Students have acquired a well-earned reputation for political apathy ever since they were granted the universal right to vote by the Twenty-Sixth Amendment to the Constitution in 1971. Although we display impassioned feelings on a wide range of controversial issues, most of us fail to exercise our right to do anything about those concerns through the voting process.

A plethora of excuses exist for not voting, but many students complain that their fear of election booths is caused by nothing more than the belief that their vote does not count. Whether used as a lame excuse for laziness or a valid expression of discouragement, that excuse is wrong.

Dead wrong.

Three UWSP students—Tracey Mosley, Kevin Shibilski and Jim Schulf—have run for office this spring (see a related article in the news section). They aren't running simply as a lame excuse for laziness or a valid expression of discouragement, that excuse is wrong.

No one should vote for a student candidate simply because that person is a student. A vote cast solely on such criteria is an abuse of the duty that comes with the right of suffrage. However, student candidates do offer a unique forum and perspective for student views. If elected, these candidates can voice student concerns on the campus at large, as in Mosley and Shibilski's case, or in the Stevens Point Common Council as an alderman, as in Schulf's case.

UWSP's 9,200 students comprise a significant voting block with the potential for considerable ideological clout in Stevens Point and Portage County. Student candidates could benefit greatly from the support of their peers at election time. For example, if a student were to run for alderman in the 11th Ward, he would be representing 1,732 constituents. Of those, 1,722 potential voters, 1,008 or 58 percent would be students from four UWSP residence halls—Burroughs, Knutzen, Thornton and Watson.

Students living in residence halls also comprise significant blocks in other wards. Adding the off-campus student population to these already sizable blocks makes an even better case for student political activism.

The idea isn't to have student politicians take over Stevens Point. In fact, student candidates should not be elected if another candidate with more experience, knowledge and stature concerns for student issues is available. The point is students can wield political clout and pressure if they care enough to register in their proper wards and vote.

Complaining is easy. All it takes is a negative mind-set and a set of loose lips ready to spew out a mish-mash of tired rhetoric. Voting is, and should be, hard. Done properly, it requires concentrated thought and insight. Potential student voters should remember that you can't fairly complain about the shaky foundation of a house unless you laid a stone for it.

Help for the grieving

Thursday, February 16, will be the first meeting of a grief support group for all who have experienced the death of a loved one. The meetings will run for six weeks, from 4:30 to 6:30, the first one will be held in the Dodge Room of the University Center. No pre-registration is required; simply join us for the first meeting.

When someone you’ve loved has died about whom you care, the pain can be overwhelming. Confusion, anger, depression, profound loneliness in the play, a young man (Alan Strang) is brought to a psychiatrist (Martin Dysart) for therapy. He is taken to the office by a British Magistrate who believes the boy should be treated rather than imprisoned. Strang, who had blinded six horses, is, as Frantz described him, “a nice kid, not a criminal type, who loves animals.” Dysart uncovers the psychological puzzle that led Alan to do something so terrible. But the psychiatrist also is forced to confront his own professional and personal problems during the therapy.

The original production of “Equus” opened at the Old Vic in London in July, 1973 and was staged in New York in 1974. It was later made into a movie with Richard Burton playing the psychiatrist.

Playing the Dysart role in UWSP’s production will be Patrick Schulze of Green Bay, who is the lighting designer. Stephen Sherwen of the theatre arts faculty designed the set—a square corral inside a circle. Patrick Schulze of Green Bay is the lighting designer; Michael Rickel of Ashland is the costume designer; and Stephen Cantrell of Wheaton is the makeup designer.

One of the difficulties identified in securing employment is that employers are looking for people with experience. Many employers prefer to hire people with previous employment in a related area as a type of reality testing of the person’s skills and interests. Through practical experiences, we test out our educational preparation, learn new applications of their knowledge and make decisions about our future. Commitment to our career choice is the best way to gain this practical experience through part-time and summer employment.

The Career Services Office is sponsoring the fourth annual Summer Camp Recruitment Day on Tuesday, February 14, in the University Center Wisconsin Room between the hours of 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Camp Recruitment Day has been developed to provide you and the employers with the opportunity to speak with each other about possible summer employment. There will be approximately 25 different camps represented with a variety of positions available. Due to the wide variety of camp positions dealing with different aged children, food service, teaching, arts and crafts and the outdoor, students from every major may find positions which will allow them to demonstrate and learn skills obtained through sports and hobbies.

Practical experiences such as a summer camp offer you a number of positive fringe benefits:

—An excellent environment to establish very close and lasting relationships with the children and the camp staff.
—The unique experience of learning and working in the outdoors.
—The opportunity to gain skills and experience while earning money.
—Situations to develop your self-confidence through your skills of leadership, organization, planning and communication within a realistic working setting.
—A positive work experience to use in your resume and interview situations.

Br. Miller Day observed

The poor of the world and the people who serve them will be remembered Sunday at a second annual Br. Miller Day at UWSP.

The program will begin at 2:30 p.m. in the Program Banquet Room of the University Center. The public is invited to attend. There is no charge.

The day will honor the Christian Brother who was killed by unknown assailants in Guatemala on Feb. 13, 1982. He was a native of the Polonia area and attended Pacelli High School in Stevens Point before entering his religious order.

A memorial reflection will be held at the start of the program followed by a 30-minute talk by Sister Audrey Olson, director of the La Crosse Diocese's Office of Justice and Peace. Her topic will be, "The Campaign of Social Change in Central America: Responses of the Catholic Church and the United States." Cont., p. 22
To the Editor:

A copy of your Viewpoint article No Abortion Ad was brought to my attention last week. Although your review of the legal status of abortion rights and the continuing public controversy is accurate, your editorial begs the question. Denying Dr. Susan Jovanovic's display ad for the Madison Family Planning Clinic because you oppose a woman's right to choose abortion is censorship in its most dangerous form.

The first sentence in your Viewpoint speaks to your commitment to the protection of the First Amendment and in particular to freedom of the press. Yet you made a decision to suppress Dr. Jovanovic's ad for the "public good" which is precisely the opposite of the entire community. That you oppose that choice is not relevant in making a decision concerning the ad in question. It is especially disconcerting that you allowed your personal convictions to interfere with the public's right to know in a University sponsored publication supported by Wisconsin taxpay- ers. If anything, a magazine such as The Pointer has an obligation to insure access to the widest views on any controversial issue.

Ironically, in the same issue in which your editorial appeared, the page depicts George Orwell's 1984. The theme of course is that when Government attempts to control what we see, what we hear, what we read, and what we think all become nothing more than robots. The actions of Mr. Peterson and the one Big Brother are certainly applicable when you prevent Dr. Jovanovic's display ad from appearing in Pointer Magazine.

For all of the above reasons, I urge you to reconsider Dr. Jovanovic's request as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

Eunice Edgar
Executive Director

A "miserable failure?"

To the Pointer:

In the early 1970s, an ad for The Pointer chose not to run advertising for RTCG and military recruitment. He claimed that the advertising included "attacks on students living in Southeast Asia and that to run them would compromise his values. Predictably, his action was equally praised and condemned by Big Brother.

Chris Celichowski recently made a comparable decision based on his values. As editor, the decision was clearly within his purview. In the interest of the Advertisers and publishers decide on the advertising and news content of their publications without informing readers of values. It was a mistake Celichowski widely published his decision and invited the inevitable criticism.

Biologist instructor David Potter said Chris "failed miserably...and I urge you to reconsider this past." Translation: I do not agree with your respect your values or the act of them.

If Chris Celichowski is an example of one who has quit for a reason, I can only hope that there are many more "failures" among our 8,500 students.

A raucous round

To the Pointer:

Despite my substantial liberal leanings, as an advocate of two equal, reasonable people's right to provide both sides to issues, I commend The Pointer as an equal (dois) in our basically liberal fare. I beg to differ with most of the points Jeff Peterson presents in his column on the current administration's civil rights record.

Mr. Peterson tells us that "not until one of us treats our fellow Americans as equals (dois) in our society will we have civil rights in this nation." Precisely when is this going to happen? Certainly not in the foreseeable future. Do we tell those blacks who are being denied housing as close to home as South Bend, Indiana, that they're just going to have to wait until the entire United States has been purged of prejudice? What do we say to the children of Yonkers, N.Y., and Bakersfield, Calif., who are being sent to segregated, inferior schools? Mr. Peterson's ideas may read well in the abstract, but are not practical. Perhaps he would benefit from a tour of those black and blue.

