Five way race : The Candidates for SGA office :

By Susie Jacobson

In the wake of Tuesday's city-wide election, neighborhood politics is still in the air with Student Government elections slated for Monday April 9, between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. on the UWSP campus.

Five sets of presidential candidates along with 26 candidates for thirty Student Senate seats will appear on the ballot. Election booths will be set up in the University Center, Collins Classroom Center, College of Natural Resources building and the Science building. Voters should bring a valid activities pass to verify student status at the polls.

Presidential candidates Samuel Rosenow and Laura Raymond are banking that their "ambition directed toward the students" will generate enough votes to secure the $2800 positions as president and vice president.

Sam Rosenow, 21, is a junior at UWSP and has served on the Pray Hall Council, worked with UAB (University Activities Board) and has been a member of the Student Complex Advisory Board. He said he has been a "sit-off" Senator for SGA during the past year. Rosenow said being a close observer of Student Government has given him an objective view of the government structure because, "Once you are involved with SGA, you take a bias to it."

Laura Raymond, 21, works at the Information Desk in the University Center and has lived in Neale Hall during the past several years.

Rosenow and Raymond are hoping for a closer network between SGA and the students on this campus if elected. Rosenow said that Student Government is a sound organization, but that it currently has its fingers in everything and doesn't have a grip on anything.

Concerning the relationship between the city government and the campus, Rosenow said that many community issues concern the students, yet they don't hear about them unless a particular alderman wants an issue passed. He also indicated that if elected he and Laura would like to send an SGA representative to Common Council meetings.

When asked about SGA's membership in the United Council (the state-wide organization of UW Student Governments that conducts lobbying with the Wisconsin Legislature), Rosenow said that a lot of potential lies in the people involved in the organization, but that if it keeps on going the way it has in the past UWSP may be forced to drop out.

Running mates Robert Renault and Bonnie Sciepko have both served as Senators during this school year and feel that communication and leadership are failing in the Student Government organization this year.

Renault said there has been a problem with some leaders talking down to the Senators this year, but that the "problem begins at the head...and we're (the Senators) just the body."

Both candidates would like to see the agenda of Student Government meetings

The actual election date has been moved up, but the race for Student Government President and Vice President seems to be moving on schedule. Susie Jacobson's interview with the candidates continues on page 8.

The SGA candidates: promising too little, hoping for too much Curious thing, elections; it would seem a high number of candidates would promise a high-level of political proficiency. This, however, does not seem to be the case in this Monday's Student Government election.

If one values experience, we have two teams running that might fill the bill: the Bob Borski (SGA Vice President) Terry Theison (SPBAC member and SGA secretary) ticket, and the Rob Renault-Bonnie Sciepkio (both student senators) team. In terms of the campaign, Borski-Theison have a slight edge on specific platform items while Renault-Sciepkio have a clear market and committed campaigning.

The problem with both of these teams, however, is that their experience stems from a senate that has had a particularly poor track record. Passing only a handful of resolutions, this year's SGA has done little more than meet during its nine-month tenure.

Still, these candidates do have platforms...which is more than the other teams have.

Sam Rosenow and Laura Raymond are running on the premise that there is only one issue and that is whether or not the candidates are "for the students." This, of course, presupposes that some candidates are against the students, which would make an interesting campaign.

Similarly, Kathy Corey and Brian Snerot are campaigning on the fact that they are "concerned students."

The bottom of the bucket is Greg Grobe and Dale Krause, a team that feels there are no issues, nothing to talk about, and they are much too busy to answer election questions.

Most of the candidates feel there is rampant student apathy and that they can work effectively to make the students care. How naive! Student Government can't make students care; it can only try to address those issues that students care about in the first place. Granted, many students don't care about shared governance, United Council, or student budget allocations. That's what makes the job a job in the first place.

Still, despite the seemingly negative attitudes expressed in this editorial, The Pointer urges students to vote. Most, if not all, of the candidates seem genuine in their concern and deserve clear input from the student body.

How seriously SGA candidates consider student support has been evidenced by the tremendous time and energy they have put forth. How dedicated a legislative body feels to a student population that doesn't vote has been demonstrated by the lackluster actions of this year's senate.

Chancellor's actions commendable

Acting Chancellor John Ellery should be congratulated for his actions and attitudes concerning SGA's recent resolution calling for 24-hour visitation on an experimental basis.

Shortly after hearing of the resolution, Ellery drafted a letter to Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Dave Coker instructing him to make the necessary provisions for implementing a modified version of the resolution. Coker did so, passing on instructions and information to Student Life Director Fred Leafgren.

Leafgren subsequently informed a delegation of students that, after reviewing the data provided, he was opposed to adopting the resolution. Leafgren stated the present Housing policy on visitation was a better one in his opinion.

"I didn't ask him for his opinion," Ellery later informed the delegation. "I told him to get working on the mechanics."

Such a stance is commendable. It can only serve to dispel the condescending "we-know-what's-best-for-you" attitude that has permeated the Housing philosophy for far too long.

To the Pointer,

There have been recent letters to The Pointer citing Scriptural passages which the authors interpret as condemning homosexuality, and, therefore, any homosexual person who manifests her-his sexuality. In Christian love and concern, I would suggest that before they consign gay people to the "outer darkness" (or the darkness of the closet), they should be very, very sure that they know what Scripture says and what God wills, searching the Word of God which is Jesus, giving their homosexual brothers and sisters EVERY BENEFIT OF THE DOUBT, since salvation is so very important. After all, they are calling into question the souls and self-feelings of millions of people.

I have searched the Scriptures with a decided advantage over Mike, Hollee, Eric, Beth, and most Christians. That is, I have not been limited to an English translation and a Western understanding of the Bible and the culture out of which it sprang. Because of my seminary training in Hebrew and Greek, I've been able to get back into the roots of the Bible. I can't distill what I've learned in one letter, but I would be glad to study the Bible with anyone open to the discernment God has given me. But briefly, my honest conclusion is that God does not condemn responsible manifestation of homosexuality; homosexuality is, in the words of my denomination's former president, "a component of human sexuality." And I'm not alone. I can cite theologians and Biblical scholars from many denominations who agree.

I've heard gay friends attack Hollee Holsclaw by saying "Doesn't she know that we should 'Judge not...?'" The motto of a Christian gay friend in Madison is "God didn't call me to be a lawyer, but a witness" and Hollee could learn from that, but I think "Judge not, lest ye be judged" means "Judge in a way that you are willing to be judged." I firmly believe that homosexuality ought to be judged — in the same way that heterosexuality is judged.

You see, the issue is not a dichotomous one. We cannot say that heterosexuality is good and homosexuality is depraved and evil. For what about rape between a man and a woman? Is heterosexuality in this case good? Obviously not (although there are people depraved enough to think that rape is better than homosexual behavior. Check out Lot in Genesis 19 and the Levite in Judges 19). We can think of several forms of heterosexuality that are sinful, not because they offend God or are "unnatural," but because they hurt or dehumanize people. On the other hand, I have been led to know many homosexuals and homosexual couples who are loving, responsible, good people, who are Christians and who demonstrate gifts of the Spirit abundantly. They are whole persons because they live out their homo-sexuality lovingly.

"Homosexuals are sinners." Granted. But not because they are homosexual. And who, especially Church people, can claim anything different for themselves? From the Christian perspective we have all "fallen short." But the homosexual person is singled out, specifically condemned for loving people we, society, don't think they should love, namely, persons of their own sex.

Historically Christians have often believed that physical love is somehow evil and disgusting, to be engaged in only for procreation. This has been one of the reasons homosexuality has been attacked: "It gives pleasure, but bears no fruit." Perhaps physical love-making is wrong and sex is only for making babies. I as a Christian don't happen to think so. In fact, it is a beautiful thing, a gift from God, a form of communication which entwines two spirits. Love is what makes us human, and the freedom to express that love is crucial to our humanity, male and female. And the physical manifestations of love, touching and being touched, is also necessary and desirable. For all people, not just "straights."

I believe that they "homophobia," the unreasonable fear that most of us apparently have of persons who are sexually attracted to and comfortable with others of their same sex tells us much, much more about ourselves and our sexual identities than it does about homosexuality. An open, assertive homosexual is dangerous only to our anxieties about our own sexuality and worth.

