SEASON’S GREETINGS
US to blame for stalemate

With the 1984 presidential campaign just around the corner, a lot of emphasis has been placed on nuclear weapons—and rightfully so. In light of recent events, the issue is not likely to disappear.

The Soviet Union has bolted from the Intermediate Nuclear Force (INF) negotiations in Geneva because the United States and its NATO allies refuse to reconsider deployment of 572 new missiles in Western Europe. President Reagan says these missiles are necessary to address a serious imbalance of nuclear forces in Europe that favors the Soviet Union.

Nonsense. What a lot of Americans don't realize is that NATO has over 600 warheads on U.S. submarines specifically committed to European defense. Additionally, the U.S. maintains a bomber force and the French and British have 66 and 64 missiles aimed at the Soviet Union, respectively. Add to this about 75 Chinese intermediate missiles aimed at the Soviet intermediate missiles. These forces are comparable in number to the 900 Soviet medium-range missiles. Thus, both superpowers have achieved rough parity in terms of their intermediate-range forces. Moreover, the Soviet medium-range missiles cannot reach the U.S. but our INF force can strike deep inside the Soviet Union.

Therefore, the Reagan administration's professed goal, the reduction of intermediate forces, is a facade. The president's true aim is to achieve superiority, which is a dangerous policy that will only lead to an escalation in the arms race. Reagan has proposed

Something to think about

Today, UWSP students have an opportunity to fill 15 seats on the Student Senate. This is a good time to comment on a glaring error of judgment on the part of the Senate.

Last month the Committee on Latin America (COLA) asked the Senate for $400 so it could attend a national demonstration questioning Reagan administration policies in Central America. Unfortunately, a narrow majority of senators voted not to grant COLA's request.

Senators voting with the majority claimed that COLA did not represent the entire university and therefore it would be improper to provide student money for the trip. This argument is lacking on several counts. First, it demonstrates that a majority of senators are ignorant of constitutional intent. The United States Constitution encourages individuals and groups such as COLA to exercise their right of free speech.

Why didn't our Student Senate? Secondly, COLA is a student organization and being such they are entitled to execute the functions of their organization, as recognized by the UWSP student government. Finally, there is no student organization on campus, including the Student Government Association, that can claim it represents the school as a whole. Moreover, this has never been a legitimate reason for denial of funds for trips before. Why should it be now?

Another argument raised was the contention that demonstrations were "unworthy." Perhaps the senator who brought this up has never heard of freedom of assembly. So students, when you cast that vote today, know the individual you're supporting. Does he or she pledge to uphold your rights as a student and as an American citizen? If not, you can do without that kind of "leadership."

And so this is Christmas, and what have you done?

Another year over, and a new one just begun.

What’s happening

Merry Christmas

U.S. Marines

The College Republicans organization at UWSP has placed holiday greeting cards at local businesses to be sent to U.S. Marines stationed in Lebanon.

The public is invited to sign community cards which have been placed in red folders at the entrances of Stevens Point’s East Side IGA, Shoepke, One Stop Shop, and the UWSP Learning Resources Center.

The cards will be mailed following a news conference at noon on Dec. 12, in the Communications Room of the University Center. Meeting with area reporters on behalf of the College Republicans will be UWSP Chairman Diane Beigelhard and Student Body Vice-chairman Scott Hall.

A care package containing various gifts will also be mailed to the UWSP club’s adopted marine.

Hypnosis demo

Gil Eagles, psychic and hypnotist, will perform a demonstration of his talents in a program Friday, Dec. 9, at UWSP.

His show, sponsored by the University Activities Board, will be held in the University Center Encore Room. The price of admission is $1 at the door.

According to his publicist, Eagles is an “entertaining psychic and the world’s fastest hypnotist.”

In concert

The Concert Choir and the Oratorio Chorus will present a duo Christmas Concert at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Dec. 13, at UWSP.

The performance in Michie Hall, Fine Arts Center, is open to the public without charge.

The Concert Choir, under the direction of Charles Reichl, will sing Charles T. Fancher’s Magnificat and Gabriell’s Hodie Christus Natus Est (Today Christ Is Born).

The Oratorio Chorus, conducted by Brian Gernick, will sing Ralph Vaughan Williams’ Fantasia on Christmas Carols, featuring tenor soloist Steven Smokt of 605 14th St., Mosinee. The ensemble also will perform Handel’s Te Deum, which combines chorus and soloists with guest pianist Martha Thomas of the UWSP music department.

Familiar computers

A new course dealing with the effects of computers on family relations, community and social institutions will be offered in seven weekly sessions, beginning Jan. 26, at UWSP.

It can be taken with or without one academic credit as offering number 480/080.

Forensics-debate spirit high

by Don Everts

The members of the forensics-debate team would like to let the university know of our fine organization. We have been representing this fine college on a statewide level throughout this school year. It is time that the team gets a little of the recognition that they have worked so hard for.

This year has been one of growing and learning for our team. We are made up almost entirely of freshmen, making our organization a very young and exciting group. For what we lack in experience, we make up in spirit. If ever there has been an organization that has fought, worked, hoped and dreamed together, it is ours.

We have not been sitting around all year, but have shown that our organization is one to be proud of. So far this year we have done a variety of activities to promote our team, as well as our university. We started the year off by having a flower sale. Next we presented a program in the Encore to let the students and staff know what we were all about. Also, we have been representing UWSP on a statewide level at the tournaments.

After the UW Board of Regents announced that a limited number of Cabbage Patch dolls would be available for UWSP students, Chancellor Marshall held an auction to distribute the dolls. Bids skyrocketed, and riots broke out, forcing Protective Services to call in reinforcements from the National Guard. (RB)

LaFollette shares foreign experiences

by Laura Sternowski

Wisconsin Secretary of State Douglas LaFollette said he wasn't an expert on Central America or foreign policy, but that he could "view it as a camera lens" for his audience. LaFollette, who recently toured Nicaragua and Honduras with a group of state and local officials, reported his feelings about his tour last Thursday night during an address in the UC Garland Room.

"Americans aren't good in history," he said. "Here we are, eight to 10 U.S. officials with big egos, and we go down there and the same thing happens. But that same policy, but that he could"

At that time the Sandinistas (who took the name from the Nicaraguan folk hero) overthrew the Somoza government. This was to get a first look at what the Nicaragua people were able to rule themselves. Because of this historical perspective, they are against Yankee Imperialism," LaFollette added.

