Discrimination is Not a New Issue

Peggy Szczytko

University Relations

A recent editorial in the Pointer discussed the practice of housing discrimination of UWSP students in this community. The article reported that housing availability often depends on one's race and national origin. The example of a white student securing housing more easily than a black student is not uncommon. But let's face it, discrimination goes far beyond the landlords and the housing issue in Stevens Point.

As chair of the Community Sub-Committee of the Minority Task Force for the Recruitment and Retention of Minority Students at UWSP, I have met several times in the last few weeks with community leaders to discuss discriminatory practices in our community and how they adversely effect the retention of minority students and faculty staff on our campus. We have been challenged to develop and implement a program to help our minority populations feel more a part of this community and to educate the community as to the positive affect cultural diversity can make on our future. The big question my committee is wrestling with is: How does one melt an iceberg with a match?

Discrimination is not a new issue to the human race much less the community of Stevens Point. People who are different in any way may find themselves the victim of discrimination. Many people openly discriminate against others. And others are enraged by the issue of discrimination and try to take steps to change attitudes. Their work has done much to identify this abhorrent behavior and to find ways of ridding our society of its effect.

But I am afraid that these efforts have created a real and present danger in our society. It is now socially acceptable to say that one has black friends. It is socially acceptable to boast of working with handicapped children in our spare time. It is socially acceptable to claim we would allow our children to go to school with an AIDS victim. But in reality, the black friends are co-workers who we never invite to our homes for social events.

The time we spend helping handicapped children is very specific due to our busy schedules and always in a controlled environment. And, as soon as we find out an AIDS victim is in our child's classroom we change school districts. I am afraid "actions speak louder than words." Publicly our society speaks about our disdain of overt discrimination but privately we practice it in many forms. And, we are all guilty.

It is the hope of many members of this community that through programs that enlighten and educate, the Stevens Point/Plover area will be a model for melting away the "iceberg" of discrimination. We are realistic enough to clearly understand that the problem will never go away. But futuristic enough to believe that its effects can be minimized. Programs are being developed to give the youngest children in our public schools the opportunity to meet minority students at UWSP and to see first hand that a black hand feels just like a white hand. At the junior high level curriculum coordinators are exploring the possibility of including the discrimination issue as part of their teen living skills classes. This is especially encouraging since research indicates this age level is very prone to attitudinal changes.

Already in place at SPASH Senior High School is a cultural studies program that addresses discrimination issues and how they effect our personal lives, our community and our nation. In addition, members of the committee are working with local media to develop features that communicate the needs and problems of minority populations in our community.

There is no quick fix for discriminatory practices in our community or in our society. However, there are concerned and active community members in the Stevens Point/Plover area who are taking steps to make this community a place where housing and other overt forms of discrimination are banned.

This is a rebuttal statement to the article entitled "protective service staff shows promise" written by John Anderson. This article appeared in the Pointer paper dated 10/27/88.

First of all, this is a one-sided article with statements from only Don Burling and Roland Juhnke, Directors of Protective Services and I don't feel full facts and figures are presented in this article.

As President of Local 584, Wisconsin State Employees Union, UWSP, I felt the need to respond as to why the union objected to a student patrol.

Full-time permanent security officers are being replaced by the hiring of students, another form of contracting out of our jobs. It wasn't due to budget cuts in the department as so stated in the article; we just had 2 officers retire in the past 2 years, one officer was just recently hired but the other salary savings was used to implement a student patrol program.

At a student forum held in one of the dormitories last spring, management presented students with a cost savings plan, the hiring of a permanent security officer versus implementing a student patrol program, these figures weren't even accurate as this plan showed and actual savings of $11,000. It also did not include the costs of vests and jackets they are providing these students with.

Objections were also raised by the faculty and students. Faculty are concerned about the students having master keys to all the buildings. They were told they would not; yet, at our recent union/management meeting when Roland Juhnke was asked this question, he said, "I don't know the answer to that, ask Don Burling." Does anybody know the answer? Why is it such a big secret? Are they or aren't they?

How many students feel safer with students guarding them instead of professionally trained, experience security officers?

Missing the Full Facts

Three different surveys were done on this campus and with the enrollment of over 9,000 students, protective services should be fully staffed with 10-13 security officers. At one time we had 13; we are now down to 6.

In reference to the 3 universities named in the article: UW-Platteville: Student Enrollment—5,550

Fully staffed with 6 full-time campus police (not security officers)

3 students in their program Just recently, dormitories were built on that campus and according to the staff there the student patrol program is not working out well.

UW-Oshkosh: Student Enrollment—11,500

Fully staffed with 11 campus police (not security officers)

9 students in program

Moorehead: student enrollment—6,259

Fully staffed with student patrol

These students patrol in underground tunnels, city police patrol parking lots, non-alcoholic beverages are allowed on this. Crime rate is low, with 229 reported, -17.3 percentage in change.

Talk about comparison of apples to oranges, if this total of 1,066 incident reports for the year 1987 where many of these were non-criminal activities, what would the actual total be if the criminal activities were reported such as rape, theft, disorderly conduct instead of being hidden behind the federal privacy act law so arrests are not made. Double standard drinking laws to protect the innocent or the image of the university.

We all take pride in being employees of this university and the union will work very hard to make sure that his is a safe, secure environment to work in for all employees. It's hard to believe that this campus has an excellent counseling center with professionally trained counselors in drug and alcohol abuse, a nationally-known wellness institute, but yet allows double standard drinking laws and sex offenders to run loose on the city streets.

We have never, as a union, objected to students being hired for jobs on this campus, and would not have objected to a student patrol if this protective services office has a fully-staffed, professionally trained and experienced security officers.

LIFE IN THE SLOW LANE

STUD WEASIL

No doubt, for the last two weeks, the following question has been keeping you up late at night: what could be more embarrassing than going out on the town and having your date tell you that you have a booger hanging out of your nose? Initially, you may have reached the erroneous conclusion that nothing could be worse. There is, however, one thing in particular which, if it was to happen to me, would prove to be much more embarrassing than having boogers dangling from my nostrils. Therefore, this week, for the further enrichment and edification of my loyal and dedicated fans, I would like to discuss this, the most dreaded and embarrassing of all the possible embarrassing situations currently plaguing our modern world.

Last night, going against your better judgement, after studying for only five minutes, your friends talked you into leaving the library. And, even though you had twenty chapters of organic chemistry to read, you stayed at Buffy's until bar-time. After going to several after bar parties, losing your friends, and making a few new ones, you decided that it was time to call it a night. You notice the time as you crawl into bed, 5:35 a.m.

You're more than a little bit tipsy as you get up for your 8 o'clock class. You throw on some clothes and eat a little breakfast as you run out the door (sour cream and onion chips washed down with diet Pepsi). Your breakfast of champions only adds to the already sick feeling in your stomach. You make it to class feeling like death warmed over. The professor looks faintly familiar, but you're still not sure: is this Education 100? You're doing headbobs, barely staying awake. After ten minutes of intermittent dozing, you have lost the battle - you have no idea where you are - you have completely zoned out. Then, without warning, you feel the uncontrollable urge to sneeze. It all happens so fast. In just a matter of micro-seconds, you sneeze - your heart stops, your eyes close, and much to your horror, you temporarily lose control of all of the muscles in your body, including the muscles surrounding the lowest extremities of your digestive tract. You are at the mercy of the twelve pack you drank last night (and the chips you ate for breakfast), as a large volume of gas explodes from your rear end at a high rate of velocity. Ear drums pop and several of your classmates scream as the sound of the explosion reverberates and echos throughout the COPS Building.

Yes, the unthinkable has happened to you. The most dreaded of all social blunders - the ultimate faux pas - has taken place (it happened once to someone in your psych. class, freshman year, and you never thought, in your worst dreams, that it would ever happen to you). Of course, I could be speaking of only one thing: the dreaded sneeze-fart.

Pretending that nothing has happened, you continue to face the front of the room. But everyone in the class knows that something has happened, and that the person who did it was...YOU. Even your professor, a graduate of the Phillip Marshall School, is doubled over laughing hysterically, gasping for air. After taking the time to open all of the windows in the room, he attempts to continue his lecture, but eventually has to cancel class - he just can't stop laughing.

In short, your college career is over. Never again will you be known as anything other than Sneeze-Fart. Even your most loyal friends will pretend to have never met you. Never again will you be able to go back to class - any class. Never again will you be able to show your face on campus. So, even though it's after the drop date, you have no problem with taking F's in all of your classes - anything so you don't have to live with the shame of having let a sneeze-fart in class.

But what are you to do with your life? Join the Peace Corps and go on an extended vacation to Zimbabwe? Smash your face repeatedly into the sidewalk, in an attempt to disfigure yourself? Have a sex-change operation? Change your name and become a Franciscan monk? Take a job at Nekoosa Paper and work third shift as a janitor for the rest of your life?

But, in the end (no pun intended), you hear from a friend that sneeze-farting has become the rage on campus. You make a triumphant return to your classes. Stud Weasil does a series of up close and personal interviews with you. And, as a result, the fad goes national. After making several appearances on David Letterman, you write an autobiography which sells over ten million copies (Sneeze-Farting: Not Just Another Fad). Shortly thereafter, at the age of twenty-two, you get married, buy a secluded country home, and live happily ever after.

And the moral of the story? Bad times are alot like bad gas on a windy day: they're only temporary.

Educational Display Attack Uncalled For

I would like to respond to last weeks comments on the reproductive display. Aileen C. Smith overlooked the whole function of this display. I will admit it must have taken her a lot of courage to write about the son she lost, but to attack an educational display that is an important part of the Museum of Natural History in our library here on campus is uncalled for.

Why do you think her teacher required her to walk through the museum? Maybe it was because he wanted her to learn something that could not be learned from reading a textbook. Maybe it was something that had to be experienced to get the total effect.

