Employment opportunities for the taking

by Joanne Davis
News Editor

UWSP will be celebrating National Student Employment Week October 7-11 through the efforts of the Student Employment Office (SEO) on campus.

Mayor Haberman recently issued a proclamation in honor of the week.

SGA also issued a resolution in recognition of SEO's efforts in finding students jobs.

Currently 108 jobs are listed at the office. These are subject to change daily.

Students checking out these jobs can participate in a hands-on computer demonstration of entering a personal application during the recognized week

These applications are used as a resource in the job screening process by the staff.

The staff will run other publicity in the forms of Public Service Announcements, Residence Hall slide shows, and a booth in the UC concourse. Area businesses will also put stickers in their windows displaying their cooperation in hiring UWSP students.

Many businesses also responded to the half-time radio program Ken Kulick aired during the Point/La Crosse football game September 21. Mr. Kulick, a High School Counselor in Admissions, does half-time shows for the University.

"I've had many nice remarks by merchants who now realize there are services available for them, not just the students," Kulick said.

Another interview with Helen Van Prooyen, SEO Director and Jim Meinel, a student on staff, will further detail SEO's functions and benefits.

The show will air Monday, October 7 at 5:30 p.m. on 90 FM.

The office deals with work study students and those without it. The work study program is a federally funded program for students who show financial need.

The Job Location and Development Program is available to students who need jobs but were not awarded work study. Area businesses list their open positions and SEO's staff tries to send them qualified available students to fill the positions.

The list of available students grows each semester, with an average of 75 students visiting the SEO daily.

In fiscal year 1985, students earned $290,000+ at jobs obtained through SEO's service.

U.S. Senate candidate at UWSP

by Carol Diser
Staff Reporter

A U.S. Senate candidate attacked policies created by Senator Kasten and President Reagan, and set forth his own views on current issues in a speech made at the U.C. on Monday. Matthew Flynn, a Milwaukee lawyer and a former chairman of the state Democratic Party, is one of two Democrats who have announced their candidacy for the U.S. Senate seat held by Republican Robert Kasten. Ed Garvey, deputy Wisconsin attorney general, is the other.

Of Kasten, Flynn said, "Kasten is devastating for this state. He wants to eliminate deductions for state income and property tax. I believe we need a fair tax system. We need to retain those deductions."

On farming, Flynn noted, "If oversupply is a problem, let's cure it by stepping up our exporting." Flynn said he didn't believe a price increase would help the farmers if an oversupply still exists.

Flynn believes that we could solve a great deal of our unemployment by expanding the job corps program. "The infrastructure of this country — our highways, bridges, airports, canals, etc. are in disrepair. We could retrain displaced workers and train the unemployed to repair the infrastructure. You know, it's disgraceful that there still isn't a complete four-lane highway from Madison to Stevens Point!" said Flynn.

On foreign policy, Flynn was very concerned with South Africa. "In South Africa, the blacks are so mistreated that there could be such bloodshed that we have not seen in this century.

The South African government should be given a certain amount of time to make the changeover to one vote for one person." Flynn also said that he supports the economic pressures put on the South African government but he believes that the U.S. must put pressure on them to do so to one person, one vote.

Flynn also criticized Jerry Falwell's involvement with South Africa. "By calling Bishop Desmond Tutu a phoney, he could have started a war down there. I think Falwell should have been arrested the minute he came off the plane. Just because he's close to President Reagan doesn't mean he has the right to create foreign policy," said Flynn.

U.S. Senate candidate Matthew Flynn.

Of the war in Nicaragua, Flynn said, "It's not only wrong, it's stupid. Arming the contras is wrong. Embargoing the Nicaraguans is wrong. We should cut off all aid to the contras and resume negotiations. Our first negotiation resulted in the removal of Cuban advisors. Negotiations work."

Flynn spoke out against political groups and private organizations who are raising money for the contras in Nicaragua. "College Republicans across the country are having an 'Adopt a Contra' fundraiser. That is a criminal offense! The Senate is supposed to set foreign policy and they said no guns, no war," exclaimed Flynn.

On environmental issues, Flynn said that he is most concerned about the problems of acid rain, the shipment of nuclear waste, and ground water pollution. Flynn believes that we need to have a high-level uniform standard of clean air and water for the entire country. On pollution control, "Manufacturers say it's expensive. I say baloney. The manufacturers would never suffer, they would just reflect the cost in their prices. And who knows, pollution control could possibly even create new jobs in pollution control device manufacturing and marketing."

Of the 1986 campaign, Flynn said that Portage County will be very important because it is the third largest in Democratic population. "I think this race will be one of the most issue-oriented in years. I want to show the reality about the images that Kastan and Reagan try to paint," said Flynn.

UWSP recognizes disabled's needs

by Bob Wrzinski
Staff reporter

A workshop was held last Friday, Sept. 27, to provide the faculty and staff members with information and practical methods to accommodate disabled students in classroom and outside activities.

Dr. Jane Jarrow, an outstanding and respected advocate for effective teaching of disabled students, presented the three-hour program to about 15 people. Dr. Jarrow is the executive director for the Association on Handicapped Student Services Program and Postsecondary Education (AHSSPPE). She is touring the UW System presenting workshops, due to the increasing number of disabled students entering college. At Stevens Point this semester, about 5 percent of the 9,000 plus student population has a permanent disability with about 2 percent of those having a learning disability of some type.

The difference between a disability and a handicap, explained Dr. Jarrow, is that a disability is inherent to the individual, or what they have or don't have, and a handicap is the advantage or disadvantage that relates to a specific duty. For a disabled person, his or her handicap is a necessary nuisance. The emphasis is placed on what they can do instead of what they can't do.

Disabilities involve noticeable disorders as well as invisible disabilities. A person who uses a wheelchair, dog guide or a hearing aid is easier to identify than someone with a learning disability. People can become disabled, but learning disabilities are present from birth and aren't progressive. One out of four people will become disabled, at least temporarily, in their adult life.

Dr. Jarrow further explained that "attitudinal barriers" are one of the bigger problems facing disabled people. An attitudinal barrier is defined as a way of thinking or feeling that results in behavior that limits the potential of disabled people to be independent individuals.

The increasing number of disabled students on campus is evidence that the UW System is recognizing their needs. Although nothing is 100 percent accessible to everyone, the 1973 Federal Rehabilitation Act (504) has helped to make institutions and the services they offer more easily accessible to disabled students. Since 1980, most buildings on campus, except for the old section of the Physical Education Building, have been made more accessible. Programs and classes can also be arranged to best assist disabled students along with first pick of classes, handicap parking and a growing awareness on campus of the problems facing disabled students.

A new workshop is expected each year with the next one scheduled in February.

Students must make or break the teachers

About a year ago, there was a movie out called "Teachers" which dealt with a school where some of the teachers were not holding up their end of the educational balance. In one of the final scenes, Nick Nolte, who plays one of the teachers who is trying to overcome the negative impacts of the teaching situation, makes a very profound observation.

"They're not here for us, we're here for them," he simply states.

Perhaps this is no truer than on a college campus. Each year, thousands of college students shell out huge tuition fees to pay for higher education. Thus, as students, we are paying to retain the services of our professors.

But, after the money has been paid, many students feel the rest of the job is up to the professors, and all they have to do is sit back and listen to all the information presented in their classes. In a way this is true, but the student's obligation goes much deeper than this.

Take for example a class I had two years ago. It was one of the few classes I enjoyed, but it seemed that at least once every two weeks one of our sessions would be cancelled for one reason or another.

Now, to some people this may sound like quite a deal, and I must admit I didn't complain at first. But, then I stopped to look at it from a different perspective. Every hour I spent in a classroom was being paid for partly through my tuition. If an hour of this class was cancelled, that was wasted money on my part. The more often my class was cancelled, the less meaningful my tuition was becoming.

Now, just stop and think of something. If you were to pay $200 for something, and only received $150 worth, wouldn't you feel a bit cheated? Why should you feel any different about the money you shell out for tuition?

The other problem that is sometimes encountered is that of a student not being satisfied with the performance of his professor. This can fall under many categories: questionable grading policies, not being prepared for class, or even sometimes being unfamiliar with the subject matter.

I actually had a friend come up to me last year with a look of total shock on his face. When I inquired as to what was wrong, he explained that in his math class, the professor had just put a problem on the board and when one of the students asked why a certain part of the equation was where it happened to be, the professor simply said he wasn't sure, but he knew it had to be there to make the problem work. Now, I'm not so sure I would want this guy teaching my math class. After all, what good are things he's teaching if he's not sure why he's teaching them?

I'm sure many of you may be saying right now, "yeah, I've seen this happen, but there's nothing you can do to stop it." WRONG. Just as with any other investment, there are safeguards to make sure you get your money's worth out of college.

There's an old saying that goes, a professor is only as good as his students make him. If you have a professor that you feel is not giving you your money's worth, there are steps that can be taken to rectify the situation.

The first person you should try is the professor himself. It may be possible that he doesn't realize he is slacking off in his duties. If this doesn't get any results, the next person you want to go to is the head of that particular department. The chairman will listen to your side of

Reading and Writing Labs merge in the LRC

by Brian D. McCombie
Staff reporter

About one year ago, the University Retention Task Force studied the Academic Support Programs to see if any of them could be improved. This was done in an attempt to locate and improve areas that would slow student attrition at our campus. One recommendation the Task Force made was to combine the Reading and Writing Labs to better serve the student body. This fall the two labs were combined under the auspices of Richard Behm of the Academic Achievement Center. In January of 1986, the Writing Lab and the Reading and Study Skills Lab will move to the lower level of the LRC in the former Instructional Materials Center (IMC).

The Writing Lab is presently located in room 304 of the Collins Classroom Center. Begun in 1973 by Mary Croft, the Writing Lab was established to help all levels of writers, from students and community people, to the staff and faculty of UWSP. Staff and peer tutors, under the direction of Susan Casper, Writing Lab coordinator, help people with all types of writing, including essays, poetry, fiction, research and thesis papers.

The Reading and Study Skills Lab, located in room 9 of the LRC, helps students learn and improve basic study and reading skills. Tutors help students on a one-to-one basis or in small study groups. Behm is presently directing the Reading and Study Skills Lab. Alice Randlet of the LRC will return from assignments with the International Program in January of 1986 to assume the position of coordinator.

Combined with the two labs will be the Professional Resources and Development Center, now located in the Writing Lab. The Development Center provides educators, both on campus and statewide, with handouts, presentation materials and books related to the teaching of reading and writing. Behm said that he hopes that the center will become a resources clearinghouse for educators in writing and reading. To this end, the center also provides workshops and outreaches to secondary and elementary schools statewide. In this way Behm hopes to better prepare future college students in writing and study skills.

Behm and Casper felt that combining the Writing Lab and the Reading and Study Skills Lab in the lower level of the LRC would make both support services more accessible to students. Casper said that she was sure that bringing these labs together would be especially helpful for those students who needed help in both reading and writing.

Campus survey estimates 50% non-trads by 1992?!

by Linda Butkus
Staff reporter

Last fall a survey was conducted on non-traditional students by the Wisconsin Assessment Center at the request of Margret Kocurek, Non-Traditional Student Services Coordinator, and Orland Radke, Director of Continuing Education and Outreach of UWSP.

The purpose of the project was twofold: to gather information and opinions from returning adult students (25 years of age or older) and to contact a small group of non-students in the community to determine their educational preferences.