Thomas Szasz has a wonderful little thought which I share in closing: "Homosexuality" is the name we give to the preference for sexual intercourse with members of one's own sex. If we called preference for marriage with members of one's own race and religion 'homoracidity' and 'homoreligiosity,' would that make them mental diseases? Would the members of the American Psychiatric Association have to vote on whether or not they are mental diseases?"

The foregoing have been my views only and do not reflect the views of United Ministry in Higher Education-SP.

Sincerely,
Rev. Thomas F. Saffold
Campus Minister

To the Pointer,

As a current member of the Student Senate, I urge you to vote for Rob Renault and Bonnie Sciecko for President and Vice President of SGA. Renault and Sciecko are very capable and they have some good ideas. One idea is to establish a workable method to easily measure student opinion on various issues. Another good idea is to allow for a more intelligent and careful deliberation of matters that are presented to the Student Senate.

I hope that you will vote on Monday, April 9th.
Dan Busch

To the Pointer,

On Thursday, April 5th, at 7 p.m., in the Heritage Room, UC, Alpha Phi Omega is sponsoring an informal party. The purpose of this party is to provide UWSP students with the opportunity to become better acquainted with our organization. Alpha Phi Omega is a national organization, for both women and men, concerned with service, leadership, and friendship.

Each semester we sponsor the Bloodmobile and the Book Exchange. This semester we are also involved in a number of activities outside of the university. These include working with the elderly and mentally disabled, sponsoring events for area Boy Scouts, and a variety of other public service projects.

Being involved in APO doesn't require a lot of an individual's free time. But it does provide a student with the opportunity to become involved in both worthwhile and rewarding activities outside of the university.

To learn more about APO, please join us Thursday evening. Free refreshments will be served. We would also like to remind students and faculty that the Bloodmobile will be here April 16, 17 and 18th.

To the Pointer,

I am writing in regard to the upcoming SGA elections on April 9. While this is the first time that the elections are held so soon, this does not mean that the students have less time to get to know the candidates and their issues.

My purpose is to explain one candidate's issues and how they affect you. The candidate's names are Samuel Rosenow and Laura Raymonds. While this may seem like the typical boy-girl couple candidate, it is not!! They are unique, strong-willed, and hard working.

They stand for ambition. Ambition that is directed toward the students. They don't promise you a nonproductive politician. They promise you something you haven't seen for a long time, and that's a candidate that will work toward the students not away from them. The apathy on this campus is terrible, but who's to fault? Samuel and Laura have promised to change this apathy. If they change it only 10 percent it's better than none.

If these statements seem one-sided, they are not. They are meant to be informative to you, the students. I want to see the students of this campus to: (1) know the candidates; (2) know what the candidates stand for; and (3) get out and vote on April 9 for the candidates you feel will do the best job representing you.

Thanks for listening — I hope it helped!!

Nannette Carini

To the Pointer,

The time has come for you, the student of Stevens Point University to express your opinion. The way to express your opinion is by voting. Voting is a privilege. People should vote in order for a change to take place, after all, Student Government consists of members of the student body. These representatives of the study body control the budget and make some policy decisions. The only way these decisions will be made is by your vote. Your vote will put people into office that expressly represent your values and have shared ideas. So I urge you to inform yourself about the different candidates and vote for the candidate of your choice. Students, I emphasize that you please get involved and VOTE!

To the Pointer,

Though elections are nearing, I'll forego the rhetoric and get right to the point. Vote Rob Renault and Bonnie Sciecko for SGA President and Vice President, Monday, April 9.

As a senator, having observed Rob and Bonnie in SGA meetings and other activities, I cannot emphasize enough the need for the type of leadership which they exhibit. Once again vote Rob Renault and Bonnie Sciecko, SGA President and Vice President.

Todd A. Wolf

To the Pointer,

In conjunction with the newly launched Wisconsin Rainbow Alliance (a statewide coalition of safe-energy activists), and in solidarity with the people of Pennsylvania, the Environmental Council will stage a "clean energy rally" at the Wisconsin Public Service Corporation (downtown next to Bob's Food King) at 11 a.m. tomorrow morning. The purpose of this effort is to inform the community of two important facts concerning nuclear power: 1) that the utilities and the nuclear industry are not liable or responsible for damages resulting from a nuclear accident at their own facilities in excess of $560 million. According to the Atomic Energy Commission study known as the Rasmussen Report (designed to show that a serious accident is extremely unlikely), property damage claims alone could be as much as $17 billion. As of now, the utilities have formed an insurance pool worth only $160 million. In the event of a serious accident, it will be the public who will pay for it. 2) That despite a Public Service Commission order that no nuclear plants be planned or constructed (with the exception of the Haven plant near Sheboygan), at least three more are in the planning stage by a consortium of Wisconsin utilities including Wisconsin Public Service. One of these plants will be located in Rudolph which is only eight miles from Stevens Point.

Tomorrow's action will be part of a statewide "Day of Accountability," as concerned citizens confront their local utilities demanding an answer to this question: If nuclear energy is so safe why hasn't there been a single utility company in the country that will take responsibility for the loss of life and property that could result from an accident which they claim will never happen? Anyone interested in participating should contact the Environmental Council, 346-2055. We will assemble in front of WSPC at 11 a.m., April 6, and then send a delegation of students and community members to meet with the manager and the media.

The time to rally for a safe energy future is now as we begin to build our capacity to forge — not a utopia — but a decent and reasonable future for our society. We take our task step by step, acting out of our sanest personal intuitions, working together, building up trust, searching for a politics of egolessness. This is known as taking part in history. Haberman unseats Feigleson in close mayoral race

By Al Peters

Michael Haberman defeated the incumbent Jim Feigleson for mayor of Stevens Point Tuesday by a vote of 3616 to 3405. Haberman, 33, carried the vote in 8 of Stevens Point's 13 wards.

Write-in mayoral candidate, Tony Majewski, received 41 votes.

Haberman, though new to the position of mayor of Stevens Point, is no stranger to local politics. He has lived in Stevens Point for 31 of his 33 years, and attended school, from kindergarten through college, in Stevens Point. He has served on a number of councils and committees for the Stevens Point Common Council in recent years, and until Tuesday's elections was alderman for the 1st Ward.

The Stevens Point Aldermanic races saw Asbury Nix defeat Pete Kelley for alderman of the 1st Ward in a close race by a vote of 290 to 285. Nix has lived in the 1st Ward for 18 years, and was appointed by Mayor Feigleson to chair the Stevens Point Transit Commission.

In the recently rezoned 3rd Ward, incumbent James Dunn retained his position as alderman, receiving 253 of 457 votes cast. U-CAN (University College Avenue Neighbors) supported, write-in candidate Rollie Haynes received 160 votes, and Rev. Thom Saffold, though having previously stepped out of the 3rd Ward aldermanic race in favor of Rollie Haynes, received 44 votes.

Concerning the recent rezoning of the 3rd Ward, Dunn feels that the population density in these areas is too great for land use. He said that the rooming houses in the area are grandfathered so there should be ample student off-campus housing, taking into account that enrollment is projected to drop over the next few years.

In the 5th Ward, Norbert Miller won the battle for alderman by capturing 259 votes. His opponents, Rita Lynch, reporter for WSPT, and Roland Thurmaier, received 165 and 147 votes respectively.

7th Ward incumbent, Leo Mancheski, retained his position as alderman of the 7th Ward with 205 votes. 7th Ward alderman candidate Jan Hermann acquired 108 votes, while candidate Raymond Woiak received 119 votes.

In a four-way race for alderman of the 9th Ward, Robert Stroik emerged triumphant with 161 votes. Incumbent Jack Goudreau received 123 votes, while candidates John Fabisiak, and John McDonald ended up with 147 and 114 votes respectively.

Nick Jelich retained his aldermanship in the 11th Ward with 175 votes. Jelich was running unopposed for alderman in the 11th Ward. This is his fifth term serving the Common Council as an alderman.

