The Pointer Interview:

GOD

A candid conversation with the outspoken author of everything out of Eden for partaking of the forbidden fruit!
GOD: Hell no. Why make a scene over a few lousy apples?
HOMESPUN: How did that story get started?
GOD: Hmm, let me see—I think I made it up at a party one night, to impress this little blonde...
HOMESPUN: You’re joking.
GOD: She was sitting at the bar sipping a Harvey Wallbanger and eying me like I was the world's biggest Valium, when...
HOMESPUN: (Raising his voice) Don’t you think it’s just a teensy bit irresponsible to make up a story like that when you have a reputation as the final arbiter of Truth?
GOD: Do I detect a note of sarcasm there? Look, Hangspun—
HOMESPUN: That’s God’s HUM.
GOD: Cod your jets, Wong—one wave of my hand and you’ll be sitting on a lily pad, viewing the world through toad-colored glasses, and casting for lunch with your tennis shoe.
HOMESPUN: Okay, okay! Let’s drop it, shall we?
GOD: Fine.
HOMESPUN: Let’s talk about The Ten Commandments...
GOD: Great movie. Loved it.
HOMESPUN: No, I mean the real Ten Commandments. The ones you gave Moses. Don’t you think they’re a little bit outdated today?
GOD: I suppose you’d prefer something like, “Thou shalt not recline in thy neighbor’s Jacuzzi!”
HOMESPUN: No, it’s just that so many of the original commandments aren’t...

Healther at ease with disease

By Ji Go Bygum

He used to practice what he preached, but an annoying disease has forced UWSP Health Services Coordinator Bill Healther to, as he puts it, "sucumb to the vices of ill health."

Healther, it was recently diagnosed, is suffering from a psychosomatic disorder which compels him to smoke two cartons of cigarettes and consume two cartons of tequila daily. The disease, according to doctors, is characterized by Healther's tendency to lapse into periodic states of uncontrollable laughter. In apparent mockery of Wellness, Healther tosses his head in mad, incessant laughter and, through an insane grin, shouts such slogans as, "I regret that I have but one life to preserve for my country." "Give me Wellness or give me death," and, "Ask not what your body can do for you, but what you can do for your body."

"Healther has this to say in an interview with The Pointer this week: "You see, first I drink the quart of tequila, then I chase it with the OJ, and take a swig of grenadine. Then I jump up and down. It's the ultimate tequila sunrise."

Doctors say that Healther must smoke two cartons of Lucky Strikes daily and maintain a nicotine level comparable to that of a large tobacco plantation, in order to control a chemical imbalance in his central nervous system that causes the disorder. Accomplishing this, according to Healther, is no easy task. He must at all times harbor as many cigarettes as he can hold in his mouth, in his nose, and in all openings of his body not prohibited by decorum. "Healther copes with the disease that has made him somewhat of a walking paradox; surprisingly well. In fact, he acknowledged that it has made life easier for him in some ways. "I can better identify with the students," he coughed.

"Students apparently feel the same way. Recently, members of the campus Unwellness Club made Healther some nicotine brownies, and students frequently invite him along when they go to the bars. "Bill's a good guy," one student was quoted. "He's not like the students, he's a psychosomatic disorder Healther copes with in some ways. "I can better identify with the students," he said."

Healther had this to say in an interview with The Pointer this week: "You see, first I drink the quart of tequila, then I chase it with the OJ, and take a swig of grenadine. Then I jump up and down. It's the ultimate tequila sunrise." "I don't think either attitude is healthy," he quipped. "On the one hand, you've got some morbid, white-faced wimp who, does 20 bongs a night and lives on chips and beer, and on the other you've got some rosy-cheeked prissy-assed prude who jogs ten miles a day, lives on salad, and who goes cross-country skiing at eleven o'clock at night when everyone else goes to the bars. Who's crazier?"

"Healther said that, from here on, he was exempting himself from any future Wellness controversies so that I can make the best of my short life. My new motto is going to be, 'Die and let die.'"

A bright spot

Just when everything seemed to be darkening for Healther, so did his office. Apparently, a fuse blew just as we were concluding the interview. This reporter was alarmed, but Healther took control immediately, displaying at least one redeeming attribute of his disease. "Not to worry," he giggled. "I'll light this place up." It was evident by his long wheeze that the doctor was emptying his nostrils of every last bit of air so that he could take a massive drag off the bundle of cigarettes stuffed in his mouth. He did so, and the office was aglow. Animal, our photographer, later commented, "Why'd I even bother to bring my flash?"

Well good, we were hoping it might.

As Dr. Hitler once said, the best defense against pregnancy is an offensive ad campaign. You see, by using an asinine, sexist gimmick, we've drawn your attention to that all-important fact that people who have sex take a chance of getting pregnant—especially women.

So we're sexist—big deal.

So we're unlawfully infringed on Charles Schultz's copyright. Do you think that bothers us? Hey we're doctors, man. We've been to medical school. We know what your insides look like.

So get out of here.

SMOKIN' IN THE HEALTH CENTER. Doctor Healther prepares to light up his life.

DOES THIS AD OFFEND YOU?

Excavation for the new Wellness Complex is almost complete, according to officials of the multinational Wellness corporation that is financing the $4 billion project. The complex, which will include three gymnasiaums, a ten-mile temperature controlled plexiglass jogging tunnel, parking facilities for 30,000 bicycles, and a "high on health" private hedge, will occupy a 200-acre plot of campus land. Officials have not yet decided what to do with the Sentry building, which the firm says it bought so its members can walk steps where there are elevators in order to feel psychologically as well as physically invigorated.

King Kong'servative

By Tara Raboornmezhy

King Kong'servative, director Frederick de Cordova's first motion picture in decades, is a politically laced remake of the legendary King Kong, made by RKO in 1933 and remade in 1976. This latest version of the beauty-and-the-beast classic retains much of the charm of the original and avoids the campiness of the '76 remake, indicating that Mr. de Cordova's first motion picture in decades, is a politically laced picture in years, is a director Frederick de Cordova's first motion picture in decades, is a

Secretary of State Fred MacMurray, former actor and star of the Sixties hit sitcom, My Three Sons, will speak at UWSP this Friday. MacMurray, asked to take over the all-important cabinet position when former Secretary of State Al Haig was offered a spot on The Amazing Animals, will talk about the crisis in Poland, the war in El Salvador, and whether Chip and Polly ever petted below the waist. MacMurray will speak at 4 p.m. in the Beverly Garland Room of the University Center. A soup and sandwich reception will follow in The Grid. Admission is free.

Dipping a native in lava and using him as a disposable lighter.

CINEMATographer Sven Nykvist's lucid, penetrating lens captures the steamy, ripe lusheh of the jungle and the hard, monolithic severity of the New York skyline with equal brilliance, and the musical score by ex-superstar Stevie Nicks is perky and appealing. Trivia buffs should note that Ms. Nicks appears briefly in the film in a non-speaking part (she gets stepped on).

The University Film Society will present this towering thriller Tuesday and Wednesday, April 7 and 8, at 9 and 11 p.m. in the Program Banquet Room of the University Center. Admission is $2.