The Nicaraguan people make a distinction between Yankee Imperialists and North Americans. "They have a very warm, positive feeling toward the U.S. people," he said, but they don't want "Green Berets, Reagan, and the CIA" in their country. LaFollette said he doesn't agree with the way the Sandinistas are governing Nicaragua, but he respects their right to run their country in their own way. Currently, the Sandinistas are censoring newspapers, jailing people without charge, maintaining a one-party system, not holding elections, and not giving the process to landowners.

"I don't agree with the Nicaraguan government, but I wouldn't send in the Marine Corps," he said.

On the positive side, the Sandinistas have tried to get aid to the peasants. LaFollette said their first goal was to get in "few basic things to the people who've had nothing." In the last four years, the Sandinistas have built health clinics, paved main streets, and installed running water and electricity in people's homes. The situation isn't perfect, but progress has been made, he remarked.

The vast majority of peasants feel the improvements the Sandinista government has brought and support it, he continued. "They're getting help for the first time, and feel great enthusiasm for their country." He said the critics of the Sandinista government—the newspapers and business people—want to change the government, not overthrow it.

"We as a nation do not know how to relate to other countries," LaFollette said. "We're there (in Nicaragua) because of a lack of historical perspective, and a poor perspective of what a peasant revolution is. We invade with bombs instead of tractors. It's our mistake."

He felt that by keeping military forces in Nicaragua the U.S. isn't helping the people in a humane sense and is destabilizing the area.

Prospects for arms control appear bleak

With the recent breakdown of the Intermediate Nuclear Force talks in Geneva, the prospects for nuclear arms control have reached the lowest point since the 1960s. Two years ago, the Reagan administration announced a longstanding set of negotiations aimed at a comprehensive (complete) ban on nuclear testing, although an agreement seemed within reach. Currently, the only negotiations on nuclear arms are START talks concerning long-range weapons, but these have been stalled for over a year and no progress is in sight. The whole process of arms control, painstakingly pursued by all administrations since the early 1960s, has collapsed in the near future. If it does, the world will be an even more dangerous place to live.

Neither side is entirely at blame for the impasse on the Intermediate Nuclear Force issue. The program was initiated in the 1970s, when the Soviet Union began to replace its existing long-range intermediate-range missiles with a more modern type, the SS-20. This was not a friendly move. Each of the 300-odd SS-20s now operational carries three highly accurate warheads capable of destroying targets, civilian and military, throughout Western Europe. Such threats already had enormous numbers of nuclear weapons in Europe, however, not to mention their massive central arsenal of strategic nuclear weapons. Russia that gained only a marginal military advantage from the SS-20.

Nevertheless, the United States and other NATO governments saw the Soviet move as an attempt to intimidate Western Europe and divide the NATO alliance. They responded with a program of placing 72 new U.S. missiles in Europe: 400 cruise missiles, slow flying but even more accurate than the SS-20’s; 16 Pershing II’s, accurate and capable of hitting targets deep inside Russia in only six to eight minutes of firing. The arrival of the first of these missiles in November sparked the Soviet walkout.

In the opinion of many Americans, including the Reagan administration, Russia’s stubbornness led to the collapse of the Intermediate Nuclear Force talks, especially its demand that no new U.S. missiles be deployed in Europe. Even from the Soviet perspective, however, things appear differently. They face a crisis not only from U.S. but also from other nuclear rivals: Britain, France and China. The U.S. has absolutely refused to discuss the small but potent British and French arsenals, although they are clearly aimed against the Soviet Union. On the other hand, the administration has insisted that Russia’s total SS-20 force be reduced as part of a settlement, including those deployed against China.

Moreover, the U.S. has resisted broadening the talks to include American “Forward Based Systems” fighter-bombers in Europe and absurd carries capable of delivering nuclear weapons against Russia—which the Americans have long claimed are equivalent to their SS-20’s. The Soviets are painfully aware that America’s intermediate-range missiles can wreck devastation deep inside Russia while their similar weapons cannot reach the American homeland. In 1985, the U.S. went to the brink of nuclear war to prevent the deployment of intermediate missiles in Cuba. To the Russians, the arrival of the cruise and Pershing missiles will create a Cuban Missile Crisis in reverse.

What should be done? The U.S. should not abandon efforts to reduce intermediate-range nuclear missiles, but the Administration has put significant military purpose and merely aggravates an already volatile situation. The massive anti-nuclear protests now sweeping Western Europe are a sign that our allies recognize the danger more clearly than we do. To get the negotiations back on track, the administration must offer to suspend all new missile deployments for a year or more if the Soviet Union halts its own deployments. Moreover, the Pershing II program should be put on hold until, as it is by far the most threatening weapon from the Soviet perspective. Once talks resume, the U.S. should tender the agenda to cover all nuclear weapons in the European region, including those of France and Britain, short-range tactical weapons, and nuclear capable aircraft of both sides. The basic goal should be a “denuclearization” of Europe. Ending the new start may require greater reliance on more expensive conventional forces for the defense of NATO.

Area response poor to new dairy package

by Stephen J. Brzinski

On November 29, President Reagan reluctantly signed into law the newest dairy relief package. The law is an attempt to reduce the exorbitant costs claimed by taxpayers purchasing dairy products via the U.S. Government.

The signing of the bill, offspring of a Wisconsin idea, closed a three year struggle by dairymen to reach a consensus on how to solve their problem of over-production. Many thought the main problem of dairy excess was the inability of milk producers to agree on a plan.

The programs enacted by this new dairy law became effective almost immediately. On December 1, action already began. The current one dollar assessment on milk. Instead, 30 days of this assessment was stayed to partially fund incentives for farmers who choose to reduce milk production. Also, the current price support of $13.10 was reduced to $12.60 per hundredweight (about 12.5 cents a gallon) to bring it in line with the artificially high price support with market demands.

On January 1, dairy farmers across Wisconsin and the nation will become eligible to contract the amount they intend to reduce in their production. The dairymen will have until February 1 to decide the number of animals that they will send to slaughter. Reduction is limited to 1 to 30 percent of the ’82 fiscal year or of the 1983 production year.

Compliance with the United States Dept. of Agriculture contract and the accurate record keeping of farmers will allow dairy farmers to collect 10 cents per hundredweight for the amount they don’t produce. This $10 payment may seem a blessing, however many area farmers feel the $10 is not worth the paper work nor loss of herd. Especially bothersome is the reduced cash flow, which is already economically abnormal for dairy farmers with large debts.