Second, "the civil rights record of the Reagan administration may need some improvement, but it has been no worse than any other past administration." I find it hard to believe that Mr. Peterson really believes this and even harder to believe that he would want me to believe it. Does he really think that an administration which can remember its school and housing discrimination cases when going without double digits is doing the same as the administrations which passed the Civil Rights Acts of 1957, 1960, 1964 and 1965.

Third, according to Mr. Peterson, "President Reagan and the Republican Party are the party of Lincoln and today's left just as racist as anyone..." However, what he neglects to point out is that the Republican Party of today and the Republican Party of the 1960's were entirely opposite in their ideologies.

Of course, I agree that everyone should realize that all people are equal but, until this is a reality (if it ever is), strict enforcement of civil rights laws is needed. Unfortunately, conservatives such as Mr. Reagan and Mr. Peterson fail to realize this. I beg to differ with most of the points Jeff Peterson presents in his column on the current administration's civil rights record.

Thus, I'm pleased to announce that I will resign from my position as an executive of the University of Wisconsin Press. I have been unable to continue to write articles critical of the University administration and in particular to the support and influence of the University in state government and state political affairs. I have been unable to do so, first to them that the very foundations of our University are being threatened.

Gov. Earl's salary freeze is probably the most powerful force behind the University's campaign to organize the Faculty and Staff of the University System. All the unions supported Gov. Earl and his largest campaign promise to them was to sign into law a bill opening up the University System to collective bargaining for faculty and staff. enforcement of the state's single smallest windfall of millions of dollars would have been no result. In the financially troubled AFL- CIO, "Why would the Faculty Through Away a Long Tradition of Freedom and Choice, Freedom in Favor of Collectively Bargaining your Time When Labor Unions are Fading in Numbers and Power?"

If the bill passes, each campus in the system will be the target of union organizing activities, with all the conflict and adversarial connotations that have swept across universities in other states that made the mistake of collective bargaining.

We do not need such costly and divisive battles on the campuses of the UW System. Labor lobbyists are arguing that the bill merely gives faculty the right to choose. What about our right to be left alone? Why plunge our universities into a collective bargaining system that will cost money and not improve education and job salaries?

Collective bargaining and the adversarial system it fosters are likely to change the employee-employer relationship totally and end a university's sovereignty. Evidence nationally has shown that collective bargaining will increase the cost of labor and reduce the balance of power that works so well in universities like UW. It has no in Wisconsin.

Why is this a dangerous bill?

The administration of Gov. Earl has consistently argued that university faculty and academic staff should be Cont., pg .
UWSP disagrees with Gourman Report

by Susan Higgins

In a recent study of colleges and universities in America, UWSP was ranked only as "adequate." The survey of public and independent colleges in the state was published in the latest edition of the Gourman Report, rating the graduate and undergraduate programs of universities in America and abroad.

Only UW-Madison was rated in the "strong" category, while UW-Milwaukee fell into the "acceptable plus" group.

The other 11 schools in the UW System, including UWSP, were all ranked as "adequate."

"It is unclear what criteria were used to rate the schools," Jack Gourman, the author of the study, said. Students and evaluators studied the schools' curricula and their abilities to change with the times. "We don't look just at college degrees but also at skills because they can take the 'wrong' track," Gourman said. "We try to find out what's actually being offered."

Other considerations included how well programs were, if the students were taught basic skills and how the schools could reinforce the curricula.

Military strength does not equal freedom

In my view, freedom, an ideal America holds first and foremost, is not an ideal at all, but a way of life, a "modus operandi" that would govern our everyday actions and policies as a nation. When we embrace the concepts of freedom, all of our people's basic needs must be met (including, of course, "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness") and a society must be created that allows them to realize their full potential as human beings. In other words, a society free from the oppressions of poverty or the oppressions of prejudice based upon race or sex.

In the world we live in, I have also come to equate freedom with the opportunity to live in a world free from the threat of nuclear extinction.

The Reagan administration's proposed military budget, the largest defense budget in history, and a return to nuclear confrontation, would simply not be true. If a billion dollars is put into mass transportation (a program which is being cut by Ronald Reagan), it would create 45,397 jobs and would put the people to work who are in desperate need of jobs; the unskilled and semi-skilled laborer. These would be jobs that will benefit the average unemployed worker and will benefit in the least.

Moreover, the administration's recommendations that the increased military budget will cause big business to thrive are not true. As long as the Senate and the media, has done his best to mislead the public, the media, has done his best to mislead, the media, has done his best to mislead. The administration's budget stabilization program, which could easily lead to nuclear confrontation and perpetuate an image which is incongruous with his true thoughts on the situation in Latin America, is a cause for concern.

Although the problems our society would have to bear to support such a huge defense budget would be vast, I believe one of the major benefits of adequately cutting school lunch programs and thereby denying many of this country's children their one nutritional meal a day.

Great humanitarian, indeed.

It is basic bread and circuses politics, or should I say for the poor, it is very little bread and a lot of circus politics.

One of the ideas proposed by the Reagan administration is that the increased military budget will create jobs that will benefit our society. This is simply not true. If a billion dollars is put into mass transportation (a program which is being drastically cut by Ronald Reagan), it would create 45,397 jobs and would put the people to work who are in desperate need of jobs; the unskilled and semi-skilled laborer. These would be jobs that will benefit the average unemployed worker and will benefit in the least.

Now, for the administration's reasoning that the increased military budget will create a safer world.

First of all, I would like to explode the myth that the Soviets are ahead of us in military capability and therefore we need to catch up to maintain the balance of power.

Even when Reagan took office, his so-called "window of vulnerability" was not only closed, it was nailed shut. When judging the military balance, the facts presented by the Reagan administration are always the U.S. has this much and the Soviet Union has this much. This is not only unfair, but inaccurate as a gauge to determine our respective strengths.

We must say NATO has so much and the Warsaw pact has so much, which would be the two respective sides should there be a war. An example:

Even if we use CIA's estimations of Soviet nuclear strength does not equal freedom.

They met to share thoughts on the situation in Central America.

Known as the Committee on Latin America (COLA), they hope to raise the level of awareness of the economic and social life in Latin America, and help UWSP students understand their relationship to the Latin American peoples.

According to adviser Jim Schneider, he and a few students started meeting informally as COLA about three years ago and were later recognized as an official UWSP student organization. COLA has been active since then.

On campus, COLA is mainly an educational group, Schneider said. The group wants to educate people about what is happening in Latin America and why it is happening. COLA's activities include political demonstrations and letter-writing campaigns.

"We want to be a resource for people," said Marjorie Schmitz, who has been a member of COLA for over two years. Members share the information about Latin America that they have from the sources they have. COLA doesn't have a set executive board. "There isn't a big bang," Schmitz said. COLA operates with a loose membership and "everyone has input," she continued.

"We usually manage one big event per semester," she said. COLA also puts out a newsletter.

One of COLA's problems is a lack of organization known to UWSP. Schmitz said keeping student interest is difficult because COLA is run on a semester-to-semester basis. However, the group does its best "to pick out goals and keep going."

COLA raises funds for projects and for CISPES (Committees in Solidarity with the People in El Salvador). CISPES opposes all forms of U.S. intervention in El Salvador and all of Latin America and provides support for the Salvadoran people.

COLA's goals are similar to those of CISPES. "We're a political group, not just a humanitarian group," Schneider said. COLA supports the self-determination of peoples and nations. "I believe one of the greatest obstacles to self-determination of those countries is our own government," he continued. "We can't buy off the problem (in Latin America) itself."

CISPES opposes all forms of U.S. intervention in El Salvador and all of Latin America and provides support for the Salvadoran people.

Political activism increases on campus

By Jeff Peterson

In recent years political activism has been on the upswing on our campus. One of the reasons possibly this is due to the resurgence of the College Republicans. A group headed by the outspoken Scott Hill and current chairman, Dane Engelhard, and the increased visibility of the revitalized Young Democrats under the efforts of John Thummaier and others. With the election of Ronald Reagan in 1980, many conservatives have been coming out of the closet, and liberals, more mellow than in the 1960s, are again speaking out on issues which concern them. This increased political activism has benefited the whole campus, as our political awareness has been greatly enhanced by it.

