Lobbyists optimistic about Governor's response

by Karen Rivedal

"Tommy Thompson has taken the steps to shore up the considerable position of UW students and the governor's office," according to Jim Smith, United Council of Student Government's Legislative Affairs Director. "He's a busy guy," says Smith, "and he can't keep track of every group in the state and what they do. We let him know where we're at and what we have going."

Smith is convinced that the meeting has cleared the mutual adversarial air in Madison: "Students and the governor can work together instead of against each other."

An upcoming visit by Governor Thompson to a United Council meeting is one example of this new cooperation. Smith says the Governor has agreed to attend either the January meeting at UW-Fox Valley or the February meeting at UW-Green Bay. UW student government representatives who belong to United Council will attend. Currently, eleven of the thirteen four-year UW schools, including UWSP, are full members.

Also in the works thanks to the October deliberations are plans for a direct meeting of UW student government presidents with the governor and his staff. On December 11, the presidents will present an agenda of student goals and suggestions to executive staff members. Governor Thompson plans to join the meeting for one half hour to an hour, according to Smith, to discuss one main agenda item. The agenda will be determined by the student governments at the United Council meeting this weekend in Eau Claire.

"Most likely it will be our platform," says Smith, "and we'll probably bring up some of the minority recruitment and retention ideas that the UW System proposed this week."

The UW System's record for less than five percent minority faculty together with drop-out rates for minority students reaching eighty percent at some UW campuses makes minority issues a problem that "the university must do something about," according to Smith. The United Council 1987-88 platform (see sidebar) developed and approved by United Council staff and UW student government member campuses. It contains eleven resolutions, down from last year's tally of fifty-three, and covers legislative, minority, academic, and women's issues.

To foster further productive communication between United Council and Madison, a monthly meeting was approved between UW System liaison Jeff Bartsen and United Council staffers. This arrangement completes what Smith sees as the development of "an open-door policy" for United Council in the governor's office.

"He made it perfectly clear," says Smith, "that if we have a problem to make sure we go over there and talk to him, which definitely makes us feel good walking out of the office."

Dr. George C. Becker of the biology department gave a lecture on sex relations on campus to residents of Pray-Sims Hall on Monday, September 20, in the hall's basement.

Dr. Becker, who received his degrees from the University of Wisconsin, has been a member of the UWSP staff since 1967 and is well known for his talks on sexual relations. More than 300 men from the hall attended the lecture as did one girl.

Every Saturday morning since October 29, 1966, there has been a small group of people standing in front of the post office between 11:30 and 12:30 protesting the war in Vietnam. Generally between 25 and 30 persons show up for the vigils. They include professors, university and high school students and other townpeople.
The University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point’s total operating budget for this school year has been set at $63 million, about $3.5 million from last year, according to Diemer, assistant chancellor for business affairs.

Despite being a substantial amount of money, Diemer noted that it is "still a bare bones because of the large number of people it serves."

Salaries account for the largest portion of the budget, approximately $41 million or 65 percent of $32 million. This money covers wages for approximately 960 permanent employees on the faculty, academic and classified staff, another 100 limited term employees and 1,600 part-time student workers.

Add to the salaries another $7.5 million or approximately 12 percent of the budget for employee fringe benefits.

Diemer said "things are definitely tight" for such things as capital items and supplies and travel.

For example, the state provides UW-SP with $1,568,000 for supplies and travel. In the past decade when costs nearly doubled, this access was increased by only about $250,000, the assistant chancellor explained.

About $1.5 million is appropriated for capital items. Diemer lauded the faculty and staff for stretching those dollars at a time when funds are small in comparison with the needs for new instructional equipment and for replacement of existing items.

Loans and grants to students, most of which are financed by the federal government, account for more than $5.5 or nine percent of the budget.

Energy costs run an average of $5,000 per day for heat, lights, cooling and food preparation. Part of this $1.8 million annual bill is covered by receipts from students for dorm room rent. However, the largest chunk of it is financed by state tax dollars, and the legislators approached a budget based on energy consumed last year. For UW-SP that amounts to a $150,000 utility budget reduction.

The problem with that, Diemer said, is that the university was not able to keep its energy saving for the unusually mild winter of 1986-87 to offset any higher costs in the future, and there are predictions that this winter will be colder than usual.