While walking through the museum you see everything from raccoon to dinosaur eggs. You are seeing natural history. Isn't the reproductive system natural? It is as natural as you can get. Why then would you want a plastic replica? Yes, they may look a little pale, but the fourteen jars of fetuses on display starting with 37 days going through 129 days are all real.

Maybe looking at the display made you think what a miracle a baby actually is. Or maybe it reminded you of using protective measures so you do not get pregnant, if you are not ready or capable of having a child. Maybe viewing the display reminded you of your morals and beliefs. Whatever it did, it taught you something valuable and I doubt if any plastic model could get an equal reaction.

Bush moves up to Oval Office

New York Times, AP

George Herbert Walker Bush of Texas was elected the 41st president of the United States on Tuesday.

The vice president fashioned a solid popular vote victory over Gov. Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts with a near-sweep of the once-Democratic South. He captured enough major states in other regions to win a commanding majority in the Electoral College.

Bush's running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana was elected vice president.

Dukakis conceded defeat in a speech to supporters at about 10:10 p.m. CST.

He pledged support for the new administration.

"Just a few minutes ago, I called Vice President Bush and congratulated him on his victory," Dukakis told supporters in Boston. "He will be our president and we'll work with him. This nation faces major challenges ahead."

The Massachusetts governor waved off a chant of "'92! '92!" that his backers began during his concession speech, urging him to run again in four years.

"Tonight my heart is full of gratitude to everyone who has made this extraordinary experience of ours possible," he said.

Dukakis, winning a large majority of the voters who made up their minds late in the campaign, saved himself from an electoral humiliation similar to those suffered by Walter F. Mondale and George McGovern by holding Bush close in key industrial areas and carrying several states.

Meanwhile, his running mate, Lloyd Bentsen, was faring better as he easily won re-election to a fourth term in the Senate even as Texas voted overwhelmingly for the Republican presidential ticket. Bentsen defeated GOP Rep. Beau Boulter, who has complained about the law that allowed the incumbent to seek re-election while running as the Democratic vice presidential nominee.

Dukakis remains governor of Massachusetts.

Bush's victory confirmed the Republican Party as the dominant force in presidential politics and reflected the country's general satisfaction with the results of eight years of Republican government under President Reagan.

In campaigning to succeed Reagan, Bush promised no major departures, but he had also suggested that he might do some things differently, promising to create a "kinder, gentler nation" and affirming a strong Herb Kohl. He's nobody's senator but ours.

Herb Kohl will succeed 31-year veteran U.S. Sen. William Proxmire, keeping one of two Wisconsin Senate seats within the Democratic party.

From a businessman's point of view Kohl stressed the Democratic issues and his independence from special interest groups.

According to the Wednesdays Milwaukee Journal, the whole Engeleiter-Kohl campaign was a turnaround of the classic Republican-Democrat battle.

Both candidates stressed experience of very different kinds.

Kohl talked about his years of work in the business world, starting with the family grocery business that still bears the Kohl name, although under new ownership.

State Sen. Susan Engeleiter, a working mother, is a moderate Republican. Her endorsements ranged from the National Rifle Association to Milwaukee's weekly newspaper for homosexuals, Wisconsin Light.

Engeleiter, who lives in Brookfield, has been in the State Assembly since 1974.

Throughout the state, Wisconsin's representatives were headed for easy re-election victories in early returns Tuesday night, keeping the state House delegation at five Democrats and four Republicans.

Academic misconduct

In a recent Academic Misconduct quiz by United Council, the UW System off Adopting, Amending, and Repealing Rules (UWS) furnished answers to questions such as these:

"An instructor accuses you of cheating on a math test. He tells you that you will receive a zero for that test. Can you fight it?"

In writing a paper on smog for your Ecology 145 course, you realize that you forgot to write down the name of the source from some of the notes. A friend says, "Just make up a name. The instructor will never know." You take your friend's advice. Are you guilty of misconduct? Is your friend guilty?"

You write a paper on vitamin B for your health class. Two semesters later, you turn in the same paper for your nutrition class. The instructor finds out and fails you. Are you guilty of academic misconduct?"

According to the UWS section 14.03, examples of academic misconduct include, but are not limited to: cheating on an exam; collaborating with others in work to be presented, contrary to the stated rules of the course; stealing exams of course materials; tampering with a lab experiment or computer program of another student; or assisting another student with any of the above.

The following disciplinary actions can be imposed: an oral reprimand; an assignment to repeat the work, to be graded on its merits; a lower grade in the course; a failing grade in the course; or removal from the course.

Olen Questions the Objectivity of the Media

A philosophy professor at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point deals with the power of the press in "Ethics in Journalism," a book published earlier this year by Prentice-Hall.

Jeffrey Olen affirms in his book that journalism plays an important role in society, but questions whether the media should be setting the nation's political agendas. According to the author, elected officials should be in charge of leading national affairs. For example, if President Reagan says, "No comment," he is not violating the public's right to know.

In fact, the public has no Constitutional "right to know" as far as Olen is concerned. He says it is not guaranteed in the Bill of Rights nor has it been explicitly recognized by the courts.

The premise seems to be based on the public's "needs" to know about matters of political importance, information important to daily living and current world events, Olen continues. But this need has to be balanced against other rights—an individual's right to privacy or the right to a fair trial. He says there are numerous pieces of information that the public doesn't have to know.

Olen has mixed feelings about character issues involving political figures. On one hand, he doesn't believe that credible newspapers should mimic tabloids, staking out politicians' bedrooms and delving into their personal lives. On the other hand, he is concerned about the failure of the press to make objective decisions about which issues are legitimate.

For instance, John Kennedy's sex life didn't seem to affect his abilities as a national leader, so the press kept his exploits quiet. Olen questions the objectivity of the media in such a situation. He says members of the press often make decisions about legitimacy based on their own moral prejudices not on the views of their readers.

The philosopher does agree that character traits which are relevant to how a person will function in his/her job should be revealed. He speculates, in the situation with Gary Hart, for example, Hart's untruths about his real name and age may have been telling factors in questioning his character and potentiality for strong, ethical leadership.

Olen believes journalists have the same moral responsibilities as other individuals. He doesn't support the current journalistic code of ethics formulated by the Society of Professional Journalists—it is too general and basically meaningless, according to the author.

Olen adds, however that in a democratic society, certain kinds of information are of critical political importance. There is most definitely a need to know these things.

The responsibility for making such decisions lies with the editors of individual newspapers, he contends. A newspaper makes a promise to its readers through its editorial policies, then has the obligation to deliver what it has promised. The "National Enquirer" and the "Washington Post" make very different pacts with their readers.

Along the same lines, he says that protecting sources is not a particular problem for journalists. If you promise someone you won't tell, you don't tell. You should treat others ethically as fellow human beings. An individual is only obligated to reveal a source in order to guarantee others their constitutional right to a fair trial. If the legal system files a "show of necessity," a private audience with a judge, the justice has the right to order the reporter to produce evidence. But Olen believes, such matters have to be proved correctly and legally. He says appearing in front of a Grand Jury is a different circumstance—a person would not legally be obligated to reveal the truth in such a situation.

Part of a series on occupational ethics, Olen's book has been previewed by several commitment to the environment.

If these promises heartened political moderates, the campaign Bush ran was hailed by conservatives, since the vice president - once thought of as being at the center of his party - cast the contest with Dukakis as an ideological referendum.

He repeatedly castigated Dukakis as a "liberal," and highlighted conservative social issues, notably crime.

That same campaign style let some Democrats, including Bentsen, to predict that as president Bush would have difficulty winning support from a Democratic-controlled Congress.

At the same time, polls showed that the public regarded the campaign as exceptionally negative and blamed Bush for that more than Dukakis.

The combination of "peace and prosperity," and Bush's effective, highly disciplined campaign proved potent.

In the campaign's final weeks, Dukakis shifted styles, vigorously attacking Bush and running as a populist who was on the side of average Americans.

The shift came too late, but it nonetheless helped the Democratic nominee. The Times-CBS News Poll showed that voters who decided in the last week of the campaign backed the Massachusetts governor by a margin of nearly 3 to 2.

Dukakis, who capped his campaign with a feverish 48-hour swing from coast to coast, did very well among lower-income voters and won back a substantial share of the Democrats who backed Reagan in 1984.

His strength in the closing days of the campaign allowed him to make a race of it in such key states as Illinois, Pennsylvania and California.

Characteristically, the Republican nominee avoided any boasting when he cast his ballot at his polling place in Houston.

"Every time I vote here, I feel nervous," Bush said after voting at a Ramada Inn in Houston.

Dukakis was at once exhausted and elated as he campaigned at a 4 a.m. rally in Des Moines, Iowa and then flew to Detroit for another rally, which he hoped would build the last minute surge in his favor.

"I feel great, all things considered," Dukakis said in an interview. "It's been an incredible experience."

Bush built his campaign on a powerful foundation. There was, first, Reagan's popularity, which grew as the campaign went on. The Times-CBS News Poll found that one of the best indicators of voters' choices Tuesday was their attitude toward Reagan.

Those who approved of him backed Bush by more than 4 to 1; those who disapproved of him went about 9 to 1 for Dukakis.

What helped Bush in this regard was that many more Americans approved of Reagan's performance (about 55% than disapproved (about 40%).

There was, as well, the state of the nation's economy.

professors of journalism. The author says it has engendered some nasty comments, but it is also being used on several campuses.

A prolific writer, Olen has had two additional books about ethical and moral issues released this year by other publishing houses.

"Applying Ethics" was published by Wadsworth of Belmont, Calif., and "Moral Freedom," was published by Temple University Press of Philadelphia.

"Applying Ethics," is co-authored with Vincent Barry from Bakersfield College, and is an introductory textbook. In the text, the authors deal with issues such as abortion, capital punishment, sexual morality, corporate responsibility, world hunger and animal rights.

