Welcome to 1984
As one who holds the protection of the U.S. Constitution's First Amendment dear, both as a journalist and citizen, my editorial decision to censor an ad intended for the Pointer Magazine for deep, personal convictions was very disconcerting. Although I believe firmly in my decision, I also feel a responsibility to explain it as fully as possible.

Two weeks ago, I received a request from the Madison office of Dr. Ivan Jovanovic, a specialist in gynecology and obstetrics, to run a small display ad for the Madison Family Planning Clinic. The ad offered "Abortions, first and second trimester—low cost for students—specialist in gynecology" and gave both a phone number and address.

I was faced with a difficult decision. Should I cling to my strong beliefs in the guarantees of the First Amendment and run the ad, or should I allow my personal moral convictions on this highly controversial topic to predominate? Because the abortion issue involves profound questions concerning the nature and origins of human life, I chose to follow my conscience and withhold the ad. I do so without regrets.

The controversy over abortion continues to rage because we have failed to solve fundamental moral, theological, and philosophical questions on the nature and origins of human life. At one who believes human life begins at conception and should be protected until death, the decision not to run the ad was morally compelling. However, for every person concurring in my judgment there are others strangely opposed to it.

For many, the controversy surrounding the legalization of abortion was settled by the U.S. Supreme Court's landmark 1973 decision in Roe vs. Wade. The High Court held that:

1.) Abortions may not be banned in the first trimester of a pregnancy.

2.) Beyond the first three months, states may regulate abortions using methods reasonably relating to maternal health.

3.) States may prohibit abortions in the final 10 weeks.

Subsequent Court decisions, including one striking down a restrictive Akron, Ohio, ordinance last June, have affirmed a woman's right to an abortion. As in Roe vs. Wade, these rulings have relied on a contrived Right of Privacy that is allegedly contained within the "penumbras" of the Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause. Justices in the majority have held this right extends to a woman's choice whether to have an abortion or not.

Some have felt the Court overstepped its judicial bounds in ruling in Roe vs. Wade and related cases. Others, such as myself, feel the High Court simply arrived at the wrong decision. Indeed, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, the only woman on the Court, disagreed with the premises of Roe and expressed her feelings in a dissent to the Akron decision.

"In Roe, the Court held that although the state had an important and legitimate interest in protecting potential life, that interest could not become compelling until the point at which the fetus was viable. The difficulty with this analysis is clear: potential life is no less potential in the first weeks of pregnancy than it is at viability or afterward."

Following O'Connor's reasoning to its logical conclusion, the Right to Privacy would apply to unborn infants as well. If justice means anything, it means the fundamental right of those unable to defend and retain their basic human rights against the assault of those who wish to violate their privacy.

The U.S. Center for Disease Control claims there were 1,251,921 legal abortions in this country during 1979. Add to this number the illegal abortions, and the numbers easily match the 1.5 million total abortions counted in a survey by the Allen Guttmacher Institute. For those believing in life from conception, these figures represent more than cold numbers—they are children killed largely for the sake of convenience by a "throw-away" society. It has been a silent holocaust larger and just as morally repugnant as the Holocaust carried out by Nazi Germany. For abortion supporters, Roe ended the distressing nightmares of medically unsafe abortions and saved countless lives of already living women.

The many treatises written on abortion have failed to adequately answer the salient questions inherent in this controversy. This editorial can do no more than explain the reasoning behind an editorial decision.

This weekend, I slowly tied a red ribbon around an old tree in my neighborhood to protest the 11th anniversary of the Roe decision. It was meant to parallel the display of yellow ribbons exhibited during the incarceration and return of the 52 American hostages in Iran. The hostages returned safely. The millions of infants killed in legalized abortions will never have that luxury.

UWSP receives lifestyle grant

UWSP has received one of seven grants given in this country by the Metropolitan Life Foundation for the promotion of healthier lifestyles.

The foundation has set aside $100,000 to be used in the development of programs to increase students' awareness of health-related behavior. UWSP will receive $7,500 to design a microcomputer program which measures a person's probable lifetime expectancy based on lifestyle factors.

According to Joseph Opas, director of the Institute for Lifestyle Improvement at UWSP and administrator of the grant project, the software will be made available as an educational tool for students.

Currently UWSP uses a Lifestyle Assessment Questionnaire which is administered only to freshmen at a cost of $7 each. Opas says the new computer program will be less expensive to use and more accessible to all members of the university community.

This is the first in a series of health inventories which will be designed and implemented at UWSP, Opas predicts.

Other campuses chosen to have programs funded are Creighton University, Omaha, Nebraska; Ohio State University, Columbus; University of Illinois at Chicago; University of New Mexico, Albuquerque; UW-Whitewater, Wisconsin; and Penn State, Pennsylvania.