Another mandated cutback in the budget will necessitate a reduction in the size of UW-SP’s fleet of vehicles. Though intended to save money, this policy may cost the university more than ever, Diemer said, because if there are fewer university cars available to people needing them on behalf of the institution, these people will be required to use their own cars. In turn, those licensed will be paid more than the amount it costs the UW-SP to operate its own vehicles.

Rick Rothman, university budget planner, and Sandra Knap, program assistant, have compiled a booklet, "Where Does the Money Come From and Where Does It Go," that summarizes UW-SP’s budget.

It may be surprising to many people, Diemer observed, that in the graphs they developed, it is reported that far less than half—41 percent—of the total university funding comes from Wisconsin taxpayers. Twenty-five percent is from student fees for room, board and other user charges, 20 percent is from student tuition, 13 percent from the federal government primarily for student financial aid, an one percent from various state agencies and as gifts.

The problem with that, Diemer said, is that while UW-SP’s budget was developed this year, officials determined that for insurance purposes the value of the 46 buildings on the campus totals $18 million.

In addition, there is nearly $15 million in construction currently underway or approved to be done at a later date.

The University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point has undergone a rigorous evaluation to be accepted to a chapter of the Honorary Society of Phi Kappa Phi.

Ceremonies and a dinner will be held Dec. 1 to mark establishment of the new organization on campus.

The society promotes excellence in all fields of higher education and recognizes outstanding achievements by students, faculty and others. There are about 265 chapters nationwide including five in Wisconsin.

Phi Kappa Phi evaluation prospective member institutions on the basis of their curriculum, the credentials of their faculty, library holdings, and physical facilities. "The society serves the interests of the student capable of excellence by insisting that in order to acquire a chapter, an institution provide the means and atmosphere conducive to academic excellence," states a Phi Kappa Phi brochure.

A team of educators from other universities made two evaluation visits to UW-SP.

Members of the team, also professors of foreign languages and chair of his department, said the visitors operated "much like an accrediting agency, in addition to being the foreign languages chair Seiler is involved in Phi Kappa Phi."

Though the society membership will be made up primarily of students, the organization’s bylaws call for most of the officers to come from the ranks of the faculty. It’s a technique to maintain continuity. Seiler, who joined Helen Gentry, assistant chancellor for university relations, in making arrangements for establishment of the chapter, has been elected president by the 18 professors who had been affiliated with Phi Kappa Phi in their student days and are now charter members of UWSP’s chapter.

Other officers are Joseph Harris of biology, president-elect; William Love of business and economics, vice president; Roberta Stokes of the Academic Achievement Center, secretary; Diane Lilly of home economics, treasurer; and William LeGrande of biology, public relations.

The student membership will be open to juniors ranking in the top five percent of their class academically and seniors who are in the top 10 percent of their classes. Graduate students, faculty and academic

What happens when you gather 10 screaming, enthusiastic cheer squads and five talented professionals in your gym in one afternoon? The 1987 Cheer and Pom Pon Clinic and Competition, of course! This year's clinic, held on Sunday, November 8, was organized by UAB's Teresa Keenan. Teresa commented, "This year's clinic was by far the biggest and most talented ever." The competition included cheer squads from River Falls, College of St. Thomas-Minnesota, Oakshott, Eau Claire, Whitewater, Platteville, Carroll College, Stout, and UWSP's own football and basketball squads. Each squad had five minutes to perform a routine incorporating pyramids, stunts and dancing set to music.

The pom pon squads also had tough competition from St. Thomas-Minnesota, St. Cloud-Minnesota, UW-Green Bay, Parkside, Whitewater and UWSP's pom pon squad.

The morning began with the cheer team competition. The level of skill was the best it has been, with squads performing the most difficult stunts and pyramids. Enthusiasm was at its highest point with tumbling, jumps and crashes as each squad was given their opportunity to strut their stuff in style.

Following the cheer team competition, the pom pon squads added the spotlight. The talent of each individual incorporated with 10 or 20 others expressed the skill and timing of each squad. After the competition there was an open hour lunch break to relax.

The afternoon competition began by separating the pom pon squads from the cheer teams. The pom pon trophies for 1st, 2nd and 3rd were handed out first with St. Thomas-Minnesota in 1st, UWSP in 2nd and St. Cloud-Minnesota taking 3rd. The excitement grew as the trophies for 1st, 2nd and 3rd place were awarded to the cheer squads. In 3rd place was UWSP's basketball cheer squad, UW-Eau Claire in 2nd place and College of St. Thomas-Minnesota taking 1st place. A "Spirit Stick" was also awarded to St. Thomas for enthusiasm based on team voting. Judges, qualified personnel chosen from Stevens Point and Madison, based scores on enthusiasm, entrance, exits, timing, appearance, recoveries and overall effect of the routine.