Olen describes his other book about moral theory as a vindication of Nietzsche's challenge of traditional ethics.

Another tuition increase

By Jimmy Cullen

Contributor

Tuition for undergraduates attending UW-Stevens Point and other UW campuses may increase at least 7.5 percent next fall and another 4.3 percent in the 1990-1991 school year. This increase was proposed by UW System President Kenneth Shaw to help meet a proposed pay raise for faculty and the continuing growing costs to finance a university.

Resident undergraduates at UWSP now pay an annual fee of $1,363 for tuition and instructional fees. Under this proposal students will pay at least $1,528 within two years. The Board of Regents is scheduled to consider the overall budget proposal next week. The proposal then goes to Gov. Tommy Thompson and eventually to the Legislature.

UW-Stevens Point Chancellor Phillip Marshall said, "I speculate the Board of Regents will make the necessary changes in the budget proposal and then submit it favorably to Gov. Thompson." Business Affairs Director Greg Diemer said, "We hope to keep any tuition increases as low as possible."

The proposed tuition increase for UW students would help finance a 3.6 percent catch-up pay raise for UW faculty to bring their salaries up to par with faculty at other universities across the U.S. Many people believe this will retain some of the better professors in the UW System and also attract better professors to the UW System.

MINORITY AFFAIRS

ALL THAT IS DIFFERENT

Ginger Wonack

Minority Affairs Director

Over the last week, I have realized that there is a crisis. Specifically a crisis pertinent to students inability and apprehension to address social issues. I make this statement based on conversations I have had with students regarding problems, or better yet, dilemmas that we are facing as a nation. For example, I have seen students cringe at the thought of discussing Civil Rights, Affirmative Action, etc. I see my peers apathy to address these social issues as a threat, because we as future leaders, will make decisions on how all of these issues will shape our future.

Until we are educated and informed on the facts surrounding these uncomfortable issues, we will continue to deny that these issues exist. I make the assertion that if we as a student body and as future leaders go through every effort to become better informed and educated, we will find it less uncomfortable and often stimulating to address these presently "tabooed" issues.

Therefore, I am challenging all UWSP students to attend an informational forum addressing Indian Hunting and Fishing Rights on Monday, November 14, at 7 p.m. in the P.B.R. Room at the University Center.

THE GENERAL

starring Buster Keaton

The General places Keaton, the "great stone face" of 1920's comedy, in Georgia during the Civil War. He tries to enlist to impress his girlfriend only to be told that he can serve the South better by continuing to run his train. "THE GENERAL." As 1926 advertising promised - Thrills by the hundreds! and Laughs by the thousands! result when Buster tries to do his duty. Runaway trains, exploding bridges and Keaton's own special kind of humor make this a feature for adults and children.

Tickets are available at the box office in the UWSP Fine Arts Building 9-4, Mon-Fri., and at SENTRY Theater the evening of the performance.

NUTRITION INTUITION

Dear Nutrition Intuition:

Sometimes I eat only popcorn for lunch. I was wondering why I feel so full after, even though I eat a small amount.

The reason you feel full is because popcorn is a type of fiber. Fiber absorbs water in your body therefore creating a feeling of fullness. Because the popcorn is basically carbohydrate and fiber, it is quickly digested so the fullness feeling may not remain for very long.

Dear Nutrition Intuition:

What's wrong with eating at fast food places?

Fast foods are usually a good source of protein and B-6. However, they are also good sources of fat, high calories and sodium. The fat content is generally due to deep-frying or frying on a grill. Sauces, dressings and gravies also add calories to the meal. Fast foods tend to be low in calcium, vitamins A and C. Choosing fruits or vegetables, when available, will help balance out your meal. Be choosy when you eat at fast food restaurants.

I have heard that fiber lowers your cholesterol. How does it do this?

Certain types of fiber for example, oat bran, actually bind with cholesterol and certain minerals as it passes through the digestive tract. As a result, the entire body content of cholesterol is decreased.

Some examples of foods high in fiber content are: whole meal breads, bran cereals, brown rice, dry beans, potatoes with skin and raw fruits and vegetables.

Concert Highlights: Cheap Trick/Femme Fatale

Cheap Trick... Dynamic!

By Molly Rae
Features Writer

Cheap Trick took the stage in front of a nearly sold out audience last Wednesday night and grabbed the crowd immediately with their intense and somewhat mysterious stage presence. When you looked at them, you knew you were looking at stars.

Rick Nielson's antics and facial expressions gave the entire show a sense of liveliness. Bun E. Carlos could only be described as humble. Robin Zander and Tom Petersson, like their opening act Femme Fatale, drew upon the crowd and fed on their enthusiasm. The more the crowd got into the show, the more Cheap Trick did. They pushed the audience higher and higher.

Cheap Trick did a compilation of hits from their albums and most of everyone's favorites were covered including "Surrender," "I want you to want me," and "If you want my love you got it." They did "The Flame" and "Don't be cruel," their chartbusting hits from their latest album release, Lap of Luxury. Disappointing however, was that they didn't do their new single, "Ghost Town," (unless you were fortunate enough to see their sound check).

After "Don't be Cruel" the band made a point to thank Elvis for writing it for them. They performed two encores to a crowd that really didn't want to let them go.

There have been a lot of good concerts in the past few years brought to this campus by the University Activities Board and Stardate Productions. Cheap Trick was without a doubt one of the very best.

Femme Fatale Rocked Point

by Molly Rae
Features Writer

Loud and energetic are the first words people used to describe the concert last Wednesday night. Femme Fatale took the stage by storm. Their stage presence was total energy. Vocalist Lorraine Lewis moved from one side to the other with unequalable vigor (and some say lust). The crowd responded to them with incredible appreciation, which is saying a lot for a band that most never heard of. Femme Fatale picked up on that immediately.

"This town rocks," said Lewis. "We've had great reactions from crowds around the country but this was just fantastic!"

All the members of the group were friendly, cooperative and a lot of fun. The guitarist, Billy D'Angelo, and drummer Bobby Murray, made a trip downtown to visit some of our city's local flavor. They visited Buffys and Ellas and said Stevens Point is a "kick ass, rock and roll party town."

Lewis and company were eager to sign autographs, have their pictures taken and talk to everyone back stage. And they too, like Cheap Trick, liked Point beer." This place is the greatest," said Murray. "I hope we come here again."

Femme Fatale is getting ready for their tour beginning in January, when they'll be the opening act on the road for Ratt.

"We hope everyone from Stevens Point will come see us with Ratt, you people know how to party," said Murray.

Impressive and a band to definitely watch for more of, that was the impression left by Femme Fatale.

The work started at Quandt Fieldhouse very early Wednesday morning. Cheap Trick's road crew and production team, the University Activities Board Concerts team, University catering, and technical services put in a very long day.

As technical services put together the stage alongside Cheap Trick's crew, University catering and the concerts team prepared the dressing rooms, provided breakfast and lunches to the workers, and ran errands all day long.

Cheap Trick arrived late in the afternoon and were taken by Concerts Coordinator, Ann Locy, on a tour of the Point Brewery. Meanwhile a convention of "suits" were gathering backstage including executives from ABC and Stardate Productions and Cheap Trick's manager, Ken Adamany.

It was a family affair for Cheap Trick. Tom Petersson's parents were there. Rick Nielson brought his son. Robin Zander was accompanied by his daughter. Also present were wives, girlfriends, and personal friends from Madison and Rockford as well as executives from the Point Brewery. Cheap Trick is infatuated with Point Beer. They requested it in their dressing room and took cases of it along on their tour buses. They

When will it end? Not as long as Jon Bon Jovi has long hair

The six members of White Heart creatively pair cutting edge sounds of today's rock and roll with lyrics about real-life issues confronting today's young people.

A Heavy Dose of Metal

By S M Ong
Features Writer

With Bon Jovi's "New Jersey" forcing its way to No. 1 of the Billboard Pop Albums chart on its second week of release, the weeks-long summit tussle between the two superpowers, Def Leppard's "Hyperia" and Guns N' Roses' "Appetite for Destruction," is finally over, though heavy metal's dominance remains, just as it has for the last few months since Van Halen's "OU812."

When will it end? Not as long as Jon Bon Jovi's got long hair it seems, judging by his band's current popularity, overflowed from the bestselling album of 1987, "Slippery When Wet," the record that rejuvenated metal mania to its present state of euphoric hysteria.

The phenomenal commercial success was aided in no small way by the two No. 1 singles, "You Give Love a Bad Name" and "Living on a Prayer," "Bad Medicine," the first single from "New Jersey" looks like it's on its way to becoming the band's third No. 1 and that wouldn't hurt the sales of the album at all.

Just like hitting No. 1 with "Sweet Child of Mine" didn't hurt the sales of Guns N' Roses' "Appetite for Destruction," which was first released more than a year ago.

Def Leppard's "Hyperia" is an even older album which stayed at the top of the charts with the help of five singles, each one a bigger hit than the one before, "Women," "Animal," "Hyperia," the huge summer hit "Pour Some Sugar on Me" and the English band's first No. 1 song "Love Bites."

And then there are the bands who don't need hit singles to sell their albums. Keeping company with Bon Jovi and the like in the top ten but in a class all their own are Metallica with their biggest selling album yet, "And Justice for All." After last year's "The $5.98 E.P.: Garage Days Re-visited" and playing with Van Halen on the Monsters of Rock tour, the speed metallists have expanded their legions of fans beyond their small cult following.

Also rampaging toward the top ten is the other magnificent exponents of locomotive rock, Anthrax, with their newest, "State of Euphoria." These guys make Bon Jovi sound like Huey Lewis and the News.

