"It is the enlarging of the human adventure that sports are all about."

— James A. Michener

The Games People Play

Why has The Pointer devoted an issue to sports you ask?

Think about it. Why else do Wisconsinites waste three hours of their Sunday afternoons to watch a team which has made one play-off appearance in 14 years? Watching the Green Bay Packers has become every bit a Sunday ritual as attending church. The same thing happens all over the country every Sunday afternoon in the fall.

Why else have authors such as James Michener written books about the state of sports in this country? What is it about sports that would prompt an author such as Neil D. Isaacs to say professional athletes are the high priced whores of our society, and that franchise owners act as the pimp? Why else have writers such as William Harrison theorized the dreary prospect of "Rollerball" as the sport of the future?

Put simply, values have been placed on sports. It has been said athletic competition is invaluable. It has been said sports builds character in those who participate. Some have drawn analogies between life and the games people play.

When we place such values on sports, have we gone too far? Are we looking beyond what sport has to offer? Maybe so, but for the millions of people who pay their hard earned dollars to commercial entities called Packers, Eagles or, yes, even Pointers, sports are more than just games.

Keeping the University Public

There was a time when the university meant young gentlemen of wealth attending colleges whose majestic ivy-covered brick buildings spoke to the profundity of education. Today, although some of those ivy-covered buildings still stand, the inhabitants of those buildings include women, minority, non-traditional, and low-income students. This change signals one of the most important developments in education in the last century, the creation of the public university.

Any discussion of tuition at bottom comes down to the ideal of the public university. The public university embodies one of the finest ideals upon which the United States was founded, the ideal of equality of opportunity for all. The experience of the last few decades shows that the public university, funded by the public for the public, has the potential of making the ideal of equal opportunity a reality. But, with every increase in tuition, the door to the public university shuts out one more single mother, one more black, one more autoworker's son or daughter who can no longer afford an education. Equality of opportunity becomes a sham and the public university becomes public in name only.

The decade of the 1980's demands that students become more vigilant than ever in safeguarding the public university and all that it symbolizes. Already, students have faced decreased availability of financial aid. Already, students in Wisconsin have experienced a 6 percent increase in university student housing this year along. An additional surcharge for the remaining school year would be the cement for an already disturbing trend of making education available only for the affluent.

The goal must be to preserve the quality of education without denying access to that education. Quality need not, and indeed should not, preclude access. It is this guiding principle which leads United Council, on behalf of students, to fight vigorously for state funding of the University of Wisconsin campuses. Students were victorious in this fight, largely as a result of the efforts of United Council $12 million was restored to the University of Wisconsin's biennial budget for 1981-83.

Students have demonstrated their commitment to preserving both quality of education and access to that education, and United Council will continue these efforts on behalf of students. Now it is time for the administrators of the University of Wisconsin to demonstrate their commitment to quality of education as well as access to that education. A tuition surcharge denies access without guaranteeing quality of education. What is needed is not an increase in tuition, but hard thinking about priorities and long-range planning for the university.

Increasing tuition is perhaps the easiest solution, but also the most ineffective solution in an era such as ours. This era of shrinking financial resources calls more than ever for abandoning superficial solutions and for initiating real solutions to the problem of budget constraints. Now is the time for the university to begin the necessary and difficult work of evaluating and setting priorities for the university. Now is not the time for imposing a surcharge and making students "pay" for budget constraints.

Lou Grant Wouldn't Have Done it That Way

All's not well in the beautiful UW hamlet of Eau Claire.

Elwood Karwand, who chairs the UW-Eau Claire journalism department, has been charged with felony theft after more than $16,000 mysteriously disappeared from student newspaper advertising funds.

The 50-year-old Karwand, faculty advisor to UW-EC's student paper, The Spectator, allegedly diverted $16,667 from the paper's account and put it to his own use. He began his financial finagling in June 1977 and continued through July of this year. If convicted, he faces a maximum 10-year prison sentence and $10,000 fine.

University officials alerted the Eau Claire Police Department to the missing funds on Oct. 26, and detectives then determined the exact figure by contacting merchants who advertised in The Spectator and reviewing their canceled checks. The complaint states that the checks should have been stamped For Deposit Only, and that Karwand regularly cashed them at the Thriftway Store in Eau Claire. The university had never authorized the journalism professor to cash Spectator checks.

Investigators were also shown a letter by Karwand, written to UW-EC administrators, in which the newspaper advisor admitted taking money for five or six years.

Karwand, who has not been advising The Spectator since the probe began, formerly worked for The Associated Press, the Minneapolis Tribune and the St. Paul Dispatch. He has taught at UW-Eau Claire since 1964.

He is scheduled to appear in court sometime this week, and District Attorney Rodney Zemke believes that the final tally of missing funds could exceed the $16,000 figure of the original complaint.

Warning: Democrats Have Determined that the New Surgeon General May Be Hazardous to Your Personal Freedoms

Speaking of the Great American Smokeout, there's a new surgeon general in Washington, and his name is C. Everett Koop.

On Monday, the Senate approved the nomination of the 65-year-old Philadelphia physician by a 68-24 vote. He had formerly served the Reagan administration as deputy assistant for health.

Reagan's choice of Koop, an outspoken opponent of abortions, seems to follow in the tradition of James Watt as environmental protector, Alexander Haig as foreign diplomat, and Ernest Lefevre as guardian of human rights. In addition to his hardline stance against abortions, Koop has been praised (by Utah Senator Orrin Hatch) for his advocacy "for the value of traditional roles for women."

Sorry about that, girls. Where did you ever get these ideas about equality anyway?

When Reagan nominated Koop earlier this year, protests were immediately registered by a number of labor and feminist organizations — and by the American Public Health Association itself (Koop now becomes the nation's No. 1 public health spokesman).

In contrast to Senator Hatch's remarks, Senator Edward Kennedy accused Koop of "insensitivity to issues dealing with women . . . he's the wrong choice for the job."

Say what you will, but it's beginning to sound as if we now have yet another Wolf guarding the Koop.

The Paper Science Chase

A 15-hour videotape production, "Introduction to Pulp and Paper Technology," has been produced at UW-SP.

The educational tapes were written and narrated by Michael Kocurek, chairman of the paper science department, and filmed in color by the telecommunications staff in the Communication Arts Center on campus.

Subjects included in the series are: Introduction and Overview; Wood Properties; Bonding and Fiber Properties; Mechanical Pulp; Chemical Pulp; Bleaching and Pulp Treatment; Secondary Fibers and Chemical Recovery; Beating and Refining; Additives; Paper Machine Wet End Operations; Paper Machine Wet End Operations II; Pressing; Drying; Calendaring and Coating; and Paper Properties and Tests.

Kocurek says this is the first and only videotape course published in the world for the paper industry. Designed to serve the needs of both technical and non-technical personnel, the program makes extensive use of more than 300 micrographs, figures and diagrams, he adds.

Get the Pack Off Your Back

No fair puffing on a cigarette while you read this week's Pointer. Or had you forgotten that today is the Great American Smokeout?

Once a year, the American Cancer Society gently nudges all smokers to abstain for a day and see how the other half lives. The ACS estimates that of the 60 million Americans who smoke, 90 percent say that they'd like to quit. What better time to stop than today — when you can sympathize with millions of others who are also going cold turkey?

The health benefits of quitting — even for one day — are almost immediate, says the ACS. Within the first 12 hours, you'll experience a rapid decline in the carbon monoxide level of your blood. Coughing and shortness of breath symptoms will improve during the first two weeks, and the risk of lung cancer decreases after only one year.

Approximately five million Americans successfully remained "smoked-out" during last year's event, and many of them are still off cigarettes. The best reason for quitting, of course, is that smoking can give your fingers that disgusting yellow tint.

If you still think you can't make it through the day without a "fag" (as they say in England), give the local ACS a call at 344-5588. They'll give you some encouraging tips on how to quit (along with some better reasons than the curse of the yellow fingers) without driving yourself up the wall. Good luck!

Art Show Winners Penciled In

Tom Uttech of Milwaukee received the $500 first place award for his drawing, "Spruce Grove," at the opening reception for "Wisconsin '81," a state-wide art show held annually at UW-SP.

Other awards were given to Bud Wall, Platteville, $200 for "Academy Stables"; Olimpia Ogilvie, Ripon, $100 for "Fiction 5"; Mary Kay Welhouse, Stevens Point, $75 Sherin Bowen Gallery and Frame Shop Award for "Untitled"; and Jon Bailiff, Madison, $50 Delta Dental Plan Award for "Me Mere."

The show, marking its tenth year, was juried by Judith Russi Kirshner, Chicago art critic and professor at the School for the Art Institute, who selected 84 works for the exhibition.

Purchase awards included: "Chair" by Arlene Renken, Stevens Point, purchased by the Art League of Stevens Point; "Skin of the Mystery No. 2" by Cynthia Cukla, Madison, purchased by First Financial Savings and Loan; "Modern Primitive" by Mark Wilson, Eau Claire, purchased by Katz Company, Inc.; "Texture III — Lace and Foil" by Peggy Zalucha, Madison, purchased by Rice Clinic; and "Milkweed" by Mimi Ruff, Wauwatosa, purchased by Sentry Insurance.

The show will continue through Nov. 23 at the Carlssten Gallery and will be shown at the UW-Green Bay, Dec. 1-23.

Hitting Below The Belt

To the Pointer:

David Streicher seems to be suffering from what I call the "Big Penis" theory of action. His remark that, "blatant sexism of certain elements of the 'Take Back the Night' rally might actually help to raise the incidence of rape in this town," attests to this. People (we can assume they're mostly male) who suffer from "Big Penis Syndrome" actually believe they can not stop themselves from assaulting women because they have no control over their penis, (which usually looks quite large and uncontrollable from their viewpoint). When people with "BPS" hear of a community action such as the TBN march they use it as a rationale for the consequences of this disease.

It is evident from his most recent letter to the Pointer that Mr. Streicher suffers from yet another disease, namely homophobia. He says, he's "heard a lot of stories about the possibility that the WRC is little more than a Lesbian indoctrination center." Come, come now, David... who's guilty of, as you say, "smarmy" remarks now? Let's try to legitimize our claims a bit, shall we? Hypocrisy has never been becoming, and it makes your claim of "humanism" ring stale.

Instead of calling for an investigation of the WRC, why not be courageous enough to drop by yourself and offer what you think would be constructive suggestions for future TBN events? Why not observe the persistence and patience of the people who staff the center? You'll likely find someone busy on the phone referring a caller to a number of agencies in the county who can assist them. Someone else may be typing an article for the newsletter, while another person is helping a student locate an article for a paper they're writing.

I am thoroughly outraged that you will not even take as simple an action as that before leveling charges against this organization.