"For many college students who are experiencing their first real independence, taking responsibility for their health is low on their list of priorities," says Gary Jacobson, foundation president. "We are delighted that these universities have developed thoughtful and imaginative programs which offer students opportunities to develop sound health habits." UWSP has long been nationally known as a "wellness center." One of its annual events is a Wellness Promotion Strategies Workshop held on campus each summer. It is attended by health experts and hundreds of participants from throughout the U.S.

Other related programs developed at UWSP include the lifestyle assessment questionnaire which is marketed internationally and the serving of a "wellness menu" in the university food centers.

Opas, former health promotion director for Hennepin County, Minn., was appointed to the newly created position of executive director of the UWSP Institute for Lifestyle Improvement in the fall of 1982.

The institute provides health promotion services to public and private agencies, conducts research on lifestyle improvement activities and provides continuing education and training programs.

Opas holds a master's degree in education from Kent State University and a Ph.D. in higher education studies from the University of Minnesota.

Last fall he was the keynote speaker at the annual convention of the Illinois Association of Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Dance in Springfield, Ill. He made a recent presentation about setting up wellness programs to the National Association for Fitness in business conference in Washington, D.C., and spent three days last summer at California State University at Fresno as a consultant.

Mrs. Mary K. Croft has been appointed to serve the next year as acting dean of academic support programs at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

She succeeds Burdette W. Eagon, who retired on Jan. 13 after serving UWSP since 1959.

Eagon has spent nearly all of his life as either a researcher or purveyor of education. He has served UWSP for exactly one-third of a century, and in the process may have set a record in the number of different positions he filled.

His most recent title has been dean of academic support programs which has included administering the Albertson Learning Resources Center.

Mrs. Croft has been on the university faculty for 11 years and holds the titles of associate professor of English and director of the Writing Lab, which she founded more than a decade ago. Last year she was a writing specialist on the English faculty who has had a considerable amount of his work published, will be the acting director of the Writing Lab during Mrs. Croft's absence from that faculty.

Patrick McDonough, vice chancellor for academic affairs, announced the selection of Mrs. Croft after seeking advice of health experts and hundreds of participants from throughout the U.S.

A national search will begin soon, the vice chancellor reported, to find a permanent successor to Eagon. McDonough expects it will take about one year before the process can be completed and the new official can begin the duties.

Few women in the past have served in such a high administrative post at UWSP as Mrs. Croft is assuming.

One of the most prestigious recognitions of her past work was her selection in 1978 by Change Magazine as one of the 20 most effective teachers in the fields of biology, English and political science in American higher education. The award was for her work in helping students improve their writing skills.

She holds degrees from the University of Chicago and is the co-author of "The Writing Laboratory," published by Scott, Foresman and Company which came off the presses in 1982 as one of the first texts of its kind.

In her new position, she is responsible for operations of the Albertson Learning Resources Center, Writing Lab, University Archives, Student Assistance Center, Reading and Studies Skills Lab, New Student Programs and PRIDE.

A major activity in her area during 1984 will be start of construction on an approximate $2 million addition to the Learning Resources Center.

Bids are expected to be opened on March 15 with construction under way at the beginning of the fall of 1984.

"Haircraft," in the lower level of the University Center is having a workshop on Saturday, March 26, in the salon to work on black hair. Russell Brown, the owner of "Genesis," one of Milwaukee's leading salons will be instructing the workshop.

The workshop is sponsored by the Black Coalition and Haircraft. Models are being furnished through the Black Coalition.

Writers: Pointer Magazine needs you

In keeping with the Orwellian spirit engendered by the new law, allow the Pointer Magazine to assume the role of Big Brother for a moment and question you will be spending your idle time this semester. Will you watch your free hours disappear into the violent castarling vacuously at television reruns that were already boring the first time they were aired? Of course not.

The Pointer Magazine is looking for skilled, energetic writers willing to join our hard-working staff. Unfortunately, we only have a limited number of openings for paid reporters. However, there is still a way you can become an aspiring Joe Ros­

Reader says show controversy

John Savagian and the Pointer staff:

I have become intrigued by the exchange of fire between yourself and those on this campus who oppose your point of view. As you are, I am of the conviction that the form of government this — or any — country has, must not go unchallenged. Criticism fosters thought; thought hopefully results in action taken to better that government.

Personally, my political beliefs lean toward the idea of social democracy. I communicate this so that you do not equate me with the Republicans on campus, although I know of Mr. Hull, et. al.

Although I enjoy seeing political activism on this campus, you, as an agent of the only paper at the University must recognize — and communicate — the fact that there are two sides to this controversy. Certainly unwarranted aggression is not a desirable element in a democracy. Unfortunately, our country has participated in it in the past; witness the Bay of Pigs, etc. However, the fact must be recognized that we are not playing a game with someone who plays fair. We are diametrically opposed to his point of view, or at least his political views;

I believe President Reagan acted correctly in acting forcefully to protect our interests in the Caribbean. Although the justification of our aggression is, in some instances questionable, invading Granada was not unjustified.