Besides those two rather traditional political organizations on campus, we can also find a few rather controversial special interest groups, which have become very active of late. One such group is Students Against Nuclear Extinction (SANE), while another is called the Committee on Latin America (COLA). Both of these groups represent that radical off (off the wall) left wing of today's political spectrum and are no doubt the most radical of all the political groups on campus. SANE's primary objective is to work towards making UWSP a nuclear-free zone. I doubt the Soviets would ever want to strike Stevens Point in the first place unless the Kremlin has listed the Point Brewery, the Palm Club and Seneca Point in the ty, and for this they have to be commended. I am especially amused by their cute and clever little title, "Dr. Strangelove." Yet SANE tends to make everyone who speaks out against a nuclear freeze an enemy of progress.

One must not judge a book by its cover. After all, what student in his right mind is going to advocate nuclear extinction? I know no student on campus who has aspirations of being another "Dr. Strangelove." Yet SANE tends to make everyone who speaks out against a nuclear freeze an enemy of progress.

Another activist group is COLA, which lists its objectives as working to raise the awareness of the economic, social and political life in Latin America. Again, like SANE, they tend to distort or simply ignore the real facts involved and are shortsighted in the real situation. They totally ignore the Cuban missile crisis, the communist expansion and the growing communist influence in Latin America. No doubt the Kissinger Report has been dis­counted by them as being nothing but a leftist propaganda, I'm sure that Mr. Castro would appreciate the work of COLA on our campus and would be ecstatic about it. Last fall COLA attempted to pull a fast one and tried to get the Board of Supervisors to fund a student group to attend an anti-American, pro-communist expansion rally in Washington. In its wise judgment this request was rejected by the SGA; giving them those funds would have set a bad precedent.

When groups like COLA and SANE became so esteemed, as they have, they lose all credibility in my view. No longer are they capable of being objective in their positions for they are sadly misinformed. These groups were probably founded with good intentions but now in many ways they are destroying the honesty of this campus by misrepresenting the views of those they oppose. They have reverted to clever propaganda and rhetoric in their techniques.

We need groups and people on the campus who are critical of current government policies and who question them. Yet there are the right way and a wrong way to carry this out. Unfortunately, many times it has been done with little or no regard for the facts; they distort, ignore, misrepresent and refuse to accept the real issues. For the most part the Democrat and Republican clubs on this campus have been playing politics - the way the game should be played. The professional and friendly manner in which these two groups conduct their affairs is a credit to the groups themselves, their parties and this campus. But the past fall, as all observers were able to put their political differences aside and come together as Americans to hold a vigil for those 260 Marines murdered in Beirut.

UWSP students seek county posts

By Weng Park Fook

Two students have announced that they will be running for county supervisor in the district 3 area. They face Dorris Cragg, an incumbent supervisor in another district.

Tracey Mosley said he will run for county supervisor in the District 3 area. He faces Dorris Cragg, an incumbent supervisor in another district.

Mosley is vice-president of both the UWSP Student Government Association and the United Oustball. He said that he has experience in both student and community affairs.

He is a member of the Stevens Point Minority Action Council, Association of Community Task and Community Relations. He has also been a resident assistant in the Fray-Sims Falls. District 3 includes the Fray-Sims and Hansen Halls, parts of the college, Ridge and Portage streets, and the area east of Division St., Main St. to Jefferson St.

Mosley said that his past experiences enable him to carry out the duties and responsibilities as a county supervisor effectively.

Kevin Shibilski

In another contest for a position on the Portage County Board of Supervisors, Kevin Shibilski said he will seek the District 17 seat.

Shibilski faces Ruth M. Schuler in the contest to assume the seat which is currently held by Dorris Cragg.

The district includes the 9th Ward of the town of Hull (south of Highway H), the 2nd Ward in the town of Plover (a narrow strip in the area of Highway HH and Eisenhower Road) and the 3rd Ward in the town of Stockton (the northwest area bounded by Highways HH and J).

Shibilski said that his experience in the local, state and national governments in various capacities will enable him to serve the district residents well.

"I feel comfortable with governmental procedures and I can put them to work for the people," he said.

Shibilski is currently the legislative affairs director of the SIA and the student liaison to the City Council. He is a member of Portage County Democratic Party and the Central Wisconsin Ducks Unlimited Committee.

He is presently employed by the State of Wisconsin as a legislative liaison. On the national level, Shibilski has spent one year in Washington, D.C. as a lobbyist for the United States Student Association. He also had an internship with the United States Department of Education as a system analyst.

Shibilski said that he can serve as an effective county supervisor. "You write the laws of the local governments are overshadowed by state and national government. My experience has taught me that local government can and does have significant impact on the people, and often local government is most responsive to the people," he said.

Population and location split halls among wards

by Laura Sternewirth

Gerrymandering is the practice of dividing a voting area so that one group has an unfair advantage over another group. Those groups in question could be political parties, special interests or an organization of people.

The UWSP residence halls are divided among five different residence wards in Stevens Point. Is this gerrymandering?

Stevens Point is divided into wards on the basis of population and location. Each block within the city is numbered, and its population is recorded. The UWSP residence halls always were split up among the city wards. Wisniewski said. The halls are divided among the wards based on their capacity populations and their location in the city. The last time Stevens Point was reapportioned, in 1981, the halls were divided among the wards as follows:

3rd Ward—Pray-Sims, Hansen.
7th Ward—Baldwin, Neale, Steiner.
8th Ward—South, Nelson.

Ward boundaries do get moved with reapportionment, in order to accommodate shifts of the population within the city. The residence halls may change wards in order to help even out the ward populations. For example, in the 1981 reapportionment Hansen Hall was moved into the 3rd Ward, and Neale Hall was moved from the 3rd to the 7th Ward to accommodate population shifts, Wisniewski said.

The wards in Stevens Point are oddly shaped but the city tried to get each ward’s population as close to 1,800 people as possible, she continued.

Having the residence halls be a separate ward would not be in accordance with the 1,800 population goal. The 14 halls are capable of housing 3,963 students. Even if the halls were divided into two wards, both would be too large. If divided into three wards, they’d all be too small and would need to be augmented by other populated city blocks.

As the ward situation is now, the possibility exists for students to have either a majority or at least a substantial standing in the residence hall-student base wards. (As of fall 1983, there were 3,068 students living in the 11th Ward. That ward’s total population is under the directorship of Kevin Stublak, Legislative Affairs Director, and Alan Kemmer, a student senator.

SCAN will create a pool of computerized names. Approximately five people will expertise in one of the several areas of concerns (i.e., environment, foreign affairs, student affairs and higher education), will oversee and research legislation within their prospective categories.

When an important bill comes up for debate, the network is activated. SCAN membership will be supplied with pertinent information about the bill, its status; its history and its impact upon the students. After being filled in, members will be instructed where to call (a toll-free number will be given) to key decision makers.

On Monday, February 13, an organizational meeting will be held in the Garland Room of the University Center. Interested students are encouraged to attend.

Wisconsin's winter weather attracts foreign students

The reputation of this state's winter weather is an advantage when people go to the Far East recruiting students to attend schools such as UWSP.

Marcus Fang, director of foreign student programs at UWSP, made this assessment after spending a week in Taiwan and Japan recently.

He was invited to be a guest of the Ministry of Education of the Republic of China (Taiwan) but made other stops in that part of the world.

The Taiwanese government is interested in hosting educators who provide counsel and assistance to Chinese students in American universities. And they are interested in attracting students to come from that country by trying.

Fang said he was often asked about that country, and the impression among the Taiwanese is that the inside of buildings in Wisconsin are unfortunately cold during this season.

Ironically, there is no central heating in Taiwan's university buildings. Fang reported, and the students he met were wearing sweaters because of the coolness of that weather. He said he assured the Taiwanese that in places like Stevens Point, students can be comfortable in buildings during the winter without wearing sweaters.

Fang met with several alumni of UWSP, and he said they have been influential in spreading information about efficient UWSP. He said the host family program which unites people in the community with foreign students has been especially effective. The first question he was asked by the alumni, Fang said, was "how is my host family?"

