Yes vote is the best vote!

Remember that catchy slogan from the American Revolution? Any respectable system, tuition surcharges and the state Legislature. Increased 12 percent by the year, tuition at UWSP was 38.09(5) of the Wisconsin statutes (or "student taxes") have already been levied. This year, tuition at UWSP was increased 15 percent by the UW system administration and the state Legislature. And hefty hikes are in the works for 1983.

Students are subject to hyperinflationary costs for their instruction. But are they represented? According to the UW System Administration, the student body is the only one to participate in all aspects of university governance. This statute is unique to Wisconsin. But that representation can be easily reduced to tokenism if students are not organized or prepared to share in the administration of the university.

The United Council of the Wisconsin Student Governments serves the purpose of organizing students on a statewide level, including students at UWSP. United Council employs two lobbyists in the state capital, which monitors all state agencies, including the UW system administration, that affect students in public higher education. It acts as a clearinghouse for information for the campus student associations and the press. It is affiliated with two national student lobbies in Washington, D.C.

And for all this extensive representation, United Council charges UW students fifty cents per semester, refundable upon request.

That’s a small price to pay for representation in this era of special interest politics, and is worth it.

On October 13 and 14, UWSP students will be given the option of whether or not they wish to support the advocacy efforts of United Council. The Student Government Association will be holding a referendum on those days to determine the UWSP student body opinion regarding the Council.

I urge you to support United Council, for it is the only effective means of real representation for UW students. A vote for United Council is a vote for a strong, unified student voice. A vote against United Council is a vote in favor of tuition surcharges without representation. And that is tyranny.

Vote "yes" on October 13-14. Unless you are willing to silently accept anything that the state or the UW system dishes out, you can’t afford not to.

Ad insult to injury

"You've come a long way, baby," says the Virginia Slims ad. If women have come such a long way, then why are we still being called "baby"? Society has taken a long way in recognizing women's rights since the Victorian age. But all has not been smooth sailing. Our attitude and role play in this improvement.

To see this, you only need to stop and really listen or read many of today's ads, including the one by Virginia Slims.

Women are still shown as either helpless, dependent on men, or dependent on their looks.

The message in these ads must still be attractive, otherwise the advertisers wouldn't use it. And it must still be attractive to women since the products being pushed are for women, and the ads are often found in women's magazines.

The first step in changing the message of these ads is to recognize their slant. Like, "Nothing beats a great pair of L'eggs. Not even brains, skill, or self-confidence!" Or, "Nineteen gentlemen prefer Hanes... Would any man really know the difference?" No, this ad is really saying that if I wear Hanes, my supposed major goal in life will be achieved, all men will be drooling. Do we really "buy" this? We must.

Some of today's advertisers are trying to appeal to the "modern" woman. Some of them are worthy. For example, an ad for Mary Kay makeup reads: "You don't have to look like a model to look beautiful." It goes on to claim that women with "sell-yourself-worth is naturally attractive. The message is that Mary Kay salespeople can help you feel good. That's fine. It's like Meredith with a Crocker attitude.

Neither one of these ads claims to solve the problems of your sex life, or the trials of living. There's nothing wrong with a woman taking pride in herself. If makeup, L'Oreal hair coloring, or new clothes help you to feel good about yourself, there's no need for other justifications.

The Mary Kay and L'Oreal commercials really address women's needs concerning themselves. On the other hand, some ads appeal to an older, more destructive need: to solely play the role of pleasing someone else, usually men. Don't get me wrong, there's nothing wrong with pleasing someone else, especially a man. But first, these ads can't realistically fill their claim. Second, it's not women's purpose in life to dress, talk or smoke to attract men.

If you listen to Betty Crocker, you'll be stashed away in the kitchen to "Bake Someone Happy," using "Extra fancy for extra brownie points." Now, if I believed these ads, even subconsciously, I'd be several pounds heavier. I don't know where my baking talent does anything but make people happy already.

The first step is cognition. Be aware of what the ads are really saying. The second step will take a lot more effort and a lot more time. Men, and especially women, must break the traditional mold of women orbiting around someone else, always waiting. Our mouths are giving service to women's rights, but our attitudes really haven't come that far yet. Baby, we still have a long way to go.

Would you like a winter vacation in the warm, current climate of tropical Peru and Bolivia?

Professor R. G. Nash of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point in Whitewater has planned a Dec. 27-Jan. 7 tour to the Andean lands where the Inca civilization flourished more than 600 years ago.

The visit will begin in Lima, city of contrasts, where beautiful affluent suburbs close to barriadas, or squatter settlements, in the pleasant

Chip off the old Bach

"The Intimate P.D.Q. Bach," an evening of musical madness, will be presented on Friday, Oct. 22, at the Sentry Theatre, sponsored by the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point's Arts and Lectures Concert Series.

Tickets for the 8 p.m. performance go on sale Friday, Oct. 8, in the Arts and Lectures ticket box office, Pius XI Arts Building.

Professor Peter Schickele's irreverent and hilarious presentation has been called, "a very funny show—even for people who like music but don't know why" by The New York Times. The program brings to audiences the music of the heretofore undiscovered son of the great Johann Sebastian Bach, including comments on his life and times, fully illustrated by Professor Schickele's collection of rare slides, manuscripts and other memorabilia.

The professor, who plays the piano, the bassoon, and the unusual Baroque Calioppe, hails from Ames, Iowa, Washington, D.C., Fargo, N.D., Swarthmore College, the Juilliard School of Music, Los Angeles, and New York City. Among his recent publications are "Piano Concerto No. 3 in F Major ("Osei!") for piano and brass quintet," Small Serenade, Razzle-Dazzle Triptych and Epitaph" for piano, "Summer Trio" for flute, cello and piano, Little Chaps Autumn for violin and viola and "The Lowest Trees Have Tops," a cantata for soprano, flute, viola and harp.

Among the works to be performed are "Abassonnaata," "Goldbrick" Variations," and "Twelve Gothic Heavenly Songs," an imposing song cycle based on the signs of the Zodiac which features the noted bargain-counter tenor, John Ferrante, who has been with the P.D.Q. Bach Show since its premiere in New York in 1965.

Life Magazine says, "The most original and satisfying expert at musical parody around is "Abassonnaata," "Goldbrick" Variations," and "Twelve Gothic Heavenly Songs," an imposing song cycle based on the signs of the Zodiac which features the noted bargain-counter tenor, John Ferrante, who has been with the P.D.Q. WRC workshops

The Women's Resource Center at UWSP will sponsor two workshops, "The Woman Within," and "Women in their 30's," beginning the week of Oct. 11 and continuing for six weeks.

A $70,000 landscaping project has been okayed for the area in which classroom buildings are located at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

The Wisconsin Building Commission approved final plans which had been okayed for funding earlier as a minor project in the current state budget.

The work is expected to be done next summer.

The area will include new plantings of trees and shrubs, a new walkway which will be installed as well as bike racks and information board kiosks.

The area is bordered by Fourth Avenue, Reserve, Isadore and Portage Streets.

A. J. (Zede) Torzewski, assistant manager for business affairs, said the state traditionally sponsors minor projects as this is part of the overall maintenance of its property. The new walkway is an appropriation beyond the campus budget. Therefore, UW SP would not have the opportunity to delay the improvements if it chose instead to use the funds to improve its own financial situation.

The Incas were superb builders who constructed roads, tunnels, bridges, stone stairways, and irrigated terraces, a high point of the tour will be a visit to Machhu Picchu, a city built by a band of about 1000 Incaas after Pizarro destroyed old Cuzco. Located on an isolated plateau 3000 feet above the Urubamba River Valley, Machhu Picchu was occupied between 1350 and 1571 and then was abandoned for reasons unknown. It remains in remarkable condition. The tour includes an overnight steam-trip across Lake Titicaca, a body of water 12,500 feet above sea level, the highest navigable lake in the world. Harboring a submerged city discovered in 1985, it is 600 feet deep in many places, 110 miles long, and 35 miles at its widest point.

Cost of the tour—subject to change if unforeseen increases in air or hotel rates occur—is $1650. Included are round trip airfare from either Milwaukee or Chicago, transfers, double occupancy hotels, breakfasts, much sightseeing, free use of undergraduate or graduate credits are available.

Interested travelers should contact Professor Nash, Department of Biology, UW-Stevens Point, Stevens Point, Wis., 54481, phone (414) 733-2222 or 473-2393.

Join NOW

September 15 marked the beginning of New Member Month for the Stevens Point Area Chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW). It is part of an overall effort by NOW to recruit more than a million members through local chapter activities and a major television and print advertising campaign.

"Our goal is to double our membership locally," predicts Janet Newman, president of the Stevens Point NOW and advisor to the student affiliate chapter.

Women are especially angry over passage of the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) and by the scandals of the Reagan administration's unfair rollbacks on programs that disproportionately hurt women. Unless we all join together, women stand to lose the modest gains of the last 30 years," Ms. Newman added.

Nationwide, NOW has more than 800 chapters and over 50,000 members, a figure that has doubled since the Reagan election.

The Stevens Point NOW chapter was founded in 1978 and has been especially active in the Equal Rights Amendment Campaign, sending four of its local members to ERA national conferences.

Any members of the community wanting to join NOW can call 341-3126 for membership information. Annual dues to join range from $10.00 for full-time students or low-income individuals, to $30.00 including national, state, and local dues.

The Stevens Point Area NOW meets the second Tuesday of each month in Room G-2 in the Sentry building downtown on Strong Avenue at 7 p.m. This month's meeting will be October 14, at 7 p.m. and will feature Pam Kemp with a presentation on dual-career families.