The Student Government, a group one presumes is a voice for a large majority of students on this campus, has cited the Women's Resource Center for its "leadership" in sponsoring the Take Back the Night week. Me thinks you doth protest too much, Mr. Streicher, and I question how in the hell you qualify as a "humanist" when you express such homophobic and narrow-minded beliefs! Using your rationale for "the inherent sexism" of the Women's Resource Center, we would be forced to the same charges leveled against such male service groups as the Jaycees, the Lions Club etc.

I suggest that as a "humanist" (in your eyes only) you begin to work for constructive change in our world and no longer settle for the easier course of false accusations and bigotry.

U.S. Male

To The Editor:

I agree with David Streicher. The Women's Resource Center just doesn't deserve free handouts when they're trying as hard as they can to make as many women as they can hate all men. I'm supposed to pay taxes to support hogwash like the "Take Back the Night" rally? Are UWSP students supposed to pay student fees for that, whether they want to or not?

Streicher made a lot of good points. And what did he get? A couple of angry letters that didn't make any sense. He's right. If Denise Matyka called me what she called him I'd sue her! I just hope that nobody got fooled by what she said into thinking that everybody who doesn't support everything the Feminist extremists want must be anti-women.

I'm not anti-women. I just have enough common sense to know the difference between equality and anti-male radical feminism. And so do a lot of other people. It's about time that the Women's Center realized that there are millions of people in this country who are sick and tired of that baloney!

Student Government just gave the NOW chapter 200 dollars to agitate for the ERA. It doesn't matter whether or not many UWSP students can see through the ERA fraud! It doesn't even matter that NOW isn't even a student organization! What's going on around here?

I think it's about time that everybody realized that there are some really rotten things going on in this country. One of them is how a bunch of kooks and con artists have almost succeeded in making sure that men will never have equal rights! All the time preaching "equality"!

I also agree with David Streicher that these women have been guilty of trying to stir up fear by trying to make women afraid of being raped, as if that wasn't enough of a superstition already. How many UWSP students are actually raped a year? Half a dozen? Out of thousands? Oh, excuse me. I'm just as bad as David Streicher. I'm trying to "trivialize" everything.

Or am I just trying to tell the truth?

Brad Shulwalter

Nuff Said

To the Editor:

The Women's Resource Center is taking another bad rap from the likes of David Streicher that seem bent on remaining misinformed, narrow-minded and unreasonably clamorous. His letters are fine examples of statistical manipulation, poor fact gathering, and indecent trivializing. Why is it that organizations that work towards improving images and conditions continuously get shit on for efforts in purportedly controversial areas of social concern?

Streicher is correct that the WRC is a public service supported (in part) by student fees and tax money. Add an incredible amount of volunteer time, energy, and donations from students and the community. He is badly misinformed in his assertion that the WRC was founded solely to "aid in rape cases." The WRC is a service organization that is chiefly an information and referral agency that daily deals with people—usually women with various concerns that include drug abuse, domestic violence, divorce, emergency shelter, medical emergencies, and sexual abuse—including rape. Yes David, the WRC does assist in rape cases—certainly as much as does the Police Department or Protective Services.

In addition, the WRC offers services in career advisement, support groups, massage, assertiveness training, and finances among other helpful areas. Last week saw over 60 contacts at the Center (20 were male) asking for assistance, referrals and information on other services. And guess what David, they keep very clear records of every contact and referral in case you might want to investigate. Now this sure doesn't seem like bureaucratic fraud to me.

And what, may I ask, is wrong with having an agency that emphasizes support and assistance for an all too often repressed part of our humanity? David, would you deny space for other minority groups trying to raise their self-image and status in society? (Maybe you would). Would you deny that women have gotten, and still too frequently get, an unequal and unjust slice of the pie?

To reply more specifically to a few of Streicher's allegations: Speaking of humanity and inhumanity—what kind of homophobic redneck statement is his implication that the WRC is little more than a Lesbian indoctrination center? Come on, not everything that you read on the bathroom walls at Ella's is believable!

Most reasonably objective people realized immediately that the phrase "turn it (violence) around" refers to ending violence and not, as he implies, to use (violence) against others.

Streicher's insistence on arguing about the numbers of concerned women and men at the rally, as well as his statistical manipulation with the rape rate in Stevens Point, is pure, cold, unemotional (inhuman) trivialization. The points are, 1) that people did show up to support the cause and raise consciousness (we obviously succeeded, note the articles, letters, and radio attention) and 2) any sexual abuse—especially rape is too many. If he really believes in this sport of statistical manipulation as a method of rationalizing public service, well then get rid of the police department, because we only have to worry about being murdered once every 12,000-24,000 years in Stevens Point. I sure would be interested in the World Almanac's definition of rape, and I am equally curious about their lack of estimates for the unreported rapes (considered higher than those reported).

If, as Streicher says, he knows that there are few

American policy, when pressed to define the roots of the problem, will allude to a character flaw in the people of the region which makes them aggressive and violent. Such racist insinuations are akin to the charge of black inferiority as a reason for their "failure to rise from their adversity." In both cases the charge is most often made by the very people who have benefitted from past repression and have played a direct role in maintaining it.

Conditions in El Salvador and other Latin American countries are the direct result of past and present economic exploitation by an elite ruling class in partnership with American corporate beneficiaries, of whom our government has been the agent.

people who would regard Mother Jones magazine as credible, then he must hang around with the crowd that breathes a sigh of relief when the Stevens Point Journal doesn't print many reports of abuse and rape so as not to unduly alarm anybody.

I would like to suggest to David and other misinformed critics of the WRC (or any other service organization) to check out what they are really before leveling any more damaging attacks.

Southern Frights

To the Pointer:

In your schematic assessment of the Reagan foreign policy, you left the impression that we are roviding military aid to the repressive right-wing governments of Central America because they are "threatened by the Nicaraguan buildup." Even though you later point to "social divisions and inequities," the fabrication of a Nicaraguan military threat to the rest of the region could only be another Alexander Haig smokescreen.

Why smokescreen? Because it tries to hide the whole sordid history of U.S. involvement in Latin American affairs and its effects upon the people of that region and because it also attempts to repress an understanding of the reasons for Nicaraguan investment in the military.

Even "social divisions and inequities" are not at the heart of the problems of El Salvador or Guatemala. To point only to those inequities (which you do not specify, but which certainly do exist) still places all the blame on a few political or military tyrants who don't know the meaning of democracy—and gets us off the hook.

It is no accident that defenders of Reagan's Latin arming itself? Perhaps a news report from the November 5 New York Times will give us a clue. It is reported there that administration officials "said that Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has been pressing the Pentagon to examine a series of options for possible military action in El Salvador and against Cuba and Nicaragua."

One might ask why we haven't learned anything from our Vietnam experience, but maybe it isn't a question of learning. Maybe Haig knows exactly whose interests he serves and who benefits and who suffers from our involvement. Maybe it is only the American citizen who needs to learn why our nation is known in the Third World as a friend of dictators rather than a defender of the people.

Nicaragua may be a threat but the threat is hardly military. Rather Nicaragua's very existence may be a threat to those interests who have defended the legitimacy of their economic and political power on the claim that Latin American people aren't ready to have control of their own resources, their own economies, their own destinies.

The question is not which side are they on, but which side are we on.

For those who wish to get more involved in investigating the Latin American situation and in working for the self-determination of the people of that region, there is a newly-formed student group called Committee on Latin America (COLA), which could provide that opportunity. You might check it out.

Sincerely,

Athletics faces budget challenge

by Joe Vanden Plas

UWSP's Intercollegiate Athletic Department, the most highly funded organization on campus, is in danger of losing much of its monetary support from the Student Government Association (SGA) because of recent budget mismanagement.

Funded with $79,985 from SGA this fiscal year, the Athletic Department is currently $62,000 in debt. SGA, in cooperation with the Athletic Department, has set up a four year debt elimination plan to rectify the situation.

According to SGA Budget Director Carolyn Vasquez, the debt elimination plan calls for SGA to provide athletics with additional allocations to meet expenses from fiscal year 1980-81 through fiscal years 1983-84. In return, athletics must cut its budget or raise additional revenue each year by the amount of additional allocations it receives from SGA.

For example, in fiscal year 1980-81, SGA gave athletics an additional $16,000. Athletics had to trim its budget by $16,000, or raise an additional $16,000 in revenues, or utilize a combination of both.

In the current fiscal year, athletics has been allocated an additional $17,000. In fiscal years 1982-83 and 1983-84, athletics will be allocated an additional $14,500 each year. The annual allotments total $62,000.

SGA will be working closely with the Athletic Department to ensure the execution of the plan.

Vasquez meets regularly with Athletic Budget Director Don Amiot to check the progress athletics is making to eliminate the debt. "This is the first good working arrangement between student government and athletics in years," notes Vasquez. "Many times there have been misunderstandings between student government and the athletic department. In the past, student government hasn't asked why the athletic department was having trouble with its budget."

Vasquez says one of the conditions of the plan allows SGA to allocate student monies to athletics on a quarterly basis. At the conclusion of the third quarter of the current fiscal year, athletics must have reduced its expenditures by the required $17,000. If athletics fails to do so, its fourth quarter allotment will be reduced.

Athletics quarterly allotment is just under $20,000. If athletics reduces its expenditures by just $19,000 (instead of the required $17,000), it will receive just $1,000 from SGA in the fourth quarter of this fiscal year. This allocation pattern will be reviewed for fiscal year 1982-83.

Other conditions are as follows: (1) The base allocation SGA is required to give athletics will not change; (2) SGA will not limit athletic fund raising activities; (3) monthly or more frequent reviews will be conducted as deemed necessary by SGA or athletics; (4) all future athletic operations will break even or support the necessary gains to show a profit.

didn't cut back on the expenditures," he explained. "Therefore we had a budget that would not balance."

Athletic revenue generating activities include men's football and basketball in addition to the various sports shows, antique shows, sports camps (clinics), an occasional concert, and special events such as All-Star Wrestling.

With this revenue generating potential in mind, other campus organizations wonder why athletics is not making enough money. Kathryn Jeffers, the Director of the Women's Resource Center, is one such skeptic. "Every organization that is funded by student Amiot said the Athletic Department is taking several steps to comply with the debt elimination plan. "We've looked at all of our expenditures and eliminated some of the things that our coaches have had in the past. We've asked them to cut down on travel when they recruit. We will begin to recruit more by phone."

"It is not just tightening the budget. We've done a better job of projecting our expenditures revenues. To date, we're fairly well on schedule. We are projected to make $290,000 in revenue and we've projected our expenditures to be about the same."

However, there may be a self-supporting, revenue generating sport. "It's going to have to be (revenue generating). We would like to see hockey produce revenue like football and basketball do," Amiot said. "But I don't think it will be self-sustaining now," he admitted.