The survey and the results are important for UWSP because it is estimated that by 1992 approximately 50 percent of students will be non-traditional, according to Martha St. Germaine, the Experiential Learning Program advisor.

As of now, UWSP has more full-time non-traditional students than other campuses, said Karen Hettich, a member of the Non-Traditional Student Association who also helped put the survey together.

A contributing factor for students to attend UWSP was "a realization that a degree was necessary to achieve (their) goals." Their decisions to seek a degree are also related to job dissatisfaction, encouragement from family, friends or employers and the availability of funds.

Last fall, 841 students (25 years of age or older) were enrolled at UWSP. From this group, 500 were randomly selected for participation in the survey. Of the survey respondents, approximately two-thirds attended a college or university prior to their current period of enrollment.

Nearly half of the students are majoring in education, business administration, the social sciences or natural resources. Unlike previous studies, more students at UWSP are juniors and seniors and more are attending classes full-time than is typically found in other institutions.

1. Seventy-two percent of the adult students are between 25-34 years of age. In the 35-year-old age category women outnumber men 3 to 1.

2. Approximately half the students are married.

3. Sixty-five percent of the women and 36 percent of the men have children living with them.

4. Half the adult students live within 10 miles of campus.

5. Fifty-eight percent of the adults were employed for pay at the time of the study. There is little difference between the employment status of men and women.

6. About half of the women are employed in professional, technical and managerial occupations. One-third of the men are in this category and the other third were in semi-skilled, manual labor types.

7. Nearly three-quarters of the respondents are juniors or seniors.

8. Two-thirds are enrolled full-time.

Fact: Tuesday is the most preferred day to take classes by the non-traditional student.

9. Two-thirds had some post-secondary education prior to enrolling at UWSP.

10. Fifty-nine percent of the respondents plan to earn graduate degrees.

11. A significant number of students expressed an interest in evening classes in the areas of humanities/social science, history, mathematics, foreign language and English.

12. Tuesday is the most preferred day to take classes; nearly two-thirds of the students prefer either Monday or Tuesday classes.

13. Seventy-one percent of the students want classes to meet during the day.

14. Three-quarters of the students want classes to meet one or two days per week.

15. As a group, students are most satisfied with the bookstore, admissions, library services and student employment.

16. Students asked for better parking with more parking meters.

Frances Moore Lappe returns to UWSP

by Kris Odahowski
Special to the Editor

Frances Moore Lappe spoke to the Central America lecture forum September 24 about land reforms and other topics. The speech was sponsored by the Committee on Latin America, a student organization on campus.

Lappe spoke on the Food First Institute consultation with the Nicaraguan government. Lappe is co-founder of that Institute. She discussed the history of Nicaragua under former President Somoza who fell from power at the hands of the Sandinista revolution.

She feels the result of a new progressive government in Nicaragua has meant a better quality of life for Nicaraguans. For example, the Sandinista government has provided its citizens with improved sanitation, free health care centers, and immunizations. "The infant mortality under Somoza's rule was 90 percent for children under the age of one," Lappe said.

She concluded with a statement that "all Americans have a responsibility to question our government's policies and to promote peaceful alternatives." This involves our current militaristic policy toward Nicaragua and the rest of Central America.

Lappe also spoke on the imminent danger of the contra wars, currently funded by the U.S. government. The hardest hit will be the Nicaraguan poor, in Lappe's opinion.

Lappe described the Sandinistas' policy of "idle lands to working hands." This land reform gave land to 45,000 poor families. It puts no limit on the amount of land owned by one person. It does stipulate, however, that the owned land must be used in a productive way.

Fifty interviews scheduled at Career Services

by Joanne Davis
News Editor

Fifty companies are scheduled for on-campus interviews through November at Career Services. These interviews are available for UWSP seniors and graduates.

Career Services makes available many services to students such as: career counseling, job search assistance, resume duplicating, vacancy lists, Dial-a-job telephone service, and many more.

Each Friday teaching and non-teaching vacancy lists are printed. The lists are available to any student at the Career Services Office in 134 Old Main.

Job description, title, contact person and other information is detailed about each job. The vacancies are generally not the same companies coming on campus for interviews.

Lorry Walters, assistant director at Career Services, said the brunt of the fall interviews are just starting to get under way.

She encourages seniors to check vacancy lists weekly and watch for scheduled interview changes or additions. "Acting fast, that's the key," Walters said.

The office has turned more educational in its purpose in the past few years. "We're educating students more in job search techniques rather than physically placing them in jobs," Walters said.

Her main concern is ill-preparation by students. "It's unfortunate that students forget their original career goals after being in college a few years," Walters said. Common discrepancies companies face in interviewing students are lack of knowledge of the company's needs and background information. Effectively marketing yourself to the employer is the bottom line. Recognize your skills common to their needs before the interview.

If students are unsure of their specific career goals, "go out and circulate," Walters said, "anything that gives the exposure to life after the campus is good."

Ad farce

Stevens Point Police Chief Joseph Fandre would like all persons to be extremely careful in responding to any ads looking for models. The chief would advise extra caution to all UWSP students, as at various times this type of ad is published in the Pointer.

Recently, the Stevens Point police checked out one of the ads and learned that the photographer was a convicted felon for attempted sexual assault and had also been charged with abduction.

Semesters abroad increase in popularity

University News Service

Five groups of students from the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point have begun a semester of study and travel in different parts of the world.

Their enrollments total more than 125 in UWSP's International Programs either in Germany, Poland, Taiwan, Spain or England.

Because of the broadness of the opportunities and competitiveness of prices arranged for student foreign travel, there has been increasing interest nationally in Stevens Point's overseas offerings, according to program director Helen Corneli.

Students transferred here from colleges in Los Angeles on the west coast to Harvard on the east coast primarily to go abroad, Mrs. Corneli said.

Germany

For the first time, a UWSP group that will spend most of its time in Munich, West Germany will be traveling behind the Iron Curtain through parts of East Germany. Officials at the University of Maryland helped arrange the side trip that will continue into Czechoslovakia and a tour of special attractions in Prague. Anna Marie Pfeiffer, an instructor who has been contracted by the university to teach art history courses for UWSP groups since they began going to Germany in the early 1970s, will conduct a museum/gallery program in Vienna for the current group there.

Poland

Students headed for Poland will see contrasting facets within Communist bloc countries in a tour that will include stops in Yugoslavia and Hungary before they settle in at Jagiellonian University in Krakow. The itinerary also calls for visits to West Germany and Austria. Gayle Zivney, Hatley, has been appointed by Mrs. Corneli to be a travel aide for this group, a new designation to an experienced traveler who is well versed on the manner in which UWSP overseas programs are conducted.

Taiwan

All of the five groups are doing the bulk of their travel at the beginning of the semester except the contingent in Taiwan. Students there will be ending the semester in November with a two-week tour of mainland China. Tentative plans are for UWSP's Chinese expert, Hugh D. Walker of the history department, to join this group for its travel activities. Because of a recent typhoon in Taiwan, the students were delayed temporarily in San Francisco before making their flight.

Spain

Travel for the group headed for Spain will be to the French Alps, Austria, Italy, the Riviera, Barcelona and ending in Madrid where the students will study at the Center for International Studies and stay at a hostel in the heart of the city. En route home at the end of the semester, they will tour Paris.

Britain

The students staying at an international friendship house outside of London will travel in Germany, Italy, Austria, Switzerland and France before arriving in England.

All of the leaders have taken groups abroad at least once, and in most cases several times with the exception of Alice Randlett, a library specialist, who is a first-timer and assigned to the group headed for Spain. She has 24 students with her.

There are 47 students en route to England led by James Missey of the English faculty and Bhol Singh of political science; 13 students in Taiwan with semi-retired professor William Stielstra of history and his wife, Ann; 14 students in Poland with S. Joseph Woodka of political science and 30 students in Germany with Neil Lewis of history, his wife, Suzanne, of foreign languages, and their daughter.

learned that initially the photographer would advise the persons responding to the ad that he wanted fully clothed photo sessions with them and after approximately two sessions, they would be advised that he wanted nude photo sessions.

City Attorney Louis Molepske advised that we do have a city ordinance on transient photographers and the Stevens Point police will be looking into this type of ad to determine if charges will be filed.

ROTC and Military Science host fall lab

by Brian D. McCombie
Staff reporter

Over 145 UWSP students participated in this year's Fall Lab conducted by the university's ROTC and military science department. The three-day adventure/training was held at Camp Douglas, WI, over the weekend of Sept. 27, 28 and 29.

Men and women enrolled in Military Science 101, 102 and 103 attended the exercise. Juniors and seniors in the ROTC program conducted the training as well as the logistics for the whole exercise. Students took part in repelling exercises; a timed seven-mile canoeing course; and the Leadership Reaction course, a course designed to test individual leadership and courage and the ability of the individual to work in teams.

A winter lab is planned for March. Snowshoeing, cross-country skiing and winter survival exercises are planned. Interested students must sign up for Military Science 101, 102 or 103 next semester to attend.

University News Service

Vince Gill, former lead vocalist of the rock group Pure Prairie League, will bring his "newgrass" style of music to the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point for two concerts on Thursday, Oct. 3.

The performances, sponsored by the University Activities Board, will be in the Program Banquet Room of the University Center at 9 p.m. and 11 p.m. Admission is $2.50 for students and $3.50 for the public.

Gill, a native of Oklahoma, was influenced by the traditional music of country entertainers like Merle Haggard and Buck Owens. He received his first guitar at 10 and, by age 15, he was the youngest member of a country-rock band called Mountain Smoke.

After high school, Gill played with several bluegrass bands before becoming lead singer and guitarist for the Pure Prairie League. Five of his original songs appeared on the group's 1979 album, "Can't Hold Back."

When the Pure Prairie League disbanded, he joined The Cherry Bombs, featuring Rosanne Cash, and Gill continued playing and singing at recording sessions in Nashville for performers such as Emmylou Harris, Dan Fogelberg, Bonnie Raitt and Lee Greenwood. In 1982, he participated in the production of the bluegrass LP, "Here Today," with veteran musicians Herb Pederson, Emory Gordy and Jim Buchanan.

Encouraged by Tony Brown of RCA, Gill recently recorded his first solo album, "The Things That Matter." It includes seven new Gill originals and, "If It Weren't For Him," a duet with Rosanne Cash, which she co-wrote.

Comparing his style to the brand of music that The Eagles, Poco, Jackson Browne and James Taylor perform, Gill says that there is a place for his "newgrass" music in the market. "A lot of people can't really relate that well to things like The Grand Ole Opry. I know there's a lot of those people who don't mind hearing a good country song with a little bit of a rock 'n' roll edge to it."

Shakespeare Festival ends

The Wisconsin Shakespeare Festival in Platteville ended its ninth season in a blaze of glory with critical acclaim and sold-out houses. Attendance was up almost 18 percent over last season, and reviews from Madison and Milwaukee papers echoed the obvious enjoyment expressed by the appreciative audiences.

The biggest hit of the season, to nobody's surprise, was the revival of "The Taming of the Shrew," directed by Dr. Thomas Goltry. The Milwaukee Sentinel praised the "rollicking commedia dell'arte style" of the "romping production," going on to laud the "handsome assured Petruchio" of Matt Griffin and Laura Gordon's "jolly, finally tractable" Katharina, as well as the "brightly colored costumes" of Wendy Collins. Isthmus also loved the "strong, spirited romp" in this "highly enjoyable production," especially noticing the "fast-paced, highly gestured action; the acting company's lively, merry characterizations; and Collins' beautiful costumes." Isthmus paid particular tribute to Laura Gordon's Kate, saying that "she would draw attention dressed in rags and standing far upstage—such is her ability to tame us all."

