed, paved, lighted, etc. Such institutions, in effect, had all of this done at general tax expense. Consequently, when the self-supporting notion came in, they did not have to include anything relative to the purchase or mortgaging of land, as well as the preparation of the lots themselves. They need only concern themselves with maintenance and enforcement.

Institutions like Oaklawn and Stevens Point which were down the list in terms of being next in line to be taken care of, found themselves cut off when the new approach was established here several years back. The end result is that some citizens who attended some institutions have the advantage of well constructed lots without having to pay for them. As a result, their parking fees are almost minimal in some cases.

The second point has to do with the economic reality of where we are at this time in attempting to provide a self-supporting parking service. In many respects it simply is not working. The attempt to generate the funds through increased fees has a disfunction in terms of the amount of people who will then seek to park elsewhere. This disfunction is that we literally see a reduced number of people paying more for the service and in effect not meeting the economic needs. Another serious community relations dysfunction is the fact that it increases the number of students who begin parking around the community on the streets. For those who are permanent residents in this area, this is a very frustrating situation. It is frustrating because it means that their homes are constantly fronted with automobiles and in many cases people park in such a way that individuals literally cannot get in or out of their driveway. This results in calls to my office, complaints to the police, complaints to aldermen, etc. The city, through its government, then responds to the request of the citizenry by eliminating parking entirely in these areas immediately surrounding the university. This partially meets the needs of homeowners, but then even their own guests cannot park in front of their homes.

I think it should be obvious from all of the above that it creates a bad situation all the way around. I think the time is now for students as individual citizens to write on an individual basis to their state senator and their state senator about this matter. This is something which I believe now can only be redressed at the state level by the state legislature.

I think it is something that can only come about because there is a genuine response by substantial numbers of students on an individual basis through the mail and not referring to the single petition signed by a few hundred people. I am referring to that individual act in which you write to your assemblyman and your state senator and explain to him what is going on in this campus and, in fact, on some others. This could result in a change in the legislative attitude about meeting the needs of parking at the university in a situation like this and in a community like this. You can help yourselves in this matter.

Cordially,

The Streakers hit Stevens Point today

To the editor:

This is just a note to say The Streakers hit Stevens Point today They have put us in the news With gogglies, ties and tennis shoes The rest of their bodies, you should know Are bare and white as winter's snow You must admit that it takes some To flaunt it past the resident huts Where have they come from? Smith or Watson? Known through thought or even Thompson The first ones I saw were from Pray-Sims Graceful strides and devilish grins Over the campus across the lawn With crowds cheering them on and on In my opinion these were the best The guys from 1st East and especially 1st West On through the darkness and on But they flee The crowds go wild and Security is gone They may snicker but it's only a craze Memorable moments of college days Boys and girls together shrieking While their fellow co-eds streaking Ah, the foreflickering Naked bodies running faster and faster Some wanting more of the Streaking Achievers Others envious of silk panties receivers Some are thin and some are fat But Streaking now is where it's at Spring will bring the blooming flower And warmer weather and Streaking Power. Dormitory liquor is problem

Dear Editor:

I would like to use the Pointer to reach the student body on this issue. I have received many petitions and communications to the effect that the problem of liquor is a serious relative to the inclusion of hard liquor in the residence halls. I cannot and will not sit idly by and allow this be done. I have expressed some serious negative reservations about this matter and I wish to make those clear to the student body so that they understand my concern and why I am on this issue.

It is in my own feeling that consumption of alcohol is the chief social problem of this campus and that we need to look at this in that light. In my own mind I can’t really settle on whether or not the addition or removal of alcohol to the residence halls will have a positive or negative impact on student housing. I believe that the totality of the freshman class would be hurt or affected negatively in a far greater measure if they were to be deprived of association with their seniors than they would be by the addition of alcohol to the social milieu. Consequently, it may be that we will, as an institution, have to look at this from the standpoint of which problem is the greater; namely, the separation of upper and lower classmen or the addition of the hard liquor. My own feeling at this time is that the separation would be a far greater problem and I would not be willing to pay that price to avoid the negative impact on freshmen. If I get pushed into the choice I will then have to consider the addition of hard liquor into the residence hall privileges. Lastly, let me say that I personally do not accept the argument there is no difference between beer and hard liquor. More than thirty years of personal experience in this field has taught me conclusively that there is a difference in its impact and effect.

Lee Sherman Dreyfus, Chancellor

To the UWSP community:

When I first became aware of Moses Creek I was eight or nine years old. At the time some friends and I were playing tag, and I was the last left that was caught. When they found me they chased me across the street, through the pine trees, across highway 66, past Thrifty’s supermarket, and down a path. At the end of that path we came to a creek. When I first saw Moses Creek I felt as Columbus must have felt when he discovered the new world.

In those early years, the creek was a thing of amazement to me. I knew not where it began nor where it ended, just that it was there and it was wonderful. During the summer the meadows and woods that surrounded the creek were my playground, and each time that I went out to the creek, it was like receiving a new toy; for each visit brought a new kind of joy or thrill, almost a totally different experience.

On one particular visit to the creek, I discovered that snakes could be found under old boards and other debris found in the fields south of the creek. Snakes were valuable at the time and I would take them to school and show them to sell during recess. When I was in fifth grade, a good snake would bring 35 cents or more (a small fortune indeed). I also went into the business of selling turtles and my friends and I had a regular corporation going.

Our search for snakes and turtles led us through every swamp and creek we could find. From just in back of Papa Joes to where Kansas Lake now lies, no place was left undisturbed in the pursuit of snakes and the money that they brought.