With all the attention being directed at intercollegiate athletics, many organizations have expressed the belief that too much money is being spent on athletics. Looking at the percentage of the expenditures of groups which SGA allocations pay for, athletics is not being funded too much. SGA's allocation to athletics ($79,985) covers just 26 percent of athletic expenditures ($290,000). That figure is low compared to other public relations organizations such as Arts & Lectures, 73 percent; University Activities Board, 60 percent; Student Experimental Television, 99 percent; and WWSP radio, 79 percent.

Compared to social change organizations, SGA's monetary support in respect to expenditures is also low. The Women's Resource Center receives 78 percent of its total revenue from SGA allocations. The Black Student Coalition receives 92 percent of its total revenue from SGA allocations.

Vasquez says athletics is the highest funded organization because its costs are higher than the costs of other groups. She also notes that if students felt SGA is spending too much on athletics, they should express the attitude to the Student Senate. "The students (Student Senate) are voting on the allocations. If someone feels that way (that too much is spent on athletics), then they are going to have to express that to the Student Senate and the Senate is going to have to act."

In response to those who feel too much is spent on athletics, Amiot says, "Everyone is entitled to their opinion. That is a rap that athletics has always heard and will always hear. It's never going to change."

POINTER POLL

How do you feel? We'd like some student feedback. Simply fill out the form, make whatever comments are appropriate, and remit questionnaire to POINTER, 113 CAC (campus mail), or drop it off in the box on the door of the POINTER Editor's office.

QUESTION 1: Do you feel too much is being spent (from student segregated fees) on intercollegiate athletics?

QUESTION 2: Do you support the mandatory four credits for Physical Education?

The debt elimination plan comes at a time when other campus organizations are becoming highly suspicious about athletic budget problems. "In the long run this (budget problems) would effect student government, athletics, and if something like this kept going it would effect everything in the University system," observes Vasquez. "That's why the problem came to a head last year. It started effecting more areas than just athletics."

The athletic budget is a complex one. With the different sports, the contractual commitments and the overall size of the athletic budget (the athletic budget is $290,000), athletics needs a full time business administrator, Don Amiot. Amiot says the principle reason for the Athletic Department's budget problems is miscalculation. "We project certain expenditures and we project certain revenues. When we didn't make the revenues we government should use their revenue generating capacity to the fullest," remarked Jeffers. "I don't know how they (athletics) can be earning sufficient revenue and end up $62,000 in debt."

Amiot claims athletics has never lost money on a promotion. "When we didn't generate the revenue we anticipated, we just didn't cut back on some expenditures," he repeated.

roadblock for athletics to contend with. The Athletic Department is committed, at least for this fiscal year, to a new and expensive hockey program. SGA allocated an additional $7,800 to athletics in support of the hockey program. But projected expenditures for hockey amount to over $25,000.

Amiot is hoping other programs can support hockey until it becomes a

Ticket Prices Take A Hike

by Lauren Cnare

It looks like inflation has hit even the locker room — all of you loyal basketball and hockey fans will have to dig a little deeper, (twice as far down), in your pockets to cheer your team on to victory this year as ticket prices are increasing from $1.00 to $2.00 a game.

The Athletic Department and Student Government instituted the measure in an effort to decrease the department's deficit from last year. The price increase is one part of a three year recovery program.

Hockey fans will be even further pressed. When you hit the doors of the arena, be prepared to engage in a little athletics of your own as you contend with the 2300 all sports pass holders for one of the 600 seats. Maybe the price increase will help keep the crowd down?

Games and game makers

by Richard Dostator

Last month a former student stopped by to renew acquaintances and to see me specifically about American Humor and Science Fiction, subjects we'd explored together in the "bad old days" of Nixon and Watergate.

Jack, we'll call him, left my office with as puzzled a look as first glances at Jean Shepherd and Harlan Ellison had caused 10 years ago. "You're into sports literature?!! Well, I'll be..."

James Michener says why on page 22 of his Sports in America, "Sports have become a major force in American life. Yet the critical analysis of school sports has been grossly neglected. Universities whose major moral positions have been dictated by sports have not encouraged their faculties to analyze the problems they create."

UWSP is hardly a farm club for professional football, baseball, or basketball as, say, Ohio State, Arizona, or UCLA. We have no scholarship program like UW-Madison's, complete with athletic dorms and special tutors; Quandt and Berg gyms are open to all students and faculty, unlike facilities elsewhere that admit only athletes and media mouthpieces. What UWSP has in common with other institutions is an incredible indifference, ignorance, or just plain head-in-the-sand dismay. Athletic Jacks, and now Jills, come to college to fetch degrees and establish reputations to parlay into careers in sports entertainment. We are all affected.

There is simply so much money (call it what you will: loot, dough, moola, bucks, jack) in sports that if Jack the Jock can be nimble, why he's sure to become rich. That message, Money, more than any other, is what comes through in the literature of sports I've read the past three years. Money, as in

AVERAGE NFL SALARIES, 1978-79 SEASON

Quarterbacks	$102,606
Running backs	66,516
Defensive linemen	66,063
Offensive linemen	60,241
Receivers	59,824
Linebackers	58,061
Defensive backs	54,838
Kickers	48,354
All-Player Average	62,585
source: NFL Management Council

And Money, as in 1978 when "more than one million high school and college students suffered athletic injuries. 111,000 of these injuries were serious or critical in nature." (From a HEW survey) In short, greed makes the sports world go round faster and faster.

And who pays? We all do. And how will life evolve, with America diverting so much of its GNP into sports, while other aspects of our life — national parks, clean air, social security — languish? Will super athletes join the ranks of assassinated presidents and politicians?

David Keith Cohler's Gamemaker suggests that's exactly what's coming on our TV Hit Parade. The novel begins as thousands watch the Yankees' expensive centerfielder leap for a flyball at the fence, and see his head explode BOOM! ala JFK. The next day at Aqueeduct the saddle underneath a millionaire jockey slips and bettors watch in horror as horse hooves pound him into hamburger. And the next day at Forest Hills a rising young tennis star gulps 'gatorade' between sets, only its potassium cyanide!

Three days, three deaths.

And more to come: A boxer gets a birthday present after winning 4.5 million — a fragmentation grenade that maims him for life. The Harlem Globetrotters warm up in Madison Square Garden as an innocent looking box ticks quietly away. The New York Cosmos will run down a mined ramp at the halftime of a soccer game and, WOOSH, the locker room becomes a Viet Nam style field hospital.

Gamemaker isn't science fiction and novelist Cohler hasn't written these 249 scaring pages to qualify as Johnny Carson's replacement. What he has done is turn every mystery, adventure, potboiler cliché inside out to show that "mounting costs of professional sports and squandering of resources on non-essential activities" is devastating America. His cast of characters includes: Ray Derwinski, the psychotic Gamemaker, who intends to blackmail New York City into banning all pro sports events; Mayor Tom Murphy, Mr. Ego Trip himself, in love with all those sports dollars, and ribbon cuttings they generate; and Patti Allen, prostitute and not-so-coincidentally both the Gamemaker and mayor's playmate.

Add to this unsavory but essential triangle two semi-good tough guys — Vick Fletcher, aging, story-hungry reporter, and anti-terrorist detective Sam Knight, he of roving eye for integrating policewomen — and you've got yourself a read, and then some!

Because behind the stereotypes and melodrama Cohler is telling another story, what the Viet Nam war really did to Americans. His "interludes" flash forward mounting death counts and squandered billions in Southeast Asia and place them side by side with imagined 1980 professional sports events. Cohler was in Viet Nam as a TV reporter and has read its books — Fields of Fire, A Rumor of War, Dispatches, Going After Cacciato, and When I Die In the Combat Zone, Box Me Up and Send Me Home. But it takes a while to see he's saying that the millions of dollars paid super athletes to endorse puking beer, polluting cars, and chock-full-of-crap candy bars amount to a kind of Agent Orange. That media distortion of events, especially television's, napalms the viewer's mind as thoroughly as B-52's wasted the countryside. That the corruption-associated with Las Vegas gambling-betting-bribing players, shaving points, perking coaches, recruiters, officials — equals any deal you could swing on the Saigon black market...

If you've read this far, you're probably blinking a bit like Jack the former student, "You gotta be kidding!" I wish I was. Everytime you get to thinking "Life is just a game," pick up a newspaper or turn on the TV news and note how many so-called games waste and maim life. Cohler's fictional Gamemaker tells readers uncomfortable truths and gets chopped to pieces in a New York stadium; and we who read sports literature look up and see Johnathan E. and Rollerball looming on the horizon.

2 plus 2 equals Phy. Ed. 101 ACU-I at UWSP

by Susan Falk

The number of physical education credits required at UW-SP remains the same, and "the goals of the physical education department have not changed. What will change is how we go about accomplishing those goals," said Dr. John Munson, HPERA Curriculum Coordinator, concerning the four credit phy ed requirement.

The school of Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Athletics (HPERA), is in the process of "phasing in an intermediate program" which will eventually lead to individual physical analysis, according to Munson. HPERA's long range goal, individual analysis, will give physically fit students the opportunity to test-out of the phy ed requirements just as they would test-out of math or English. On the other hand, it will provide less fit students with individualized physical programs which lead to health maintenance, cardiovascular efficiency, fitness and self-care skills.

According to Munson, the key is a prescriptive program that will get back to self-analysis. The program should provide students with the adequate information to make a decision as to what kind of shape they want to be in. "Pure recreational skills will not provide enough of a background to make that decision," Munson said.

The whole purpose of this program is to convince college students that keeping fit is a life-long process. Munson said this is essential because "55 percent of all Americans do not exercise in their daily lives."

The biggest obstacle to this individual analysis, or prescriptive programming, is that "many students may be unwilling to submit themselves to analysis. Students will allow themselves to be tested in math or English, but the one area they are afraid to touch is the one they're always going to have to live with," Dr. Munson said.

Once students agree to individual analysis, they will be tested for high-blood pressure, adverse cardiovascular activity, and excess body fat, to name a few. Then a program will be devised by HPERA faculty members to suit each student's needs. When the students reach their junior year, they will be retested and their programs may be altered according to the new results.

The intermediate program, to be implemented fully this spring semester, is called the 2+2 Concept. In developing the 2+2 Concept, the HPERA department has adopted a new means of categorizing the basic 101 offerings. These offerings have been divided into three main categories — A, B and C.

Category A includes all those activities which promote the development of useful recreational and sport skills. Most activities in this category are the traditional leisure pursuits such as basketball, racquetball, and tennis. Because so many people suffer from cardiovascular disease, (one out of three males in Wisconsin dies of heart attacks before they're 45), most of the courses in Category A are aerobic in nature. Aerobic activities are those which promote heart maintenance.

Health and safety related concepts are taught in courses in Category B. Classes in this area answer the question, What do we need to know to be healthy? Stress Management, Self Care, First Aid, and Relaxation are among a few of the alternatives in Category B which are taught by HPERA faculty as well as by the Counseling Center staff.

