known & unknown candidates
The Pointer Magazine's Political Picks

Campaign '82 is nearly over and no candidate has emerged with the same colorful demeanor as the man in the red vest. Nevertheless, the election trail has provided its share of noteworthy moments—some positive, others not worthy of people running for elected public office.

On the plus side, this year's candidates have often resorted to well-reasoned, thought provoking discussions of their differing philosophies on how best to govern our state. In addition to the traditional press coverage, the public has been adequately exposed to candidate differences through an assortment of television and radio debates as well as through more partisanally controlled local appearances.

On the negative side, there were numerous incidents which painted a picture of grownup little boys playing war. In other words, "all's fair." Watching the gubernatorial candidates squabble over territorial speaking rights was sophomorish enough, but dealing with the tacky mudslinging GOP commercials was more than many late night video viewers could stomach!

Although the "hit below the belt" approach to political advertising seems to have turned the tide in Senator Bob Kasten's recent defeat of current environmental advocate Gaylord Nelson, there is little reason for the Republican character assassins to expect a reocurrence. We hope just the opposite comes true, insuring that phrases like 'moral integrity' and 'high ethics' remain applicable to a discussion of political campaigning.

With those reflections behind us, the Pointer Magazine's editorial staff would like to recommend the following choices for your support at the polls.

Governor—We wholeheartedly and unanimously endorse Tony Earl for the state's chief executive post. Throughout his career as a legislator, and especially as head of the always controversial DNR, Earl showed a penchant for effectively dealing with tough situations. Even more significant, considering the Republican opposition, Earl's record indicates clearly that his expertise was formulated on a statewide scope of operations. It also depicts Earl as a solid friend to education.

His opponent, Sheboygan businessman Terry Kohler, thinks his one dimensional "jobs, jobs, jobs" approach will rectify all of Wisconsin's nagging troubles. That Kohler is even approaching an entity as large as our state government with such a simplistic, under developed battle plan, leads us to believe he has a very sketchy understanding of what's required of Wisconsin's top administrator. And in Mr. Kohler's book, education and the UW system are just another entry in the corporate budget ledger—easily accessible for the purposes of further cutbacks.

In the race for U.S. Senator, the staff majority asks that you reject the frequent spot changing antics of the long-time incumbent William Proxmire by casting your vote elsewhere. If anyone still had doubts on which side of the political spectrum Prox's ideology lies these days, his siding with ultra-conservative Jesse Helms for school prayer, against busing, and against abortion makes it crystal clear. Although we still respect his anti-waste policies, we think a vote for a Republican in Democrat's clothing is a wasted one.

Instead take a close look at Farm and Labor Party candidate William Osborne Hart. Checking his stands, you may be amazed to see how many of them are identical to those traditionally associated with Democrats. In reality, this is simply because the Democrats over the years have helped themselves to the more appealing socialist ideas and, when in power, enacted them into law. Mr. Hart would be a strong Senator.

Where is the money going?

A pamphlet has been circulating around town outlining how the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point is spending the $28.7 million it is receiving this year from the state to operate the institution.

The publication is filled mainly with graphs, therefore it shows clearly some of the dilemmas facing the school, according to Chancellor Philip Marshall who reviewed it Wednesday for the Faculty Senate.

Because of scarce funds, his administration has been grading based to spend a greater share of its total allocation on personnel and less on supplies and equipment. That, in short, is one of the major problems on campus today, he said.

Salaries and fringe benefits for the faculty, academic staff and classified civil service staff account for 81 percent of the budget. Sixteen percent or $4.7 million is for supplies and travel, and two percent or $52,000 is for capital items and one percent or $27,000 is earmarked for loans and grants to students.

The university is spending a considerably larger proportion on personnel than many other institutions elsewhere in the country, he said.

Most striking, however, is the fact that compared to nine years ago and taking into account the Consumer Price Index—the campus spending for supplies, materials and capital (excluding utilities) is down nearly 50 percent.

The enrolment is higher than it was nine years ago while the number of employees is lower, Marshall said. Nevertheless, the cuts made in non-personal areas were disproportionate to personnel.

As a result, Marshall said he has agreed with the advice to deans to make the first round of cuts anticipated to be necessary again next year in the summer session budget. Summer session, he explained, has been “more richly funded than the regular academic year.”

The amount of money earmarked for summer will be the same as last year, but it will be less in that the cut will offset an eight percent salary increase for the faculty that is about to be implemented.

Marshall asked for comments or questions about this decision and received none.

The pamphlet he provided to the senators was produced by members of the budget office staff. It is entitled “Where Does the Money Come From and Where Does It Go?” Copies are available from Assistant Chancellor for Business Affairs Adolph (Zek) Torzewski.

Here is a summary of some of the graphs.

There are two sources of state income for general operations and tuition by students. Those additional operations general and tuition by students to have meals in campus facilities, lodging in dormitories plus grants from various foundations and governmental agencies and financial aid (grants, loans, scholarships) from Uncle Sam for direct payment to students. The university administration can use none of those dollars for instructional activities or most other operations.

In other business, the senators approved a policy for posting materials on university bulletin boards, rules the chair of the senate said were already in operation.

Take back the night

The Women’s Resource Center at UWSP and the Stevens Point Area NOW chapter will once again combine efforts to co-sponsor a third annual “Take Back the Night.”

A large will beset up in the University Center concourse both days, offering “Take Back The Night” buttons and literature about sexual assault.

A workshop dealing with preventative measures and victim advocacy will be led by a staff member of a sexual assault crisis center.

The time and place will be announced at a later date.

A rally and “Take Back the Night” march will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 28, in front of the University Center.

The demonstration will be held at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 28, in front of the University Center.

The speakers will include Debbie Meyer, UWSP Protective Services; Sergeant Fred Engebretson and Detective Audrey Reene of the Stevens Point Police Department;

Lynn McIntosh, director of the Women’s Resource Center; and the Rev. Leo Krynski, who will acknowledge society’s concern for all victims of assault, speaking at a site where a rape occurred. The march will begin about 7:30 p.m., down Main St. to Second St., back on Clark St. to Division, and through the north campus area back to the sundial. Kathyrn Jeffers and Betsy Godwin will play following the march.

Participants are asked to dress warmly and bring a candle.

More information is available through the Women’s Resource Center, Nelson Hall.

Son of a Birch

By Chris Ciechowski
Point News Editor

State Senator Scott McCallum, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, caused a minor uproar at the debate when he noted Senator William Proxmire had received the backing of many conservative groups, including one controversial organization.

McCallum: “It’s probably unfair in pointing out that the John Birch Society has ranked you highly and I

Proxmire: “I can’t sit down without referring to that last attack my opponent made when he said I apologized for accusing my opponent of being supported by the John Birch Society.”

Audience: “Does that don’t remind you, make the charge before. Boy, talk about shades of Joe McCarthy!” (Audience applause)

Son of a Birch apologizes for that, really I don’t think said McCallum later restated his apology.

To Pointer Magazine:

Your article in the October 14 issue of the Pointer, entitled "Space Colonization Possible 20 After Sputnik," describes a four-part program. Only three parts of the program were covered.

Anyone who had been there during the first 30 or 40 minutes of the program would have been able to take notes on the first lecture and slide presentation concerning pre-Sputnik planetology and would have known who gave it. It is possible that the reporter did not find the results of seven summers of planetary studies worthy of inclusion, but at least some more credit should have been given to the total effort of a Geography-Geology Department in arranging for this presentation.

Just dandy

To Pointer Magazine:

I recently attended an Environmental Issues Film series at the University. One of the films contained an extraordinary amount of testimonials by Vietnam veterans who along with their wives and children are suffering severe problems they believe to have been caused by this defoliant.

In the discussion after the film, a woman said she had reasons to believe that 24D, one of the two primary components of Agent Orange, was being used on the lawns of this campus to kill dandelions. I've no evidence as to the validity of this accusation but I believe it is not as far fetched as it may seem. Dow Chemical Corp., manufacturers of this defoliant, still possess excess quantities which they must distribute in some manner to avoid profit loss. The Dow-Agent Orange Sufferers debate is not one which the essence of this letter is concerned, nor would space allow.

What I asked myself as I walked from Collins to the library was why the lawns between the buildings needed to be dandelion free. I like dandelions. I like wildflowers. As a matter of fact, I feel my gain in education on walks about campus would be greatly enhanced by my opportunity to learn something about wildflowers rather than how neat and tidy the latest chemicals can keep lawns. This university is well known for its College of Natural Resources (formerly the School of Conservation). Why can't our campus be a living example of the philosophy of harmony with nature instead of the battle to control it?

Well, it's just a thought. Something to consider on your walk between classes today. I'd advise you didn't sit on the lawn and ponder it. Though, I hear we students have been getting rashes.

To Pointer Magazine:

It seems that there is at times little education going on itself, so it is refreshing and encouraging to learn about a class that is actually teaching something that is important to know.

Such a class is that of the "Environmental Issues Film Series" presented by Dr. Tom Detwyler, Department of Geography and Geology, on Wednesday nights, Collins Classrooms Center.

My compliments to Dr. Detwyler for his choice of films and for the enlightening discussion session afterward. If we had more of these kinds of efforts we could get more actually done to protect and preserve our environment.

A university campus cannot stand alone and expect to survive. University students and faculty must get involved in local issues. They have the expertise needed to make choices. Yes, we see little relevant taken at times to really get involved.