UWSP has about 130 "host families" from throughout Central Wisconsin involved in the foreign student program.

This being an election year, the question of.poly-ethnic groups will surely be increasing and this campus will become a political battlefield as each group attempts to win votes for its respective party's candidates.

Many of us make jokes over the things these organizations do and say; some of us find it easy to criticize and make fun of those who are not like us. Much of this criticism has been childish in nature. It's easy to make fun of someone or some group which is doing something worthwhile on campus. Many committed and dedicated students are getting involved as they give up their precious spare time in support of a cause they so strongly believe in as they speak out in support of their respective views. The students of today are the leaders of tomorrow who are working to shape their futures. It's time that more of us start getting and being involved in campus politics and the political process no matter what our ideology may be. There will be no better or crucial year than 1984 to do that. Getting involved makes a significant difference.

Today we have many legislators who are in office because of the student vote; in many instances, the margin of victory has been a result of the student vote. Apathy of victory has been a result of the student vote; in many instances, the margin of victory has been a result of the student vote. Apathy is America-now get involved in it. After all, it's our country.

The New Swingle Singers, hailed worldwide as masters of classical scat, or "mouth music," are an extraordinary vocal ensemble that applies impeccable technique and precise harmony to an astounding array of musical selections. Eight vocalists trained in the British choral tradition sing Bach with an accuracy that would have pleased the master. And just when you think you've figured them out, they're on to jazz, then pop, then back to the early madrigal. From Mozart they move to Joplin, from Gilbert and Sullivan to Lennon and McCartney. Their sound effortlessly and flawlessly integrated.

The University Centers
CR’s get respect the old-fashioned way, they earn it

by Debbie Kellom

Three years ago, the College Republicans, a political association for interested individual students, held a statewide convention in Stevens Point. At that time, there were 12 branches of College Republicans chapter from campuses in Madison, Milwaukee and Eau Claire. Dan Engelhard, then a UWSP student and member of the Stevens Point College Republicans, was one of the founding fathers of the UWSP College Republican chapter, starting the association here in response to increasing political activity on college campuses nationwide.

There are presently 12 branches of College Republicans in Wisconsin, with more beginning to form. The organization attracts those with an interest in Republican ideals who want to pass that interest on and keep enthusiasm growing within the organization.

Diane Engelhard, Dan’s younger sister, is now chairman of the UWSP College Republicans, which presently has about 32 very active, or as Diane put it, “ hardcore” members. “These are the people I can always count on to support the group at campus events, meetings or when I need them,” Diane said. “We’re all very much behind the president, we support what he is doing and believe in the Republican ideals and philosophy.”

Diane stressed that she would like to see increased awareness of political opportunities on campus and said the group is working hard to recruit new members. “I like to see each person involved, doing what he or she can, in whatever capacity. It’s not just politics—there are a lot of fun activities and you really get to know the other people involved.”

Many members of the College Republicans are political science majors or minors, but Diane emphasized the point that knowledge of current events, experience in public speaking, and development of leadership skills are benefits acquired which can be helpful to anyone, regardless of their major.

Some of the Republicans’ activities last semester included a candlelight march on campus in cooperation with the Young Democrats for the U.S. Marines killed in Lebanon, and Fasting For Freedom, a peaceful protest to coincide with the issue of a Soviet man who was not allowed out of his country to see his wife here in the U.S.

“At times we’ll get requests to give our group speaking engagements, or to develop something that we all don’t agree on, and in those cases I encourage members to listen to their conscience and respond to issues individually if they feel that’s right,” Diane said. Diane cited examples of letters received requesting support for the pull-out of Marines in Lebanon. “These aren’t things that we as a group want and no one is forced to work for a cause they don’t believe in.”

Present goals for this year include voter registration for the upcoming elections in connection with the Student Government Association and the Young Democrats. Diane feels that many students have the attitude that their one vote won’t make a difference, and that a campus with 9,000 students can make a very big difference if everyone exercises their right to vote.” Diane said there will be booths set up in the future in the busy election year are still unsettled, however, they do have a trip planned to Iowa on Feb. 17-19 in order to support Walter Mondale. Many of them will be going door to door encouraging citizens to offer their support. Also, March 2-4, they will be on the model Legislature, where they will use the Senate and Assembly chambers to debate bills that are currently going through the legislature. The debates will be held with other Young Democrats as well as College Democrats and College Republicans from around the state.

Some of the other things that the Republicans have hopes of bringing in a couple presidential candidates such as McGovern or Mondale to speak here in Stevens Point, however, his plans are still unsettled.

As far as support for one particular candidate, the Young Democrats will not endorse one individual until after the primary. Potrowski individually supports Walter Mondale’s campaign, commenting, “He is the leader that can help the United States at this time.” Many other members of the Young Democrats individually support their own Democratic hopeful.

SANE and AIFO: politics of another cause

by Bill Davis

Student Action for Nuclear Extinction (SANE) is one of the smallest groups on campus, but it deals with a major problem facing the world today—the possibility of nuclear war. The major duty of the group is to educate students in order to heighten their awareness about this problem.

Besides being an educating group, SANE was active in getting the Student Government Association to pass the Nuclear Freeze Zone Resolution for the campus area. Other projects have been working to stop Project ELF, writing letters and sending representatives on key issues concerning the nuclear issue.

According to John Savage, the president of SANE, “the biggest problem with SANE is that it forces people to think about something they would rather not think about.” It is this fear, along with the attitude that one person couldn’t do anything about a nuclear freeze, that the group hopes to change. It wants to show people that they are not alone in the fight.

With the status of SANE’s future in doubt, John sees the major goals of this semester are to “attempt to keep the group on track and continue working to stop Project ELF.” By showing a series of films, the organization hopes to get people thinking about the possibility of the movie The Day After coming true.

Even with their future in doubt, SANE hopes that all people will read and learn about the possibility of nuclear extinction so that they will be willing to work to stop the nuclear arms buildup and insure our continued existence.

American Indians Rising Ostracism (AIFO) has a variety of activities aimed at encouraging understanding and awareness of all Indian people. The group was actually founded in 1976 after the group has changed since it was started, but its main concern is the encouragement and support of the Indian students on campus. In particular, the AIFO helps to keep an active group for members so that they will be able to deal with the pressures of college life.

Recently, AIFO has been promoting the Indian culture by holding craft shows, bringing in speakers and offering entertainment such as movies. It is the hope of the organization that these events will give other people a chance to learn more about the Indian culture and history.

This togetherness of the

From Sarajevo to Seventeen, the album brings more than just the falling of snow. It brings fiery competition and team loyalty together on different levels.

The UAB (University Activities Board) special events committee is responsible for organizing a winter carnival which has the theme of Snowlympics. Ideas started flowing in November; meetings were set up and letters went out to every organization and residence hall. The committee was meeting two representatives from each group that wished to participate. The UAB is attempting to establish a tradition that will last for some time to come, but without participation in high events, tradition cannot be set.

Program coordinator Jody P очeė, in a recent interview, referred to students as sometimes "apathetic" in regards to past winter carnivals and the responses received early in the planning of this year’s Snowlympics.

"More people should be involved in the organization and participation of the events that take place during this week. This isn't politics, it's having fun. It takes so little work for an organization to get its present members together to have a good time and possibly gain new members," she stated.

One tradition that has been carried over for a number of years is the snow sculpture contest. Entries are judged along with originality in an event that could not possibly bring anything less than ecstasy to an amateur or professional precipitation artist.

Some new events this year include a mascot competition and a song competition; all of which bring cash prizes to the winners. Favorite old events such as the broom hockey tournament, the three-legged race, and the pyramid build are held throughout the week also.

The largest activity of the week would have to be an appearance by Tom Parks, comedian extraordinaire, on Wednesday at which the team songs and banners are presented. Prizes for the activities and for the highest team standing as of Wednesday evening will be distributed.

A point system for sponsoring, competing, and winning in events determines the winning team. Points are subtracted for not competing in an event for which a team has registered.