I will not play the fallacious game of “guilt by association” with you. I do, however, criticize you in that you do not give so much of a hint of where you get your information. I find it remarkable that I can read Time, Newsweek, the Christian Science Monitor, the Wall Street Journal, the New York Times, the Milwaukee Journal and Sentinel, etc., but I do not find anywhere very much factual information supporting your viewpoints.

My charge to you and your paper is to supply an opposing point of view, or at least supply the sources you use to support your opinions. That is an essential element of journalism. Anything less is tacky propaganda.

Hull clarifies survey

By Scott Hull

The purpose of the Dec. 1 (P.M. Vol. 27, No. 17) article on student voting trends was simply to report survey results, not to make an editorial statement. A follow-up article was written for the next issue, but the author's academic commitments prevented him from typing it in time for publication.

The computer used to tabulate the survey results generated age intervals that were printed in the Dec. 1 article. Unfortunately, these intervals were misinterpreted. The correct graph follows:

MIDDLE OF INTERVAL NUMBER

<tr>
<th>Age Interval</th>
<th>Number</th>

"No one between 51 and 66 participated in the survey."

The number of students eligible to vote in 1980 may be obtained by comparing this graph with the results from the question, "Did you vote in 1980?" Any individual 20 years of age or older, 103 total, were eligible to vote in the 1980 presidential election.

The number of ineligible voters, 97 total, can be obtained by subtracting the number of eligible voters, 103, from the total of 200 persons surveyed. The number of ineligible voters all came from the age bracket 17-20.

Curiously, one 17-year-old, three 18-year-olds, two 19-year-olds, and three 20-year-olds claimed to have voted in the 1980 presidential election when they were between the ages of 14 and 17, respectively. Unfortunately, these nine participants misunderstood the question."Did you vote in 1980?"... and gave false answers.

Tenure case still an issue, Coe

By Laura Sternowski

UWSP assistant professor of social work Susan Coe is "still expecting some action" in her tenure case, but is unsure what that action will be. On Dec. 9, the UW Board of Regents decided not to hold a hearing in her case. Coe said that although the board decided against holding a formal hearing, her case wasn't over, and the regents could still act on it.

"I could end up with a job, or I could end up with court action," she said. The Dept. of Sociology and Anthropology had recommended Coe for tenure in the spring. However, the dean of letters and sciences and Chancellor Marshall overruled the recommendation because the department already had more than its share of tenured faculty according to the tenure density policy. "Did you vote in 1980?"... and gave false answers.

Coe claimed that this policy had not been established when she was hired in 1976 and later when it was established, its effect hadn't been explained to her.

The Board of Regents' next meeting is set for Feb. 10. Coe doubted the regents would take any action in her case before that meeting.

McDonough resigns

The rumors concerning the possible resignation of UWSP Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Patrick McDonough have been confirmed according to UWSP Chancellor Marshall.

In a telephone interview with the Pointer Magazine, Marshall confirmed that McDonough will leave his post on June 30, 1984, to join the Kellogg Foundation, at private, philanthropic organization.

Watch next week's Pointer Magazine for more complete story.

Communication gets new status

The status of the instructional program in communication at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point has been elevated from a department to a division. Paul Piclonbo, dean of the College of Fine Arts, said the change was a move to signify the growth and importance of the communication department.

The change also affected the position of Myrvin Christopherson who has been chairman of the communication department for the past 13 years. He has been promoted to associate dean of the College of Fine Arts and at the same time he will continue to head the communication division.

As associate dean, Christopherson has been given broader responsibilities within the college of fine arts. "His experience will be of great help to me," Palombi said. He added that an associate dean was needed to assist him in his duties and responsibilities. There was no associate dean in the College of Fine Arts until this promotion of Christopherson.

Communication is the largest academic program within the college of fine arts.

Christopherson said the enrollment also is one of the largest among undergraduate communication programs in this part of the country. It currently attracts more than 600 students and it continues to grow. The faculty includes about 30 full and part-time members and together they have made this campus "one of the major centers for the study of communication in the Midwest," Christopherson added.

Several new positions are planned that are expected to attract even more students, he said.

New courses and laboratory programs are being developed in journalism to improve both listening and speaking skills. The public and teachers both on and off campus will be invited to participate. Video-taping equipment will be available for self-evaluation.

A proposal for a research project being investigated is an institute in which the faculty would provide special services to businesses, industries and governmental agencies.

With growing ties linking communication and business-economics divisions, suggestions to explore a new communication and business degree program are being pursued. Students in the fields of business and management would have opportunities to do more specialized work in communication.

With the recent approval of a new undergraduate major in computer information systems, the communication

More than 1984: Class examines Orwell

By Lee Barres

English Dept.

Charles Rumsey, of the History Department, and I are jointly teaching a class in the life and writings of George Orwell, a pseudonym for the English writer Eric Blair (1903-1950). Students may enroll for either History 391, Sections 3 or 4, or for English 385, Section 1. The class meets Wednesday evenings from 6:30 to 9:00. The subject seems quite appropriate for an interdisciplinary class involving the departments of History and English, since Orwell's writing so closely parallels events of the 20th century history.