Any person who is 18 years of age or older is a powerful being. Why? Because they can vote! And that information is not lost on those whom we must get to act. If every student-faculty on this campus took the time to write a simple letter or call the toll free hotline to Madison (1-800-363-9869) and said, "I demand that water quality in our state be protected..." you can bet there would not be the foot dragging there is on this most important and urgent issue.

There is one student on this campus that is doing a great job of trying to alert us all to the seriousness of this issue. That is Todd Hotchkiss, Pointer Environment Editor. He is to be highly commended for his accurate and timely articles recently in the Pointer.

I can assure you that without the efforts of many people on this campus, we would be nowhere environmentally in central Wisconsin. University people are the best informed...let's hope they use this information which it will do the most good, on Nov. 2nd (at the polls).

Our recommendations in the other election contests are all legislative veterans who have consistently proven that they are both capable and creative in the problem-solving approaches they've taken as public servants. David Obey deserves to be re-elected as your Congressional Representative. A similar bid for state candidates Dave Helbach (Assembly), James Flynn (Lt. Governor), Doug La Follette (Secretary of State). On the local level, we support Mary Ann Krueger (County Clerk).

Campaign '82: down to the wire

by Joseph Vanden Plas
Senior News Editor

Governor-Lt. Governor

In examining this year's Democratic and Republican gubernatorial tickets, the contrasts in background provide clues to policy differences.

Republicans Terry Kohler and Russell Olson have been successful in state assembly, as Secretary of State and local governments. Kohler is a successful businessman, Olson has been an active farmer.

Democratic Anthony Earl and James Flynn have been prominent government administrators. Earl has demonstrated this as Speaker of the state assembly, as Secretary of the Wisconsin Department of Administration and as head of the Department of Natural Resources. Flynn has been elected to the state Senate three times.

Thus, it is not a small coincidence that Kohler and Olson favor private sector solutions while Earl and Flynn advocate the public sector. The blaming government is a panacea for the state's present economic woes.

Unemployment

Although the economy has been the overriding theme of the campaign, the dominant issue has been rising unemployment. The most recent figures have the state's jobless rate at 11.3 percent, the highest it has been since World War II.

Unemployment has predictably become the focal point of campaign rhetoric. Kohler, who has been the agribusiness deacon, charged that Earl has not formulated a specific jobs creation program.

Earl refutes the charge, claiming he has proposed a jobs creation program in May. "The truth is that I have a detailed plan for jobs creation in Wisconsin, which I proposed last May—and have elaborated on since then. It is a comprehensive plan that is specific and more wide ranging than the Kohler plan."

Both Earl's jobs proposals are tax credits to employers who create new jobs, an idea that is being funded by the voluntary pooling of capital, and the updating of job related training in the state employment system. Earl also said he will be especially sensitive to the needed training.

Kohler's job's program is similar to Earl's in that it stresses training, effective vocational training and supports technological research conducted at the University of Wisconsin for the benefit of industry.

Nevertheless, Kohler places more emphasis on private sector solutions than Earl. He has proposed a "one-stop business center" to streamline government relations with business. "Some of the (state) legislators have never gotten past the idea of 'the real world,'" he says. "If we have to understand that making a payroll is a very important job, because most people don't realize how hard it is to survive in the economic world and fail to appreciate the kind of impact the state has on business."

He also includes easing the tax burden on Wisconsin business, even though state businesses were generally favorable in comparison to those of most states.

In order for his jobs proposals to be creditable among voters, Kohler must come up with two serious campaign gaffes. First, Kohler must hide the political red underbelly from the disclosure that his Vollrath Company was expanding facilities in Tennessee and Alabama while it was laying off workers in Wisconsin.

Second, he must downplay incumbent Governor Lee Dreyfus' report that "unemployment is a necessary price to pay for economic recovery."

Taxes and the deficit

Earl and Kohler disagree on how to reduce the projected $1.5 billion budget deficit. Earl is blunt in his contention that state taxes will have to be increased and spending somewhat curtailed in order to reduce the deficit. Kohler does not believe a tax hike is necessary. He claims the deficit can be reduced by streamlining accounting procedures and by retaining the five percent state sales tax.

Earl and running-mate James Flynn, who have been successful in balancing administrative budgets in the past, say Kohler's tax freeze proposal is unrealistic and will lead to cuts in aid to municipalities.

Both candidates favor the extension of the five percent sales tax with eventual application to property tax relief.

Environment

On environmental issues, the two sides disagree on the ground water and radioactive waste questions.

Earl, the darling of environmental groups, has opposed the nuclear power plant which was the Secretary of the DNR. Kohler's accusations have stirred much controversy and caused many politicians and journalists around the state to question his ethics. Earl, of course, is offended by the ads but prefers not to make an issue of them.

"I don't like it much, but I'm not going to engage in a lot of talk," he said before going on to say that Kohler was "playing on people's feelings by suggesting that waste disposal is happening that did not."

To his credit, Earl has proposed to be the more effective campaigner. He is smooth, articulate and straightforward. Kohler is improving, but lacks Earl's ability to communicate.

But both candidates are most impressive about Earl is that he seems to have awakened the state Democratic party from its doldrums. He has put together a broad base of support that includes union members, women, minorities and young voters, and local government officials. In the end, this is likely to be the deciding factor in the campaign.

Congressional Representative

7th District

Democrat David Obey has held Wisconsin's 7th Congressional seat since 1969.

Despite the surface, this may not seem extraordinarily impressive. It is impressive, however, when one considers that over 70 percent of the district's residents consider themselves either moderate or conservative. Obey has never been accused of being either one. He is the "liberal's liberal."

Why then, do most political observers give Obey's Republican opponent, Marshfield businessman Bernard Zimmerman, little or no chance to win? It's probably because Obey has a reputation in Washington and in his district as an effective lawmaker, one that his congressional colleagues and constituents appreciate, that as evidenced by his overwhelming victories in 1978 and 1980.

Nevertheless, Zimmerman still campaigns vigorously, despite the amount of travelling he must do to spread the word. "My opponent is not David Obey," he says. "He's the sheer size of the 7th District."

Supports Reagan

Zimmerman believes the political climate of 1980 still exists. He is an ardent supporter of Reaganomics and claims that his Democratic opponent, who has been critical of the administration, is out of step with the political climate. Zimmerman supports the concept of a balanced budget and is committed to a strong national defense to keep the peace. He believes the United Cont. op. 7

Education

Support of higher education is part of each ticket's economic plan, especially in regard to energy. But the next governor, no matter what party he may be, will have to struggle to avert the state budget. Thus, Earl and Kohler have stressed substantial increases in educational spending.

In the "symbolic" reversal of recent spending trends in education, "I think it is critically important for the state government to, in a symbolic way, stop the axe before it's too late," Earl says.

Kohler says that a college education has become too expensive. He believes that financial aid should go to "seriously qualified" students who can't afford to pay for an education. He does not believe students lacking access to financial aid to whom the background should receive financial aid. "I believe that as long as students have access, the scales have tipped too far in favor of access," he says.

The Republican candidate believes current financial aid is inappropriate (about $28.1 million) are sufficient. He does not think the Wisconsin Higher Education Assistance Board would have increased 27 percent increase in financial aid was as high as $50 million. He said, "I do not think the WHEA Board has mentioned where the money is going to come from, have they?"

Kohler campaign advertisements accuse Earl of leading the state away from land away from farm families and give it to the state bureaucracy. When was the Secretary of the DNR. Kohler's accusations have stirred much controversy and caused many politicians and journalists around the state to question his ethics. Earl, of course, is offended by the ads but prefers not to make an issue of them.

"I don't like it much, but I'm not going to engage in a lot of talk," he said before going on to say that Kohler was "playing on people's feelings by suggesting that waste disposal is happening that did not."

Wisconsin's two major party candidates for the U.S. Senate, Democratic incumbent William Proxmire and Republican challenger Scott McCallum, debated on the UWSP campus Tuesday, October 19.

In their opening remarks the candidates conflicted strongly on what has become the major issue of this campaign—the benefits Wisconsinites receive from the government for their tax dollars.

McCallum blasted the incumbent, claiming state citizens receive only 72 cents from Washington for every $1 we pay in taxes. According to The Republican's figures, this rate of exchange left Wisconsin in last place among its peers.

"In effect, our taxes are going to subsidize business to subsidize jobs in other states." McCallum said.

"His figures are wrong, now he knows they are wrong," Proxmire declared. He noted that a spokesman from the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) told a Senate committee the figures quoted by his challenger were "inherently inaccurate."

Proxmire's figures showed Wisconsin getting back $1.10 for every dollar it sends to Washington and ranked 13th in the nation, rather than last.

The President's "New Federalism" failed to garner support from either candidate, although both supported concepts in which the state obtained control over social programs.

Proxmire rejected the proposal currently under consideration because it did not account for differences between states' social spending by establishing federal guidelines.

McCallum claimed Wisconsin would lose $500,000 under President Reagan's current plan, and that recent budget cuts hit the state particularly hard. He indicated, however, that further proposals could earn his support if the inequities were dealt with in the state's favor.

Both candidates opposed the administration's current arms build-up, and had especially caustic words about U.S. arms exports to developing countries.

"The U.S. is still the biggest arms pusher in the world—bigger than the Soviet Union—and I think it's a disgrace," said Proxmire. Like McCallum, he supported programs such as the Peace Corps which would emphasize economic development of Third World nations.

Senator Proxmire's support for women's issues was questioned because of his professed support for anti-abortion measures, but the incumbent claimed a "solid" record on women's issues including support for the ERA, equal pay for equal work laws, and the eradication of sexual segregation in the armed forces.