The Association for Community Tasks (A.C.T.) is a student volunteer organization at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point which provides community service to Stevens Point and surrounding communities. The organization matches student volunteers with community agencies where volunteer service is needed.

Founded in the fall of 1977, A.C.T. consists of six volunteer programs with approximately 50 students. Today, just ten years later, A.C.T. consists of more than 600 student volunteers and approximately 50 public and parochial schools.

The recipients of A.C.T.'s efforts range from the developmentally disabled at Community Services, Inc., to elderly at the Portage County Home.

A.C.T.'s programs are divided into six categories: Developmental Disabilities, Health Related Programs, Public Interest Programs, Senior Citizen programs, Native American programs and Mental Health programs.

We need every volunteer possible. There are still a number of volunteer positions available. For information, please call the office located in the Campus Activities complex or call X2280.

"1964...As the Beatles" performs Saturday

UWSP News release

"1964...As the Beatles," a band that recreates the look and the sound of the Fab Four, will perform at 8 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 14 at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

Tickets are on sale at the University Center Information Desk and at Campus Records. The cost is $6 for the public and $3 for UW-SP students. The performance in Berg Gym is sponsored by the University Activities Board.

The group features Benson as John Lennon, Cary Grimes as Paul McCartney, Greg Grimes as Ringo Starr and Bob Miller as George Harrison. They recreate what the Beatles were like as a live band, including material up through the "Ringo" album, since the British rock group stopped touring in 1966.

"We try to pull off as much as we can with two guitars, bars and drums. We don't use any extra musicians or synthesizers," says Benson. "We accumulated all the guitars and amplifiers that were the exact same years and models that the Beatles played." Bassist Grimes taught himself to play left-handed, a six month process, because the look was more accurate. The group has two sets of costumes it wears on stage—the black tuxedo suits and the collarless grey Chesterfield outfits.

Benson recalls playing at a Beatles convention in Washington, D.C. attended by Al Stair, former president of Apple Records. "We saw him at the back of the room listening and then he shook his head and left. We thought, oh no, he really hated us. But he told us later, 'Your voices sounded so much like the boys, that I found myself looking around the room for old mates of mine that I used to stand with—it just got too weird.'"

1964 is booked an average of four nights a week. Usually it plays in the United States about eight weeks and then spends two weeks performing in Canada. "Audiences have ranged from 200 to 35,000 listeners at an outdoor show.

"The crowds keep getting bigger and bigger," says the group's agent. "The Beatles have the widest demographic group of any band. The music is just timeless."

Dollars and Sense

On April 18, 1987, Chancellor Marshall said UWSP is "chronically under-funded. This university doesn't get enough money."

Really?

Since 1982, UWSP has received $2 million from the U.S. Dept of Education, in a Title III grant to make this campus a major center of computing competency.

Can't argue with that. UWSP is a showcase facility now. Computer illiterates come here from far and wide to speak in user-friendly tongues and worship the AT&T god at our mecca. Among the wonders:

- cheap, accessible student labs;
- 400 personal desktop computer facilities;
- a campus-computer-connecting Information Systems Network (ISN) of national repute.

Student Life got computers too, but this university doesn't get no national repute.

$100,000 worth of money for that. But you know, money's cheap, $1.3 million.

Telephones, for $249,000.

Arts and sciences, for $600,000.

The university borrowed the University Reserve Fund, where old art voice/data communication system.

Well, let's see, what else have we bought?

Since 1982, UWSP has received $2 million from the UW-System, largely for research, concerning the falling crane hoists. But this one is academic. The addition will be used largely for research, concerning the university's attempt to grow money on trees, I think.

AT&T heard about the university's funding problems and gave us $500,000 worth of free computers. They're nice and pretty tip-top. How's your checkbook, feeling the tuition increase? Hope there are no regrets, because those mistakes will haunt you forever. In the recent fiscal scandal surrounding the nomination of Donald Ginsberg to the Supreme Court of the United States, I feel that the time has come to vindicate myself from my dark past, so that I may, once and for all, get on with my life.