"Because students must find fun and enjoyment without the pressure of a grade," Category C was developed, according to Munson. This category includes athletics, intramurals, and experiential activities as a means of earning phy ed credits.

Experiential activities began last year with a 10-day trip of winter camping, for one credit. This year the school of HPERA is offering a vacation-time ski experience. One hundred students will be able to earn credit during the Christmas break either downhill or cross-country skiing at Whitecap Mountain in Michigan. "It gives students a real opportunity to see if the sport is something they want to do for the rest of their lives or not," Munson said.

The 2+2 Concept requires a student to choose two courses from Category A and the additional two credits can be chosen from any of the three categories, hence the title 2+2.

The physical education curriculum is being changed to satisfy the demands of students, Munson said. In the Lifestyle Assessment questionnaire filled out by incoming freshman there has been increasing requests, by students, for information, group activities, and confidential personal assistance in the area of physical fitness. It is the pressure from those demands that have generated these "better" programs.

Many UW-schools have eliminated or at least reduced their phy ed requirements, but, according to Munson, that is because the programs they had were inadequate in fulfilling the collegiate goals of physical education. Munson said, "We're probably ahead of most schools with good quality programs."

Many students are dismayed by the four credit requirement, but according to UW-SP senior, Linda Hofer, "The people who complain about it the most are the ones who need it the most." But she added, "I think those people are just real tired of the same old phy ed classes. Hopefully the individualized program will make them more aware of importance of physical fitness."

The first round of action in the Association of College Unions (ACU-I) campus recreational tournaments was completed Tuesday night at UWSP. Winners were selected in seven events to advance to regional competition in Kenosha.

UWSP hosted the Region eight tournaments from Nov. 9-17 with Chris Degan as the tournament director. Participants came from areas of Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, and Ontario.

According to Bob Szalkowski, Programming Coordinator for UWSP's Recreational Services, darts and frisbee are new categories that were added this year to the regular list of events which includes table tennis, backgammon, billiards, chess, and foosball.

In order to be eligible, participants must be enrolled at the time of tournament competition for a minimum of seven credits and must maintain a minimum of 2.0 grade point average. Graduates must be full-time students.

Winners receive trophies and other prizes plus an expense paid trip to Kenosha to participate in regional tournaments. Regional level winners then advance to national competition with expenses paid by ACU-I. National face-to-face tournament were held in the following events: men's and women's billiards, table tennis, and trap and skeet.

Last year, UWSP's Kathleen Hanna won the campus tournament in Women's Billiards, took second place at regionals, and was invited to the national level (since at that time national competition wasn't official).

Class Cures Jock Itch

by Trish Koser

For all you sports buffs, there is a class available on campus that deals with the myths that evolve around sports and athletes. This course, appropriately titled "The Myth of the Athlete," is taught by Professor Richard Doxtator of the English department, and it is available for either English or humanities credit.

In this course, students are to utilize both the nonprint and the print media to research what myths are and their relation to athletes. A myth, according to Doxtator, can be defined as having a private dream that becomes public. "A myth is a fanciful story which attempts through symbols to explain the unknowable, thereby giving meaning to life. So, like a dream, a myth springs from the unconscious and is made public."

Students apply this concept to class assignments and are to ask themselves two questions. A general question is, "What is really in a game?" A more specific question that Doxtator mentioned was, "Is winning the only thing?" As students write a journal of essays, they are to include in it pictures and newspaper clippings of the myths evolving around athletes in our past, present, and future.

Doxtator mentioned three basic myths that have been made public, to try and generate meaning to life. These myths include the past, present, and future myths. He said that often the use of the media, specifically movies, shows these dreams or myths in public.

"A past myth or an old myth is portrayed in the movie, 'Pride of the Yankee,' says Doxtator. 'This past myth valued mom, apple pie and teamwork. It was about the baseball player, Lou Gehrig, who received personal satisfaction and glory from not only participating in the game, but enjoyed team involvement as well."

Doxtator classified a present myth as also receiving personal satisfaction from participating in sports, as well as the friendship one receives. He correlated the present myth to the characters in the movie, 'Bang the Drum Slowly,' which portrayed people not only looking out for themselves, but for others. A myth of the future involves athletes who are out for themselves in a sport just to win and make money. Doxtator said the movie, 'Rollerball' alluded to this future myth of athletes. The notion of athletes concerned with teamwork and satisfaction in performing in a sport will be shifting towards monetary rewards for playing a sport.

Doxtator also said that the future of this myth could result in assassination of athletes. "In the future, the end result of this obsession will be that highly paid athletes will be assassinated like presidents. There is all kinds of information that shows this."

Doxtator mentioned the print media that deals with these trends and myths in sports. "For example," he says, "the book, 'The Gammemaker,' reads like science fiction where the character is so upset with professional sports that he decides to kill off all of the performers. Yet, it is loaded with factual quotes and newspaper articles where Super Bowl security is often beefed up to look for bombs, and suspected terrorists are screened. Another example that backs this is that Mohammed Ali, supposedly one of the toughest men in the world, has a bodyguard to protect him!"

Doxtator also felt that the fantasies of sports has become a worldwide cult. Although, he mentioned that this just isn't in America since sports like soccer are worldwide and have followers, he related his concept to American football.

Future Looks Bright For Pointer Harriers

by Chris Telichowski

When one considers the words cross-country, images of green, rolling hills, babbling brooks, and brightly colored woodlands come to mind. This presence of nature, and a runner's desire to challenge it with his body and soul, helps make cross country one of our finest, although least known, sports.

The sport is a test not only of one's physical strength, endurance and stamina, but of his mental discipline and will. Nothing challenges a runner more than trying to maintain his concentration and speed as his body cries for a respite from the exertion. Yet, the longer he or she runs the tougher he becomes. A familiar adage characterizes this phenomenon best, "No pain, no gain."

At the university level, cross country races are run over a five mile course that may vary from rolling hills to flat, woodland trails. The number of teams participating in a race may range from two-team "dual" meets to twenty-five team

"invitationals."

The races are scored in the following manner: Each team receives a certain amount of points depending on the total finishes of their top five runners. For example, a team that had a fifth, ninth, eleventh, twelfth, and sixteenth place would be awarded 5, 9, 11, 12, and 16 points for 52 point total. The club with the lowest point total is declared the winner of the race, followed in order by the team with the second-lowest total and so on.

The Pointer cross-country team is coached by a very capable Rick Witt, who recently led the club to its first Wisconsin State University Conference title ever. Witt, a talented runner during his college days, has evolved a practice philosophy which allows his runners alternating periods of hard and light workouts. This move has allowed the team to remain almost injury-free and in top condition for its weekend meets.

While cross country remains a team sport, it also allows very talented individuals a chance to excel. The Pointers have a number of outstanding individuals who deserve special recognition.

Leading the WSUC champions this year is Greg Schrab, who hails from Juneau, Wisconsin. Greg, consistently in the Pointer's lead pack throughout the last three years, has provided an example of hard work and desire for the Pointers' crop of up-and-coming sophomores and freshmen. After running well during the season, Schrab had an admittedly disappointing 20th place finish at conference. In the final race of an outstanding college career, the "Pointer Scrab" could very well walk away from the National Meet as an All-American.

Dan Shoopke, who calls Burnsville, Minnesota, home, has been the Pointers' leading and most consistent runner during this past season. Not blessed with exceptional speed, Dan just runs a very balanced race. While others weaken during the last stages of the race, "Shep" just rolls by on the way to another spectacular finish. Shoopke's fifth-place finish at the WSUC conference meet proved that he is definite All-American material.

Chuck Paulson, a senior from Wildwood, Illinois, has run consistently well for the club all season long, although a foot injury kept him out of action for a time. Capable of running a 4:15 mile, Chuck's talent is especially evident when one considers the relatively low amount of mileage he puts in during the week. After finishing 12th at the conference meet, the "Wango" could very well add AIA All-American honors to his small-college All-American title. Co-captain Ray Przybelski, a Stevens Point native, has proved to be one of the Pointers' leading harriers. Although a chronic ankle injury occasionally causes problems, Ray used his determination and skill to carry him through the season. Przybelski's leadership and fine performances have aided the team immeasurably. Ray, too, could become an All-American this Saturday in Kenosha.

Dave Parker rounds out the Pointers' top five harriers. Parker, a Noblesville, Indiana product, has been consistent for the Pointers all year long. Dave's fine ability and desire to beat Tony Melchor of Platteville have proven that he is one of the team's most valuable assets. A foot injury will keep Dave from running at the National Meet, but he'll be around next year ready to "put the hammer down."

In order to avoid making this article a special insert, I'd like to single out Lou Agnue, Shane Brooks, Leon Rozmarynowski, Hector Fischer, Bob Lawrence and Eric Parker as tough and talented runners most of whom will help the team next season.

Many other runners have contributed to this championship season, and although they haven't finished near the front in every race they are still an integral part of any successful season. The team's closeness has undoubtedly contributed to its fine performances, and will continue to do so next season.

The future looks bright for the Pointer squad. They stand to lose only three seniors, and with the addition of injured stand-out Dennis Kotcon plus some running up to potential by a number of individuals the club could repeat its championship season.

Deer Hunting: Getting Back To It All

by Bill Bevenz

Saturday morning deer season will open in Wisconsin. At that time hunters will venture into the state's woods, swamps and forests. Many Wisconsinites are captivated by the mystique involved with this annual event, and the dream of a trophy whitetail buck walking past a stand as dawn breaks.

It doesn't matter how many opening day outings have proven unsuccessful in previous attempts, our determination and level of intensity is high, as we enter the woods. The first day is probably the best chance for bagging a deer, so we go out before sunrise and wait in darkness.

When walking to his stand, a hunter always tries to be quiet. This is somewhat impossible when considering there is usually water to cross, logs to go around, and shrubbery to snarl through. Going about this task takes time, so you always plan to start out at least by five o'clock. Unfortunately, breakfast usually takes longer than expected. Then you go off in a mad rush when realizing precious time has passed because you've sat down and talked too long.

After reaching your stand, it's time to sit down and take a well deserved rest. It is still fairly dark out, but soon it will be light. As a general rule of thumb it's supposed to be cold outside on opening day, and most of the time it is, so you snap your buttons and zip-up zippers. These are left undone so you don't sweat while walking in. Deer have a keen sense of smell, and a sweaty hunter is an easy mark for their noses.

Having taken care of any other chores that are necessary, you sit now and anxiously wait. Things are calm in the woods, and you can enjoy a moment of peace. Slowly, it will start to get light out.

Sitting in your stand now, the level of intensity and mystique involved in deer hunting probably reaches its peak as dawn breaks. The presence of deer in the area is evident, because you can hear rifle shots in all directions. Sooner or later deer will be sneaking past, so you sit and wait without moving. You dream that a trophy buck will come by soon. Deer season has opened for the year.