In the 13th Ward, UWSP professor of communication,

Joel Muhvic, defeated one-time former alderman James Cisewski with a vote of 363 to 283. Muhvic feels that it is time to upgrade the present city zoning ordinance because it is so full of amendments that it is literally impossible to read. He said that the motives behind the rezoning in Wards three and eight are essentially good, and if anything, is going to help students. He also feels that long range zoning planning is needed so that we can plan, if necessary, where to put future student and citizen residents.

School Board elections went to Suzanne Lewis, for the city areas, with 4003 votes. In the outlying districts, Leo Trzebiatowski came out on top with 2650 votes.

UWSP summer session adopts four-day week

By John Harlow

The University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point will go to a four-day week for the majority of its courses during the 1979 summer session which runs from June 11 to August 3. Students who wish to attend the session may register in person on April 27 and 28 in the Program Banquet Room of the University Center.

so that a student will be able to complete a three credit course in four weeks going to class four days a week, two and one half hours a day, or going to class four days a week, one hour and fifteen minutes a day for eight weeks. A student may take a four week and eight week course simultaneously.

Orland Radke, the new summer session director said that the changes are experimental with the hope of increasing enrollment. In the past few years enrollment has ranged from 2300 to 2500.

This change in format will cut traveling cost and time for those students commuting from a long way out of town, and it will also give professors an uninterrupted day to prepare for their classes or other projects. The four day week will not apply to those courses (science and foreign language) where the instructor feels that it would be impossible to fit everything into a four day week.

There will also be courses offered in the interim between the ending of the spring semester and the beginning of summer school. These courses have been designed for the traditional student who needs a few credits to graduate or any other reason, who do not want to spend the whole summer going to school. There will be a flyer with information on these classes will be distributed with the material given out for registration for the fall semester. Following are some examples of interim classes that are going to be offered.

SOCIOLOGY — 100X one credit for one week, The Small City and Regional Community.

PHILOSOPHY 221 — Elementary Logic, three credits for three weeks.

POL SCI 220X-420X — Historical and Political Review of England three credits for three weeks.

SOCIOLOGY 315 — Group Dynamics three credits for three weeks.

COMM. 101 — Freshmen Communications two credits for two weeks.

BIO. 140 — Edible and Poisonous Plants two credits for three weeks.

These courses will be held from May 21-June 8, registration will be in the extended services office in Delzell Hall.

According to Radke the U.W. System has allocated $70,000 to cover instructional costs for the summer. There has been $520,000 allocated to traditional courses and $50,000 allocated to courses that will appeal to special interest groups. These courses will be conducted for either one, three, four, six, or eight weeks. They will appeal to very diverse groups ranging from classes for teachers to folk dancing, to a workshop for handicapped students in driver's education.

Registration for summer session will begin Friday, April 27 in the Program Banquet Room and continue Saturday the 28. Beginning on April 30 and continuing until June 1 you may register in person on any Monday or Wednesday afternoon from 12:30 until 4:30 in the Registration-Records office.

SGA representation by academic departments proposed

By Al Peters

A resolution to change the representational status of UWSP Student Government Representatives has been proposed to the Student Government Association by off-campus senator, Todd Wulf.

Should the resolution be passed by the SGA, a new emphasis would be placed on academic concerns of the university. Students would know exactly who their respective representatives are, hopefully providing for a much closer representation of student opinion in Student Government.

Under the present system, anyone of a number of on or off-campus representatives could be a student's representative. In an interview with Todd Wulf, Wulf related the present residential electoral system to asking people in Washburn Co. (in Northwestern Wisconsin) to vote for David Helbach, Stevens Point's representative in the 71st Assembly District. Wulf said the new resolution would open the way for tighter communication between students and their SGA representatives. Students would know exactly who their student senator is, and as such, could seek that representative out to discuss issues pertinent to that department.

A student government is not a city government. A college is an academic community, not a residential one. According to Wulf, by selecting representatives on an academic basis, from the academic departments of the university, instead of selecting them from residential districts (on or off-campus), closer representation of the students of the university can be achieved within Student Government.

As the system now stands, all the on-campus senators could live in the same dormitory. Along the same lines, every off-campus representative could reside in the same three block area. Wulf maintains that this system of representation is not only inefficient, but allows for very little realization of important student issues. With a new system of closer contact between students and their representatives, it is hoped that a greater awareness of student issues would be attained.

The new resolution (No. FY9-12) states that the SGA would consist of one representative from each of the 28 academic departments, regardless of the size of that department, and one representative from all of the dormitories. The student Senate will discuss and vote on the resolution Sunday, April 8.

Each department would provide for the election of its own Student Government representative. This would complicate the voting procedure for student senators at UWSP, however, Wulf feels that it is worth it in lieu of the greater contact between the students and SGA that the resolution would hopefully provide for.

Should the resolution be passed, it would become effective with the spring student government elections of the 1979-80 academic year.

This resolution is only the twelfth resolution brought before SGA this year. With a new system of representation, one in which the constituents of a given department are provided with an identifiable student government representative, it is hoped that more issues concerning students would be presented to UWSP's Student Government.

Longer work allowed

Students with summer jobs who wish to work through the Labor Day weekend can make special arrangements to do so at any University of Wisconsin System institution, system officers report.

"I know of no cases where students and faculty have not been able to work out arrangements for registering or starting classes after the Labor Day weekend," said System President Edwin Young.

Chancellors of the 13 universities and 14 two-year centers have responded to concerns expressed by representatives of the tourist and canning industries by arranging for special registration and first week class make-up if necessary, Young said.

Labor Day this year is Monday, September 3.

Students desiring to work through Labor Day should make advance arrangements at the Chancellor's office of the universities and centers they plan to attend next fall.

The Public Administration Student Organization (PASO) has asked the Secretary of DOA to give his ideas and goals in his new assignment as lead of the department that had traditionally served as the Governor's right hand in developing a budget, evaluating programs and overseeing the line agencies.

All interested persons are invited to attend the speech at 3:30 p.m. in 125A-B in the University Center.

Scholarship announced

The School of Education has announced the Kim Counsell Scholarship Award. Students interested must be a second semester junior with a minimum of 3.50 GPR. Applicants must submit a statement of professional goals, evidence of service to young children and letters of recommendation from two faculty members.

Applications must be submitted to the School of Education office no later than April 10. The applications will then be screened and the selection of three candidates will be made by the Scholarship Selection Committee. Interviews with each of the three final candidates will be conducted by the Scholarship Selection Committee, which will then make the final selection.

Persons interested should contact the School of Education Office or call Ext. 4667.

UW System President announces resignation

UW-System President Edwin Young has announced his resignation as system president, effective January 1, 1980.

Student Life Editor Jim Eagon recently interviewed Young concerning the reasons behind the surprise resignation. Eagon's article will appear next week in The Pointer.

SHAC sponsors run

The Student Health Advisory Committee (SHAC) is planning a run entitled "Run Your Butt Off," on April 22, at 1 p.m. The contest will be a 1, 3 and 5 mile race in which each person running will get sponsors to give up a particular number of cigarettes for a day when pledging one cigarette per mile to the runner.

The students on SHAC are hoping that in this way, the runner can help a friend reduce the number of cigarettes smoked and the sponsor can benefit through better health.

Any interested runner may pick up information at the Health Center, the Information Desk (in the Union), or through the Student Manager offices at Allen or Debot Centers.

PASO invites speaker

Kenneth Linder, Secretary of the Department of Administration (former chancellor of UW-LaCrosse) will be speaking to the UWSP community on Wednesday, April 11.

Publications Board to select Pointer Editor

The UWSP Publications Board will convene within the next 10 days to select the Managing Editor of The Pointer for the 1979-80 academic year. Members of the board have been selected and will meet this afternoon to establish selection procedure.

The Publications Board consists of seven members, each representing different segments of the University community.

Included on this year's board are: Mike Schwaibe and Tom Eagon (representing The Pointer staff), Gail Gatton and Bill Hockensmith (representing the Student Government Association), Dan Houlihan (Pointer advisor), Roger Bullis (Faculty Senate), and Keith Lea (Chancellor's appointee).

The Board will interview all applicants and should reach a decision prior to the end of next week, according to Houlihan.

