Commission report is sadly lacking

Step back Milwaukee chief Breier. Move aside Philly fanatic Frank Rizzo. The Stevens Point Police and Fire Commission proved convincingly last week that no one holds a monopoly on partisan justice.

At a press conference last Wednesday, commission spokesman William Nuck presented what he referred to as the ‘last word’ on July’s racial beating incident. Poppycock!

There was barely a statement made by President Nuck that wasn’t be verbally assaulted, and well they should be.

The commission claims it based their conclusions on the recently released ‘Kurth’s report’— an independent fact finding investigation of the incident conducted at no small expense to city taxpayers. That they took the report at face value seems highly unlikely. Attorney Kurth indicated a high probability of racially motivated behavior on the part of the responding officers, and perhaps with the desk sergeant as well.

The commission on the other hand asserts that there was no racial prejudice demonstrated or intended at any stage of operations.

Who should we believe? Well, at least one witness who was interviewed by both Attorney Kurth and the police investigators relayed the following story:

At St. Michael’s hospital where Nigerian student Tony Isua was being treated for his assault injuries, a woman asked Officer Ronald Zdroik, “Aren’t you going to go after those people who beat them up?” Zdroik allegedly replied: “No, they’re just niggers.”

In the officer’s defense, the commission reorted that the slur was reported by a single person not directly involved in handling the case and that no one else heard the remark. Speaker Nuck added that it was only one comment and that derogatory Polish slurs are heard everyday in Stevens Point. Finally, since Zdroik is married to an Oriental woman, Nuck concluded that the slur must have been ‘tongue in cheek.’

By the tongue in cheek comment, the commission seems to have contradicted their initial instinct to cast doubt on the credibility of the witness (who, it should be added, would’ve been considered very credible in the eyes of Kurth). As regards the frequency of Polish jokes and slurs heard on a regular basis in Point, it should be remembered, first, that an area Poles can find strength in numbers. Whereas they are well represented in the city’s census rolls, foreign students are not.

Secondly, we would find it just as deplorable if local law enforcement officials were heard slandering Polish ancestry in circumstances similar to those which occurred.

Finally, the comment about the officer’s spouse is a shaky contention at best. Selective program Nuck and his counterparts adhere to a Disneylike fantasy about what motivated last summer’s brutal assault and the police who responded to it.

Michael Daehn
Chancellor Phillip Marshall said Wednesday that flexible faculty contracts could reduce overstaffing problems in the event of enrollment decline.

His proposal would create an employment arrangement that would take effect for the next nine years for the teaching faculty at UW-Oshkosh.

Instead of having contracts which involve the fall and spring semesters, the new plan would involve contracts for an entire calendar year which would include the summer session.

Within that time frame, a person might teach full-time in summer and have reduced assignments in one or both of the regular semesters. Any number of arrangements could be worked out including time off for an entire semester, Marshall explained.

The faculty would do the exact same teaching for the same level of pay. The only difference would be the number of teaching hours.

Thus, those who are seeking to acquire CO status are being encouraged to do so now in case the government determines that a military draft is necessary. Those who are seeking CO status should contact a local draft counselor or contact a state, regional or national draft agency.

To gain CO status, one must convince his local draft board that he has a long-standing philosophical objection to war.

Art Simmons of the UWSP Campus Ministry suggests that those seeking CO status should conduct research into the philosophical peace ideals of the likes of Gandhi to prepare for any questions one's local draft board may ask. He said draft counselors would do the exact same teaching for the same level of pay. The only difference would be the number of teaching hours.

The advent of peace-time draft registration has intensified interest in CO status by young men who do not want to engage in combat should the government's need arise.

The federal government has taken steps to increase the number of arrangements.

As part of the UWSP adaptation, the chancellor said approval from local faculty would be needed before the plan could be put into operation.

Marshall also said he would like to see the federal government giving departments to have more autonomy handling their personnel. Those who are seeking CO status should be able to have their CO status seekers to contact her for information concerning the draft and CO status at 341-3307. She also recommends that CO status seekers contact one of the following draft agencies: The Wisconsin Committee Against the Draft, P.O. Box 12182, Milwaukee, WI 53212, telephone (414) 963-7218; the Midwest Committee for Military Counseling, 2025 Spate Street, Suite No. 1006, Chicago, IL 60616, telephone (312) 935-3349; or the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors, 2208 South Street, Philadelphia, PA 19146, telephone (215) 543-4829.

The sensors approved a calendar for the 1984-85 academic year which, according to Coralie Dietrich, chairman of the academic affairs committee, has more equalized time between the two semesters.

Also approved was a resolution by Diane Baliff which commends the student government for "the manner in which it has handled itself" in dealing with racial problems that have developed since a UWSP student from Nigeria was beaten near a downtown nightspot this summer.

The annual student art show at UWSP will be sharing space in the Edna Carlsen Gallery with an exhibition of works by students from seven other state campuses. The shows will open with a reception and award ceremony on Dec. 3 and continue through Dec. 22 in the gallery of the Fine Arts Building. The public is invited to attend free of charge.

The Wisconsin Universities Student Exhibition was juried by Colleen Garvey, gallery director; Mark Bruggeman, member of the art faculty; Sue Konop, 1986 College Ave., assistant director; and Susan Faller of Brookfield, gallery assistant. They selected 57 pieces to be shown out of 120 entries in any media. The Best of Show Award will be chosen by the votes of gallery visitors from Dec. 6-15, and the winner of the blue ribbon will be announced on Dec. 16.

This is the 11th annual student art show on the UWSP campus. Any student currently enrolled at the university was eligible to enter two pieces in any media. The works were judged on Nov. 27 by Sister Remy Rever, professor of art at Mount Mary College, who recently showed her work in the Carlsen Gallery, and Sister Angela Fuchs, assistant professor of art at Mount Mary College, who judged the entries. Awards will be presented at the opening reception on Dec. 5.

The Oratorio Chorus will present its annual Christmas Concert at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 13, at UWSP.

The performance in Michelau Hall, Fine Arts Building, is open to the public free of charge.

Accompanist-director Brian Gorelick, the featured works are two of the most popular choral works for the holiday season: "A Ceremony of Carols" by Benjamin Britten, and the "Christmas Cantata" by Daniel Pinkham. Both works present a series of traditional texts in various settings. Britten's piece is a modern adaptation of medieval carols, and Pinkham, an American composer, uses only brass and brass brass accompaniment to the sounds of the voices to create a festive effect, Gorelick says.