The class will examine in chronological order Orwell's life and a number of his novels and essays. While the novel 1984 has had much attention with the end of the year 1984, but many other novels and essays that Orwell wrote are worth reading. Orwell became one of the 20th century's great prose stylists. In addition his less well-known works shed much light on many aspects of our times. His novel Burmese Days is one of the relatively few works of fiction by major writers that deal with the British empire. Such novels as Keep the Aspisditer Flying, A Clergyman's Daughter, and Coming Up for Air are noteworthy treatments of a variety of 20th century themes. Animal Farm is probably second only to 1984 as a satire on the hypocrisy of the communist state. Several of Orwell's essays have been reprinted again and again, not only for their qualities of style, but for their content. One of the best 20th century life-capital punishment is A Hanging. This is a description of some of the 20th century's most tragic aspects, it seems likely that it will still capture the reader. To read, in this respect, the conclusion of the book, the characteristics of theOld Testament literary tradition of the western world that might go unobserved in 1984 will be read after 1984! If the book is regarded, not as a prophecy, but as Nineteen eighty-three was a year marked by political crises and technological "firsts." In August, Yuri Andropov was suspiciously absent from many Soviet TV broadcasts, the space shuttle made four flights, and Americans killed their own students in Lebanon.

Lebanon

On Oct. 23, 241 U.S. Marines were killed when a truck loaded with explosives crashed into and destroyed U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut, Lebanon.

Nine Americans were killed and 144 wounded during the U.S. invasion of Grenada. President Reagan had ordered the invasion to remove a Marxist and Cuban-backed government from power and to rescue American students there.

On April 19, a suicide-bomber destroyed the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, killing 63 people, including 17 Americans.

The Reagan administration continued military and economic support to El Salvador's government.

Philippine opposition leader Benigno S. Aquino was assassinated at Manila International Airport in August.

On Oct. 10, an earthquake struck eastern Turkey. The quake measured 7.1 on the Richter scale, leveled 147 villages, and killed 1,336.

Flight 007

Korean Airlines Flight 007 was shot down by Soviet fighters after it entered Soviet air space on Sept. 1. All 269 passengers and crew were killed.

More than 200,000 West German anti-nuke demonstrators formed a 66-mile human chain in October to protest the installation of nine Pershing II missiles. Afterward in Geneva, the Soviets walked out of arms reduction talks, announcing plans to increase their nuclear arsenal.

Menachem Begin was re-elected as prime minister of Israel. Margaret Thatcher won re-election, entitling her to an official invitation to visit the country in response.

Congress passed 1,201 laws during the year, a number that established a national holiday in honor of Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

United Council

United Council delegates voted unanimously to remove Scott Bentley from office. The council elected Sue Zirlock to replace Bentley as U.C. president.

Miss Stevens Point

By Trudy Stewart

The Miss Stevens Point Pageant, scheduled to take place in March, has recently run into some problems about the question of promotional funding that have developed into a controversy over the value of such events.

John Collier, general chairman of the 1984 pageant sponsored by the Stevens Point Area Jaycees, explained that after a period of 10 years, the pageant had been resurrected in order to provide a representative from our area for promotional purposes. As the capacity of chairperson, Collier stated that he submitted a request in the amount of $700 to the city Finance Committee for funds from the 1984 carryover budget to cover the cost of housing the judges and the special guest.

Hansen continued, "Not only do the contestants have the opportunity to display their talents and intelligence and to gain self-confidence. They also receive that special counseling in areas that include grooming, make-up, poise and speech."

The funds from the city came.

Confessions about a college student's winter break

By Kim Jacobsson

I've got to say this—winter enthusiasts, I apologize, but I must get this off my chest. I hate winter! I mean what's so fun about it anyway? In the first place, it does seem to me that the weather reaches a chilling //7 below zero; however, one factor dipping to 75 below. The days are cloudy, the nights; the temperature of daylight fades into the darkness of night.

There were other things besides the fact that the break failed in Jronany and January, probably two of the most useless months of the year except for February, which is the ultimate snow month.

Why do we get a shorter break anyway? Couldn't we just get until the third of March, you know, a week or so earlier in the spring? Hey, if this break ever does take place in June, I would have had a great time. As it turned out, in February and March, I averaged about 12 hours of sleep a night. I have been there, and I have seen this first hand. I averaged about 12 hours of sleep a day, and the only exercise I got was getting off the couch, walking to the television, flipping the channels from one station to another, and walking back to the couch. It was completely exhilarating. But my other conclusion persevered, I still had bad days. I was going to read Orwell's 1984. It's only appropriate since the year began, and now I'm reading about Orwell's 1984. I average about 12 hours of sleep a night. I have been there, and I have seen this first hand. I averaged about 12 hours of sleep a day, and the only exercise I got was getting off the couch, walking to the television, flipping the channels from one station to another, and walking back to the couch. It was completely exhilarating. But my other conclusion persevered, I still had bad days.