Excitement enters the scene. Rustling leaves and snapping twigs break the silence of this crisp November morning. You don't think it's another hunter making this kind of a disturbance: he would be much louder. Your heart is throbbing at an accelerated pace. Scanning the area you search for the source of noise, but it can't be located.

From reading magazines like Outdoor Life and Field & Stream, you know experts say not to move in circumstances like the one you're in, so you wait.

Trying not to move when adrenalin is flowing through your body and your heart is beating away becomes increasingly difficult. There are a number of solutions to this problem, though, such as wiggling your toes, gritting your teeth, or giving up on trying not to move by standing up and looking to see where in the hell this noise is coming from.

The latter of these alternatives is usually the least effective, but easier to handle if sitting still is making you extremely impatient. There is no guarantee that a deer is making the noise anyway.

On opening morning the first sound of rustling leaves is generally created by a squirrel. These rascals are the cause of a lot of unnecessary excitement. But they can be interesting to watch when deer don't seem to be around. Squirrels are fascinating actually, as they go about their business of rummaging for nuts.

As the morning goes on, you study the scenery surrounding your stand. There's always something new to discover that wasn't noticed before. A tree that used to be standing has fallen, and you see a sapling sprouting up where it used to stand. This will take its place. The ecosystem moves forward.

Maybe the course of this Saturday's hunt will follow as just described. However, it could be a trophy buck stirring the initial excitement instead of a squirrel. For most hunters though, the mystique involved in deer hunting is more than getting a deer.

Deer hunting is a time to relax and enjoy the outdoors, to smell the fresh air. It's a time for hunters to socialize with old friends. The mystique of deer hunting has a number of attributes, and these affect hunters according to their priorities. But the dream of seeing a trophy whitetail is held by all deer hunters.

Responsible Hunters Are Sure of Their Target...And Beyond

Safety in the hunting forests and fields is constantly being stalked by carelessness. Every time a hunter momentarily lets down his guard of safety awareness, carelessness seeks an opening. When carelessness occurs, tragedy often strikes without warning.

Once a bullet is fired, it speeds to its destiny without regard for what is in its path. Every hunter must know that each shot fired is safe and responsible. This individual responsibility requires constant attention to safe firearms handling. You must:

—Treat every firearm as if it were loaded.

—Never point a firearm at anything you do not want to shoot.

—Be sure of your target...and beyond. If you are not sure...do not shoot.

Responsible Hunters Plan Their Hunt... and Hunt Their Plan

Mis-planned or unplanned hunts have been a major contributing factor in causing hunter accidents.

In recent years, more than 75 percent of the hunting accidents in Wisconsin that involved two people resulted when hunters shot one of their hunting partners. Those accidents were caused by the hunting group failing to adequately plan the hunt or someone failing to follow the hunt plan.

Thoroughly planning each hunt, or segment of a hunt, is essential for safety and success. Select a hunt leader in your hunting party. Let him assign each hunter to a specific stand or route. Maintain contact on drives or still-hunts and be aware of the location of other hunters.

Plan your hunt, then hunt your plan...for safety and success.

Responsible Hunters Ask Permission to Hunt on Private Lands

Autumn is when Wisconsin's forests, fields and marshes become the outdoor recreation arena for thousands of hunters.

This American hunting tradition has long been viewed as an inherent right by most hunters. In stark contrast to most European countries, Americans of every social and economic level can enjoy a lifetime of hunting.

While hunting may be a right, hunting on privately-owned land is a privilege. Nearly 90 percent of the huntable land in Wisconsin is privately owned, and permission is required to hunt on it.

Responsible hunters ask permission in advance of hunting seasons, and respect the wishes of landowners.

Ask...the future of your hunting may depend on it.

Responsible Hunters Report All Poachers

Poachers are stealing from you! Yes, that's right...from you, each and every one of you.

To report poachers, call your local conservation warden or call TOLL FREE 1-800-362-3020.

CHUCK BRAUN: PASS CATCHING EXTRAORDINAIRE

by Joe Vanden Plas

If ever an athlete could be labeled an over-achiever, it's UWSP's pass catching phenom Chuck Braun.

Braun, an All-American split end, has been the focal point of UWSP's passing offense for the past three years. He has also been the outstanding pass receiver in the Wisconsin State University Conference, District 14, and the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics during that span.

Since his freshman year, when an injury cut his season short, Braun has been unstoppable. In the three year span from 1979-81, he has caught 192 passes for 2798 yards. He has been named to the All-WSUC squad twice (and will undoubtedly be named again this season), and he will be named to the NAIA All-American team again this season.

He set a team record this season for most receiving yardage in a game, gaining an incredible 303 yards against UW-Superior. If Braun hadn't missed three games due to a strained knee earlier this season, he most certainly would have broken Jeff Gosa's school record of 1,024 yards receiving in a single season. In seven games this season, Braun caught 61 passes for 950 yards, setting a new WSUC receiving yardage record.

His ability to get open is uncanny. He runs perfect pass patterns, has great moves and soft, dependable hands. He could probably catch a BB in the dark. And no defensive back can cover him one-on-one. He beats every one of them and does it with ease.

He is to UWSP what Paul Hornung once was to Notre Dame, the hero everyone can identify with. When great UWSP athletes are discussed, Braun's name is invariably mentioned.

Braun wasn't always a success story, however. There was a time when he was just another name on the UWSP football roster.

He had been an excellent athlete at Athens High School, participating in football and basketball. Though he was an All-Conference receiver his senior year, his lack of size prevented him from being heavily recruited by large schools. He wasn't highly sought after by Stevens Point either but decided to attend UWSP primarily because his mother and sister had attended the school.

Recalling his feelings about football at the time, Braun said, "I don't think the Point coaches expected much from me because I wasn't heavily recruited. There was really no pressure on me at the time to produce. It was just kind of a laid back situation for me."

A bruised spleen ended the 1978 season for Braun. "During the first half of my freshman season I didn't get to play very much," said Braun. "Then I started our Homecoming game against Oshkosh and then the Whitewater game (in UWSP's 14-12 upset of Whitewater, Braun caught the winning touchdown pass). It was in the second quarter of that game I was injured and I missed the rest of the season."

Following the 1978 season, Braun was uncertain about his status on the team. He had done well in the games he played in but he still drills. He spent a lot of time with me."

Braun's fortunes changed for the better in the fourth game of the 1979 season when the Pointers faced Whitewater. The team had just come off two disastrous Braun went on to make 68 receptions for 883 yards and nine touchdowns in 1979. He has been feared throughout the WSUC ever since.

Vann, Braun repeat on All-WSUC team

MADISON — Eau Claire running back Roger Vann and Stevens Point wide receiver Chuck Braun are the only repeaters on this year's All-Wisconsin State University Conference football team selected by league coaches.

Vann, a senior from South Bend, Ind., became the conference's most productive rusher in 15 years. He led the way with 1,202 yards in eight games, the best since Jim Baier of River Falls rushed for a record 1,557 yards in 1966. Vann also won the conference scoring title with 12 touchdowns and 72 points.

Braun, a senior from Athens, was selected to the honor team for the third straight year. He also led the conference in pass receptions for the third time, although he shares the top spot this season with Oshkosh's John Dettmann, also picked on the first team. Both caught 60 passes this fall in conference competition.

Vann was one of three Bugold gridders chosen on the first offensive team, a 14-man unit that includes three running backs plus Stevens Point placekicker Randy Ryskowski and Oshkosh punter Jim Wild. The other Eau Claire players are guard Craig King and center Brett Cole.

Coach Link Walker's Bugolds also placed two men on the first defensive unit — interior lineman Steve Eckley and back Mike March, who set a conference record with five interceptions in a game against Stout.

Stevens Point landed four first team berths on offense, while Oshkosh, Stout and Whitewater received two spots each and Platteville one. Pointers chosen besides Braun and Ryskowski are quarterback Brion Demski and running back Andy Shumway.

Demski, a senior from Hales Corners, won his second straight conference total offense crown and also led the league in passing, averaging 309 yards a game through the air.

Stout was represented by tackle Mark Swoboda and running back Bob Johnson. Whitewater by tight end Steve Scuglik and guard Steve Potratz and Platteville by tackle Jeff Moen.

Besides Eau Claire, also accorded two berths on the first defensive unit were La Crosse, Platteville and Stout.

La Crosse picks are lineman Jim Byrne and linebacker Mike Fabich. Platteville put linebacker Mike Rohrwasser and back Mike Dalton on the first defensive unit, while Stout is represented by end Maurice Britts and back Bruce Connor.

Rounding out the No. 1 defense are Oshkosh linebacker Joe DeCoursin, Stevens Point back Gary Van Vreede, Superior lineman Larry Banks and Whitewater end Steve Adler.

Cole and Johnson were second team selections a year ago on offense, and DeCoursin made the No. 2 defensive unit in 1980.

River Falls failed to put a single player on either of the first units for the first time in several years. The Falcons also were denied a second team offensive spot but they did land five defenders on the No. 2 unit.

Wild, Byrne and Banks are the only sophomores among those chosen on the first teams.

entertainment Oklahoma: "OKIE" DOKEY

by Thomas Wadhew

The Okies have migrated to Stevens Point for a week and local playgoers are finding their special brand of hospitality downright appealing. Cast aside your preconceptions, discard your northern biases and ramble on down to the College of Fine Arts, that is, if you kin still rustle up a ticket, for the current production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's Oklahoma is a powerhouse.

Hats off to director Edward Hamilton for his brilliant staging of the time proven classic. He paints an exciting and colorful portrait of a trying time in the southern state's (then a territory) history, with the brisk, selective strokes of a Rembrandt or van Gogh. Occasionally, an individual performer may falter on stage, but even in these rare instances, the show's fresh and vibrant energy remains undiminished.

And the pluses of this production are certainly not the director's to horde. Choreographer James Moore has molded an assortment of young actors, singers, and several obviously more experienced dancers into a movement machine that attacks the dances with remarkable precision and vitality. The production numbers and particularly, the ballet at the end of Act One, which showcased ballerina Elizabeth Ebben quite impressively, left the audience longing for more.

Musically, the pit orchestra was also up to its difficult task and should be complimented on their excellent rendition of the score. Chorally, the overall effect was quite exciting. There were sporadic volume problems when louder orchestral sections dwarfed timid soloists but even these irregularities were annoying only in a few songs, most notably Curly's solos. On the other hand, the intricate four part harmony in the show's title song was handled masterfully.

Technically, the show was a delight. Several exceptional settings, an exquisitely chosen collection of costumes, colorful, mood elevating stage lighting, makeup, props, and all the rest clearly showed the immense amount of planning and labor that combined to make Oklahoma a winner.

Although the cast projected itself as a tight ensemble, several standouts should be mentioned. Michael Accardo, who's beautiful voice almost makes one wish he'd been cast in a role that sang more, was easily the production's shining beacon. He makes the audience feel they've known the hired hand Jud all their lives. In fact, the sympathy we grow to feel for him may perhaps become too empathetic, for in the duel scene, many of the audience's loyalties lean toward the wrong character.