“We don’t intend to cut back, we may even increase a bit,” noted Gerald Zercher, president of Portage County Farmers’ Union Milk Marketing Cooperative in Stevens Point Daily Journal article. The Junction City resident said, “That’s the wrong idea, but with a debt load, you have to stay ahead.”

Charles Sopka, Amherst, also told Stevens Point Journal that he is not going to reduce production. “If you cut back, it takes about three years to get back. Besides I need the money.”

Despite the large negative reaction of area farmers towards the law, many dairy men feel that the law will help reduce the surplus if large, well established and debt free dairies comply with the opportunity.

Robert Crop, dairy specialist at UW-Platteville, told the Milwaukee Journal that the farmer behavior will determine if such short term programs such as this dairy measure and the PKP program will be effective for future building farm surpluses. As experts already estimated that 1984 will be a record crop year for grain because of the high prices for this past year, the PKP program and last summer’s drought. Response to this dairy diversion law is expected to follow the same pattern.

For 1984, a predictable result: too much corn and grain for too few dairy cows. Wisconsin’s dairy herd of 11 million is expected to be reduced by one million. Other dairy producing states can expect proportional decreases.

Unlike the PKP program, the dairy law has provisions for extending beyond its 15 month projected life. If farmers fail to cut the national surplus to less than a projected 6 billion pounds of milk by April 1, then the Secretary of Agriculture can reduce price supports by 50 cents a hundredweight. This would be followed by another 50 cents price cut if, on July 1, the projected surplus was still above 5 billion pounds. At this point, the milk surplus stands at 15 billion pounds. This divertor plan would have to reduce the surplus by two-thirds in 15 months to be considered effective.
US may expand role: Lewis

As UWSP's foremost Middle East expert, history professor Neil Lewis has been following the recent events in Lebanon. He has stated his opposition to the presence of United States Marines in Lebanon. Moreover, in the following interview with PM News Editor Joseph Vanden Plas, he criticizes the Reagan Administration for giving in to what he believes is Israeli expansionism. He also contends that Reagan's policies have hardened the Israeli peace movement and its ability to be a moderating influence on the government.

Lewis: background on the Middle East is extensive. He studied the region at Portland State University and at the prestigious Middle East Center and at the prestigious American University in Cairo, Egypt. He received his Master's degree in Middle Eastern studies from Harvard University and a Ph.D. from the Middle East Center at the University of Michigan. In recent years, he has taught a course dealing with the Arab-Israeli conflict.

PM: What are the chances of the US expanding its role in Lebanon after this weekend's violence?

Lewis: I think that the chances of escalation are very great because it is practically impossible to think that Reagan will admit that he's been wrong in it is a mistake. Therefore to cover up past mistakes he's going to make it much worse by going in there probably with greater force.

PM: What would be the consequences of that in your opinion?

Lewis: It's hard to estimate what would be the consequences but I can tell you the chances of more Americans dying are much greater now than they were even a week ago and I can't see anything realistic that they'll accomplish.

PM: Do you think there is any role the Marines could play in Lebanon that would be sensible?

Lewis: No. They should be left out entirely because clearly we are now identified as the allies of Israel and we are no longer any kind of legitimate peacekeeping force—obviously, we're not keeping the peace in the first place—but we're sided with the Lebanese Maronites, who are a small minority in the country. They are, in fact, one of the smaller minorities. They have perhaps 23 percent of the population now and yet the United States government would like to ask the government entirely to their advantages. Other than that, we seem to be saying exactly what the Israelis want, ignoring the fact that it was the Israelis and their invasion that pulled us into Lebanon in the first place.

PM: What are the chances of anything constructive coming out of the peace talks between the Lebanon factions?

Lewis: There's a possibility but it's so much of an outside possibility that it's almost non-existent.

PM: I assume it would have to be a long-term process.

Lewis: Yes. It's the kind of situation that there are so many different factions and as long as any of them feel that they would benefit by disrupting the situation further, then they're probably going to do it.

PM: Can Yasser Arafat survive as a moderate spokesman for the Palestinian cause?

Lewis: He's been a survivor, probably not as great a survivor as Hussein (King of Jordan) but he has survived long enough to clearly benefit by disrupting the situation further, then they're probably going to do it.

Be more aware of state gov't: Helbach

by Wong Park Fook

Students should get more involved in state politics, State Senator Dave Helbach said in an open forum last week at UWSP. He said that students should pay more attention to the state government because much of the legislation will affect them.

"Most people do not feel that the state government affects them at all," he lamented. In fact the state government affects students very much, Helbach said. For one thing, the budget for the University of Wisconsin System comes from the state.

Wisconsin has a budget of about $16 billion, of which about $8 billion is derived from taxes. Helbach said that about 75 percent of the state tax dollars is sent back to the local governments in the state through such bodies as the school boards and the city councils. The remaining 25 percent is retained for running state operations. Of this 25 percent, 50 percent is allocated to the University of Wisconsin System. "That is why whatever the state does, raising taxes or lowering taxes, will directly affect the budget for the University of Wisconsin System," Helbach said.

Over the years the University of Wisconsin System has been given substantial increases, about $50 million to its budget, according to Helbach. However, the Board of Regents was not given full discretion on how to spend the money. "If the future, the Board of Regents will be given more discretion as to how the money can be spent...whether to raise faculty pay or increase programs," he said.

On the faculty pay question, Helbach advised students to be more aware of the issues involved. He said students will be affected in two ways. "If faculty members are not compensated for what they are worth, we might not be able to keep them in the University of Wisconsin campuses. These students will be directly affected because the quality of instruction may change," he explained.

On the other hand, any proposal to take care of the faculty pay increases will affect students directly, he said. Under normal circumstances, the student will have to bear about 27 percent of any increases to the faculty pay. At present, students pay about 27.2 percent of the instructional costs. "The proposal for faculty pay increases will affect students directly, he said.

"If state legislators adopt the proposal, students may have to bear the extra costs of about $100 a semester. In fact, according to Helbach, any long-range solution to the faculty pay problem will mean extra costs to students.

Helbach said that students have a stake on what will happen over the next six or nine months at the faculty pay question is being resolved.