The Republican challenger earned applause from some in the audience for his pro-choice stance which has earned him the endorsement of the Women's Caucus. He also backed the ERA, equal pay legislation, and expressed support for those fighting discrimination in the workplace.

McCallum believed students should not have to pay interest on their government loans while still attending college, but offered no alternatives about how interest rates those loans should carry. Proxmire, however, encouraged Uncle Sam to charge students the current market rate of interest, although he believed the loans should not have to be paid until after graduation.

"One queried about legislation regulating AIDIC and other commercial enterprises neither candidate appeared even minutely interested. Speaking specifically about nuclear power, however, backed an extension of current clean air and nuclear waste control laws.

Proxmire responded to attempts comparing his voting record with ultra-conservative Sen. Jesse Helms by giving the audience a short lecture on the Constitution, noting that Congress could reduce the Supreme Court's appellate jurisdiction in cases involving school prayer, busiting, and abortion.

"I feel so deeply about school prayer ... busing ... and abortion that I feel we should make exceptions in these cases." Proxmire said in his defense.

"Cutting the pie," cried McCallum. "I would have joined the filibuster against the Nuclear Non-Proliferation versus different social issues."

Neither candidate believed Wisconsin should be given a federal mandate to provide a dump-site for radioactive waste generated by other states' nuclear power plants. However, Proxmire felt the federal government could consider the state for a dump-site for waste generated by production of nuclear weapons if the state received adequate compensation.

In addition, both McCallum and Proxmire expressed doubt as to the future construction of fission nuclear power plants in the state, although Proxmire hoped technology would make nuclear fusion a possibility within two decades.

"Proxmire's closing comments reiterated his charge that McCallum's statistics placing Wisconsin at the bottom in business in the inherent strength of Wisconsin's economy faired fiction. The incumbent admitted that the state received a financial gain on those committees he belongs to such as the Senate Appropriations committee receiving 30 percent to 500 percent more than competing states.

"You have a clear choice between one candidate who..."
States is picking up too much of the tab and that our NATO allies, who have profited from the country's defense, have failed to provide adequate support. I am in favor of spending cuts in areas such as defense, education, and environmental protection. I believe that we should prioritize the welfare of our constituents and make the necessary fiscal adjustments to ensure their well-being.

Similarities

Although their political origins differ, they have similar positions on several issues. Both candidates actively support the State Equal Rights Amendment. Rulau has endorsed it, while Helbach has been critical. They also agree on the need for significant reforms to the state's tax system, with Rulau favoring increased sales taxes and Helbach advocating for a broad-based, fair tax structure.

Differences

They disagree principally in spending priorities and education. Helbach has long been a supporter of increased monetary aid to higher education, which he believes will lead to more job opportunities. On the other hand, Rulau supports increased spending on education, which he believes is crucial for the state's future economic success.

The incumbent has also been an opponent of peace time draft registration, calling it a "silly" proposition.

State Assembly Representative

58th District

Democrat David Helbach has made a name for himself in state government for ten years as an administrative assistant to State Senator William Bablitch and a member of the state Assembly. Although he is young (he is in his mid-twenties), he gives the 58th District experience at its present pace, in 25 years the world's chief economic power will be the Japanese. That will be true, but I am not a "silly" proposition.

Stroh's is the one county race is for the position of county clerk, whose duties include overseeing such county services as the general relief program as well as keeping accurate county records and issuing the county bills.

Incumbent Democrat Roger Wyczek is being challenged by Republican Karl Worth and Independent Mary Ann Krueger. Wyczek, 43, has held the position since 1976. He is seeking his third term as county clerk after having served in various other county offices.

Worthy is a newcomer to the local political scene. The 29-year-old UWSP graduate received his Master's Degree from UW-Milwaukee in 1981. He is currently self-employed in advertising and public relations.

A third candidate for county clerk is Independent Mary Ann Krueger. Krueger's credentials are extensive in county and state involvement. Among other things, she has served as the Secretary of the North Central Health Planning Association and as Vice President of the Safety Council.

The remaining county candidates are running unopposed for the various offices. They include: Dan Hill, sheriff; Alfred Barkowski, treasurer; Alfred Lewandowski, clerk of courts; John Osina, district attorney; Theresa Jazdowski, register of deeds; and Scott Juffeman, coroner.

Incumbent Democrat Joseph Gladowski and Independent John Kedrowski were for the county surveyor post but Kedrowski has officially withdrawn from the race. Kedrowski's successor however, will appear on the ballot.

Should UW profs be able to bargain collectively?

The right of collective bargaining for university academic staff and faculty will be before the 1983 Wisconsin legislature shortly after it convenes. A dozen years ago a governor's task force on bargaining for public employees specifically recommended excluding faculty and staff from that right and legislature and governor legislated to implement the recommendation.

A state which prides itself on the equality of rights of its citizens denies to public university faculty a right to which all other persons not in jail have access. Does the Wisconsin public really believe that persons inferior in rights should have the oversight of the education of their young adults?

Collective bargaining is a system of management just as is "shared governance," widely touted as the appropriate system of management for a university. Collective bargaining has brought salutary results in a brief time in half a dozen important public universities and university systems, for example the Michigan system (excluding Ann Arbor and East Lansing), the Florida system, the CUNY system and Rutgers. Collective bargaining is democratic: "shared governance" is not. Under Chapter 36, Laws of Wisconsin, everything is "subject to the authority of the board of regents."

As one who chaired three major faculty committees under three successive constitutions, (Why such frequent changes of constitution?) I have seen the hard work and costs of administering the UW System under the merger. Of primary importance to both students and faculty are the provisions listed under 36.09, specifically 36.09(5) through 36.09(11). These establish guidelines for the shared governance of campuses between the chancellor, faculty and students. Chancellors are the "executive heads" of their universities and accountable to the Board of Regents under 36.09(3). Enumerated duties include consulting with faculties in determining curricula and setting degree requirements and "administering all funds, from whatever source, allocated, generated, or intended for use of their institutions."

According to 36.09(4) UW faculty are responsible for "the immediate governance" of each institution and are to participate in its policy development, subject to the powers of the Regents, the chancellor, and the institution president. They also have the right to determine their organizational structure and to select representatives to aid in the governing of their institutions.

Under 36.09(5) students "shall have the primary responsibility for the formulation and review of policies concerning student life, services and interests," although their participation in the governance of the campuses is subject to the powers of the UW Board, the president, chancellor and faculty.

In addition, the statute gives students the right to allocate student fees for campus student activities, upon consultation with the chancellor and subject to board approval. Election of student representatives to participate in institutional governance rounds out the list of student rights.

Sharing the gavel?

By Chris Celichowski

Wisconsin's progressive tradition has penetrated our lives as a positive force in many areas where our rights and freedoms have been taken for granted. Standing alone in the Union, Wisconsin's state university students and faculty have the right to participate in the governance of their institutions.

Eleven years ago the Wisconsin State Universities, including the Stevens Point campus, methodically and became part of the University of Wisconsin System. Although the merger generated considerable controversy at the time because opponents feared domination by the Milwaukee and Madison campuses, it became the law when then-governor Patrick Lucey signed the merger bill July 4, 1974.

Chapter 36 of the state statutes regulates the UW System under the merger. Of primary importance to both students and faculty are the provisions listed under 36.09, specifically 36.09(5) through 36.09(11). These establish guidelines for the shared governance of campuses between the chancellor, faculty and students.

Chancellors are the "executive heads" of their universities and accountable to the Board of Regents under 36.09(3). Why is there this push today for collective bargaining? Plainly and simply, it is a matter of money. Wages have not kept pace with inflation. Real salary income of our faculty and academic staff has declined over 5 percent since 1967, yet for the state as a whole, real per capita personal income has increased about 35 percent since 1967.

Every year for the last six years the regents have tried to remedy this deplorable situation. We have asked for catch-up money; we have asked for cost of living increases; we have asked for small merit increases. And our total package has come to fairly high figures. But it has only been asked for in the interests of equity. Every year we have been turned down and even bitterly criticized — often by members of the Legislature — for our extravagant requests. In fact, this is the given reason that the bill asks the Department of Employment Relations to act as the overall University representative in the bargaining: because the regents, you all know, would "give away the store." What this has meant is that some faculty members, pushed into a corner, have turned in desperation to collective bargaining to get the necessary clout to force the state to pay the respectable wages they feel, and I am sure we all feel, they deserve.

But I submit that this is not the solution. Collective bargaining is simply machinery that is cumbersome, awkward, totally inappropriate to a great university, destructive of collegial governance, disruptive to classroom learning, and horribly expensive to boot. And I want to dwell on that point for a minute.

The additional costs for administration of this bill have not been provided for.

eight years later as both students and faculty exercise considerable influence in the governance of this and other UW schools. The allocation of student fees by the Student Government Association (SGA) and the Student Senate was the most noticeable and significant effect of the legislation for students. Through funding, these two groups effectively control the very existence of most student organizations. While shared governance has appeared to strengthen the faculty position within respective institutions, their salaries and fringe benefits have diminished in power over the past decade. Some members of The Association of University of Wisconsin Faculties (TAUWF) feel, therefore, that shared governance has failed in providing sufficient cost-of-living increases for them. As UW faculty leave the state for more lucrative positions in the pastures, some of those remaining have turned to collective bargaining, a right given to all state employees except UW faculty.