Assisting the chorus will be members of the UWSP Brass Choir, Robert Van Nys, director, and soloists from the University Choir.

Snow job
To Pepper Magazine,
After watching Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer for the 13th year in a row, I finally pushed aside the facade. I saw it for what it truly is, a classic portrayal of status snobbery, an acclamation of fickle values and prejudice.
The true meaning is well masked, and understandably so. We don't want to admit to ourselves that it reflects our society. It would not surprise me if the whole tale was fabricated as some sort of justification of our society's shortcomings. Make behaviors look acceptable, and people will be able to accept themselves.

Granted, some will immediately object to this, citing that although the residents of the North Pole rejected Rudolph, Hermie, and Yukon Cornelius in the beginning, they saw their error and accepted them in the end.

I say no! They didn't learn anything. They perpetuate the undesirable practices that surfaced in the beginning of the tale, and which are prevalent throughout society's structure.

Are you ignorant to the true meaning of the story? Reflect on the circumstances for a minute. The reindeer, elves, and others used to loathe Rudolph, Hermie and Cornelius, and now they love them. Why? Because now that the trio has status, they live up to the standards of the socially elite, so they can become part of the exclusive group. With friends like that, they don't need Bumble. Bumbles bounce, but do the feelings of an emotionally confused reindeer do the same? Donner and the rest of the reindeer, the elves, and yes, even Santa are all fickle, disguising xenophobes who base their friendship on status and popularity.

If Rudolph's nose wouldn't have been bright enough, if Hermie hadn't pulled Bumble's teeth, if Cornelius hadn't saved Clarice and that's-her-name, none of them would have been accepted.

No, the people of the North Pole would have shunned them. At the end of the story, when the prejudice had supposedly been resolved, there were probably still some minority reindeer out in a shed stringing popcorn. Until they find something really spectacular that a reindeer can do, they'll never be in the show.

This is an auspicious story about those who, though different from the others, were still accepted by them. On the contrary! It accepts and approves of a group of bigots, endorsing their haughty attitudes and their fickle feelings.

Nigerian conclusions

Commission actions do not satisfy skeptics

By Chris Celickovski
Pointer News Editor

Although Police and Fire Commission member William Nuck considers the investigation surrounding the beating of two Nigerian students closed, many left the Commission's Dec. 1 press conference with unanswered questions.

As reported in last week's Pointer Magazine, this supposedly final news conference was held in response to the furor over the conclusions reached by the Police and Fire Commission in their Nov. 30 news release. According to its Dec. 1 news release, the Commission felt the "sensationalized nature and racial overtones associated with the case" were exceptional enough to mitigate their policy avoiding public disclosure of personnel matters.

Both officers responding to the call on that July night received verbal reprimands not to be entered on their personnel records. One officer was cited for failing to complete an incident report, while the other was reprimanded for uttering the racial slur "nigger." William Nuck responded to the questionable publicity of the verbal reprimands saying: "The Commission felt that these officers and their families had been disciplined enough for the five months of this incident."

He acknowledged the ability of publicofficials to tendency to bring work-related problems home, as suggested by the Stevens Point Police Department.

Robert Carey, a member of the newly-created Minority Action Council, believed the disciplinary action was inadequate.

"I was in the service, and it didn't mean a damn thing to me," contended Carey.

Eric Tande, publicity secretary for the International Club, also protected the discipline's severity.

"It (verbal reprimand) will not stop other officers from doing the same thing," Tande said in an interview with Pointer Magazine.

"You can like Hispanics and not Blacks. That is no basis for concluding that there is no racial bias."

-T. E. Tande, UWSP International Club

The Nov. 30 news release blamed "a weakness in clerical and management procedures" for the mishandling of the case. However, Nuck retracted that statement and attributed the unique handling of this particular incident to "an administrative error" by the officers involved.

The Department plans to revise the whole system for reporting assaults for the mishandling of the case. Nuck quoted the incident as "an administrative error" by the officers involved.

"You can like Hispanics and not Blacks. That is no basis for concluding that there is no racial bias," contended Tande.

The Stevens Point Police Department will take further steps to sensitise its current staff to racial and cultural differences, while future candidates will be screened regarding their racial attitudes, Nuck said.

The commission member felt politics had indirectly entered the controversy, and that Alderman Bullis' call for his resignation:

"Collectively or individually I take offense to that. If there is, in Bill Nuck, a degree of racial bias I want some documentation and evidence," stated Nuck. When not wanting to get in a mud-slinging campaign with Mayor Haberman, Bullis or anyone else, Nuck continued.

Apparent inconsistencies between the report of investigator James Kurth's final report and the conclusions reached by the Commission also drew fire from the audience. A reporter from a local TV station asked if Nuck's affirmation that the officer administration was nothing but a "repudiation of the Commission's previous stand" was correct. "I'm not sure," Nuck replied.

"The city of Stevens Point gave the Police and Fire Commission $2,000 so they could make a whitewash of the incident," Bullis asserted.

James Kurth's report concluded that this particular case was handled differently than similar assault cases, contending the reason for the discrepancies remained "unclear." The Police and Fire Commission stated: "We didn't mean a damn thing to me." Critics, however, feel this is an administrative error.

"The city of Stevens Point gave the Police and Fire Commission $2,000 so they could make a whitewash of the incident," Bullis asserted.

This resolution will be presented to the Stevens Point Police and Fire Commission meeting on Monday, December 15, 1982, at 7 p.m. at police Stevens Point Fire Station.

Regents formally approve tuition hikes

Madison — Students must bear more of the burden in funding the UW System, asserted the Board of Regents as they signed final approval to the UW's proposed 1983-85 Biennial Budget Request last month.

Given preliminary approval by the Board of Regents in October, the budget request in its finalized version seeks a total budget of $1.1 billion, a 4.8 percent hike over the level appropriated in the previous biennium. The budget request will now be sent to the state Office of Administration for consideration.

The budget request calls also for the establishment of a 27 percent fee policy, which is a deviation from the state's historic 25 percent formula requiring students to finance one quarter of their instructional costs.