At the time of my early explorations there was a pond just about where Debot Center is now. The area around it, almost up to Papa Joes’ back door, was wooded and marshy. But of course no good thesis can last forever. The university needed more space and expansion to the pond, marshy places, woods and part of Moses Creek had to go.

Losing the pond and the area around it wasn’t so bad. We still had a lot left, all the way from where Kansas Lake is, to just east of the campus, besides we weren’t that much interested in snakes anymore.

During my early teen years, we still went to the creek and the area around it. It was my world, a place to go where I was feeling down, or when I felt like getting away from the house so I wouldn’t have to mow the lawn. The creek was a place of peace and security, untapped so none of my troubles could penetrate. The source of the creek was a marsh north of highway 66, roughly across from the airport.

Then the highway 51 bypass came. To make the bypass, fill was needed, so they dug up the marsh and some woodland, and made Lake Simpson. So the water which usually flowed through keep Moses Creek flowing, now went to maintain the two new man-made lakes.

Before the creek would run low at times and once in a while even stop during the summer. But there was always enough water left in the deeper parts to create pools where the minnows, turtles and other creatures that lived in the creek could hold over until next the good rain came and got the creek flowing again. Now that its source waters have been ditched, that Moses Creek has had desperate struggles trying to keep the life it held from withering away.

I remember seeing minnows wallowing in the mud of an almost dry puddle. Where there had been plenty of water in past years, the minnows would now die of suffocation and dry up with the rest of the creek. Only a fortunate few who had made it to the one or two puddles would survive.

Later came “The Village” apartment complex and more university parking lots, to make room for these products of our advanced civilization, more of the creek and the land around it had to go.

Early last fall came the final and most deadly blow. In order to try to prevent a few flooded basements, most of the creek was dug up into a drainage ditch to accommodate the rapid runoff in the spring.

First came the university improving its facilities, then the state, improving the highway system, then the university again improving its parking lot, also “The Village”, and finally improved flood control. Moses Creek had been literally improved to death.

It’s sad to see a creek die. Especially one that was my own for so many years. It’s even sadder to think of the destruction to come. As if that area hasn’t already suffered enough. They’ve just added another improvement. This one will be called the Michigan Avenue extension.

Sadly,

STILL OPEN FOR BUSINESS & MORE THAN HAPPY TO SERVE YOU! !
Register tomorrow

by Dave Gneiser

Tomorrow, students will have the opportunity to vote in the April 2 election. Registration booths will be located in the Union and the Classroom Center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. On that same day, booths will also be located at Temple Shopko and Citizens National Bank from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Also anyone may register in the City-County Building until after March 20.

Why Register Here?

Your absentee vote sent back home does not have the same potential as a vote cast here. Students in the 2nd ward have the opportunity to elect the first student alderman in the history of Stevens Point. The election of John Nevins would show the city council that we will not sit idly by while they take away our street parking, gerrymander the dormitories, and run Michigan Avenue through our woodlands. Nevins would be the fastest way we could clear up the Franklin Street mall situation. We want that mall before one of us gets run over!

Your absentee vote will not make the difference. Your vote will make the difference! On April 2, ask those you know if they have voted yet.

The Michigan Avenue issue alone makes this election of vital importance to the students.

Even if you have to get your kicks by streaking to and from the polling place, VOTE!

From the president

At the last Student Senate meeting, the senators passed by unanimous vote, a proposal from the Natural Resources Student Organization. This proposal dealt with a request to help the College of Natural Resources (CNR) liberal arts requirements become more relevant. This proposal would make it possible for a natural resource major to replace history credits for speech and composition credits.

Why, you may ask, would the students of the College of Natural Resources feel so strongly about the request as to ask for college degree requirements changes? It is because the students in the CNR have realized that many of the jobs which are available and desirable for majors in this department, deal to a great extent with spoken and written matters. Past grades in this department have emphasized the need for more training in the fields of speech and composition, thus the CNR students are attempting to make the college curriculum more real or "relevant" to the situations they will face in the real world.

I personally feel that this proposal change is a step in the right direction. I believe this because it is an attempt by the students in a department, along with the support of the faculty and deans of that department, to update the educational process and make it more responsive to the student.

I would urge the students in all departments and in any college to travel the path of change where they believe change is necessary and potentially beneficial to their educational development.

Again I applaud the efforts of the students in the CNR which have proven the value and necessity for student input into all matters concerning the university.

Rape alert

by Dave Gneiser

A 24-year-old woman was reported to have been raped last week Wednesday in the 1900 block of Division St. She described her assailant as about five-feet five inches tall with light brown hair of average length.

She reportedly told police that the rapist had given her a ride and let her out of his car before he assaulted her.

According to a recent article in the Stevens Point Daily Journal, all but one of the rape victims in Portage County during the last three years have been hitchhikers.

The Student Norm

"hundreds of them pouring around, throbbing gutter banks filled with hate, there's some fool yelling, "why, taurus!" and "you sellers!," and "sucking pipes under the sidewalk and the noise of the ganglu, don't hear much other than that hard "whoosh" of the smoke, they had a whole other movement, filled with the music of the friends"

"the movie is like some sort of giant, old fashioned cartoon that's left the peel off rubber stuck to the screen" and "i will definitely watch that film again in april, no doubt, that's how" the 300 persons surveyed about the most "amusing" film of the last year's put it at number one, "i heard they were supposed to have seen it originally, but was it really that good?"

"and the streakers! they've turned what was originally a real profiteering medium into a real mess, if they look as busy as they do in the gutter for relevant cultures has been cancelled and they were just supposed to have been running through the city in the summer..."

"we know it's a commercial..."

"so what sort of people would buy these tickets?"

"no..."

"we thought it was a good idea, but our society's in shreds"

"i couldn't"