The United Council of UW Student Governments (UC) opposed the latest attempt at faculty collective bargaining. Assembly Bill 452, because it supposedly threatened to disturb the current balance of shared governance. They feared the scope of bargaining could extend beyond salaries and fringes and into areas negatively affecting students, as happened at the City University of New York. However, the Council's jealous guarding of shared governance is due in part to its admitted realization that 36.09(5) "virtually gives (it) the right to exist." Shared governance has undoubtedly helped the University of Wisconsin to grow and prosper into a first-class educational system. The triad interaction of the chancellor, faculty, and students have made UW schools centers for not only education but learning experiences as well. Any legitimate aims sought by faculty through collective bargaining still hopefully preserve the developing tradition of shared governance.

Suspect arraigned on assault charges

Stevens Point—Paul Wojtalewicz, 23, of rural Stevens Point was arraigned on battery charges in the beating of three Nigerian students outside the Outer Limits bar July 3. Judge Fred Fleischauer entered a not guilty plea for Wojtalewicz, who will be tried by jury on Jan. 11.

Cost from p. 8

The fiscal note prepared by the Legislature's Fiscal Bureau estimates an initial annualized cost of $859,700 and an annualized cost, when fully implemented, of over $1,600,000. This does not include the cost of the additional workloads at the departmental or at the college levels. And to make it worse, institutions which are experienced in bargaining around the country, with whom we have shared our estimates, say that they are much too conservative. Recent experience of other systems indicates that the real costs of collective bargaining could run from $2 to $3 million annually. The bill provides only one position each for the Department of Employment Relations and the Employment Relations Commission.

OPEN LETTER TO STUDENTS, FACULTY AND EMPLOYEES OF ONE OF THE COUNTRY'S FINEST UNIVERSITIES

I'd like to tell you some things that may be of interest to you as voters and as citizens.

As you know, Governor Lee S. Dreyfus has endorsed me for State Representative in the 58th District. I'm proud of that. I'm also proud that my candidacy has been endorsed by Marlene Cummings, the black woman who is advisor to the governor on Women's and Family Initiatives, and by the 38,000-member Wisconsin Nurses Political Action Committee.

But there are other important reasons why you should vote for me on November 2nd. Here are some of them:

* My opponent, David Halbach, has already indicated his intent to run for the State Senate seat of Bill Babitch next spring if Babitch resigns this seat. That means I am the ONLY candidate who FULLY INTENDS to fill all the obligations that the job of State Representative implies, for the full two-year term.

It also means that essentially my opponent can PROMISE ANYTHING without any real need for accountability. And it means that if I am elected, NO TAXPAYER MONEY will be spent for a special election that a vacated Assembly seat would require next year!

* My opponent voted NO on the only legislative bill that came before him which required a balanced budget. (Assembly Bill 66.)

* My opponent voted NO on Assembly Resolution 4, a bill to reduce his own office expenditures and those of other Assembly members. In this day and age, when everyone is asked to tighten his belt, he ought to be willing to tighten his.

* My opponent had one of the worst roll call records among the 57 Democrat Representatives in the last session. In fact, there were 52 Democrats with better records!

* In the two-year term ending in January, my opponent introduced only 6 bills which were actually passed by both Houses of the Legislature. Among his own Democrat colleagues in the Assembly, he ranked only 23rd in effectiveness on this point. He had introduced 23 bills (effectiveness rating 35%).

* I believe that a second bridge across the Wisconsin River in the Stevens Point area, and legislation to protect our groundwater, are possible and absolutely necessary. They need ACTION, not press releases!

* I believe more JOBS can be created in Wisconsin without raising taxes on working people.

* I believe a strong educational system is the backbone of our 58th District, as well as our state.

* A GOOD legislator must initiate EFFECTIVE LEGISLATION as an OBLIGATION of his job. I will do this.

I ask you, therefore, to VOTE RULAU on Nov. 2nd.

Let ME help YOU!

Student advocacy still great buy at four bits

by Michael Daehn

Four bits sure doesn’t buy much these days. Maybe it’ll cover a cup of coffee, a ball, a hot cup of java, one draft from the tap—all fleeting moments in the hour. But there is still one product available in these inflationary times at the uncharacteristically low price of fifty American cents—student representation through the United Council.

Two weeks ago, UW-Stevens Point students voted to continue their affiliation with this statewide lobbying group. Nearly 14 percent of the student body, 1,109 in total, let their druthers be known. 1,109 supported the current setup, 148 opposed the UC relationship—and the “ayes” carried the day.

But why? What is it about the United Council that attracted this type of support? And why did it fail to get the vocal opposition to continued funding of UC in some parts of the state?

Let’s take a quick look at what the UC is and try to arrive at some answers.

Established in 1959, the United Council is the state’s largest student research and advocacy lobbying group. Membership rolls include 12 of the 13 University of Wisconsin four-year campuses as well as the 14 center system schools, adding up to a sizable student body of 80,000 in the area of 130,000 students.

In its 22 years of existence, UC has worked within the parameters of student rights and interests with the Board of Regents, the governor, the state legislature, and anyone else in a position to further student causes. They have operated from the philosophical tenet that students are more than consumers of education, that they also have the right to make the decisions which will affect their lives.

United Council policies and programs are approved by its Executive Board. This board is composed of student reps from each of the participating campuses (Eau Claire is the only campus not involved presently) and meets eight times a year. To ensure each campus gets a firsthand view of UC dealings, the meeting locations are rotated each month. UW-Stevens Point’s turn to host comes on March 18 and 19 this year.

According to former Peter­ editor Mike Hein, who now heads the Academic Affairs Department, the group’s areas of involvement are manifold. Among the issues currently or recently undertaken by Hein and fellow lobbyist, Legislative Affairs director Curt Pavlichenko, are the following:

—addressing the Board of Regents monthly regarding student issues is an exclusive student advocacy position.
—monitoring and maintaining a rapport with the University System Administration, and reviewing anything that they propose (such as the recent UW 1983-85 budget proposal with attached tuition hikes).
—monitoring state agencies such as the Higher Educational Aids or the Council on Financial Aids.
—lobbying state agencies such as the Joint Committee for the Review of Administrative Rules, which is currently scrutinizing the statute (36.095) that allows students to have a participatory role in university governance.
—lobbying the state legislative matters such as the UW budget request, tuition hikes, the drinking age, women’s rights.
—managing student voter by holding voter registration drives and forming a voting action committee (PAC).
—striving to get students involved in individual issues such as the make freeze, shared governance, the gubernatorial race, etc.
—serving as an information clearinghouse for student concerns, government and student presses.
(The Pointer Magazine, the student newspaper, the UC Network column.)
—keeping abreast of federal legislation through their affiliation with two national student lobbies, one of which is run by a former United Council staffer.
—without a doubt, this is a very impressive list of responsibilities and functions. Whether the UC is truly capable of handling them and the process by which they receive enough funds to try are the two major areas of concern hammered upon by the group’s opponents.
—those who take issue with UC’s track record point an accusing finger at last year’s modus operandi, when, for a time, the organization seemed more concerned with schismatic politicking than student representation. The ensuing stream of firings and resignations left little in the way of an alluvial foundation from which to grow again.

So since the public record seems to belie any significant criticisms of UC’s accomplishments, the funding mechanism must be where the brunt of disgruntlement resides. Here’s how that setup works:

Each year a dollar (50 cents per semester) is taken out of the tuition and fees payment of every student attending a UC affiliated campus. This provides the advocacy group with a funding base which is used to pay salaries and operating expenses. Every two years, individual campuses are required to have referenda asking their student bodies if they wish to continue such a funding relationship. Both Stevens Point and UW-Madison voted a strong “yes” in their recent balloting.

However, the Madison results were a bit closer, 2,336 for and 1,168 against. The nay-sayers took the nod of the editorial stance at the conservative Badger Herald newspaper, which feels it is impossible for the UC to take student monies and use them to lobby the UW-W state legislature. As they view it, there is no such thing as a monolithic student interest, but rather students hold a plurality of opinions, concerns and constituencies.

UC supporters on the other hand, concede that students have a large variety of specific interests but that the issues they tackle concern general interests that affect the vast majority of college students—economic aid, financial aid, questions about who should have a role in university governance.

UC lobbyist offers Heinsight

By Joe Stimson

Pointer News Writer

You’ve been an editor of a weekly-college newspaper for the last year, you now have your degree in hand, and you are looking to your future. Where do you go with your skills?

Become an insurance underwriter for Mutual of America.

If you are former Pointer chief Mike Hein, you head to Madison and become a United Council lobbyist.

Hein is academic affairs director and self-proclaimed “junior affairs legislative affairs director” for the non-partisan student research and advocacy group in Madison.

In a recent telephone interview, Hein talked about his organization and his work.

“If we (United Council) weren’t here, there wouldn’t be anybody in the state representing UW-system students,” he said. “And the U.C. is the oldest student lobbying organization in the country.”

Despite the 25-year history of the group, the organization has recently met with criticism, Hein said, because some student government representatives argue the U.C. cannot “reflect the needs of all UW-System students.”

Hein agreed with this argument to a point, but added, “We are a lobby for higher education in general. University administrators have their own lobbying effort in Madison, and students need the same thing.”

Part of the problem also stems from an attitude held by UW-W System administrators and students that the U.C. is, in Hein’s view, a more of a professional organization.

“I’m a professional. I look at the money. I hope we do the legislators and committee members I have to deal with.”

His responsibilities include handling housing and credit transfer issues, in addition to grappling with state agencies for continued support of student aid programs. He testified before the Higher Educational Aids Board in September, he said, and though the board was very much in favor of not making further reductions in state instructional aid money, many questions about the aid outlook won’t be answered until there is a new governor and legislature in the capital.

There is also a large effort underway, according to Hein, to lobby the Board of Regents to keep further tuition increases from finding their way into the 83-85 budget.