Others who consistently capture the depth of their characters and the audience's fancy besides were Patricia Potter as Aunt Eller, fun incarnate when she's not being a tough cookie, and Tim Zimmerman as Will Parker, a burnin' urn of Oklahoma funk. Only slightly less pleasing are Holly Hutchinson, the flighty Ado Annie, and the young lovers J. Shawn Sweeny as Curly and Kay Stiefel as Laurey. The lovers were a bit of an ghhgghout the vast majority of the play, they acted, danced, and sang up a storm. However when it came time for them to fall hopelessly and irretrievably into the clutches of love, their passion read as warmth, their love as mere affection. Let me add once more, however, through most of the show, Curly and Laurey were well-defined characters.

In the final roundup, this production is a dandy and a hearty cowcall is well deserved for all the folks who put Oklahoma together.

The play runs through this Sunday but unfortunately has been sold out. However, to check on possible cancellations, call 346-4100.

Time Bandits

by Karen Fritschler

If you have a penchant for the bizarre, the fantastic, the disconcerting, you can go to Madison for Halloween night. You can ride Space Mountain at Disneyworld. Or you can put magic mushrooms in your spaghetti sauce for a trip to Italy you'll never forget. However, Halloween falls only once a year. Florida is a long haul. And many people prefer to follow an itinerary when they travel.

For a comparatively inexpensive, easy-access removal from reality, I suggest you dive through the nearest hole in the universe and see Time Bandits. This Cinemascope movie is a conglomerate of all the adventure stories you ever read, a few you didn't, and a sprinkling of shadowy nightmares.

Demons to damsels to sheer dementia can be found here. The exotic scenery and richly embroidered detail provide a visual feast if nothing else, and the ubiquitous Monty Python humor (mostly in the form of sly throwaways) delights without severely distracting from the essentials.

The plot is unstintingly original—just when you think the authors will stoop to the conventional, something even weirder happens. Despite the bewildering tumble of events, transitions are superb. The action is difficult to describe in retrospect, but somehow makes perfect sense while you're there. The startling special effects, including a Supreme Being a la Oz, and the presto-change-o settings (from an encounter with Robin Hood to Agamemnon's Athens, to a short stopover on the Titanic) lend to the feeling that you're sitting in on someone else's dream. That someone is Kevin, an English boy who would rather not go to bed early—until the night a gargantuan horse and horned rider crash out of his closet. Who should drop by the next night but six dwarves on the lam from the Creator, who take Kevin on a raid for riches through time and space.

Craig Warnock is a natural as Kevin, combining a childlike intensity with

Pointer Cagers: A Rebuilding Season?

by Steve Heiting

Basketball fans who are used to watching powerhouse play by the UW-Stevens Point team will just have to get used to the idea of their team going through a rebuilding year this season, but they

The Pointers are returning last year's starting guards, 6-foot-2 Kevin Kulas and 6-foot-2 Jef Radtke, both of whom are seniors. Selected as co-captains, the two guards are considered to be a pair of the top back court people in the State University Conference.

each position. Our size and the competition for starting positions will probably help us do a better job on the boards this season than we have in the past few years," he said.

The Pointers will have their work cut out for them this year as their schedule may be the toughest ever played by a UWSP team. They open the season Nov. 28 at Creighton University, a participant in the NCAA Division I tournament last spring, and play Nov. 30 against another powerhouse, the University of Nebraska. After that the Pointers will open the always-tough WSUC schedule against UW-Oshkosh at the Quandt Fieldhouse Dec. 5.

Freshman are not expected to play prominent roles in the Pointers season this year, but a couple that may see playing time are Mike Janse, Terry Porter, Steve Hidden, Scott Meyer and Dale Schlundt. Schlundt and Janse each red-shirted last season and that extra experience may give them an edge.

Bennett sees his squad's good overall size and depth to be the team's strong points. "We're about two deep in should find it quite easy.

Once a team reaches a certain level of consistency and success, their rebuilding years are usually the equivalent of great seasons by many other teams. Such is the case of the Pointers for the 1981-82 season.

"We'll do pretty well," said UWSP coach Dick Bennett earlier this week. "We realize we have to replace our entire front line, but the talent and the attitude is there to have a successful season."

The front line Bennett is talking about consisted of 6-foot-8 Bill Zuiker, 6-foot-5 Phil Rodriguez and 6-foot-3 Duane Wesenberg, who each made their presence known on the basketball court over the past four years. Zuiker and Rodriguez concluded their college careers as the second and third all-time leading scorers in Pointer history, and Wesenberg was one of the top defensive players on the team that allowed just 53.6 points per game last year, lowest in the NCAA Division III.

Their back-ups of last year will be the starters this season. Bennett is looking for big things out of 6-foot-6 Fred Stemmeler, 6-foot-6 Brian Koch, 6-foot-4 John Mack, 6-foot-3 Paul Prochnow and 6-foot-3 Pete Zuiker. Prochnow is the only senior in the group as the rest are all juniors.

"We have enough people to choose from to find the right people for our starting lineup," said Bennett. "What we lost in quality we'll be able to replace with depth."

Despite all of the attention being given the front line, the Pointers' back court cannot be overlooked as it may be the team's strongest position.

Gridders fall short of winning season

by Steve Heiting

PLATTEVILLE — Eight seniors, hoping to go out as winners in their final collegiate football game, saw their hopes crushed here Saturday when the UW-Stevens Point team lost its final game of the season to UW-Platteville, 28-9.

Quarterback Brion Demski, receiver Chuck Braun, tackle Al Mancil, guards Jeff Graff and Steve Heiting, center Jamie Berlin, fullback Andy Shumway, and specialty teams player Tom Madden were those eight seniors, and their frustration following the game was quite evident.

A couple of them had tears in their eyes as they shook hands with each other, their teammates and their coaches, and the locker room was unusually quiet.

The seniors had never experienced a winning season, and their chance for one this year was lost as the points kept piling up on the wrong side of the scoreboard. They had been close to being winners, with a pair each of 4-6 and 5-5 records over their four years, but they never quite made it.

The seniors were one of the main reasons why the Pointers had turned the season around after going 1-4 in the first five games. After a close homecoming loss to conference champs UW-Eau Claire, they went on a tear winning four in a row, outscoring opponents 114-80 during that stretch. But it was an old malady they thought they had licked that came back from their past to haunt them and cause the final game loss.

The Pointers committed six turnovers, all interceptions by quarterback Brion Demski, that aided Platteville in their victory.

Thirty-nine turnovers in 1980 were 39 reasons why Stevens Point finished just 4-6 that year. Turnovers were also present when Point dropped four of their first five games this year, but not to that extent. During the four-game win streak UWSP played virtually error-free ball.

But in the game that would have made them winners, the turnovers were there again.

Still, UWSP held a 9-7 advantage at halftime with the momentum in their favor, but 21 unanswered points in the second half by the Pioneers stole the victory.

Shumway had given Stevens Point the lead early in the second period with a nine-yard run to conclude a 74-yard, nine-play drive, but the extra point attempt went wide.

Platteville came right back and marched to the Pointer six-yard marker, but Pioneer quarterback Mark Rowley fumbled the ball which was recovered by Stevens Point tackle Rod Bolstad. However, UWP got the ball back 3 plays later when Demski's aerial was picked off by Chuck Raasch and returned to the three-yard line. Ron Schmalz then punched it in and the PAT gave Platteville its first lead of the game, at 7-6.

Utilizing their dangerous two-minute offense, the Pointers drove down the field from their 17 to the Platteville 20 where Randy Ryskowski came in to boot a 37-yard field goal to give UW-SP the lead on the last play of the half.

Another errant aerial, again intercepted by Raasch, set up the second Platteville touchdown early in the second half.

The Pioneers got the ball on UWSP's 37 and drove to the 31 where Rowley hit tight end Mike Tranel for the go-ahead touchdown with 10:33 left in the third quarter.

The Pioneers scored their final two touchdowns on six and 40-yard runs by Martin Sturzl to complete the scoring.

Demski, who was shooting for several school and conference records in the game, still managed to set those marks as well as setting up Braun to break a record of his own.

Demski completed 23 of 50 passes for 288 yards which enabled him to set the single-season records for completions with 188, attempts with 366, yardage passing with 2,458, and total offense with 2,454.

Braun, who led the WSUC for the third season in a row in receiving despite missing a game because of an injury, wound up the year with 947 yards in league play after making 11 receptions for 178 yards Saturday.

Breaking the records made Saturday a memorable one for the Pointers, but the feeling they were left with was not as good as it would have been had they won.

Women cagers have question marks

by Joe Vanden Plas

UW-Stevens Point women's basketball coach Bonnie Gehling says she doesn't quite know what to expect from her 1981-82 Pointers.

The reason for Gehling's uncertainty is apparent. UWSP has several question marks which may make its season sound like a soap opera.

For example, can center Regina Bayer and forward Ann Bumgarner play up to expectations at the post positions?

Can the Pointers' starting guards, Julie Hesser and Betsey Harries, consistently make their outside shots and take some pressure off Bayer and Bumgarner?

Can the starting team stay out of foul trouble so Gehling will not have to rely heavily on an inexperienced bench?

Can the team adjust to the high turnover in personnel (only four varsity performers return)?

Can the team play respectably against or even defeat tough UW-Green Bay in the season opener and gain confidence for the remainder of the season?

Thus far, Gehling doesn't know the answers. "I haven't been able to gauge what kind of team we have," admits Gehling. "One of the reasons for that is I haven't had all of the players together at any given practice session yet. At this point, I have no idea what we'll look like."

One thing is certain, however. The Pointers will get consistent play out of sophomore center Regina Bayer and small forward Ann Bumgarner in the middle.

Bonnie Gehling

"Our offense will be designed around Regina," Gehling related. "She has improved a lot by working hard over the summer. She's tough to stop in the post."

Bumgarner, the forward who plays like a center, will also be a key for the Pointers. "Ann has great leaping ability, is strong on the boards and has good, natural moves toward the basket," comments Gehling, "and she is developing a good outside shot from about 12 feet," she added.

"Defensively, she anticipates well. She led the team in steals last season. In fact, if she decides to continue playing she will probably set several school records."

"She's so intelligent on and off the court. I'm nominating her for Who's Who (in American colleges and universities). She's set a fine example for her fellow teammates," Gehling said of the junior from North Prairie.

Overall, Gehling believes her team's strength is up the middle. "I think Ann (this year's team captain) and Regina will give us a solid pair in the middle," beamed Gehling.

Three candidates, Laurie Craft, Deb Koehler and Sharron Wubben, are battling for the strong forward spot.