"That is Wisconsin campuses. Then again, students pay about 27.2 percent of the instructional costs. "The proposal for faculty pay increases will affect students directly, he said.

What will you get for Christmas boys and girls?

by Chris Mara

I suppose you are wondering what you are going to get from Santa Claus this year. In an effort to relieve some of the agony of anticipation, I found out what kind of orders he has put in at some of the Stevens Point area merchants. (No, elves don't make the toys anymore. They are only in charge of bookkeeping now.)

Of course, as everyone knows, everyone in the world would love a Cabbage Patch doll if there were enough to go around. If you searched pressed but unable to find one, I would be glad to type up adoption papers for a Barbie doll for a mere $75.00. But for the unfortunate few who will not be able to secure a Cabbage Patch doll, Santa has placed large orders for the women.

When you made out your Christmas list, was Baby toys. Barbie doll for a mere cost Army store. Remember, buying clothes is risky business.

Like myself, Christmas shopping may not be your favorite sport. Being as lazy as I am, running back and forth across town can be very tiresome, so this year I am going to do all of my shopping by the TV. In the comfort of my own home, with a can of beer in my hand and a bowl of popcorn on my lap, I can buy just about anything America has to offer, besides medium-range nuclear missiles.

I am sure there are a lot of mothers out there just dying to get their hands on a Ronco food processor that dicees, bacon and blender to do anything you put in it, including fingers.

Then there is the package deal where you can buy candleholders, gloves, a billiard, hydraulic jack, a 35mm camera and much more for just $19.95. You can kill a lot of birds with one stone with that deal.

Gift knives are a big item this year, like before. Anyone can make use of them.

Infant home shows Christmas love all year round

by Kelly Moran

The Seven Sorrows of Our Sorrows Mother Infant Home offers one glimpse of what Christmas is all about. A daily commitment to serving and loving others is the philosophy around which the infant home revolves.

The infant home provides assistance to unwed mothers, both young and old, and offers an alternative to abortion. For some, a place of support. This infant home in Necedah is licensed by Wisconsin as a social service agency. Thus, professional guidance is provided for the women.

Volunteer work plays a major role in the infant home's operation. Sr. Mary Margaret, an overseer of the infant home, enunciated the structure of the home, "We're simply a community of women devoting our lives to the aid of the children brought to us."

The home provides unwed mothers with a place to stay, which is usually a volunteer furnished with a little extra room and a lot of love and support. The staff maintains a high level of confidentiality with their pregnancy and those volunteering to help provide that.

by Kim Jacobson

Charles Dickens characterized Christmas as, "a time of goodwill and good works; a family festival, a gathering and a welling up of spirits that overcomes the whole world." But, how many people do you know who don't sense the spiritual euphoria of Christmas, or suffer from a foreboding sense of depression when Christmas approaches? It isn't uncommon. In fact, it can usually be found in your own family.

The kind of person who suffers from the "holiday blues" is generally very lonely. According to James Gehard, a psychotherapist at the Riverdale Marriage and Family Clinic, the most likely candidate for holiday blues is, "A person who doesn't have anyone to be with. For example, a transient Christmas is usually bad by people who have recently divorced, widowed or lost a loved one." Gehard said there isn't a specific formula found to be prevalent in a holiday blues sufferer. "It's different for different people." He noted that some people you had a sense of it already.

Gehard said many college students feel blue for the holidays; first, due to exams, secondly, because the thought of going home can be unpleasant to some. When students think of the Christmas season, there is one week that falls before it which can take some fun out of the holidays. You know it, but it's nearly upon us: it's exam week. Students become disturbed when they think of all the things they'd like to do for Christmas but can't because they're busy handwriting in final projects, giving presentations and writing term papers. Exam grades are in for one and all.

Going home to Ma and Dad is an experience.
Atom and Eve: portrait of a nuclear fall-out

by Tim Kartwell

And God recreated the world. Eve, who took Him the full week—the first day was spent clearing away nuclear residues. Not having gotten a day of rest, He was smaller than usual with the young couple.

"OK, listen up. Your name is Atom. You're Eve. This is the Garden of Sweden. I named it that because blondes were reputed to have more fun, and I want you to have fun." "Great," said Atom, smiling, looking around for some good bushes.

"Not nodding excitingly."

"But hey," God interrupted, "there's just one thing. The first renters couldn't handle a simple rule like 'No eating apples from the Tree of Knowledge.' Well, I've softened in my old age. You can eat from the Tree, you can stuff your faces until you puke colder if you want but don't, and I repeat—do not—eat from the Branch of Nuclear Physics. You understand that, do you see it?"

"Alright, and Eve turned, holding hands, and gazed upon the apple tree rising above all the other fruit trees in the garden. It was lush with foliage and laden with apples. A single branch distinguished itself from the rest. Eve, who was enveloped in a crimson sheet, a warm red glow, was waiting in the apple tree. Standing over him, she said, "Eve, why do you see it?"

"Hey, Eve, you're off skating with another young couple in the Alps."

"The Alps? No, that's impossible. We're the only...

"No, no, you're not. broke in the glowworm. This is just his summer place—so about it."

Eve stood up angrily. "You're so narrow, Atom."

"Where are you going, to your mother's?" he laughed.

"Jack.

"Nobody understands me."

"Oh sure they do," soothed Eve, who had done some munching in the area of counseling. "Applesauce, snapped the worm. "You don't know anything about my nature, not a nibble."

"I'm sorry, but I can't. God forbids it."

"He does know—he's off skating with another young couple in the Alps."

"The Alps? No, that's impossible. We're the only...

"No, no, you're not. broke in the glowworm. This is just his summer place—so about it."

"But God said it was a nuclear power that destroyed the first world, I wouldn't want to be responsible for..."

"Really?"

"Hey, Eve, you're off skating with another young couple in the Alps."

"The Alps? No, that's impossible. We're the only...

"No, no, you're not. broke in the glowworm. This is just his summer place—so about it."

"Really, I was just eating an apple."

"Really. Well, you know that eating in the dark can be dangerous.

"I hadn't learned that yet.

"Sure, I just came to shed a little light."

"Yes, I guess this is much more... What a... Tell me, do you sunlight?

"No, we do."

"Eating your firelight?"

"The glowworm only smiled, shaking his little hands over the sun."

"Gaslight? Electric light? Kerosene lantern?"

"To which the glowworm replied respectively. 'Nope.'