Hoping to follow in the designer footsteps of Bon Jovi are numerous new bands that generally look and sound the same, like Winger, Britny Fox, the Bullet Boys, etc. Breaking the trend is a new all-woman metal band, Vixen, whose first single from their self-titled debut album, "Edge of a Broken Heart" is written and produced by Richard Marx. That's right, the guy who sings all those wimpy songs like "Endless Summer Nights" and "Hold on to the Night."

It doesn't matter. If things should get to mellow, there will always be the old reliable standbys: AC/DC Judas Priest, the Scorpions, Iron Maiden, Aerosmith, etc.

It's Saturday night. So grab a beer and get ready for the Headbangers' Ball. We're gonna bang till we can bang no more.

Rock... and more

Tonight's TNT sounds like a rocking good time because Concerts is bringing, here, to this campus and free of charge, direct form Oshkosh...The Rockin' Bones. Hey, sounds like a great time to me.

Roulette is appearing this Friday night in the UC Encore room. Brought to you by UWSP Music Coalition. Roulette is an area band that gives its audience a well-rounded and professional and very danceable show. They do music from a great variety of popular groups including: Prince, Madonna, Exposé, and the Pet Shop Boys, as well as doing some very classy and catchy originals. The band's new single, "Make my Heart Beat," is scheduled to be released soon on Premiere Records.

A new age acoustic guitarist, Billy McLaughlin, will be performing in the UC Encore room Saturday, November 12, from 8 10 p.m., sponsored by Alternative Sounds.

McLaughlin, a Minneapolis native, performs as a quartet with Lisa Z. on piano, Kirk Johnson on drums and sax-man Scott Futz. McLaughlin is renowned for his originality in his performance and composition.

He has just released his new first self-titled CD which will be available at Saturday night's show.

Slave Raider, the heavy metal highlight of the year, is coming soon. Next week look for features on Paris and Gemini, the opening acts for the December concert. Then coming soon, there will appear here, an interview with the mysterious lead vocalist of Slave Raider, Chain-saw Cane.

UFS Offers Variety

by Ellen Paul
Contributor

The University Film Society (at UWSP) brings a wide selection of films to Stevens Point for the viewing pleasure of UWSP students and the community. The club, composed of students but open to anyone in the community with an interest in film, tries to steer clear of the major releases from the past decade and concentrate on cult films (such as foreign films) which may have received some media attention in the last decade but never became big sellers and on classics; many of these are award winners, contain a well-known actor/actress or have set a precedent in the film industry for style, creativity and use of effects. The primary goal of UFS is to offer films that may not be familiar or accessible to the general public.

Whether it's verbal, emotional, physical, or sexual, domestic abuse is rapidly becoming one of this nation's most common crimes.

Domestic abuse happens to married couples, people that are living together or couples that are simply dating.

In what case does a person have the right to harm another person, especially someone they supposedly love?

"In almost all cases the abuser, abused or both come from an environment where they were exposed to this type of violent behavior while they were growing up," said Toni Frostman, Director of Family Intervention Services.

"During the dating stages there may be other forms of abuse such as: degradation, humiliation, and isolation placed on the woman, that aren't as outwardly apparent as physical abuse, but are just as damaging none the less," Frostman explained. The mental forms are usually used as a conditioning process before the physical abuse starts.

The following are warning signs that help in recognizing a potentially abusive situation.

Isolation: Doesn't allow you to be with your friends—wants to know where you are at all times. Expects you to devote all of your free time to him.

Dual Personality: Jeckyl and Hyde.

Ownership/Possessiveness: Feels he has certain rights over you.

Blames you for his problems. When he's angry resorts to violence.

The abuse doesn't follow a specific pattern. One incidence may lead to another. If it's not controlled it could lead to murder!

Mary Kayford, Public Information Manager for CAP Services, adds, "We've had many cases where the women, as a direct result of the abuse, have been permanently disabled."

Backstage

came away from their brewery tour with an entire box of Point Beer merchandise including T-shirts, satin jackets, posters, clocks, and other memorabilia.

Zander said they really looked forward to coming here. He said by being here, it was a special show. Tom Peterson told us that we were lucky to go to a school like the UWSP.

The band and crew were all very excited about their tour to Australia and Japan, which they have already left on.

The people who were there were all very helpful, understanding, and cooperative. From the crew, to the band, to the "suits", everyone made a lot of friends. They were truly impressed with the University here, both the people they worked with and the outstanding behavior of the crowd.

The work didn't end until the wee hours of the morning. Then, there was a little time for socializing before the bands, crews, and everybody else made their own way home.

The Facts

Twenty percent of all the murders in this country are committed by a family member. Thirteen percent are committed by spouses.

About half of all couples experience at least one violent incident. In a quarter of these couples, violence is a common occurrence.

Six million American women are beaten each year by their husbands or boyfriends. Four thousand of them are killed.

While you were reading this, four women were severely beaten.

"There are many reasons why a woman may stay in an abusive situation," Frostman explains. "Some hope that the abusive behavior is just a phase the man is going through and it will soon subside. Others fear that if they leave, the man will find them and the abuse will be only worse. Even some won't leave because they're worried that the husband or boyfriend will die without them."

Frostman continues, "In a lot of cases the reason for staying is due to a stigma, a set of social guidelines if you will, ascribed by the culture. She will be conditioned to seeing an abusive relationship between her parents, so anything outside of an abusive relationship would, to her, be out of the norm."

Frostman said that relationships are becoming more apparent in the junior high schools.

"Most of the kids we get in through our Youth/Crisis division are runaways, but in more cases than before the cause of the runaway is due to a relationship," Kayford adds.

Out of the many myths concerning domestic abuse, according to authorities, the one that states alcohol is the cause of abuse is believed the most.

"Domestic abuse and alcohol are not a cause and effect situation," Frostman explains. "If it does have anything, alcohol lessens inhibitions but it does not directly cause the abuse. The violent nature has to have already been implanted there for it to come out."

Among myths associated with domestic abuse is that domestic abuse happens only in lower income families. Frostman puts this myth to sleep. "It's not only the lower social classes that experience the violence, the upper crust has its problems also. There have been presidents of companies that were found guilty of battery."

A woman is beaten every 15 seconds. In Wisconsin alone, 75,000 women will be beaten this year. Last year CAP had over 600 calls from people who were abused, so far this year they have had over 400 calls.

The Family Crisis Center sheltered 121 women and children last year. There is no charge for the service. The conversations and counseling are strictly confidential and they are available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. "We can't help with legal action, but we can suggest different legal options you're entitled to," said Kayford.

If you're in need of help you can call the Family Crisis Center at 344-8508 in the Stevens Point area, or out of the Stevens Point area exchange at 1-800-472-3377.

Dial-A-Pres. Dial-A-Pres. Dial-A-Pres.

When the winning team goes to the locker room after the Superbowl, the president calls to congratulate the team, but who calls the president when he is elected?

Dan Liedtke, a communications student at UWSP, thought it would be appropriate to call and congratulate him. His frame of reference was, if you make it to the top, someone on the bottom of the totem-pole should do the congratulating.

Liedtke picked up the phone and dialed the Republican National Headquarters and asked to speak to George. "Is George there?" Dan said excitedly.

A voice on the other end said, "hang on!" "Hello," came a reply. Dan's hand shook the receiver so hard it rattled on his teeth.

"Mr. President, this is Dan Liedtke calling from St...St...Stevens Point, Wisconsin. I'm calling to congratulate you on your victory and say I voted republican."

"Thank you Dan," George replied. "You know Dan, I'm going to be in Wisconsin next week," George continued.

Before George could finish, Dan interrupted, "If you need a ride from the airport, I just replaced the muffler on my '72 Nova and I could pick you up!" suggested Dan.

"Well Dan," said George, "normally I wouldn't take you up on the offer, but I remember shaking your hand in the crowd at Sentry World when I was there two summers ago. You showed so much promise with that hand shake, I was wondering if you would like a job?" suggested George.

In an excited voice Dan responded, "Why yes! Yes! I'm graduating in May and."

"Well good, Dan, I need someone to mow my lawn!" said George.

The rest of the story is about his friends helping Dan pack up his '72 Nova with his clothes and his fishtank, which he thought best to keep full as not to kill his Northern Pike he caught out of the Wisconsin River.

Good luck to Dan, (and George) we hope you have better luck at this job than you had mowing Chancellor Marshalls lawn!

Alien Sex Monsters

by Timothy Rechner

Sports Editor

A University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point student recently unveiled his horrifying experience he had over this past weekend when he was captured by an alien spacecraft.

Troy "Cetrick" Sass told reporters Monday of his experience of being captured by creatures from beyond that landed in the courtyard between the Communications building and the University Center.

"I was working at the time the craft descended and hovered approximately ten feet above the ground with lights flashing and a strangely familiar tune blasting from its underside," said Sass in a nervous, shaky voice.

"It wasn't until I saw the creatures exiting the craft when I realized the song I was hearing was one from my childhood," explained Sass. "There they were. All seven of the creatures I had loved as a child. There was the Skipper, Gilligan, Maryann, Ginger and the Howells. The song was the Gilligan's Island theme," Sass said with a smile.

Troy went on to explain how he had been swept away in the spacecraft to a distant island in the South Pacific where they landed only seconds later. It was then that they explained how they had picked up television signals only recently from this planet and thought all people on Earth were like the shipwrecked crew. Sass explained that he also believed all people were like the crew of the Minnow.

Sass thought they were to be good friends until the unlikely request was bestowed upon him.

Troy was forced to procreate with...the Lama-woman. The body of a beautiful lama and head of a horrible, horrible, reptile. Out of sheer fear Sass complied with their request. (Some say Sass used to be wild, but this was even beyond his boundaries.) After his consummation Troy was immediately transferred back to campus. He layed on the wet grass smoking a cigarette contemplating his experience and whether to tell.

We thank Troy for his honesty.