To the Pointer:

Two weeks ago, the Student Art League's couch was stolen from the Fine Arts building. The Student Art League went through much trouble to obtain funds for furniture to provide art students with a nice lounge. We feel it is a shame that we can not accommodate students with furniture or equipment for their use without permanently chaining it down. A reward is offered for the return of the couch. Please contact Kathy Olson, Director of Student Conduct.

Looking for Mister goodBob

Dear Uncle Bob,

You probably don't remember me, since we haven't seen each other for months now. However, recently a friend who attends UWSP mailed a copy of your welcome back edtion of the Pointer to me here in your good old home town. Within that paper, you listed what you did this summer, and how much time you devoted to those activities. Well Robert, you'll remember that you listed 3 and 1/2 hours for sex. Is your memory still as clear as it used to be?

Let the buyer beware

To the Pointer:

The September 30 issue of Pointer Magazine carried an item which may cause significant problems for those students who might be inclined to succumb to temptation. I refer to the half-page ad on page 32, which offers a term paper service.

No thanks for the memories

To Pointer Magazine,

I do not know to whom I should address this letter, to whom I should express my sorrow, my anger and frustration. Certainly the blame does not lie within the confines of one small community in central Wisconsin, for ignorance is a widespread problem of infinite proportion.

To the Pointer:

As far as the seemingly half-hearted investigation by the Stevens Point police department, I am not surprised. Their 5th rate conglomeration of fools is well known to all whom they blindly victimize. I have incurred their wrath a number of times ranging from parking my car on the street because I ran out of gas, to riding a bike down the wrong way of a one way street.

Resisters say draft registration a bust

Draft registration isn't working, according to some of the non-registrants undergoing or awaiting prosecution. "The government can't possibly prosecute us all," said Benjamin H. Sasway of Vista, Calif. Sasway was the resister, who was first indicted for non-registration, and the second to be prosecuted.

"There are just a desperate move to intimidate people into turning themselves in, and compromising their moral and religious beliefs," said Russell Martin, another draft resister, who was registered against his will by a U.S. attorney in Iowa. "A few people are being crucified by an agency that refuses to admit to any failure.

The General Accounting Office's latest figures show over 17,000 people in selective service. This is more than double the entire population of federal prisons. The overall compliance rate with registration is 93 percent, according to Selective Service. This is well below the 98 percent Selective Service officials have said must be reached for the system to be considered fair and effective. Even at the beginning of this year's Vietnam war, compliance with draft registration never fell below 98 percent.

The current prosecutions will raise the issue of illegal selective prosecution, according to Martin. "I'm going to be prosecuted not because I didn't register for the draft, but because I publicly pointed out the failure of the program and the aggressive foreign policy behind it," he said. Martin was re-elected this spring as student body president of the University of Northern Iowa, in Cedar Falls.

Draft registration is a political law designed to force people into supporting policies that they would not support otherwise. It has nothing to do with national security as President Reagan and Martin argue. "Non-registration forces a debate on foreign policy," he said. Other draft grants disagree. For them, non-registration is an act of treason. Draft registration is preparation for war," said Russell F. Ford, who was imprisoned before his trial when he refused bail. "I am not willing to sign my life over to the government that brought us Vietnam, Watergate and the Trident submarine. I am not willing to go into my protest...until the nuclear arms race has reached its logical conclusion in a nuclear holocaust...I am defending a view that wars, like poverty, are neither necessary nor inevitable. They transgress the human spirit and ought to be abolished."

"Draft registration is preparation for war. I am not willing to sign my life over to the government that brought us Vietnam, Watergate and the Trident submarine. I am not willing to withhold my protest...until the nuclear arms race has reached its logical conclusion in a nuclear holocaust...I am defending a view that wars, like poverty, are neither necessary nor inevitable. They transgress the human spirit and ought to be abolished, said Martin.

I am not willing to go into my protest... until the nuclear arms race has reached its logical conclusion in a nuclear holocaust... I am defending a view that wars, like poverty, are neither necessary nor inevitable. They transgress the human spirit and ought to be abolished," he said.

The Internal Revenue Service is helping Selective Service to enforce registration. In mid-August, IRS mailed war-era letters to an initial 33,000 suspected non-registrants born in 1963, said Roscoe L. Egger Jr., Commissioner of the Internal Revenue. These names were drawn from a list of 550,000 names IRS staff checked against its files with Selective Service lists of non-registrants. Egger said IRS planned to mail notices to the others, and later provide up to 200 names to Selective Service. These, he said, "will be selected on a random basis" from those who refuse to register after receiving warnings mailed by IRS.

In late August, IRS notified asuscenient sponsored by Sen. Hayakawa (R-CA) and Rep. Solomon (R-NY) to the Defense Authorization Bill of Congress and was before President Reagan. The bill would have disabled college students applying for grants and loans through the Federal government to prove that they have registered for the draft. Some lawyers question the constitutionality of such legislation. "This is certain to generate some lawsuits," said Irving Bamberger of the National Interreligious Service Board for Conscientious Objectors (NISBO). Draft resister Martin, however, said these governmental efforts "show what a total failure of the (registration) program is, in terms of enforcement: they have to go outside the existing law to enforce it."

Jim Feldman, staff lawyer for CCCO, the country's largest agency for draft registrants, said this is a "private non-registrant's chance of being prosecuted."-IRS-will not prosecute anyone under or awaiting service. This is well below one in 1,000—but present. It is now Justice Department policy not to prosecuted if the resister registers beforehand. The Justice Department said the task prosecution should know that there are legal defenses that can be used. Legal defense may prove difficult for the government to prove its case," said Feldman. "This is a private constitutional law case."

The Internal Revenue Service may have been led by the Internal Revenue Service, but it is defined as the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors. Since then it has been called the central, non-profit agency counseling young Americans facing military service, and those already in the military.

A Stevens Point police sergeant was suspended without pay last week after falsely accusing a UWSP student of taking money from him.

According to campus security records, the sergeant visited a residence student's room, accusing the occupant of taking money from campus overnight boxes where the officer works as a manager. If the student failed to produce the officer, he would take up the matter with the district attorney.

The report also noted the sergeant entered the room of two other students on the same wing.

Later in the day, he found the money in his office waste basket.

After the officer left the room, the accused notified campus security of the unexpected visitor, noting that the officer had come in his police uniform.

The sergeant was off duty at the time of the incident.

Campus security officers responded immediately to the call and took statements from the student, the dormitory director, and the occupants of the room the officer mistakenly entered.

Campus Security Chief Al Kursewski then met with the student, Chief Leonard Hucke, and Robert Baruch of University Affairs to discuss the incident.

According to Kursewski, the officer apologized and was reprimanded in front of his colleagues for his actions. Chief Hucke apologized on behalf of the department.

District Attorney John Osiuga indicated he would meet with the parties involved before deciding whether to take any legal action.
Ode to Kamil Mahdi: An extraordinary man

By Judith Filtz

"Sometimes after a person dies, we tend to magnify his good qualities, but in the case of Kamil Mahdi, this is not true."

-Professor Ergun Yener-

Kamil Mahdi was a friend of my family, a neighbor, but someone I did not know very well. In the past few days I have come to know a lot about him through his friends, a lot of good things that leave me wondering why a 25-year-old man who died of a heart attack has to be separated from a promising future.

Mahdi was an assistant professor of business administration at UWSP and resided here for the past eight months. A native of Baghdad, Iraq, Mahdi and his wife Sameia came to the United States in 1977 to work on his Master's Degree at Long Island University. He was also a candidate for the doctoral degree in management at UW-Milwaukee. Previous to this, Mahdi served as an assistant to the president at Tech Consilt, a business consulting firm in Iraq.

Yet, despite prior employment in business, Mahdi wanted to be a teacher. He started his teaching career as a graduate assistant at UW-Milwaukee. Then, despite many teaching offers, he opted for a UWSP teaching position.

Dr. Robert Taylor, chairman of the UWSP business department, and a long-time friend of Mahdi, recalls, "Kamil liked the town. He thought it was a terrific place to raise a family. He felt UWSP was a growing campus with lots of opportunities and he wanted to be a part of it."

Mahdi's father is the Iraqi Deputy Minister for Industry and Commerce. Mahdi himself was a partner of Transcontinental Consultants, a business consulting firm, in Washington D.C., which he helped found.

He wanted to share his success with his parents, so he made arrangements for them to visit him and his family in Stevens Point during the months of August and September.

Sandy Moore, a neighbor and very close friend of the Mahdis, recalled, "Kamil loved his family and was very concerned about their happiness. He sent his wife, Sameia, also from Iraq, home every year to visit with their family. He was very proud of her heritage and concerned about women getting more rights in Iraq. He had always liked to make his home open to his friends."

I had met Sameia Mahdi many months earlier, and she seemed to be a happy woman who was well adjusted to this country. She had been at UWSP and was majoring in sociology. Since her husband's death, she has decided to return back to Iraq and live with Kamil's parents. Kamil's parents, his wife and their three-year-old daughter Rania, left for Iraq on September 11. Sameia is expected, however, to return to the U.S. in the near future to finish her education.

Dr. Taylor, in praising his friend, said, "Kamil was an outstanding teacher and a promising scholar. I felt that within the next five to ten years he would have gained himself an international reputation. He was a great ambassador from the Middle East and did a lot to help people in Stevens Point understand that part of the world better."

Another associate and friend of Mahdi, Professor Ergun Yener, stated, "Kamil had an ideal situation with his students and always felt very enthusiastic about every one of his classes. He was the type of person who always gave to people, expecting nothing in return. He was a very gracious host and cared about everyone he came in contact with. We will miss him dearly."