"Really?"

"Hey, Eve, you're off skating with another young couple in the Alps."

"The Alps? No, that's impossible. We're the only...

"No, no, you're not. broke in the glowworm. This is just his summer place—so about it."

"I couldn't have put it better myself," said Atom hunching over, and he sat the whole people. When he had finished, Eve faced him, dressing his arms over his shoulders. "Eve, dear, that pie—it's glowing."

"That's only the sunlight, reflecting off the cinnamon and sugar glazing," replied Eve.

"No, it's some kind... it had a little cigarette butt in the woods."

"Really," said Atom.

"Really."

"Eve, even so, Eve still probably wouldn't have eaten the nuclear apple. But just then she burped, and her mouth filled with the aftertaste of an apple she had eaten that morning—'Great Revolutions in History.'"

"He keeps a garden here, a saucer on the Alps, and the devil only knows how many other little colonies He's got up his sleeve," she ranted. "It's Imperialism and what it is."

"Really."

"Hey, Eve, you're off skating with another young couple in the Alps."

Twas two weeks before Christmas, and all through the malls Parents were willing to die, for Cabbage Patch dolls;
The store shelves were stocked with toys by the score, in hopes that people would spend themselves poor;
The Santas went unison and asked for a raise, while holding picket signs in Christmas displays;
The owners cried with anger, but Santas bugged not, "il scab Santas were sent in to break up the plot,
On TV I noticed K-Tel ads were swarming, "This electric snow shovel shows that you’re caring!"

A note from the Ed-in-chief

With this, the final issue of the first semester, our staff bids a fond farewell to News Editor Joseph Vandenhoff, Sports Editor Bill Last and Advertising Manager Peter Waldmann.

Joe came to the Pointer Magazine as an enthusiastic freshman and remained a dedicated staff member, serving in various capacities, throughout his collegiate years. His dedication and hard work were nothing short of tremendous assets to both himself and the Pointer Mag. In addition, his strong belief in a potentially peaceful world, although not always understood or appreciated by others, demonstrated a compassion for the plight of mankind seldom voiced by less courageous men.

Bill Last devoted 1½ years to the Pointer, first as Copy Editor and this fall as our Sports Editor. A gifted writer with a talent for conveying the action inherent in the world of sports, Bill spent long hours making sure his job was done right.

Peter Waldmann leaves the Pointer after one year in its advertising department. Under his leadership this fall, our advertising volume and revenue have never been better. As a sales manager and he was a true pro.

Joe, Bill and Peter were of tremendous help to me during my first semester as Editor, and their valuable input will be sorely missed. Their wit always surfaced when it was needed most. To all three, we offer a message of deep thanks. We’ll miss ya.

Compasion, anyone?

To Pointer Magazine, I would like to respond to an answer made in last week's Pointer poll regarding the reduction of world hunger. The reply in question was given by Mr. Brian Rasmussen. Mr. Rasmussen commented, "I would say just air drop massive quantities of food and let them scramble for it."

While I realize the Pointer poll is informal and not official on any terms, I just cannot understand how a student at UWSP (much less a junior) can reply in such an insensitive, callous and arrogant manner.

If Mr. Rasmussen thinks he is making a joke, any of the millions of malnourished, starving people in the world could slap him back to reality that world hunger is no joke, and his response displays total ignorance to a serious, growing dilemma confronting the world today.

The values and ideas of ethnocentric people like Mr. Rasmussen must be questioned. In spite of this one inhumane and unenlightened attitude, many other students at UWSP and in the community must be apprised for their efforts in the Hunger Coalition, Operation Bootstrap, and the general education and awareness they raised on World Hunger Day. It’s just sad their efforts and many others have gone unnoticed by some narrow-minded people like Mr. Rasmussen on this campus.

Thanks to all!!

To Pointer Magazine,
We would like to express our appreciation to the many people who worked so hard to make "Hunger Awareness Day" such a success on the UWSP campus. Without the contributions of a great number of willing people, we could not have drawn attention to the pressing issue of world hunger.

Benefit a success

To Pointer Magazine,
Thursday night the Environmental Network, SANE, and the Environmental Council sponsored a benefit concert for Project ELF. My husband and I went to support a good cause, see some good bands, and especially to hear our favorite local music group, Wisconsin River Bluegrass. The other bands, Nobody’s Business and Volunteers of America (with Mad Dog and the Pointers) were fine, and we hadn’t seen much good dancing since Mole Lake.

Unfortunately, despite publicity, the benefit was not well attended.

If you've gone to college on a National Direct Student Loan or a Guaranteed Student Loan or a Federally Insured Student Loan made after October 1, 1975, here's a great way to pay them off.

Get the Army to help you do it. Instead of taking a long, long time paying back that student loan, you spend a short time in the Army, learning a skill, and possibly even accumulating additional money for college (like a graduate degree) via Army College Fund.

If you qualify, each year you serve reduces your indebtedness by one-third, or $1,500, whichever amount is greater. A 3-year enlistment eliminates your debt. It's worth looking into.

- Pointer hoopsters stomp two more

by Bill Laste

As Tuesday's opener against La Crosse drew near, Pointer basketball fans once again expected that the home team would get their first real test.

Once again, however, the opponents flanked. The Pointers walked the Indians that.

But if La Crosse flanked the last, the UW-Milwaukee Panthers didn't even come to school. This game gave new definition to the term "mismatch," Dave Schuld dropped in an 18-footer from the baseline to open the game's scoring and the Panthers never got any closer. Pointer fans then watched a steady blowout of another opponent—a scene that is getting pretty familiar.

The Pointers roared to a 43-20 halftime advantage behind 12 points from Tim Lazarick and eight from Terry Porter.

Coach Dick Bennett's bench took the floor for the majority of the second half and met even greater success. The squad's pressure defense stretched the Pointer offense and held them without a second half field goal until the last 12 seconds of the game.

The Pointers were led by Lazarick's 19 points and nine rebounds and freshman Tim Nengel's seven assists.

The Panthers faced two major problems. One was that the NCAA suspension forced three of their frontline players to watch the game from the bench. The second problem was a result of the first in that the Pointers' defense was never really threatened to form over 6-3. Thus, the Pointers were easy winners.

Turnovers were also a major factor in the game as the Pointers forced 21 Panther errors while committing only five themselves.

UWM, whose new uniforms had yet to arrive, played the game in uniforms borrowed from the Wisconsin Badgers.