So it appears the university is looking pretty tip-top. How's your checkbook?

In 1985, UWSP bought a state-of-the-art voice/data communication system.

Telemphones, for $1.3 million. It was paid for within the budget.

On July 15, 1987, UWSP bought $100,000 worth of SMART and then installed it on 600 university computers. Despite not having any money.

Let's see, what else have we bought? Oh yes, the Comm. Bldg. renovation. I don't know why, exactly, but now the first floor has "people pockets" with wooden benches where you can sit, in the hallway, during your spare time. There's lots of mirrors on the walls too, to watch yourself in stunning mid-walk reflection. Let's not forget the large and mysterious glass cases, which are carpeted and have nothing inside. And the plastic plants, that's a plus.

This improvement cost UWSP $249,000. A small part of that came from the U.C. reserve, but that should be no surprise.

How about that landscaping between Old Main, Student Services, and the U.C.? It only cost $219,000 and look at all the cement we got.

Don't forget the Paper Science addition. You can see that every time you walk by the Science Bldg. and dodge the falling crane hoists. But this one is academic. The addition will be used largely for research, concerning the university's attempt to grow money on trees, I think.

AT&T heard about the university's funding problems and gave us $500,000 worth of free computers. They're nice and pretty tip-top. How's your checkbook, feeling the tuition increase? Hope there are no regrets, because those mistakes will haunt you forever.

In recent years I have made regrettable mistakes: mistakes which have continued to haunt me, even though I have tried to leave them behind. But, in light of the recent scandal surrounding the nomination of Donald Ginsberg to the Supreme Court of the United States, I feel that the time has come to vindicate myself from my dark past, so that I may, once and for all, get on with my life.

To those of you who have followed my column since the beginning - my most loyal fans - I can only say, with my deepest and most sincere regrets, that I am sorry for what I have to say this week.

In recent years I have made regrettable mistakes: mistakes which have continued to haunt me, even though I have tried to leave them behind. But, in light of the recent scandal surrounding the nomination of Donald Ginsberg to the Supreme Court of the United States, I feel that the time has come to vindicate myself from my dark past, so that I may, once and for all, get on with my life.

So I, Stud Weasal, have, at various times, during the course of the last three years, experimented with and smoked marijuana. I did so fully knowing that I was committing an illegal act, letting down my parents, betraying my government and irreparably and permanently damaging my life. To the best of my recollection (special thanks to Ollie North for this line), on a few separate occasions, I took a limited number of puffs off of five different marijuana cigarettes, not once inhaling the majority of the smoke into my lungs. I could tell, never was I under the influence of the drug.

I have never purchased any amount of any illegal substance. I have never attempted to sell any amount of any illegal substance to grade school children of any age. And, I do not recall (thanks again, Ollie!) ever condoning the use of any illegal chemical substance for the purposes of altering one's state of mind.

I am cognizant of the fact that, in making this information public, I am jeopardizing my position as a writer for the Pointer. Nonetheless, this is a step that I have to take. I am ready to face the consequences.

The last three years have been short of hell. Having to live with the shame and embarrassment of my drug involvement has been a strain, but not only on my studies, but also on my family and friends. I cannot remember the last time I had a good night's sleep - a night where I did not toss and turn, constantly agonizing over my experience with marijuana.

I only wish that I could somehow go back in time and do things over again.

All I ask now is to be forgiven. In the name of God (why not?) and in the name of my family and friends, can you somehow find in your hearts enough love and understanding to forgive a fellow human being who has gone astray? I strongly believe that despite my past as a user of an illegal substance, I can still do a very good job at writing this weekly column.

But, if it becomes apparent that you, the students, faculty, and staff of UWSP are not interested in having a writer on the staff...

Drinking problems, possible solutions

Welcome to UWSP, the wellness capital of the world. We're proud to showcase a healthy student population, but how healthy are they? They are taught about physical and mental health, but what about social and environmental? Despite a high majority of underage students, drinking is the number one problem on campus. The answer to this problem is prevention; so surely, a school established in health promotion should set an example in alcohol prevention. However, this is not the case. There is very little environmental support offered to minors, and those offered aren't very effective.