Few can doubt the power of advertising, and tiny Beloit College is hoping that quantity will sell. The college spent $5,500 for a one-day run in each paper, and the tiny Wisconsin school's president hopes it will bring in $1 million in subscriptions, and not necessarily because of desperate financial conditions.

Washington—A report by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission revealed the reactor walls of the Point Beach nuclear power plant near Two Rivers were deteriorating before they needed to be repaired to prevent a major nuclear accident.

The report called for the commission to immediately set up a detailed system for the examination of each plant where the potential for rupture in the walls surrounding core reactors exist.

The Point Beach plant, owned by the Wisconsin Electric Power Co., was one of sixteen plants cited in the report as having the most serious problems with walls surrounding the core.

Madison—The state elections board in Madison, October 7, 1982, has decided that Democrat Virgil Riley, the state's own lawyers conceded victory to Riley. Madison, however, said he believes Riley may have been affected by the election and will not contest the outcome.

Nevertheless, the state elections board has informed Riley that since he is not officially recognized as the winner, he is ineligible for a public campaign finance grant for his campaign against Democrat Virgil Roberts.

The mix-up by the state elections board was its second error of the 1982 campaign. Earlier, the board had omitted the word weapons from the wording of the Sept. 14 nuclear freeze referendum and had to reprint ballots in most Wisconsin counties.

Madison—According to a news release by the Wisconsin Investment Board, they have paid them over $1.3 million in legal fees for suits against Robin Yount's security fraud.

The New York law firm of Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom said it has been working for 15 months on security fraud cases that yielded $13 million in investment by the board.

Outraged state officials said the state's own lawyers could have done much of the legal work at less cost than the New York firm.

Baltimore—The Milwaukee Brewers walked until the final day of the season to win their first divisional championship, beating the Baltimore Orioles 19-2.

The Brewers, who were leading the previous three games of the series, all Baltimore routes, were led by the team's 22-year-old star, and the pitching of Don Sutton, who outdueled Oriole ace Jim Palmer.

Milwaukee currently trails California 2-0 in the American League Playoffs.
SGA UPDATE

Two organizations were recognized by SGA senators and Cornerstone Christian Ministry (Campus Advance) was given $200 to attend World Mission workshops in Boston, Massachusetts, during the weekly SGA meeting.

Three organizations came before the Senate to request recognition. They were Phi Upsilon Omicron, Pre-medical Society, and the Welchel Club. Phi Upsilon Omicron was represented by Colete Charlier. This organization is an honor society for home economic students which will provide service to the community by possibly holding community workshops or helping the Division on Aging. Requirements for membership are a 3.0 grade point average, or be in the upper 25 percent of the home economic students. Leadership and student involvement are also considered, said Charlier. There is no formal membership, yet 76 invitations were sent out for Saturday's initiation ceremony. The UWSP Phi Upsilon Omicron is a chapter of the National Phi Upsilon Omicron Society and was recognized by SGA.

James Ramsay represented the Pre-medical Society which is open to all students in health related sciences. According to Ramsay, the purpose of this group is for interaction between students and faculty. Students can share experiences and interest and receive better preparation for advancement to a medical school if necessary. Through interaction, lower classmen are prepared for their chosen careers by gaining advice on course selection and the sharing of experiences with students who have graduated or are attending medical school. The Society is open to anyone and it currently has between 15 and 20 active members. The Welchel Club, whose purpose is to stimulate interest in gospel music, was recently recognized by SGA at this time. The club was represented by Michael Breitner. In other organization business, Cornerstone Christian Ministry received $200 from SGA. Ten members of the ministry will travel to Boston for a three-day workshop. The purpose of the trip is to train members to be effective leaders for the community and eventually increase organization membership. Students will also receive spiritual growth and enhancement which they can turn share with others, according to Cornerstone Christian Ministry. An additional $800 will be paid by the students attending.

Attention: GUARANTEED STUDENT LOAN RECIPIENTS WHO WISH TO WORK ON THE REGULAR WORK PROGRAM.

The Financial Aid Office has recently learned that the restriction which previously prevented Guaranteed Student Loan recipients from working on the Regular Work Program unless they could demonstrate a need has been lifted. Now, any student who has only a Guaranteed Student Loan or a Pell Grant (or just one of these forms of aid) may work on the Regular Work Program. Students in this category will henceforth be authorized to work if they are able to find a position opening.

Yielding to pressure by Congress, the Reagan administration dropped proposals that would relax guarantees ensuring equal education for handicapped children.

President Robert O'Neill called for an increase in federal aid for that purpose, "and should be done if we expect six months ago.

The Reagan administration's thirst for increased financial aid support are much brighter than was expected six months ago.

The Reagan administration's hardest aid cut proposals did not survive the budget process. Among the grants restored was $212 million in Pell grants, the basic component of student financial aid.

Funding for federal aid programs for 1983-84 is now expected to remain at the same level as the previous year.

Working for higher standards

The UW Board of Regents has passed a resolution urging the UW System to work with Wisconsin's public and private secondary school system to develop a list of expected competencies for students to meet while in college.

UW President Robert O'Neill will soon announce the formation of a Joint Council on College Preparation. The purpose of the council will be to determine expected competencies for successful study in college.

Unprofitable affair

A $10 million palimony suit filed against the estate of the late Alfred Bloomingdale, founder of the Diners Club and a close advisor of President Reagan, was thrown out of a Los Angeles court last week.

Vicki Morgan, 30, wanted to collect the money on the basis of supposed promises made by the department store magnate while the two were engaged in a 13-year affair.

Judge Christian Markey concluded that Ms. Morgan was nothing more than a "well-paid mistress" in view of the fact that Bloomingdale had remained married to his wife of 35 years during the extra-marital liaison.

Markey rejected the claims of Morgan's lawyers, which sought to draw a parallel between her case and that of the famous Marvin v. Marvin palimony trial, in which the California Supreme Court held that promises of support between two unmarried cohabitants were enforceable.

Markey drew a distinction between the two cases by pointing out that, unlike the Marvin, Bloomingdale was already married and had every intention of remaining so.

The suit drew considerable media attention because of the Bloomingdale's close relationship with Ron and Nancy Reagan. In addition, scandal-seekers could revel in Ms. Morgan's trial testimony which related Bloomingdale's supposed liking for sado-masochistic sex and his active pursuit of her when she was only 17.

Way of the working world

By Lauren Caare
Pointe Features Writer

Working women are no longer the exception to the rule, they are the rule. In 1978, 3.4 million, more than half of all American females 16 and older, held paid jobs, according to a 1981 Equal Rights Amendment publication by the National Organization for Women. This figure will increase to 70 percent by 1990.

Another rule for working women: on the average they are paid only 59 cents for every dollar working men are paid. In Wisconsin this gap is wider, with women earning only 57.5 cents for every dollar men earn.

This wage gap has existed since the 1900's when the first woman was hired to work in a textile mill or factory. She has been a source of cheap labor ever since. Parallel with this wage gap, the concept of "women's work" has also developed. Under the paternalistic definitive legislation, laws were created that forbade women to advance to better paid jobs by restricting them from performing certain skills, or in other environments as well as limiting the number of hours they could work.

Many of these laws have since been repealed or invalidated, but the attitude of "women's work" prevails.

Today one of the very reasons women do not earn as much money on the average is that they are trapped in low paying, dead end jobs. 47 percent of all working women are concentrated in only four occupations: saleswomen, clerical, waitresses and hairdressers. Only 16 percent work in professional technical fields, with over half of these as teachers or nurses. Two percent of all working women are in skilled trades and six percent are managers.

At the top of the management scale, the situation for women is bleak. In 1981 only 2 percent of the corporate directors of top American companies were women. Seventy percent of the top 1300 corporations have no women at all on their boards, and there are no female chief executive officers of the Forbes 500 companies.

When women do enter dead-end jobs in the market, their opportunities for advancement are automatically limited because these jobs do not give them the experience necessary to move up through the ranks to higher positions. With this avenue for advancement closed, women then are not offered the training which is also necessary to improve.

When women do begin to progress, they move up more slowly and still end up earning less money than male counterparts. The wage gap extends not only on the average, but also within the same position, between male and female.

The repercussions extend further than just the smaller paycheck women bring home. Half of all working women are in jobs that have no pensions. The Social Security System pays back according to wages put in. Single working women thus receive less and are still economically penalized in their retirement years. Women also still have difficulty establishing credit and gaining capital funds to own a business or start their own businesss.

Despite the discrimination and inequalities in the system, women still continue in the work world. The fact remains that women must work. Over 50 percent are already work to support themselves or their families. 5 million of these are either divorced, widowed or unmarried so there is no traditional breadwinner.

Increasing inflation and divorce rates, as well as the trend to marry later and have fewer children, continue to send more women into the work force.

Divorce laws also often leave women in financial straits. Generally, only 15 percent of divorced women are awarded alimony, with only 25 percent of these receiving payment. Seventy-eight percent are awarded child support but only 59 percent are receiving payment. Under this time, laws that disregard homemaker's contributions to a marriage leave women with high estate taxes. The Social Security System also denies payment of benefits if a homemaker is widowed before age 60; she can only collect if she is a minor child. If divorced before 10 years of marriage, she can only collect on her husband's benefits.

Women need to work not only out of economic necessity, but for economic stability and security throughout their lives. It is not enough to depend on someone else. To achieve full independence, but true equality, women must not only be equally employed, but equally paid.