The increase in state funding and the 27 percent fee policy, if approved by the state in the budget process, will result in tuition hikes of $45-$55 for 1983-84 and $52-$60 for 1984-85 for students to resident undergraduates, and will be higher for graduate and out-of-state students.

In his remarks to the Board, United Council President John Hanley wanted to ensure that students "voted to support the University's goals" and not graduate "principle (and) to object to particular items in the budget.""Student education, which is another topic discussed at this month's Board of Regents meeting.

This past summer, the Joint Committee on Review of Administrative Rules (JCRA) adopted a report which can affect the Board of Regents to promulgate its existing policies pertaining to faculty and students into administrative rules. The JCRA recommended that the policy which pertain specifically to students: the use of oral and visual aids such as classroom tape-recording, segregated fees, and merger implementation (shared governance) be revised.

In June of this year, United Council went on record in favor of rule making. In retrospect, this decision seems hasty. As a process, rule-making offers an excellent chance to change the status quo. For instance, it might be possible to argue before a legislative committee that the university's proposed rule with respect to segregated fees not be the only way to handle the situation. For not only are there allocable and non-allocable — ought not to be approved. The idea of having resident students pay more. But the question that remained unasked, and to some degree remains unanswered, whether students want more power, or whether they can handle it.

In late August, asked its member student government to file a rule making on the status of the four Policy statements issued by the Party will be scrutinized for clues as to the intentions of Andropov. Andropov has already emphasized economic reforms and has certainly faces problems which can no longer be ignored. The Soviet economy is long low productivity, lack of consumer goods, poor distribution, waste and consumption.

Creationism battle continues

SSPS The 700 Club is a Christian Evangelical television program shown on 150 cable systems across the country. It has offered support to the Hudsonville, Michigan, school system in defending two biology instructors who teach creationism. The 700 Club was not specific about the type of help it was offering, but the program does solicit significant amounts of contributions from its viewers.

The Hudsonville School superintendent, Jack Musser, said that there is a good possibility of a trial in his local community for the teaching of creationism in the public school system. The case was strengthened, he said, when the American Civil Liberties Union filed a lawsuit on the matter. Musser intends to allow the trial in his community, in the absence of any court action against the district.

The creationism movement has lost several court battles in the last year, and the ACLU has often been one of its adversaries. The most recent case is brought by the Board of state laws authorizing or requiring the teaching of creationism. The board has been framed so as to omit any reference to teaching evolution, allowing finding that they are in fact concerned with the advancement of religion in the schools. The laws have, therefore, been struck down as violating the constitutional requirement of the separation of church and state.

Louisiana is the last remaining state to have a law on the books requiring the teaching of creationism. A similar law was struck down earlier this year in Arkansas. This week the Louisiana Board of Elementary and Secondary Education joined suit against the ACLU asking a federal judge to strike down the law as unconstitutional. The board claimed that the legislature had exceeded its authority in requiring equal time for the teaching of creationism.

SSPS — Federal District Court Judge Terry Hatter has declared the draft registration law invalid. In an unexpected development in the federal courtroom, the judge ruled that the law was improperly implemented when President Carter failed to wait sixty days for public comment after enacting the draft registration requirement in the Federal Register. The Carter administration may appeal the thirty-two-day government's appeal.

Draft registration was instituted by President Carter after widespread resistance. The government will appeal Hatter's decision.

The immediate effects of Judge Hatter's decision were substantial. The Army has already been ordered to stop registering men who have already been convicted for failing to register for the draft. The Army's decision against this case is at various stages. Hatter's ruling came at the conclusion of a lengthy trial in which he clashed with government attorneys.

The Selective Service Administration and the Justice Department both announced that they intended to conduct business as usual. Selective Service will continue the registration program; and the Department of Justice will proceed with cases against nonregistrants.

As expected, Judge Hatter also ruled in favor of the defendant in the case. The dismissal was the result of the refusal of Edwin Meese III, counsel to President Reagan, to appear in compliance with a court order. The government also refused to offer some of its documents or allowing Mrs. Meese to testify. He said that the documents and the conversations about which Meese would testify contain military material, and that is why the government is resisting the court's order. The Justice Department says that it intends to appeal Judge Hatter's decisions in this case.

In refusing to comply with the court order, government attorneys said, "It is our position that important governmental issues are at stake in this case. We have made our claim of privilege, which we sincerely believe have not been shown to be incorrect in any case."

Nor can we concur in the court's finding concerning the selective prosecution record. A similes, will make decisions relating to the prosecution of nonregistrants were made within the Justice Department and that there is, therefore, no nexus between the selection of the defendant for prosecution.

Brezhnev supporters, as was a recent shake-up of the Railway Ministry for poor performance, is feared.

Andropov's foreign policy statements have reflected the need every new Soviet leader has felt to stabilize international affaires while purging his domestic house in order.

To ease tension on his Eastern flank he has been meeting with political leaders of the emisaries and rumors suggest he might consider removing his neighbor. With the United States he has agreed to lower the level of the talks. Andropov, who reintroduced the word "detente," in a possible attempt, has given his Afghanistan quagmire, he closed himself with President Zia of Pakistan.

It would be expected that Andropov would continue those Brezhnev policies which have been successful. Dividing the N.A.T.O. allies was, and will be, a high priority. The current trade difficulties offer tempting possibilities (classically called "exploiting the contradictions between capitalist states"). The much-feared movement of capital flight will be yet another continuing priority ("exploiting the contradictions within capitalist states").

The Polish situation seems to be stabilizing (contradictions within the Soviet empire). Some are even talking of an enhancement of his prestige at home, Andropov might call for a summit meeting with President Carter. Another possibility would be a military adventure abroad in order to divert attention from the people and unite the Party.

What should we be doing? We should reduce the harsh rhetoric of the recent past, but we should not make a unilateral gesture which might be interpreted as a sign of weakness. High priority should be given to healing the divisions in the West among populist and military strategy. This would have to be preceded by a mutually agreed-upon assessment of the Soviet danger to Europe which, of course, would be considerably difficult during a Soviet peace offensive. So goes the reasoning.

Based upon the role that "the'correlation of forces" are playing in Soviet strategy, our emphasis must be on strengthening our own. High priority should be given to approval of the U.S. defense budget and placement of weapons in Europe. At the same time we should introduce serious proposals for arms reduction at the talks already underway. If the Soviets believe we intend to remain strong and especially if they are under pressure at home to divert some of their resources from the military to the agricultural and industrial sectors, they may be willing to negotiate seriously.