Sex-Mad Elvis Admits Killing Axl Rose

By Dean "Dirt Raker" Overacker

Axl Rose, lead singer for the smash hit hard rock band Guns N Roses is feared dead, insiders say. Initial reports indicated a probable heroin overdose, a common fate to those newly vaulted into superstardom.

Axl, a diagnosed manic-depressive, was taking lithium for the disorder at the time of his disappearance. Slash, the lead guitarist for the band, and Axl were notorious fixtures of the L.A. crash and burn scene since the early eighties.

For those close to the band, Hollywood Death Syndrome seemed the logical conclusion. But further digging on the part of this reporter revealed a far more shocking likelihood.

In a bizarre twist of fate, Axl's final exit came not in the skeletal form of killer skag, but in the bloated white spectre of none other than Elvis Aaron Presley.

Sources at the Weekly World News revealed Elvis was growing increasingly despondent over his lack of access to pretty young starlets since his alleged death in 1977. According to the News, Elvis became obsessed with regaining his youthful popularity after a disappointing series of relationships with banal housewives and porcine bar-maids.

Eyewitnesses at a Guns N Roses concert promotion in Gainesville, Florida, claim Axl was spirited away by a wild-eyed man with monstrous sideburns and rhinestone sunglasses.

In perhaps the most illumination revelation of all, a local Floridian shaman has divined that Elvis needed Axl's blood as a fountain of youth elixir to return to his glory days of young girls and big cadillacs.

The band, in the wake of Axl's apparent departure, plans to release an instrumental album in a black jacket.

"I hate pads—they're like wearing diapers."

"I used to use pads. But they felt so gross and messy. And I was always worried they might slip or show. So I practically lived in baggy clothes five days a month!

I finally got so disgusted with pads that I tried Petal Soft Plastic Applicator Tampax tampons. They're the ones a lot of my friends use. Petal Soft have a great plastic applicator with a rounded tip that makes them easy to put in. And they're so slender they're really comfortable to wear—not like bulky pads. They work really well, because they absorb like crazy and expand to fit you inside—so you don't have to worry.

But the best part is no more hiding under baggy clothes or wearing those horrible diapers. I just slip a few Petal Soft tampons in my tote bag and I'm ready to do anything!"

Tampax tampons. The feminine protection more women choose over any other tampon or pad.

Pointer Hockey Sweeps Eau Claire

UWSP to put the game away. Pointer wing Tim Hale took a pass from Shawn Wheeler and put the puck by Eau Claire goalie Joe Thibault for the victory.

UWEC jumped out to a 1-0 lead at the 6:56 of the first period, but the Pointers quickly answered with a power play goal by Mike Raczy, assisted by Paul Caulfield and Ralph Barahona. Pat McPartlin added another goal late in the period with assists from Barahona and Raczy.

A scoreless second period followed before Barahona took a pass from Jeff Borman and gave the Pointers a 3-1 lead with just over 15 minutes left in regulation play.

Eau Claire, however, was not ready to give up, scoring three unanswered goals and taking a 4-3 lead in the next seven minutes.

Raczy forced the game into overtime with his second goal of the evening, with Barahona again providing the assist.

Stevens Point outshot Eau Claire in the game, 35-28, with Pointer goal keeper Pat Watson being credited with 24 saves.

On Saturday night, the Pointers returned home for the first time of the season and was welcomed by a near-capacity crowd at the Willett Arena.

A penalty plagued first period saw the Pointers jump out to a 4-2 lead. Shawn Wheeler provided two goals for UWSP, scoring both from just right of the net. The first goal, which came only 59 seconds into the game, was unassisted, while Barahona and Caulfield were credited with assists on the second which came at the 5:08 mark of the opening period.

Eau Claire closed the gap to 2-1 less than a minute later, but Joe Butcher quickly returned the Pointers to their two-goal advantage with a slap shot from the right point. Barahona added a goal later in the period to offset another Eau Claire goal. Butcher was credited with the assist.

UWSP dominated the second period, with Barahona and Rich Fleming each providing a goal to put the Pointers ahead, 6-2.

The third period mirrored the first, with numerous penalties providing many power play opportunities. McPartlin provided two power play goals for UWSP, while Mike Stanley and Caulfield each added an equal strength goal.

The Pointers again outshot Eau Claire, this time placing 48 shots on goal to the Blugolds' 17. Watson was credited with 13 saves for UWSP.

The Pointer ice hockey team proved that it was worth its selection as the favorite in the Northern Collegiate Hockey Conference, sweeping a pair of games from UW-Eau Claire last weekend to open its 1988-89 season.

The Pointers downed the Blugolds 5-4 in overtime on Friday in Eau Claire before returning to Stevens Point's Willett Arena Saturday and crushing the same Eau Claire team, 10-4.

Friday night, it took only 1:16 of the overtime period for

A Look at the 1988-89 Pointers

The Pointer basketball team truly fashions a fresh look in 1988-89. Second year head coach Bob Parker guides a Pointer squad which includes only two returning lettermen from last season's team. Last year's team compiled a 14-13 record. However, optimism is running high following a banner recruiting year in which the Pointers acquired 10 freshmen loaded with potential. If Parker has concern it has to be his team's lack of experience.

"You can't teach experience," said Parker. "My concern is that some of our young players may not have the exposure to the rough style of basketball played in the WSUC. You must be able to take a hit as well as give a hit...and that comes with experience. Right now we are more of a finesse team."

Parker hopes to improve on a 6-10 conference mark of a year ago, but noted it won't be easy.

"The WSUC will be very competitive again...look for teams such as Eau Claire, Oshkosh, La Crosse, River Falls and Superior to be toward the top. Hopefully, we can be a team that surprises some people as the season progresses."

The Pointers begin their 1988-89 season with an exhibition game against Marathon Oil, (a group of ex-Division I players) November 13. The regular season gets under way November 18 when the Pointers host the Fourth Annual Tip-Off Tournament which includes teams from Huron College, Kearney State, and Mount Senario.

What follows is a position by position preview of the 1988-89 Pointers...

POINT GUARD: three newcomers are battling for the spot as the team's floor leader. All of the candidates possess the ability to shoot the ball and could see action as a scoring guard.

Scott Anderson (Junior): a transfer from UW-Eau Claire, who was redshirted a year ago by the Pointers. A great shooter, who is a real threat from three-point range, Scott averaged 32.4 points a game as a senior at Auburndale High School.

Mike Harrison (Freshman): an excellent perimeter shooter who could also see action as an off guard. He averaged 22.1 points, 5.2 rebounds, and 4.3 assists as a senior at Sheboygan South.

Brian Bohman (Freshman): Brian has the ability to score from the outside as well as inside and possesses great jumping ability. He averaged 16.5 points per game as a senior at Eau Claire North.

OFF GUARD: the loss of All-WSUC performer Todd Christianson leaves the position open, but Chas Pronschinske seems to have the edge at the starting spot due to experience.

Chas Pronschinske (Sophomore): a real hustler with a soft shooting touch. He averaged 5.3 points and 16 and a half minutes per game last season.

Jim Glanzner (Freshman): a good shooter from the outside who also has the strength to go inside. He averaged 17.2 points per game, leading Onalaska High School to the 1988 Class A State Championship.

Ken Linsky (Freshman): Ken is the best defensive player among the new freshmen. He has the ability to play several positions. He averaged 19.2 points per game at Rockford Boylan High School.

Darin Brown (Freshman): a good shooter who can also score underneath. Darin could see some action at small forward. He averaged 16.5 points, 9.7 rebounds, and 5.6 assists at Madison West High School.

SMALL FORWARD: The starting position is still up for grabs according to Parker.

Mike Geist (Sophomore): slowed by minor injuries suffered in an early season auto accident, Mike has great potential. Parker compares his abilities to that of Tim Naegell during the early stage of his career. Mike averaged 22.1 points and 7.3 rebounds at Hartford High School.

Paul Bullis (Freshman): a fine shooter who can also play inside. Parker likes his intense style of play. Paul averaged 19.3 points and 7.0 rebounds a game at Stevens Point Area Senior High.

POWER FORWARD: Parker demands this position to be filled by a player who had the ability to be physical under the basket. The Pointers leading scorer from a year ago, John Holmes (17.3), is gone, leaving the door open for three players.

Mike Lehmann (Senior): Parker said Mike is as fine of a defensive player as he has ever coached. Mike saw action in all 27 games last season, averaging 2.3 points and 2.9 rebounds per game. He worked hard in the off season to improve his offensive game.

Jon Julius (Freshman): Jon has outstanding jumping ability. He has the potential to be physical inside and also score from the outside.

Alan Thomas (Freshman): has a good shooting touch. He is fundamentally a sound player, but needs to be more physical.

CENTER: the graduation of seven-footer Craig Wessel has left another opening in the Pointer starting lineup. Power forward Mike Lehmann could also see some action at the pivot.

Tom Rowe (Junior): Tom has made great strides in early practices. Parker is hoping Tom can become a force in the WSUC.

Troy Fischer (Freshman): has the ability to bang and pound inside. Troy is an intelligent player, who averaged 19.4 points and 12 rebounds per game at Bosobel High School.

Ladies Fifth in WWIAC

UWSP Sports Information
STEVENS POINT-With a "nothing to lose" attitude, the UWSP women's volleyball team surprised more than just a few people as they acquired a fifth place finish in the championships held at Berg Gym this past weekend.

"We finished fifth, which was better than we expected," said Coach Nancy Schoen. "I'm very pleased with how we played."

The Pointer women went into the meet seeded seventh and emerged from it with a sixth place standing in the conference, tied with UW-Superior.

Whitewater took home the conference crown, as expected, with Eau Claire coming in second. Oshkosh and La Crosse tied for third, Platteville came in fifth, Superior and Point tied for sixth, and Stout and River Falls tied for the eighth spot.