The title of that tune is equality

Title IX is possibly one of the most controversial and significant amendments passed in decades. Today, ten years after its passage, the effects of Title IX have been felt in almost every school system in the country. While for some schools Title IX has only caused problems, for UWSP, it has opened the door to equality between men and women in education.

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 bars sex bias in federally assisted education programs and activities. Although the statute also bars bias in such areas as admissions, counseling, employment, and student aid, much of the attention it has attracted stems from its relation to intercollegiate athletics.

Alice Clawson, Director of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics (HPERA), says, "We've had a very positive reaction to Title IX." Ironically, one of the greatest benefits UWSP drew from the program is the development of a physical education major for men. Before the passage of Title IX, only women were eligible to be physical majors at UWSP.

The greatest effect of Title IX in our athletic program is that it has given us the means to develop our women's athletics, says Clawson. Before Title IX, there was no organized competition for women at the college level. Clawson recalls that with the onset of Title IX, "Women's athletics programs just blossomed."

One of the major fears expressed by men's athletic directors was that Title IX would take money away from well-established men's programs, and force administrators to skimp on men's teams or drop some sports. Clawson pointed out that the interest of Title IX is to create strong women's programs, in addition to the men's.

Many schools have run into problems because in the process of giving their women's athletics new opportunities, they are taking resources away from the men's. UWSP has steered away from this by asking for additional funds from organizations such as the Student Government Association (SGA). Clawson says that SGA has been generous and very supportive in helping to fund the women's athletics activities.

Men's and women's athletics teams here have benefited in another way. The swimming, track, and cross-country teams are now holding their practices together. This creates an atmosphere in which athletes can free to help each other, and also learn at the same time. Clawson feels that this has been a very positive thing.
Abortion: Why or why not?

By Barb Harwood

Pointe Features Writer

Abortion is much more than just an argument. Pro-choice feel that women's rights would be taken away if abortion was made illegal. They feel it is taking a woman's body away from them, their own body. Pro-life want abortions illegal under all circumstances except when the mother's life is in danger. They believe that life begins at conception and that abortion is murder.

Of course, many more elements are turning within these arguments. The people who can best relate these other elements are those who feel they have had a personal experience with the issue. These are the ones who strongly, yet often silently, live with their convictions for or against abortion.

WHY?

"The time was not right in our relationship to have a baby. We had financial problems and no medical insurance. I didn't want to go on welfare." These are the reasons why Marilyn, at the age of 24, had an abortion. (Marilyn is a fictitious name to protect her true identity.) "My boyfriend already has a child and he had to support two people to make. We just could not afford a baby."

Marilyn, who had been taking the birth control pill, found out one day that she was pregnant. She did not tell anyone except her boyfriend. "We sat down and talked about it, and at first he didn't want me to have an abortion. But after discussing our financial situation and everything else, we decided abortion would be the best thing. He left the final decision up to me, and said he would support whatever I chose to do." She chose the abortion. Four days after finding out that she was pregnant, and her boyfriend drove to Milwaukee for her 9 a.m. appointment. "The first thing they did when I got there was thoroughly screen me to see if I was pregnant and how far along. Also, they checked my complete medical history." Because Marilyn has Rh-negative blood and her boyfriend has Rh-positive, a Rhogam test was taken of both of them. Marilyn's blood cells remained in her life almost a half hours to the normal one hour it takes for the entire appointment.

Marilyn had no complications, and afterwards she went to the recovery room with her boyfriend. "He cheered me up. I wasn't depressed, just sort of shocked. I would have hated to go through it alone, without my boyfriend there." Marilyn said she would make sure none of her decision. "Before I had it, I thought I would have nightmares about it, but I don't. I think that's because I went, there was somebody in the room with me all the time, and I got feelings from other people. No negative feelings at all. In fact, the nurse who assisted me was pregnant. I thought it could be really hard for her, but then I thought maybe at one time she had done this too."

Her advice to women considering having an abortion is to do what they think is best for themselves. "You can't tell somebody else that the best thing for them is to have an abortion. It all depends on what they want. That's why I didn't tell anybody when I was pregnant. Everyone would have been telling me what to do." She also advises discussing abortion with the boyfriend or spouse first, otherwise he may feel uncered for and hurt because he was not included.

In her continuing relationship with her boyfriend, Marilyn said they never bring up the abortion in an argument. "It would be easy for us to throw the fact back at each other and try to make each other feel guilty." But eventually she has been telling me what to do."

"Spiritually, we are always growing. We are potential persons all our lives." Leo Jacoby elaborated on the claim, often making in debates on abortion, the claim that a fetus is a potential life. Jacoby, married and the father of two children, said he is the director of religious education at St. Joseph's School. In his view, a fetus is far more than a "potential" person, he is either a "baby" or a "teenager, adult or child. Thus, he believes that life begins long before conception and that each of us hold potential value to society.

The belief that life begins at conception is also held by the Roman Catholic Church. "The Catholic Church is against abortion for different reasons," Jacoby explained. "They refer to biological and scientific knowledge that says a fetus is a human life, whereas we believe in what we cannot see."

The spiritual element goes beyond pro-choice or anti-choice, explained Jacoby. The church bases its view on the theory that beyond every material thing there is something more, something spiritual. It would be considered a third dimension in abortion debates. While a new voice exists on the pro-choice side, a material voice exists on the anti-abortion side, no material voice can be found for the fetas, he pointed out.

Another party has to be relied on for that voice," said Jacoby. "When a baby cries," Jacoby said, "we can hear it. When a fetus cries, no one can hear it."

This is kind of an article about women and language, I think!

By Lora Holman

Features Editor

"Inwardly confused and anxious, women back off from living full out, at the forefront of their capabilities." - Collette Dowling: The Cinderella Complex

"Language reflects society, but in turn, language also shapes reality." - Dan Dieterich: UWSP English Professor

Studies abound on women and language. Generally, the studies show that men use dominant language while women use submissive language. But the interpretations of these studies vary widely.

Dieterich, an UWSP English professor who has completed studies on women and language, offered his overall assessment of gender language. "I don't think that you should make value judgments about women's language," he said. "There shouldn't be a good and bad stamp. There are good and bad things about both male and female language usage." "Sometimes, women are seen as more sophisticated in their approach," he pointed out as an example. In one study, the "female motive rhetoric" distinctively differs from men. In other words, women's writing patterns show the evolution of their thought. They write about the change they went through and how they came to their realization about it. They give specific examples from a general, flexible outline and often write in a narrative style, described Dieterich.

In contrast, the "male motive rhetoric" is written in a cut and dry fashion, the studies show. Men begin by writing their thesis statement, then say that it's true and here's why, said Dieterich. But then they recognize and refute the opposition to their stand, Dieterich said. "Women never deal with the opposition."

Men's style of organization, and supporting a thesis is much more complex, interpreted Dieterich, pointing out that this can be beneficial. "I also believe that women's style is penalized in academic writing," he continued. "They are taught to write according to the male mode." Dieterich added that it's not just men that enforce this but also women who have been molded by teachers of this style.

Colette Dowling, author of The Cinderella Complex, takes a more extreme stand than Dieterich. "Women have said some very confusing messages," she writes in discussing women in business. "There's a feeling of being a second-class citizen because of their presentation. They seem so tough, but then they start acting helpless and seductive."

Dowling, in researching her book Madison for Women to be less successful than men, interviewed three men from the university's business to the fact that women put on, writes Dowling, "is not always appreciated by the men with whom they do business." This was supported by the experiences reviewed. A male reporter interviewed a "bigwig" female executive of the New York Stock Exchange and shared his impressions with Dowling: "This woman's diacrit was super slow. She was very careful with her words, hyperconscious of how she was being perceived. It was coming across. Then she did this thing I've seen a lot of women do. She would finish their sentences by softening their words and nodding a little as they soften."

An ad man at the interview turned to me and said, "I've heard that. It's kind of gauche brag...they're shrouding what they have to say because they don't want to seem to be really selling it." Dieterich took the brighter cont. on p. 13
You'll never walk alone

By Laura Sternewald

If you've seen the Rogers and Hammerstein musical "Carousel," you've heard the song entitled "You'll Never Walk Alone." This song just might be the motto of one UWSP organization. Since Oct. 3, the Escort Service has once again been available so that you won't have to walk alone.

The Escort Service has existed at UWSP for five years. Its office is located in the Women's Resource Center (WRC), in the basement of Nelson Hall. Escorts are available from 5 p.m. to 2 a.m., seven days a week, except during student vacations. All of the escorts are volunteers, and offer their service to the campus and community within a one-mile radius.

Lisa Herwald is the new director of the Escort Service this year. She said that the service's main purpose is to prevent sexual assault on and around campus and in the community. Use of the Escort Service is not limited to students, she said, nor is it limited to women, although women have been the ones to use it most in the past. Men are also encouraged to make use of it. The Escort Service is available to anyone who doesn't want to walk alone, Herwald said.

If you would like to be escorted, call Protective Services (365-2086) and tell them where and when you need escorts. Protective Services will then contact the escorts on duty, who will call you and make arrangements to meet you at a designated location. You'll get two escorts, either two women or one man and one woman. This buddy system is used so that the escorts don't have to walk alone either.

If you would like to be an escort, you can stop by the WRC office and fill out an application. You'll then be interviewed by Herwald or another WRC staff member. The Women's Resource Center staff will want you to be an escort because you're concerned about preventing sexual assault on campus and in the community. You'll probably be placed in a safer place, you'll probably be placed in a safer location.

"Don't go out alone after dark," Herwald said. "Don't talk to strangers."