Managing Editor of The Pointer is a twelve month, salaried position. Students wishing to apply should contact The Pointer office before Saturday, April 7.

published twice before the Senate votes on an issue (possibly in The Pointer and other areas) because the current communication system between SGA and the students, On Tap, is ineffective.

They are also proposing subjecting the Executive Board to a monthly firing session in the Grid. The firing session will hopefully induce more student feedback, according to Renault and Sciecko, and will allow ideas to be aired early.

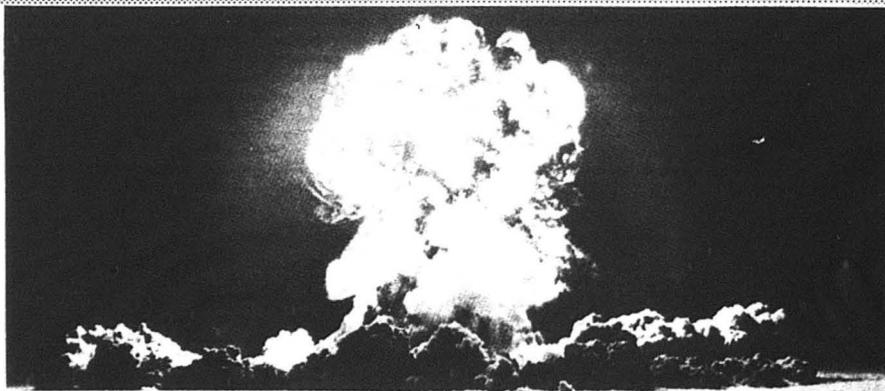

A computerized polling survey of student attitudes has also been proposed by Renault and Sciecko upon election. Through the polling they hope to ask students what the issues are and how they feel concerning certain policy questions. Sciecko said that they have worked out the details of such a survey with the Communication and Computer Science Departments.

On the relationship between UWSP and the community government they indicated that the lack of communication between the two has been the fault of Student Government and The Pointer. Renault and Sciecko both agreed that they could work with either candidate as mayor (see News article on city election), and that they would encourage groups within Student Government to bring student attitudes and ideas to city government.

Concerning United Council, Renault said that 1/2 of the SGA budget is taken up in United Council dues and that he really wasn't sure if the students on this campus were receiving enough benefit from the organization. Sciecko, disagreed, however, adding, "I don't like the amount of money we spend, but we do need United Council." Sciecko explained that the United Council is the only real way we as a student body can lobby with the State Legislature as it is not legal to use student money for lobbying purposes.

Sciecko said the structure of United Council is improper because people serve in the organization for 1 year terms and it is too hard to get to know people. She said she would like to see stack terms for the United Council staff so that members would serve 2 year terms with one-third of the members up for election each year.

Candidates Kathy Corey and Brian Sternat indicated that they are interested in getting UWSP students involved in city and community government. They said they would like to see students closer in with Student Government and that there is a problem now because, "We don't know what the people on this campus want."

Corey, a senior who has served as a Senator during the past year, also said that the city is moving in on the north campus woods and that she would like to see that area preserved. Sternat, a junior who has served on Watson's Residence Hall Council, said that if elected he would like to see some type of landlord-tenant union formed in the UWSP area, and that he would like to tackle the issue of mandatory dorm residency requirements. Sternat said that many people had approached him with complaints about the 2 year requirement.

Corey said that many students on this campus do not know anything about United Council and that if the students are paying for it they should know something more. She added that it was hard to determine if UWSP's role in the United Council is beneficial.

Corey and Sternat agreed that Student Government's recent approval of a trial 24-hour visitation resolution was a starting step toward implementing some type of program, but they feel that the rights of minority groups, those who do not want 24-hour visitation, should be considered too. Both candidates said they were concerned about students and that they were interested in hearing what the students want.

Robert Borski and Terri Theisen are also seeking election to president and vice president. Borski who is currently Vice President of Student Government said that experience is the greatest asset that he and Terri have. Borski said their platform is based on about a half-dozen issues with two areas that concern all students.

"For students who reside in residence halls, we plan to continue the pursuit of 24-hour visitation," Borski said. Borski, along with two other members of SGA introduced the resolution concerning 24-hour visitation to the Senate several weeks ago. Borski also said that if elected he would like to see certain Senators assigned to the various ward aldermen so that issues similar to the recent zoning ordinance will be more clearly understood by off-campus students.

Borski and Theisen, who have served on the Student Program Budget Analysis

Committee (SPBAC), have promised some revision of the faculty evaluation process completed by students at the end of each semester. The results of those evaluations are on file in the SGA office, but Borski said very few students ever request to see them. Borski said that he is not sure that the form we have now is the best. He added that there are some problems with the present system and that the process might be able to be simplified.

Some type of expansion of the data recorded on student transcripts is also an area Borski and Theisen would like to look into. They would like to see information on students involvement in activities, committees and special awards included in the transcript data.

Borski said that a new system of funding should be implemented by the United Council and that the next year will probably determine whether UC makes it at all.

Candidates Greg Grobe and Dale Krause of Smith Hall were contacted several times for an interview but declined. Grobe said that there weren't any real issues and that he didn't know what there would be to discuss. He also said that he and his running mate were "not too upset" that their pictures would not appear with this article as they were too busy to take time to have a photo shot.

reminds you:

New University regulations require the following procedures when bad checks are returned by banks to the University.

1) When a check is returned by the bank it will be held 5 calendar days and redeposited.

2) If the check is returned a second time, a phone contact with the issuer will be made the day the check is received.

3) If the phone contact is not successful in contacting the issuer, a letter will be sent to the issuer.

4) If phone contact is made and restitution is not made in 5 days, or there is no response to the letter, then a second letter will be sent by certified mail.

5) If there is no response to the second letter, then the check will be submitted to the District Attorney of Portage County for collection.

6) The District Attorney will then send the issuer a letter asking for restitution.

7) If restitution is not made in 5 days, the District Attorney will issue a summons.

8) If issuer does not respond to the summons and make restitution, a warrant for the issuer's arrest will be issued.

As you can see, the procedures take awhile before reaching a critical stage. This is to protect those persons who make "honest mistakes," but pursue those who do try to cheat the university (and its students) out of money. If you have any questions, please contact the bursar's office.

Student Life is seeking your help in creating a viable energy conservation program for the UWSP Campus next year. Part of the campaign will include the intensive distribution of posters.

Would you like to be instrumental in the formulation of the program? Then present your views with a poster! Whether you'll be returning in the fall or not, take this chance to have a continuing impact on the quality of life on this campus. You'll not only enrich campus life, you'll enrich yourself as well — the creators of the top 20 posters will receive $10.00 each!

Entries will be judged on originality, creativity, applicability to the University and/or residence hall setting, and the interest and appeal each poster initially generates. Entries will not be judged on technical excellence — if you can give us a rough sketch (and some cogent instructions) we can take it from there!

The contest will run from April 16th through noon of April 27th. Boxes to accommodate entries will be placed in each residence hall and in the centers.

Enter as often as you wish but please remember the following guidelines:

1. Each entry is to be on an 8 1/2" x 11" sheet of unlined paper.
2. The entrant's name and address is to be printed clearly on the back of each entry. (The back of entries may also contain any special instructions regarding the size, shape, color, etc. of the finished poster.)

Entries not within the guidelines will be disqualified. The decision of the panel of judges will be final.

Winners will be announced by Chancellor Ellery via the May 10 edition of the Pointer.

The silent crisis continues

--the plight of America's rural lands

By Mike Schwalbe

Although we are a nation of cities America has always maintained a love affair with the countryside. The forest, farm, meadow, and stream have all been posed as healthy and virtuous opposites to the steel and concrete image of the city in American literature. In spite of the backseat cities have taken to the country in this romantic sense, they have been in the driver's seat in terms of economic opportunity, and have consistently drawn people from rural areas throughout our history.

Today this trend seems to be reversing. For the first time in our history migration trends show cities on the decline. Demographic data now indicate nonmetropolitan and rural areas are experiencing the highest growth in migration rates.

Presently we are experiencing the first phase of this quiet crisis resulting from poor land use practices to accommodate population expansion into rural areas. The underlying basis of this problem is twofold; the first hitch is an ideological one. Americans have grown up with a pioneer legacy that promised a private chunk of earth to anyone willing to work for it, or pay for it.