King Kong'servative

For her. He takes her to his cave hideout, peels off her jogging duds, and, in a surprisingly touching scene, confesses that he's never done it before with a woman one twenty-fifth his size. After the two spend a few hours playing "Kiss and Scream" and "Pardon My Paws," Captain Jim O'Brien (Tab Hunter) arrives and rescues Fay.

Kong soon catches the couple in the jungle, and pounds an amazing quantity of gross, awful red and brown stuff out of O'Brien's head, arms, legs, and torso. He then turns to Fay for a quick game of "Hide the Banana." Impressed by Kong's show of jealous affection, Fay grabs the late Captain's gun and empties it into the beast's right foot. While he's hopping around in pain, she escapes to the beach and is rescued by some boat people. Eventually she gets back to New York.

Just as Fay begins to think she may be falling in love with the big lug, a mob of dope-crazed Sixties malcontents arrives and starts making trouble. Fay leans over a railing to shout at the mob, slips, and accidentally falls off the building. Heartbroken, Kong goes back to Numbskull Island and has an affair with a Seregosaur.

Thanks to de Cordova's sensitive touch, the film is an unequivocal artistic success. The love scenes between Fay and Kong are handled with taste and a certain amount of humor—especially the initial encounter where he fires up her Virginia Slim by dipping a native in lava and using him as a disposable lighter.

meaningful today. I mean, all that stuff about thy neighbor’s ass—

GOD: You ever eaten any flies, Hardepoo?

HOMESPUN: I only meant...

GOD: Listen, I wrote those a long time ago. I happen to know you cranked out some pretty smart prose when you were a sprout. A short story about a squad of pom-pommers and a gang of alien football players springs particularly to mind.

HOMESPUN: Cut back to The Ten Commandments. Did you really part the Red Sea like they did in the movie?

GOD: Yeah, I did that, but not quite like in the film. DeMille parted it on the left and I parted it on the right.

HOMESPUN: What do you think of Reagan’s Defense Program?

GOD: What channel is it on?

HOMESPUN: It isn’t a TV show. I’m talking about the U.S. spending billions on bombs to blow up the world when people are starving to death.

GOD: Well, if you’re going to put it that way, I guess I’m against it.

HOMESPUN: So why don’t you do something about it?

GOD: What, you mean like setting off a few H-bombs or knocking a few jets out of the sky? Then you clowns would be whining about that.

HOMESPUN: You’re probably right. Are there beings on other planets?

GOD: Sure.

HOMESPUN: Are they anything like us?

GOD: Get serious. Some of us learn from our mistakes.

HOMESPUN: It isn’t a TV show. I’m talking about the U.S. spending billions on bombs to blow up the world when people are starving to death.

GOD: Well, if you’re going to put it that way, I guess I’m against it.

HOMESPUN: What do you think of Reagan’s Defense Program?

GOD: What, you mean like setting off a few H-bombs or knocking a few jets out of the sky? Then you clowns would be whining about that.

HOMESPUN: Just a couple more questions—these are really important.

GOD: I can feel my temples starting to throb. You got any Tylenol on you?

HOMESPUN: If a tree falls in the forest and there’s nobody there to hear it, does it make any sound?

GOD: If I could just lie down for an hour or so, I’d be fine...

HOMESPUN: Will you please just answer the goddamn question for once!

GOD: Oh, for crying out loud, yes! It makes a sound! It goes, “Strong, Strong!”

HOMESPUN: “Strong?” What’s “strong”?

GOD: I’ve got a splitting headache, that’s what’s wrong!

HOMESPUN: Just one more—why do they glue the liners inside cereal boxes so they stick to the sides, and you try to roll them up, they rip and the cereal gets stale?

GOD: Let me tell you about this incredibly wild and bizarre sexual experience I had last week with these three female Marines in a wading pool full of peach yogurt.

A: No thanks.

Snipers vs. Joggers: A guest editorial

Last week—I think it was Thursday or Friday—a UWSP student under the influence of drugs climbed to the top of Old Main and opened fire on his fellow man with a high-powered rifle. Because some joggers were injured, the local press jumped on the story, calling the perpetrator a “confused individual,” and referring to the incident as “really socially unacceptable behavior.”

It is this last characterization that I take exception to. What exactly is socially unacceptable behavior? Behavior that is acceptable in one context may be unacceptable in another, and vice-versa.

To attempt an understanding of how social context determines the acceptability of unacceptable behavior, let us compare and contrast the two types of activity involved in the incident—jogging, which is currently all the rage, and sniping, which is going through a bit of a slump.

So popular is jogging nowadays that people are building entire lifestyles around it, claiming it builds strong bodies, relieves mental tension, and produces moments of near-mystical lucidity. Joggers are widely admired, and books have been written about jogging as an “art.”

Let us examine some other key differences between jogging and sniping. Jogging requires only a decent pair of shoes and some suitable clothing. Sniping requires sophisticated military hardware, certainly no advantage in a society that has come to equate advanced technology with dehumanization.

Jogging is often done in groups, and a certain amount of camaraderie is generated. Snipers are loners. Studies indicate that we tend to distrust people who keep to themselves too much, particularly if they go around making machine-gun noises in supermarkets.

Perhaps most importantly, joggers pose no direct threat to their fellow men and women. Snipers kill people—if they’re decent snipers. Yet even killing is acceptable in certain contexts. During times of war we must all pull together and make democracy safe for the world, the people shooting the guns are heroes. People who are into running are called “deserters,” and are dealt with rather harshly.

Sip sip, bang bang

By Bore Vidal

Have you ever wondered what kinds of unhealthy things coffee can lead to if you're not careful? Duane Rushmore, a sophomore Economics major, found out the hard way last Friday, when academic pressures combined with an overdose of java to push him over the brink of tension into the arms of antisocial behavior.

Rushmore, a New Berlin native, climbed to the top of Old Main at 3:30 Friday afternoon, and began firing at passing pedestrians with an M-16 rifle. Three joggers were injured when bullets from Rushmore's gun passed through their bodies at extremely high speed. They were rushed to St. Michael's, where they're presently listed in lousy condition.

When he finally ran out of bullets at 5:30, Rushmore surrendered himself to Campus Security officers at the scene.

A subsequent police investigation revealed that Rushmore had been cramming for exams in his dorm Study Lounge the night before the sniping incident. Friends who were with him said he suddenly jumped to his feet, hurled a half-finished cup of coffee against the wall, and began screaming, "Fill it up, God damn it!"

A nearby RA quickly assessed the situation, called campus police, and calmly Rushmore down by slapping him in the face with a 400-page lab manual. The crazed sophomore then ran from the Study Lounge and vehicles. A trace, turning up the next day with his rifle atop Old Main.

Rushmore's friends admitted that he had been drinking coffee all evening, to keep himself alert. A search of his room revealed dozens of empty coffee cans, hundreds of sugar packets, and a life-sized color poster of Mrs. Olsen getting in on with Juan Valdez in Joe DiMaggio's living room.

As practically anyone reading the first part of this frightening but meaningful story can see, using coffee can be very dangerous for university students—particularly those with access to M-16 rifles and plenty of ammo. Here are a few things you can do to prevent coffee-induced stress:

1. Don't drink coffee. If you can't handle it, why take chances? Don't eat it either.
2. Drink alcohol. University Alcoholic Educator Stewed Whitman says, "If you find yourself in the throes of a coffee jag, knock down a few pints of Jack Daniels. It'll cool you out in nothing flat."