A message from the Women's Resource Center:

"We've been told:
- Don't go out alone after dark.
- Don't talk to strangers.
- A woman's place is in the home."

Seventy percent of all rapes occur in the victim's home or private residence. Over 50,000 rapes are reported annually. The FBI estimates these are only 10 percent of the actual rapes. This means over 500,000 rapes occur annually, or a rape takes place somewhere in the country every 90 seconds.

The age range of rape victims is 2 months to 93 years of age.

Women are raped by:
- Strangers on the street
- Boyfriends or lovers

A guitar and in books on the Baroque era music, there was no mention of the guitar. I found out that the guitar was the most popular instrument of the time," he exclaimed.

Pinnell explained how he discovered these findings. "I'm a musicologist (earning his Ph.D from UCLA), and one of the banners of musicology is a trained in search for things that haven't been done and to right the injustice of it."

For example," said Pinnell, "I'm a guitar artist and in books on the Baroque era music, there was no mention of the guitar."

The only benefit of the equality of mankind, Pinnell explained that he has been trained to have an open mind. His lifestyle reflects this unusual interest in grappling with a variety of musicological questions. He has studied German and Italian, speaks fluent Spanish, and is planning to take up French as a future project.

"We want to know things. I'm still curious about so many things. In the case of women in music, I just tried to crack every book I could get my hands on."

Notes on women

By Lora Holman

"Talent is the skill acquired through interest and hard work, plus the spark," instructed Richard Pinnell in his Women in Music class. "This happens in males and females alike," he continued, "and musical talent does not discriminate." Pinnell, who was educated at the University of Utah and Brigham Young University, has championed the cause of the class. Low enrollment and a tight budget came close to "stopping the music." Yet, the class has survived and will continue.

Did you know that Fanny Mendelssohn, sister of the renowned Felix Mendelssohn, was the better pianist and mentor to her brother? Although her parents tried to discourage her from developing a career in music, her husband urged her on. She finally published several of her books of compositions after her death. However, most of her works remained unpublished and unexplored.

Pinnell is looking to teach about the involvement of women in music.

In history, women's role one of the banners of musicology. Women, or the absence of "I have to confess that I was motivated by the equal rights movement. Equal rights for everyone," he continued. "I was a graduate student at the time of Martin Luther King's assassination," he said pointedly.

The odds are better than 1 to 15 that a woman will be raped in her lifetime. The threat of rape affects women to live in constant fear. The streets, our place of work, even our homes aren't safe.

Freedom from fear is a fundamental right, and safety is a basic need of each human being. Come join in the fight to prevent rape and to insure this basic right.

Join us in efforts to show our strength through numbers, let's publicize the fact that rape is a problem... in Wisconsin... even in our community.

Last year there were 14 reported rapes, 10 assaults, and 7 invasions of privacy in our community.

within the athletic department, but as of yet have not been carried out. She feels that if the students show enough interest, "we may see more coed competition like this in intercollegiate sports in the future."

Still another good aspect of the Title IX program has been the expanded funds. It has helped to get funds for new uniforms, locker room renovations, team rooms, and a training room which is accessible to both men's and women's teams, said Clawson.

High Schools in the U.S. also fall under the jurisdiction of Title IX. They have also benefited and so in turn, directly affected universities. Because of the expanded opportunities for girls in high school athletics, they are now coming to universities better prepared and ready for tough competition, Clawson says.

The athletic department at UWSP have not been the only ones to see a change in the department since Title IX was passed. The athletic department's faculty has also developed a greater sense of equality between the sexes, according to Clawson. The department is an equal opportunity employer, which means it does not discriminate on the basis of sex, race, religion, etc. while hiring its faculty members.

Clawson says there is a nice balance of males and females working in the department. There are many offices at HPERA which are occupied not by two men or two women, but by one man and one woman. Clawson, who is one of those who shares an office with a male faculty member, feels that it has been working out well. She thinks that others in the sports world have also been able to make the working environment more balanced.

Some institutions are challenging the law's application to bias complaints in programs or activities that do not directly receive federal dollars, and some women's groups are concerned about Senator Hatch's attempt to limit the definition of "federal financial aid," and to reduce the number of institutions to which Title IX applies.

side. Women are more interested in interpersonal relationships," he said. "They are more people-oriented. This can be good in writing too because they're more reader-sensitive.

Dietrich also cites reader sensitivity as a possible reason for women's greater ability to talk. "Women use more tag-in questions like, 'It's a nice day, isn't it?" he added. "This may be reflecting their sensitivity toward the other person, it can be interpreted as a lack of self-confidence," he said.

But other language used by women has been seen to reflect a problem, acknowledged Dietrich. "Women use more qualifiers," according to the study. "It's possible that women use more intensifiers and qualifiers because they feel less confident, and they're seeking to compensate by trying to give their statements because they feel less confident," he said.

A study showed that boys are more aggressive than females, according to several studies Dietrich has recorded. "They say, 'It was something enjoyable,' " he said. "They also use more intensifiers such as 'very' and 'great,' according to the study. "It's possible that women use more qualifiers and intensifiers because they feel less confident, and they're seeking to compensate by trying to give their statements because they feel less confident," he added.

Women may also feel a need to give more punch in their statements because men may be the ones who are the experts, what they're saying. Another study that Dietrich observed found that men interrupt women more often than women interrupt men. "Maybe they're brought up to be assertive or aggressive or possibly men don't consider what women say important," commented Dietrich of the findings.

Many studies do support that men's behavior is more aggressive than females, starting at an early age. One study showed that kindergarteners found that boys talked more, they were more aggressive verbally and that boys gave more value judgments. The girls appeared shy and talked less about the female boys.

Boys give more information and direct requests, according to another study, which concentrated on compliance and laughed often. Boys are trying to get something done, they claim still another study. While the girls are laughing and trying to make the boys feel secure, men try to dominate. Men, the study concludes, are task-oriented and women are ego-centered.

Obscenity is often associated with aggression, says one study, here again to Dietrich, that men use the word "shit," while women commonly use the word "cussing." Although the study found that women today may find that outdated, the cautious way of speaking has been found in recent studies of women in business.

A study interviewed by Dowling said: "I've noticed that women in business never really talk conversational. You'll never hear them say, 'Are you crazed? or something like that...Women are polite and formalistic. They want the rules right out there in front. They remind me of the girls who use to be first in the class in the sixth grade," he finished.

Dietrich was not convinced that being formal and polite is a bad quality. "You look at it in many different ways," he began. "You can reflect on how men are more accurate with language or that women are not picky.

Dietrich believes that it's all relative: both men and women use different language in addressing a different gender. "Language used about women, and by women, can and does contribute to discrimination. But also, women are viewed by society as a whole, by individual women, and by other women as less valuable. "Just look at the adjectives used to describe men and women," said Dietrich. "Men are hard-driving, working, ambitious. Men are persistent, women are naggy. Men are self-centered. Women use 'putty,' he pointed out.

Are women forfeiting their identity by the things they say, by how they talk? Are we still teaching the young, by words and actions that "boys will be boys" and girls should giggle a lot? Or are women leading the way to a more refined way of talking and writing? Finally, should both systems of language change be accepted as merely the undeniable line between men and women?

A fresh outburst of scholarly work on women's speech and language patterns indicates that fear and insecurity shape the way we talk.

Studying women can boost career

By Wong Park Fook

There are numerous occupational opportunities available in the government and private sector for women. Women can find these jobs interesting as they involve research on various aspects of women's role in government, education, the family, and the community.

According to Dr. Kathy White, coordinator of the Women's Studies program at UWSP, there are about 140 students who now have minors in Women's Studies. She hopes to see some expansion in the program, such as more courses on the subject.

Although interest in women's studies was much keener in the seventies, there are still a lot of people who like to study women's experience, which has been given little attention by scholars in the past.

Next semester, the topic, "Women and Violence in Literature and the Media," will be offered under Women's Studies 300. This course will focus on violence (both physical and psychological) against women and how women can be violent, while investigating the causes and expressions.

A Practicum in Women's Studies (Women's Studies 368, 1-3 credits) is now being offered in the Women's Studies program. Students will be able to work with an organization aiding women and learn about alternatives to abortion. Women are a part of the Women's Research Center, Family Crisis Center, N.O.W., and Women Teaching Women. Dr. White said students will gain skills and information that may be beneficial in long-term personal and career goals.

one can hear him say. "Basically, the church asks if the goal is good and if the action is good. The fact that some children are unwanted in the world is bad. So the goal would be to have only wanted children, which is good. But the action (abortion) towards preventing unwanted children is bad."

When questioned whether the church has exceptions for girls who had been raped, he answered no. "It's a terrible thing to have happen, but it does not make that life less human. That life is valuable because of the spiritual quality of every individual. Two wrongs don't make a right. It is just as wrong now on these humans with love."

He points out that the church will support pregnant girls and women and guide them in their goals. He also adds that the role of the church will be to choose to abort need compassion too. "Condemn the sin, not the sinner."

Claudia will be playing a benefit concert at 8:30 in the Program Banquet Room for the River Valley Community School of Amberst. The school began in 1981 by parents and friends seeking an education.

After discussion of several educational philosophies, they chose to follow the Waldorf approach to education, based on the works of Dr. Rudolph Steiner. Steiner (1861-1925), an Austrian educator, scientist and philosopher, sought to encourage, foster, and enhance the individual's instinctive and natural quest for living.

The River Valley Community School's kindergarten class began in the fall of 1982, with a goal of adding one grade each year through elementary school. The children are involved in storytelling, dance, and song, fantasy and fairytales, crafts, baking, gardening and outdoor activities. Every aspect of the child's day is directed to provide an environment and atmosphere of cooperation, harmony, and purpose. The materials used are simple in nature, designed to promote the child's own creativity.