The twin notions of achievement limited only by individual ambition and a piece of the pie for everybody willing to work for it are the necessary deceptions supporting our economic system. However, to be effective, these deceptions cannot acknowledge any limit to the size of the pie, or in a more real sense, any limit to physical resources. The result is the unfortunately familiar "no

"Even if environmental concerns can be brought to the attention of rural officials and citizens it does not guarantee they will guide land use decisions."

This new growth trend reflects more than just a nostalgic return to our rural roots. For many who inhabit the bedroom communities springing up in rural areas just beyond the suburbs, it speaks of dissatisfaction with both the crowded city and the staleness of the suburbs. It is an attempt to use the advantages of the city to afford a place apart from the disadvantages.

For some with the financial ability to do so the break may be more complete. The move may be to a second or new home in a rural area for retirement purposes or perhaps only to get closer to outdoor recreation opportunities. A few may be seeking to totally divorce the artificial environment of the city and develop a more self-sufficient lifestyle in cooperation with the land. These, and a host of other motives, some noble, some exploitive, which are drawing people back to the countryside may be creating a subtle new environmental crisis in the United States.

tomorrow" consumption pattern Americans have enacted as we've glutted ourselves on the world's natural resources, particularly fossil fuels.

In terms of land use policies the real barrier arises when the myth confronts reality. Like parents who fear telling their children Santa Claus is a lie, so legislators have been reluctant, indeed adamant, in their refusal to admit the truth. In fact it is not entirely clear that some legislators in their headlong pursuit to promote industrial growth, build more highways and power plants, do not believe that Santa Claus will someday bring us more land, and if we are very good, bring us a fresh atmosphere and more fossil fuels to pollute it with.

Compounding this ideological resistance to thoughtful land use are numerous practical problems. Perhaps the most serious of these are a lack of adequate expertise, concern, and dollar resources at the

ENVIRONMENT

Wetlands program Friday

This Friday, April 6th, beginning at 9:20 a.m. in the Wisconsin Room, the College of Natural Resources will present a program dealing with wetlands issues and problems, entitled, "Wetlands—A Diminishing Resource."

Following a brief opening address by CNR Dean,

Daniel Trainer, four half hour sessions will explore a variety of wetlands topics ranging from wetlands history, use, classification, development, and their value as wildlife habitat. The program will break for lunch at 11:30.

At 1:30 the conference will resume with a final presentation to be followed by a panel discussion featuring the guest speakers and several CNR professors.

The program will be moderated by professor James Bowles.

All interested persons are invited to attend.

quiet crisis...

local level in rural areas to support wise land use programs. Citizens and officials in rural areas often do not have the education or the experience that might alert them to potential environmental problems associated with poor land use practices. They may also lack the political and financial clout to control development and land use the way they might like, a situation which has occurred most dramatically in Vermont and Wyoming in recent years.

Even if environmental concerns can be brought to the attention of rural officials and citizens it does not guarantee they will guide land use decision. In some rural areas which have never experienced growth or development of any kind, the very possibility may seem like a dream come true. In such cases it is likely that the immediate economic benefits of growth will tend to be maximized at the expense of environmental consideration.

Indeed the potential for profit has been a prime motivator for opening up many rural lands to development. Land prices tend to be inflated by the potential they have for development, often as a result of their proximity to a seed of development. Thus, the first 40 acre plot which is subdivided may sufficiently raise surrounding land prices enough to provide an even stronger incentive to subdivide the next 40. This process of mounting incentives to develop has been, and presumably will continue to be, a major stumbling block to intelligent and farsighted efforts to protect rural lands from developmental exploitation.

This is not to imply that all development has been runaway and exploitive. Controls which have been put on land development schemes, regulations which have been enacted to protect the natural environment from careless exploitation, and increased efforts by all levels of government to promote better land use planning, have been encouraging. Yet valuable farmlands, wetlands, and forest continue to be gobbled up at an accelerating pace by the demand for rural lands. Every year in Wisconsin thousands of acres of land are lost to residential, commercial, industrial, and highway development. In the process, irreplaceable wildlife habitat is destroyed, many opportunities for outdoor recreation are lost, and the amount of land vital to support life on the planet is decreased.

A factor which has worked to mitigate the seriousness of these problems in the public eye has been the carefully created false impression that in any land use decision all these environmental concerns have been weighed against the benefits of growth and development. The mechanism frequently used to create this false impression is cost-benefit analysis. High sounding and seemingly scientific, cost benefit analysis suggests the most refined and accurate of decision making processes.

In truth, however, cost benefit analysis is nothing more than assigning subjective values to things and then adding up column A to see if it more than column B. It is hardly scientific then in the sense of being unbiased. To me the cost of losing five acres of natural forest may be greater than any benefits of a five acre parking lot, but if you are a store manager you may see things differently. Thus no matter how nearsighted or limited in scope any such decision may prove to be, it appears in the meantime to be the appropriate thing to do given the "costs and benefits" of the action.

Because we are a nation of many groups with many subjective values the land use game will continue to be a political one. For those seeking to protect and preserve the rural environment from the potential degradation a new thrust of migration to rural areas might hold, the game will be a difficult one to win. Our frontier mentality combined with the large and immediate profits to be made at the expense of the land, an expense which is ultimately our own, will not be easily overcome. But by playing the game right they can be overcome, hopefully before the woodlot, meadow, and stream become nothing more than picture book memories of a countryside America loved to death.

Mummy found in Old Main

said Dwight Broody, the head workman. "I seen movies a this kinda thing. I didn't know if that critter was gonna climb outa there and gimme the old evil-eye or what!" Broody and two of the other workers were temporarily hospitalized for shock following the incident.

The discovery was immediately brought to the attention of local archaeologist, Jed Loess, who put to rest the notion that the mummy might be a prank perpetrated by art students. "It's definitely genuine," he said.

"The mummy's wrapping is made from strips of ancient Stevens Point Daily Journals," Loess explained, "making it relatively easy to date." Using this process, Loess has determined that the mummy is about 5000 years old.

According to Loess, the markings on the sarcophagus, and the method of burial indicate that the mummy is the preserved body of a former UWSP Chancellor, Karen Dreyfus. Dreyfus, who was the first (and last) female Chancellor of this university, and the first of a long line of Dreyfus rulers, vanished mysteriously during the second year of her reign, after a band of twelve assassins were seen stealing into her bedchamber with drawn swords. Foul play was suspected.

One of the more interesting aspects of the discovery has to do with the condition of the body inside the mummy wrappings. "The degree of preservation is absolutely remarkable," says Loess. "She's 5000 years old, yet she doesn't look a day over 600."

When The Pointer raised the possibility that the mummy may be the rightful heir to the Chancellor's throne, recently abandoned by Lee Sherman Dreyfus, Loess agreed, saying, "She's dead, of course — but that doesn't necessarily constitute a handicap."

When asked to comment, Acting Chancellor Jack Ellery said, "I think it would be a terrible mistake not to give her the job permanently."

Dreyfus to host meltdown

Governor Lee Dreyfus announced today that nuclear energy plants in Wisconsin will be pushed to "melt down" levels sometime this spring. The governor noted that such an action would "give us a nifty opportunity to evaluate the safety features on these babies."

Dreyfus added that he's been itching to try a mass evacuation for quite some time now.

Crazed Gatton clone roams campus

By Bernard Wirehaus

A mentally unbalanced clone of lame duck Student Government President Gail Gatton is loose and potentially dangerous, warned SGA Vice President Bob Borski.

The clone, created as an independent study project by biology student Ike Mushak, has a chemical imbalance in the brain which causes it to attack children with knitting needles while humming tunes from Hardees commercials.

David Wrono, faculty advisor to the project, said the clone was created as a safeguard against possible assassination attempts. The cause of the chemical imbalance is as yet unknown. "We aren't sure what caused her-it to go wild, but we aren't ruling out drugs or UFO's," said Borski at a press conference held Monday at Grandma's kitchen. Borski said he has been in close contact with UFO expert George Friedrich concerning possible extraterrestrial interference, and that the two are currently working under the assumption that a "crazy ray" may be coming from Pluto.