Proposed tuition hikes for the UW-System for the next two years would equal about 100, he said, which would mean students would be paying about 27 percent of the cost of their instruction, up from the 21 percent—figure that has remained constant until tuition surcharges were leveled last year.

The vote by the Regents concerning the tuition increases is scheduled for Nov. 5.

Another project the UC is trying to get underway is a Wisconsin Student Political Action Committee (PAC) (such as the recent UW 1983-85 budget proposal with attached tuition hikes).

Hein said the group could go about finding financial contributors that would help cont. on pg. 25.

Duran Duran

Music. Duran Duran movement in England, with member Dire "Rio," by the English band from Dire Straits sounds very much like the growing up in the remote suburbs of a northeastern city during the late fifties and sixties, or like reggae-like bass lines to that might have been included in the book. "Rio" combines funky (almost reggae-like) bass lines to create a sound that combines with kinetic energy, then the listener deep into the music. The music is relatively light and smooth flowing with, of course, the three stanzas in which civilization rises out of the wilderness, drops off into some depressing musings, and struggles back again, as the American Dream turns into the Middle Class Nightmare.

but believe in me baby and I'll take you away from out of this darkness and into the day from these rivers of headlight together with the rain from the anger that lives on the streets with these names "cos I've run every red light on memory lane I've seen desperation explode into flames and I don't want to see it again.

These powerhouse lyrics are followed by an utterly pointless instrumental medley that comes on like a painful intestinal gas attack at the end of a rich meal. It just goes on and on. And on and on and on. For five minutes, I checked my turntable twice to see if the record was defective.

Almost all the other songs on the album suffer the same awful fate—they start out nicely, build energy, then wander off down some self-indulgent sidestreet, never to be heard from again. Only "Industrial Disease," an upbeat, satiric look at all sorts of social ills, escapes.

Despite the excess baggage, Lover Over Gold is worth repeated screenings. The good parts get better, and you learn where the crap is, so you can skip over it. Maybe next time Mark Knopfler and Dire Straits will skip over it for you.

The beat goes on with Duran Duran and Fagen

"Rio"

DURAN DURAN

By Paul Bissett

1983 brought about the release of a second album, "Rio," by the English band Duran Duran. This five member group has evolved out of the New Romantic movement in England, with their very unique blend of music. Duran Duran combines funky (almost reggae-like) bass lines to extraordinary guitar riffs, to create a sound that persuades your feet to move. "Rio" is quite upbeat and enjoyable to all those who appreciate innovative music.

In today's world of redundant pop music, "Rio" from Duran Duran is alive with vigor and quality sound. Check it out.

"The Nightfly"

Donald Fagen

If the name Donald Fagen does not sound familiar to you, how about Steely Dan? Donald Fagen is the lead vocalist and keyboard player for Steely Dan, and has just released his first solo album.

Entitled "The Nightfly," this solo album shows Fagen's superior musical skills. Lyrically, Fagen describes his music in a note on the inner sleeve: "Note: The songs on this album combines bright and crispness that originated through Steely Dan. Avid listeners of Steely Dan will love this album, while the others will become aware of the high quality and creative instrumentation that makes this a landmark release.

Current album reviews will be on each week, presented by 90 PM.

TO THE ELECTORS OF PORTAGE COUNTY:

Notice is hereby given of a General Election to be held in the several wards in the County of Portage, on the 3rd day of November, 1982, at which the officers named shall be elected. The names of the candidates for each office to be voted for, whose nominations have been certified to or filed in this office, are given under the title of office and under the appropriate party or other designation, each in its proper column, together with the questions submitted to a vote, in the sample ballots.

Upon entering the polling place, an elector shall give his or her name and address before being permitted to vote. Where ballots are distributed to electors, the initials of two ballot clerks must appear on the ballot. Upon being permitted to vote, the elector shall retire alone to a voting booth and cast his or her ballot. An elector who so votes for all candidates nominated by any party, the elector shall make a cross in the circle or depress the lever or button on the party designation printed at the top of the ballot. Unless a name has been erased or crossed out, another name written in, a cross placed to the right of a candidate for the same office, a circle or cross in a column under a candidate's name voted for, or a name written in to the right of a candidate's name for whom he or she intends to vote, or shall insert or write in the name of a candidate. On referenda questions, the elector shall make a cross in the square at the right of or depress the button or lever next to the answer which he or she indicates to give.

The vote should not be cast in any other manner. If the elector spoils a ballot, he or she shall return it to the election official who shall issue another ballot in its place, but not more than three ballots shall be issued to any one elector. If the ballot has not been initialed by two ballot clerks or is defaced in any other way, the elector shall return it to the election official, who shall issue a proper ballot in its place. Not more than five minutes time shall be allowed inside a voting booth or machine. Unofficial ballots or any memorandum to an elector in marking his or her ballot may be taken into the booth by ELECTORS.

The vote should not be shown to anyone so as to reveal how the ballot is marked.

After an official paper ballot is marked, it shall be folded so the inside marks do not show but so the printed endorsements and ballot clerks' initials on the outside do show. After casting his or her ballot, the elector shall leave the machine or change of the ballot box, hand over the voter's name to the inspector in ballot box, deposit any unused ballots in the blank ballot box, and shall leave the polling place promptly.

An elector may be assisted by two election officials of different political parties in casting his or her vote if the elector declares to the presiding official that he or she is unable to read, has difficulty reading, writing or understanding English or that due to physical disability is unable to cast his or her ballot. Alternatively, an elector making such declaration may have another elector of the county assist in making the ballot or operating a voting machine. The presiding official may administer an oath to a person making such declaration.

The following is a facsimile of the official ballots:

pleading. Here are this week's ghoulishly silly letters and Uncle Bob's monstrously clever answers.

Dear Uncle Bob:

Like a sugar-pie pined to the max. I swear! Like, I can’t go trick or treating with you this year! I hope to go to this totally defective Halloween party with Luke and the old boys. Space muppets. Like, gag me with a Wookie, okay? George has gone totally Darth Vader, and he's absolutely forcing me to go, and like it’s like eight million light years from your apartment. I'm sure! Plus, I have to go with this old Kenobi geek, and he keeps telling me that if he does the Empire Strikes in my face and feeling my knee and saying totally stick stuff like, "Jedi or Jedi 1 will follow your thigh," and "Whatever Order, I mean, the guy is strictly Aquavelva, like, pull over, who’s warping? I mean, George is doing this because he thinks you’re like a bad influence on me, but I think you’re just bluhchin'.

May next year?

Princess L. (Your Galaxy Girl)

Dearest Princess:

Long, long ago, if I'd found someone was making you spend Halloween in a galaxy far, far away, I'd have had to choke down my anger and do something. But no more. Tell that R2-D2-Photoh George that this means Wars!

Dear Uncle Bob:

Please hide me! Mr. Hands.

Dear Uncle:

Dear Ed:

That tears it, creep. The 'letter' above, and the accompanying 'response' are completely transparent. They're nothing but cheap shots at Jerry Dell, the most marvelous Christian since Pat Boone. You're obviously a wannabe and a connoisseur and probably a pervert to boot, and we've had it with you calling yourself " perks". As of now, you're kicked out of the Brotherhood of Mankind, asshole. And you can kiss the House of the Lord goodbye forever!

The Moral Majority

Dear Uncle Bob:

You can kiss your head too.

Uncle Bob

Dear Leon:

Boooooooooooooooo.

Dear Uncle Bob:

I need help, and you're the only person I can turn to. I know this week's column is supposed to be about Halloween, but the last one on relationships (Sept. 30) prompted me to write this letter. It's like this, Uncle Bob. My girlfriend—a beautiful and vivacious blonde who is everything a guy could ask for—suddenly gave her hands off of me. We cuddle up on the sofa, or the bed, or whatever, and she's all over me. She can't understand that there are limits to sex and physical endurance. I'm growing pale, losing weight, and just caving in everywhere because I'm trying so hard to satisfy her physical urges. Can you help Uncle Bob, what can I do?

Harold

Dear Harold:

First of all, stop whispering—it's unhealthy. So you're getting pale and underweight. Big whoop. You rather be bald, fat, and hopelessly horny? It sounds to me like your girlfriend is the one who needs help. Better send her over to Uncle Bob's place for some physical therapy.

Dear Uncle Bob:

A few years ago, I had an idea for a costume. My girlfriend and I would sew two pairs of blue jeans together, put a pair of legs and go as Siamese Twins. Now my girlfriend, I call her Zelda, wants to sew them together in such a way that has a very strong resemblance to a copulative position, which has been used a few times. My question, Uncle Bob, is will Zelda and I get into trouble with the law, if we engage in any indirect sexual expression, or can we continue with this really freaky and make it an exciting reality?

Afraid to go to the Law Office

Dear Afraid:

Your letter should be signed "A. Baby. Awake and Around." You are afraid. Your question is written as if you were a guy, but both sound you're not. You tried to hide your true identity by having your letter delivered to a female-looking male flunky, but you were standing right out in the hallway, in full view, pointing at Uncle Bob. "That's him, that's him." You were so absolutely edible people, to all, "him" could do to keep from leaping on you right there and committing something dangerously close to 123rd degree sexual assault—(assault with intent to tickle into submission.) Fortunately for our overburdened court system, Uncle Bob had been heavily sedated that morning, in preparation for his annual trip to the veterinarian.