Coming in to the tournament as underdogs, the Lady Pointers opened up with the number three seed Oshkosh. Playing better than expected, they came through with a 6-15, 15-12, 15-3 victory. Anne Court lead the team with a .560 spiking percentage.

Things didn't get any easier for the Lady Pointers, as they followed this game up by taking on number four seed Platteville. The Pointer women played even better in this game, disposing of Platteville 15-12, 15-12.

After the first day, the Pointer women were riding high and were set as the number three seed going into Saturday's play.

In the second day of competition the Lady Pointers were not as successful as they were the previous day.

In the first game, they landed the 6 seed La Crosse. The Pointer women just couldn't get going, as they lost to the championship runner-up, 5-15, 7-15.

The UWSP women's volleyball team did not fold, however, as they knocked off Superior in the fifth place game, 15-10, 16-14 to end the season with a victory.

The top servers for the Pointers were Tammy Kuester, who had 5 aces total, and Denise Starke who had 6. The top spikers were Court with .560 percentage against Oshkosh, Jodie Geisel with .450, .500, and .750 against Superior, La Crosse and Platteville, respectively. Kelly Cisewski had a .420 average as a spiker against Platteville.

The top blocker for the team was Renee Bourget who had 3 solos and 5 assists overall. The top setter was Court, with a remarkable success rate of .540.

"We ended the season on a very positive note, and hopefully this will give us some momentum going into next season."

The Lady Pointers ended their season with a 4-10 record in the WWIAC, and an overall record of 14-28.

STRIKING OUT

by Timothy Bishop

Last week, defending NCAA Division I basketball champion Kansas was placed on three-year probation because of gross recruiting violations which included members of the 1988 championship team. While Kansas has been barred from defending its national title in this year's tournament, they have been allowed to keep the title it won last year.

The question has to be, how can the NCAA allow Kansas to keep its title after cheating to obtain it. The UWSP football team had its 1987 football national championship stripped because of two ineligible players, but the true fault there does not lie with the university, the coaches or anyone officially or unofficially representing either. For Point, it was just a case of two players who lied.

For Kansas, it was hardly the same story. Serious violations in recruiting and retaining players had that school on the verge of the NCAA's most severe punishment, the Death Penalty, where a school is suspended from competition in a sport for a period of one to three years. But what Kansas got was barred from the NCAA playoffs for the next three seasons and a reduced number of basketball scholarships during the next season.

Doesn't seem like that bad of a trade for a national championship, does it?

Looking elsewhere at college basketball (it's that time of year again), have you ever wondered how to put a team together without having to provide space (not to mention scholarships) for freshmen and sophomores? It's easy. Just ask University of Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian.

UNLV has taken its entire roster from the junior college ranks, and three of the top five JUCO transfers ranked by Sport Magazine are now at UNLV. Where is the advantage, you ask? Well, it means that every year, UNLV brings six players in specifically to play basketball. These guys don't go to UNLV to go to class, they go to play basketball. (Coach Tark has even admitted that in the past). These players aren't like the normal third-year players either. While, at most schools a player has to work his way in off the bench, these guys have the experience of 60 or 70 games against college-level competition.

The Pointer basketball team is also gearing up for the start of another exciting season. The Pointers make their debut Sunday with an exhibition game starting at 3 p.m. Come and check out the new floor in the Quandt Fieldhouse.

Meanwhile, the college football season is nearing its end, and the Wisconsin Badgers continue their Big Ten ineptitude. UW-Madison solidified its hold on last place in the conference with a disappointing 31-12 loss to Ohio State.

The Badgers' loss was their 25th in their last 30 Big Ten games, which brings us to this week's first trivia question. What are the schools which the Badgers have beaten in their last four seasons?

The Pointers retained their playoff hopes Saturday with 42-34 win over UW-River Falls. In this week's game, UWSP plays host to UW-Platteville in its season finale. At the game, which starts at 2 p.m., one student ticket will be drawn for one semester's tuition at UWSP courtesy of the athletic department.

Now, moving on to the National Football League.

The Will the Real Team Please Stand Up Award has to go to the Green Bay Packers, who lost again, this time to the Atlanta Falcons, 20-0. The magic seems to be gone from second-year quarterback Don Majkowski, who was pulled from the game in the third quarter after being ineffective. His replacement, Randy Wright, however, fared no better as the Pack was shut out.

The Chicago Bears, whose head coach Mike Ditka suffered a heart attack last week, gave their ailing mentor a get-well present as the Bears defeated NFC Central Division foe Tampa Bay.

The UWSP ice hockey team opened up its drive to regain the Northern Collegiate Hockey Association title by sweeping NCHA and WSUC rival UW-Eau Claire. The Pointers traveled to Eau Claire Friday, where they needed overtime to down the Blugolds, 5-4. Then, on Saturday, Pointer hockey returned to the K.B. Willett Arena and before a capacity crowd outplayed Eau Claire, 10-4.

The one question I have about Saturday's game is: In the first period, what game were the referees watching, and where was it? Because, there were a lot of things that just weren't visible to anyone else in the arena. As it was, 17 penalties were called in the opening 20 minutes, including five occasions where more than one penalty was called.

The second trivia question for this week (and yes, this is a sports question): How long did it take to wear the hole in the floor at the throwing line of the dartboard at Ella's? (Hint: The hole goes through the tile flooring and into the cement foundation.)

The Which Way Did It Go Award goes to the snow which fell Saturday night and Sunday. Just when it looked like it was time to break out the old skis and go out and break a leg, all of that beautiful, white snow just vanishes. Right before your very eyes.

Answers to the trivia questions: First, in the last four seasons, the Badgers have defeated Ohio State (twice), Michigan, Illinois and, of course, Northwestern. Second, Ella's has had that dartboard there since they opened 15 years ago.

The Pack is Back

By Jeff Miller
Contributor

When I hear the phrase "the Pack is back," I become annoyed. What are they back to? The only thing I can deduce is back to losing.

What has happened to the Green Bay Packers of yesterday? My father often reminisces over the "glory years" of the Packers during the decade of the 60's. He speaks fondly of such players as Bart Starr, Jim Taylor and Ray Nitschke. The person he admires most was the infamous Vince Lombardi who led the Packers to a number of championships, including Superbowls I and II. His famous phrase "winning isn't everything, it's the only thing," is known to just about everyone.

So again I ask what the hell is going on? What has happened to that team that used to instill fear in minds of other football teams and a sense of awe in the hearts of every avid football fan?

Today the Packers are lucky to finish the season winning half of their games. I don't feel that any of the players in the past decade are of the same caliber of the players during the "glory years." The players today on the team are more famous for their action off the field than on it. To cite a few names, James Lofton and Mosley Cade. They have both been arrested on moral charges. The moral of the players has seemed to change with the times. I believe this is partly due to the large salaries they are being paid.

Why do the fans remain so loyal to this team? Maybe it is the love for the game, which is a part of our American heritage.

More room for fun in 1991

By Gabrielle Wyant-Perillo

Approximately 80,000 gross square feet will be constructed adjacent to UWSP's Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics Building. The $6.8 million Health Enhancement Center is expected to begin next summer and will be completed in January of 1991.

The complex is being constructed in order to house classes for the UWSP wellness/health promotion curriculum, personal fitness and recreation activities.

Architects from Somerville Associates of Green Bay have designed the facility. The complex will face Fourth Avenue on the west side of the Quandt Gymnasium.

The designs for the center include a square aquatics facility. The aquatics area will include an eight lane pool which will be used for 25-yard or 25-meter races. A three-meter diving area will be included but separate from the racing section. The use of the pool is intended for physical education classes, recreational swimming and competitive swimming.

A second pool is also planned to be used as a lab facility. This smaller pool will be used for adapted physical education majors in working with handicapped children and adults.

Spectator bleachers will be built to seat 630 people and locker rooms will be built near the pools.

Within the center will be facilities for educational and recreational sport activities, including basketball and tennis. This section of the center will also house a six-lane, 187.5 meter track.

All students will have fitness/recreational activities available to them. An agreement is to be worked out in which students agree to pay a total cost of $1 million. Each student will be charged every semester until this debt is paid.

The first phase of the project will be major remodeling of the existing Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Athletics Building.

Pep Bands

The UWSP Basketball and Hockey teams have Pep Bands for this winter but need more members.

Your participation will be rewarded with a complimentary

"Pep Band" shirt and free admission to home games. You need not be presently involved in band at UWSP. For more information contact Paul Doehler at 346-2538.

Ruggers Win Final Match

The Stevens Point Rugby Club fought the cold temperatures and stiff wind to pull out a 27-12 victory over UW-Milwaukee. Point never trailed on their way to the win in their final match of the season.

Point jumped out to a 6-0 lead on a try by Tim "Shiner" Barnes. Barnes booted the ball down the field and was able to outrun the Milwaukee backs for the try. Todd "Freddy" Fredrickson added the conversion.

Fredrickson also added a penalty kick in the first half to extend the lead to nine.

Milwaukee put their first points on the board with a try but the conversion kick was wide to the left.

Mike "Clyde" Delain scored his first career try after he received a pass from Dan Vaughn and slipped into the try zone.

Milwaukee cut the lead to 13-8 by the half after scoring their second try of the day.

Jim "Osh" Oshanski said, "They played us tough in the first half but we were able to wear them down in the second half."

Point scored early in the second half as Dean "Dino" Rummel broke loose to score to a 17-8 lead.

Milwaukee scored their final try to cut the lead to five but that was the last time they would see the try zone. Jeff "Griepp" Griepentrog came right back to put the match away as he broke through the would-be tacklers and scored. Fredrickson added the conversion.

Rummel then scored the final try to make the score 27-13.

Said Point captain Scott "Maniac" Goldtry, "for a rag-tag team we had a hell of a season."

Point B-side was shut out as they lost to Milwaukee 14-0.

Point A-side ended the season at 5 and 2 while the B-side finished at 4 and 2. Next for Point is the 12th Annual Artic Fest which is slated for Feb. 4.