Barbie Dolls and sounding nails into Marie Oomand, that is their concern, mine is that in the future any group may feel that they are entitled to put the touch on tax money, the city's budget. Roy Scorsa, Girl Scouts, Operation Bootstrap or any charities, we should not support private enterprise.

In regard to the pageant's benefit to the community, Bullis said that he felt that the tax money would be better spent on programs able to a larger segment of the city—since pageant participation is restricted to "near-perfect, single females between the ages of 17 and 26."

But the pageant coordinator, Beth Hannah, disagreed with Bullis' view. She contends that the funding is a valued promotional talent and intelligence and to gain self-confidence. They also receive that special counseling in areas that include grooming, make-up, poise and speech.

1983, a year of "flashy" flicks

By Jill Fassbinder

Movies are one of America's favorite forms of entertainment and the year 1983 brought some of the most entertaining, trendsetting and controversial films our subject matter seemed to cover. A majestic dimension found in Carnes Peak

By Steve Slack

We were flatlanders. Our little kingdom was a city, except moving left to right across our books in academia and the level Wisconsin horizon, banks and track. People eventually settled down and pleasantly contemplated this colorful mountain realm, splashed with a warm August sunshine, marveling of Forests, and Prof. Pe- ter Wood, Seldick College, met us at the Revelateko de- pad and took us all to Dean's since the train was hours late and we needed to make new plans. We decided to stay in town and let our lar- vel bodies find legs and breathe mountain air after our lovely, but long, ride. The next day we got fresh food and last-minute sup- plies, said goodbye to the Mountains, and drove over two heavily-loaded trucks 30 miles north along the Columb- sia River to Carnes Creek smoke rose from the burning hills of slash. Tiny yellow Cables below circled in on the last remaining islands of trees where the moose had wintered. As far as you could see up and down the valley, the blue and once mighty Columbia, still safe in its ageless bed, wound un- aware through this smoking bomb site. The loggers were just cleaning up. Another bucket of concrete dropped into the form. This October, the energetic Columbia will be stopped dead and rolled back on itself until it reaches soon grew tired from the cal- cinations of scanning up and down this vertical mountain world we glided through on the train. And there were still six more hours of moun- tains before we reached Re- velateko, where we would embark on our three-week expedition to Carnes Peak in the Selkirk Mts. of south- eastern British Columbia. Though we had been devour- ing the scenery for hours, our appetites were never satis- fied, so we found ways to prop our heads on various limbs and objects in very creative ways to reduce neck strain. At first we had been excited, pointing, laughing, oozing, crossing the aisle at the second runnerup Gary Wescott, reports that this fall at UWSP was the only play chosen from universities throughout Wisconsin to compete in Rockford, Ill. in January. Forty-three schools from Wisconsin and Illinois sought a berth in the regional con- test, and of those, five Illi- nos universities and UWSP were selected to perform at Rockford College.

For the second consecutive year, a drama production from UWSP has been chosen for regional competition by the American College Thea- tre Association. Arthur Miller's "The Cru­ cible," directed by faculty member Thomas F. Nevins and staged this fall at UWSP, was the only play chosen from universities throughout Wisconsin to compete in Rockford, Ill. in January. The controversy culmi- nated in a phone-in discus- sion broadcast by WSPT on Sunday night, Jan. 22, fea- tuning coordinator Beth Han- sen, Chairperson John Col- lins, Alderman Roger Bullis and Alderman Joel Mahvic. General Manager at WSPT, Gary Scott, reports that the calls the station received were about 50 percent in fa- vor of the pageant, with only a couple completely opposed to it. The remainder of the callers expressed opposition to the use of tax money to fund the pageant.

UAB Special Events (We Just Want To Have Fun)
By Chris Celichowski

Although last night’s game against UW-Oshkosh was played at home, the Pointer basketball team was short two sons, as Dick Bennett checked into Heartbreak Hotel after their trip to Overtime was waylaid by a questionable goal-tending call made as time ran out. It gave the Warhawks a 62-60 victory.

Warhawk forward Jim Wilson was credited with the winning tally on a basket in interference call allegedly on the Pointer’s Dave Schlundt. The controversial call drew chants of “Bullst!” from the partisan Stevens Point crowd and made Pointer Coach Bennett so angry he had to be restrained by several persons as the referees quite the Quandt Fieldhouse.

“There’s no way I’m going to accept that as anything but a ridiculous call that cost us a ballgame,” said Bennett in a post-game interview. He apologized for his behavior after the game, terming it “inexcusable.” However, as he later pointed out, the game never should have come down to a questionable call.

After trailing 11-10 with 12:07 to play in the first half, the Warhawk offense got in high gear and outscored the Pointers 15-0 in the next three minutes. The Pointers, meanwhile, failed to execute on offense and did not score again until Dave Schlundt’s 15-footer from the right baseline with 9:56 remaining in the half.