Officials from Campus Protection and Security indicated that the clone fell down and broke its arm while trying to run and hum at the same time. Officer Dick Gumshoe believes this will make the pursuit much easier.

Members of various university departments are urged to be on their guards in case the clone attempts to charge services or materials to the SGA account.

A spectacular archaeological discovery was made during the recent work associated with the renovation of Old Main. Workers were removing some old boards from one of the basement classrooms, when they uncovered a large, elaborately designed sarcophagus. Inside the sarcophagus was a 5000 year-old mummy.

UWSP co-ed to wed exchange student

By Brenda Starr

Wedding bells will be ringing this summer for a very special UWSP pair, Rubella Sweeney, a Natural Resources major here, and Mumpubo Puboi, an exchange student from Nigeria. The couple met during a field trip, and it was love at first sight.

Ms. Sweeney, who works at the UWSP Museum of Natural History, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sweeney of Sog Hollow, Wisconsin. The Sweeneys were surprised, at first, to hear of their daughter's wedding plans. "I gotta admit," said Mr. Sweeney, "I wasn't too crazy about her runnin' off with no exchange student." Mrs. Sweeney had similar reservations, but when Rubella brought her fiance home, she says, "we fell in love with the little fella."

Mumpubo, son of Mrs. Ramada Puboi of Pungi, Nigeria (Mr. Puboi is deceased) had similar problems with his family. "When I told my mother I wanted to marry an American girl," he says, rolling his eyes, "she was so mad she just spit! Now she's starting to accept the situation." Mumpubo came to America in 1977 to attend school here at Point, and is presently employed with the Roto Rooter Sewer and Drain Service here in town. He is a snake.

The couple plan a July wedding at St. Stanislav's Church. Many of Mumpubo's relatives will be making the trip from Nigeria to attend the ceremony. "He has so many brothers and sisters," confides the bride-to-be. "I just don't know where we're going to put them all — probably under the bed." After exchanging vows, the couple will honeymoon at Niagara Falls.

Well-wishers in the UWSP community may send cards to the happy couple, in care of The Pointer, 113 Communications Building.

The overwhelming emphasis on health foods in recent years has produced an unexpected and villent backlash. More and more, enlightened individuals are becoming fed up with the nuts'n'berries mentality — they're turning in their sunflower seeds and turning on to junk food.

Not to be outdone by their health food counterparts, these people are saying no to Ho Ho's, Ding Dongs, and the like, and cooking up their own homemade junk. Here is a really wretched brownie recipe, given to me by one of the many local junks.

FDA HIGH-RISK BROWNIES

- 3 cups bleached flour
- 1 pound butter
- 2 cups milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 8 1/2 cups processed white sugar
- 2 1/2 cups brown sugar, packed
- 1 cup molasses
- 1/2 cup Sugar Frosted Flakes
- 1/2 cup Captain Crunch
- 1 12-ounce can prepared frosting

Combine milk, butter, flour, and vanilla in a large mixing bowl. Taste it. Ooops, was that a mistake! Pretty awful, eh? Add white sugar, brown sugar, and molasses, and stir until you think your goddam arm is going to fall off. Taste again. A lot better, heh?

Now dump in the Frosted

Flakes and Captain Crunch, and beat the living daylight out of it. If you don't like the looks of it, put in some brown food coloring. (You can get brown by adding all the other colors together.)

Pour the wretched mess into a generously greased 14-inch square baking pan. Careful you don't get any of the batter on your clothes or you'll have to burn them.

Pre-heat oven to 450 degrees. (You're supposed to do this before you start mixing things up, but nobody ever does.) When the oven's hot enough, stick the brownies on the middle shelf. Bake until done. (About 25 minutes. Test by sticking a toothpick into the middle. If it comes out clean, you've overcooked it — throw it out and go get some Twinkies or something.)

When they're done, take them out and let them cool for about 10 seconds. Then smear the icing on them. This is no time to get conservative — use the whole darn can. Then eat the the brownies all by yourself, before somebody comes over and asks for some.

If these brownies aren't sweet enough to suit you, you can add chocolate morsels, sweetened coconut, raisins, honey, corn syrup, Tang, Nestles Quick, or more sugar.

If you don't think this is funny, you can just get bit.

"WASP WOMEN OF THORAX-5" The 1959 sci-fi classic that first asked the question, "what would happen if deadly alien insects took over the earth and made lots of people very unhappy for a long time?" The film stars John Wayne as Jack Raider, lone soldier in the war against the bugs, and Karen "Buzz" Sanders as the Commander of the Wasp Women. The Film Society will show this one in the Program Banquet Room at 7 & 9 p.m.

When asked why students are required to fall 200 feet out of a helicopter, Commander Roger Rotor explained, "It teaches the men respect for the equipment — it shows them just how bad off they'd be way up there without a by-God U.S. helicopter." Commander Rotor is currently undergoing electroshock therapy at the Fort Hondo Air Force Base in Reeling, West Virginia.

 I was upset and appalled by Twink Adams' recent article on the gay community in Stevens Point. As an area gay who was interviewed for the piece, I was insulted to see my quotes used in an obvious attempt to damage the credibility of our organization. I believe you have set back efforts to promote human rights and irreparably damaged our attempt to liberate sexual preference.
 I did, however, find Mr. Adams kinda cute.

Composing yourself for the job market

By Kathy Eagon

As summer and graduation approach, students armed with only an 8" x 11" piece of paper begin the massive task of hunting down a job. This ultimate weapon is known as "the resume."

"First impressions are everything," so the saying goes, and when you apply for a job, your resume is your first appearance. It is your first and maybe only chance to capture an employer's attention and interest. If your 8" x 11" piece of paper is one of hundreds, how do you make it stand out — in a positive way?

People try everything from enclosing a lock of their hair, to having their resume printed on pink astroparch paper. Now, if you don't want to be considered weird or extremely flamboyant, where do you draw the line between drab and obnoxious?

First of all, be neat, orderly and concise in your self-portrayal. Whether you have your resume professionally prepared and printed or whether you do it yourself is not nearly as important as your content, materials and organizational style. For it is your style which reflects the first glimpse of your personality and professionalism (or lack of it) to your desired employer.

Presumably your primary goal is to not be filed under "G" (for garbage) immediately upon initial purusal. So, your page must be neat and well done, i.e., no smudges, wrinkles, typographical errors, etc.

But before you get to your final copy, you must determine and organize the content of your page. Indeed it is one's content which sets one above (or below) other applicants. The difficulty in all of this is that you have basically one side of a page, typed, single spaced, to sell yourself.

Remember all those term papers where you sweated your brains out just to get an extra 1/2 page of information and ideas to type? Well, this is just the reverse (unless you have no ego or have lived in a padded cell all your life). How to squeeze 20 plus years of vital (and interesting, at least to Mom) information onto one page? And the kick is to be outstandingly creative on top of this grandiose effort.

Before you add your own distinctive touch, you must include certain basics. These are your name, address and personal data (age, height, weight, marital status, health condition). Try to be flatteringly honest if possible. Then try to state your professional objective in a few sentences, making it seem relevant to the position for which you are applying.

Outline your educational experiences, highlighting special courses, projects, awards, and achievements. Your GPA can also be a great asset (or hindrance as the case may be); although if it is a liability, numerous extra-curricular activities and positions of leadership may help to balance it out. These may be included under a section which points out your special skills and interests as well as your other efforts and activities while in school. It is important to stress those which point out your leadership and communication skills.

You should have 1/2 of a page left to work with! Next in line are your current and previous employment experiences. Give the dates, addresses, and job position held. The list should be ordered with your most recent position first and then in reverse chronological order from present to past. If you have had 12 part-time jobs scattered over the last 4 years, you may want to be selectively relevant to the position you desire. Diversity is fine, but a prospective employer will be interested in those experiences which may have bearing on his job offering.

You may, if you wish, include a brief background piece on your early life. Again it should provide pertinent information, but may be easily incorporated under special skills and interests if you are becoming inhibited due to lack of space.