At this point, Craft has the inside track. According to Gehling, Craft's biggest problem is over-aggressiveness. "Laurie has worked on controlling her aggressiveness by doing a better job of playing intelligent defense. She's an aggressive rebounder who is physically strong."

Gehling also expects solid contributions from Wubben and Koehler. The Pointer mentor recharacterizes Wubben as a "smart, heads up type player" and Koehler as a "fine shooter who is not afraid to get in there and rebound."

The guard spots will be handled by freshman Julie Hesser and junior Betsey Harries, a transfer who has spent the previous two seasons at UW-Superior.

Gehling is high on both of them, especially Hesser, who may make Pointer fans forget about last year's outstanding playmaker Sue Davis. "Julie is more aggressive and is quicker than Davis was," Gehling noted before adding, "The only thing going against her is inexperience. But she's a spark plug type player."

"Betsey has plenty of experience and also has a great outside shot. She scored 17 points in a game against us last season when she played at Superior."

"Both Julie and Betsey have the ability to find the open person," added Gehling.

Depth, however, is not the Pointer's strong suit, especially at guard and center. Three freshmen, forward Brenda Lemke, guards Lisa Mikich and Dee Christofferson, center Connie Schultz and sophomore guard Kathy Smith will provide the bench support for UWSP this season.

Gehling admits adequate depth is lacking, but not because of a lack of talent. "We're thin because of inexperience only," she insists. "Our starters will be getting a lot of playing time."

Despite an overall lack of size, Gehling says her ball club is capable of a winning season. "To win, we have to anticipate well on defense, get the ball down court fast and dominate the opponent from the outside. Those are our strengths as a team."

"In order to take advantage of our strengths, two factors will be crucial for us, staying out of foul trouble and avoiding injuries," concluded Gehling.

The Pointers open the season December 2 when they host UW-Green Bay. Gehling feels the contest will serve as a measuring device by which her team can be judged because Green Bay is a contender for the WWIAC championship.

Pointers fare well in Sport Shop Open

by Tom Burkman

With 301 wrestlers representing 24 different schools, the sixth annual Sport Shop Open Wrestling Tournament took place this past weekend at the Quandt Fieldhouse.

No team scores were kept in the meet and wrestling was split into two divisions — the Gold and the Silver. The Gold Division was open to all wrestlers while the Silver Division was made up strictly for freshman and sophomores.

Division I powerhouse UW-Madison and Division II school Northern Michigan dominated the Gold Division. Madison claimed two individual champions plus two second place finishers while Northern Michigan had one champion, two third place finishers and two runnersup.

Host UW-Stevens Point was led by junior Jim Erickson who won the 177 lb. championship in the Gold Division. On his way to capturing the championship, Erickson recorded three pins and also a 6-3 decision. Other high finishers for Point included Dan McNamee (118) and Shane Bohnen (142) who both finished at 4-2. Mike Dvorak (134) finished at 3-2 for the day while Scott Klien, Gordy Blackburn (126), Walter Erickson (158) and Evan Bohnen (167) all finished with identical 2-2 records for the tournament.

In evaluating the tournament, Point wrestling coach John Munson was very pleased with his athletes' performance. He also said that, "This is a good season brush up — a good indicator of what you are going to face throughout the season. It also lets the younger wrestlers know what to expect."

Munson also said, "This was the largest field we've ever had and with 40 All-Americans and four national champions included and it was by far the best field ever in the Sports Shop Open. Even the national tournament is not as big as this. This is more of a quality tournament," said Munson.

Coach Munson looks toward UW-Platteville, rated sixth in the nation in Division III last year and also UW-Whitewater who was rated seventh last season, to challenge for the top spot in the conference this season.

The Pointers next meet is at the Warhawk Open on Dec. 5.

by Jack Buswell and Ed Karshna

After a very lengthy and thorough debate by the Student Senate, the Senate voted to cut the SPBAC recommendation of increasing the student activity fee by 8 percent to 4 percent. The Senate felt it was time to start cutting, rather than putting an additional financial burden on students. It is true that student organizations will have less money to work with, but the Senate expressed that this move would encourage organizations to use its money more wisely, without increasing the cost of a college education. The 8 percent increase proposed by SPBAC was to adjust the fee with the inflation rate.

The athletic department has been in a financial bind for some time now, and in order to increase its revenue, athletics received Senate approval to raise student basketball and hockey ticket prices from $1 to $2. The Senate also accepted the SPBAC recommendation of allocating athletics $80,000, and intramurals $45,000 for FY-5, or the 1984-85 school year. Those figures will be lower than the allocation for the 1983-84 fiscal year, which will be $81,100 for athletics and $47,800 for intramurals.

The Women's Resource Center revision request was finally settled last night after a considerable delay. The request was sent back to committee two weeks ago, and the Student Senate took action on it this past Sunday. The center was allocated $4,795, with a revenue figure of $1,500. The Senate also gave both the United Nations Student Organization and the Marketing Association $150 for operational expenses.

Three resolutions dealing with the budget area were passed by the Student Senate on Sunday. The purpose of the resolutions is to make the budgetary process run more efficiently.

FY2-9 Presented by Budget Director Carolyn Vasquez and Budget Controller Kevin Syvrud, is a definition of the Budget Director's power to impound funds and establish a requirement for monthly operations reports.

FY2-10 This resolution also put forth by Vasquez and Syvrud is designed to assist in the smooth operation of the annual budget process. With the passage of this resolution, the SGA Budget Director is required to:

- Prepare a complete budget schedule for the fiscal year by the first week of school,

- Be required to present a treasurer's workshop before the sixth full week of school,

- and, present a budget seminar for organizations presenting annual requests for the succeeding fiscal year before the annual budget request forms are due.

FY2-11 Presented by Kevin Syvrud, is aimed at getting students more involved in the budgetary process. This will require that all funding requests be presented to the SGA and its committees by requesting organizational treasurers, student business managers, or student officers, and not the advisors of the organization, with the exception of intramurals and intercollegiate athletics by virtue of their special status in the Wisconsin State Statutes.

A resolution presented by Rich Krieg and Mary Krach (FY2-12) will be voted on this week Sunday by the Student Senate. This resolution states that contingent upon more than 50 percent of the UWSP student body signing the petition in support of WISPIRG on the UWSP campus, the UWSP SGA recommend to the Board of Regents that:

- 1) A $2.50 refundable fee be collected outside of segregated fees and the SGA allocating process.

- 2) This fee be administered through a contract negotiated between WISPIRG and the UW system.

- 2) SGA involvement be limited to review of WISPIRG at contract renewal times.

- 4) The contract renewal term be not less than two years.

United Council

U.W. Superior was the host of this month's U.C. meeting, and some very significant decisions were made by the Executive Board. In the past few months, several schools (U.W. Madison, Milwaukee, Superior, Green Bay) have risen in opposition to U.C. President Robert Kranz, and an Ad-Hoc committee was established to look into the allegations made against Kranz. The Ad-Hoc committee recommended to the Executive Board that impeachment hearings be set up on the weekend of December 4 & 5. After almost an entire day of debate, the board voted down the recommendation calling for impeachment hearings, and it is anticipated that UC can get back to the business of working for students, rather than wasting time bickering among themselves.

Senator of the Month

The SGA Executive Board presented the October Senator of the Month Award to Renae Bohanski. The award was given to her in recognition of the outstanding and unselfish service rendered to this University by giving freely of time and talent to aid her fellow students.

With seven teams tied for the last NFC wild card berth—including Green Bay—it's time to pick some upsets. Last Sunday, the Prophet went 7-6. Overall: 97-55, or 64 percent.

AUGUSTANA, IL — The University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point women's cross country team finished second in the NCAA Division III Midwest Regional Meet held here Saturday.

Central of Iowa won the meet with 29 points and was followed by UWSP with 39. Rounding out the scoring were Nebraska Wesleyan, 72; Washington University, 110; North Central, 133; and Wartburg, 144.

Point finished strong by placing four women in the top ten places.

Senior standout Dawn Buntman led the Pointers with a second place finish with a time of 18:03.6. Point's next two finishers were Tina Theyel and Tracey Lamers who placed fifth and seventh with times of 18:35.9 and 18:38.4 respectively.

Rounding out UWSP's finishers were Renee Bremser, 10th, 18:51.8; Mary Bender, 15th, 19:48.1; and Ellen Kunath, 17th, 19:57.1.

"All of our runners really gave 100 percent," Pointer coach Deb Lindert said after the meet. "The course and weather helped considerably plus the psychological lift of running such a flat, even course after running many hilly courses this season."

Lindert felt all of her girls ran good, tough races and singled out Buntman and Bremser for their efforts.

"Dawn ran one of her best times this season," Lindert praised. "She ran a fast pace and still came on strong at the end."

Lindert thought that Bremser ran the best race of her career. "Renee, who has already been a consistent placer for us all season, ran in fifth position the first two miles and kept our team every well grouped," Lindert stated.

The UWSP runners will be in action next when they compete in the NCAA Division III National Meet held at Carthage on Saturday, Nov. 21.

UWSP coach Nancy Schoen felt the scores and her team's play spoke for itself.

"We played excellent volleyball. I think we were ready to play both physically and mentally because we knew what to expect from them and we worked hard to get ready for them," Schoen stated.

"We did some excellent things offensively. The setters did a good job of using all of the hitters and running the plays. We were very effective with our middle hit in a variety of situations and we played smart and hit hard."

"We knew they were going to dink the ball alot and were ready for it. I felt we played well as a team although we had a few lapses in game three. However, overall we played very well and it was fun to conclude our home schedule undefeated. The home crowd support really helped," Schoen concluded.

The UW-Stevens Point women's volleyball team concluded its regular season schedule by avenging three of its four season losses in beating UW-Milwaukee 15-8, 15-10, 11-15, and 15-0 in Berg Gym Wednesday, November 11.

The Pointer spikers improved their season record to 34-4 with the impressive win over the Division II school. UWSP, ranked No. 4 in the latest NCAA Division III national rankings, will now wait for the selection of teams to the 32 team national tourney.

The first two games were similar in that Point jumped off to big early leads and dominated throughout. A telling tale was the fact that UWSP missed only one serve in the initial two matches while UW-Milwaukee miscued on six.

Stevens Point ran into problems in game three as they missed on three serves and also had a hard time finding holes on their spikes. As a result, the home team spent more time than usual playing defense and couldn't mount a rally until it was too late.

The final game score was a reflection of the dominance UWSP displayed and the Panther women were never in the contest.

High scorers for the evening were Tina Hill with 15 points, two of which were aces; while Sally Heiring had 13; Sue Bulmer, 12, including five aces; and Chris Samp, 10. Hill topped the team in spike kills with 16 while Doris Riley had 11 and Wendy Johnson eight.

The Fifth Annual Stevens Point Cross Country Ski Races which are being co-sponsored by the Rotary Club and the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point Athletic Department are scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 19. UWSP Director of Athletics Dr. Paul E. Hartman has announced.