3. Try not to let it get to you. Sure, you're all buzzed up and your heart is going like a percolator. You want to calm down, you want to grind someone up and brew their brains. Try watching Vegas instead.

4. Calm down.

5. If nothing else works, try this special relaxing technique developed by the friendly folks at the Health and Wellness Command Bunker: take some deep breaths. Let them out. Repeat as often as necessary.

NO MORE RUNNING FOR THESE KIDS.

Joggers, victims of Duane Rushmore's java-induced manias, stretch out and relax while waiting for an ambulance.

Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission Executive Director Oscar Lund, told the Senate at last week's meeting that a surplus of money has accumulated since the beginning of the President of SGA suggested that arrest powers allocated by the Senate's March 12 meeting. Senators Greg Brooker and Steve Swanson opposed the recommendation to the Board of Regents. After more information is laid out, the Senate can make a decision.

But Lund conceded that there is a surplus of $200 to Steiner Hall, $170 to the Fisheries Society, and $50 to the Wildlife Society. These allocations of $200 to Steiner Hall, $170 to the Fisheries Society, and $50 to the Wildlife Society can be used as a basis for study of the Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission, however, recently had its federal funding cut off. Critics of the commission, said Lund, last week said that it had created too much bureaucracy, and that it was not meeting any real needs. But Lund gave several examples of the commission's success: it had provided data for the development of the Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission, which serves as guidelines to the establishment of a SO's and 60's, "he said.

A fortnight ago, President of SGA, told the Senate that a surplus of $200 to Steiner Hall, $170 to the Fisheries Society, and $50 to the Wildlife Society has accumulated. He also cited successful endeavors of other commissions. The Northeast Commission, he said, had been used as a basis of study by the government to deal with waste disposal issues, and a Western Commission had studied the impact of the MX in their region.

The Senate opposes arrest powers

By Linda Raymen

The Student Senate voted Sunday to oppose granting arrest powers to Campus Security Officers. The Senate opposition to arrest powers was the result of a comprehensive proposal has been submitted," and recommended the establishment of a university-wide panel as an alternative to a campus police force.

The decade-old debate over granting arrest powers to Campus Security Officers was set up to study the issue further. After more information is submitted, a final decision will be reached. The ultimate decision will be made by Chancellor Marshall, who will then present his recommendation to the Board of Regents. A previously introduced campus-wide proposal co-authored by Senators Greg Brooker and Renee Bohanski, was defeated by a voice vote at the Senate's March 12 meeting.

Executive Board Committee chairman Jack Buswell reported that there is a $200 transfer of funds to the United Council fees. The money has accumulated since the beginning of the year. Linda Catterton, President of SGA suggested some uses for the fund. An all-day outdoor concert on registration at Loggers' Day behind Quandt Fieldhouse was the main proposal. Others included the purchase of trees for landscaping, or anything else, or putting the money back into the account for future use. An SGA-sponsored Happy Hour with live entertainment music will be held Friday, April 3, from 3:00-6:00, in the Grid. An Open Mike for President candidate Jack Buswell will be the focus of it. Buswell's running mate is Senator Ed Karshna. SGA elections will be held April 7-8, and an I.D. is required.

Mike Pucci, Vice-president of SGA, told the Senate that a rally was to be held April 1 in Oshkosh to protest financial aid cuts by the Reagan Administration. These cuts will result in a 50-75 percent loss in aid to students," Pucci said. To date, a letter-writing campaign is planned. In other action, the Senate: - approved SPAC allocations of $50 to Steiner Hall Council to raise revenue for alternative development on campus through a "Fund Run" — allocated $365 to ACT, $382 to WHEA, $170 to the Fisheries Society, and $500 to the Wildlife Society — approved SPAC allocations of $128 to Central Wisconsin Naturalists.

Ethnicity and Race discussion held

By Cindy Schott

A discussion on "Ethnicity and Race" was held in conjunction with the Fourth Annual Conference on the Development of Appalachian Community at UWSP, March 26 from 2:30 to 4:30 in room 5-A10. Professor John H. Stanfield, University of Wisconsin, Russell S. Nelson Jr., University of Iowa, and Rabbi Lawrence N. Mahrer, Mount Sinai Congregation, Wausau, presented. Following the conference, Russell S. Nelson Jr. served as a commentator.

Professor Stanfield began the discussion by summarizing a paper he had done entitled, "White-Black Immigration to Urban Appalachia; The Case of Knoxville, Tennessee." His study was concerned with an area that has traditionally been characterized by a high degree of unemployment and poverty. He believes the real problem in this region has been a lack of industrialization to stimulate any significant amount of growth. The economic incentive, Blacks have been basically confined to a lower order of economic opportunity. He also indicated the success of a high rate of problems in their marriages. High unemployment and civil rights were next on the list, respectively.

The proportion of poor Blacks was not overwhelming. Vincent believes the problems they encountered were due mainly to their racial status. According to Rabbi Mahrer, who spoke on "Jews in Small Towns," Jewish people felt isolated from others, even from their own faith, and are sensitive to ethnic slurs. He said, "There is a great deal of distrust among Jews and Christians due to the stereotypes we've come to know. Jews don't want to stand out or make waves because they're afraid of being ostracized in a predominantly Christian community."

He believes that practicing Christian holiday traditions, such as making Christmas tree ornaments or holding winter concerts which feature typically Christmas music, have no place in the public school system. He feels a child shouldn't be forced to perform, or his peers and apologize for being able to participate in certain things because they violate his religious beliefs.

Mrs. Zeitzlein recounted the main highlights of the conference:

- Finally, Russell Nelson Jr. gave a commentary on the three studies that had been presented, regarding the one presented by Professor Stanfield, Russell S. Nelson Jr. also indicated the success of a high rate of problems in their marriages. High unemployment and civil rights were next on the list, respectively.

If we think activity on the square on such occasions as St. Patrick's Day and Halloween borders on insanity, a brief look at the behavior of some of our counterparts at other UW campuses will provide a perspective that makes the miniscule shindig out of Buffy's at bar time appear timid by comparison.

In past weeks the UWSP Campus Police Unit has been increasing its presence on the campus, and in every case, the order of the day has been peace and order. A month ago, a nighttime disturbance in the Ramada Inn put the campus on high alert, and the police were on the scene in no time. They worked tirelessly to restore order, and the campus was back to normal within an hour.

The police have made it clear that their priority is to ensure the safety of all students, and they have been successful in doing so. In recent weeks, the campus has been quiet and peaceful, with no incidents of note.

We can all be proud of the work that the police are doing, and we should continue to support them in their efforts to keep our campus safe and secure.

Clampett said that during World War II, Bugs Bunny was a symbol of America's resistance to Hitler and the fascist powers — symbolized by Elmer Fudd. "Psychologists found that the public subconsciously identified the stupid little man with the gun and his counterparts with Hitler, and strongly identified the rabbit — unarmored except for his wits and will to win — with themselves. They further advised that justification was already established and the sooner and more often that the audience's alter-ego (Bugs) could get back at the Hitler symbol, the greater the therapy," he explained.