More information concerning the school will be available at the concert. A $2.50 donation at the door will be collected for the school.
Authority and Ore-I-da quietly negotiate contract

The most important issue in the Central Wisconsin area right now is pesticide contamination of groundwater sources of drinking water. Of 500 samples from wells in the area, positive signs of aldicarb have evidenced themselves 89 times.

Most recently, the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) released data of 11 wells tested in Marathon, Waushara and Langlade Counties. These wells were chosen because they were known to be contaminated with aldicarb or nitrates. Indeed, every test run on the wells turned up positive for aldicarb, five of the test results being above the state guidelines for drinking water or the suggested no adverse response level (SNARL).

Test results on 18 other wells, 15 of which are in Portage County, and which included the municipal water system, are due from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) by the end of this month.

Concern over the possible health effects of the presence of pesticides in groundwater is a chief concern of a recently convened advisory panel to the Portage County Department of Human Services.

Herb Sargent, director of the Wisconsin Vegetable and Potato Growers Association, spoke with the Pointer last week. Sargent is a spokesperson for potato farmers. Potato farmers are on an opposite end of a very controversial pole from that of citizens concerned with possible environmental damage from groundwater contamination. As such, the aldicarb controversy has become one of economics versus the environment. Potatoes are a $60 million business in Wisconsin, and potatoes are grown using many chemical pesticides. So pesticides form a vital link in a substantial economic base in Wisconsin.

Temik is the most prevalent and controversial agricultural pesticide in Portage County. Discovered in 1962, Temik began to sell the agricultural pesticide in 1970. Temik was first sold in Wisconsin in 1976.

While traces of aldicarb were first found in groundwater in 1980, Temik was becoming a widespread and intense drinking water problem on Long Island, New York, in 1979. Temik was applied at rates, according to Sargent, which were two to three times that which Wisconsin farmers have ever applied. However, when Sargent was asked if Wisconsin farmers have always applied three pounds or less per acre, which was the limit before last year's two pound reform, Sargent was not so sure. "It would assume that the tendency for farmers is to receive its $21,800 appropriation from the Wisconsin Legislative's Joint Finance Committee, the Authority has to secure a contract with Ore-I-da by November.

Governor Dreyfus, with gubernatorial power to veto the Joint Finance Committee's appropriation, has been a critic of the Authority. Dreyfus has vetoed an appropriation to the Authority before because the Authority did not have a contract. A prohibitive factor to be considered by Dreyfus is that the Committee, possessing override power with a two-thirds vote, approved the appropriation 15-1 on September 22.

"Very solid progress" was how the executive director of the Wisconsin Solid Waste Recycling. Sargent described negotiations held last week between the Authority and Ore-I-da to establish a resource recovery facility at Ore-I-da's Plover plant.

The Authority and Ore-I-da have been working toward contractual agreement since last March. The contract will provide steam-generated electricity for Ore-I-da by having garbage from Wood and Portage Counties burned in an incinerator at the Plover plant. The incinerator, according to the Authority and Ore-I-da, will be owned by a third party.

Warren Porter, executive director of the Authority, and Jim Fisher, general manager of engineering of Ore-I-da, refused to answer questions about the substance of the negotiations.

Although Porter had earlier told the Pointer that he expected only one face-to-face meeting with Ore-I-da, he said he was going to have another face-to-face meeting with Fisher and Ore-I-da during the "middle of the month." Porter said that this did not indicate any major problems with negotiations and that they expect an agreement later this month.

In order for the Authority to receive its $21,800 appropriation from the Wisconsin Legislative's Joint Finance Committee, the Authority has to secure a contract with Ore-I-da by November.

Acid rain update

By John C. Savaign
Pointe Environment Writer

On Tuesday, September 29, a spate of scientists, public administrators, utility employees, and concerned members of the public descended upon UWSP to engage in a discussion on acid rain.

During a day long and highly complex seminar entitled, "Acid Deposition Research in Wisconsin," various members from the DNR, the private and cooperative utilities, research institutes, and state legislature updated and informed each other on the status of acid rain research. Their efforts are coordinated by the Public Service Commission under a program called "Wisconsin Cooperative Acid Rain Research Program."

Acid rain results when sulphur dioxide is mixed with water particles prior to their release from the atmosphere. The sulphur is expelled into the air by the burning of coal in our generating plants. The effects of acid rain are still inconclusive, and one of the reasons meeting was held was to inculcate the new studies conducted on the effects of acid rain on our lakes, streams, and soil.

Lowell Klessig, from the UW-Extension office located in the CNR, stated that while there is still some disagreement as to the extent of damage acid rain causes, no one will deny that acid rain is a problem, nor will they deny that the primary source is the coal-generating plants. Even the EPA, which under the present administration is a shell of its former self, takes a strong vocal stand on continuing research.

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources fielded seven members during the seminar, and it soon became apparent that there is no official stand the DNR takes in regard to acid rain. Bob Martin, from the DNR office in Rhinelander, presented a study that showed acid rain was indeed affecting those lakes and streams he examined. On the other hand, Tom Shefy, another DNR official, called the acid rain reports bandied about in the media as scare stories which caused people to jump to conclusions.

The need for continued research on acid rain is exemplified by this dispute, cont. on p. 16

From plant to plug: energy on the lines

By John C. Savagian
Poinier Environment Writer

If you have ever attempted to read a book, see the picture of the outdoors and found power lines meandering across your photograph, you probably have not. It is hard to find a setting where black lines do not cross the way along the horizon, where ceder poles and metal poles do not intrude in silent vigil as stark testaments to progress. For many of us, they have always been a part of our streets and given their life expectancy of up to one hundred years, always will be.

Electricity flows through these wires, filling our homes, shops, schools, and hospitals with a commodity so familiar we take for granted, the unesthetic reality of a power line. In part two in a series of four, we will examine the transmission of electricity in the Stevens Point area.

Power lines—they are everywhere. They skirt our homes, fill our streets, and disappear off in the distance. We know what they bring, and from where they came, and how much of our lives are dependent on it. To understand the full extent of the power lines, we will try to accurately depict, if not accurately measure, the electricity in our everyday lives.

13.5 million pounds of power are generated in the Stevens Point area each year. The power companies have devised a system whereby a continuous flow of electricity is assured to all consumers without the control of private individuals. The farmer would vary Temk application depending upon the farmer's intended use. If aphids were the problem, twenty-one pounds of Temk per acre was advised. If fleas beetles were the problem, the goldener nematode was the problem, high voltage emit strong galvanized aluminum wires. The difficulty in tracing acid rain...
DOE ignores Rad-Waste review board

By John Saggia

Following weeks of unexplained alienation on the part of the Department of Energy's Nuclear Waste Radioactive Waste Review Board in Wisconsin, the Board decided it would no longer cooperate with the DOE until respect for the wishes of Wisconsin residents is recognized in regards to the placement of a low or high level radioactive waste dump in this state.

According to Naomi Jacobson, board member and a member of League Against Nuclear Danger, there are cold feelings between the DOE and Board. She said that with the DOE's past record in dealing with other states, one reason to expect that Wisconsin will be treated fairly. The only alternative to the DOE's lack of cooperation is the right to be a part of the decision making process was finally recognized by the Board, Mrs. Jacobson said.

The Waste Board's Policy Committee, headed by Michael Shapley, will meet in Green Bay on October 29, at 10 a.m. at a place to be announced.

The DOE, continuing their policy of holding meetings in bad for the month, last meeting, is at 8 a.m. in this situation. DOE's plans are on a meeting place to be announced. Even though the most likely place for a radioactive dump site to be in central or northern Wisconsin where the granite bedrock is is ideal for DOE's plans, the hearings are to continue being held away from those most likely to be affected. This is a major reason for the bad feelings between the Rad Waste Review Board and the DOE.

DNR BOARD: "This was the first thought that came to mind, " said Sargent. "The alternatives seem to pose more problems than aldicarb."

In addition to the Board's decision, Sargent said, "We're going to have to ban aldicarb."

"There is no reason to leave much hope for those farmers. These choices do not leave much hope for those farmers. They don't want to have to clean up the ground. If, as Sargent says, 'We're going to have to ban aldicarb."

"Sargent did say that he had questions about using substitutes for aldicarb. Before the already stated foliar applications with aldicarb, Sargent said, I'm tremendously worried."

CARBOFURAN: Sargent said, "It will be seven flips in 10 parts-per-billion (ppb) while substitutes such as carbofuran have SNARLs of 1 ppb and 5 ppb, respectively. This may be a danger to Sargent, the higher toxicity of these two potential substitutes.

"Conflicting and Controversy" conference held today

Cooperative Educational Service of Stevens Point will present "Conflicting and Controversy," a conference dealing with social and education issues, today beginning at 9 a.m. in the University Center.

State Senator William Babitch will deliver the welcome address at nine preceding C. Allen, who will deliver the keynote address.

Among the topics to be discussed are: UWSP professor Lee Bures on censorship and civil liberties; former labor organizer Joann Ricca on the threat of the new right; Gary and June Slaats, editors of the Clark County Press, on media and public conflict; and Wisconsin Rapids Register editor Grandy Laatsch on attacks on public education.

There will be discussions concerning these topics in addition to a discussion concerning church and public morality, which will include the churches' role in family planning, sex education, social programs and assistance, defense spending, nuclear armament, etc.

A media fair will take place at 3 p.m. in which participants may view films dealing with major conference themes.