Western experts say that unless the U.S.S.R. undertakes basic structural reform — which means economic decentralization — it risks a very severe economic crisis. Structural reform would certainly result in a political crisis for those the White House and the military — who reportedly were important supporters of Andropov will not.

Pearl favors 25 percent levy

Wisconsin students can take a collective action over the election of Tony Earl for governor. Earl, in answering a University question, has stated that he supports the traditional levy of 25 percent on student government room and board. Earl also supports a proposal to place a constitutional amendment before the Board of Regents. The Governor-elect also favors decentralization for students to manage their own affairs, and is opposed to attempts to restrict abstentions.

Since the election, canvassing of all votes cast in campus districts has tipped decisively in favor of Democrats. It had appeared that the Senate would face a 18-18 deadlock after Mr. Finken resigned to take his post as lieutenant governor.

Howard's canvass of votes found that Democrat Feingold had actually beaten Republican Cy Biddle by over 5,000 votes. But that the Democrats will hold a narrow margin over Regents. Earl now says that the margin will likely increase to 18 after the special election in Senator Flynn's district.

In the Assembly, an apparent Republican gain of two seats was wiped out by a canvas which showed that Democrat Lloyd Kincaid had actually beaten Republican Earl Schmidt. Incumbent Republican Robert Lauch also appears to have fallen by the wayside to his Democratic challenger Robert Thompson.

Christmas traditions bring back simpler times

By Fred Posler

Polter Features Writer

As Christmas draws near, the Christian world prepares to celebrate the birth of Christ. In Western Christendom, the holiday are seen in universal gift giving, family togetherness, and a sense of good will toward mankind.

In a conversation with Wausau Daily Record Newspapers, born UWSP history professor and Peter Kroner, a German born UWSP foreign language professor, they offered comparisons between Polish and Germanic Christmas traditions commonly to many of our Central Wisconsin Christmas practices. The acceptance of Christmas in Poland as a nation occurred around 983-986 A.D., during the time of the Polish Catholic church, as the advanced church of Eastern Europe, felt the need to counteract the beliefs, which were centered on the meal, and arranging hay around the dinner table to signify the birth of Christ, stated Soroka. Soroka concluded that the main custom of a Polish Christmas is for all members of the family to be together on Christmas Eve.

Germanic tradition also reflects Central Wisconsin Christmas practices. According to Kroner, the Germanic holiday is initially geared toward children, the family and visiting friends.

Children generally do not see the Christmas tree until Christmas Eve when bells are rung and the family dances around the tree in the home. Kroner feels that the surprise and impact of Christmas is built up and stirs the children's imagination. Singing Christmas carols and family togetherness is most important to Germanic people during this universal holiday, Kroner said. Kroner ended by signifying the meaning of the evergreen tree which symbolizes the continued life in Christian philosophy adopted during the Medieval Ages.

The Christmas season brings good will and love of fellow man into our lives and whatever the ethnic background, these feelings are universally shared.

As visions of sugar plumbs dance in your head, (as well as trig formulas and typed papers), many areas of the University Center are beginning to count down the days to the holidays with a variety of specials and activities.

For those who haven't finished Christmas shopping, (or haven't started), the University Store offers a delightful variety of gifts for everyone from UWSP shirts to decorative novelties. They also carry a wide selection of Christmas cards, ornaments and decorations to complete the theme. This year the store has published a catalogue to allow studying students an easy way to shop by browsing through pages and pages of books suitable for every age and interest. Another holiday offering at the University Store is a drawing for a Christmas stocking filled with a Webster's dictionary, an assortment of notebooks, a miniature chess set and a puzzle. To enter, just write your name on a slip of paper and stuff it into the box located in the store. No purchase is necessary. There are two drawings remaining, December 10 and 17 at 4 p.m.

Recreational Services is dreaming of a white Christmas as they plan for both indoor and outdoor activities. All winter equipment is ready to go home with you for the holidays. Downhill and cross country ski packages are available over the entire break for $35 and $25 respectively. All other equipment can be rented for the entire vacation at the price of one week's rental.

Recreational Services also has an answer to your gift giving problems. In the sporting person on your list, with gift certificates. They can be purchased for any amount for anything from billiards to equipment rental. The certificates can be purchased at the Rec. Services desk during all hours of operation.

For those who need a study break and want to help out the needy, Rec. Services will trade a half hour of billiards for one canned good. Middle Earth will exchange a half hour of equipment rental use for one canned good. The donated items will be given to the Salvation Army or Operation Bootstrap.

Tonight Santa Claus is coming to Middle Earth from 6 to 9 p.m. to host an old fashioned Christmas party, featuring pictures with Santa, free cookies and hot cider while decorating a Christmas tree. Middle Earth welcomes all UWSP students to the holiday open house.

Santa will return on December 14 from 11:15 to 2:15 in the Main Lounge to record your Christmas wishes as well as pass out free egg nog and candy canes. Student Life Activities and Programs has also coordinated a Christmas sing-a-long at Jeremiah's with Betsy Godwin and Kathryn Jeffers on December 15 from 8 to 10:15. The movie "Miracle on 34th Street" will be shown on December 18 and 19 at 7 and 9 p.m. in Jeremiah's. The week of December 13 the University Choir will spread Christmas cheer throughout the University Center caroling at various times.

The Print Shop is also involved in spreading holiday cheer with custom made Christmas cards. The cards were all designed last year by UWSP students and printed in the Print Shop. Each box contains 25 cards in a variety of designs.

If nothing ready made suits your taste, the Print Shop will be involved in an assortment of styles on a variety of paper stocks and colors. Cards can be purchased and ordered at the Print Shop window Monday through Friday from 8 to 4:30 p.m.

So while there may be no place like home for the holidays, the University Center is the next best thing to being there. The Rec. Services desk looks forward to helping you kindle your Christmas spirit.

Littman pointed out that it is important for a student to see a counselor first, to make sure that test anxiety, and not some other problem, is what they are experiencing.

For example, sometimes test anxiety is not the problem, but strategy is. If your studying techniques have not been successful, then the Planning and Study Skills Lab is the place to go.