Clampett said that when he invented Tweety Pie, he was satirizing his own baby pictures. He's happy that "Tweety Pie" is Warner Brothers' first Oscar-winning character. "I'm mighty proud of my little guy," he said.

Clampett eventually left Warner Brothers' to go on his own. He designed the first Mickey Mouse doll for Disney, and eventually began to make puppets, including Cecil the Serpent, who received the true mark of success in Hollywood...his caricature on the wall of the Brown Derby.

SGA election April 7 and 8
Candidates seek more visible Senate

By John Slein
UWSP student body presidential candidate Jack Buswell and his running mate Ed Karshna, who are seeking their positions unopposed in this week's election, are nevertheless campaigning—on a platform which includes more student involvement and increased visibility of the Senate.

"I'd like to be more visible next year," Buswell told the Pointer. Among his proposals to accomplish this are more contact with student organizations through workshops for providing them with funding ideas and suggestions on preparing their budgets; and more use of information booths and handouts in the UC concourse. In addition, there will be an information booth at registration, "so that students can be aware of us right off the bat," Buswell said.

The non-visibility of the Senate, its members generally feel, reflects student apathy more so than the body maintaining a low profile. Vice presidential candidate Ed Karshna suggested that this lack of concern is necessarily accompanied by a lack of awareness of the Senate. "People see the SGA logo and they think its for the food service or something," he said.

"What we need is a lot more feedback," added Karshna. "We can have more influence if we have more students behind us. Our recommendations would carry more weight."

"I'd like to be more visible next year," Buswell told the Pointer. Among his proposals to accomplish this are more contact with student organizations through workshops for providing them with funding ideas and suggestions on preparing their budgets; and more use of information booths and handouts in the UC concourse. In addition, there will be an information booth at registration, "so that students can be aware of us right off the bat," Buswell said.

The non-visibility of the Senate, its members generally feel, reflects student apathy more so than the body maintaining a low profile. Vice presidential candidate Ed Karshna suggested that this lack of concern is necessarily accompanied by a lack of awareness of the Senate. "People see the SGA logo and they think its for the food service or something," he said.

"What we need is a lot more feedback," added Karshna. "We can have more influence if we have more students behind us. Our recommendations would carry more weight."

Making recommendations to decision-making officials on campus is one of the main functions of the Student Senate. Another main function of the Senate—perhaps the most notorious because it directly affects many students—is the allocation of funds to student groups. The Senate performs this in a very simple way: SPBAC, a small group resembling a subcommittee of the Senate but with several at-large student members, hears a request for funds from a student group. After SPBAC deliberates over the request, it arrives at an amount and recommends this to the Senate, which must vote to approve the request. With few exceptions, the Senate approves the SPBAC recommendation.

Buswell plans to move the main SPBAC hearings, when the request of virtually every student group is heard, from November to sometime in the spring. This, he said, will give the Senate more time to formulate its decisions. Budget proceedings this year were said Buswell of last November's budget proceedings, "At times I felt the decisions may have been hurried."

The Candidates
Buswell and Karshna will both be seniors next year, and are both political science majors. Buswell, a pre-law student, is currently Executive Director of the Student Senate. He is a former UWSP basketball player and a native of Sparta, WI. Karshna, presently a senator, formerly served as sports director of 90 FM and currently works as a broadcaster for WSPT and for campus TV. He is from Hartland, WI.

Both say they are running for the experience. Commented Buswell, "I like working with people and student government. I'm interested in political issues and in getting more of a dose of campus politics."

"I'm the type of leader that likes to take a stand. I don't think I can be impartial too often. I like to have my views heard before the senators make up their minds."

Issue Stands
Buswell and Karshna have this to say about some of the current issues confronting the Senate:
- The Tenant Association will be expanded next year.
- More people will be involved, according to Karshna.
- SPBAC's funding recommendations will be subject to closer scrutiny by the Senate. There will be more involvement by the senators in the committee's decisions and policy guidelines.
- Arrest power for campus security officers will be opposed by Buswell and Karshna until further study on the matter is completed.

The candidates oppose any action on the Blue Jean Day controversy should it arise again beyond normal questioning of the GPU about its budgeting of programs.
- UWSP will continue to participate in United Council lobbying. Buswell said that this allows student governments to get together and discuss problems, and that it gives the Senate access to information from Madison not otherwise available.

Wisconsin residents lack confidence in justice system

By John Stein

What are the attitudes of Wisconsin residents concerning crime? If theirs are similar to the attitudes of residents of the southeastern part of the state, then Wisconsin gives its police a better evaluation than judges or prosecutors do in job performance; its citizens do not believe in reporting crime as much as 40 percent of the time; and they feel that more police patrolling and investigation and less judicial leniency are needed to handle crime. These are among the findings of a recent survey of 1,100 residents of southeastern Wisconsin conducted by John Kozlowski, Samuel J. Pernacciaro, and David Wegge and presented last week at UWS as part of the Conference on the Small City and Regional Community.

Residents of the survey indicate, feel that there should be more policemen, that they should be better paid, and that they should spend less time on traffic control and more on patrol and investigation, to seek out, the authors suggest, "real criminals."

"Public perception of the police role is that of primarily preventing crime and secondarily catching criminals," the survey report stated.

Regarding job performance of officials of Wisconsin's judicial system, about 88 percent of the respondents gave police a favorable rating, while judges and prosecutors were favorably perceived by only about 51 and 40 percent of the respondents, respectively. Other data from the survey indicate, according to the report, "a consensus that both judges and prosecutors are far too lenient with criminals."

The report gives four of what the survey showed to be the most common reasons for citizens failing to report crime: 1) they felt the matter was a private, not a criminal, one. 2) they thought police couldn't do anything. 3) they didn't want to bother the police with the matter. 4) they were not sure the offenders would be caught.

The report also concluded that there is a general lack of confidence on the public's part in the criminal justice system of Wisconsin.

Survey of Victims

The researchers also surveyed 380 crime victims who resided in southeastern Wisconsin, to determine the efficacy of victim assistance programs. 279 of those victims surveyed were not served, while 101 were.

Victims of crime, the researchers concluded, need special assistance. In addition, the survey indicated that "victims are concerned with information on the progress of their cases."

Existing programs to aid victims "appear to foster a belief in the efficacy of the criminal justice system," the report stated. Those programs serving victims in Waukesha and Kenosha, it stated, "have been well received by victims of a crime who were aware of its existence." The report added that these programs needed to be highly visible in order to be used by victims.

Small Cities: boom, bust, and maintenance

By Robert J. Elweck

"Small cities carry seeds of deception rather than fruits of victory, and the ultimate success of our cities lies in maintenance, not abandonment."

William Burch, Yale professor and featured speaker for the Small Cities Conference held here March 26 and 27, had that and much more to say about the urban areas in which most people live.

Dwelling on the typical chronology of cities, Burch made it clear to the audience of about 175 that small is not necessarily better, and our big cities can and should be revitalized.

The Small Cities Conference included discussions reflecting the problems of urban life, while seeing the rise of the small city. In an attempt to forecast the future, Burch shared his view on what urbanites should work for.

First, addressing the problem of defining the small city, he said, "Is it where there are no buildings over two stories, or where there are no minority problems? I don't know. The appeal of smallness has been developed by the romanticism of 19th century humanists and the notion of establishment by agrarian pioneers.