But he's wide awake now, baby. Awake and around. Next time, doll-face, deliver your own mail. Uncle Bob promises it'll be the most special delivery of your life, sweet, cuddly little life. You'll be handled with care, and that's a first-class guarantee. On the other hand, if Uncle Bob is looking at you and you really are a guy, please ignore this entire response and turn to the sports page.

Student advocacy

In support of the mandatory refundable fee (mrf), UC President Scott Bentley declared, "Any other funding alternative will diminish our role from student advocates to student fund raisers. The reaffirmation of the mrf on the Madison campus insured that staff positions won't need to be cut. Without the mrf, reasoning has been that the positions of Minority Affairs and Women's Affairs Director would have been cut out of necessity. So the money does seem to be flowing into worthwhile areas."

Finally, as their trump card, the UC can always point to the free choice loophole in the mrf policy. Any students who object to paying the fee can receive a refund directly from United Council by sending a written request within 30 days at the end of the fall semester. After the first day of classes to: United Council, 8 West Millis Street, Suite 201, Madison, Wisconsin 53705.

Requests should include your name, address, campus, and student ID number. Be sure you will get a check for the amount of the fee but they'll include a form to pay for your stamp as well.

So now that you possess the facts, which policy makes the most sense? And what do you think is the best way to keep the money in the hands of the consumer in you? Do you spend your four bits on a couple of hot fudge sundaes or contribute to the advancement of student rights? The choice really IS yours.
Authority and Ore-Ida reach agreement: await approval by boards

By Todd Hotchkiss

Pointe Environmental

Warren Porter, director of the Authority, said, “We negotiated something we believe is good for each of our respective boards of directors.” Porter indicated that the agreement will go to their respective boards this week.

“We will try to get it approved this month,” said Porter. “If not, I think it will create some problems. We are going on the premise that we each will approve it before November 1.”

By November 1, Porter is referring to relate to the contingent funding the Authority received from the State Legislature’s Joint Finance Committee. The Joint Finance Committee approved $211,000 September 22 by a vote of 13 to 1 to get the Authority through the rest of this year. This appropriation is contingent on the Authority getting a contract signed with Ore-Ida by November 1.

Governor Dreyfus has indicated he does not believe the Committee’s appropriation. The failure of the Authority to secure a contract by November 1 might hasten a gubernatorial veto, an action Dreyfus used against the Authority yet because the Authority did not have a contract.

Governor Dreyfus and Administration Secretary Kenneth Lidner have indicated they will carefully scrutinize the agreement before the governor signs it. Lawyers and lawyers want to make sure that the agreement proposed to the Authority’s board is in the interest of the people of Wisconsin, and not merely in the interest of the Authority. An agreement not in the interest of the people of Wisconsin, according to Dreyfus, might bring forth a gubernatorial veto.

Senator David Prosser (R-Appleton) expressed concern that the Authority’s failure to reach agreement will hasten an unemployment for these people. Prosser also wanted to make sure that the Authority negotiate on behalf of the state of Wisconsin and not on behalf of the Authority.

Prosser felt that if the Authority negotiated out of the latter position that it would not even attempt to get job security before state welfare.

He requested an observer representing the legislatures at which the negotiations were held last week in Chicago.

Porter said there were not any representatives of the legislature or and Ore-Ida, lawyers, and Porter does not “foresee any more face-to-face negotiating sessions.”

Asked whether the Authority will be alive after November 1, Porter replied, “We’re expecting that.”

Nuke waste groups petition for meeting

Petitions requesting that the Radioactive Waste Review Board conduct its meetings in the areas of Wisconsin have been submitted. Meetings were held in the state capital. The petition, signed by over Wisconsin residents in ten days, reads:

> Because the Wisconsin Radioactive Waste Review Board was formed to serve as an advocate for the people concerning a proposed high level radioactive waste disposal facility, we the undersigned Wisconsin residents hereby petition the Board to hold their meetings in areas proposed for the disposal, and to schedule them every eight to ten years in the state capital.

The petition drive was launched by the Northwoods Alliance of Tamahawk, the League Against Nuclear Dangers (LAND) of Stevens Point, and the Madison-based Lake Superior Regional Environmental Association (LD).

The groups decided to collect signatures after repeatedly requesting that the hearings be held in areas potentially affected by the project. Environmental advocates: people you can count on

Dixon and Jacobson make a difference

By John C. Savagian
Point Eating Environment Writer

This is a part of two extraordinary advocates in the struggle to halt the spread of nuclear power in Wisconsin. It is a story of people making a difference, of helping to change conditions by fostering new attitudes through education, research and advocacy. The two individuals, Gertrude Dixon and Naomi Jacobson, principal founders of the League Against Nuclear Danger (LAND), were recently asked this question: "Have you made a difference through your actions with LAND and, as a person, what have you accomplished to affect change?"

Gertrude Dixon showed an uneasiness with this question. She felt it was funny directing the question at one person, when it was through LAND that so much had been changed. "If LAND had not been established," she said, "there would be a nuclear plant in Rudolph today. The difference was that once the people were given the facts, they were able to make a decision and feel confident in sticking with it. They can now understand problems that the experts define as too technical for the public, an idea that effectively shuts people out of the decision-making process. "You can bring about change if the public is informed and believes in its own power to carry on. In that sense, the public is actually more important than your adversary. You know, when we're dealing with such an issue as nuclear energy, the adversary is very large. The only way to fight is with an educated public, and that is the big difference. People don't like to be lied to. That irritates them. A part of knowledge is in discovering where your adversaries lie."

Mrs. Dixon said she did not feel as though she were an individual as much as she were a part of LAND. The key to making a difference was through that organization. "I feel we had a great deal to do with the cancellation of six nuclear plants in Wisconsin. I was optimistic that once the people of Rudolph were alerted and LAND started to spread the facts and talk up the issue, the facts about the danger of nuclear energy in the hands of an educated public would spell the defeat of the nuclear plants."

Naomi Jacobson also had trouble answering the question on a personal level. "It's not just me," she emphasized, "it's a whole group of people who banded together to make a difference. Yes, people are becoming alerted to the nuclear issue; yes, they know more about the radioactive waste problem; yes, they know that nuclear weapons are a part of the nuclear cycle."

"When we started in this role as advocates against nuclear energy, we were looked upon as the outsiders, but now people come to us for the facts. Knowledge builds, and in the ten years that we have been in existence, our knowledge has grown considerably."

The humble beginnings of LAND ten years ago, from a collection of unformed but united and strong individuals...

Mary Ann Krueger: The Mover

By Todd Hotchkiss
Pointing Environmental Editor

Mary Ann Krueger, chairperson of Citizens for Pesticide Control, is a mover. The word "move" comes up more in conversation with Mary Ann than with anyone else I know. "Moving" is what Mary Ann is all about, and what she moves on is public awareness of the dangers associated with the use of agricultural pesticides.

"I think people have a responsibility to do everything that they are capable of doing to help those around them," says Krueger. "It feels really good doing it. That's what you get back from it."

"I have a talent for bringing attention to an issue," says Krueger. "Mary Ann got good experience in the work she did to help bring a new animal shelter to Stevens Point in 1972. City officials were not moving. According to Krueger, so she took them to task. She went to Wisconsin Rapids and took a picture of their shelter and put it in a picture to the people involved in the project and to local citizens."

"The Point was "moving." Krueger says she drummed up public opinion to motivate the city officials to get the shelter built sooner than they wanted. By the end of the year, a new shelter was up. "I moved all the animals out of the old shelter to the new shelter. On New Year's Eve, 1972," said Krueger. "They had meetings on how to deal with Mary Ann Krueger."

"That's how I got into the pesticides movement."

The connection between animals and people is a key to the success of CEC. "You improve things for human health and you improve things for the birds and the bees at the same time. That's one thing environmentalists should keep in mind: keep things in human terms to gain success."

Krueger began her work on pesticides in 1976 by writing letters and holding hearings. "In 1978 I wrote an open letter to the Stevens Point Daily Journal about what was happening to people who were exposed to pesticides and they would not publish it because they said it was too technical, and a lot of people to call them and tell them what was happening."

In the fall of 1979 the Citizens for Pesticide Control (CPC) formed under the guidance of Krueger. They have held meetings with state officials, farmers and local residents. The group's written letters and carried signs. Recently they received a lot of publicity for a sign they hanged in Farm Progress Days in Almond. The CPC has circulated petitions to ban aerial spraying of pesticides on fields which are within one-quarter of a mile of restaurants, residences or schools. One thousand signatures have been collected by CPC on these petitions.

"I saw all of these agencies and tried to get a meeting at the university," said Krueger. "I don't want to feel like I'm bragging, but I want people to be interested in the things that are happening."

"People are recovering some payments from the sprayers and the chemical companies for damage done to them."

"Growing methods are being changed by farmers and that is a direct result of our efforts. That is going to benefit agriculture and the environment."

"We could get a lot more done if more people thought like Gertrude, Naomi and myself, rather than golfing or bowling. I used to do those things. I even have a trophy from golfing, do you know that?"

Reagan extends and modifies Species Act

By Todd Hotchkiss
Polster Environmental Editor

President Reagan signed into law a three-year extension of the Endangered Species Act Thursday, which streamlines procedures for deciding which endangered species should be protected under the legislation.

The legislation authorizes $39 million for the administration of the Act, which involves federal-state cooperation, in each of the three years of the Act.

The extension as signed by Reagan reduces the time from two years to only one in which a decision must be made to place a proposed species on a special list which would give the species and their habitat protection.

The bill also limits the factors considered in listing a species to solely biological factors. Currently, economic factors are also considered.

The Center for Environmental Education delivered 11,000 petitions to the White House the day before President Reagan signed the bill.