Should the university even be concerned with the drinking tendencies of its students? Yes. Alcohol is the most abused drug in America, with 70-80 percent of all adult Americans drinking some form of alcohol, and 9-10 million alcoholics. On this campus alone, there are an estimated 1000 problem drinkers. The highest proportion of drinking problems is among men in their early twenties, so obviously the university is in a great position to influence the behaviors of its students for a lifetime. The problem could easily be stopped by increasing enforcement of drinking policies on and off campus and taking alcohol out of the residence halls. The problem is that these strict steps would not create behavior changes, it would only change the way they drink.

One need on this campus is to increase activities during the weekend. An effective step may be to add intramurals to the weekends. Also, TGIF could take place at a later time, to keep students occupied. There are many possibilities; it's just a matter of implementing them to see which ones are effective.

These activities will not only keep them out of trouble, but may also develop their maturity and self-confidence. The drinking tendency of a student is affected by his environment, social life and emotional well-being. By creating a supportive nondrinking environment and helping students learn to cope with stress, UWSP will help students leave the university in more control of themselves. The result will be a more complete wellness lifestyle in their everyday lives.

Wanted: Garbage Cans

I am writing in reference to an issue that is a nuisance to myself as a student and something that should be of concern to the leaders of UWSP. The problem is simple, maybe even humorous to some. Are you ready? LACK OF GARBAGE DISPENSAL CANS ON CAMPUS GROUNDS. Big deal you say, but let me give some facts supporting my claim.

On the grounds surrounding the academic buildings, library, and University Center, there are nine available garbage cans. At UWSP there are 9,386 full time students. That calculates to a ratio of one garbage can for every 1,043 students passing through these grounds.

UWSP has a nationally acclaimed reputation as a leader in the health promotion/wellness field. Does the above ratio uphold this reputation for promoting health? What kind of a mental picture do visiting professionals get when they visit our "wellness" campus and see trash and debris floating around its grounds? I think the answer is clear enough. If UWSP is to be a totally true promoter of healthy lifestyles, changes or in this case additions, must be made.

On behalf of the students, much of our busy lifestyle entails the set and run technique. No problem until you are forced to "eat" your apple core because there is no trash can in sight. Don't necessarily blame students for litter on campus. Blame it on what is not available.

Call your mummy.

You remember. She was always there when you were frightened. And if you got hurt, she was standing by with bandages. Wouldn't it feel good to talk to your mother again right now?

Calling over AT&T Long Distance Service probably costs less than you think, too. And if you have any questions about AT&T rates or service, a customer service representative is always standing by to talk to you. Just call 1800 222-0300.

Sure, your schoolwork and your friends keep you busy. But call home and find out what she's wrapped up in.
Point troupe wins soils contest

The University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point has won, for the first time, the annual Midwest soil judging contest sponsored by the American Agronomy Society and Soil Science Society of America.

A team comprised of three men and one woman topped 17 other teams to advance to the national meet next spring in Brookings, S.D. Their coach and faculty advisor is James Bowles.

The student judges, all seniors, are Sandra Davis of Fort Atkinson; Joe Mason of Stevens Point; Joe Paliara of La Crosse; and Robert Schroeter, Stevens Point. Each of them received individual trophies and the team was given a large trophy for display on campus.

Mason took second place among about 75 participants in individuals judging competition.

The judging was done in Baraboo County in southern Wisconsin. Students and faculty from Purdue University arranged the event.

Though soil judging teams from UWSP have been victorious at numerous contests in other leagues, this win was the first at the 30-year-old regional contest for Stevens Point students. The four-member group toppled last year's team, which had the best record in the event to date that with a third place finish and an invitation to the national meeting in New York State.

Wisconsin teams have long been powerhouse in soil judging competition. Bowles reports, particularly representatives of UW-Platteville, UW-River Falls and UWSP.

Earlier this fall, those and several other schools entered a state soil judging contest at Treehaven Field Station near Temahawk, hosted by UWSP. UW-Platteville was winner of this event.

Bowles said this year's judges worked exceptionally hard and long in preparation for the regional competition—meeting three times per week for field practice, plus one night weekly for other study.

The competition Stevens Point soil judging team has excelled in since the late 1970's is sponsored by the National Agricultural Colleges and Teachers Association. The top prize has gone to UWSP students for five of the last nine years.

Mason recognized

Joe Mason, 2333 Water St., is a full-time father, full-time employee and full-time student who has been designated as winner of this year's state competition for outstanding achievement in the study of soil science.

The Wisconsin Society of Professional Geologists extended top recognition to Mason during an annual convention recently in Stevens Point. His prize was $500.