Bennett attributed his squad’s dry spell to a lack of execution on offense that has plagued the Pointers all season.

“Guys want to dribble, guys just want to chase and shoot the ball from 25, and then they want to tell me that I’m on them too much or that they’re doing what they’re supposed to do,” he complained.

The normally stingy Pointer defense also had trouble controlling Whitewater’s leading scorers, Andre McCoy and Mark Lindo, who had 11 points and 10 points respectively at halftime. In addition, the Warhawks built up a commanding advantage on the boards, allowing the Pointers only eight first-half rebounds while grabbing 18 themselves on the way to a 31-25 advantage at the intermission.

The Pointers got themselves back into the game by outscoring Whitewater 4-1 during the first two minutes of the second half to knot the score at 23. When Warhawk standout McCoy picked up his fourth foul with just under 10 minutes to play and UWSP behind by 16-15, it appeared the Pointers had a chance to go on top for good.

Terry Porter’s seven-footer put the Pointers ahead 31-30 with just over seven minutes to go. Then, Whitewater pivotman Linde went to work and scored the Warhawks’ next nine points, concluding his tear with a 14- footer turn-around jumper from the left side to put the Hawks up 60-58.

Dave Schlundt, who finished with 16 points, pumped in a 12-footer to tie the score at 60 with 2:15 left to go. The Pointers had a chance to take the lead with 56 seconds remaining, but forward Terry Porter missed the front end of a bonus and Whitewater grabbed the rebound.

As expected, the Warhawks let the clock run down to 10 seconds before they got the ball to two-time All-WISU guard Mark Lindo, who was UW-W’s leading scorer in the first half, but Lindo launched a short jump shot from the left side but it bounced off the rim. In the meantime, both teams piled the ball around under the basket as they fought for the rebound. The buzzer sounded simultaneously with an official’s whistle, and confused fans and players waited for the call.

“I thought he called an offensive foul,” thought Bennett, but when the goal was announced, Bennett and the near-capacity crowd were furious for good reason. No one in Quandt Fieldhouse, with the exception of Finger’s Wade, made the call, knew who was guilty of the infraction. We may never know.

While most of us were busy buying Christmas presents and bringing in the new year, the UWSP men’s basketball team was busy battling basketball opponents.

After a 59-44 shellacking of UW-La Crosse on December 4, the Pointers played nine games, winning seven to raise their record to 15-3.

The Pointers were 9-4 after whipping La Crosse and had outscored their opponents by an average score of 83.8 to 43.0. Just when they seemed invincible, however, UWSP dropped a hard-fought 76-64 decision to arch rival UW-Eau Claire in a game played at Eau Claire. The Pointers led 50-46 with nine minutes to play, but were unable to stop the long-range bombing of UWEC guard Rick Dahl, who paced the Bighawks with 18 points.

Eau Claire won the game at the free throw line, however, hitting 28 of 37 charity tosses while UWSP was limited to 6 of 11. Terry Porter led the Pointer effort with 18 points, while Dave Schlundt scored 12 points and added 7 rebounds. Mark down February 3rd on your calendar, as it is the Pointers’ season finale.

The Pointers rebounded quickly from the tough loss, however, and won a convincing 79-59 road game over UW-Oshkosh, on December 14. The Pointers returned in a fine all-around performance, leading UWSP with 18 points and 11 rebounds. Dave Schlundt contributed 16 points.

The Pointer cagers then returned home and extended their Quandt Fieldhouse winning streak, taking a 71-64 decision from UW-River Falls. Dave Schlundt led the way with 22 points and 6 rebounds, while Steve Hadden collected 13 points and 5 rebounds.

The Pointers then enjoyed a two-week layoff before returning to the court, finally defeating the ever-dangerous Parkside Pioneers 84-40 for their 18th consecutive home triumph. Porter again led the assault with 30 points, while Craig Hawley and Tim Lazarick added 16 apiece. Schlundt grabbed 13 boards, and Hawley 12.

The Pointers now sit at 19-1 on the season, with 12 regular season games remaining, but outscored the Yellowjackets 19-1 the rest of the way. Porter scored a season-high 24 points and claimed 10 rebounds. Schlundt added 11 points and 7 boards.

The home-court winning streak increased to 20 last Saturday night, with the Pointers battling back from a 13-point second half deficit to defeat UW-Oshkosh 54-51. UWSP managed to make just 12 of 38 field goals for a lowly 31 percent, but at the same time limited Oshkosh to the low total of 29 shots, of which they made 20 for 51 percent. Sophomore guard Craig Hawley saved the day for the Pointers, scoring several outside jumpers down the stretch, as well as two clutch free throws with just over one minute remaining to seal the victory.

Hawley’s 15 points also gave the Pointers a season-high 25 points for the team. Seven of his points came from the left side of the floor, and 10 from the right.

The following week UWSP traveled to Milwaukee and breezed to a 77-39 victory over the UWM Panthers. Porter scored 15 points to lead the 9-1 Pointers, and Lazarick and Linde added 11 apiece. Hadden led the rebounding effort with 7 while Schlundt added 6.