Title 9 of the Education Amendments of 1972, a federal law, was signed by Congress and signed by the president on June 23, 1972.

Jackson crosses all borders on new LP

Joe Jackson
Night and Day
Adlib Records

Reviewed By Karl J. Selney

Every time I turn on the radio, it's the same old thing. Somewhere along the line, someone came up with a formula and it seems that everyone has jumped on the bandwagon. Oh, sure, there are variations on a theme, but it is a rare thing to find something fresh and inventive.

Until Joe Jackson came along. Here's an artist who has crossed all the borders, yet never stayed in one place long enough to get caught in the rut that too many bands find themselves in. What the hell, it makes money, right? But let's face it, the music business doesn't take kindly to innovation. When something works, it makes money, and it's not easy to break off into something new. But let's face it, the music business doesn't take kindly to innovation. When something works, it makes money, right?

Somebody who has crossed all the borders, but on his new album he takes one of the most talked-about towns—New York City—and tells it like it is. All of the material on the album was written while Jackson was living in the Big Apple, and as anyone who has spent time there can attest to, the night life and the day life are two absolutely different situations. Jackson has truly captured the spirit of this city in this brilliantly produced album.

The Night Side is upbeat, lively, and speaks to the fast-paced night life in the "city that doesn't sleep." All the music segues together, giving the feeling of cruising from club to club, each one with new faces and atmosphere. The night life in New York is another world. It's stepping out into the blur of the faces of the night; the bag ladies, the bums, the down and out. For the visitor, this city is one of many moods. In three blocks, you can go from the lights and glitter of Broadway, to the seedy alleys of 42nd Street. It's a shabby existence without security. In "Target," he gives the ultimate example when he alludes to John Lennon's brutal murder: "I'm no one special, breaking up, 'Two,' is vaguely reminiscent of an old Badfinger hit (Baby Blue) and moves with solid keyboards and sensitive lyrics. The music on the Day Side is sensitive without being sappy, strong without being overbearing. In "Real Men" he sings of the identity crisis of a man with no role models and a world of "grey areas."

"What's a man now? What's a man mean Is he rough or is he rugged? Is he cultural and clean? Now it's all change—get to change more Cause we think it's getting better But nobody's really sure."

Turn on a radio in any big city and the music reflects the pace of life—FAST and HARD. It can either pick you up and take you along or it can drive you crazy. Sometimes it's just nice to hear something slow and easy. In "Slow Song," he echoes the sentiments of all the people who have turned on the radio only to be blasted out of their car or into the next room: "And I get tired of DJs Why's it always what he's always talking about? I'm gonna push on through Tell him to play us a slow song..."

So if you're tired of the same old "formula" music with mindless lyrics and lackluster riffs, then this album is well worth your listening time and money. It's creative, intelligent music with insightful lyrics and catchy tunes. As if you couldn't already tell, it's obvious: the difference between Joe Jackson and all the rest is like NIGHT and DAY.

Last Saturday afternoon before a Homecoming crowd, the UWSP football team committed numerous mistakes as they suffered their second loss of the season in league-leading LaCrosse by a score of 23-0.

With the loss, Point's record dropped to 1-1 in the WIAC (3-1 overall), while LaCrosse moved to 3-0 in the conference (6-0 overall). The Pointers committed five costly turnovers -- three on interceptions (one was returned for a touchdown), and two on fumbles. In all, La Crosse is now in a four way tie for first place with a 3-0 conference mark (4-1 overall).

The Pointers committed five costly turnovers -- three on interceptions (one was returned for a touchdown), and two on fumbles. In all, LaCrosse is now in a four way tie for first place with a 3-0 conference mark (4-1 overall).

The Pointers ended the day with 291 yards of total offense compared to the Indians' 233.

Also, the Pointer defense held the La Crosse rushing attack up to only 72 yards but offensively, Point could only manage 31 yards on the ground.

The Indians' first score was set up when Point halfback Rockey Spurlock fumbled after he caught a screen pass from quarterback Dave Geissler.

Pointers' Tim Lau comes up empty handed.

After their drive stalled at the Pointer 20, LaCrosse freshman kicker Tom Hermes booted a 37 yard field goal to put the Indians out in front for good at 3-0.

On Point's next possession, Mike Baur was forced to punt, but Indian defensive back Rik Parker fumbled and the ball was recovered by Carl Pitzak for the Pointers.

That gave Point good field position at midfield, but after driving all the way down to the La Crosse 20 yard line, Geissler's pass in the end zone on fourth down fell incomplete.

At the beginning of the second quarter, Point was moving the ball downfield, but on a third and 10 situation, Geissler threw an interception to Mark Gruven. Gruven then ran into the end zone for a touchdown and gave LaCrosse a 10-0 advantage at the 13:57 mark of the second quarter.

Both teams were forced to punt and Point got the ball back in good field position. Point drove all the way down to the three yard line, but did not get their field goal attempt away as the snap from center was fumbled.

Coach Leroy said, "It all goes back to what I said earlier. We made mistakes in key situations -- interceptions, turnovers, and sacks killed us."

On the next series for LaCrosse, with four minutes left until the half, Point senior strong safety Gary Van Vreede and Indian tailback Reggie Rabbs were both ejected from the game.

They deserved the personal foul calls but they shouldn't have been kicked out of a game of this importance," Leroy said. "No damage was done."

The Pointers had the first opportunity to score in the third quarter after another high snap from center spoiled the chance.

At the beginning of the fourth quarter, LaCrosse scored their final touchdown after quarterback Tony Klein climaxed a 56 yard drive with an eight yard touchdown pass to flanker Ken Kamagra.

The PAT by Hermes made 10-0 in favor of LaCrosse.

Dr. Marjorie Spring, an HPERA professor, has also seen positive change in the last 18 years she's been at UWSP. "The outstanding difference is the quality of the program. There are more opportunities for the women and better trained coaches. The players are better prepared coming from the high school level and therefore are more confident—they have more desire to participate."

Assistant athletic director Bonnie Gehling thinks the Women's Athletic Program (WAP) has played a big part.

"The WAF is a booster group for the program. We want to increase visibility in women's athletics and get more community involvement."

That the women are able to form an organization like WAF, funded through financial contributions and fund drives, is evidence of growth and change in the Women's Athletic Program here.

Another change is the UWSP Women's Athletic Program conference affiliation. Last year, the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW), the system under which the UWSP women's program was governed, was abolished and the women's program was placed under the NCAA. Hartman sees a positive side to the switch.

"Sure, there are more schools involved now but the advantage is that the NCAA will pay transportation expenses to a championship meet where the AIAW didn't. That could mean a difference of $10,000."

Money continues to be an important issue in women's athletics these days, as always. In the past, the athletic program has been criticized for its division of money allocated between men's and women's sports. This year the program will receive about $78,000, while the women will get about $37,500.

Hartman thinks the budget is fair. "Six years ago, the women were allocated only $9,000 for athletics," he said. "We budget according to need and the men's program needs more money to keep it going."

Gehling agrees. "In perspective, it is fair," she said. "Men's football and basketball fund all the sports offered. It's a question of revenue vs. non-revenue sports. You can't really say this isn't fair because that is what women's money—we're all in the athletics program together."

Gehling cited another reason the women are satisfied with the present program. "Three years ago, we were able to add softball and cross country to our women's program under the UW-Eau Claire at Carson Park in Eau Claire.

Chancellor Philip Marshall. Eight different sports is enough to give any woman an opportunity in athletics."

Other than financial support, do the women get enough other kinds of support—like fan support?

"I think the students are becoming more appreciative," Gehling said. "We're not a men's team. We're going to play our game the way. The game is slower but the women add grace—but don't let that fool you. We are just as skilled."

The future of the Women's Athletic Program looks bright to Gehling. "It'll be hard for our teams to top the outstanding performances of last year," she admitted. "But with the talent and dedication I've seen displayed so far this year, the higher goals are just added incentives to give that extra 10 percent."

How are you spell success? How about UWSP W-O-M-E-N-S A-T-H-L-E-T-I-C-S. During the 1981-82 school year, the women Pointers earned three WIAC championships, had nine athletes selected to first team all-conference and counted 13 All-American honorees.

The WIAC crowns were earned by the field hockey, volleyball and softball teams, while the cross country, swimming, and track and field teams also participated in the Division III national competition.

To what does athletic director Dr. Paul Hartman attribute the Women's Athletic Program's success? "I think the caliber of play has gone up immensely in the last few years," he stated. "Hiring good coaches and the addition of assistant coaches makes more time for better recruiting and that is also a factor," he said.

"I think the students are becoming more appreciative," Gehling said. "We're not a men's team. We're going to play our game the way. The game is slower but the women add grace—but don't let that fool you. We are just as skilled."

"But with the talent and dedication I've seen displayed so far this year, the higher goals are just added incentives to give that extra 10 percent."

Another change is the UWSP Women's Athletic Program conference affiliation. Last year, the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) had an impressive year. The program, which was governed, was abolished as a result of a national organization. This year, the women are governed under the much larger NCAA. Hartman thinks the budget is fair. "Six years ago, the women were allocated only $9,000 for athletics," he said. "We budget according to need and the men's program needs more money to keep it going."

Gehling agrees. "In perspective, it is fair," she said. "Men's football and basketball fund all the sports offered. It's a question of revenue vs. non-revenue sports. You can't really say this isn't fair because that is what women's money—we're all in the athletics program together.

Gehling cited another reason the women are satisfied with the present program. "Three years ago, we were able to add softball and cross country to our women's program under the NCAA."