The second comedy of the season, "Tartuffe," directed by Kevin Gudahl, was also very successful, with audiences finding great contemporary relevance in this portrait of religious hypocrisy in 17th century France. So involved did people become in the events of the play that Al Constantineau, as Tartuffe, found himself greeted with boos mixed in with the cordial applause as he took his bows, the ultimate compliment to an actor playing a villain. The Milwaukee Sentinel reported that the performance "bounces along merrily," mentioning Laura Gordon's "controlled" and "entertaining" Dorine and Thomas Loughlin's "opinionated matriarch," Madame Pernelle.

But the company's greatest challenge, directed by the Festival's Artistic Director, Dr. Thomas Collins, was "Hamlet," the surprise hit of the season, so much so that an extra Sunday night performance had to be scheduled. The Wisconsin State Journal praised the production highly, saying that it "has many exciting moments, much fine acting and, all in all, an obviously creative approach to a complex play."

The costume design (again by Wendy Collins), the expertly designed lighting by Jim Laetzel, and the sound were mentioned favorably as "supportive of the overall production design, hovering between white and black, light and dark, being and nothingness." The Milwaukee Sentinel praised the "single-minded focus" which "pinpoints the play's philosophical content."

United Way offering community forum

by Ruth Schultz
Special to The Pointer

A community forum on healthy parent/child relationships will be held in the Nicolet-Marquette Room of the University Center at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7.

The program will feature Dr. Dave Riley, assistant professor of Child and Family Studies, UW-Madison; Dr. Jeanette Coufal, associate professor of Human Development and Family, UW-Stout; Dr. Tom Kemp, counselor, Children's Service Society of Wisconsin; and Dr. Pam Kemp, associate professor of home economics (Child and Family Studies), UWSP. They will address the issues of families of competent children, communication, discipline and parenting from a child's perspective. The forum is free and open to the public. The forum is presented by Children's Service Society of Wisconsin and United Way of Portage County.

Convocation

To the Editor:

It was very good to read the letter of Joseph R. Sommers, an apology for students who walked out on Academic Convocation speaker, Frances Moore Lappe. It is very sad indeed to realize that the POINTER failed to cover this year's celebration of the academic enterprise.

The POINTER has a profound moral responsibility to record for the record all significant campus news. Lappe's talk is especially significant.

It is not too late for the POINTER to redeem itself. How about a future feature on campus responses to Lappe's truly outstanding presentation? If the academic enterprise is worth celebrating surely this presentation merits further consideration. We must respond to Lappe's challenge. This includes the POINTER.

Is Lappe's thought alive and well in the minds and hearts of UWSP faculty, staff and students? I eagerly look forward to the POINTER's assistance in answering this question.

Sincerely,
Ray Stroik
Assistant
University Archivist

Ray, in the September 12th issue, we published a news release "The politics of hope" that went into detail about Frances Moore Lappe's background and her efforts to combat world hunger. In the same issue, at the risk of being redundant, we ran "Convocation VIII" announcing the fact that Lappe would be the featured speaker at the 1985 convocation.

Secretary speaks out

To the Editor:

In response to Brian McCombie's article, "Learning patience: Is it worth the wait?" in last week's Pointer, I would like to express my exasperation with his attitude regarding the "secretary" in the Financial Aids Office. I am a "secretary" for an academic department on campus currently, but have previously held the position of "receiving counselor" or "receptionist/clerk" in the Office of Financial Aids here. I am also acquainted with the present "secretary" (actually a Program Assistant) in that same office, and know of her disappointment in your article, Mr. McCombie. First of all, let me remind you that the use of quotes is inappropriate when you are not recording, word-for-word, what someone has told you!

Addressing your accusation that "If you don't use survival patience, you'll get the secretary mad at you. And don't fool yourself. This person can lead you on a financial aid paper chase that will end with you getting your money some time in July of next year": It is obvious that you are totally unaware of the efforts on behalf of students such as yourself, that the "secretary" actually makes, on a daily basis. You are also ignorantly evaluating her capabilities, as well as her personality. If you had ever worked in the office mentioned, you would realize that: 1) This is not something she would attempt to do, and 2) that even if she wished to do so, it would be virtually impossible for her to accomplish, given the responsibilities of her job.

While I can certainly understand your frustration in not getting your aid when expected, I fail to see any purpose or rationality in wanting to be rude to the secretary, when she is only performing her job to the best of her ability (and under much stress and pressure, with the volume of traffic in that office, I might add — this from my own experience there). Why not express your distress with the situation to the counselor or see him/her? Maybe you do not have the courage to express your feelings to those who are actually responsible for the policies you are distraught about. You just may find out that there are reasons for their temporary unavailabilities, also! In any case, the "secretary" is expected to perform her job responsibilities, which include making appointments with counselors according to their schedules, WHICH THEY SET, and which the "secretary" has no authority to change.

Given your attitude regarding "survival patience," Mr. McCombie, I wish you luck in the "real world." I think that with the many hassles involved in obtaining services from any number of sources on a daily basis, you will look back on your current frustrations as minor ones. By the way — if you did obtain your financial aid — how about considering yourself as among the lucky ones? Many students may not be as fortunate!

Sincerely,
Linda Hawkins

Homecoming

To the Editor:

What does Homecoming mean to you? A football game? The King and Queen contest? The parade, or a wild pre-parade party?

As the Homecoming Coordinator for UAB it means many things to me. I must admit, however, that since I filled this position last May, 90 percent of my time has been spent planning the parade, asking school bands to march and arranging security.

Neither is an easy task because UWSP does not exactly have a shining reputation where parade spectators are concerned. About five years ago several people in the crowd got out of hand. The result was no parade the following year, and a great mistrust of the UWSP student body.

No one wants to work crowd control, or walk with a band, but it is very important to continuing the parade.

High school and middle school bands won't come to UWSP's parade if there isn't security, not to mention that the Stevens Point police probably wouldn't give us a parade permit.

We have already taken steps to change that reputation. Last year's parade was relatively uneventful. There are two more bands marching in this year's parade than in last year's. I see that as a result of the good conduct displayed last year. However, Pacelli will not be marching this year. They want to see how the crowds act this year so they can decide if they will march next year.

In an attempt to ensure a security force, each residence hall is asked to donate at least five residents to watch the crowd in front of their hall. Some halls really come through and exceed the five person request, while other halls have difficulty filling the bill.

Other concerned individuals and organizations will also donate their time. I would like to take this time to thank those people for their help. I would also like to ask those people who will be watching the parade to keep your enthusiasm to a moderate roar, and on the curb. Thank you.

King and queen election, a wasted vote

by R. Lionel Krupnow
Features Editor

"It's a waste of our electoral power." My friend stuffed another Ruffie into his mouth and continued to talk between the crumbs. "They don't do anything for us. Who are they, anyway? Where do they come from?" He gulped some Bud and turned to the television. The Packers were losing again.

I had to admit, despite my dedication to UWSP, that my friend had a valid point. Why do we bother to vote for a homecoming king and queen? What do they do?

One answer is obvious. They walk around, smiling, selling their looks for a vote. It's downright sexist when you think of it. A man lowered to the position of a mere object; flaunting his appearance. An intelligent woman forsaking the battle for sexual equality by lowering herself to the level of her vain counterpart. Is it worth dragging yourself through the drizzling cold air to vote for such candidates?

True, it happened in the presidential election of 1984. But should we succumb to such a travesty on our own campus?

If this king and queen did something worthwhile there would be no question of our duty. We would forge forth queen, then I feel it only justified that those representatives of our campus should return the favor by doing something meaningful for the student body as a through an arctic blast to cast our votes for the worst candidate. And if we do bother to vote for homecoming king and whole—not merely flaunt their charms.

Yet, when was the last time a homecoming king and queen attended a meeting of UNALT (University Nuclear Arms Limitation Talks)? These talks are vital to the safety of our campus. Without them Madison could grow so large that it could easily develop its own nuclear powered beer kegs before we do. We could be standing on the verge of inundation at this very moment but our royal mother and father are content to expel their energies on useless showmanship.

Even if their rhetorical skills aren't great enough for UNALT, they could still be useful. For example, they could try to resolve the bloody conflict that has raged on the basketball court, between the Pointers and the Blugolds. Sure it's easy to dismiss this battle as a patriotic defense of Pointer ideals: it's easy until someone loses an eye. This is a grave matter but to date not one conference has been established to end this conflict.

Further, these glamour heavyweights could enter the ring of budget proposals and petition the UW System president for more money. They could sit down with the accountants in Madison and show them how increased funds would improve UWSP's ability to bring a greater quality of education to its students. They could, if they knew how to use anything but an eye pencil.

R. Lionel Krupnow

Still, at the very least, they could serve as goodwill ambassadors; solve the puzzle of what SETV is really about; decide how those extra SGA funds could be frivolously spent; or sell their makeup kits to feed the starving in Africa. Can't these people see the grave responsibility that accompanies a position like homecoming king and queen?

We need a worthy king and queen to step forward and give this campus the type of representation it deserves; a man and woman who can assume the role of great leaders.

Indeed, finding the perfect homecoming king and queen is such an important issue that I would search campus-wide for them, if it weren't for my acute apathetic nature.

It takes a lot of work to be a procrastinator

by Scott Prokash
Special to The Pointer

My final English project sits on my desk like an impasse. In my mind, I am beyond it. In my mind, it sits finished—bound, neatly typed, highly respected and oft-quoted by erudite people everywhere. In reality, it is a spotty collection of miscellany desperately shifted this way and that to prove a feeble if not asinine point. And it is nowhere near completion.

I light my 25th cigarette of the evening and contemplate pressing its red glow to the pile of puerile parchment on my desk. My instructor will not believe me if I tell him that my cat ate my project, but perhaps he will believe spontaneous combustion. A disfiguring burn on my face will lend credibility, I think, but I have some (though perhaps unwarranted) vanity about my looks. No, it's hopeless. I shall have to... work. I stub out my smoke, crushing the life from it.

But then it happens. A voice, from over my shoulder—
"Wanna catch a few beers?"
This time it is my roommate—but it doesn't really make a difference. It could be anyone. Any voice with any suggestion. It needn't be a well-modulated voice. Hell, it doesn't even have to be a voice! It can be a mere thought, a lone firing synapse, a little puff, a slight tugging from that intangible, invisible, insurmountable monster, that thing that always offers an alternative to working.

I leap from my chair crying, "Yes! Yes! I'll catch a few beers. I'll catch a multitude of beers! I'll turn over rocks and scale treacherous ridges and fight trolls! I'll chase those beers to the ends of the earth, even if I have to go to Junction City to corner them!"

My roommate smiles. He watches me succumb to the whim of the monster like a junkie rushing to and embracing the source of his fix.

Hours later, I stumble home, through the leaves and drunken students, across the windswept athletic fields, skirting the insane one-way streets of Stevens Point. In my room, I note that my project has had the audacity to remain on my desktop, eagerly awaiting me like some clinging, fawning pet. I glance at it and realize my worst fears—not only has it not gone away, but it is still in its unfinished state. The elves have not emerged from their hiding place to help me. I curse them and all their kind.