Then a portion of your resume which deserves special thought and attention — your references. Select persons who know you well, and positively. Check with them before you list them. They may want a copy of your resume before they feel comfortable talking about you, or they may not want to give you a good recommendation, or one at all. In any case, it is common courtesy as well as a good

In an attempt to insure passage of enabling legislation for higher education collective bargaining, the Wisconsin Education Association Council will withdraw its collective bargaining bill from the legislature. We feel that the presence of a second bill can only serve to impede passage of collective bargaining enabling legislation.

However, there are several items in SB 121 which we feel should be changed. The present unit language still fails to provide an option to the academic staff, except at Madison and Milwaukee, for separate collective bargaining units if they so desire. We fully comprehend the arguments on both sides of this issue. However, we believe that a number of academic staff employees will show up at the legislature to ask that the bill provide this option. Further, we have consistently opposed anything in the scope of bargaining other than "compensation, hours, and conditions of employment." The truth should come out at the bargaining table and not in the legislature. We do not feel, based on our experiences at the collective bargaining table, that the current scope of bargaining language in SB 121 provides for anything other than confusion.

It is our intention to initiate discussion and TAUWF and the legislature in an effort to make what we feel are reasonable and politically intelligent changes in SB 121. We urge each of you to write letters to your local legislator in support of collective bargaining for higher education and to attend the forthcoming hearings in support of higher education collective bargaining enabling legislation.

The above is an editorial by Dr. John W. Coe, Higher Education Consultant for the Wisconsin Education Association Council.

Thursday, April 5, brings poet James Liddy to the UWSP campus. Liddy, currently teaching at the UW-Milwaukee, is a prominent literary figure in Wisconsin. Born in Dublin, Ireland in 1934, he obtained a MA degree in English from University College in Dublin. He was graduated from Law School in 1959 and practiced at the Irish Bar until 1966.

In 1967 he came to the United States at which time he had written a monograph on Joyce and two books of poems published by the Domen Press in Dublin, distributed by Oxford University Press in the U.S. In fall, 1967, he became Poet-in-Residence at San Francisco State College and thereafter held similar positions at SUNY Binghamton, Lewis & Clark College, Denison University, University College Galway, and the University of Wisconsin-Parkside.

He has been Writer-in-Residence at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee since 1976. During this period three books of poems have been published by West Coast presses, Capra and White Rabbit. In 1977, Corca Bascinn, a widely hailed volume of poems, was brought out by he Dolman Press in Ireland, Humanities Press in the United States.

The hit and run press is bringing out Comyn's Lay in 1979. James Liddy has also published short fiction in The Boston Review of the Arts, The Kilkenny Magazine, Icarus, The One Page Novel, and other journals.

In 1977 the National Endowment for the Humanities awarded Liddy a Summer Stipend to travel to Ireland to work on the theme of violence and literature in Northern Ireland. Eire-Ireland recently published the first in a series of articles on developments in the poetry of Northern Ireland since 1969. He has also published criticism on James Joyce, D.H. Lawrence, Edwin Muir, Thomas Kinsella, John Montague, Pete Hamill, and other British, Irish and American writers.

Liddy has an international reputation also as editor of Arena, a little magazine, published 1963-66. He was on the editorial board of Poetry Ireland from 1962-66. Since 1973 he has been the literary director of the Gorey Arts Festival in Ireland and editor of its annual magazine, The Gorey Detail.

Liddy has read from his works throughout the U.S. and will read in the Green Room of the University Center at 8 p.m. tonight. On Friday, April 6, he will conduct a workshop from 9:30-11 a.m. in the University Writing Lab.

Indoor archery shoot scheduled

By Leo Pieri

The fourth annual Cabin Fever Open will be held on Sunday, April 8th from 1-4 p.m. for all UWSP students interested in the indoor archery competition.

The Cabin Fever event will take place in annex two of the Quandt fieldhouse, and it is open to UWSP students with bow hunting equipment. No target shooting equipment will be allowed.

Director of the archery competition, Cory Saniter, feels the event is a good chance for itchy bow hunters to get out and relieve themselves from the long winter inactivity. "It's a good chance to blow a little steam off," said Saniter. "It's always a real fun time, and the history of the event has been close, stiff competition.

Money has been a problem for the archery shooters since they are not yet an official university club. The Intramural Department has helped to fund the event, but this year there is no money available.

But that won't stop the indoor arrow event from taking place. Said Saniter, "I might wind up taking a loss," nevertheless the competition will be on.

The archery competition will feature shooting from varied yard marks not exceeding 30 yards. It will be typical bow hunting distances.

Saniter noted that the targets will be animal faces which will be scored according to vital hits.

Trophies will be awarded to individuals placing 1st, 2nd and 3rd in the event. Medals will be given to winners in the 4 man team competition.

Archers can register for the shoot the day of the competition in the annex. Restrictions and scoring for the shoot will be up to the discretion of the judges.

The event which is open only to UWSP students, will have an open atmosphere where archers just come out and shoot. "It's a fun shoot. Guys shouldn't take it too seriously," said Saniter. Asked which shooters usually perform the best Saniter said, "It's the people who can shoot targets best. Anybody can shoot a deer, you just have to get lucky. There are some poor shots who bag one every year." Anyone with questions concerning the target shoot can contact Saniter at 341-2951.

--Magic ball churns out 79' baseball predications

Prophets see Brewers-Phillies series

By Rick Herzog

Today is the day all baseball fans have been waiting for. It's the opening of the regular season which lasts from April until its conclusion with the World Series Fall Classic in October. This is how I predict the teams will finish:

American League East
Milwaukee — Last year the Brewers led the league in bat power and home fan beer consumption. You can expect the same this year. Together with an improved pitching staff, with the acquisition of Jim Slaton and Reggie Cleveland, the Brewers will pound the ball for a first place finish.

New York — At the end of the season the Yankees will be hot under the collar. Manager Bob Lemon has the best personnel, yet the Bronx Bombers will be unseated by the Wisconsin Boys in a close race.

Boston — A reconstructed pitching staff will not carry the Red Sox past third. Fenway Park fans will still have the pleasure of watching Jim Rice's bat attack.

Baltimore — Jim Palmer is the strength of an effective pitching ball club. The Orioles and sharp thinking manager Earl Weaver will fly high only to have their wings clipped.

Detroit — Good hitting will not be enough to make the Tigers respectable. Unless the "Bird," Mark Fidrych, can heal his wounded wing, the pitching staff is woefully weak.

Cleveland — Bobby Bonds can keep people coming to the park, but there are still too many holes in the Indians' wigwam.

Toronto — Tough A.L. East is going to keep the Blue Jays cellar bound.

American League West
Kansas City — Another Royal finish in the West. After a brief telephone conversation with my uncle and manager of the Royals, Whitey Herzog, I have his personal guarantee of first place.

California — The strong arms of Nolan Ryan, Frank Tanana, and others give the Angels enough to make a race of it with K.C. Rod Carew should be A.L. batting champ at Anaheim also.

Texas — After a wholesale housecleaning by Ranger owner Brad Corbett, many newcomers will take the field. The Texans will take third if they can get their roster up to date.

Chicago — Will not contend for A.L. West unless Bill Veeck and Don Kessinger find a magic wand. White Sox have inspired fans who are easily whipped into a frenzy.

Seattle — If the effort to beef up the pitching staff is successful, the Mariner Crew may buoy out of the cellar.

Minnesota — Without Rod Carew, the Twins are in for a boring season despite a strong mound staff.

Oakland — A's have a fine young pitcher but are strictly a lightweight on offense. Fans may wish the club had moved to Denver before the season is over.

Playoff Winner — Brewers.

National League East
Philadelphia — The Phillies have teamed up with Pete Rose which may be enough to get them into the World Series. Pete may have to sell hot dogs to help earn his salary.

Pittsburgh — Don't count the Pirates out as the Stargell, Parker Punch plus pitching gives them the power to win the pennant also.

Montreal — Expos are on the verge of becoming a serious contender. Spaceman Bill Lee will fill out pitching staff.

St. Louis — They're attempting to build a McDonald's hamburger stand under the Arch, so the Cardinals won't do as bad as last year.

Chicago — The Cubs will change their nickname to Bears and play night games at the local zoo in 1980. Good hitting will not prevail in '79.