The Pointers won their second straight road game three days later, stopping much-improved UW-Oshkosh 65-64. UWSP led by just two points at 46-44 with 7:35 remaining, but at the 6:50 mark, the Pointers outscored the Bighawks 21-10, with the last of these four coming on a buzzer-beating 3-point shot by Dwite Nelson as the clock expired.

The Pointers sit at 18-2, with only 4 games remaining. They travel to Milwaukee on Thursday to take on UW-Milwaukee before returning home to take on UW-Oshkosh on Saturday night at 8:00 PM.

We got the right man. Bobby Knight's style fits. It's aggressive play with maximum disciplines.

And we've got the players in Patrick Ewing, Michael Jordan, Keith Lee, Wayman Tisdale, Sam Perkins and Melvin Turpin. I mean, PLAYERS. These guys are mature, mentally tough, physical Secretariats, and the majority of our space eaters, with huge appetites.

But in spite of all that, I bet Coach Knight a dinner that we don’t win the gold medal in basketball at the 1984 Olympics. I hope I lose the bet, but make my steak rare, please. It’s not that we’ve gotten any softer, but the Europeans have really gone for the Communists, and the Russians, which is always a formidable opponent.

At curtain time, these countries will show off steady clubs, the roughhorses who have been playing togethers for so many years, performing under international rules, and playing with official referees they can’t communicate with because of a language barrier.

Don’t get me wrong, Coach Knight has won the NCAA twice, he’s won the NIT, and the gold at Pan Am. He’s like the Alexander of college basketball with no worlds left to conquer. I have no doubt there’s nobody better than Coach Knight to lead the American contingent. A lot of people think that Bobby shouldn’t have done this thing, but hey, he’s the best.

Bobby Knight, whether you like him or dislike him, there’s no way you can knock his coaching. He’s bulletproof, what Dr. Nettles had in mind. He’s got the corners covered, right out of the gate. Ballplayers who go to Indiana know more about Bobby Knight than we know about them. They know it’s a chart, machine-gun type operation, and who’s in charge. He makes his players play to their capacity.

I’ve always said, coaching is forcing a guy to take an extra step. Bobby Knight gets them to leap over tall buildings in a single bound (...and like it).

In my opinion, Bobby Knight is more an American of yesterday, Gen. Patton, The American flag and apple pie. Sometimes his vocabulary gets toughenish. He’s the most intimidating coach to other coaches in the country. But he’s also the guy you want in charge in a sand fight.

The only thing wrong with Bobby Knight is his sport coat. If he ends up in the sleazy part of town, he’d get mugged for his sport coat.

The problem is, no matter how good the conductor, the band must still play the music, and our arrangement stinks. Starting a team out two months before the games is just not enough. Hoops is a team game. There’s no 1 in team, and I see problems.

Another reason I feel we won’t get the gold ring is our collegiate players, being young, will be basketball-logged before they ever get uptown. They played last year, in Caracas, Venezuela, and Edmonton, Canada, and they will have gone through a trying NCAA tournament season. To then have to regroup for a trial of 60 players is eventually because 12 is just too draining, physically and mentally.

So, I would certainly like to lose the meal to the coach, eat crow, but I just think we’re going to have to change our format if we want to rope and ballrooms for a Roman adventure.

First, the ballplayers are going to have to make their commitment a year before, so they can travel to Europe, Asia, to get accustomed to the rules, the officials, and each other. They’re going to have to learn to do as the Romans do, and do it better, if they want an edge. Like I said, it’s not 1976 in Montreal, it’s eighty years later, and the Europeans are definitely on the uptick.

The holiday play left the Pointers with an impressive 12-2 record, but head coach Dick Bennett expressed concern with the team’s sometimes ineffective offense and occasional lack of intensity.

“If I wasn’t surprised by the Oshkosh scare,” said Bennett. “We’re not a whole lot better than any team we’ve played this year — we just have to work harder and play with more intensity in order to win.

“Against Oshkosh we got behind and panicked. We tried to get it all back at once. We weren’t patient on offense and started fouling on defense.

“We played a good second half, though, and hopefully the kids learned a lesson from this.”

Bennett commented on the Pointers’ play over the holidays:

“I was very pleased with our performance up through the Parkside game. That game was the high point of the season thus far. We’ve been outplayed by our opponents in all five games since then. Starting with the Lewis game we’ve been out of our routine. I don’t know if we forgot what got us where we are, or what the problem is, but if we don’t play hungry — with high intensity and enthusiasm — we’re just an average team. We won’t beat the really good teams with 20 minutes of basketball. It’s the half-efforts that really frustrate coaches, I don’t mind losing if we’ve given our best effort, but we haven’t been doing that lately. All I can say is that we had better be ready for Whitewater.”