There, you are likely to find Randy Peelen, director of the lab, which helps students to improve their studying strategies. The lab is open to all students, and is even offered as a 1 credit class, Psych 101. Thirteen upper-class Psychology and Education majors work with students in the lab.

Peelen cited the main trouble students have as organizing material and information. The lab teaches students how to take notes, how to vary types of examinations and problems, and getting the most from textbooks.

Said Peelen, "We'll make it clear to students what they can't do better. Peelen has a whole bag of studying tricks that are sure to keep you out of quick sand. The decision is yours. There are places to go to for help. But you better hurry, finals are just a quick sand patch away.
The Lennon Legacy: Memory of a fallen hero

By Joseph Vanden Plas
Senior News Editor
December 8, 1980.

For Beatle fans it was, as singer Don McLean once sang in reference to Buddy Holly, the day the music died. This time, however, the fallen hero was John Lennon. “The music” had not simply died, the musician had been murdered.

That was two years ago. It was, at the time, the worst night of my life and I’m certain that it was the worst night of many other lives too. When I heard the terrible news I was in a friend’s dormitory room watching Monday Night Football. Several thoughts passed through my mind – John Lennon, shot? Why? By who?

Lennon, the most brilliant of the former Beatles, dead? It has to be a mistake. I was stunned. I wanted to be alone so I trudged slowly back to my dorm room. The first thing I did when I got there was turn on the radio. Sure enough, the dedications began. The pleasing melody of Number 9 Dream struck me as it never had before. Seconds later I was laying on my bed weeping.

News reports of Lennon’s death followed a short time later. John Lennon... shot in the back seven times... pronounced dead on arrival at Roosevelt Hospital... scores of fans gathering outside the Dakota in tribute. Imagine all the people living life in peace. It was such an ironic end to the life of a peace dove. Lennon was an intellectual, a cynic – Give Peace A Chance, Give Me Some Truth, Bring On The Lucie – he was at his best singing in protest.

I was only seven years old when Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated. I did not realize the significance of King’s life and death until years later. Lennon’s death had immediate impact. A number of emotions are felt at a time when extraordinary people are unjustly silenced: shock, sadness, anger, disgust. To this day, I still harbor these emotions when thinking of Lennon’s death.

The lives he touched go on, almost as an extension of his own because he was such an important part of the lives he touched. Every sound, every verse, every idea he created will not soon be forgotten and although it’s never easy to accept the death of one’s archetype, his memory will help ease the pain of his loss. And so will this...

Well we all shine on
Like the moon and the stars and the sun
Well we all shine on Everyone

Lennon’s death took much of the joy out of Christmas 1980. On Christmas Eve of that year I remember watching a video-tape of the silent vigil held for Lennon in New York’s Central Park. The tape showed a young man crying at the vigil, and while the tape was running, the lyrics and music of Lennon’s “And So This Is Christmas” were played.

There’s a better way to get there this Christmas.

In need of a waste disposal policy

By Sherry Wise
Pointer Environmental Writer

Safe disposal of nuclear waste is a problem which has plagued the U.S. since the late 1940's, when the atomic bomb came into existence. Further complicated in the 1950's with the advent of atmospheric nuclear weapons testing, the waste problem has risen to become one of our nation's most serious environmental concerns.

This concern and its effect on national policy was the subject of a presentation last Tuesday night by Mr. Pat Walsh, the executive director of the State Radioactive Waste Review Board. This State Review Board acts as a voice for Wisconsin's citizens and has been active since July lobbying and releasing information to the Wisconsin public. According to Mr. Walsh, educating the public and representing state interests is very important, as no national policy regarding nuclear waste now exists.

Actual & Proposed Sites

The lack of a national nuclear waste policy is the major stumbling block to adequate waste disposal. At the present time, the nation's nuclear waste products are being stored in tanks in Illinois, New York, Washington, and Idaho. These tanks contain a sodium buffer to prevent their radioactivity, but they still tend to leak highly toxic radioactive liquid.

Realizing the potential hazards of the storage tanks, the Atomic Energy Commission started searching for a possible site in Wisconsin about five years ago. Without any nucleus waste rods via deep injection. Their "most promising" site seemed to be at Lyons, Kansas, which is situated near extensive salt beds. Further research, however, revealed that the Lyon's beds had been used in solution salt mining. This meant that the beds had once been injected with water, so they contained large quantities of potential ground water supply. Thus, any nuclear waste injection would pose a threat of ground water contamination, and the site was rejected.

Scheunemann indicated CBE reached our financial goals."

Besides fund raising, Scheunemann said that CBE fulfilled their other main objective in canvassing. That objective is talking with people about citizen environmental concerns. "Information ranging from health data to pollution complaints has been received through our public outreach," wrote Scheunemann in a letter to Pointer Magazine. Also, several months of information on pesticides went out to interested parties.

Scheunemann said in a telephone interview that CBE canvassers received "surprising" news from citizens regarding neurological problems with children.

"The DOE uses these guidelines and the resulting "sittings bill" did not, as Mr. Walsh stated, result in any legislation. The U.S. Department of Energy now follows its own procedure in site exploration."

CBE's move out of town

By Todd Hetchkins
Pointer Environmental Editor

If you have been trying to call Mr. Tom Pray-Sims, a Better Environment office and you only get a recorded message, there's good reason behind that message.

CBE no longer has a phone because CBE no longer has an office here in Point. November was the last month of regional canvassing based in Stevens Point, said CBE South Central Canvass Director Craig Scheunemann. CBE canvassers went to three-quarters of the communities in a fifty mile radius of Stevens Point. Scheunemann said that CBE gained over 500 households as new members. As a result, CBE canvassers received the responsibility of state and regional levels.

CBE's work in the Stevens Point area has only temporarily halted as CBE will be returning to Stevens Point in June or July, Scheunemann said CBE would return then "probably for a good four of five months."

"Information ranging from health data to pollution complaints has been received through our public outreach," wrote Scheunemann in a letter to Pointer Magazine. Also, several months of information on pesticides went out to interested parties.

Scheunemann said in a telephone interview that CBE canvassers received "surprising" news from citizens regarding neurological problems with children.

"The DOE uses these guidelines and the resulting "sittings bill" did not, as Mr. Walsh stated, result in any legislation. The U.S. Department of Energy now follows its own procedure in site exploration."