The popular event which will be held again at the Stevens Point Country Club, attracts skiers from Central Wisconsin to as far away as Green Bay. The racing program is designed for beginning skiers of all ages as well as advanced skiers who look for a fast moving short course.

All races will be three kilometers in length with the exception of the men's open race which will be six kilometers.

Competition will begin at 9 a.m. with boys and girls 10 and under competing. Following in order will be 12 and under at 10 a.m., 14 and under at 11 a.m., and an open race for novice men followed by an open race for women at noon. The men's open is scheduled for 1 p.m. and a men's master race for those 40 years of age and older will be held at 2 p.m.

Trophies will be awarded to all first place finishers and medals to second and third place winners.

A registration fee of $3 will be charged for each race with all proceeds going to the Rotary Club for their scholarship program.

Registration forms can be picked up at the Hostel Shoppe, the Sport Shop, Campus Cycle, or the UWSP Athletic Department. Advance registration is urged, but registration will be accepted up to one-half hour before each race time.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting Hartman at the UWSP Athletic Department at 346-3257.

A recognition dinner to honor the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point's conference championship winning men's cross country team will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 24, at the Holiday Inn, UWSP director of athletics Dr. Paul E. Hartman has announced.

The dinner will cost $6 per person and will begin at 6 p.m. Additional information or reservations may be made by calling the UWSP Athletic Department at 346-3257.

Intramurals: Fun For Everyone

by Kristi Huebschen

What's fun, physical and includes more than one person? The answer is simply UWSP's intramural program. The intramural program consists of two divisions. One division is for on-campus students and the other is for off-campus students. The purpose of the intramural program is to involve the university community (which includes faculty) in varied recreational activities, develop proper mental attitudes, and develop physical fitness.

Intramurals has programs for both men and women.

These co-ed programs include football, volleyball, softball, and doubles racquetball. The doubles racquetball will start in the spring semester. A dorm wing or group of people who live off-campus can form a team. Each team must have their entry form in by March 24. The actual play starts on March 26 and runs through the 28th. The softball program also starts in the spring. The entry date for softball is April 21 and the play days are April 23, 24, and 25.

Intramurals has other programs, which are divided into men's and women's division. Some popular programs in this area are football, volleyball, basketball, and softball. Football and volleyball are nearly finished for this year, however basketball and softball are still on the agenda. The entry date for basketball is December 11 and the program starts on January 25. Softball's entry date is March 31 and starts on April 19.

Another program is called Pass-Punt-Kick. Each team needs at least three members. After each person has punted, passed, and kicked the three best points of a column of irregular advice by Bob Ham

Ask Uncle Bob

This week, Uncle Bob takes time out to answer your breathless questions about the wonderful world of sports. Since most Americans have long ago given up actually participating in sports — that kind of fooling around can play havoc with a guy's knees — most of the letters have to do with watching various sports on TV.

As far as we're concerned, there's nothing wrong with sitting in front of the old tube with a cool Bud in one paw and a fistful of giant pretzels in the other, vicariously experiencing the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat. It builds character without tearing cartilage.

We do, however, take exception to some of the drek being passed off as sports programming. Take Wide World of Sports — please. Why anyone would want to spend a Saturday afternoon watching the Pinocchio Playoffs in Trumps Bluff, the Clean and Jerk Competition at the Cleveland Y, and the Frog Punting Invitational in Toad Suck, Wyoming is beyond us.

If we descend the ladder of TV sports to the very bottom rung, we come to Professional Wrestling. Let's not.

Finally, in a class by themselves, are such events as Celebrity Battle of the Sexes and Battle of the NFL Cheerleaders, which focus rather intensely on the slow motions of nubile young female TV personalities bouncing around in damp, skimpy outfits. It's no Superbowl, but it sells Toyotas.

But enough idle chit-chat. Let's have a look at some letters.

Dear Uncle Bob:

My husband watches football on TV all the time. He watches pro games, college games, high school games — even those dumb Canadian games on the all-sports channel.

The other day when he was watching Monday Night Football, I came into the livingroom all powdered and perfumed, in my sexiest little peekaboo nightie, sat down on his lap, and whispered some things into his ear that I can't repeat, on account of your paper is in enough trouble with the Moral Majority as it is.

When I started unbuttoning his shirt he blew this stupid whistle he wears around his neck, threw a yellow dish-towel on the floor, and penalized me fifteen yards for "illegal use of hands."

I'm at the end of my rope. I'm out of ideas and out of time. What can I do?

Marci

Dear Marci:

Punt.

Dear Uncle Bob:

I'm an all-American sportsman who likes to hunt, and I'm sick and tired of hearing about the so-called sexual implications of hunting — you know, like how my gun is supposed to be an extension of my male organ, or how us hunters are violating the woods, doing some sort of weird macho rape number on nature, and other crap like that.

I just want to enjoy the out-of-doors. I want to be out tramping through the crisp autumn air, in the first blush of the dawn, creeping through tracks of virgin forest in hopes of cornering a sleek, powerful buck with a huge rack and blowing its brains out. What's sexual about that?

Randy

Dear Randy:

Watch where you're pointing that thing!

Dear Uncle Bob:

Okay, is Howard Cosell some kind of illiterate jerkoid or what? I mean, can the guy even open his mouth without saying something asinine? Is he brain damaged? Is he completely stupid? Where did he come from? Why does ABC keep him around?

Don

Dear Don:

Yes. No. Possibly. Completely. Pods. Who knows.

Dear Uncle Bob:

Hey, I'd like to share a great sports suggestion with your readers, okay? My girl

Nancy and I like to watch football games together, right? So we watch the first half, then during halftime we go into the bedroom for a little unsportsmanlike conduct, if you know where I'm coming from. Then we watch the second half. Usually. Pretty wild, huh?

Jerry

Dear Jerry:

Holy smokes, what a keen idea! If I were you I'd rush right off to the U.S. Patent Office and put my name on that one, otherwise somebody might steal it and then they'd get all the royalties. Don't worry about Nancy — Uncle Bob will be glad to keep her entertained while you're gone.

Uncle Bob Presents: Great Moments in Sports

On March 13, 1977, Dewey J. Hoffensack of Freefall, New Jersey stepped off the top of Mount Everest, on purpose and without a parachute. In so doing, he set a new world record for distance in the rapidly growing sport of Mountain Falling. This physically draining and usually fatal sport gets little or no network television coverage, and as of yet, no major distributor of sports equipment has shown interest in sponsoring a meet. So why do the Fallers do it? When asked this question just before his famous fall, the late Hoffensack is said to have replied, "Because it's theeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee..." This Great Moment in Sports has been brought to you by the Pointer and by Sunnyside Rest Products, makers of fine closed caskets for over fifty years.

each team are added together.

Another similar program is called Free Throw. Each person on the team receives twenty-five throws and the three best scores are recorded. The Free Throw Program will be held on December 1 and 3. Participants can enter the day of the event.

There is also the annual September Turkey Trot. Each team needs at least three people. This trot consists of a run around Dreyfus Lake. Then the top three times of each team are recorded.

For all you racquetball fans, intramurals offers a program in this area too. There is the doubles racquetball tournament, which a student can pair up with another student or a faculty member. The doubles racquetball tournament is over for this year, however the singles racquetball program will start in February. The women's entry date is February 17 and play dates are February 19, 20, and 21. The men's entry date is February 10 and play dates are February 12, 13, and 14.

Doubles and singles tournaments are also offered in the table tennis and badminton programs. Each team can have one doubles team and two singles teams. These tournaments take place in one day.

For all you waterbugs, there is a one night swimming meet on March 2. The meet will include seven events, such as 50 yard free swim, 100 yard medley, 50 yard backstroke, 100 yard free relay and others. Another water program is the inner-tube water polo. This game consists of playing polo while sitting in an inner-tube. The entry date for this event is March 31 and play date is April 19.

And for all you faithful runners there is an indoor and outdoor track meet. There are ten events, such as high jump, shot put, mile run, 60 yard dash, and 8 lap relay. The indoor track meet will be held on March 8, 9, and 10. The outdoor track meet will be held on May 4.

Wrestling is the only program that is not co-ed. This program is only for men. One tournament is scheduled for December 2.

Intramurals also offers any group or organization a chance to reserve Quandt-Berg complex, including gyms, courts, etc., for times when there aren't any other programs scheduled. Your group or organization can have an "all nighter," which allows your group to use the facilities from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. If you and the guys or gals want to shoot buckets or use the gym or court in another way, scheduled times can be arranged.

The intramural program offers free time in the pool also. The hours Monday through Friday are 7 a.m. to 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. The hours for Saturday and Sunday are noon to 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Everyone is welcome to come and swim.

However, you ask: where can I find out more? The answer is simple: the intramural office located next to Berg gym in the phy-ed building. They are open Monday through Friday from 3 p.m. to 10 p.m. and on Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. So dig those tennis shoes out of the closet and join the fun that intramurals has to offer.

mature cool-headedness in the face of incredible events. The six dwarves are portrayed as base but somehow ingratiating, loutish but loveable. Their strangeness is believable in the light of the entire plot, and their convincing performances. Other players are as finely cast, particularly Sean Connery as Agamemnon and, a nice touch, Ralph Richardson as the Supreme Being in a three piece wool blend.

Time Bandits is worth seeing not only once, but twice, to catch everything you missed the first time—proving once again that child's play is not only for children.

"It's overwhelming," said Doxtator, "but there is an insane cult-like mania for mass sports. For example, professional football has become a cult in itself. There are groupies, and camp followers that eat, drink, and follow their sport. In fact, there is a whole industry in Green Bay that includes a museum, and stocks various items and books that deal with this football cult." Doxtator mentioned that individual sports, such as jogging or golf, also involve individual cults where people avidly do their own thing. Doxtator said that these two present trends in sports will accelerate in the future.

Kris Kringles Wants You

Santa and his reindeer are alive and well and headed for Stevens Point, that is if Slither E. Dee and Bertha Dabluzer can't stop them. Heaven knows they're going to try.

On December 18 and 19, an Original Musical for Adults and Children entitled "I Believe In Santa Claus," will be staged at the Sentry Theatre. The show was created completely by students — a student wrote the script, the original score was written by another, it's student directed and is cast with theatre students from the university. All the designs (sets, costumes, lighting, etc.) were all, you guessed it, created by students.

This is the premier performance of the play, although several other state companies have already inquired about when the script will be released for performance by other groups. Visions of publication are also dancing in the creative staff's heads.

Tickets are now on sale at the Theater Arts Box Office in COFA and may be purchased at the cost of $1 for general admission and 50 cents for students with an ID and activity pass. The show's directors ask that you buy tickets early so a decision can be reached on whether a third performance on the afternoon of the 20th should be scheduled. Showtime is 7:30 on the 18th and 1:30 on the 19th.