I fall asleep, only because of the warming, numbing effect of the alcohol, which assuages my guilt.

"My name is Scott Prokash, and I am a procrastinator."
In my dream, it is always the same.

The meeting of Procrastinators Anonymous is finally taking place. (The notices were printed in the paper much too late to get many people interested. Then, those who knew about the group put off joining as long as possible. When the night of the meeting actually rolled around, people were habitually and fashionably late. They lounged around outside the meeting room, smoking cigarettes, making dumb remarks about the weather and the real vs. perceived benefits of a chiropractor.) I have made the confession that will start the meeting. I wait for the coughing to stop. All the eyes in the room are focused on my penitent face. Some reflect sympathy. Some scorn. I begin getting it all off my chest with some background information.

"Procrastination" comes from the Greek root 'procto,' and in those days, a 'procrastinator' was a protologist who could not bear to ply his trade. Rather than literally 'soiling their hands,' these ancient medics turned to hedonistic pursuits such as gynecology or podiatry. They had deep-seated problems when it came to their work. Not only were they afraid of failure, as we all are, but they were also dreadfully bored with what they considered a 'dead-end job.' Rather than work, they began to leave their offices to indulge in three-martini lunches. Inevitably, procrastinators became thought of as lascivious, pleasure-seeking, sluggish people. Of course, they usually were. As a matter of fact, the procrastinators were mentioned explicitly by Rhinostopherus, the famous Greek philosopher, in his treatise on housebreaking large pets: "The procrastinators were known for their wanton parties, where they thumbed their noses and disdained work or responsibility of any kind. That behavior, indeed, could be said to have 'rect'um.'"

Mom's and dad's yearbook

by Crystal Gustafson
Staff reporter

In the bottom of my cedar chest, I found a brown paper package tied with twine. It was obviously books, and I left it on the dining room table until I had some more time. On Sunday night, when there was nothing else to do, I cut the string and opened the package. What a find! The bundle contained my mother's old high school annuals.

I poured myself a quick drink and began some quick calculations. Let's see—I was born in 1963—Mom must've been a freshman in 1959. Wow, 1959. That sounds like such a long time ago. The first page has a cartoon picture of a planet and a rocket ship. The caption reads "The Space Age."

I turn right to the pictures and search for my mother. She graduated in a medium-sized class, so it doesn't take me long to find her. The girls are in calf-length dresses, and the boys' hair is cut short and combed back. Wait! There she is! Look at those glasses. Honest to goodness cat frames with little rhinestones. The boy two rows behind her strikes a familiar chord, and I realize with a shock that my father was in the same class. My parents have been divorced for years, and it never occurs to me what their dating years must have been like. I guess Dad was a little chubby freshman year.

The autographs in her freshman annual are cliché and boring. "To a swell kid, it's been nice having you in geography. Hope to see you this summer." Or, "If all the boys lived over the sea, what a good swimmer Berta would be." My father's signature isn't even in her freshman annual, and I find myself wondering what year they took an interest in each other.

I moved on to my own particular case.

"But the true procrastinator, like myself, is an artist, a man or woman of fine sensibilities. And real artists, real procrastinators, realize that pain and suffering are necessary for any real pleasure in life. Therefore, I..."

An old man in a rumpled leisure suit harumphs and asks a pointed question of me.

"I don't buy this subtle, evasive double talk. I've been procrastinating since the war, and I've finally found out my problem. I'm afraid of falling flat on my face, afraid of screwing something up! So I procrastinate. Yes, dammit, I procrastinate! Isn't this your problem?"

"It is true," I go on, "that the accepted psychological motivations for procrastination are fear of failure or fear of success. Some people are actually afraid of doing well—afraid of the greater expectations that come with greater success. But that's not the case with me, I think..."

"You're just lazy," the old man interjects. "You're a three-toed sloth. You're not a real problem procrastinator."

I hang my head a bit, but go on.

"Wrong. Let me tell you more about my problem.

"It first dawned on me that I am a problem procrastinator my freshman year, during spring finals. I was looking over my syllabi and realized I had the following reading to do:

—750 pages of a text called Medieval European History Before the Influence of Victorianism

—159 pages of a Victorian novel called Repressed Heartthrobs;

—the collected writings of every aspiring New England poet before the advent of free verse and after the breakthrough of onomatopoeia;

—and two calculus texts.

"I also had to write seven papers, had to work out an equation explaining solar flare-ups and their parabolic nature, and had to successfully complete a series of quasi-fingertip pushups for phy. ed.

"All of this within four days.

"When I told my wingmates of my plight, their faces blanched collectively. They shook my hand and muttered muted condolences. They filed past me as though I were an open casket. My roommate was not sympathetic, however.

"You're really stupid. Why did you let it pile up so much?"

I waved my hand cockily at him.

"I was having too good a time! Besides, I had and have great faith in my ability to work under the gun."

"You might as well turn the gun on yourself, you boob. You can't get away with this."

I ignored him; I whistled as I spooned Sanka into my coffee cup.

"You really love all this attention! You love the thought of disaster. You're morbid. You're the kind who goes to the races to see someone crash."

"Vroom, vroom," I said, twisting a mock wheel. "Screeeee!" I bumped into the wall, feigning a last-second avoidance of disaster. "His incredible dexterity, his poise under pressure has again tempted but beaten fate!" I was getting carried away.

"I hope you crash and burn." My roommate stormed out, realized he lived with me, then returned, sheepish but non-conciliatory.

"Well, I stayed up for four days and four nights and managed to pull it all off. I was a hero. The act? A considerable coup. But it was tough to follow and I became lethargic. I could no longer find the inspiration, the excitement, the danger, the pressure to do it all again. The downhill slide of procrastination began.

"My good grades turned to incompletes. My room became a pigsty. I wasn't writing friends or returning calls. My personal habits slacked off. I... gave up... flossing."

A gasp rises from the room.

"But it's now that I'm worried about! My problem has gone so far that... oh, my God."

"Out with it, then," says the old man.

"You can tell us, honey," says a sympathetic woman with a wide face and ketchup stains on her sweatshirt.

"It's therapeutic..." begins the group leader, trying to give me positive strokes.

"All right! I'll come clean then! I've begun to work!"

Another gasp rises, along with a collective shudder. A procrastinator.

UWSP's oldest alumnus

Otto Bacher to lead parade

by Linda Butkus
Staff reporter

This year's Homecoming celebration held on Oct. 7 not only will be a special event for students on campus, but it will also be an historical event for Otto Bacher, an active alumnus and 1918 graduate of UWSP. "You've got to grow older to get recognition," Bacher said.

Bacher, 69, the oldest active alumnus at UWSP, will be a special guest in the Homecoming parade. "I think it's one of my high points to be recognized," he said. "This is the first time that they invited me to be marshal in the parade," he added.

For the past few years Bacher has been a special guest at the Homecoming celebration and was introduced at the evening Pointer Hall of Fame induction as one of the school's oldest letter winners. "I'm the oldest, football player that has been an active alumnus. In 1917, I got my letter as a varsity player," he said.

Bacher was asked to sing the school song at the celebration and in doing so asked his audience to participate, too. "I never had such a reception and I think it's kind of a corny song when you come right down to it, but it sure made a hit," Bacher added.

During the time Bacher went to school and graduated in 1918, the University of Stevens Point and others were called "Normal Schools." There were 650 students at the Stevens Point Normal School. Eight other normal schools existed at that time, said Bacher.

The names of the schools have changed, and so has football. Nowadays, Bacher refers to the Pointer football team as "knights in shining armor" because of all the padding and modernized helmets that the players wear. During Bacher's football days, he suffered from a broken shoulder after attempting a new play at a scrimmage. His first attempt was successful during practice, but his second try for further improvement

SETV has The Show

by J.D. Antone
Staff reporter

"Welcome to The Show, where footwear is optional and almost anything can happen."

The Show is SETV's new live television program. The Show airs live each Thursday at 7 p.m. on cable channel 3. The and Kirk directs it. Although the two are the executive producers, they admit the success of the program is due to a cooperative effort of a large crew.

The Show began spontaneously. Kirk and John said it just happened. Kirk asked John, "Should we go live?"

using our idea, The Restaurant, The Store. . ."

This program is just part of a whole new attitude possessed by Student Experimental Television this year. John, program director of SETV, says the organization is growing and, with new people, new exciting programs are being produced. Campus Connection, a new campus event program, will soon be premiered. Twisters, a series in the tradition of the Twilight Zone, is also in production. Underground Sounds, a music program featuring new bands from the area, is another show that is developing. These programs, as well as others, air on Thursdays right after The Show.

Tonight The Show has a great lineup. Among other short features, John will be chatting with Stevens Point Mayor Michael Haberman.

John says, "We're going to see if this guy knows anything about football!"

Thursday at 7 is probably the toughest time slot on television, but The Show will succeed, because it is live. John says, "Cosby? Taped. Magnum? Filmed, months ago! And who knows what's on ABC."

Procrastinator, cont.

tinator work? Was I cured of my malady, or what? Am I snugly wasting their time? Am I already a convert to normalcy? "No, it's not like that," I assure them. "It's just that my problem is so bad that I've begun to work in order to free up more time for procrastinating! Why, I woke up the other morning with my room in such a mess that I couldn't move. Ensnared in my own morass, I was obliged—forced—to clean it up, so that I could spend the rest of the day lounging around, putting off important decisions. Oh, it hurts! It's terrible. . . . At this point my alarm clock always wakes me from the dream. Invariably, I turn it off and sleep in.

mature and maybe a little more confident, although it is difficult to tell on the tiny black and white photograph. The sophomore autographs are definitely more interesting. Every autograph mentions a boy named Jim, and many of the notes advise my mother to give up cigarettes. There is a very cryptic message from a boy named Larry. It says something about an outdoor movie and warns her, "Don't park too much with Jim. It could get to be a habit." I try desperately to picture my mother snaking around the schoolyard for a cigarette. The image escapes me, although that is easier to imagine than my mother parking with Jim.

There is a poem from my father, who was at that time only an acquaintance. It reads, "Some are witty, some are gay, I don't have anything else to say." (I make a silent prayer that my writing ability doesn't come from my father.) My father's picture didn't change much from freshman year, although he is pictured in many more team pictures than before.

My mother's junior year is apparently when things heated up. Her picture is clear; she graphs are longer with more stories than ever. One unsigned message says, "Thanks for going to the Prom with me, I've never had so much fun." That, by itself, is innocuous. But add to that a message from another boy saying, "I wish we would've had more time on Prom night," and a note from a girlfriend that says, "I still want to know the truth about Prom night," and it paints a pretty wild picture. There is more bad rhyming from my father, and another note from Larry that reads, "Your cigarettes I can handle, but when you come to school with a cigar, I draw the line." Dad's picture shows a thinner, handsomer teenager.

Unfortunately, there is no senior annual. I'm forced to draw my own conclusions about Larry, Jim and Prom night. (I know the conclusion to my Mom and Dad.) It's strange to think of my mother that way. No wonder I could never shock her.

I called her as soon as I was finished reading. When I asked her about Prom night, she giggled (she never giggles) and said, "Oh, I was terrible." Funny, I never thought of her high

Carlsten Gallery to display Berndt's work

by S.M. Anderson
Staff reporter

The show opening in the Edna Carlsten Gallery this weekend is comprised of a one-man show. This one man is the artist, Randall Berndt. He has received a B.S. (1966) and M.F.A. (1969) from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. In 1974-75, he did restoration work for the Field Museum in Chicago and in the summer of 1977, Berndt returned to UW-Madison as a drawing instructor. The next year he was a drawing and painting instructor at the Madison Area Technical School and in 1981 was again at UW-Madison as a guest lecturer. At the present, Randall is a practicing artist with a well-developed style, humor and philosophy apparent in his painting. In short, I like his work.