Modern concepts of the small city are being promoted by "realtor rhetoric," as Burch called it, and the Rancho Vistas across the country will need sewers in ten years, also. He warned that small cities can be crushed just as easily as large cities, and the reality of it all is that "Main Street is a place that we all like to be until we are there."

Burch reminded us that we have been on a four hundred year boom, but modern technology is ending as a frontier. "Carboniferous capitalism is ending," he said. Flint, Michigan is a prime example of what is a modern boom town. The automobile built the city, quadrupling its population in a few decades. Now, with fast but obvious changes, its unemployment of 15.3 percent is the highest in the nation. Flint, not too long ago, was a small city with a bright future. Nothing is safe now."

Addressing the present move by people and industry to the Sunbelt as a means to lessen the demand on energy, Burch saw this migration as no solution. "The way out of our problems is not to run away from them and leave the refuse for somebody else to live in."

Our government leaders can provide guidance but apparently the present Administration is not the solution.

"We are now beginning four years of the gladhanders, who plan to bring us the cowboy economy of the 1860's, the stock market of the 1920's, the Fireside chats of the 1930's, the self-indulgence of the 1950's, and the War of the 1960's."

The Administration must be concerned with the northern cities as much as they are concerned with Palm Springs. "Northern cities have something else besides gray skies, cold, and lousy golf courses." Burch considers the tight, compact northern cities crucial to our survival. The water pipes are there and the sewers are in place. "The South Bronx must be the better idea in our future. It is a place bombed out, waiting for flowerpots. Perhaps the problem is that we are trying to make our northeast cities what they are no longer — they have become cultural centers, not industrial centers."

The opportunity for a small city is to build a community with a holistic use of natural resources. We should challenge ourselves to adapt the concept of the American Indians — to waste not, want not. The possibilities are available, from utilizing the energy produced by decomposing wastes to community recycling. Everything depends on the efforts of the people, though.

"Now, there is easy acceptance of reductions in public arts funding, welfare, and library sciences and most everything else. (But) humans are as other animals, and are different, too. We humans have moved to the associated endeavors of art, religion, learning, and literature. This is what defines us as human. These must be preserved."

"A city is a contrast of craziness and aspirations, of old and new. A city without these qualities, a sense of play, a link with nature, is indeed impoverished."

William Burch's visit to UWSP also involved other talks to Natural Resources classes. Depending on the class, he made presentations drawing on his teachings as professor of Social Ecology, Forestry and Environmental Studies at Yale University.

"What exciting and adventurous way could I find to spend my 1981 spring break?" This question bothered me ever since last year’s Uklay vacation ended with nothing more to show for it than being able to recall an entire week’s worth of “Leave it to Beaver” and an added inch or two around the middle from Mom’s home-cooked meals.

Well, last February was... one of my roommates approached me with the idea of doing some backpacking in the Smoky Mountains, my question was answered. Not ever being able to come up with enough money to head far south to get a good sunburn, this sounded like a reasonable alternative. Of course I had never been backpacking before, but even a few backyard camp-outs when I was in the fourth grade seemed like enough experience to me.

When that long awaited Friday the 13th arrived, all that had to be done was to breeze through a calculus test and then hit the road. After a pre-journey delay of trying to get the truck to run and stay running, we were on our way. After what seemed like days already, we arrived in Gatlinburg, Tennessee. We feasted at the local Big Boy, as we all knew this would be our last nutritious meal before we would be able to return to civilization.

A ranger greeted us at the Cataloochee Ranger Station and wished us an enjoyable trip. We were finally hiking!

The first day’s hike was cut down to only, two miles because of the little delays along the way, but when camp was finally made, we all marveled at the new surroundings and pondered what the week had to store for us. After being joined by eight white-tailed deer while we ate our first meal, darkness arrived and we all hit the sack.

Expecting warm days and mild nights, I had not packed enough warm clothing.

By Tom Woodside

It was Friday afternoon and the 20 hour ride to the Colorado Rockies was entirely fear and loathing. No doubt about it, two empty cases of Coors beer, a pile of sandwich wrappers and empty styrofoam coffee cups scattered about the car signified a successful road trip.

No tickets, no accidents, just miles and miles of interstate 80, and of course, gollons of Coors finally brought us into the paradise of Estes Park, Colorado (a beautiful national park located in north central Colorado).

Four of us, destined to pack the park back country and set camp before darkness, found our way to the park’s main ranger station to register for our trip.

Upon pulling into the ranger station’s parking lot, we talked of how refreshing it was to get away from Stevens Point. Ironically, as we entered the building, we were greeted by four female rangers, all of whom recently graduated from UWSP. Small world, isn’t it?

After that episode, we expected the unexpected, as was the case that evening. The two mile hike to our first campsite seemed like it especially when hiking by moonlight. Lesson number one: never believe rangers who talk fast.

Being the experienced hikers that we are, setting camp in the darkness was a snap and so was the weather, because the Rocky Mountain evenings can be very cruel.

The first night of any camping trip is the most challenging and that night was no exception. Half frozen, we awoke on Saturday morning and thawed ourselves over hot tea, scrambled eggs, and fresh, sunny Colorado weather.

The day’s hike was demanding, as we hiked 1,500 feet. On first sight it was breathtaking. A snow covered, frozen lake, surrounded by immense mountains covered with Ponderosa pines and glistening snow-capped Buena Vista captured our sight, creating a feeling of “Rocky Mountain high,” almost as if the mountains cast a spell on us.

We agreed to camp for two nights at Fern Lake because it provided the tranquility we so desperately needed. Afterwards at the lake consisted of sun bathing, soaking up the 80 degree weather, drinking cold Coors, and of course building snowmen. (Daytona, eat your heart out!)

Yeah, we all agreed we had finally found “the good life,” and good it was. However, in our amazement, the tranquil retreat was soon to be interrupted on Sunday afternoon.

While sun bathing on the lake, pondering various philosophies, we heard a yell from the top of the hill. Could it be an old mountaineer? Or maybe Bigfoot? No, it was another hiker, followed by 12 deer, and then another from UWSP: “Could this be a curse?”, we thought.

Actually, the group was a Physical Education class led by Pat Powers of that very way to earn a Phy. Ed. credit.)

Our first reaction to the group was negative—they had intruded on our “paradise.” However, upon further evaluation, we decided their presence would be fun. Of course, the whiskeys that some of the hikers had packed added to our acceptance of the group.

That sunny Sunday afternoon was full of surprises. Besides having 13 people from UWSP camping next to us, three more strangers invaded our camp—two women and one man, all on a day hike. By talking to them, we learned that one of the women was from New Jersey. We assumed she wasn’t from Colorado by her soaked, frozen tennis shoes. Smart hiking, eh? The man wasn’t much better off because he wore suede “earth” shoes, and he was from Denver! After that, we questioned the mentality of native Coloradans.

The day’s bizarre events created a sense of comfort among us as we snuggled into our warm sleeping bags to battle off the cold mountain night. Fourteen hours later, we would arise and descend the mountain looking for new adventures, and adventures they were.