Sponsors for activities and events include the UAB special activities committee and various residence halls. Activities yet to come include the bobsled and ice skating party sponsored by Roach Hall, with music and refreshments at the Deloitte ice rink at 7 p.m. tonight

February 9, 1984. So fare Sarajevo, but fun for all

by Amy Schroeder

With the winds of winter still martial outside, it may be hard to turn your thoughts to spring break. Nonetheless, several students have already begun making plans for the vacation which lasts until March 18.

While Florida still remains the most popular vacation spot for students, many are considering alternatives such as camping, skiing or even traveling a few days in a city such as Chicago or Minneapolis.

For those lucky students are even planning vacations in the Bahamas and Mexico.

If you haven’t made plans for your break yet, there are a variety of trips being offered through campus organizations.

If you favor the sunshine and beaches, UAB is sponsoring an eight-day Daytona getaway. For $219 you can participate in deep sea fishing or explore Daytona at minimal additional costs. Or you can just spend your days lying on the beach. But hurry, there are only 62 vacations left.

For those of you who still like the heat but prefer a more rugged getaway, Trip-U.S. will take you skiing in the mountains or exploring Disney world for $295. For $100 you can experience eight days of cross country skiing and winter camping in beautiful Yellowstone Park. The price includes transportation, gear rental and joining the fun.

For those students who plan on spending their break in Wisconsin or are planning their own vacation, there are activities committee and the rink tonight and grab downh hill skiing, Ski Club will be venturing off to Salt Lake City, Utah, for nine days as the Blue Range Wilderness, Mazatala or Gulliver. There will also be special rental deals with Rec. Services for camping and backcountry skiing. If you favor the snow and given to the Olympic games. Duran Duran said they didn't want it to look like "the money and run" type of sponsorship. Duran Duran was picked by the Coca Cola Company because of their clean-cut, youthful image.

The month of February will follow tradition this year and once again will be a slow month in the release of big name albums. The major acts set to release albums this month will be The Alan Parsons Project—Ammonia Avenue; Golden Earring—N.E.W.S.; and Queen's first Capital release following a decade on Elektra entitled Works.

Others will include: Thompson Twins—Into the Gap; Madness—Keep Moving; Modern English—Rushchel Days; and Simple Minds—Sparkle in the Rain. Students seek adventure elsewhere March 10-18

by Paul T. Gaertner

All the talk that revolved around Michael Jackson during 1983 was sure to have some consequence. Outside of the major Jackson hit, some one awards, Michael Jackson took the most prestigious award of them all. The top pop album of 1983 was Michael Jackson's Thriller album. As mentioned in an earlier article, it was possible for the Thriller album to surpass the Saturday Night Fever soundtrack. If it did surpass the Saturday Night Fever album, it would move into second place on the all-time list of number-one albums. As suspected, the Thriller album has sold back to number one position, and at press time the album had logged 28 weeks at number one.

That put it second only to Fleetwood Mac's Racer album. A faint dream now has the chance to become a reality. There seems to be nothing to stop Thriller from remaining at number one for four more weeks. Just this week, the single Thriller was released and is sure to break the top 10 almost immediately. With that, the album may be the first since '77 and '78 that an album has remained at the number one position for more than 33 weeks.

Don't be surprised if you see giant Coke banners hanging around the Duran Duran stages during their present tour of the U.S. It has been announced that the Coca Cola Company has struck a deal with the super group. The deal, however, is not like most sponsorships. In a few key cities around the nation, Coke will sponsor a Coke can recycling drive. High schools in these cities will participate, the winner will receive a personal visit from Duran Duran and receive a video recorder presented by the group.

This is where the sponsorship becomes different. All the money collected will be given to the Olympic games. Duran Duran said they didn't want it to look like "the money and run" type of sponsorship. Duran Duran was picked by the Coca Cola Company because of their clean-cut, youthful image.

Newfound respect leads to jobs

by Susan Gorzelski

Both UWSP's overseas programs and its foreign student programs have gained wide respect. Now, with M.T.V. and the American Association of Foreign Students, students have had the opportunity for the first time to be overseas and not have to be overwhelmed by the hospitality of the Taiwanese," she said, "and promised themselves they would be more aware of foreign students when they returned. Unfortunately, they found few structures at home to help them.

The NAFSA grant is designed to create these structures which will make cooperation easier. Those that feel it is possible to create a model that may be useful in other schools.

Basically, the grant funds a student position for one year. The people who get the job will locate and organize ways for foreign students and UWSP students and organizations to work together.

OK, okay already. Sheesh, I know I'm back. And no, I didn't forget that both your team and the referee Bob had promised never to play your favorite game again—at least not in Pointe'r Mag. But the truth of the matter is that comic book factory isn't all it was drawn up to be. So be it. The skeletons of youth (or) A bone to pick

by Tim Kartwell

There is something on my mind; it is a story, a story of how I was not a monkey on my back.

I read him Tarzan stories, distorting them to make Chees-tah sound like the hero. Still he screams, and I know now that the ripest Cheeta will not quiet him.

But it is not a monkey on my mind; it is a story, a story of how I was not a monkey on my back.

My story is not entirely true, and there will be those who will rise up against me for sharing it, as they have always done with their lives as it is; people walking through high grass do not want to hear of snakes. Still, this tale must be told.

I dreamed my story carved in stone for eternal fame, for the benefit of future generations. People, however small enough rock, I have decided to try to write it down so it can be laminated and in that way preserved for posterity.

The man was picking his nose and "eating it"; that's right, mining his nose for edible emeralds. I do not mean to be offensive; that is truly what he was doing.

For many young children, picking their noses is the normal follow-up to nose-picking. The whole act is stereotypical of the growing pains of youth which will later hang in many adults' closets. Oh sure, I remember one heavyset lady who claimed she had never picked her nose as a girl. She had said it at a pool-side cocktail party, loudly, apparently quite convincingly.

Her husband had quickly interjected-"Hey mom," he said to his searched everywhere. She had gone over dark corners of the very beginning by the habit for the better part of this period, his mother spent looking up from his newspaper.

"Yes, dear, what is it?

"It's your son, look at him.

Thanks no, I've seen him. He is just absolutely the cutest little boy you ever saw. He is the kind of baby that brings a tear to your eye," she said, not letting go.

"What's wrong, you little bugger?" he said.

"He's got a cold," she complained. "He had the flu. He must be getting better.

"What's getting better," I asked. "The flu?"

"No, about Seame Street. Could he have learned it from that bird?"

He couldn't have seen Big Bird picking his nose. Honey managed, "Big Bird's always got his hand up in his nose."

The boy was crying, hungered, not wanting to be left in their care. He had gone back into his cage.

The boy had slammed down on a box of Chee-tahs. She had shouted angrily, "Don't say that she was ugly."

"I'm not saying she was ugly," I shouted. "I'm just saying she was ugly.

"What do you think?"

"I'm not saying she was ugly."

"I'm dying."

"No, about Seame Street. Could he have learned it from that bird?"

He couldn't have seen Big Bird picking his nose. Honey managed, "Big Bird's always got his hand up in his nose."

The boy was crying, hungered, not wanting to be left in their care. He had gone back into his cage.

He hadn't got a nose. Honey didn't know that, he was just guessing. "You're choking me," he gasped.

"Maybe it's not Seame Street. But the only other TV you watch are old "Timmy and Lassie" re-runs. Timmy wouldn't ever do such a thing, but Lassie..."

"...hasn't got the manual dexterity for it. Please, sir, take me to the toilet. I want to brush my teeth."

Face it, Morris."

Well, readers now you can see why she is so much of a woman. She's dealing with one of the most difficult tasks of her life."

Her face was crimson, like a big red firecracker about to burst.

"She'd never let go if I didn't just come and make her.

"She let go, not really sure why.

The boy was still doing it, obviously having one of his better days.

"Make him stop."

"Tell him about it-" she whispered into his ear-"pin-worms. But be delicate."

Honey coughed, then shook his newspaper to straighten out. "Dear Abby," he said, "I want to recover first, "he said to his wife.

The boy's nose vanished and his breath "Like the smell of money."

"Except bigger."

He saw the effect he was having on the boy and decided to play it for what it was worth. "Can he go for biting your fingernails and for chewing on your toenails."

He was on a roll and would have added lying, skipping school and skimming the cookie jar, but the boy had shot out of the room, off to brush his teeth.

"Don't forget to flush," his mother called after him.