The show consists of two parts. The first deals with Wisconsin historical painting based on photos from the State Historical Society. The photos were from the late 1800s and turn of the century and mainly depicted the lumber and railroad industries. Randall has related his work to the expansion of these industries in our fair state with the artist's critical eye. "Log Jam on St. Croix," "Martin Anderson in Cabbage Patch," "Montello Granite Quarry" and "Sawyers in the North with trial expansion, done with a sensitivity and insight of the land in Wisconsin's past.

The second part contains more of a personal history and image-found himself fascinated with the imagery of the pre-Raphaelites. Mark Spencer, the gallery director, relates Randall's work to two American artists: Benjamin West, 18th century; and Peter Blume, 20th century. This work has a mystic imagery, personal but not autobiographical. Some of the titles in this presentation are "Kaiser's Smile" (based on Guns of Autumn), "The Philosopher Examines His Tongue" (philosophical portrait examining life in the suburbs), "Uncle Luigi Goes Fishing" (a western piece) and "Little Audrey Goes on a Trip." Randall has been aided in his work by a grant from the Wisconsin Arts Board.

Berndt's "Sawyers in the North with Birch Tree" (13 in a series) are a few of the works from this historical view of our state's industry. Randall is very interested in the personal versus public history and when in London last year

His 1918 school yearbook states: "Germany received his early training at Merrill, famous for its track athletes. He was a shifty and heady player and his work in the backfield will be missed next year." Bacher played halfback for his team. Bacher has spent more than 20 years in retirement, living in Merrill where he was reared. He is active in the community, education, church and charitable groups.

A friend was taking her Ph.D. oral exam at U.C.L.A. Although nervous, she managed to answer all the questions the committee put to her. When the ordeal finally ended, she turned in relief to leave the room — and discovered there were two doors. She quickly chose one and walked through it, only to find herself in an enormous utility closet. As she stood pondering her choices — go back into the room or wait until she heard the examiners leave — the door to the closet opened, and the entire committee joined her.

My husband started college ten years after high school and was nervous about his English composition class. When the first term paper was assigned the instructor suggested covering it with a folder because, she said, that gives a good impression by making the paper look 'neater.' She also implied that using a folder could make the difference between an "A" and a "B".

My husband raised his hand.

Rigby discusses anorexia bout

by Linda Nimlos
Staff reporter

Cathy Rigby McCoy was on the UWSP campus Sept. 23 sharing her experiences, including her 12-year battle with anorexia nervosa and bulimia.

Rigby began her gymnastic career at the age of 10 when she went down to a nearby gym and began jumping on a trampoline. In no time at all she was in love with the sport of gymnastics. Through hard work and determination, she went to the 1972 Olympics and then went on to win 12 consecutive medals in international competition. Rigby helped to popularize gymnastics in the U.S.

To the outside world, it appeared that Rigby led a successful life as a world class gymnast, when in reality, she stated, "I was living a 12-year nightmare." The terrible nightmare she referred to was anorexia nervosa and bulimia. This problem manifested itself at an early stage in her life, and is a prevalent problem all over the country today.

However, only recently have we become aware of the magnitude of the problem. Karen Carpenter, a successful high achiever, allowed this problem to kill her. Jane Fonda has written about it. Dancers, models and 20 percent of all college women are affected by this eating disorder. There is a preconceived notion that "thin is in," to lose weight is to represent success, and to gain weight is to fail.

What is actually happening is that these people are carving away at their bodies. It's like a funny home mirror with a distorted image: "Sure my hips look O.K., but if I'd lose just a little more in my thighs I'd be perfect." In trying to be "perfect," it's ironic that the exact opposite happens. Premature aging, bags under the eyes and the loss of hair and teeth are all characteristic of beauty?

For awhile, Rigby was thinking along these lines and refused to take responsibility for her life. That is, she didn't face reality and her problem but instead pretended to be a career woman, athlete and wife.

She was leading a double life. While gaining public attention and achieving athletic perfection, she was also on a dieting crash course that was destroying her internal chemical balance. At the same time, she was consumed with the idea of food and approval all the time

The major step that changed this destructive course of events was a role she played in The Wizard of Oz. For the first time, Rigby was surrounded by people her own age who still held cherished dreams and ideas. She had thought that at 28 her whole life was over, but now she had a new perspective on life and saw her real emancipated self.

Now Rigby approached the demands of the new role with the enthusiasm of a child. This time she was led by a positive motive in which she wasn't afraid to make mistakes. For the first time she was confident enough to make her own choices based on her own feelings. Just as the Scarecrow and Tinman helped Dorothy realize she wasn't in Kansas anymore, Dorothy showed Rigby her life was indeed not over with and she took responsibility and control of her life, following the "Yellow Brick Road" back home.

Osprey a bird of survivability

The osprey is found everywhere except on the arctic continents. It is brown and white and locked into a fish diet by evolution. Often called "fish hawk," it even comes equipped with little spikes on the bottom of its feet to hold slippery prey. The name osprey is from an old French word that means bone-breaker. Like most predatory birds these days, it is the victim of a science-fiction-like pesticide wipeout. Loss of nesting habitat hurts severely. Pesticides devastate.

In the late 1950s and early 1960s, ospreys began to disappear from the east coast. This coincided with heavy use of organochloride pesticides like DDT, dieldrin, endrin, heptachlor and chlordane. These so-called "hard" pesticides weaken the eggshells of many predator birds. The eggs simply break before they can hatch.

Hard pesticides do not break down rapidly but persist in the environment at low, toxic levels. They build up at each link in the food chain from plant to herbivore to carnivore. Thus, a predator like the osprey—a secondary carnivore that eats other carnivores—poisons itself as it feeds. The requiem is written not in numbers of adults killed, but in empty nests, thin-shelled eggs that never hatch and inability of birds to reproduce.

Wisconsin banned DDT in 1970. The U.S. government outlawed DDT and its close kin in 1972. By 1975, both inland and coastal osprey were showing increased productivity. In Wisconsin, production more than doubled—from a low of 54 in 1973 to 129 by 1978.

But let's not count our ospreys before they hatch. In South and Central America, where Wisconsin ospreys spend the winter, hard pesticides are still heavily used to fight insects that carry malaria or destroy crops. The pesticide dose they are exposed to there is heavier than ever encountered in the U.S. It's possible that osprey increases come from protection of nesting sites, not shelter from pesticides.

Ospreys follow the upriver runs of alewives and herring. Suckers, perch and carp are common freshwater prey. Because of this, ospreys nest near lakes and streams—in Wisconsin along waterways in the northern third of the state. Although some birds build almost at water level, more often they choose the highest point on the landscape—alone dead trees and even windmills, utility poles and fire towers.

From the vantage of an apex nest the osprey can easily scout waters below for prey. But wind speeds pick up over bodies of water and the 200-pound nests are often wind thrown. Forestry practices that glean dead trees along with timber can rob ospreys of nesting sites. Lakefront homes, resorts and motorboats are also disruptive. One of Wisconsin's best osprey colonies on the Rainbow Flowsage in Oneida County had 25 nests in 1961. By 1977, only one remained.

When an osprey nest structure is destroyed, DNR wildlife managers build a replacement. Three-foot diameter wooden platforms are bolted to utility poles and erected nearby.

In 1977, when a tornado-like downburst smashed through prime nesting habitat in northwestern Wisconsin, these artificial structures came to the rescue and in 1978, 19 of Wisconsin's 128 active osprey nests were built on artificial platforms. The best news is that platform nests show even higher success rates than those built on natural structures.

haved dog splash out ahead of a hunter. The hunter then tries to call the dog back with the flock ultimately launching out of shotgun range.

On some occasions it will be impossible to stalk mallards when hunting alone. For example, if the flock happens to land in the middle of a large area of open water, this is when a pair of hunters can use the wolf pack approach to hunting. By this I mean, one hunter sneaks to the up-wind side of the flock and waits. Meanwhile, the other hunter circles to the down-wind side and then walks directly at the flock with the intention of flushing the flock to the up-wind hunter. As with all puddle ducks, mallards initially leap into the wind when taking flight. This allows them to catch the needed updraft for climbing. This will also give the up-wind hunter a better-than-even chance of getting a crack at the ducks as they scam.

Whether you're duck hunting alone or with friends, remember that if the action slows, don't wait for the ducks to come to you — go jump them. And if you've never tried jump-shooting, you could be in for a slough of fun.

Float down a Wisconsin classic

by Tony Dowiatt
Staff reporter

Picture yourself riding in a canoe down a fast-flowing river containing numerous whitewater rapids and log snags. Now add a thick forest teeming with wildlife: deer, bald eagles, ducks and grouse. Top all this off with some of the best trout fishing in Wisconsin and what do you have? Bois Brule River, or Brule, as many people call it.

From what I've experienced, the Brule is a true sportsman's paradise, offering a wide variety of things to do such as hunting, whitewater canoeing and, of course, trout fishing.

The Brule River, which finds its headwaters at Lake St. Croix and empties into Lake Superior 30 miles downstream, offers some of the best all-around fishing for brooks, browns, rainbows and steelheads in the state.

Like many good trout streams, the Brule is full of good habitat structures for trout such as log snags, undercut, rapids and deep pools. However, a fisherman would have a hard time determining where to fish since there are a great many areas to choose from.

Fishing on the Brule requires the use of light tackle, including ultralights or fly rods. Light line in the two to four-pound test range is a must. Another important factor to take into consideration is hook size. A good rule of thumb to remember is nothing over a size 10 should be used, and if you're a true sportsman, give the old barbless hook a try. This practice will save a lot of trout from dying due to bad hooking.

As for lures, live bait is your best bet. On my last visit to the river earlier this year, my friends and I had good luck with nightcrawlers during the middle of the day while a lot of trout went for the flies in the evening.

How about fish structure? Well, the Brule has about every the Brule, which is located just above U.S. Highway 2. Here, class three and four rapids can be found for those adventurers willing enough to try them.

The Brule River is a fine example of a Wisconsin river classic tucked away in the far northwest part of the state. The Douglas County waterway offers various forms of recreation to choose from and its shores hold some of Wisconsin's finest beau-kind you can think of, from rocky rapids to deep pools all the way to log snags. Undercut banks are also pretty numerous along this river. One could say there are a wide variety of methods for trout fishing on the Brule.

Canoeing is another fine aspect of the river. The Brule, with its many whitewater rapids, has grown into Canoeers Headquarters in the past few years. Many people come to challenge the upper stretches of

ty. If you want to experience some of the finest trout fishing or best canoeing around, I suggest you give the Brule River a try.

For more information on the Brule contact: Brule River State Forest, Box 125, Brule, WI 54820, (715) 372-4866.

predict it will be at least a decade before such buses are commercially available. Unless new technology rescues the park, park officials may have to impose a hotel-like reservation system on all accesses to the valley.

N.W.F. Rescues Grizzlies
Due to a recent request by the National Wildlife Federation, the Interior Department's Board of Land Appeals has delayed implementation of a permit to build an exploratory oil and gas well in Montana's Lewis and Clark National Forest. N.W.F. requested the delay on grounds that the BLM had violated the Endangered Species Act and National Environmental Act by issuing a permit that would destroy one of the prime grizzly bear habitats in the lower 48 states.