Hiking down the mountain was a cinch because it required one hour compared to the three hours it took to hike up. Once down, we took a two-day breather and camped at Longs Peak, a beautiful national park campground. Outside of Smokies from p. 13 including a warm sleeping bag, so I froze the first night. Little did I know that I would freeze over and over again until I didn't once again return to a nice warm bed. As we hiked the following day, the scenery was beautiful and the weather was sunny but cool. That night we were greeted by a big cloud that dumped about four inches of fresh snow on everything.

As it turned out, the mountaintops all had snow waiting for us, and only by hiking down into the valleys could we find warmer temperatures and dry ground. However, five of our six campsites were all up on the mountaintops, so the majority of our backpacking trip involved gaining experience in winter camping, including learning how to hover over a campfire for hours on end trying to stay warm.

As I look back at it now, the solitude was great. This again challenge of facing nature, one on one, with nothing more than the clothing on my back, a bland assortment of food, a tent and a sleeping bag, gave me a different perspective on how we all take the modern conveniences of home for granted.

Colorado from p. 13 and better mountains, thus we registered to hike the Wild Basin area—a dynamite area in the southeast corner of the state. Remembering the information the ranger gave us regarding the trail conditions for our first hike, we used caution in approaching the Basin area trailhead, and rightly so because the road to our destination was covered with over three feet of snow. No dice. We decided not to hike that one, although our ranger friends said the trail was open. Ha!

We then proceeded to find a lower elevation to hike because there would be less snow. According to our map, a trail started near the Wild Basin area at Sandbeach Lake. Anxious for the hike we buckled on our packs and trudged into the forest in search of the trailhead.

After 20 minutes and no sign of the trail, we decided our map was a misprint. After all, four collegians couldn't find the trail, so it was an obvious misprint.

Luckily, we were in a huge national forest so we spent our last night camping there. Let's see, the tents were up, the sleeping bags were airing, and oh yes, our hammock was finally put to use. It was snowing and four crazy students put up a hammock. Well, it seemed like summer. That evening we had a smorgasbord and ate the rest of our freeze-dried dinners. Yummy, tasty stuff!

We sacked out early because Thursday's plans called for a road trip to Boulder, then Denver. As the day dawned, we donned our frozen boots and hiked to the car. Boulder, watch out! Next thing we knew, we were walking in a tavern called "The Dark Horse." That bar was incredible. It consisted of two floors with antiques suspended from the ceilings and the walls were covered with enlarged magazine photos, from Frank Zappa to W.C. Fields. Definitely an interesting place.

Finally, we headed for Denver, and found the city very hospitable. Our stay included a trip to the famous tavern, "University of What?" To our surprise, a band was playing that night. However, no one showed up to watch them, and at $2.00 cover charge, we couldn't afford to stay. Adios amigos! A good night's sleep in a warm house did wonders. Refreshed, we headed back to wonderful Stevens Point: sunburned, broke, but full of great stories.

Rendezvous '81

The fur traders of the past gathered every year to socialize, exchange stories, and speak of their adventures of the year that had passed beneath their canoes and over the portages. These gatherings were called Rendezvous.

On March 27, Rendezvous '81 took place at the UWSP College of Natural Resources held their banquet to gather students and faculty along with guests that included the Secretary of the DNR, paper company executives, U.S. Forest Service people and many more.

The event began with an art show and social hour at 5:30. After the exhibit entitled the "Natural World and Art" a dinner was served in the Program-Banquet Room.

Chancellor Philip Marshall gave a welcome speech praising the CNR, and the students in the various majors of the college.

Vice Trainer Daniel Trainer conducted the award program that followed the dinner. Many students were honored for their academic achievements and involvements in the many university organizations and activities.

Next week a list of award winners will be given.

Fire Training

By Steve Schunke

"Fight fire with training. The philosophy was the motivation for the fire fighting training session held March 18 on the UWSP campus. The session sponsored and organized by E.A. C., and the Student Chapter of the Society of American Foresters under the leadership of Ken Machne, president.

Those involved were essentially CNR majors who were members of S.A.F. All told, 209 people comprise the UWSP crew.

The Department of Natural Resources, who performed the training, has several reasons to want a UWSP crew trained for fire fighting. They have found that trained people can do the work of 100 untrained firefighters.

Although all DNR personnel are potential fire fighters, interdepartmental movement of personnel is difficult. The UWSP crew is mobile and deployable in the state to fight forest fire potential this year.

The S.A.F.'s reasons to organize and get a crew trained share the DNR's reasons and go a few steps further. Experience on the actual employment conditions offer field experience. The UWSP crew action is a service to the community and state as it fulfills a demand for fire protection (i.e. Minong, Ernie Swift camp training and fire call of last spring).

People who participated are looked upon favorably by potential employers for their efforts.

This session is a trial program, if such trained crews work well it may set a national precedent. Also the DNR and the university stand to gain bettered relations with the public.

To The Pointer:

In the last issue of your paper a letter from Sol Sepsenwol was published. In his letter, Dr. Sepsenwol made various statements in an attempt to justify his argument in opposition to Campus Security's request for approval to carry arms on campus.

As a Security officer, actively involved in the arrest power debate and knowledgeable with all due respects for Dr. Sepsenwol's opinions, I would like to address some of the misconceptions he seems to have:

1. Dr. Sepsenwol stated that Campus Security lacks consideration for students and faculty, and has a generally antagonistic relationship with students.

In this regard, I feel that Security's presence is a positive thing for the student body. Security serves as a deterrent to crime and an aid to the student body.

2. Dr. Sepsenwol questioned the training Security personnel receive as compared to city police.

Campus Security officers receive 240 hours of Basic Police Recruit Training that not only city police receive, but almost every law enforcement officer in the state go through. In addition to this, we receive ongoing training through training films and written correspondence from the Department of Justice. All of us are also strongly encouraged to continue education in the law enforcement field.

I am personally working towards my Associates Degree in Police Science.

Dr. Sepsenwol stated that Campus Security's request for arrest powers is clearly out of line with its responsibilities. Campus Security's main and foremost responsibilities are the protection of persons and property. To deny us the legal authority to help us better meet these responsibilities is to say that this university puts a lesser value on the protection of its personnel and property as compared to almost every other campus in the country where they allow their officers the powers of arrest.

In closing I would like to say that even though I did not agree with Dr. Sepsenwol, I thank him for giving me the opportunity to let his feelings be known.

Respectfully,
Paul F. Kaczmarek

Siegel Sets Crowds Stomping

By Jeff Dabel
Corky Siegel returned to the UWS campus last Friday night, providing the near-capacity audience of rhythm and blues fans in Allen Center with a concert they won’t soon forget. The Corky Siegel Band topped off an eventful evening filled with good fun and drink with a two-hour performance that left the crowd stomping and clapping for more. Hats off to the Contemporary Entertainment people for bringing such a quality performance to our campus.

Snoppek, a Milwaukee-based band, started off the evening at 8 p.m. with several cuts off their newly released album, First Band on the Moon. Led by keyboardist Sigmund Snoppek, Snoppek is by no means a strangers to the Milwaukee area. His incredible range and enthusiasm proved that as he performed solo after solo, the audience went to the moon.