Bennett emphasized the benefits of playing as a blowout like the UWM game.

"You give the people in situations that they don't ordinarily get into and get them some valuable game experience. It's also nice to use your freshmen and get some of the time for your second unit."

"We try to run your offense and defense without regard to the score. We think it's really important, whether you're ahead or behind or even, to play as well as we can. In this instance, you can do that without a great deal of pressure on you. So we try to work on execution.

"And you get a chance to rest your first unit. I think when you play your starters too much in a blowout and let them really roll it up you give your starters a false sense of security so we just do not do that if it's at all possible."

The Pointers face UWM again in February and Bennett expects a closer contest.

"They'll be much better and the new coach will have his system in. Plus they'll want to prove to all the teams that beat them so badly that they are a much better team so I'm confident they're going to play us much tougher next time around.

UW-La Crosse put up a little more of a fight. Terry Porter opened the game's scoring with a lay-in off a feed from Craig Hawley and after La Crosse's Jim Buss answered with two free throws, Porter broke through the lane to bank in a left-handed reverse lay-up.

Dave Schuld scored to give the Pointers a 6-2 lead and the team methodically began to creep away from the Indians.

WID 16:38 left in the half and the Pointers holding a 10-7 lead, Craig Hawley deftly swiped the ball from an Indian guard and drove for a lay-up to give the Pointers a five-point cushion. Hawley matched the feat three minutes later to stretch the Pointer advantage to 18-8 and the Pointers stretched to 31-20 lead at the half.

Hawley set the pace for the Pointers in the second half as he scored 10 of the team's first 14 points and helped the Pointers stretch their lead to 45-20 with 16:12 left in the game.

Tim Buss and Jay Kupek then scored hoops for the Indians to narrow the gap to 12 at the 11:30 mark but the Pointers got closer.

Brad Soderberg and Steve Hidden helped close the door on La Crosse with some consistent free throw shooting as the game wound down and the Pointers held blown from 16 to the final margin of 25 in the last four minutes of the game.

Hawley and Porter led the Pointers in scoring 16-17 and 16-16, respectively.

Defense works for women too

by Tom Burkman

How important is a good defense? Well, defense wins ball games no matter what the sport. Case in Point: last Monday night the UWSP Women's basketball team posted their third win of the young season with a come-from-behind 57-55 victory over visiting St. Norbert College. The Pointers won with defense.

Trailing 31-34 at halftime, the Pointers tightened up their defense which enabled them to get back in the game. The Pointers outscored Norbert 13-2 in the second half as they host the seven team Community Classic.

"They took us out of our offense a little bit in the second half," St. Norbert coach Cazzie Tilley said. "But what it came down to was our defense."

George, a Reserve Forest Products who specializes in the brownfield industry, has been...
The Pointers don't exactly ease into their road schedule this year, facing Eau Claire Friday and Stout at Menomonie on Saturday. How will this affect the team?

"I don't know, I really don't. It's a tough weekend to begin with because Stout has its best team in a long time. Eau Claire, of course, has just an outstanding team. I can't worry about it too much, we just have to go out and play as hard and well as we can.

There's no question that I'd rather be at home but we don't have a lot of choice. I just hope we're able to give a rather good accounting of ourselves.

In the pre-season NAIA polls Eau Claire Blugolds were ranked 11th and the Pointers were not in the top 20. According to an NAIA spokesman, the Pointers received some votes but not enough to be ranked. This rankled Biehelt.

"I don't want to make a big deal of it. Last night Scott Krueger (WSPT broadcaster who said that Bennett basically 'didn't like the poll situation') interviewed me after the game and I was a little more emotional than I should have been. I said a few things I didn't mean, but I guess I said them.

"The fact is that they had that ranking before the season began. Generally, if you have a superb team the year before you'll get the benefits of the doubt in the ranking. Now a ranking is not as big a deal as I sometimes make it, except that in the NAIA, rankings do have a lot to do with seedings and tournament play.

"Of course, this week it will all straighten itself out so it doesn't matter but I feel Eau Claire got the ranking without having earned it. Of course they're 3-0 now and they've beaten some fine clubs so I guess they belong there but based on what we've done we might get some votes also."

SIXTH PLACE
SID — Lacking the intensity that earned them a tie the previous night, the UWSP hockey team fell to St. Mary's College 8-1 on Saturday. UWSP now stands 0-1 on the season.

The Pointers trailed just 1-0 after the first period, but things got progressively worse, as UWSP was out-scored 3-1 in the second period and 4-0 in the third, to make the final 8-1.

UWSP's only tally came at 15:38 of the second period when Joe Gruber scored on an assist from Adam Rosenberger to make the score 3-1. The Pointers could generate nothing further, however, despite having numerous power play opportunities.

St. Mary's committed 12 penalties for a total of 26 minutes compared to seven penalties for 14 minutes for UWSP.

The Pointers host a strong Superior team this weekend in a two game series.

"We also need a lot of work on our power play," said Carlson. "We let too many chances slip by without scoring."

The Pointers outshot St. Mary's 44-39, but the Redmen's goalie Greg Dick came up with 23 saves compared to seven for Point goalie Mike White.

The Pointers host a strong Superior team this weekend in a two game series. Carlson believes a victory is crucial to get his team on the right track.

"It is very important that we have a good showing with Superior this weekend," said Carlson. "We need a couple of wins here to get on the positive side of the ledger and restore a lot of faith." UWSP will take on Superior in the Yellowjackets at 7 p.m. on Friday, December 14 and at 2 p.m. on Saturday, December 15.

Both games are at K.B. Willett Arena.

Swimmers compete

SID — The UWSP men's swim team competed in the six-team Madison Invitational here this weekend.

No score was kept in the meet as it was a straight invitational and there was no placing. This meet was significant, however, in that it provided an opportunity for the Pointers to perform with no pressure at all.

Head Coach Lynn "Red" Blair said of the meet, "It was a great meet for us because of no pressure, that way we trained through it to get ready for the (WSUC Re­)lays next weekend."

"We didn't swim well but we expected performances because we had a great week of hard training last week," Blair added.

Chris Morse and Jeff Stepanski led the team with top times in the 100 and 200 breaststroke and the 50 and 100 freestyle respectively.