The problem solved, the woman went into the living room, Honey laid his hand against the back of the chair and sighed, relieved that the dragon had gone back into her cage. The lamplight directly above him aggravated his tired eyes. To block it, he raised the crumpled paper and brought "Dear Abby" down on his face-"I'm not touching that garbage!"

So, the little boy quit eating his bugs. He did, however, continue to pick his nose for some time thereafter-always got his hand up in his nose." Even in pain, honey had a sense of humor.

"How about the filthy guy who lives in the garbage can, then?"

"Hasn't got a nose."

Honey didn't know that, he was just guessing. "You're choking me," he gasped.

If you had the chance to interview the faces of the election figure, would you think you might see a “little stuffy” by name of Doug Newsom? Probably. However, that wasn’t the case when NBC News Correspondent Kevin Kiker came to campus for a press conference on Tuesday, February 7th. In fact, Kiker was a very down-to-earth individual. He talked, drank his coffee, chain-smoked his cigarettes, and talked some more.

As he addressed a group of communication students, Kiker was asked questions like: what kind of advice would you give to people who want a career in broadcasting? He responded by saying he felt it was “terrifically” important to study the basics while you’re in school. “By this I mean English grammar and history.” He added that thinking clearly and being able to express oneself is very important.

When asked for his opinion about the quality of news today, Kiker said he was not impressed with the quality of local TV news reporting or network correspondence. He gave exception to stations that “commit themselves to spend money on coverage and... have excellent news directors.” In Kiker’s opinion, “We’re also working for the election of Republican Senators to U.S. Congress.” Diane said, “We’re not focusing all of our energy solely on the presidential campaign. As a special project, we’ve adopted a Marine in Lebanon and are sending him Care packages and letters.” Diane also announced that the group is sponsoring Kevin Hermening, former Irving Glidden, former Wisconsin Environmen tional Resources and the Center for International Resources and the Center for International Studies.

The Blue Devils were singing the blues after being dismantled by the Pointer basketball team last weekend.

The Pointers played extremely well on Friday night, whipping nationally No. 15 UW-Stout, 84-70, in a lopsided victory. The game was decided early in the contest as the Pointers limited UW-Stout to 35 percent shooting from the floor and 19 percent from behind the three-point line, making the Blugolds’ six-star offense and defense appear ordinary. The Pointers dominated UW-Stout, outscoring the Blugolds 24-9 in the first half and withstanding a late surge by UW-Stout in the second half.

The Pointers opened the game with a 10-0 run, hitting 9 of 11 shots from the field, including three three-pointers. UW-Stout was held scoreless for nearly four minutes as the Pointers took a 10-0 lead.

The Pointers outscored UW-Stout 10-4 in the first five minutes of the second half, extending their lead to 61-44. The Blugolds made a run in the second half, pulling within 73-67. However, the Pointers were able to maintain their lead, making 24 of 30 free throws in the final 10 minutes.

The Pointers were led by junior forward Ben Schmitt, who scored a career-high 31 points on 13-of-15 shooting from the field. Senior guard Tim Naegeli added 23 points on 8-of-11 shooting from the field, including four three-pointers. Junior forward Craig Hawley contributed 13 points on 5-of-8 shooting from the field, including three three-pointers.

The Blugolds were led by senior forward Jeff Dorn real, who scored a career-high 21 points on 9-of-16 shooting from the field, including three three-pointers. Junior guard Tamas Houlihan contributed 14 points on 6-of-11 shooting from the field, including two three-pointers.

The Pointers outrebounded the Blugolds 41-33, limiting UW-Stout to 13 of 24 field goals and hitting 12 of 24 free throws. The Blugolds made just five of 15 field goals and 10 of 18 free throws.

The Pointers outscored the Blugolds 41-33 in the second half, with 11 of 19 field goals and 13 of 17 free throws. The Blugolds made just five of 10 field goals and 4 of 5 free throws.

The Pointers outscored the Blugolds 41-33 in the second half, with 11 of 19 field goals and 13 of 17 free throws. The Blugolds made just five of 10 field goals and 4 of 5 free throws.

The Pointers came away with the victory, improving to 7-2 overall and 4-1 in conference play. The Blugolds fell to 4-5 overall and 3-2 in conference play.

The Pointers shot 54 percent from the floor and 33 percent from behind the three-point line. The Blugolds shot 42 percent from the floor and 26 percent from behind the three-point line.

The Pointers were able to control the game from the start, outscoring the Blugolds 41-33 in the first half. They limited the Blugolds to 13 of 24 field goals and hitting 12 of 24 free throws. The Blugolds made just five of 15 field goals and 10 of 18 free throws.

Believe it or not, there is a flip side, a serious side to Al McGuire. So we'll drop and talk a minute about something that's been on my mind for some time, sort of nagging like the water faucet that drips in the night, or the headache that gets a little worse each day until you finally reach for the aspirin. I really think it's time for the presidents of the universities to take a firmer hold on the whole college sports world where monies and the future of college athletics are concerned. Cut across all the lines of conferences, alumni and TV to straighten out a mess that affects more nots. What we're going to young people's lives every end up with are about a year. Universities that are legit schools like Kentucky or Northern Illinois will be able to take all the money. Last year, the developing parity throughout Division I schools. There must be quality student-athletes, not scholar- ships. These kids go out and attract the bright lights and TV cameras for the school, so why shouldn't the school pay them back?

The colleges ought to be trying to help the student-athlete not just use them. Too many schools give athletic-ships, not scholar- ships. These kids go out and attract the bright lights and TV cameras for the school, so why shouldn't the school pay them back?

CBS paid $80 million to telesport the NCAA Tournament for three years. That's tremendous money, mega-dollars from the tube, and it's only far that some of those dollars be channelled back to maintain parity in Division I, and to make sure these kids get their degrees.

Lady Pointers lose two

By Chris Havel

Coming off a three-game winning streak, the UWSP women's basketball team continued the rollercoaster ride that this season is turning into by losing twice last week. The Lady Pointers suffered setbacks at Green Bay last Wednesday night by the score of 72-63 and at home Friday against Parkside 63-58.

UW-Green Bay streaked to a 46-34 halftime lead and maintained a control the rest of the way. Pointer Coach Ronnie Gehling felt that her team's ability to play against a strong Green Bay squad wasn't that bad. "Our overall game wasn't that bad. We played as hard as we could. We didn't receive any breaks at all, so it was hard to fight the officials. At times our failure to take Green Bay out of its running game hurt, as did their steals that turned into scores. Two other things which hurt were our free throw shooting (a horridous 22 percent) and our excessive defensive fouling. Until our centers are willing to do things our way we will continue to feel. On the positive side, I thought both Karla Miller and Donna Pivonka had real good games for us."

UWGB was led by Vicki Anklam who burned the nets for 29 points and ex-Lady Pointer Kathy Bennett who totaled 16. Sharon Reis also grabbed 7 rebounds for the Phoenix. Karla Miller pumped in 34 points and pulled down 11 rebounds to pace the Lady Pointers. Donna Pivonka added 16 points and Ann Magnin dished out 4 assists.

In a game the Lady Pointers should have put in the win column, inconsistent play down the stretch led to their 63-58 loss to Parkside. The UWSP women cagers, who were previously unbeaten at home this year, lost some of their home-court advantage when the game was moved from Berg Gym, their normal homecourt, to the Quandt Fieldhouse.

Lady Pointer Coach Gehling was not too pleased with her team's play Friday night.

"We have no excuses for this loss. Not when we led for three-quarters of the way and then gave it up. We lacked the spark and desire that we previously had and maybe left at La Crosse. Our people just missed too many easy inside shots."

UWSP was led by Regina Cost, p. 21

Bayer who scored 15 points and grabbed 11 boards. Sue Murphy and Karla Miller also got into double figures with 12 points each. respectively. Jeanne Jacobs also dropped in 11 points and 11 rebounds. Deb Ambruso also chipped in 18 points and Trace Sylvester added 10.

Men swimmers awesome again

By Phil Janus

At the Stouffers Five Season Invitational Swimming and Diving Championships in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the UWSP men's swimming team showed why they are one of the most powerful teams in the country among small schools. On the way to racking up 861 total points and a winning margin of over 100, the Pointers won thirteen of eighteen events and set four new national qualifying times.