Iowa Pheasant/Quail Numbers Up
Preliminary studies point to good pheasant and bobwhite quail hunting in the Hawkeye State this fall. Wildlife research technicians report that the brood stock came through the mild winter in good shape and had ideal nesting conditions due to below-normal rainfall and above-normal temperatures. Because of the high number of birds this year, this fall could show a remarkable recovery from last year's poor season.

Grazing Benefits Growth
Besides the fact that individual animals are safer from predators when staying in a group, there is a less obvious benefit as well, says Syracuse University's Samuel McNaughton. Grazing is good for the food supply. It was found that a grazing herd actually increases the hardiness and thickens the leafage of the grasses and plants it eats.

Golden Anniversary on the auction block

Fish and Wildlife Service
Wanna bid on some rare birds?

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has a deal to delight even the most discriminating devotee of Duck Stamp designs. Fifteen unique, never-before offered sheets of the popular revenue stamp bearing the 1984-85 "Golden Anniversary" Duck Stamp design by Alabama artist William Morris will be auctioned to the highest bidders in November as part of the agency's annual Duck Stamp art competition. The design on these sheets features a pair of wigeon ducks and was issued in the year that the federal Duck Stamp program marked 50 years of support for wetlands protection and wildlife conservation.

The one-time auction of these collectors' Duck Stamp panels is designed to raise additional donations to the Migratory Bird Conservation Fund, through which the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service acquires vital waterfowl habitat for the National Wildlife Refuge System.

Fifteen press-run sheets, each bearing 120 1984-85 Duck Stamps, configured in four panes of 30 stamps per pane, will be offered for sealed-bid auction. The sheets measure

20% inches wide and 18 inches tall. The sheets are perforated and gummed and carry a full selva (border) bearing Bureau of Engraving and Printing plate number 173871 along each pane. Press color bars are displayed along the lower selva.

Overprinted along each pane's selva are the words "1934-84 50th anniversary" in gold lettering, a feature that no other Duck Stamp press sheets display. In addition, each sheet bears four unique numbers along the selva designating, in order, the sheet number, edition size, and pane number. (The first sheet to be auctioned, for example, bears the designations "01 of 15-1," "01 of 15-2," "01 of 15-3," and "01 of 15-4.")

Once Duck Stamp designs are selected by a panel of impartial judges in open competition, the revenue stamps are printed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in a two-stage litho-press/intaglio press process. The finished stamps are then sold by the U.S. Postal Service to nearly two million conservationists and stamp collectors who want to contribute to the nation's conservation effort.

The Fish and Wildlife Service has set a $2,000 minimum bid for each sheet of these Duck Stamps, with entrants limited to one bid. Sealed bids will be accepted beginning Sept. 1, 1985, through Nov. 1, 1985, and must be accompanied by a certified or cashier's check or money order for the full bid, payable to "Migratory Bird Conservation Fund."

Bids must be mailed to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, "Duck Stamp Sheets," P.O. Box 57020, Washington, D.C. 20037-0020. They must include a stamped, self-addressed business-size envelope.

UW research team tests pine theory

University News Service
Wild lily of the valley, hazel-brush and blueberry plants growing on the floors of hardwood forests indicate the land might better sustain groves of red pine.

That information has been known to scientists for many years, and now a team of researchers from UWSP and UW-Madison are pursuing the theory further in an evaluation of vegetation and soil characteristics associated with three commonly converted ecological land types on property in northern Wisconsin. The land being tested is owned by paper producing firms.

James E. Johnson of UWSP's College of Natural Resources faculty, his graduate student assistant, J.R. Troughan, and C.G. Lorimer of the forestry faculty at UW-Madison, are using 30 different plots in their study.

Ground flora such as the lily, blueberry and hazelbrush tends to grow on a drier soil that is better for production of pine than hardwoods, the researchers say.

Forest conversion on those properties would, in most cases, be a recapturing of the sites for their natural state of supporting pines as they did prior to the arrival of the first lumberjacks.

The research has been conducted for the past two years and has been part of the ongoing UW System Consortium for Extension and Research in Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Fish habitat improves trout, students' outlook

by Bob Robinson

On Saturday, Sept. 28, the UWSP Fisheries Society, under the guidance of Dr. Jack Heaton, held its eighth annual trout stream habitat improvement on the Little Plover River. The weather was ideal with temperatures in the mid-50s and plenty of sunshine. This was the first time in many years that students didn't have to fight off the rain.

The Little Plover is a ground-water-fed class one trout stream. It offers good brook trout fishing and provides a valuable resource for people to "get away from it all," even if no fish are caught.

Step one of the improvement work involved Jack Zimmerman, DNR area fish manager; Bob Hunt, director of cold water research for the DNR; and Dr. Jack Heaton, water resources professor for the university. Their initial work involved deciding how much improvement was needed for the river.

Step two involved the construction of a skeletal trout structure by a DNR habitat improvement crew. Using a powerful jet of water, posts were bored into the stream bottom. Planks were then placed on top, providing a platform for laying sandbags and sod.

Step three consisted of laying the sandbags on top of these structures and then filling in the old stream bed behind the structure with brush and dirt. Finally, sod was planted to prevent the water from eroding the structure away. This work was accomplished by 22 enthusiastic "tigers."

The construction of this "new" stream bank creates meanders which make the stream narrower and deeper, removing the two significant limiting factors for trout, space and cover. DNR studies have proven that this type of management is highly successful in increasing the trout-carrying capacity. The DNR and the student Fisheries Society have shown, through past fall electroshocking studies, that there were substantially more brook trout in the improved areas than in the unimproved areas. Last year's population was estimated at approximately 8,000 brookies.

All of the work that was done would normally have been completed by a DNR habitat improvement crew. These crews are funded entirely by the Wisconsin Trout Stamp, which this year costs trout anglers $3.25. It is a very small price to pay when one considers the positive results.

The area in which the work was done is used for demonstration purposes for many classes at the university. The structures allow the student to see management in action, something which is not readily picked up from a textbook.

Gridders edge Cougars, hike record to 3-0-1

by Kent Walstrom
Sports Editor

The Pointers, behind another superlative passing performance from veteran quarterback Dave Geissler, defeated Minnesota-Morris 35-30 to register their third victory of the season.

In an offensive showdown highlighting the aerial attacks of both teams, Geissler threw for four touchdowns and ran for another as the Pointers hiked their record to 3-0-1.

"I'd rate them (Minnesota-Morris) right up there with La Crosse," said coach D.J. LeRoy in a post game interview. "They're a very talented team, and I still pick them to win the MSUC (Minnesota State University Conference)."

"We tried to run the ball, but they just shut us down," LeRoy continued. "They have a very quick defensive line, and they caused some problems. So rather than try and muscle the ball at them, we did some things with the passing game that worked out real well."

Morris drove 66 yards in 12 plays on their opening possession for the first touchdown of the game, but the Pointers scored four plays later on a 67 yard pass play from Geissler to end Guy Otte to tie the game at 7-7 with six minutes remaining in the quarter.

Quarterback Dave Geissler

The Pointers again drove the length of the field on their next possession, but the drive stalled entering the second quarter and place kicker Kim Drake missed a 39 yard field goal attempt.

With the ball on their own 39. Morris went to the ground game, and nine plays later produced a touchdown and a 14-7 lead.

At 6:58 of the second quarter, the Pointers assumed possession, and aided by a 45 yard Geissler to Otte completion, drove the ball to the Morris one yard line. Geissler took the ball on a quarterback sneak a play later and scored a touchdown to even the game at 14-14, after Drake's successful extra point attempt.

The first half ended with plenty of drama, as the defenses forced two interceptions and a fumble within the final minute, but with the game still tied at 14-14.

The Cougars added a field goal to start the second half, but the Pointers countered with a four play drive that resulted in their third touchdown of the afternoon and a 21-17 lead.

On the ensuing kickoff, Morris fumbled at their own three but recovered the ball in the end zone, giving the Pointers possession on the 20. Two plays later Geissler found end Dave Steavpack in the end zone for a 28-17 spread.

Morris recovered quickly and marched 72 yards in 10 plays, but with a first down and goal at the Pointer eight, the offense was unable to produce a touchdown in four tries.

The Pointers successful goal line stand could well be considered one of the crucial turning points in the game, although the Cougars scored on their next possession to close the score to 28-23.

Pointer linebacker Steve Day intercepted an errant Morris pass at the Cougar 13 with two minutes gone in the fourth quarter, and Geissler quickly fired a strike to end Jim Lindholm on the first offensive play from scrimmage for the touchdown. Drake missed the extra point, but the lead was extended to 35-23.

The Cougars reeled off a 14 play, 87 yard drive for a touchdown to make the score 35-30, but could do nothing in the closing minutes to save the game.

"When you look at the game overall, the time possession, it looks as though our offense didn't control the ball, but it wasn't because we couldn't move down the field, it was because we moved the ball too fast," LeRoy observed.

Although Morris held an advantage in the number of total yards (447-362) and time possession, it was the Pointers who capitalized on their scoring opportunities, thanks to the passing of Geissler, who used his receivers equally during his scoring drives.

Ruggers lose again

by Scott Huelskamp
Staff Reporter

It's been a frustrating season for the Stevens Point Rugby Club, and it keeps getting more difficult.

Stevens Point dropped its third straight game, this time to Eau Claire, 22-13, on a rainy, muddy Saturday afternoon.

Eau Claire scored first on a three point kick, via a crucial Point penalty. But a determined Point squad countered within minutes with a three pointer of their own from Mike Rapp.

Eau Claire was able to dive into the try zone once more before the half, and the conversion kick gave the Blugolds a 9-3 advantage.

"We played them tough the first half," commented rugger Nick Clemens, "but we just gave them too many points on penalties. Those penalty points hurt us the most."

Eau Claire opened up the second stanza by scoring two quick tries off loose play within the first 20 minutes, stretching their lead to 19-3.

"We would be moving the ball great, getting it near the try zone, then boom, Eau Claire would get it right back and score," remarked a disgusted Jeff Woods. "That's just inexperience."

The Point ruggers then made their run at a victory. Woods pushed the ball into the try zone, his first this season, and the conversion kick made it 19-9. Nick Clemens tacked another four points onto Point's score, but a missed conversion kick left the score at 19-13.

The offensive output stalled, however, and Eau Claire sailed another penalty kick over the bar for a final of 22-13.

Eau Claire's kicker, who connected on three conversion tries, was a big surprise for Point.

"We watched him in practice, and he wasn't making anything, but in the game his kicks were just making it over the bar," said Clemens.

"We just don't have the cohesiveness as in past years. I think we need a little more experience and desire. The guys started coming around late in the game, but by then it was too late," added Woods, a veteran playing in his fifth season for the Pointers.

The Stevens Point "B" team posted an easy 22-7 victory.

The ruggers' season record dropped to 1-3 and the conference title is pretty much out of reach.

Racine's rugby team will visit the Stevens Point rugby (intramural) field at 1 p.m. Saturday.

NORTHFIELD, MN — The UW-Stevens Point women's field hockey team dropped their opening game to Grinnell College (Iowa), but fought back to defeat the University of Chicago and Carleton College at the Carleton Invitational here Friday and Saturday.