The Pointer men swim their next meet against UW-Whitewater in the Wisconsin State University Conference Relays beginning at 12:15.
Football

SID — Mike Gaab, standout halfback for the UWSP football team, limped the 1983 season as the leading receiver in the NAIA nationally, according to the final NAIA national statistics.

Gaab, a 5-10, 185-pound senior from Medford, tied for the national lead with Steve Jackson of Eastern New Mexico as each caught 65 passes for an average of 6.3 receptions per game. Gaab gained 790 yards in receptions and scored five touchdowns.

Ironically, Gaab's receiving total was good for only eighth place nationally in the final NCAA Division III totals.

Tim Lau, the Pointers standout split end from Wausau, was named to the Second Team in the NCAA Division III national statistics. Lau gained 100 receptions for 1,058 yards and 19 touchdowns.

The man on the other end of the receptions, quarterback Greg Gross, finished the season as the third ranked quarterback nationally in the NCAA and 13th in NCAA Division III in individual passing.

Geijn, a 6-3, 217-pound sophomore from Chippewa Falls, completed 217 of 348 passes (.614 percent) for 2,364 yards with 14 touchdowns and 15 interceptions. He averaged 236.4 yards per game and had the highest completion percentage in the NCAA and the second best in Division III. He had a long pass mark of 128.9 in the Division III.

Geijn also finished seventh in NAIA and sixth in Division III in individual total completions with 233 total yards per game.

As a team, UWSP finished fourth in team passing offense in the NAIA and 11th in NCAA Division III in the same category. Point averaged 237.7 yards per game in passing offense.

The Pointers finished the 1983 season with a record of 6-5-1.

Women's Infield

SID — UWSP women's swimming team qualified two relays for the NAIA national meet and set a school record as it swam to a strong third place finish in the 1983 Invitational meet here Wednesday as it defeated UW-Green Bay 60-46.

ARE YOU SMART ENOUGH TO SAVE YOUR PARENTS THE COST OF COLLEGE?

You are, if you win an Army ROTC scholarship. When you win one of our scholarships, we pay your tuition, books, lab fees and other academic expenses. We'll also give you up to $1,000 a year extra. And when you graduate, we'll make you an Army officer.

But you have to be more than smart to win. We'll consider your extracurricular, leadership and athletic activities. And if you reach the finals, we'll meet with you for a personal interview.

For more information about how to avoid overburdening your parents for the next four years, contact the Army ROTC Professor of Military Science on your campus.

well attended. Ten years of teaching here have convinced me that most students at Point are environmentally concerned, and that all too many of them do party on Thursday nights. If these groups ever throw another musical benefit, I'd urge more students to attend. In the meantime, I would like to thank the sponsors and the musicians for a splendid evening. And I'd like to thank whoever thought up the name "Volunteers of America with Mad Dog and the Pointers." For if we want to stop Project ELF, and to protect our earth, air and water from nuclear fire, we Pointers must volunteer our hands, our minds, and our time. I'm sure the organizations above could use some help.

Most importantly, we must use our minds—winnow madness from sanity, truth from falsity. Do you believe, for instance, that our local civil defense authorities could protect us from nuclear fallout and fleeing hordes from Chicago and Milwaukee? Or would we be a prime target ourselves, because of the proximity of Project ELF? We must reflect on these matters, and then give guidance to our elected representatives, and talk it over with our neighbors. All this takes time, but ducking and covering is not a viable alternative. Besides, working together isn't all work, as we found out Thursday night. Thanks again.

Jean Rumsey

Here to help

To Pointer Magazine, (letter to the student body),

A student organization is now active on campus which we're calling the Student Security Patrol. The organization has three purposes to benefit the student body.

The first, and primary, goal of the organization is to secure the personal safety of all of you, as student body members. The Student Security Patrol was formed because the faculty and student members of the University Affairs Committee were concerned for your personal safety. With the students' personal safety in mind, times do arise when most of us could use a little help getting home (on campus). Please let the Patrol be of help to you. There are anumber of situations which could arise, perhaps you have a feeling of being followed or you stayed a little too long at Ella's. When you see two people patrolling in gold jackets they are fellow students interested in helping you not "turning you in."

Our second purpose is to prevent vandalism to university property and any property the students may have parked around campus. The prevention of damage to UW property saves all of us money in tuition costs and if you have a treasured set of wheels outside we will save you money directly.

Finally, we, as Student Security Patrol members, are patrolling to gain experience in the law enforcement field. A point which can't be stressed enough is we are fellow students concerned for your safety. Don't hesitate to ask us for assistance.

Benefit concert brings out ELF slayers

Amazing as man traveling to the moon is, and as amaz­ ing as the seven wonders of the world are, nothing seems more amazing to most of us right now than the fact that this semester is finally com­ing to an end and we’re still around to see it. Some of us have been anticipating this event for months, ex­ cit­ ing­ly­ already. Although we don’t want to think about it, next semester is only about a month and a half away, and with every new semester comes new chal­ lenges for­ our­ routine. Poin­ ter, for­ exam­ple. Besides losing editors in the sports and news depart­ ments, the environmental section is going to have to bear the loss of John Sav­ agian, who will be virtually teach­ing at SPASH next semes­ ter. John has not only been an excellent editor, but he has also been a major contrib­ utor in achieving the goal of this section. His con­ sistently cover and report the issues that affect the en­ viron­ ment of the local com­ munity specifically and the state and national level in gen­ eral. He will be sorely missed.

The main issue at hand and the reason this article is being written is, no less, call it a plea for help. With John gone during the second half of the semester, the “vast” number of reporters for the environ­ mental section is slashed from two to just yours truly. Although there are certain people in our society who as­cribe to self­sufficiency, I am not one of them, and running a section without reporters could pos­ sibly be a health hazard. There is a more important reason, though, in this quest for writers. UWSF, with all of its other excellent alternatives being offered, is known as a na­ tural resources school first and foremost, and Pointer Maga­ zine should be able to prop­ erly report those issues rele­ vant to nature resources and the environment. Therefore, if you are con­sidering writing, or you think you might want to write, there are a wide vari­ ety of subjects in the environ­ mental section to write about. All aspects of nature comes to mind, like bird­ watching, hiking, hunting and fishing, and those aspects that aren’t “of na­ ture” but affect nature just as well—air pollution, nu­ clear waste and ground wa­ ter contamination are just a few examples.