Relay teams qualifying for the national meet, with the winning first being first were Scott Moeser, Rick Tonn, Ken Hanson and Jeff Stepanski with a 1:31.20 time in the 800 free relay with a 2:03.20 time at the 400 medley relay team of Tom Velich, Don Morse, Pete Samelson and Stepanski with a time of 3:41.14. Individual awards went to winning events and beating the national qualifying time with a 2:42.16 time in the 100 yard breaststroke with a time of 2:15.33; Samelson in the 100 and 200 backstroke with times of 55.71 and 1:56.62 respectively; Greg Schneider with a time of 1:09.3 in the 100 yard breaststroke, and Jeff Stepanski, who swam the fourth fastest time in the nation, with a 22.27 clocking in the 50 yard freestyle.

Other first place finishers were Samelson in the 100 and 200 yard fly, Samelson in the 200 individual medley, and the 200 yard medley relay team of Samelson, Morse, Johnstone and Hanson. The 200 and 400 yard medley relay team of Tom Velich, Don Morse, Pete Samelson and Stepanski with a time of 3:41.74.

In addition to the relay times and individual events, the Lady dogfish also got into double figures and grabbed 11 boards. Murphy and Karla Miller were key to the Lady dogfish third place finish in a five-team meet at UW-Milwaukee's Panther Field. The University of Marquette University won the meet with 60 points while the Pointers were second with 50 and UWSP third with 37. The Pointers were followed by UW-Stout with a score of 15.

The Pointers had four first place finishes on the day along with five second and five third place results.

Joe Gruber: Local hockey star

By Tamas Hoefelm

Fave the story about the local boy who makes good. Well, so far so good for a 1982 all-area team. At the 1982 SPASH graduate who currently leads the UWSP hockey team.

Despite a disappointing 1-1-1 team record, Gruber has played extremely well this season, scoring 11 goals and five assists for a team-high 16 points.

Joe is picking up where he left off at SPASH as he was the SPASH hockey team in scoring both his brother, Tom, a 1981 SPASH graduate who currently leads the SPASH hockey team.

Joe started playing hockey with his brother, Tom, From there he was drafted by the Panthers hockey team.

The Puget Sound Conference scoring race was led by the ‘82 championship by just one goal in five overtimes to Superior. The Grubers hockey family, as Joe’s four brothers also play hockey. His oldest brother, Don, played at SPASH and currently plays for the Panthers.

Next comes Rick, who played at SPASH, then Joe, then Randy, a junior in high school, and Kevin, a freshman, both of whom play for the Panthers.

Joe has an excellent ability to handle the puck, which is something the Panthers will have to worry about.

We are not too upset about not winning the meet since it is so early in the year,” Wilt declared.

We took a look at a large group of newcomers and also at a lot of different runners. We didn’t use many of our top people who were involved in other things over the weekend.

I was surprised with Mike Christianik and Jim Bednar in the hurdles because they lost the first time they ever ran that event. Their times were very good.

“Joe is a better player than the younger people involved as much as possible in the early part of the season. We will try to do some experimenting with everyone in the first couple of meets. We want to be ready when the conference action kicks in again,” Wilt concluded.
Skaters fall

By Tamas Hendilhas

In an extremely physical game that featured 29 penalties, the UWSP hockey team lost a hard-fought 4-1 decision to the UW-Eau Claire Blugolds Saturday night.

The first period was very even, with neither team able to score until almost 16 minutes had elapsed, when Eau Claire finally scored on its fourth power play opportunity of the period. Eau Claire stretched its lead to 3-0, scoring a short-handed goal just over four minutes into the second period. The Blugolds added another power play goal to make the score 3-0 after two periods.

The Pointers then scored a power play goal of their own, with Scott Edwards getting the goal and Bob Engelhart and Terry Burn getting assists with 11:42 to play, making the score 3-1. Eau Claire rallied back into the game, however, scoring its fourth goal of the game with under six minutes left to play.

The game was marred by several technicalities, as UWSP was whistled for 17 penalties while Eau Claire committed 12. Included among the penalties were two double minor roughing calls and one game misconduct.

Steve McCloinck had an excellent night in the net for UWSP, making 35 saves. Eau Claire goalie Tom Johnson stopped 16 shots. The Blugolds outshot the Pointers 38-17.

Pointer coach Linden Carlson praised his team's continuous improvement.

"This was a big improvement over our last game," said Carlson. (Eau Claire beat UWSP 2-1 on Thursday night). We just committed too many penalties to stay in the game. We also gave away a couple of easy goals or we would've had a good shot at winning.

"Overall I thought we had super hustle and did a lot of hard work," Carlson concluded. "The line of Terry Burn, Scott Edwards and Todd Cartwright played extremely well. Also, Steve McCloinck came on and did a really nice job of goaltending in only his second start of the season.

"We have to get more goals scoring if we're going to win, however," said Carlson. "We only have six games remaining so we have to continue to work hard and give 100 percent effort every time out the rest of the way. If we can do that, we'll continue to improve and the wins will come.

The Pointers, now 1-6-1 on the season, will host Lake Forest College in a two-game series this weekend.

Wrestlers come on strong

By Tamas Hendilhas

After a pair of tough losses in which two starters were hurt for the season, the UWSP wrestling team responded with flying colors. The Pointers defeated a strong La Crosse squad 22-22 on February 1, and then concluded the weekend with another dual meet victory and an excellent showing in the 16-team Eau Claire Tournament.

The Pointers jumped out to an 18-4 lead over La Crosse, with 118-pound Dan McManamee registering a pin in 4:57, Scott Klein winning a forfeit at 120 pounds and Scott Carlson pinning his opponent at 136 pounds in 1:26.

After two losses by decisions, Pointer All-American Dennis Giamo earned five team points with an 18-6 superior decision at 158 pounds. The win gave Giamo a 3-3 season record.

La Crosse did not give up, however, winning the next three matches to cut UWSP's lead to 24-23 with only the heavyweight match remaining.

The Pointers' Mike Kumm decided things quickly, however, pinning his opponent just 29 seconds into the match.

Pointer coach John Munson was elated with his team's gutsy performance.

"This is definitely one of the most gratifying wins in my coaching career," he stated. "We could have easily gotten down after losing our injured starters Tuesday night, but everyone rose to the occasion and contributed."

The Pointers then ended their dual meet season with a 33-15 victory over UW-Stout.

Giaimo again led the way for UWSP, pinning his opponent in 88 seconds. Also winning were Melanne at 114 pounds, Carlson at 134, John Noble at 145, Duane Keip at 177 and Kunz at heavyweight.

Munson was again pleased with the Pointers' solid performance.

"This was a very important win for us as it gave us an 8-4 dual meet record for the season," said Munson. "It has been a long time since we've recorded that kind of record."

On Saturday, the Pointers faced much tougher competition, but still managed to take sixth place in the tough Eau Claire Tournament.

Jamestown, North Dakota, won the meet, taking most of the first place finishes. St. Cloud, Minnesota, finished second, followed by UW-Platteville and UW-Whitewater. Each of those teams is currently ranked in one of the nation's polls.

Giaimo led the Pointers with a second place finish, battling his way to the finals despite the fact that five All-Americans were entered in his weight class. He was eventually defeated by the NCAA Division II runner-up of last year, John Marrett of St. Cloud.

Duane Keip earned the Pointers a fourth place finish at 177 pounds.

"This was an excellent small college tournament at this time of year," said Munson. "It was a high quality tournament with considerable more powerful teams than we have in the WSC. We were literally exhausted after this week. There were 14 hours of the tournament and we were just plain tired."

The Pointer grapplers must now prepare for the conference meet which will be held this weekend at Whitewater.

Br. Miller, cont.

The second recipient of the Brother James Miller Justice and Peace award will be announced. The recipient, who will not be able to be present, is the Rev. Joseph Walijewski of Lima, Peru, a longtime missionary priest for the La Crosse Diocese. He serves a parish of 350,000 people. About 30 percent of the parishioners are unemployed and the remainder are underemployed. He has divided the parish in five sectors, each served by at least one priest. There are 60 centers where he feeds about 10,000 children breakfast. He is planning to establish 19 more centers. The money he receives in connection with the award will go toward his food distribution program.