Mason is a native of Chicago who grew up in Woodstock, Ill., graduating from high school there in 1975. He studied forestry for a year and one-half at UW-Madison before dropping out and entering the work force on a full-time basis. He was a construction equipment mechanic and later a custodian for University Hospitals in Madison. As a state employee, he was transferred to UWSP in 1983 to work on the custodial crew. He was assigned to the night crew so that he could be enrolled in university classes on a full-time basis during the day.

He has amassed a 3.97 overall grade point, almost a straight A average.

Mason is married and has two children.

Getting the drift

by Cindy Byers

The state of Wisconsin filed suit in a Milwaukee federal court last spring to delay the US Environmental Protection Agency to enforce the Clean Air Act in Illinois and Indiana. The suit claims that pollutants from those states have an impact in Wisconsin. The US General Accounting Office (GAO) in Washington has agreed to delay an opinion on the matter, because they say the states have made progress in cleanups. Senator William Proxmire has requested that the GAO go back and take another look, which the GAO says it will do.

The debate continues in Madison on All Terrain Vehicle (ATV) restrictions. A state legislator called the vehicles "kid killers" and asked that children under 12 be forbidden to ride them. Since 1982, ATVs have claimed 800 lives and injured 300,000 in the US according to a study in the January directory of the National Association of Attorneys General.

Wisconsin's Natural Resources Board is considering adding 25 acres to the Kettle Moraine State Forest in Waukesha and Washington Counties. Costs for the two parcels up for consideration might be $1,325,000. Outdoor Recreational Act bond revenues would be used for the purchase. Outdoor recreational activities and preservation of Oconomowoc River bottom land have been noted as good reasons for the acquisition.

Property owners should check to make sure all unused wells are properly filled with cement. Wells presently in use should also be checked to make sure they are safely capped and all screws are tightened.

Unless properly trained, property owners who have an improperly abandoned well should not attempt to seal the well themselves. Rieue recommends that people contact a licensed well driller or pump installer to seal the well.

Today most drilled wells are a standard six inches in diameter and normally don't present a human safety problem, according to Rieue, but still can threaten groundwater quality. Old wells usually vary in diameter from four to eight inches; the infant in Texas fell into an eight-inch diameter well. Posioning a greater threat to safety, Wisconsin also has abandoned dug wells that can be from two to three feet in diameter, and abandoned irrigation wells from 16 to 18 inches in diameter.

The DNR has emphasized the importance of properly sealing abandoned wells for 50 years. Because of pressing demands dealing with unsafe drinking water and groundwater contamination cases, the Department of Natural Resources field staff can't actively search for abandoned wells. However, Rieue pointed out that personnel regularly identify abandoned wells during their spot checks of new wells and investigations of water contamination complaints.

Counties now have the opportunity to join with state officials to help identify and fill improperly abandoned wells through the voluntary County Delegation Program. The program allows counties to share responsibility with the DNR for property locating new wells and filling unused wells. Presently only six counties—Washington, Waukesha, Dane, Eau Claire, Chippewa and La Crosse—are participating in the program.
Swimmers lose close dual to Blugolds
By Andy Connolly

If the success of a swimming and diving meet were measured by the excitement it generated, the season-opener for the UW-Stevens Point men's team was just that. It was apparent in the meeting between rivals Stevens Point and Eau Claire that these two teams are the best in the WSSC. The Blugolds, however, came out on top in the dual, 90-83. It was a meet not of inches, but millimeters. The outcome of the contest could've gone either way. "This could have been the best dual meet we've had in this pool in several years," said Head Coach Lynn Blair. "It's one of those meets that you hate to see someone lose. There were a couple of key races that decided the meet and those races could've gone either way."

Both Nina Pietiotta and Kevin Parham qualified for the national meet. Pietiotta captured first in the 200 backstroke in 2:04.08 and his national qualifying time in the 200 individual medley (2:01.58) gave him a second place. Parham placed second in the 50 free, but his time of 21.75 met the national standards. The 400 medley relay—Pietiotta, Andy Woyte, Chris Larson and Parham—swam a NQ time in 3:40.12, while the 400 free relay (Parham, Jeff Shaw, Ken Brumbaugh, Paul McLellan) also made national standards in 3:20.37, placing second. Brumbaugh garnered two first places, in the 200 free (1:49.67) and 100 free (.49.6). Other first place winners were Tim Thoma in one-meter diving (234.8) and Peter Zerdo in the 100 butterfly (2:07.5). Thoma guided the Point divers to an 11-3 advantage in that competition. "This team is stronger than I thought and I am happy about that," said Blair. "Another thing that pleased me was that we outscored Eau Claire in diving. I am extremely pleased with this meet for times and efforts."