There’s plenty of room for everyone, both nature pho­ tographers, and there’s no strings attached. If you want to get involved, go down to the Pointer office on the first floor of the Communication Building and say “Hey! I could really use the help, and well all achieve some­ thing we never have enough of—an enjoyable, learning experience.

Quick gifts

The federal “Duck Stamp” is an easy and inexpensive way to invest in the future of America’s wildlife, birds and other wild creatures.

Buying the colorful $7.50 conservation stamps can provide the money to acquire land for national wildlife refuges, and even to the United States. Your dol­ lar, by law, goes directly into the purchase of a vanished wetlands and other types of resources needed for your wild­ life conservation. For 50 years, the “Duck Stamp” has been one of America’s premier national conserva­ tion programs, contributing more than $270 million to wildlife protection.

There’s no easier way to get serious about wildlife conservation than by buying “Duck Stamps.” They’re a great gift for friends, rela­ tives, and co-workers who care about wildlife. The real estate that the “Duck Stamp” buys will give the real estate in the nation’s conservation effort.

“Duck Stamps” also can be valuable collector’s items. Stamp collectors, hoop­ bys, artists, and outdoor enthusiasts of every descrip­ tion prize the “Duck Stamp” for its beauty and unique­ ness.

Where can you get a “Duck Stamp?” Ignore the crowded shopping malls and holiday traffic jams. “Duck Stamps” are as close as your nearest post office and many national wildlife refu­ ges. The 1983-84 issue is currently on sale and the last three issues can be pur­ chased from the U.S. Postal Service’s Philatelic Sales Di­ vision, Washington, D.C. 20355-0997. (Write the Postal Service for its latest color philatelic catalog showing such issues.) In addition, many wildlife art galleries and stamp dealers have ma­ terials for mounting your “Duck Stamp.”

Loach out

An improved way to leach precious metals out of low­ grade ores and mine wastes, originally developed by the Interior Department’s Bu­ reau of Mines, is being suc­ cess­ fully used at many com­ mercial operations, accord­ ing to a new Bureau report.

The “heap leaching” of ore and waste piles is an in­ expensive, effective way to extract precious metals from resources that would not oth­ erwise be worth processing. Leach liquor, sprayed onto the top of the pile, percolates through it and dissolves the metals, which are recovered when the “pregnant” liquor is collected and treated. Many operations have found, however, that clay and fine­ grained material can segre­ gate and prevent uniform flow through the piles, caus­ ing a serious drop in metal recovery.

The Bureau’s development is a low-cost agglomeration process that gives the heap a uniform permeability by ensuring uniform distribu­ tion of clay and fine parti­ cles. Crushed ore is mixed with perl­ and cement and water, then mechanically tumbled and cured. The ISO N. p 33
Leaching, cont. process causes clay and fine particles to adhere firmly to coarser particles in the heap. The new report details use of the method at five commercial operations that process from 20 to 2,000 tons of ore and waste material per day.

One 2,000-ton-per-day silver leaching operation that incorporated agglomeration into its processing routine, for example, saw recovery of leachable silver increase to 90 percent, from 37 percent, while leaching time dropped from 90 days to only 7 days. A 1,500-ton-per-day gold recovery operation that agglomerates ore before leaching it in 1,000-ton-capacity vats (rather than customary heaps) also recovered 90 percent of the precious metal in the ore; shortened leaching time to three days from four; and increased its processing capacity, effectively raising gold production.

Although agglomeration heap leaching requires more reagents and equipment than conventional leaching, the report states, the technology is cost-effective because of decreased leaching times and increased recovery rates.

Granite Grants

Grants totaling $2,467,534 have been awarded to four U.S. universities for research on ways to improve fundamental mineral processing operation, the Interior Department’s Bureau of Mines announced recently.

The Universities of Missouri, Nevada and Utah, and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, all named Genetic Centers for Mineral Technology under authority of the 1977 Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act, received continued funding as part of the Mineral Institute grant program intended to foster mining and mineral-related research and graduate education. The four centers were established initially funded in 1982, and each center works with two or more affiliated Mineral Institutes at other universities.

that the Soviets dismantle their 900 missiles aimed at Western Europe in return for cancellation of new land-based cruise and Pershing II missile deployment. This is the so-called “zero option” and it entails no reduction in existing NATO intermediate forces. Clearly, this is something the Soviets cannot accept and this is why they refuse to negotiate.

Nevertheless, Reagan will undoubtedly continue to pursue his ill-advised course. The United States should not seek superiority when parity exists. The notion that building will bring the Soviets to their knees is pure folly. Conservatives scoff at the liberals who would dare undermine the defense of the U.S. Yet, their policies have produced nothing constructive in terms of arms control and threaten to push the Soviets to the brink of another arms build-up, which would do nothing to enhance our security.

Tragically, the all too familiar pattern of the arms race continues. Unless we stop this dangerous competition, in which the U.S. achieves significant technological breakthroughs only to have the Soviets successfully play catch-up, we will continue on a journey to Armageddon. We must stop spending billions of dollars to perpetuate this madness and direct our vast financial resources to constructive, life-giving purposes. And the only solution is called a nuclear freeze.

ments held in the area. The team traveled to La Crosse in early November and supported our college there. Just this past weekend we traveled to Stout for another tournament. The members of the team did their best to represent our college.

At the tournaments, the members of the team face competitors from across the nation. Some of the colleges at the last tournament included: Texas, North Dakota, Ohio, Minnesota, Eau Claire and many, many others. So you can see the wide variety of experience our members encounter at each one of these tournaments.

With all of the experience we gain this year the team hopes to come back stronger than ever next semester. Being on the forensic-debate team offers a lot of valuable experience that is once in a lifetime. Our organization is very open and welcomes anyone who would like to join. We are a team that offers support, friendship, hopes, and many opportunities to become involved. Our work may sometimes be hard, but there is a honor in representing ourselves and our university that makes it all seem worthwhile.

Lights are cheaper than hot water.

Lighting costs $3 to $6 a month for the average apartment. So if you cut lighting by, say 15%, you could save 50¢ to $1 a month. Now that's nothing to scoff at; it'll buy you a couple rounds of Pac-Man, if nothing else.

But you'll save substantially more by cutting back on hot water use. That's because heating water takes a lot of energy and that means it costs you money. For perspective, a shower is 500 to 1,000 times more expensive than lighting a 60-watt bulb for the same time period.

So the next time you're standing in the shower in the dark, think about it.