Crowd panel clash on wildlife differences

By Andy Savaglia

A public forum on the various aspects of wildlife problems relating to the North Woods Wildlife Service, held last Thursday at the Fireside Lounge at the student union of UW-Milwaukee, this reporter was almost witness to a "barroom" free-for-all.

The ingredients needed in the recipe for a loud, verbal battle were all included—a few outspoken hunters and trappers in an audience of staunch anti-hunters and a knowledgeable, boisterous panel of speakers with differing views on the problems humans face with wildlife.

The program, sponsored by Students for Animals Right, a UWM organization, got off to a smooth start. Nancy Frank, program director and Director of the Animal Rehabilitation Cooperative, described her group's methods and goals. The Arc voluntarily takes in injured and normally harmless animals and releases, in urban areas, the ones they can patch up or kill those that are beyond help.

The next speaker was Mark Blackburn, Director of the North Woods Wildlife Hospital and Rehabilitation Center. His talk centered around the efforts of the center, established in 1979 and located in Minocqua, to treat and rehabilitate injured wildlife.

Then one of the DNR's District Wildlife Managers, Tom Smith, spoke about the problems that wildlife can cause. Using slides for illustration, Smith attempted to show how wild animals can cause damage to crops, brush, timber and other habitats through tearing, browsing, beaver damming and theft. However, a number of people in the audience thought Smith's presentation to be funny, giggling and snickering as he went along.

The air of the lecture changed to hostile thoughts, when Lesley Zegart, Midwest Director of The Fund for Animals, got up to speak on the attempt to outlaw certain hunting and trapping methods, like the steel leg, hold traps. Holding one of the traps up, Zegart declared it a "barbaric contraption" and received loud applause when he was done. However, during the talk he was often interrupted by several hunters and trappers who claimed that the trap he showed was not as destructive as he previously stated.

The place really started to jump when, when Cleve- land Amory, a writer, critic and President of The Fund for Animals, took his turn at the podium. Amory, long time foe of hunters, was supposed to speak on the use and abuse of wildlife, but instead used his time to ridicule and alienate not just the hunting public but the DNR as well. His humorous and sarcastic remarks included topics like how California game wardens smelled and how glad he was that Smith had informed him of how "dangerous" little beavers could be to Amory could stay clear of them. Most of the crowd laughed and chatted, while those who hunted and trapped were becoming more and more angry.

With many people in the crowd now at odds, the verbal ammunition was let loose during the question and answer period that followed. Smith and the DNR were barraged with questions from preservationists in the audience and were criticized by Amory as they calmly and patiently tried to answer questions. Amory called the DNR the "Department of Nuts with Rifles" and said that to have men like Smith heeding up wildlife programs was like having "Dracula guarding the blood bank."

Next the hunters had their turn, but the hunters and Amory, taking it, rose to the occasion and a lively discussion was held.

THE Encore
this week's highlight

Sunday, January 29
NEW YORK RENAISSANCE BAND—"Cheerful, lusty and rau­cously comic tunes that make music performed by the New York Renaissance Band. The performance is titled Gargantua and Pantagruel, which is part of Bellois' literary works. Performed on authentic period instruments, the tunes are joined by a New York Times reviewer as some of the sweetest dance music this side of the year 1526." Tickets are available from the Arts and Lectures box office. General admission is $6.00; youth and senior citizens $3.00.

music

Thursday, January 26
THUNDER ON THE HILL—(1951) It's a stormy night and a convicted murderer is held at a convent where a sister witnesses the crime. This mystery mystery stars Ann Blyth and Claudette Colbert in superior performances. It airs at 9:00 on Channel 20, Wausau.

Saturday, January 28
POINTER CORD SWIM MEET—Two intense rivals meet head-on when the Pointers' men's and women's swim teams host La Crosse. Watch two great swimming events lead into a sold-out candlelight dinner on Parents' Day, at 1:00 in the Gelwicks Memorial Pool. Admission is $1.75 per both nights.

Sunday, January 29
REBEL WITHOUT A CAUSE—Grab your hair grease, penny loafers and black leather coats for this film starring James Dean who portrays a rebellious youth caught up in a "web of alienation and juvenile violence." Natalie Wood co-stars in this dramatic tale. Showtimes are 7 and 9:15. Admission is $1.50.

Monday, January 30
AMERICAN GRAFFITI—Nostalgic look back to the fifties reminds the kids what fun was all about. Showtimes are 8:00 in the PBR. Admission is $1.75.

TELEVISION

Thursday, January 26
LECTURE—COMMUNICATION AND THE ARTS: THE EXPRESSION OF FEELING—William C. Davidsen, associate professor of communication at UWSP, will be kicking off the Lecture Forums series which has been a tradition at UWSP since the 1960s and will run throughout the semester. Hosting different speakers every week, this educational experience will begin at 7:00, Room 101 of the Collins Classroom Center.

ART

Thursday, January 26
EDNA CARLSTEN GALLERY—Art from its beginning stages until its completion will be exhibited by the UWSP art faculty. A reception will be held from 7:00-9:00 evening of the opening.