Present DOE policy

First, the DOE uses geographical literature to conduct site screenings at the national and regional levels. These screenings seek out extensive geologic areas which possess large heat storage capacities and are technically applicable. Such areas usually exist in deposits of salt, granite, tuff, and basalt. After these regions are located, field work is done in the "area, characterization" phases. Last, an area of less than ten square miles is isolated in the "final site selection phase."

Close calls for the NOS, like Neenah and Port Edwards, will be reached by CBE at that time.

Presently, several D.O.E. explorations are nearing the phase of final selection, and Mr. Walsh predicts that the first (disposal) site in salt in the next six to eight months."

Nuclear-free dorm

Pray-Sims says no to nukes on their turf

By John C. Savagian
Pointer Environmental Writer

"There is no much space in this magazine devoted to the coverage of dormitory life. This may, in fact, be a first in the history of this paper to find the results of a weekend council meeting discussed in length. But history was made at the hall council meeting by the gathering of the students at Pray-Sims, and it is necessary to give them some well deserved attention.

On November 30, during what was considered a routine meeting, Chris Sauer, a member of the student organization Students Against Nuclear Extinction (SANE), and a resident of Pray-Sims Hall, requested that Pray-Sims declare itself a "nuclear free dorm." He went on to explain just what this meant to each of the students who live in the dorm, to the dorm itself as part of this university, and what this means to other universities throughout the country. It was Sauer's hope that Pray-Sims would set an example to the other dorms here at Stevens Point by denouncing the nuclear arms race as a threat to the human race and by declaring itself free from the insane policy of producing more and more weapons which would make the world closer to the brink of annihilation.

The dorm council did not spend much time debating the merits of this proposal. Instead, Mr. Sauer argued then for the feasibility of this dorm's becoming a "nuclear-free zone." He argued for the specific proposal: that the dorm Pray-Sims be set as an "nuclear free" policy. He also addressed the issue of what he called the "nuclear free dorm" issue. The dorm Pray-Sims, was sitting on a time bomb with the fuse lit and time for action running out. Thus the dorms should be taken out of context and isolated as a lone decision by a bunch of administered students, but viewed in the context of a world wide movement to destroy and end the pack considerable weight.

The vote was taken. Out of the thirteen students who were present, thirteen voted in favor, four voted against, and two abstained. Pray-Sims became the first hall on this campus to declare itself nuclear free. By doing so, Pray-Sims declared itself off limits to the design, testing, and production of nuclear weapons. Since the DOE has been a great deal of public pressure to find safe disposal sites. In 1980, President Carter designated the government's Interagency Review Group, which had the responsibility of forming a procedure with which to choose nuclear disposal sites. The group's report set up three specific guidelines:

1) Consultation and concurrence with the state governments to guarantee that the states are full partners in the siting process.
2) Development of waste management regulations for site finding and operation.
3) Need for development of a long-range national nuclear waste disposal plan.

These guidelines and the resulting "sittings bill" did not, as Mr. Walsh stated, result in any legislation. The U.S. Department of Energy now follows its own procedure in site exploration.

Pray-Sims' Hall, like Neenah and Port Edwards, will be reached by CBE at that time.

But, significant, several very different options exist as to how much impact the states should have in the siting process. As Mr. Walsh said: "State protection provisions are the key to any nuclear waste disposal effort. It is the responsibility of state agencies, like Wisconsin's Review Board, to educate the public and public officials and to educate public to effectively deal with our nation's nuclear waste disposal problem."
Blasted over acid rain

Congressman Dave Obey said last week that "the Reagan administration is saying one thing and doing something entirely opposite on the acid rain issue. And areas like Northern Wisconsin which are highly vulnerable to the effects of acid rain should stand to pay the price."

Obey's comments were triggered by the revelation today that the administration is cutting a major acid rain research project being funded by the Environmental Protection Agency by 90 percent. The project is designed to help find out how much it will cost to control acid rain. This year's funding for the research is being slashed from $580,000 to $100,000.

"It's a 'do-nothing' position behind solemn expressions of concern," Obey said. "First the administration opposes any new provisions in the Clean Air Act to regulate acid rain emissions. Then it says not enough research has been done on the problem. Then, while the money is being cut, the agency is cutting the money for current acid rain research.

The 7th District Congressman pointed out that as it is already been spent on the nearly completed project to estimate the costs of utility companies to cut the emissions that contribute to acid rain. The only cost projections available were done by the utility companies themselves. "This budget cut puts an end to this important research," Obey said, "and shows to the American people that the administration has no intention of taking seriously the potential destruction of our environment and precipitation."

Obey added that the administration's "do-nothing" stance is afraid of what acid rain research will find out. Their attitude may be, 'what we know can hurt us.'"

The 7th District Congressman said he intends "to work for a strong federally-funded research program and a strong Clean Air Act that specifically deals with the problem of acid rain that do their damage hundreds of miles from the source. We owe a debt to the environments and the economies of areas like Northern Wisconsin."

Unified around groundwater

By Todd Hotchkiss

Editor

The research director of Citizens for a Better Environment (CBE) told Pointer Magazine last week that "is a lot stronger and more productive effort" for groundwater protection would result if all of the people being impacted by groundwater contamination would unite around the issue. In those impacts, and the common thread is groundwater."

By Todd Hotchkiss

Editor

The research director of Citizens for a Better Environment (CBE) told Pointer Magazine last week that "is a lot stronger and more productive effort" for groundwater protection would result if all of the people being impacted by groundwater contamination would unite around the issue. In those impacts, and the common thread is groundwater."

Borden drew an analogy between a forester and a highway engineer. Both work with the environment and have accomplishments. The highway engineer designs the roads and where they grow, which mature, and the forester works with 50-100 year rotations and 15-50 year cuts, all in an environment which stays alive, is dynamic. "This lasting dynamic situation is the tie to ethics."

Borden concluded by telling the audience that as a forester "each one of you should be able to say that you have fulfilled your responsibility." This entails Can't from page 14 individual states following rain, plus the added weight of those nations that have already declared themselves to be nuclear free, such a fusion would definitely make a difference."