Pointers defense stops Falcons

By John Gardner

Staff Writer

The River Falls Falcons landed on Goerke Field Saturday and the UW-Stevens Point defense made sure they didn’t fly to victory in a lopsided 7-0 win.

The Falcons, owning the No. 2 ranked rushing attack in the country, were held to just 194 yards while the passing game was nonexistent—0 for 8 on the day. The Pointer victory assured USWP of at least a tie for the WSC title, while knocking River Falls out of the running. The loss was the Falcons third straight defeat—propped to 6-1 in the league and 9-2 overall while River Falls fell to 4-4-1.

Neither team managed to score in the first quarter, but both teams did have opportunities. “The defense played a great game as a whole,” said Point assistant coach Ron Steiner. “Craig Verhagen and Greg Steiner played well, but it’s hard to cite just one or two people from that group.”

Following a River Falls turnover, the Pointer offense started to get on track in the second quarter. After a roughing the kicker penalty on the Falcons, the Pointers marched down field and scored on a 33-yard touchdown pass from Kirk Baumgartner to Kevin Bestad. Kevin Bestad kicked the PAT to give Point a 7-0 lead. After the Pointer defense stopped the Falcons could once again go to work. After completing passes to繞 Baja and Astron Kenney, Baumgartner handed off to Keith Majors who scored on a six-yard run up the middle.

The Pointers were successful on their next drive as Blanco ran up the middle for the score which gave Point a 21-0 lead at half. Blanco had 13 carries for 46 yards while catching 13 passes for 199 yards. He broke several records on the day—39 receptions in a single season, a WSC record 73 catches in a season and a WSC yardage record of 1,103.

“The key was the defense turning the ball over to the offense,” said Steiner. “Coach Lee Flora and the defensive coaches deserve a lot of credit for this win as they covered every facet of the Falcons running game.”

The second half wasn’t much different than the first for River Falls. The Pointer defense gained confidence as the game progressed and took apart the Falcons’ wishlist offense. Although the third quarter was with a fourth quarter produced some fireworks by the Pointer offense. The first score was a. 36-yard field goal by Bestad.

Following Verhagen’s second field goal recovery, Baumgartner drilled a 13-yard TD pass to Den Moehling which gave Point a 30-0 lead with time running out. The last score for Point came on a seven-yard pass from Baumgartner to Kenney, set up by a fumble recovery by Tom Gaugert, with under 30 seconds to play.

Baumgartner ended up completing 25 of 49 passes for 350 yards.

Winning the way continued as the USWP won the match in two games, 9-15 and 11-15. Miller tapped all Pointers as she hit 46 percent, had six blocks and eight digs.

“Our last match against La Crosse was nothing like our first,” said Schoen. “Injuries were definitely the key. We started the match without Bourg and last Cisewski in an ankle injury early in the second game. We never seemed to be able to recover.”

The Lady Pointers, who finished the season with a 27-20 mark, had four players voted to the all-conference team. They were Anne Court, Miller and Flora.

Anne Kaiser was pleased with her team’s effort. “They did a lot of nice things,” she said, “and I thought we executed well most of the time. What I was impressed with most was that when we needed to come back, the women did. That showed me a lot more than anything else.”

Stevens Point hit 17 of 30 field goals in the first half to take a 69-54 lead at the half. The Lady Pointers were able to get to the 36 yard line and score a touchdown to put the game out of reach.

Overtime loss chills Icers

"They've got a lot of character. They came with their lunchpads and just outworked us," said UW-Stevens Point hockey Coach Mark Mazzoleni.

The Pointer mentor was referring to UW-River Falls which posted a 4-3 overtime victory over UWSP in the Northern Collegiate Hockey Association season opener for both teams before 1,189 fans at Willett Arena Monday night.

Jeff Schaad got the Falcons on the board first with a goal at the game's 3:59 mark and, according to Mazzoleni, that goal pinpoining a problem the Pointers were to face all night. "That first goal was indicative of where we had problems throughout the game," he said. "They scored five of their six goals from down deep in the slot. They controlled the slot from the opening faceoff until the winning goal."