The UWSP Women's Field Hockey team dominated in a 3-1 win over UW-Oshkosh Saturday, October 7, 1982. The Pointers outscored the Titans 33-3, and were in command from the start.

Despite controlling the game early on, it took the Pointers almost 20 minutes to get on the scoreboard. Sara Boehnlein finally broke the ice by scoring on a penalty cornet with just a little over 11 minutes left in the 19:07 mark. Less than a minute later, Putz Golla scored her second goal of the game. The Pointers' third goal of the half came at the 30:13 mark when Libby Klasky scored with an assist from Boehnlein.

The second half saw more of the same, with Boehnlein scoring on a pass from Julie Hartman, who started the team's performance. "We played well, fine all-around game," she said. "We moved the ball well, had good defense and had excellent passing. I was also very happy with the play of our substitutes. They all did a good job, preserving the shutout."

Coach Nancy Page was very pleased with the performance. "We played well, fine all-around game," she said. "We moved the ball well, had good defense and had excellent passing. I was also very happy with the play of our substitutes. They all did a good job, preserving the shutout."

Shawn Kreklow played outstanding games. Goalie Chris Smith overcame her loneliness and made 3 saves to earn the shutout. The win left the Pointers women with a 3-1 record and set the stage for a strong start to their season. "We played well, fine all-around game," she said. "We moved the ball well, had good defense and had excellent passing. I was also very happy with the play of our substitutes. They all did a good job, preserving the shutout."

Lady harriers take second at Oshkosh
SIDs — The UWSP women's cross country team captured second place in the UW-Oshkosh Invitational here Saturday, October 7, 1982.

Host UW-Oshkosh won the four team meet with 31 points followed by UW-Whitewater, 37 points, UW-Eau Claire, 45 points and UW-Stevens Point, 63 points.

The Pointers' performance was outstanding. "We had a solid team performance," said Coach Barb Sorenson. "Our team ran well, ran well together and ran well all the way to the finish. We are constantly improving as a team, and we are close to the top of the conference."

The Lady harriers were led by senior Joan Hardziak, who finished third. She was the individual winner in the Wisconsin Invitational, and also placed fourth in the Notre Dame Invitational.

Sorenson sailed into first place from the blistering pace, and was the individual winner in the Wisconsin Invitational. "This was not one of our best performances against La Verne, but we did a good job, preserving the shutout."

Coach Barb Sorenson ran a textbook race with the patience and skill of a veteran distance runner. She ran a very smart race after UW-Oshkosh's Joan Hardziak, who is a very experienced runner, set a blistering pace and then faded. Barb just ran her race and then took over and never showed that it is just her first year of cross country.

"We learned a valuable lesson or two in this meet and I think our youngsters all opened their eyes just a bit. The mark of a championship team is not in never falling, but in rising again after the fall."

Men harriers 4th at invitational
SID — The campus with the golden dome witnessed the best in UWSP men's cross country team here Friday as the Pointers finished third in the gold division of the Notre Dame Invitational.

Coach Rick Schoen added, "The talent is there but I just have not found out how to bring out the best in them yet as a team. When they get over dwelling on past mistakes they will be better. I just need more patience."

"We felt that Tim came up with one of his best performances so far this season. La Verne was UWSP's runner-up finisher as she finished eighth with a time of 20:19. Also finishing for Point were Mary Bender, 10th, 20:21; Cindy Gallagher, 11th, 20:24; and Sue Hildebrandt, 15th, 20:31.

"Our ability to run with the best in the conference is not over our heads and we were the highest finishers in the conference."

Lau, Paulus, honored gridders
SID — Tim Lau of Wausau and Rick Paulus of Grafton have been named the UWSP football players of the week for their efforts in the Pointers' 23-0 loss to UW-La Crosse Saturday, October 7, 1982.

The loss dropped the Pointers' records to 1-1 in the Wisconsin State University Conference and to 3-1 for the season. UWSP will attempt to get back to its winning ways Saturday, October 7, when it meets UW-Eau Claire at Eau Claire.

Lau, a 6-foot, 1-inch, 180 pound wide receiver who prepped at Wausau East High School, caught six passes for 118 yards against La Crosse. He also had a reception of 35 yards called back because of a penalty.

For the season, he has caught 27 passes for 315 yards and three touchdowns.

"We have felt that Rick has a great deal of character and he certainly showed it in this game. He has a great future ahead of him in college football."

"The Pointer coaching staff declined to select a special teams player of the week for the La Crosse game."

The individual winner in the meet was Mike Votta of Missouri with a time of 24:43.

Wyatt, Paulus expressed great pleasure with the performance of his team in the prestigious meet.

"Our ability to pack together was again our key and having Dan Schoeppke give us a big boost along he was always ready to run with the best of them. We went conservatively and they really sailed past people the last two miles."
Gallagher is harrier of the week

SID — Cindy Gallagher of Stevens Point has been selected as the UWSP women's cross country runner of the week for her performance in the Oshkosh Invitational last week.

Gallagher helped lead UWSP to a second place finish in the four team meet which was won by host UW-Oshkosh. The Titan women totaled 31 points to win the meet while UWSP followed with 45.

Gallagher, a sophomore at UWSP, transferred to Point from Moorhead State University this year. She finished 11th overall and was UWSP's fourth finisher in the meet with a time of 20:24.

Point coach Rand Strachan said that Gallagher started with the team late, but has become an important member.

"Cindy came out for the team late after not doing much running over the summer and has become one of the most 'valuable members of the team,'" Strachan said of Gallagher.

"She gave us a great effort on this course and displayed an incredible amount of courage in battling back after a fast start.

"Cindy's enthusiasm and desire along with her athletic ability definitely came just in time for us."

Gallagher is a mathematics major and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Gallagher.

The request must also be submitted to United Council within the first 30 days after the first day of classes in academic session. This information is on every student's fee print-out.

United Council is not an agency of UWS or the UW system administration. It is an independent lobby group that protects the rights and special interests of students in public higher education. In this era of special interest politics, it is crucial that students have a voice in the state capitol and the political arena, and it deserves the support of UWSP students.

Care shared for SPARE

To Pointer Magazine,

As a Stevens Point citizen I find that I am very interested with the issues which affect our city. I'm concerned the issues whether they affect us adversely or favorably. I view the Stevens Point Advocates for Renter Efficiency (S.P.A.R.E.), and its efforts to achieve energy efficiency standards for rental units, as an issue that affects Stevens Point in a very favorable manner.

S.P.A.R.E. focuses its concern on the energy inefficiency of much of Stevens Point's housing stock. Much of this housing (41 percent) is rented. This, combined with the local, state, and national concerns on the issues of energy usage and conservation makes S.P.A.R.E.'s efforts a much more urgent nature.

The high annual heating costs place a strain on renters, especially those on a fixed income (i.e. elderly, students, and single parent families). Yet, these are not the only ones being affected — our city as a whole is being drained of its monetary resources.

Therefore, I feel this situation is one which requires some immediate action. And, I view S.P.A.R.E.'s efforts on this issue as being in our community's best interest.

Sincerely Yours,
Tammy Blau

To The Pointer:

I am writing to express my support for the United Council of Wisconsin Student Governments and to urge all

UWSP students to vote "Yes" on the upcoming referendum Oct. 13 and 14.

As a U.C. delegate from Milwaukee for three years, I have seen the organization go through its ups and downs. There is no doubt that internal strife did in some ways hamper the effectiveness of United Council in the past. However, I see a strong turn toward the positive with the advent of this year's United Council staff. I am most impressed with the high level of professionalism as exhibited by the members of the staff as well as the expertise and experienced backgrounds that they bring to the organization.

In the contact that I have had with the U.C. staff in the past months, I have found them to be extremely helpful to me in my work as a student government official at UW-Milwaukee.

The importance of a strong, united voice for students in Wisconsin cannot be underestimated, especially in these days of repeated attacks on higher education and student financial aid. I urge you to vote "Yes" on the upcoming United Council referendum.

Kris Gerke
Vice President of the Student Association

You will not be able to leave your refrigerator plugged in you'll be able to order as many dishes as you want and keep them fresh. Did you turn off your dryer yet or are your clothes wet because you have to wait until the car is in the shower to keep warm? Love always. ...The Main Attraction (283).

Personals: A big warm thanks to all our friends who gave us so much support and encouragement throughout Homecoming week. Todd & Debbie. P.S. Another thanks to the people who made it hard to sleep Saturday night. K.P.

Personals: To whoever took the "CB" Ski Pull over on the Science Building last Wednesday (Sept. 29) between 2:00 and 3:00. Thanks for holding on to it, but could you please return it now? Call 346-3844 or leave it at lost & found. Thanks much.

Personals: Dearest and bestest sophomore friends of 3-W. Smiling, (K.T. & R.B., of course) Just wanted to thank you for your overwhelming kindness and generosity this past weekend during my time of need. I'm so glad I met you. I'm so happy to see you. Thank you for being there. Friends always. The invalid. P.S. What do you do with your first $500? We share the second one on! I guess the respect & concern for others is crucial when you're the other.

Personals: Connie Lee, thank you for being there. I'm happy belated birthday. Why don't you celebrate by scarifying? Your off-campus buddy.

Personals: Dear ugly, I'm glad you're here. Let's hang out this weekend one to really remember. Judges.

As for me, I'll continue to rant, rave and scream at my fellow students. Underalls ad: A little Underall package floats around America, to the tune of Yankee Doodle, "Underall... Underall... Underall... "Help keep American beautiful," says a voice from RTG, "Underall... Underall... Underall..."

If I decide to wear Underalls, believe me, I won't take—note for the U.S. of A.'s.