Wildlife professors in the College of Natural Resources contacted by Polster Magazine could not comment because none of them have seen the legislation Reagan signed.

Dixon and Naomi Jacobson had only thought of themselves and disregarded the role of advocates for a slumbering public. As Gertrude Dixon stated, "If LAND hadn't been here, we would have a nuclear plant in Rudolph today."

The question begs to be asked—where would we all be today without public advocacy, where personal achievement is set aside in favor of the public good?

very hard-nosed position towards the DOE.

The DOE has stated publicly that factors of "societal acceptance" may actually outweigh geologic and technical criteria in the siting of nuclear waste dumps. Determined not to become a political soft spot, seventeen counties and over 70 townships in the state have taken a position of opposition to nuclear waste dumping. Currently the DOE is proceeding with a literature search and research on environmental, geologic and socio-economic data to determine the suitability of the state for waste disposal.

December 1. At that point Stevens Point and the immediate surrounding area will have been canvassed. CBE will pack up and leave town temporarily. But look for them to return ready to work.

Barbara Kakida, president of Stevens Point on the issue of groundwater contamination, CBE will be testifying at the State Aldicarb Hearings on November 1-2. Bruce Sedloff, policy research assistant from the Appleton office, will give testimony for CBE November 1 in Stevens Point.

Kakida will testify November 2 when the hearings shift to Madison.

Currently CBE has eight offices open across the U.S. four of which are in Wisconsin. The four offices outside of Wisconsin are in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Minneapolis, and Chicago. The four Wisconsin offices are located in Appleton, Madison, Milwaukee and Stevens Point.

Gaining momentum over the last two weeks, the Pointers' record in the WSC now stands at 9-4 with a decisive victory of the season coming against Superior, 30-4, back on October 16th. Then, taking on nationally ranked Stout last Saturday, the Pointers lost a heartbreaker 35-28 in Menomonie.

The Pointers officially won their first game of the year against the Crusaders before a parents' day crowd two weeks ago.

"Considering what we've gone through this fall, it was a big win for us," coach D.J. Leroy said. "The players came in with a positive attitude and that made the difference."

The Pointer defense recorded their first shutout of the season while also forcing six turnovers.

Leroy mentioned, "The defense played a great game. They got the ball for the offensive plays and then off the scoreboard, they controlled and maintained the tempo of the game.

Late in the first quarter, Linebacker John Stanko intercepted a Superior pass at the three and returned it to the 25. Point dotted the ball down the field but came up short on a fourth down situation. A few minutes later, UWSP got the ball back following a poor Yeomen punt.

The Pointers then drove to the Superior 48 and scored. LB husband Gayla played on a 14-yard touchdown pass from Dave Geisler to halfback Majidaka, who thus kicked Ryszkowski's only PAT of the day put the Pointers ahead to stay at 7-0 with 10:59 left in the half.

With just under two minutes left until the half, the Pointers intercepted their second turnover as Linebacker Jeff Rutten intercepted a pass at the Superior 18 yard line. Tight End Rick Steavapark took the ball away from a defensive player, who gave UWSP a 13-0 lead (the PAT failed) with just 1:06 left to play until halftime.

Randy Ryszkowski booted a 33-yard field goal with 3:05 seconds until intermission after Superior kicked the ball up after a high snap from center off a punt. That gave UWSP a 16-0 lead heading into the second half.

Superior threatened to score in the third quarter, but Lederman's punt was returned by Mike Van Asten for a 90-yard touchdown, but Mike Van Asten recovered a fumble in the end zone to preserve the shutout.

After a Pointer punt down to the Superior 10, Yellowjacket quarterback Steve Mayer took off on a 36-yard scamper. UWSP returned the ball on a fourth down 284-0.

Superior dropped back to the Superior 11 and scored on a two-point conversion to tie the game at 16-18.

At the beginning of the fourth quarter, Superior was forced to punt again but the snap was bad, and the Pointers took the ball on the 10. Ryszkowski kicked the ball from the 10 to the 18, leaving the Pointers two-yard field goal yet to come to make the game 16-18.

Pointers' defensive tackle J.P. Williams took the ball one-yard pass from Dennis Thayer.

"The Pointer defense held Superior to 173 total yards (82 rushing, 91 passing) while Point's offense gained 261 yards. Of those 261 yards, 205 came on the air." Coach Leroy added.

Defensive back was also key in the game, Geisler connected on 18 of 35 passes for those 180 yards. "The defensive backs had a lot to do with winning the game," Leroy said. "They were right where the ball was a lot of the time. It was the best game I've seen us play this year," he added.

The Pointers had another good showing last Saturday, but came up short, losing 25-32 to Stout.

The Pointers seemed headed for victory as they jumped out to a 21-0 lead (all by halfback Rod Mayer—the only other scores were the two-point conversion by Geisler, the second a 29-yard run and the third a 1-yard pass.

Stout came back, but Point still 26-20 late in the third quarter and scored again heading for another touchdown.

The Pointers got the ball on the UWSP 32-yard line but were forced to punt down to the Stout 31 on the strength of two 35-yard completions to Gerry O'Connor. Tim Land stepped out of bounds at the 10... but it was a first down.

"The two punt returns gave the Pointers a four and one out of nowhere. They scored on the next play for the 25-32 lead. We were up 25-3 at half, but Point still played great for the rest of the game," Coach Leroy said.

It was a happy “Parents’ Weekend” October 16 and 17 as the UW SP Women’s Field Hockey team won all three of its games over tough opponents in the front Invitational at Colman Field. The Pointers beat Northern Michigan University 4-2 and UW-La Crosse 3-0 on Friday, then held off stubborn UW-River Falls 3-2 in double overtime on Saturday. La Crosse finished with a 2-1 record in the tournament, beating NMU 1-0 and UW-Green Bay 5-0. Other results included Green Bay over UW-Platteville 1-0, River Falls over Platteville 6-4, and NMU over River Falls 3-4.

The Pointers played what coach Nancy Page called “their finest game of the season” against tough Northern Michigan, ranked third nationally in Division II. NMU previously beat UWSP 2-1 in Michigan, despite being outplayed by the Pointers.

Point held a 1-0 halftime lead after Jane Christianson scored on a pass from Michelle Anderson. NMU tied the score early in the second half, but the Pointer women then put the game away with three consecutive goals. Anderson scored with an assist from Dee Christofferson, then Christianson scored her second goal on a pass from Sara Boehnlein. Boehnlein then closed out Point’s scoring with an unassisted goal. NMU scored the final goal of the game when the margin of victory was two. UW SP’s domination of the game was evident in the statistics, however, as they held the edge in shots, 13-6, and penalty corners, 19-5.

“We had something to prove to Northern Michigan,” said a happy coach Page. “We thought we were the better team and today we showed it.” The Pointer women also got revenge against archrival La Crosse, who had won an earlier contest 3-1 in triple overtime.

After a scoreless first half, Jane Christianson scored on a pass from Sara Boehnlein to give the Pointers a 1-0 lead. Michelle Anderson added some needed insurance with an unassisted goal late in the second half. With two seconds left in the game, Boehnlein scored the Pointers’ third goal, making the final score a more accurate indication of their dominance. UW SP held a decisive edge in penalty corners, 18-0, as well as shots.

Despite being outplayed by the Pointers, NMU continued to score on a pass from Larson to former SPASH standout Steve Kleinschmidt added another score with just 16 seconds left in the half as he kicked a 43-yard field goal. Another pass interception gave UWSP the opportunity for the score.

Eau Claire scored solo touchdowns in the third and fourth quarters and then missed two point conversion attempts to account for its scoring. The visiting Blugolds actually held the upper hand in the statistics with 11-13 in first downs, 53-15 in rushing yards, 286-173 in passing yards, and 319-187 in total offense. However, the Pointers committed just two turnovers to the six for UW-EC. In addition, the Blugolds were penalized 10 times for 84 yards and the Pointers’ nine times for 60 yards.

Larson was the most successful of UW SP’s four quarterbacks as he connected on six of 11 passes for 75 yards and the three scores.

The leading receiver was Jerry Herbst with three catches for 22 yards while Dan Bradford had two for 51, Marten, two for 49, and Plattman, two for 18. Former Pacelli standout Jim Rogers was the Pointers leading rusher with 29 yards in eight attempts while Tim Carroll added 21 in eight.

Jeff Soderberg, another Pacelli graduate, quarterbacked the Blugolds most of the way and completed 10 of 29 passes for 128 yards, but suffered four interceptions. He also added 14 yards rushing in five attempts. Interception passes for the Pointers were Tony Brown, Rich Paulus, Steve Wedick, and Jamie Maliszewski.

Men's cross country

SID—Everybody has a bad day once in a while and the UWSP men's cross country team faced one such day that was that day as they finished seventh in the Tom Jones Invitational held at Wisconsin-Madison.

Wisconsin-Madison was the meet winner as it captured the top eight spots to score the minimum of 15 points. Eau Claire, UW-La Crosse, 96; Southern Illinois, 99; Southwestern Michigan, 102; and Northern Iowa, 138; and Iowa, 175.

UWSP scored 292 points to take seventh place in the eleven team meet.

John Eszter from Madison was the individual winner as he finished the 8000 meter course in 25:58.1.

The top finisher for the Pointers was Chris Coliak as he captured 19th place with a time of 25:42.7. Other top finishers for the Pointers were Jake Schopke, 44th, 25:46; Jim Kowalczyk, 50th, 25:57.3; Ray Frybelski, 52nd, 25:58; and Dave Parker, 71th, 26:18.2.