Father Walijewski has ties for UWSP, pinning his assignments. He is a native of Michigan.

The commemorative program will end with a reception at 5 p.m. sponsored by the Office of University Relations at UWSP. Ray Srulik of the university staff is chairing a committee planning the event. Numerous community, campus and religious organizations are assisting with the sponsorship.

Fed judge halts Project ELF work

By Dale Becker

Project ELF ground to a halt last Tuesday when Federal Judge Barbara B. Crabb issued an injunction against construction of the Navy's $300 million communications system in Northern Wisconsin and Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

In a lawsuit filed by the State of Wisconsin and Marquette County, Michigan, Federal Judge Crab ruled the Navy was not complying with the requirements of the National Environmental Protection Act because they were ignoring new studies that ELF (Extremely Low Frequency) waves might have adverse effects on humans and wildlife.

Her decision will not stop work on the transmission system in Wisconsin and Michigan but also will halt the installation of ELF transmitters on Navy submarines until a satisfactory environmental impact statement has been filed.

Robert O. Becker, a physician and consultant on biological effects of electricity, said during the 1985 trial that ELF waves and electromagnetic radiation from ordinary power lines might reduce a human's immunity to disease.

The Navy has been using an ELF transmitter near Clam Lake, Wisconsin and 28 miles of antennas since the 1970s to send coded signals to Trident nuclear missile subs. This system allows submarines to remain at safe undetectable depths unlike the old system which required subs to come near the surface in order to receive aircraft messages.

Opponents of the project claim the system's electromagnetic waves may be hazardous to wildlife and humans, will disturb large tracts of pristine forest land in Wisconsin and Michigan and is only an acceleration of the Pentagon's wish to develop a first-strike capacity for nuclear war.

Victory for anti-ELFers

By Andy Savaglia

The recent decision by Judge Barbara Crab at last Tuesday when Federal Judge Barbara B. Crab ruled the Navy was not complying with the requirements of the National Environmental Protection Act because they were ignoring new studies that ELF (Extremely Low Frequency) waves might have adverse effects on humans and wildlife.

Her decision will not stop work on the transmission system in Wisconsin and Michigan but also will halt the installation of ELF transmitters on Navy submarines until a satisfactory environmental impact statement has been filed.

Robert O. Becker, a physician and consultant on biological effects of electricity, said during the 1985 trial that ELF waves and electromagnetic radiation from ordinary power lines might reduce a human's immunity to disease.

The Navy has been using an ELF transmitter near Clam Lake, Wisconsin and 28 miles of antennas since the 1970s to send coded signals to Trident nuclear missile subs. This system allows submarines to remain at safe undetectable depths unlike the old system which required subs to come near the surface in order to receive aircraft messages.

Opponents of the project claim the system's electromagnetic waves may be hazardous to wildlife and humans, will disturb large tracts of pristine forest land in Wisconsin and Michigan and is only an acceleration of the Pentagon's wish to develop a first-strike capacity for nuclear war.

The main issue behind the Kronstedt, however, does not feel the same way about Michigan's Governor Blan- chard, whose "talk and no action" policy has been somewhat of a disappoint- ment to Project opponents. Kronstedt hopes that the decision will put Earl in a better position to push Blan- chard into action against ELF. Blanchard has been receiving a lot of static from U.P. people and all opposition to the program for his function.

The decision, though wel- come, came as a complete surprise to Kronstedt and Stop Project ELF members. "It was (a surprise), actual- ly. We had prepared nine dif- ferent statements to release to the press if we lost (the trial) and only one if we won," Kronstedt said. "Even though the plaintiffs "all felt they prepared an excellent case, they're not too high because they were taking on the Navy. "It's like fighting city hall but on a much larger scale," said Kronstedt. The group's obvious final goal - one that Kronstedt and all opposed to Project ELF now have a stronger feeling they can reach - is the cessation of all operations of ELF in the Northern Great Lakes area.

Updates: acid rain, groundwater

Acid Rain
The State's Environmental Resource Committee recently voted 3-2 to endorse a bill preventing Wisconsin's largest producers of sulfur dioxide, which is linked to acid rain, from increasing emissions.

The bill was partially based on a report by the DNR released January 6 that showed acidic levels increasing in eight states.

The bill also allows the DNR to conduct a study of effects of increased acidity on an actual lake.

Senator Joseph Strohl (D-Barron), supporter of the bill, said, "We're not asking for a reduction in sulfur dioxide, as some people would like done. It simply states, 'Let's not make the problem any worse.'"

Other senators oppose the bill, saying not enough evidence has been attained to substantiate the emissions control and that the bill may force more big business out of the state.

Ground Water

The issue of Wisconsin's ground water continues on in 1984, as two Assembly bills face more legislative action.

AB 595, the first ground water bill, has been reviewed by the Environmental Resources Committee, which is chaired by Rep. Jeff Neubauer, and recommendations on various proposals were made before the bill was sent to the Joint Finance Committee.

Because of the lengthy process needed for the passage of a bill, AB 595 probably won't reach Governor Earl's desk until the middle or late part of 1984.

The second bill, AB 686, was introduced by Senator Strohl and Representative Crawford as an alternative to AB 595. Senator Strohl has continuously argued that AB 595 is just not a strong enough bill for this state's ground water.

Some differences over the two bills include homeowner liability, Preventive Action Limits (PALs) and the establishment of a ground water monitoring fund.

Whatever bill does make it through the state Legislature, Governor Earl will probably sign it into law. The governor has often stated his views on the major importance of protecting the ground water. "Literally everything we do on the surface, and how we do it, affects ground water and you can't segregate it neatly into mining operations or landfill sites or irrigation agriculture. It's also where you put the gas station and how you grade the highways."

This means much more controversy in the public sphere—but failure to deal with it could cost jobs and futures for the residents of this area. We have already seen examples elsewhere in Wisconsin of how property values fall and how businesses avoid areas where the people have to carry their water home in a bottle."

BLACK HISTORY WEEK KICKOFF
Canfield examines motives of Wallace campaign workers

What motivated people to support and campaign for George Wallace in his 1968 third party bid for the U.S. presidency?

A political science professor at UWSP addresses the question in a new book which was written for use by students and teachers of political science.

Canfield said he discovered two "important subgroups" among the third party volunteers he studied. One subgroup was comprised of migrants from southern states who were most interested in Wallace anti-black positions. The other was made up primarily of Michiganders who reflected an ultraconservative ideology.

Wallace garnered 13 percent of the vote cast nationally in 1968, the largest for a third party candidate since Wisconsin's Robert M. "Fighting Bob" LaFollette rolled up 16 percent of the vote in 1924. Support for the American Independent Party has declined steadily in every presidential election since 1968. In fact, the party has split and the fragmented remains are "disappearing," according to Canfield.

James Canfield

The professor says Wallace's campaign workers 16 years ago were "much more extreme" in their attitudes than the average Wallace voter.

treated the same as the other state's union employees. The very heart of the quality and tradition of the UW System is our tradition of faculty governance. This governance system also brings students and citizens, through the Board of Regents, into the most basic decisions regarding the operation of the university.

The bill would remove the UW Board of Regents, our tradition of faculty governance and the students from critical decisions affecting the university and replace them with the collective bargaining process and union negotiators.

The campaign is being directed by union leaders who desperately want collective bargaining for the faculty and academic staff of the UW System for one reason only: they need the millions of dollars of union dues that university faculty and staff could potentially pay to the financially troubled union.

A wicked harvest
To the Editor:
All over the world people dig their hearts deep into the sterile sand of hate and greed. And nuclear weapons are the harvest.

this week's highlight

Friday, February 10

FILM AT ELEVEN—This Minneapolis-based dance band kicks off the UWSP's "Snowlympics" at 9 p.m. in the Encore Room of the UC. With a "New Wave Top Forty" playlist that includes tunes from a variety of performers from David Bowie to Prince, Film at Eleven promises an electrifying show. This is not your run-of-the-mill, bus-band league. This quintet has opened for nationally-known acts like Juice Newton, Nicolette Larson and the Ramones. Normally, you'd expect to pay five, even six, dollars to see a band like this. But, if you act before midnight Friday you can see this exciting band for only $1. Brought to you by UAB, not K-461.