The Lady Pointers saw their seven game winning streak come to an end at the hands of Grinnell College on Friday. The squads battled to a scoreless tie in 70 minutes of regulation time, then played two scoreless ten minute overtimes. The tie was finally broken by a series of five penalty strokes (taken seven yards from the goal) by each team. The Lady Pointers lost in strokes 2-1 and Grinnell College earned a 1-0 victory. The Lady Pointers outshot Grinnell 20-12, and took 22 penalty corners to Grinnell's three.

Coach Nancy Page commented on the loss. "We should have won the game in regulation time. We had the chances but couldn't get the ball in the goal," said Page. "It's (penalty strokes) a very hard way to lose a game, especially after playing for 90 minutes."

The Lady Pointers came back Saturday and took out their frustrations from Friday's loss on the Univ. of Chicago. Kristen Kemerling scored the first goal with only 1:02 gone in the contest and kept the pressure on throughout the game en route to an 8-0 win. Kemerling scored three goals, Tina Roesken and Sheila Downing added two apiece and Jan Maslowski scored one goal. UWSP outshot their opposition 33-5 and had 18

Inconsistent play continues to hurt Lady netters

by Kent Walstrom
Sports Editor

Coach David Nass' women's tennis team continued their sea-saw ways by splitting a pair of matches at home this past week.

The Pointers, now 4-6 on the season, lost to UW-Oshkosh 6-3 last Thursday, then rebounded to dominate a weaker St. Norbert team 7-2 on Monday.

Due to poor weather conditions, both matches were played indoors in the Quandt Fieldhouse, where the slick surface of the gym floor greatly hindered the quality of competition.

Against Oshkosh, Nass was forced to implement a change in play which involved more serve and volley action than the Pointers normally use. "The strategy didn't work as well as I'd hoped, and the net result was a loss to a school that we should have been able to beat," said Nass.

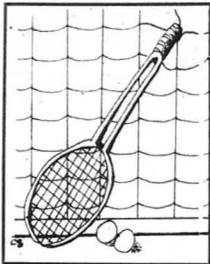

Senior Lori O'Neill continues to play impressively at No. 3 singles, downing Oshkosh's Zita Wenda in straight sets, 6-3, 6-1, while newcomer Amy Standiford added an identical 6-3, 6-1 victory at No. 6 singles over Sue Fox.

The Pointers needed all three doubles victories to win the match, but faltered at both the No. 1 and No. 2 seeds. Standiford teamed with Margo Grafe to win the No. 3 doubles match 6-4, 4-6, 7-6, but Oshkosh had already clinched the victory.

"Our veteran players at No. 1 and No. 2 doubles are making an intolerable amount of unforced errors, and those errors have been dragging us down throughout the season," said Nass. "When the unforced errors stop, we're going to start winning."

The Pointers bounced back to easily defeat St. Norbert College on Monday, but Nass was the first to point out that playing in Quandt was not a true test of either team's capabilities.

"I'm happy with the outcome of this match (against St. Norbert)," said Nass, who appeared content to put the match behind him and focus on Wednesday's meeting with La Crosse.

"Robin Haseley played an exceptional match at No. 2 singles," Nass continued. "She came back after losing the first set to beat a hard-hitting opponent 3-6, 6-3, 6-1."

Lori O'Neill (No. 3) and Kol-leen Onsrud (No. 4) garnered straight set victories while Margo Grafe won at No. 6 singles with a 3-6, 6-3, 6-1 decision to give the Pointers a 4-2 lead entering the doubles matches.

"I just put her (Margo Grafe) into the starting singles lineup today for the first time in several weeks, and she did a nice job for us," Nass added.

"In doubles play, the formation we've been experimenting with is paying off, and I think if we keep executing as well as we did today we'll have a better chance of winning more and more doubles matches as the season progresses."

The Pointers swept their doubles matches, all in straight sets, to post a 7-2 decision and lift their record to 4-6.

The Pointers traveled to La Crosse Wednesday for a conference match, and Nass is well aware of the talent they faced. "They've been fortunate enough to pick up three transfer players who are presently at the top of their lineup, so they're a completely changed team from what we saw last year," Nass noted.

Golfers on the rise

The UWSP men's golf team claimed runner-up honors at the ten team Mascoutin Invitational held in Oshkosh last Sunday and Monday, then added a third place finish at the Ranger Golf Classic in Kenosha this Friday and Saturday.

UW-Oshkosh led the field from start to finish at their own Mascoutin Tourney to clinch the title with an 801 (391-410) total. The Pointers passed Eau Claire during the second day to finish in second place with an 821 (401-420). The Blugolds captured third with an 830 total, followed by Platteville (833); Lewis University (835); Parkside (838); Marquette (849); Lawrence (896); and Green Bay (904). St. Norbert withdrew from competition following the first day of play.

Bob Schuhart earned meet medalist honors with a 156 total, while teammate Andy Batzner finished a shot back at 157 for second.

The Pointers finished three golfers at 163. Kurt Rebolz shot an impressive opening day round of 77, but poor weather conditions on the second day pushed him to an 86. Teammates Mickey Gilbert and Mike Frieder also notched two day totals of 163. Mitch Bowers followed at one shot back for a 164, while Greg Majka and Jamie Keller totaled 171 and 172, respectively.

"With the wind and rain it was pretty tough to score well on the second day, but our men did

"Dave had a super game," said LeRoy. "He threw under pressure well, he threw some nice passes, and he ran out of the pocket and picked up some crucial first downs when he had to. He played a very, very good game."

The Pointers, who play host to Whitewater in this Saturday's Homecoming game, will need improved play from the defensive line, which has been suspect through the early part of this season.

"They're (Whitewater) going to try and control the ball so that we don't have it, simply because they know that if we have the ball we're going to pass," commented LeRoy. "I think the important thing to look at when you play a team like Whitewater is not to make mistakes, to play good, aggressive defense, and take the opportunities that exist," LeRoy concluded. "We need to play good, fundamental football and hold good field position, and we're going to take whatever they give us."

Oshkosh again took top honors in Friday and Saturday's Ranger Classic in Kenosha, finishing at 792. Parkside notched a second with a two day total 792, followed by Stevens Point, third at 804. Whitewater added a fourth place finish to end at 805, followed by Stout, 821; Platteville, 840; Marquette, 840; St. Norbert, 848; Lawrence, 869; MSOF, 878; Green Bay, 878; Roosevelt, 899; and Concordia, 920.

Parkside's Rick Elsen and Bob Schuhand of Oshkosh tied for meet medalist honors with a two day total 152.

"We played two solid rounds of golf," Kasson observed. "This was a nice way for us to tune up for the conference and district meets."

Harriers finish 3rd

by Kent Walstrom
Sports Editor

The UWSP women's J.V. cross country team learned the value of experience with a disappointing third place finish at the Sheboygan Invitational last Friday.

UW-Oshkosh won the team championship with a 29 point total, followed by St. Norbert, 45, and Stevens Point, 46. Several two year schools also competed, but the majority of them did not field full squads.

"It was a real tough 5000 meter course," commented coach Len Hill, who treated the race as a low-key meet and kept three of his top freshmen home.

Cheryl Cynor was the top Pointer finisher, touring the course in 20:49 while placing second overall. Teammate Sandy Kline finished in the eighth spot with a time of 21:48, while Pam Pryzbelski added a ninth place finish with a clocking of 21:54. Kay Wallender (13th, 22:13) and Maggie Krochak (14th, 22:15) rounded out the top five spots for the Pointers, whose varsity will return to action this Saturday at the St. Olaf Invitational in Minnesota.

"Some great saves for us this weekend," said Page. "I'm very proud of the team's effort. We really bounced back from Friday's loss."

The Lady Pointers, with a 9-1 overall record and a 3-0 mark in conference play, return to action when they host their Alumni on Saturday, Oct. 5th.

Wunder named new women's head basketball coach

by Julie Thayer
Staff Reporter

The UW-Stevens Point women's basketball team has named a new head coach for the '85-'86 season. Her name is Linda Wunder. Wunder is a graduate of Brookfield High School near Milwaukee where she played basketball for four years and was named a high school All-American. She went on to the University of Illinois, Champaign, where she pursued a degree in physical education and played four years of college basketball on a scholarship. Unable to find a teaching and coaching position directly out of college, Wunder coached and substituted for almost a year. She coached JV basketball and was an assistant men's track coach at Brown Deer High School. Returning the following year to Brookfield East High School, Wunder coached JV tennis, JV basketball and was the girls' head track coach while working as a teacher's aide.

She went on to pursue graduate studies in athletic administration at the University of Illinois, Chicago and was chosen as the first full time coach they had ever hired for their women's basketball program.

Wunder then came to UW-Stevens Point where she is currently the women's head basketball coach. Wunder is enthusiastic about coming to UWSP. "I am very impressed with the way they handle their athletic department," said Wunder, "as well as the amount of time, effort and community backing they get."

Wunder plans to begin building a good program this year. She wants to have a winning team but knows that does not happen overnight. Recruiting is the key to building a team and that is what she plans to do. "Regardless of how good a coach you are at this level," says Wunder, "it's come to the point where college athletics are big time and you can't win if you don't recruit." She feels there is a lot of local talent being overlooked or going to other schools which offer scholarships. "This part of the state is real strong for girls basketball so if we can keep some of the good kids at home, it will be good for us and I think we can do that."

Wunder intends to work hard this season. She expects her players to give 100 percent and they will receive 100 percent in return. "I don't think Stevens Point will be a cake walk for anybody anymore," said Wunder.

Wunder anticipates the return of several players. Karla Miller will be back this season after sitting out last year with a stress fracture. Both Karla and her sister Mary will join the team after the volleyball season ends. Sonja Sorenson, a transfer student from Whitewater who led the team in scoring and rebounds while playing only half the season, will also return. Wunder feels the Lady Pointers will be very strong on the inside. Dina Rasmussen, Amy Gradecki Sorenson and the Miller team will form a nucleus of tough, experienced players.

Wunder is enthusiastic about the future. "These girls have worked harder and have better attitudes than scholarship players I've worked with in the last two years. They're a pleasure and a delight to work with." Linda Wunder is an optimist. Her patience as a coach and a person may bring to UWSP a successful women's basketball program.

Roadrunners 1st at Sheboygan

by Wade Turner
Staff Reporter

The UWSP men's cross country team showed their depth as they won the Sheboygan Invitational last Friday.

The Pointers won the meet with a total of 29 points. Runner-up UW-Oshkosh finished second with 43 and Green Bay had 54 for third place.

Pointer Monte Shaw was second overall with a time of 21:08. He was nipped by Randy Damsot of UW-Superior who posted a winning time of 20:04.

"I thought Monte ran extremely well," noted coach Rick Witt. "He ran a good race for the toughness of the course."

The other top finishers for Point were bunched fairly close together. Dave Schleiter, Dean Schillinger and Steve Wollmer were fourth, fifth, and sixth, respectively.

These runners were followed closely by Thomas Schnell, Tim Olson, Jon Elmore and Steve Allison. They were 10th through 13th, respectively.

Witt was pleased with the outcome of the meet. "I thought our people ran really hard and I saw some good progress made. Those runners not able to run at the front of the pack before were able to do so here. This meet showed that we have good depth."

Witt also noted that a lot was on the line for some of the runners.

"This meet would help determine who would be running at Notre Dame," Witt stated. "A lot of the guys really wanted to race and it showed in how they ran."

The Pointers will travel to South Bend, Ind., to compete in the Notre Dame Invitational this Friday.