At this stage it may seem trivial to laud the declaration already made in Europe. So far no other dorm has followed their example. Yet, as Pointer Magazine reported in the November 18 issue ("Group Pushes for SANE Arms Policy," by Lora Holman), there is a movement afoot at this campus to have the entire university declared a nuclear free zone. Seen in this light, the addition of Pray-Sims to the nuclear free status keeps the momentum going. The Students Against Nuclear Extinction claim they have the backing of the student body and have set out on a vigorous petition drive to prove their point. During registration, four members of the student group were able to collect almost one thousand signatures in less than five hours. They estimated that the response was ten to one in favor of making UWSP the first university in the United States to declare itself nuclear free.

With the progress these students have made so far, history may be made here at this campus. The vote at Pry-Sims has all the potential to spark the other dorms, to perhaps prick their conscience. They may have a thousand, but that is not the issue that one SANE member put it, "will decide whether we have an arm's race or a human race." Naturally only time will tell, but it is the concern of these students that time is not something we have a lot of anymore.

"This school is our home, we think it's worth defending."
Cagers capture La C Classic

By Tamas Houllan
Pointer Sports Writer

"An outstanding experience" is how coach Dick Bennett summed up the Pointer basketball team's participation in the La Crosse Civic Center Classic last weekend. Taking on two teams who were participants in the NAIA National Tournament last year, the Pointers were nine point victors in both contests, beating Kearney State, who finished second and fourth."We were ready to play by taking the court early on Saturday and were ready to go on Sunday," said Bennett. "We finally put our type of basketball on display and were able to keep the score low in both games."

By Tom Burkman
Pointer Sports Writer

Earning a split in a weekend series with St. John's University at Collegeville, Minnesota, the Pointers won their first game of the season last Saturday 76-62 but were shut out the previous night 80-0. "We were totally flat and unprepared on Friday," said second year coach Lindeer Carlson. "St. John's did a good job and simply outplayed us. We stood around and played poorly."

St. John's jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Dave Anderson, John Kersmo, Mike Bitterman and Stenbeck. Stenbeck then scored the next goal—his third of the game—to give St. John's a 4-0 lead after one period. Clint Kaalska concluded the scoring and ended the 8-0 period.

"We acted like we've never seen a hockey rink before," said Carlson. But no matter who you are, you know you've never played in a different rink.

In picking up their first victory of the year, Carlson said, "We finally put our type of game together and we scored the entire 60 minutes for a change. It was a total team effort."

Paul Schaefer scored the Pointers' first goal of the season at 2:13 in the first period assisted by Bob Schmidt and Dan Taylor. Bob Engelhart scored nine seconds later to put Point 2-0. Then, with just two seconds remaining in the first period, Tim McCormick scored his second goal of the game assisted by Stew Stemmeler and Porter to give Point 4-0 over St. John's.

In the second period, Schmidt scored his second goal of the game assisted by Todd King and Bennett Morgan and assisted by Dave Anderson and Brian Koch. "It's a good feeling to get two Assists and we also scored a goal," said Bennett. "We worked hard on the forecheck and we were able to keep the puck away from our opponents."

Bennett cited tough defense, ball handling and the few shooting opportunities as keys to the victory. "We played excellent defense at the beginning, then turned it on in the second half," said Bennett. "It was a combination of hard work and good defense that led to our victory."

Bennett was quoted as saying, "We're very pleased with our performance and we're ready to take on the next challenge."

John Mack again led all scorers with 20 points, hitting 8 of 13 floor shots. Stemmeler led the Pointers in rebounding with 5 rebounds, 15 of 21 free throws and 15 field goals. For the game the Pointers hit 30 of 53 shots and 8 of 9 free throws. Mary College shot an impressive 64 percent, hitting 29 of 31 shots and fixed 6 of 11 free throws. Each team pulled down 23 rebounds, with Stemmeler and Brian Koch collecting six apiece to lead the Pointers. Terry Porter led with 7 assists while Carl Wigg had 6.

Once again the story of the game was turnovers, as DWSU turned the ball over 18 times compared to 22 for the Mary College. "Our defense was solid and our style of basketball against Mary College was successful," said Bennett. "We took our time, handled the ball well and got the shots we wanted."

The Pointers will have a chance to get things turned around and as they will host UW-Stout in a two game series at the K.B. Willett Arena. Friday night's game time is scheduled for 7:30 while Saturday's contest will be an afternoon game starting at 2:00.

If you're ready for a challenge and enjoy the great outdoors, a course in The Pacific Northwest Outward Bound may be just along your trail.

The purpose of the Northwest Outward Bound is to help you to be better prepared to challenge yourselves, experience and cope with the unfamiliar in search of an understanding of yourselves while testing and demonstrating your physical resources. The theory behind Outward Bound is to apply these new experiences of self-knowledge to everyday life.

Outward Bound courses are not easy—they are not meant to be. Experiences are designed to develop personal awareness and social growth. Participants accomplish this through physical challenges which are directed toward refining techniques, building confidence and trust within individuals and in the group.

Beginning expeditions include backpacking and camping, river crossings, snow and glacier travel, first aid, map and compass, route finding and camping. The purpose of these conditioning exercises is to improve the necessary physical condition, skills and teamwork that groups will need as they continue progression through the course.

Outward Bound courses conclude with an individual challenge. This challenge is a non-competitive marathon run which allows each participant to realize his or her potential capabilities for personal endurance and perseverance.

The Outward Bound School offers courses located in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Colorado, New Mexico and Nebraska. For more information contact: Northwest Outward Bound School, 010 S. W. Bancroft, Portland, OR 97201. (503) 243-1953

No shortage of winter activities at UWSP

By Laura Sternweis

Stevens Point is beginning to resemble the frozen arctic tundra from one of Martin Perkins' Mutual of Omaha episodes. Your electric blanket bit the dust, and you just found out that your attic apartment is completely uninsulated. Is that why you're shivering in your boxer shorts? Well then, dig your thermal underwear out of the boxers. Start a fire. Go into your attic and check the insulation. If it's zero? You can use your mothballs, roast a few bears. Start a fire. You'll be able to ice skate on campus too, after maintenance converts the field between Deboot Center and the tennis courts into an ice rink.

Skiing is always big this time of year. You can emulate Robert Redford as in the movie "Downhill Racer," at Rib Mountain, or you can go the cross country route. By the way, ski tags look impressive on a jacket. If you'd like to try any or all of these sports but don't have the proper equipment, don't worry. You can rent whatever you need from Recreational Services. They have toboggan ice skates, downhill and cross country skis.