OUTDOORS

Eco-Briefs

by Cindy Byers

It used to be thought that the only way to recycle plastics was to separate all the various kinds before remelting. This has been proven untrue by a Swiss firm, Advanced Recycling Technology Ltd. Using a screw-type feeder to produce friction and heat, the different plastics put in the machine mix together readily. At the output end of the machine is an extruder, a form through which the plastic mix is forced. Long shapes are created such as 2x4s. Europeans are excited about the prospect of using the new material instead of wood in non-load-bearing applications. Another advantage of the system is the plastic put in the extruder doesn't even have to be cleaned!

"Paper bags have sacks appeal" or so say advocates of paper sacks at grocery stores. Since 1982, use of plastic sacks has grown sevenfold and some people don't like it. The plastic bags have handles and are supposedly more convenient, but opponents say they create a solid waste problem and are not as easily recycled as paper bags. The group is also in favor of the use of paper milk containers and coffee cups. The final decision still rests with the consumer in the checkout line.

Deformities and reproductive problems are growing as a problem among fish-eating birds of the Great Lakes. Terns, gulls, herons and cormorants feed on the same fish human fishermen catch and eat which raises the issue of human contamination. The toxic effects are consistent with those noted in domestic birds who are known to have had exposures to toxic compounds such as PCBs and dioxin. Most of the effects studied have appeared since the 1960s.

With winter on the way, storm windows going up and heat turning on, it's time to think about radon. Radon is an odorless, colorless gas found naturally in soils. It can concentrate in homes through the basement and foundation. North central and northeastern Wisconsin are two areas to be especially concerned about. Two commercially available testing kits sample the air in the home and then are sent to a lab for analysis. The EPA also has two publications about radon. They are available from the U.S. EPA, Radon Coordinator SP4-14, 230 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, IL 60604.

Soil-erosion standards have been weakened by the USDA. Under criticism that strong rules limiting soil loss on farms were putting people out of business, the SCS will now allow erosion levels above "T." "T" is the allowable soil loss that maintains a healthy land base. The 1985 Farm Bill set strict standards and some think this weakening is a betrayal of that bill. As a result, look for less cooperation from environmentalists when the 1990 Farm Bill is under consideration.

Progress Report on Schmeckle Deer Project

by J.P. Harris
Outdoors Writer

The deer tagging project being conducted on Schmeckle Reserve by members of the Wildlife Society's student chapter is still going strong.

The program involves the trapping of deer and the placement of radio collars on the animals in order to study their social structure, population size and daily and seasonal movement patterns.

Trapping normally takes place during the winter months when the deer do not have as much feed in the area as during the summer. The lack of food sources make it easier to lure the animals into baited traps. Single gate clover traps are used. Once the deer enters the trap, the door closes behind it. The traps are composed of a rope platform with mesh sides. When the animal sees a person approaching to check the trap and attempts to flee, the trap collapses around it preventing possible injury to the animal.

Once the animal is trapped, the handlers put a hood over its head which calms the animal down. The deer's legs are also tied to prevent injury to both the deer and handler alike. Unlike many other animal re-

OUTDOORS EDITORIALS

Outdoor Editor

Perhaps the best way to begin my term as Pointer Outdoor Editor is to look at the issues which should concern not just university students, but the public as a whole.

Exactly what are the issues which one should be concerned with when it comes to the outdoors? Perhaps the best way to define that is first to look at what we mean by the word outdoors.

The term outdoors is basically a generic term used to lump many different topics together into one group. The environment is one of the obvious parts of an outdoor section, but so are many sports, such as hunting, fishing, waterskiing, snowskiing, hiking, and the use of all-terrain vehicles.

Another aspect of the outdoors is the natural resources. This section overlaps recreation in some areas, including the natural resources which are used for all outdoor recreation, but also includes outer areas such as mining, fish harvesting, drinking water, farming, forestry and the air itself.

But, where are the actual areas of concern in the outdoors? What are the issues involved and what can be done to make things better? It is these questions which must be answered by everyone.

One of the issues which is continually being discussed on local, state and federal levels of government is about public lands for outdoor recreation. The questions include how much land should be set aside for recreation and how should the funds for the development and maintenance of these areas be funded. Other issues cover how this land should be managed.

The use of recreational vehicles is also a controversial issue. What types of vehicles should be allowed and where these may be used is a major topic in the Legislature.

Sporting issues enter the political arena annually. Hunting and fishing regulations are made and seasons and hunting areas are defined, but what of these processes? How are these decisions made and by whom remain a mystery to many people.

The most explosive of the outdoors issues, however, fall in the area of natural resources.

Among the controversial topics facing the people are mining, Indian treaty rights for the use of lakes, streams and land for the commercial harvesting of fish and wildlife, pollution of the air, land and water, farming and land-erosion.

This is just a brief outline of the issues which must be faced. By no means are these the only issues in the outdoors.

The one thing which must be kept in mind when addressing these issues is that the great outdoors is there to be used and enjoyed, but it must also be there for future generations to use and enjoy also.

UWSP's Schmeckle Reserve is just one place to enjoy the outdoors.

The Arctic Circle was recently the site of one of the most amazing cooperative efforts in recent history—the rescue attempt of three California grey whales trapped by the onslaught of winter.

The whales, who were spending the summer feeding in the Arctic Sea, began their migration to the California shores too late and were trapped by the southern movement of the polar ice pack. The ice closed in around the whales and trapped them in a pair of breathing holes, too far from open water to swim there underwater without coming up for air.

To the rescue came people from all walks of life: whale hunters, naturalists, businessmen, the Alaska National Guard and even the navy of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR).

When the predicament of the whales off Point Barrow became evident, the rescuers decided to bring in an oil company ice-breaking barge to clear a path for the whales to swim out to open waters. However, technical problems with the barge, which was being towed to the site by an Alaska National Guard sky crane, caused delays which, after several days of frustration, led to the scrapping of those plans.

During the delays, Alaskan whale hunters helped to keep the two breathing holes open using only ice picks and shovels. As the holes continued to close despite these efforts, two Minneapolis businessmen brought their own invention to the services of the effort at Point Barrow.

Their device, which circulated warmer water from under the ice to keep the holes open, bought much needed time for the rescuers to develop an alternative plan for saving the whales.

Finally, with the failure of the barge to even get more than a couple of miles from its starting point and still days away from the whales, a second National Guard helicopter was brought in, this time using a large block of cement to smash new breathing holes and luring the whales out to sea.

Even as those preparations were being made, however, the youngest and smallest of the whales gave in to the cold and to exhaustion and died. Despite this, the rescuers continued to work, refusing to allow defeat to take over.

Meanwhile, another unexpected source was providing aid, this time from out at sea. The Soviet Union had dispatched an ocean-going icebreaker to move in toward Point Barrow from out at sea.

All seemed to go well until a large, deep ridge of ice had developed near the edge of the ice pack, reaching much deeper than the National Guards block could. However, the Soviets proved their worth when their icebreaker easily smashed through the wall and allowed the whales to escape into freedom.

Despite occurring in an extremely isolated region which caused problems in communications and logistics, as well as some differences in opinions as to how the efforts should take place, the multi-national and multi-custom effort was an unequivocal success despite the loss of one of the whales.

About the only negative side of the rescue attempt was the opposition which was voiced over the entire rescue effort.

It is felt by some that the whole idea of rescuing the whales by American and Russian interests was hypocritical as both have been guilty of overharvesting the whales in the first place.

These misguided individuals have missed one of the most important aspects of the episode—the coverage. The ongoing rescue effort was seen on national television by millions of viewers and enlightened many people about the whales and their struggle for survival.

Others have criticized the expenses incurred during the efforts. The cost to the state of Alaska (for the use of communications equipment and two helicopters) was, in their opinion, too high.

The truth is, the members of the Alaska National Guard involved in the rescue gained valuable experience from the successes and failures of the attempt, and this can be drawn upon in the future when it is human life at stake in the Arctic Circle.

So for those who have lost the overall picture of the rescue and see fit to criticize the efforts of those gallant men who literally risked everything for these whales, look again, as there were more benefits than just two more whales surviving for another season.

Wilke to Assume Leadership Position

A faculty member at UWSP is the new president-elect of the North American Association for Environmental Education.

Rick Wilke, a professor and associate dean of the College of Natural Resources, will assume leadership of the 1,000-member organization next summer at a meeting in Estes Park, Colo.

His responsibilities until then, will be coordinate arrangements for the meeting.

The organization has members from every continent but primarily from the United States and Canada. Its primary goal is to promote the analysis and understanding of environmental issues and questions as a basis for effective education, problem-solving, policy-making and management.

During its 17-year history, the association has provided support to individuals and groups engaged in environmental education, research and service.

Wilke, who received his bachelor's and master's degrees from UWSP and a Ph.D. from Southern Illinois University, has been active in the association through most of its existence, having served five previous years on the board, a term as president of its elementary and secondary section and as association publications editor.

He also has chaired the Wisconsin Association for Environmental Education, served as vice chair of the National Commission on Research and Environmental Education and secretary of the Midwest Environmental Consortium. He has developed manuals in his field that have been used by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Wilke, whose hometown is Manitowoc, has served on the UWSP faculty since 1975, having been largely responsible for the development of the Central Wisconsin Environmental Station as its first permanent director.

Large Harvest Expected For Gun Deer Season

RHINELANDER — If deer hunters thought last year was good, just wait until the nine-day season opens November 19.

DNR North Central District Wildlife Staff Specialist, Arlyn Loomans, says every indication he has points to a record harvest in the 10-county District. Loomans bases his optimism on several factors including the fall archery season that will likely approach last year's record deer harvest, the large standing herd of available deer, especially in the north, and the large numbers of antlerless permits available in deer management units north of Highway 64.