The work done on the stream in the past eight years is a classic example of cooperation between the DNR, the County Conservation Commission and CNR students. It allows the student an opportunity to gain experience in his/her field, offers work relevant to his/her future, and presents an educating and fun experience for all. Due to opportunities like this, the university is leading the nation in placement and practical knowledge in fish management, and will continue to do so as long as students take an active interest in their future.

the story and then confront the professor in question. You may think this is a futile measure, because the chairman will inevitably stick up for his professors, but what you must realize is that it is his duty to make sure his department runs as smoothly as possible. Thus, he will take a very unbiased view of the situation in order to make sure he can keep up the integrity of his department.

All of this may sound like a lot of work just to take care of one problem class. But, just think of the thousands of students who will have this professor after you. Should they be cheated the same way you are?

The choice is totally up to you, but if you're like me, you'll want to have something to show for the $3,000-plus tuition bill you receive each year.

POINTER PROGRAM

this week's highlight

Thursday, October 3-Saturday, October 5

Homecoming 1985—Don't miss out on any of the fun as the Homecoming activities continue through Saturday. Thursday, get your group together and enter the Yell Like Hell contest at Goerke Field. On Friday, it's the dreaded Homecoming Decathlon at 3 p.m. This contest of crazy games and races is sure to get you fired up for the weekend. Cap it off Saturday with the Homecoming parade Saturday morning and the Homecoming football game in the afternoon, as the Pointers go up against UW-Whitewater. Finally, Saturday night, enjoy the Homecoming dance in the UC-Encore from 9-11:30.

SPORTS

Saturday, October 5

Pointer Football—This is it, the big game for the Pointers. Head on out to Goerke Field as the Pointers clash with the UW-Whitewater Warhawks in their Homecoming contest. The Pointers hope to improve on their 3-0-1 record, while the Warhawks will try to grab their first win of the season as they stand at 0-3-1. Game time 1:30 at Goerke Field.

LIVE

Thursday, October 3

RCA recording artist Vince Gill—You may remember Vince from his days as lead singer for the country-pop group Pure Prairie League. Now he's out on his own and still making good music with his own band. Come on down and check out the music tonight as UAB welcomes Vince to the UC-Encore for one show at 9 p.m.

CINEMA SCOPE

Tuesday and Wednesday, October 8 & 9

"Lenny"—Dustin Hoffman's bravura portrayal of the tortured, self-destructive, brilliantly inventive comedian Lenny Bruce is enough reason to see "Lenny." The film received several Academy Award nominations, including ones for Hoffman, Valerie Perrine and director Bob Fosse. Drug addict Lenny Bruce died in 1966 after being the subject of plays, books and films. The film has the advantage of using material from Bruce's trials which are performed by Hoffman as part of his nightclub act. The film shows both nights at 7:30 and 9:30 in room 333 of the Comm. Building. Brought to you by UFS.

Thursday and Friday, October 3 & 4

"Spinal Tap"—UAB presents this interesting look at the life of rock and roll superstars. Director Rob Reiner attacks fads, drugs, big business, hip language, sex, groupies and filmmakers. "Spinal Tap" is a very savvy satire of the rock and roll scene. Check it out Thursday in the Wisconsin Room and Friday in the UC-PBR. Showing both nights at 7 and 9:15.

WWSP 90FM

"For a Change"

If you didn't receive a WWSP 90FM fall program guide in the mail, stop by the 90FM booth in the UC Concourse October 7-11 and pick one up. WWSP T-shirts will also be on sale. Tune in WWSP 90FM "For a Change."

WWSP 90FM is the only Central Wisconsin radio station to offer alternative, commercial-free programming. For everything from new music to jazz, tune in 90FM "For a Change."

It's funky. It's bad. It's rhythm 'n blues. It's "Time has Come Today." Every Sunday from noon to 2 p.m., the Midnight Mover takes you from the '40s to the '70s, from Nappy Brown to James Brown, from Memphis to Motown. Listen to 90FM "For a Change."

personals

PERSONAL: Judy, does your V.D. work or did you wash it? Keep it away from magnets or people with magnetic personalities. P.S. How are your two J-maka holdes doing? Has anyone thrown them around your room yet?

PERSONAL: Did you hear that Pat Summerall is here? It's time—he's at the 16th hole, so stop on by and see his hat and his chest hairs!

PERSONAL: Hey Kim! Is it true you are a fun person to be with or a person for a fun time? I'm confused. I guess I'll have to go to T-hawk to find out. (Maybe in the bathroom in Scuffs.)

PERSONAL: Hey Boober and T, should we quit again today? I'll think about you in Milwaukee. Not much, but I will think of you. Del.

PERSONAL: Dear Peter, sit back and relax. Don't you lift a little finger. I will do everything for you. I will make all your dreams and wishes come true. Love, Wendy. P.S. Maybe I might even be lucky enough to be called your "Mrs. Pan" someday.

PERSONAL: T and Boober, that's it. I just can't take it anymore. This time I may just quit for good. And I would, if only my car would start. Del.

PERSONAL: Sandy—to a special friend—I love you! Thanks for being you and for brightening my life with your friendship. You're missed greatly! Love, Trish.

PERSONAL: Ape, Bev came over, but you never did. The "Brady Bunch," Ziggy.

PERSONAL: Attention Moose (Kendall Dehn): Ver ees dee darseneen room?

PERSONAL: Dawn and Maurcen—Next time you want to go to La Crosse, better take a map or at least get directions before you get to Minnesota. I'm sure "not-sober fest" was fun. Sorry we couldn't make it. We got lost at Jeremiah's. Your two friends that didn't make it to dinner.

PERSONAL: To Cinderella: Quick, get out the classy rags. RHA is having a semi-formal Homecoming dance Saturday, Oct. 3, 9 to 11:30 p.m. From: The Great Pumpkin.

PERSONAL: The bathroom walls of Apartment 101 will never be the same. Dave, I didn't know. Uncoooooooooo! But you were great on the intercom. Congratulations Nos. 12, 3 and 16. We'll have to do it again some time, maybe after we paint. Your hosts.

PERSONAL: Bailey, Bailey, Bailey, Bailey—No doubt great minds think alike and then there's us. PD.

PERSONAL: Casino night's over, but if you missed the fun last night, get out to Yell Like Hell and Vince Gill tonight. Decathlon, Run for Cancer and Edward Jackman Friday. Saturday is the big parade, the game and dance. Don't be left out.

Call UAB for details.
PERSONAL: Keri's p's are gone, so alright! Chicago's in the zoso club.

PERSONAL: Laura—Knutzen Hall—Been running lately? I guess I missed again. How about stopping by and watching a stupid video? Sounds fun, huh? The last one we watched was! Keep in shape. Who loves you baby? S.

PERSONAL: To the guy in the quiet Volvo—Weeks of skimming the Personals has finally paid off. This one's for you, bud. All my love, a girl in a red Pontiac.
PERSONAL: Play—Kevin, Kurt, Kyle. Love, your three sisters.

PERSONAL: To the 1985 Football Cheerleaders and Stuntmen: You guys are doing a fantastic job, and I just want to say thanks for all the time and effort all of you have put in to get this far. Get psyched up for Homecoming! Love, Chris. P.S. Welcome to the squad, Tom!

PERSONAL: Kid gore-tex knows how to camp—unlike all the other clowns.

PERSONAL: Watson Staff: Long live Pee-Wee! You're all great and I'm lucky to work with such a special bunch. Tequila and chubby bunny! Here's to a great year! Love, Trish.

PERSONAL: Kelly Sandivik: Sorry I will miss your birthday on Oct. 5! Have a great birthday and a great Homecoming weekend! I'll tip one for you. Love your favorite housemate (not to mention your only housemate).

PERSONAL: 3 East Watson—You're the greatest! Thanks for making me feel at home! Wow! Here's to cottage fries! I love you all. Keep eating. Love, Trish.

PERSONAL: W.B.—To the special man in my life, I love you! I look forward to many years with you! You're the best! All my love forever, C.B.

PERSONAL: Wisner, you pencil-necked geekster! "Oh, it's just a reflex!" Don't try to bribe me with your cookies! How's Sue doing? Ziggy.

PERSONAL: What kind of stupid puts a sink on their lawn?

PERSONAL: Bev, you Camp Potta Watomie summertime chick, where is this place? Nevada? "Steiff, this is true." Have any guys come over lately and shouted, "Girls don't come in now, I'm taking a bathroom break."

PERSONAL: Zags, I'll bet you are sitting right next to a great looking girl, specifically a Linda! How was Oktoberfest? C.B. Herbie.

PERSONAL: To our special friend—Lorie O'Connor—we hope you had a good birthday and we can't wait to party with you on Saturday! Kay & Heather.

PERSONAL: Attention Kim Wolfe: Please drop Glen and Jason. They don't have any color. Love Sigmund Snopek III.

PERSONAL: Birdbrain, how are the little sisters at Sigma Tau workshops? Still have your momentum? Too bad you weren't "officially" prepared for a little dipping! Your roomie.

PERSONAL: Attention Kim Kilroy: Thanks for the looms. Get it?

PERSONAL: Is Marino for real? Who do you think is going to buy this year? Not Lynn Dickey. The soda people.

PERSONAL: Mike-Al Smitty, how's the off-campus living? Heard at least you're playing some brutal ball. Congrats on getting your name in The Pointer sports section. It's about time you get some respect. Charles Baarkley.

Dining on Campus

The University Centers present a variety of dining options to serve the University Community. Our assortment of fine eateries, each with its own deliciously unique menu, offers something to satisfy everyone's appetite, every day of the week. Cash or Personal Points are accepted in all of our dining areas.

Let us be your host for a unique dining experience, in the Center of things.

Travel from gyros to cheese nuggets on the Subway's menu of sandwiches and appetizers, located in Allen Center.

Amigos

Experience the flavor of Mexico at Amigos, located in Dehot Center. Discover deliciously authentic Mexican food from mild to wild.

The University Center has six dining areas, each offering a different atmosphere and menu. We have something to appeal to everyone's tastebuds.

Located in the Lower Level behind Recreational Services, Jeremiah's provides a pub atmosphere, perfect for meeting friends after class, a film, or coffeehouse. Jeremiah's specializes in pizza, char-broiled burgers, nachos, specialty drinks, and vegetable munchies.

the plaza

The Plaza, located on the second level, provides the central location for the other five eateries:

WOODEN SPOON

You'll find a selection of hot entrees in a self-service a la carte line with a contemporary setting at Wooden Spoon. Vegetables, salads and desserts compliment the hot dishes for a complete meal.

CORNER MARKET

Designed with fast service in mind, you can walk through Corner Market and choose from ready-made sandwiches, fresh fruit, snacks, and a variety of beverages.

The PARK PLACE

Specializing in items hot off the grill, Park Place offers thick, juicy hamburgers, french fries, onion rings and malts, as well as various hot sandwiches and beverages served throughout the day.

piccadeli

Would you like to create your own submarine sandwich? Piccadeli lets you do just this! Imagine a delicatessen-style sandwich, piled high with cold cuts, cheese, sauces and relishes on a choice of fresh breads or rolls. Add a salad, drink and ice cream, then seat yourself in Piccadeli's indoor cafe.

FREMONT TERRACE

The raised seating areas of Fremont Terrace, overlooking Fremont Street, offers you a relaxed fine dining atmosphere with waited service. Enjoy a variety of entrees with a gourmet's touch.