The Falcons' Steve Hammer made it 2-0 at 2:46 of the second stanza but Jason Westler picked up a pass from Rick Fleming and skated in alone on Hanson. His shot hit the upper left corner of the net, cutting the Pointers' deficit to 2-1.

Fleming and Gordy Hahn traded powerplay goals before tying the score and sending the game into overtime.

However, Mike O'Hara scored on a shot from the left point and Tom Niles pushed one through the legs of Pointer goalie John Basil on a breakaway to tie the score and send the game into overtime.

"They've got a lot of character," Mazzoleni repeated. "You don't come back from two goals down that late unless you've got a lot of guts." The overtime didn't last long as River Falls won the faceoff and immediately moved the puck into the Pointer zone. Hahn snapped off a shot from the right faceoff circle which Basil saved but Aaron Scott was waiting for the rebound on the other side and the game was over just 18 seconds into the overtime.

"They've got the guys who've been there before and can respond to the challenge," Mazzoleni said. We just got beat by a team that wanted the game more than we did."

Of the survey results 13% of the students said they would use a condom vending machine once a year, 25% would use them once a month, and 31% would use them once a week. Out of 1,814 students surveyed, of which 92% were on-campus and 8% off-campus, 18% voted against and 82% in favor of condom machine installation on UWSP’s campus.

An open hearing was held regarding the condom issue and members of campus organizations such as the Residence Association (RAC), Resident Assistant Council (RAC), and Student Life, as well as the student body as a whole were invited to attend to provide SGA with an opportunity for additional input. According to SGA’s official proposal, “We, (SGA Condom Committee) have determined that the general consensus of the UWSP student body is that greater availability of condoms to students means the chance for a higher degree of wellness among students.”

Cady said, “It was really encouraged by the Health Center. The doctors took a real interest in it because of the AIDS outbreak.”

Approximately 15 students each day request a medical checkup at the Health Center out of fear that they have contracted a sexually transmitted disease.

The SGA proposal also includes several pros and cons of the condom machine issue.

The pros include a heightened awareness of sexual behavior, values and choices along with potential consequences of sexual activity, prevention of last-minute risky sexual behavior, and the machines would help in reducing the spread of sexually transmitted diseases and the number of unplanned pregnancies.

While on the con side, the machines would make residence halls look bad (especially to visitors), there are other places to purchase them and the availability of condoms would promote promiscuity.

Currently the only universities in Wisconsin who have installed condom dispensers are UW-Green Bay and UW-Whitewater. “If the proposal doesn’t say we are mandating anyone on this campus to do it,” said Cady, “we are saying we agree, it’s a good idea and we want someone to look into it and we would endorse it.”

43-34 halftime advantage. Deb Metzger had 10 points and Cheryl Gross added nine in the first half to lead the Lady Pointer cause.

The second half was a little closer as Stevens Point had a 12 point edge on its way to the 76-52 final.

All-American Sonja Sorenson led the Lady Pointers with 36 points while Metzger chipped in with 16. Gross 12 and Deb Shane 11. Seven of the eight Lady Pointers who saw action broke into the scoring column.

Gross hauled in six rebounds while tallying five each were Metzger, Shane and Sorenson.

“Our backcourt of Metzger, Shane and Kate Peterson is very strong,” said Kaiser. “They work hard defensively and that carries us down to the offensive end. Sorenson took a beating inside, got some key baskets and make some key foul shots.”

With her debut as the Lady Pointer coach over, Kaiser was happy with the win. “The first one is done,” she said. “We did very well and now we can continue to build on what we have established. The women have worked hard and it paid off tonight.”

“With 10 players, we are obviously quality and not quantity. That is our concern.”

staff and alumni may be chosen for membership on the basis of their achievements and scholastic record.

There are about 300 students who are eligible to join the society, based on their high grade point averages. Letters of invitation have gone to them from Godfrey’s office and immediate replies are being encouraged in order to arrange for student participation in the Dec. 1 ceremonies. The Dec. 1 ceremonies will include a chartering ceremony at 5 p.m. in the Founders Room of Old Main. The public is invited to attend. A banquet for the new members will be served at 6:15 p.m. in the Wisconsin Room of the University Center followed by the installation of the student members plus three new faculty members.

Professor Lawrence Sommers, a faculty member at Michigan State University and regional vice president of Phi Kappa Phi, will be the speaker and conductor.