New York — Escape from the basement is impractical. Manager Joe Torre has a minor league team in reality.

National League West
San Francisco — Vida Blue, Ed Halicki and John Montefusco make up the best front line pitching staff in the league. Giants will take first with an exciting summer at Candle Stick Park.

Los Angeles — Dodgers are still a powerhouse and have a good chance to be champions despite the loss of ace pitcher Tommy John.

San Diego — Even if the Padres don't play any regular season games in Japan this year, they should take third. Lack of power shall short circuit chances of being a serious contender.

Cincinnati — The huge hole on the left side of the infield at Riverfront Stadium is the spot vacated by Pete Rose. The Spark-less Reds are not as potent as a year ago.

Atlanta — Braves have a good chance to get out of the cellar this year with Rookie of the Year, Bob Horner's home runs. The Teepee is still unstable.

Houston — Pitching is the club's strong suit... everything else is missing. Astros to fizzle on launching pad.

Playoff Winner — Phillies.

Pointer baseball has new, rebuilding look

The 1979 UWSP baseball roster will look like a version of "Who's Who" to Pointer fans as the personnel in both the coaching and playing positions has changed greatly.

The new mentor of the Pointers is Ken Kulick, who served as an assistant last year to veteran coach Jim Clark who resigned his position this past summer. Kulick will be assisted by first year coach Dale Schallert.

The Pointers will basically field a different team than in 1978 with six starters not returning along with the designated hitter and two starting pitchers.

Catcher Roger Patoka signed a contract with the Kansas City Royals while four others graduated and the remaining four decided not to return this year.

While many frontliners were lost, Kulick still approaches the 1979 season with cautious optimism because of the starters who are returning and the influx of an outstanding group of recruits.

Kulick's rebuilding effort will be centered around outfielder Scott Fisher who led UWSP in six statistical categories last year including batting average where he hit .352. Also helping to provide a solid core is All-WSP pitcher Frank Stockus who compiled a 3-4 record and 3.17 earned run average last year.

The strength of the team would appear to be pitching with the return of Stockus and fellow veterans Jeff Seeger, Dwight Horner and Carl Moesche. Moesche and Horner compiled ERA's of 1.28 and 2.65 respectively before suffering arm injuries and Seeger had a 2-3 record. Further enhancing the area is the return to school of Pat Pavelski and Jim Sankey, both whom earned All-WSUC honors as freshmen two years ago.

The other half of the battery will be in the able hands of sophomore Mike Westphal, a part-time designated hitter and catcher last year who hit .250. Power hitting Duane Balthazor will provide strong support.

The infield will be young and green with freshmen John Suchon and Ron Cork battling for the nod at third base while junior Rick Thomas appears to be set at shortstop. All-Staters Dan Wilcox of Edgerton and Kevin Wyngaard of Little Chute will compete with veteran John Benzie (.312) for the second base job while fellow freshman Scott Kugi is the leading candidate for the first base position.

Fisher will be a fixture in left field and senior Al Drake will be returning to his position in center field. The remaining right field job will either be manned by freshmen Jeff Bohne or Rod Larson or transfer Dave Gaetzman, a high school All-Stater two years ago. Also seeing action will be junior Randy Schmitgen.

The Pointers will be an unknown quality in 1979 because of the inexperience present at most positions. Just how well they will fare will depend a great deal on how fast the young players can develop.

The Pointers' first "northern" game is scheduled for Tuesday, April 10, when coach Ken Kulick and his troops will meet the University of Wisconsin for a doubleheader in Madison.

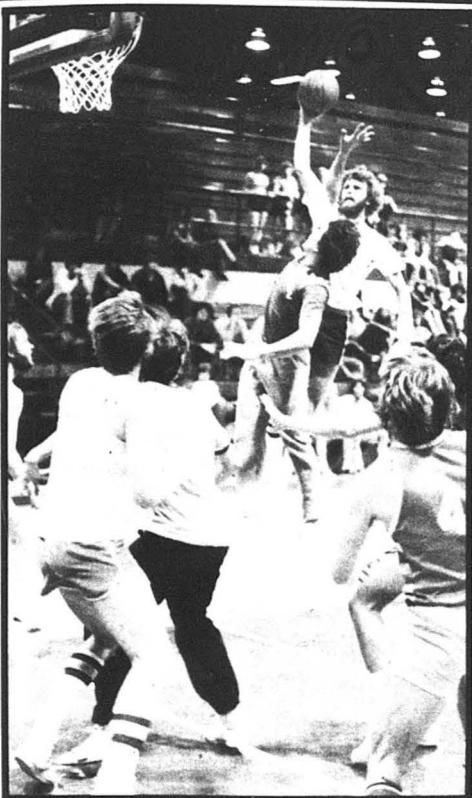

The first home contest is scheduled for Saturday, April 14th against the UWSP alumni.

The UWSP baseball team concluded its southern trip on a wet note as Saturday's doubleheader against Northwest Louisiana State was canceled because of wet grounds.

The Pointers finished the 1979 trip with a 4-7 record which can be viewed as a slight improvement over the 5-12 record that was compiled on last year's swing.

The item that made this year's trip even more impressive was that three of the team's seven losses were by just one run. The 1979 swing also included a heart stopping 6-5 upset win over national NCAA power Houston University.

Doc's Defenders captured the men's intramural basketball championship on Thursday March 22, as they stopped The Dreamers 62-54 in a tough, closely contested ball game. The Defenders were led by Scott Ward's 30 points and Steve Busch's 14. The Dreamers were led by Mike Miller and Scott Kleignsmith who had 18 and 16 points respectively.

our reputation for honesty and integrity.

This grade change is a personal insult and questions my professional honesty and integrity.

Who is cheating? Soc. 305 is a 1 credit course required by the state. A speaker in the area of Human Relations appears each week. (Joe Woodka has just punished me. No more money for speakers. I have spent $475.00).

A final exam is scheduled for Soc. 305. To meet the requirement I ask the students to read a tough provoking book titled, "Blaming the Victim," by Ryan.

229 students were enrolled in the course and took the quiz. 227

Center on that day. For more information, call Ed Tam at 341-1711.

students passed the course. No complaints!

Two students were critical of the exam but admitted they had not read the simple paperback. After some abuse, these two students said they would get the grades changed.

They did! Don't go away. I will be back with my experience with the Grade Review Board.

Dean Woodka has written a veritable gem of a letter which I most certainly want to share with you.

You, the students, you my colleagues, you the media, and you, my fellow citizens, will ultimately deliver the verdict with regard to:

Attached to the front of your resume you should include a letter of transmittal. This is your best chance to let your own voice speak to the employer. Strive for clear, interesting and grammatically correct writing. For this represents your communication skills (or lack of them). This letter introduces you and explains what for, and why you are applying for the position. Point out particular achievements or other qualifications that suit you for the job. Close by asking for an appointment and suitable platitudes regarding your looking forward to an immediate reply.

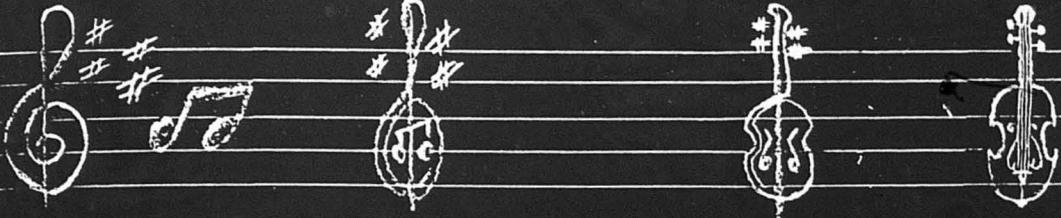

Remember that your resume is an employer's first look at the story of you. The glimpse should be neat, informative and exciting.

If you need further and more comprehensive information or assistance, Dennis Tierney and the Placement Office, located in room 304 Dezell Hall, has very good booklet available called, "Career Guidelines," plus many other resources which can help you with awareness of job opportunities, resumes, interviews, etc. If you want your resume printed in quantity and quality, the University Center Print Shop can do it for you at a very low price.

Don't hesitate to use all the resources available to you in order to prepare yourself as a valuable asset and resource in the job market.