The next group to perform was the Larry Stevens Point for the disease, Greeks. The marathon will go to the Muscular Dystrophy Association, an “alliance between concerned citizens and scientists aimed at conquering neuromuscular diseases which affect thousands of Americans.” As of yet there is no cure for Muscular Dystrophy and its cause isn’t even fully understood. Medical treatment is limited to relieving symptoms of the disease.

MDA’s programs are funded almost entirely by private contributions and such organized activities as the marathon. This money, in turn, is used to support MDA’s worldwide research program, a nationwide program of medical services to help patients and their families, a network of free clinics, a summer camping program for the afflicted, and education programs for both professionals and the general public.

On April 3 and 4, a dance marathon will be held in Allen Center Upper for the song with the winning team crowned and organized by the campus Greeks.

The marathon will begin Friday at 8 p.m. and carry through nonstop until Saturday’s final dance at 10 p.m. In between, dancers will have the opportunity to get down for as many hours as their bodies will allow. The kick off band will be Entropy and spectators are welcome to come, view, and listen.

Each participating couple (male and female) must register and pay a $10 entrance fee in advance. The fee is applied to their total donation figure. The couples also are encouraged to solicit donations from friends and relatives, pledges of a certain amount for each hour danced. This serves as an incentive to stay up on one’s feet.

Couples dance for four hours with a 30 minute break and can’t leave the dance floor except during rest periods. All participants must also take part in all other planned activities, whether they be outrageous contests, bizarre dances, or merely living off the crowd's energy.

Shakespeare's Tempest: A Supernatural FROLIC

By Mike Daehn

Some scholars speculate in light bemusement, that were Shakespeare alive and writing today, his most musical comedy, market-place would be willing to take a chance on his plays. For the genre alone can translate such diverse elements as a well-conceived and written score, farcical buffonery, a serious message about society into a total product that arouses mass appeal. Certainly all three elements were essential to the success of such powerhouses as West Side Story, Cabaret, and Evita. Yet what really distinguishes a musical as an artistic entity is its music. Many a miserable script has had its salvos scraped out of the fire by a memorable score.

With this in mind, the National Players Touring Company brought its production of Shakespeare's fantasy masterpiece The Tempest into the Sentry Theater last Friday evening. Working with Shakespearean comic-fantasy, the troupe already had a strong base for the requisite quality writing, broad humor, and sensitive themes. The Bard's notoriety among the general public for playing dull and lifeless (although I swear it isn't so), they borrowed from the present, adding music, song, and dance. These supplements to the play were intended to generate both greater audience interest and empathy. Apparently, they succeeded. The entire cast moved dancelike through their roles, the fairies caught up in a swirling undercurrent of ballet and modern steps. The musical accompaniment was crisp and melodic, the stage as a harmonic interlude juxtaposed on various soliloquies, was quite effective in establishing patterns of emotion. Although they were not memorable tunes, one doubts they were intended to be. So despite the absence of woodwinds and the changes in dance styles, the Elizabethan playwright percussion was not missed. Performers have been displeased at the kinds of musical garnishment his short reign inspired.

On the other hand, he might have been a bit disappointed with the quality of singing in The Tempest. Perhaps because of insufficient warmups, certainly because of many performers' vocal ranges, the first act saw all too many cases of voices cracking or retreating into falsetto wisps. The cast seemed much more in command during the second act numbers. The only major exception to this choral criticism was found in the character of Prospero, who was strong in his deep, resonant singing as he was in every other aspect of his performance.

The play takes place on an island where the noble sorcery Prospero has been stranded for many years with his beautiful daughter Mira. Here in the magician's service are the man-animal Caliban and the mischievous spirit Ariel. During the course of the show, Prospero mysteriously attracts his former foes and after a short courtship, marries him. A bit unrealistic obviously, but a jovial, tidy ending nonetheless.

Friday's performance of The Tempest was very well-received, and for good reason - the way it was acted. Looking up and down the program, there wasn't one character who didn't contribute handily to the ensemble. Each performer had a solid idea of where his role was to go and pushed it to that point, no small feat for young actors attempting Shakespeare. The audience's initial fears about comprehending the language were quickly set aside, for each stage gesture, line, and glance clarified exactly what the soothed lift of the verse meant today.

Particularly impressive in this cast of standouts was a handful of actors, Prospero (Rick Inguanti) foremost among them. Not only does Inguanti make us delight in the ability of his tongue but in that of his mind as well. He takes an all-powerful, God-like character who's capable of horrible deeds and makes us approach him as noble, wise, and fair. The actor also deserves credit for his masterful mesh of the real and supernatural worlds; his subtle handling of both provides a credible foundation for the rest of the play.

The audience favorites were the stock comic buffoons, played hysterically to the hill, by Michael McLeaster as Trinculo and David Siders as Stephano. This drunken duo of jester and butler used ale, greed, and "Three Stooges" slapstick to incite even the most hard-nosed misanthropes to raucous laughter. Another extremely popular character was Gonzalo, the white sheep of the court, brought caustically to life by Roger Riggle. His curious stutter gait had audience members twittering over his prospects of surviving the play without a fall.

Technically, the show was also of high quality. The island was represented fragmentarily by several impressionistic units wearing a blue-grained velour. All three units, and particularly the sorcerer's abode, comprised of an effective network of eerie lines, curves, and points that made comparison with Gorey's Dracula styles. The costuming was lavish or simple as the script dictated; Prospero's magic gown was magnetic in its design. The lighting designer made numerous pictures with color, and the stage as a result was iridescent.

Artistically and technically, the show was a success. For many Stevens Point folk who may have come to the theater last Friday expecting the worst, this means that the word "Shakespeare" will no longer be linked with having to "think too much."

Brewers Hope New Pitching Strength Brings Pennant

By Joe Vanden Plas

Certain baseball experts were blinded when they predicted the Milwaukee Brewers to finish on top of the American League’s Eastern Division before the 1979 and 1980 seasons. The experts were blinded by Milwaukee’s awesome hitting. The Brewers, baseball’s modern day version of Murderer’s Row, pennant race – won switch hitters in baseball. The Brewers lost 23 games where Green was the key to the deal because of his league ability.

Brewers to Gossage of the Yankees . potential to win obvious last season when the league outfielder David Sandoval was blinded when they blazed all over the majors; and two minor leaguers in La Pointe and Green. Green was the key to the deal because of his league ability.

But the experts were wrong. The Brewers were living proof that good hitting is not enough. Scouting reports predicted the Milwaukee offensive years and never made a deal that would put them in their first pennant race. Milwaukee learned its lesson – pennants are won with pitching. The Brewers over the past decade, had led the majors in several Sinunons.

1978 and the closest they had come close. What the Brewers got was a version of Murderer’s Row, pennant race . Milwaukee over the winter meetings in Dallas, the Brewers made a deal that couldn’t put them in their first pennant race. Milwaukee acquired veteran reliever Rollie Fingers, starter Pete Vukovich and switch-hitting catcher Ted Simmons from St. Louis for out-fielder Sixto Lezcano, pitchers Larry Sorenson and David La Pointe, and promising minor league outfielder David Green.

The Brewers gave up Lezcano, a talented commodity coming off a sub-par year; Sorenson, a right-handed hurler who won 45 games during his first three years in the majors; and two minor leaguers in La Pointe and Green. Green was the key to the deal because of his potential. Scouts have compared him to the late Roberto Clemente. The Brewers were willing to part with Green, however, because he represents potential, not proven major league ability.