Are you interested in the sport of curling? Then contact the Stevens Point Curling Club. It's located on Country Club Drive. And don't forget about winter water sports. Find a lake with a thick covering of ice and go ice fishing. Or don your swimsuit and do a little polar bear swimming.

Playing in the snow can be fun too. Get some friends and foes together and have a snowball fight. Do some snow-sculpting (or in layman's terms, build a snowman or a snow fort). Fall on a snowbank and make snow angels.

Have you considered snowboarding? Try it, as a sport, or as a way to get class.

You can start rounding up a team for the Arctic Rugby Fest. The Stevens Point Rugby Club sponsors this annual event later in the winter season.

If you're not into outdoor activities at this time of year, don't fret. There are plenty of indoor recreational activities for you to participate in. You can hang out at the Phyll Ed building, for example. There you can swim, run, play racquetball or lift weights, to name a few activities.

If you like sports but active participation doesn't thrill you, you can always spectate. TV offers bowl games, basketball, hockey, and Wide World of Sports all week long.

If you're looking for live action, back the Pointers, and attend UWSP basketball and ice hockey games.

So you see, when it's cold outside you can do a lot more than just sit in your attic and freeze. And, of course, if all else fails and you can't avoid it any longer, you can study.

Correction

In last week's Press Box on athletes' priorities, it was erroneously reported that only one WSUC athlete made the All-American team. Two athletes have reached that status. They are Joel Williams, a junior; and Joe Gantner, an Oshkosh alumnus who is now a second baseman for the Milwaukee Brewers.

It was also erroneously reported that Gifford Nielson played football at St. Louis and went on to quarterback for the Seattle Seahawks. Actually Nielson played at Brigham Young University and is now with Houston.

We regret these errors.
SID — The UWSP women’s swim team came up with its top performance under second year coach Carol Huetigg in Wheaton, Ill., this weekend as it captured second place in the Midwest Invitational.

Lake Forest won the 12 team meet with 651 points and was followed by UWSP, Pickett, 480; Wheaton, 453; Augustana, 396; and UW-Milwaukee 370.

Leading the Pointers was Kim Swanson with her second place finish in the 200 freestyle and the 200 backstroke, 2:05.4, and Sue Samuelson finishing sixth in the 500 individual medley and eighth in the 1650 freestyle, Pickett finishing seventh in the 100 backstroke, Geranson finishing sixth in the 100, and the 200 freestyle relay of Sarah Celichowski finishing eighth in the 50 and 100 freestyle events.

The UWSP 200 freestyle relay of Pam Steinbach, Elaine Cole, Ellen Richter, and Kim Swanson finished first with a new meet record and a national qualifying time of 1:44.5. The 400 freestyle relay of Cole, Celichowski, Geranson, and Swanson finished second with a time of 3:50.0, the 200 medley relay of Pickett, Sue Vincent, Jahn, and Steinbach finished third, and the 400 medley relay of Pickett, Vincent, Jahn, and Celichowski finished fifth. The Pointers’ next meet is...men second at Midwest

The UWSP men’s swim team finished an impressive second place out of twelve teams over the weekend in the Midwest Invitational held at Wheaton College in Wheaton, Illinois. Point compiled a total of 556 points finishing behind first place Wheaton.

Leading the Pointers was Greg Schneider, Jeff Stepanaski, and Pete Samuelson. The Pointers made several national cuts. Samosuylo second in both the 100 and 200 breaststroke at 1:03.7 and 2:11.5 respectively, times that made national cuts. Stepanaski finished second in both the 50 and 100 freestyle, and Courter finished second in both the 100 and 200 backstroke with times of 56.8 and 2:05 respectively.

salting, feedlots, whey-spreading and landfills will eventually have to be either eliminated or controlled by legislation. Kakida indicated that the best policy regarding these contaminants would revolve around the common thread of groundwater. Kakida said that impacted people should "aim at a comprehensive policy on groundwater" rather than an "industry by industry" policy which could result in an imbalance or inconsistent groundwater policy.
However, Kakida wanted to make clear that he was not telling people to neglect or forget about their own particular local or regional groundwater concern. "I'm not saying the people up north shouldn't be concerned about mining or that the people in the Central Sands shouldn't be concerned about pesticides," said Kakida.
Transcending their own particular groundwater concern to a concern and awareness about groundwater in general will be the most effective way to achieve a strong, solid, comprehensive groundwater policy.

Such a comprehensive policy is currently being worked toward by the Legislature's special committee on groundwater.
The committee is working on a policy for the Department of Natural Resources.

Noncensorial taste
A national survey carried out by UWSP English professor Lee Burress reported that contemporary books about sex, drugs, protest and women are the most repugnant works in the eyes of censors in public schools.

The survey revealed that "Go Ask Alice," the anonymous diary of a teenage girl's bout with drugs that ended in suicide, had overtaken J.D. Salinger's "Catcher in the Rye" as the leading target for public school censors.
Other books that have been heavily challenged by censors, according to the survey, include, "Our Bodies, Ourselves," "A Hero Ain't Nothing But a Sandwich" and
"My Darling, My Hamburger."

Dean Smith: gone but not forgotten
By Bill Laste
Copy Editor
I saw a guy who looked like Dean today. Of course, it wasn't him. Dean was the student killed in the fire in Stevens Point over the summer.
It's been almost five months since the fire and life goes on. Somebody else took Dean's job in the UC. It's almost as if he was never here. But he was. He hasn't been forgotten, has he?
God I hope not. Dean was one of a kind. He was the first to discover that by putting his tongue on our refrigerator, right hand on our radiator and left hand in a pitcher of water, he could gain a good "buzz."
To my knowledge, Dean was also the first person to do a solo pogo slam dance to country music. The Varity (may it too rest in peace) ever fully recovered. Dean's body imprints remain in its walls.
Not many could drink like Dean either. I think happy hours lost money because of his presence.
And the list of Dean stories goes on. If there was a Hall of Fame for Good Partiers and Nice Guys, he would have qualified for immediate induction.
However, time goes on and Dean slowly begins to hide in our pasts. Soon my college days, like Dean, will be a memory. And those stories remain to be told, over and over until I'm old and tell my grandchildren about UWSP and a crazy friend named Dean.

Sadly, the last story about Dean has been written. But no...he hasn't been forgotten.