Pointers were come off the way of the day. Intensive training and found themselves slightly tired as they took in their lowest performance of the season.

"Sometimes, as coaches, we lose sight of what we preach, especially when we say that it is next to impossible to train hard and race well," Witt explained.

I had a lot of trust in this team and I know that they will bounce back and run well as we shoot for our goals at the end of the season."

The UWSP men's cross country team began gearing up for their upcoming meet as it finished fifth in the high powered Carthage Invitational in Kenosha last weekend.

Defending NCAA Division III national champion North Central won the meet with 34 points and was followed by Northwestern University, 65; DePauw, 95; Hope; 125; and UWSP, 140.

Sophomore Chris Coliak of the Pointers was the individual standout for the Pointers as he finished 22nd with a time of 25:42.7. Coliak had a strong pack which followed with Dan Schopke, 44th, 25:46; Lou Agnew, and Steve Brierlow capturing positions 23 through 31. Schopke's body was a leg injury, paced the foursome with a time of 25:46.1. Schopke came in at 25:45.3; Agnew, 25:44.3; and Brierlow 25:45.8.

Roger Doherty of Maryville College was the individual winner in the meet with a time of 23:58.0 for the five mile course.

Pointers coach Rick Witt felt his team ran well against outstanding competition.

"This was a good meet for us as we ran well, but not great," Witt observed. "We are almost able to have an excellent pack with five runners within 10 seconds and that is what we have been working on.

The next action for the Pointers will be a dual meet against UW-Oshkosh in UW-Oshkosh, 94; Eau Claire on Saturday, Oct. 30.

Women's cross country

SID—While breaking four school records, the UWSP women's cross country team captured third place in the tough Carthage Invitational in Kenosha Saturday.

UW-Milwaukee and UW-Parkside, two very strong NCAA teams, were first and second in the 11 team meet with 62 points while UWSP followed with 75. Running out the top five were UW-Oshkosh with 81 and Washington University with 127.

Harb Sorensen led the Pointers with a fifth place finish and a time of 17:07. UWSP's Cindy Gallager also finished in the top ten, placing 10th with a time of 17:22.

The remaining finishers for UWSP were Tracey Lemers, 13th, 17:36; Sue Hildebrandt, 23rd, 17:59; and Annette Zuidema, 28th, 18:13.

The individual winner in the meet was Debbie Spinof UW-Parkside with a time of 15:49.

UWSP coach Rand Strachan was very pleased with the meet, noting that it was the top performance of the year.

The next meet for the Pointers will be the WIAC Women's Cross Country Championships held at Mitchell Park in Milwaukee on Saturday, October 30, at 11:00 a.m.

Women's Tennis

SID—(SID)—The University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point women's tennis team defeated Lawrence University by a score of 8-1 and lost to Beloit College 5-3 in Appleton Saturday.

The Pointers won all but one of their singles matches and all of the doubles matches against Lawrence with Shawn Eckholm winning in both singles and doubles. Eckholm won her singles match with a strong net attack in the third set.

"She executed well and simply overwhelmed her opponent to take the match," Naas said of Eckholm's performance.

In the doubles, the combination of Wendy Patch and Shawn Eckholm disposed of the UW-Oshkosh duo handily by playing the type of net emphasis game that is stressed in singles.

"Our freshmen women did the job for us against conference," said Naas of the meet.

Coach Naas took out the victory in the match against Beloit which was played in ten pro-sets due to a shortage of time. Naas said that the freshmen a taste of the pressure at the top and they also did well.

Dolores Much did an excellent job in her position in the Tournament, winning her match by a score of 10-5.

Behind the second place finish of Sarah Schalow at No. 2 singles, the UWSP women's tennis team captured fifth place in the Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Meet in Neenah this weekend.

UW-Whitewater and UW-La Crosse tied for the championship with 44 points each while UW-Eau Claire was third with 38. Rounding out the scoring was UW-Oshkosh, 35; UWSP 35; UW-Stout, 15; and UW-River Falls, 4.

Schalow, a senior from Marshfield who was the No. 5 singles champion in the 1981 meet, advanced to the finals at No. 2 singles before losing to Connie Milot of Eau Claire 6-4 and 6-3.

Schalow was the No. 1 seed entering the tournament and concluded her season with a glossy 12-6 record.

She was the only Pointer woman to place in the weekend competition.

Rugby Club

The Stevens Point Rugby Club defeated Eau Claire 8 to 4 on Saturday. Trailling 4 to 0 with time running out, Pat Rajaki scored on a 30 yard run. Paul Champ added the conversion for the winning margin.

Stevens Point B-side won 13 to 12. Pat Bolger and Dan Miller scored in the victory. Next week Point will host Racin.

Spikers Third at Invite

SID—The rollercoaster world of the UW SP women's volleyball team was on the upswing again as the Lady Pointers captured third place in the Carthage Invitational at Kenosha last weekend.

The UWSP women won four of the six matches they played to finish third and in the process improved its season record to 22-14.

The Point women began the tournament looking mostly ordinary and then they defeated the first three opponents they played. They are both outstanding hitters and Melanie (Breitenbach) is an excellent blocker. However, she only plays in the front whereas Karla (Miller) plays all the way around.

"Jas (Mortenson) also very pleased with Chris Otto as she went and gave us some consistent and serving and all-around play. Her hard work and her concentration during the game gave her the ability to read the defense of the opposition and then deliver the most appropriate attack.

"A number of newcomers don't seem to concentrate for an entire weekend or sometimes for an entire game. We are going to have to improve on this if we are going to make it to the state tournament."

Minor parties of Wisconsin: the unheard of minority

By Joseph Vanden Plas
Senior News Editor

OK everyone, it's time for a pop quiz on Wisconsin's political parties.

Question number one: What party advocates the legalization of prostitution?, major parties. Consequently, what party believes it is the right of every citizen to stop welfare fraud and crime as the major issues of the 1982 campaign?

Question number two: What party favors the legalization of drugs and prostitution?

Question number three: What party believes it is the right of every citizen to free education paid for by the government?

Question number four: What party is represented by a candidate who has lost a state record 20 consecutive elections?

If you answered Democrat or Republican to any of the above you were wrong. Oh, were you wrong!

Each of these facts pertain to one of Wisconsin's four minor parties: the Constitution Party, the Libertarian Party, the Socialist Worker's Party and the Labor and Farm Party.

Members of these parties toil in obscurity in comparison to the dominant major parties. Consequently, not much is known about them. But each possesses deep-rooted ideologies they are firmly committed to.

Constitution party

The Constitution Party has been described as the party on the extreme right of the ideological scale.

The Constitution gubernatorial ticket consists of parochial school principal James P. Wickstrom and his running mate for Lt. Governor, Diana Simonson. They see the growing size of state government, welfare fraud and crime as the major issues of the 1982 campaign.

If elected, Wickstrom says he would fire 10,000 state employees in an attempt to get "big government" off the backs of business. Wickstrom would eliminate at least 20 percent of the welfare budget and stop welfare fraud. "We should not offer welfare to attract undesirables to Wisconsin. All aliens should be deported or become the responsibility of the sponsors or churches which brought them here," he states.

As part of an anti-crime program, Wickstrom would return capital punishment to the state. He claims capital punishment would make a significant contribution to law enforcement and the protection of citizens.

Wickstrom also says one of his first orders of business as governor would be the dismantling of the Department of Natural Resources, which he claims is forcing too many commercial fishermen out of business. He prefers a conservation department with game wardens responsible for wildlife.

Recently, Wickstrom and the Posse Comitatus, the self-styled law and order group he belonged to, were charged with illegally performing the duties of public officials or what they perceive to be the "Constitution Township of Wigton Dells." Wickstrom, who admits the anti-semitic, anti-black Posse plays an important role in the party's direction, insists he has done nothing illegal in claiming to be a public official in Tigerton.

Another Constitution Party candidate is Sanford G. Knapp, who is running for the U.S. Senate seat currently held by William Proxmire. Knapp portrays himself as an expert on constitutional law and is severely critical of today's lawyers, charging that they are not as concerned with supporting the constitution as they should be.

Socialist Workers Party

The Socialist Worker's Party, led by gubernatorial candidate Peter Seidman, places heavy emphasis on educational rights. This support of educational rights is evident in most of their political views.

Seidman and his fellow party members believe the government has created a use that money for the abolition of all drug problem and that laws enacted to prohibit prostitution and the sale of certain drugs have allowed the criminal element to use prostitution and drugs in racketeering ventures. They want educational rights to be protected by the government, Smiley reiterates. "To purveyors of drugs, it is worth finding a way to make money by selling them found it practical to promote next biennium. But the fact of economic heap to keep people at the bottom of the economic heap to keep (itself) going." The Labor and Farm candidates are also running, because after 20 campaign defeats, he has nothing more to lose.

Minor party chances

Of the four minor party candidates, only Wickstrom believes victory is attainable. With all the obstacles the two party system provides for minor party candidates, Wickstrom's hopes are unrealistic. For now, the majority of the minor party candidates are content just to get their message to the voters.

This Tuesday, an important decision is yours to make. You will be voting for the next state assemblyman to represent our campus.

Dave knows that the faculty and student body of our university community have very special needs, and he will use his knowledge and experience to effectively represent us as our Assemblyman.

Because of Dave's established record of effective support for our university, and because of Dave's strong commitment to support us in the future, the members of our university community listed below — and many others — strongly support Dave Helbach. They believe that our University needs a strong, effective friend like Dave representing us in Madison in the uncertain times that lie ahead.