Milwaukee is hoping the 34-year-old Fingers can cut its late-inning losses in half. Fingers relies less on the hard stuff at this stage in his career, but because of his size (6-foot-4, 195) and sharp breaking pitch, he’s still difficult to hit. Fingers figures to see plenty of action this season. Milwaukee is counting on the return of Goose starting pitcher who has the potential, not with pitching. The Brewers over the past decade, had led the majors in several Sinunons.

He’s not saying that. But he prefers to be the closer. Sal Maglie was able to do that. But he prefers to be the closer. Sal Maglie was able to do that. But he prefers to be the closer. Sal Maglie was able to do that. But he prefers to be the closer. Sal Maglie was able to do that. But he prefers to be the closer. Sal Maglie was able to do that.

The man to watch in the starting rotation is Moose Haas (16-15, 3.10). In 1980, late-inning losses in his potential and Rodgers believes he will be one of the outstanding pitchers in baseball this season. Another right-hander, Jim Slaton, returns after injuring his rotator cuff. Slaton worked hard over the winter and is showing no ill effects from the injury. In fact, he’s throwing as well as ever in spring training.

Mike Caldwell (13-11, 4.03) and Bob McClure (5-6, 3.60) were supposed to be the lefthanders in the rotation. But McClure has developed tendinitis in his throwing arm and will begin the season on the disabled list. Randy Lerch, acquired from the Phillies for Dick Davis, is expected to perform in the pen in long relief. Injuries plagued Lerch in 1980 and his record, 4-14, showed that. But he has looked good in spring training and has a winning career record despite his 1980 mark.

Rodgers doesn’t expect Caldwell to return to the form he had in 1978 but believes Caldwell can still be a valuable asset now that Milwaukee has Fingers. "Caldwell used to be more of a complete game pitcher," explains Rodgers. "Maybe he’ll regain that form, but right now I’d say he’s a good seven-inning pitcher. That’s what we look for in him and usually get."

One area the Brewers will not have to worry about, of course, is hitting. Cecil Cooper (25 HR’s, 122 RBI’s, 352 BA) leads a team of bombers that will probably hit over 200 home runs and score over 850 runs. Also returning are Ben Oglivie (41, 118, .304), Gorman Thomas (38, 105, .239), Don Money (17, 46, .356), Robin Yount (23, 87, .293), Paul Molitor (9, 37, .304), and Jim Gantner (4, 40, .282).

The newcomers are Simmons (21, 96, .353) and Roy Howell (10, 57, .389). Larry Hise, in a sense, is a newcomer as well. Almost a forgotten man, Hise is expected to be the Brewer DH. After sitting out nearly two full seasons, Hise is anxious to return and the Brewers are grateful to have him back in the line-up. “Any contribution that Larry Hise makes will be a plus,” says Rodgers. A proud individual, Hise will find it difficult to just DH, but he will add more power to the Brewers nevertheless.

There will be a few changes in the Brewer defensive look in 1981. Simmons will become the regular catcher. Expect either Charlie Moore or Buck Martinez to be traded or released in the near future. Young Ned Yost has impressed the brass to the point where he may be Simmons’ back-up when the season starts.

Rollie Fingers: The Brewers hope he cuts their late inning hopes in half

Moose Haas: Can he become the Brewers’ stopper?

College students throughout the Midwest are invited to participate in "The Lake Race" to be held in Clear Lake, Iowa, on June 6. "The Lake Race" is a group of four different races to be held on the same day along the shores of Clear Lake. The races include a half-marathon run (13.1 miles), a ten-kilometer run, a one-mile fun run, and a bicycle race around the lake (approximately 14 miles). The event is being billed as a weekend of fun and fitness to kick off the summer. Plans are being made to accommodate 1,000 participants.

The event is sponsored by the Clear Lake Area Chamber of Commerce with the cooperation of the City of Clear Lake. Chamber Executive Dave Voss said, "We expect the event will draw many young people to Clear Lake for the weekend and we're happy to have them coming here to start their summer. While the races will be the featured activity of the weekend, we expect many people will come just to watch and enjoy the lake by swimming, skiing, sailing, and the like. For years, Clear Lake has been the traditional watering hole for young people to start their summer."

The committee organizing the event announced the entry fee will include participation in the race, refreshments along the courses, a noon pork luncheon, and a souvenir T-shirt.

Persons interested in participating should write "The Lake Race," P.O. Box 188 Clear Lake, Iowa, 50428, or pick up information available at college physical education departments.

field after manning second base for three years. The former University of Minnesota standout looks like a natural for the position and has adjusted well to it thus far. Former Brewer Manager George Bamberger has compared Molitor to one of the all-time greats of the position. "I think Molitor could be another Paul Blair," observes Bamberger. "And Paul Blair was about the best center fielder I've ever seen."

Gorman Thomas will move to right field, a position he is better suited for. Thomas' lack of speed was a liability in center. In right he will not have to cover as much ground and his strong throwing arm will make Brewer fans forget about Lecuano's.

Jim Gantner will become the regular second baseman. The Eden, Wisconsin native is a slick fielder who can turn the double play as well as anyone. However, he doesn't have the range Molitor had — yet. Gantner has also proven he is an adequate hitter and will improve at the plate now that he has been given a starting job.

If Don Money stays healthy, he should be the regular third baseman. Roy Howell is a good hitter but a poor glove man. Howell is probably a candidate for part-time DH duty as well as being Money's back-up. Sal Bando had been expected to retire when Howell signed but is still trying to earn a spot on the roster. Bando's bat is no longer as quick as it used to be but his leadership has been invaluable to the Brewers.

Milwaukee will depend on youth for its depth. Marshall Edwards is a good bet to earn a spot in the outfield. His biggest asset is speed, especially on the base paths. But in order for him to become a better base stealer he must improve his jump. Mark Brouhard (4, 16, 226) and Kevin Bass are the other outfield candidates.

Ed Romero (1, 10, .260) and John Poff will try to earn spots in the infield. Romero, a short stop, played well in his brief stint with the parent club last year and Poff provides Milwaukee with another left-handed first baseman.

ANALYSIS: With the acquisition of Fingers the Brewers have strengthened their most glaring weakness. However, they have question marks which concern their starting pitchers. Milwaukee has no stopper on its staff. Moose Haas may develop into the Brewer stopper, but that's a big if at this point. A dependable starting pitcher who could win 75-80 percent of the time can prevent prolonged losing streaks. Case in point — where would the Phillies have been last year without NL Cy Young Award winner Steve Carlton?

The favorite to win the AL East should be the Baltimore Orioles. The O's have a fine offensive club with the likes of Singleton, Murray, DeCinces and Bumbry. In addition, Baltimore can throw a stopper at you every day with Mike Flannigan, Dennis Martinez, Jim Palmer, Scott Mc Gregor, and 1980 AL Cy Young Award recipient Steve Stone comprising the starting rotation. The Oriole bullpen is second to none with big Tim Stoddard, Tippy Martinez, and Sammy Stewart.

Milwaukee's left-handed pitching may be less than adequate. Mike Caldwell is being hosted by that group. The convention which will be held in La Crosse, March 26-28.