"So far, the bow deer season is running about six percent below last year, but I expect when the final numbers are in, we will be near the 1987 record of 10,624 deer." That, adds Loomans, looks well for firearm hunters during the nine-day season. "Deer are very plentiful north of Highway 64, where mild winters have kept deer mortality to a minimum. As a result, many northern deer management units are well over goals, and that, says Loomans, is reflected in the numbers of antlerless permits that have been issued for northern units such as 35, 38, and 39.

cal/chemical technologies to biotechnologies. Biopulping is the use of microorganisms, water, vitamins and wood chips to produce pulp for papermaking. It is said to produce a very clean wastewater. Current processes use strong chemicals such as chlorine and has high temperature, high Ph effluent. If biopulping can succeed there is also promise of using the left-over microorganisms as animal feed. The UW-Madison Biotechnology Center is directing the research.

Robert Redford's Institute for Technology is sounding a warning about superconductors. These are specialized materials which have little or no resistance to electrical conduction when cooled to very low temperatures. Scientists feel this process shows great promise, but others are concerned about effects from the increase of magnetic field intensity. These increases have been linked to human health threats and may affect animals such as long-distance bird migrators. Little has been done on the environmental effects of superconductors and the Institute urges proceeding with caution.

The U. S. Department of Energy (DOE) last week agreed to cooperate fully with inspectors at its nuclear weapons plants. The inspectors are looking for links between emissions from the plants and health problems in communities around them. There are 17 plants across the U.S. and estimates at solving problems caused by the plants range to $100 billion in the next 20 to 35 years. Critics have said the plants and the DOE have been a closed society that has operated inefficiently and failed to keep up with safe nuclear technology.

In Grand Haven, Michigan, there has been an outbreak of giardia. Giardia is a gastrointestinal disease that causes lengthy battles with diarrhea. Waterborne parasites carry the disease and sewage spills from heavy rains around Grand Haven are blamed for the outbreak. The heavy rains caused increased waterflows that overtaxed sewage treatment facilities. Contaminated water was then ingested by those affected.

search programs, there are no drugs used on the deer during the process. Besides being fitted with a transmitting device, the deer are also weighed and information about their age and general health is recorded.

One of the problems with the radio collars is that they cannot be used on fawns or bucks. Fawns will lose the collar because their necks will eventually outgrow them. Adult bucks cannot be collared because during the mating season their necks swell tremendously which will cause the collar to become loose. Instead, solar powered transmitters are clipped to their ears. There are two problems associated with the ear transmitters. First, they have a very limited range from which their signal may be received. Secondly, often times an ear transmitter will fall off the deer as it moves through areas of heavy brush.

This year trapping is scheduled to begin around Christmas. So far, in the past three deer have been tagged, but one was killed by a car, leaving two. It is hoped that six to eight deer in all will be tagged for study. The estimated size of the herd in the Schmeckle area is 25-30 deer. Of these, four does will be tagged in order to study differences in wintering areas from bucks and also to help locate fawning sites. Incidentally, it should be known that the program is not connected in any way with the DNR and is entirely operated by the university.

The major problem facing the program is a lack of funding. In addition to a need to purchase new collars for tagging, (at a cost of approximately $160 each) the receiver must also be replaced.

"The old receiver is simply worn out," said Bob Sanders, student director of the program. "We obtained the unit used, and it had been used for a variety of projects. The new receiver will be used exclusively for the Schmeckle project and should last many years."

A new receiver will cost around $700. This combined with the cost of the new collars is well over the current amount of funding provided by the Student Government Association. It is hoped that new funds will be raised in order to make the program a continued success. Members of the program would like to thank Sentry Insurance who provide feed for the deer during the winter months.

DNR Urges Fire Care

RHINELANDER - Despite average amounts of precipitation this fall, fields and forests of north central Wisconsin remain very dry.

"Last summer's record breaking drought has left soil moisture levels 100% below normal across the District," said DNR North Central District Forest Fire Staff Specialist Jim Miller. "Because of that, I'm asking deer hunters to be especially careful this season if they use fire in their camps for cooking or warming." Miller urges hunters to make sure that fires are absolutely extinguished, and make sure that the soil deep beneath the fire is free of any heat from the flames. Embers from smoldering debris can later reignite into flames even beneath the soil surface.

Miller also advises hunters to not let present conditions lull them into a false sense of security. "Even if there is snow on the ground, a fire can leave the soil beneath hot enough to reignite later if not properly put out. "This will be particularly important, as hunters will be travelling in areas not normally accessible, such as dried swamps, marshes, and bogs," said Miller.

Immunization For Influenza

By Jim Zach, M.D.

UWSP Health Services

The annual winter influenza season is not far away. Influenza is a viral respiratory infection. Symptoms include fever, chills, sore throat, runny nose, head and muscle aches, cough and vomiting. Symptoms may take up to a week to subside.

Healthy young adults generally do not have problems recovering from influenza. Elderly people and those with certain medical conditions should receive an influenza immunization to protect them from the potentially serious complications that may result to these people.

The Health Center will have a limited amount of influenza vaccine available. November is the preferred month for people to receive immunizations.

Those who should be immunized include older individuals, particularly those over age 65, because the risk of death with influenza increases with age. People of any age with serious and/or chronic heart, lung, or kidney diseases which require ongoing medical care should also be vaccinated. This would include people with diabetes, congenital heart disease, chronic asthmatics and heavy smokers. People who are receiving immuno-suppressive medications such as corticosteroids or cancer therapy should be immunized. People who may transmit influenza to others in high risk groups such as people who help care for elderly or hospitalized patients should be immunized.

The influenza immunization provides only temporary protection. It needs to be repeated each year. In addition, the strains of virus causing influenza change from year to year. People who have a serious allergy to eggs should not be immunized because of the risk of a reaction.

Students wishing to be immunized should come to special immunization clinic hours, Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 7:45 to 9:00 a.m. If you have questions call the Health Center, 346-4646.

In the last several years, the Malaysian government has changed some policies that will affect the UW-SP community. UW-SP is no longer a college that is accredited by Malaysia. This means that Malaysians who are in the U.S. under a scholarship risk having to pay back their government if they choose Point. Only the wealthier Chinese Malaysians are still coming here.

The Malaysian government also has instituted a two-year college in their country which the students on scholarship attend. After completing these two years, the students can then come to the U.S. and complete their degree. At one time, several years ago, there were 30,000 Malaysians in colleges in the U.S.A. Today, that number has been greatly reduced.

In a recent interview, Fadzil Yahya, a state scholarship recipient, pointed out that in the last two years, there have been no new Malaysians (under scholarship) in Point. In the same interview, Gina Onn stated that of the 16 Malaysians under scholarship currently, all of them will graduate by May.

A teacher imposing disciplinary actions must follow stringent rules. The instructor must promptly discuss the matter with the student. Then a written report must be prepared to inform the student, detailing the misconduct, notice of the student's right to request a hearing, and a copy of the institutional procedures adopted to implement this section.

The process after this is a long, if not complicated, one. It includes conferences with an investigating officer, hearings in front of the academic misconduct hearing committee, and possible appeals or petitions to the chancellor.

"Nightmare" —Messer's award winning work

Susan Messer of East Troy has won the $175 first-place prize in "Wisconsin '88" statewide art exhibition which will run through Nov. 23 at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point's Edna Carlson Gallery.

The winners were honored at the show's opening reception last Sunday. The $125 second-place award went to D.W. Lundahl of Beloit and Dennis Angel of Stevens Point, a member of the UWSP art and design faculty, received the $75 third-place prize.

Messer's award-winning work, "Nightmare," is a semi-abstract charcoal figurative drawing. Juror Sheila Miles, curator of exhibitions at the Yellowstone Art Center, Billings, Mont., describes the piece as "showing great execution without overstating the obvious...There is just enough left undone to use one's own mind and sense to complete the story." Lundahl's untitled piece is an iron-welded sculpture and Angel's work is a lithograph entitled, "My Father."

The public is invited to attend a free informal talk by the juror at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 15 in the gallery. The exhibition of 80 pieces by 44 artists from throughout the state represents a variety of different types of work.

Receiving honorable mention were: Catherine Angel of Stevens Point, a UW-SP faculty member, for a color photograph, "Self Portrait;" Peter Hite, a senior art major from Wisconsin Rapids, for "Strong Stance," a silver gelatin print and Mark Wilson of West Allis for an untitled charcoal, graphite and ink piece.

UWSP International Programs

A semester abroad can be considered a global gateway to a world of learning.

International Programs can help you become a world citizen — educated to see beyond the parochial, and able to take responsibility for the future of our species and planet. International programs alumni testify to the long term advantages of international study. Many foresighted students have experienced broad benefits, such as:

- a new sense of self, a wider view of themselves and others.

- an extended scope for certain majors, language concentrations or area studies.

- an encounter with foreign cultures in the context of group interaction and classroom enrichment.

- a genuine cross-cultural dimension to enrich liberal arts or professional education.

- a record that distinguishes their resume from those of their peers.

Each semester abroad features a study tour taking advantage of season and site specialties and a three-month residence where you can earn 13-17 University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point credits.

In order to be eligible for the Semester Abroad program you sor can help you set up a long-term course schedule that will combine study abroad with degree requirements in the best possible sequence. Courses fill humanities requirements and often fill more specific needs. Independent study can serve your major.

"Boy with the Leaking Boot."

It is estimated that repairs will cost between $3,000-$5,000.

The Adult Student Alliance (ASA), in cooperation with WSPU-WSPU Radio Stations, will sponsor a fund raising on campus to restore the "Boy with the Leaking Boot." The statue, which stood in front of the Division Street Fire Station, is a historical landmark of Stevens Point.

Two UWSP students were arrested and charged with vandalizing the statue during the early morning hours of October 15. It is estimated that repairing the statue will cost between $3,000 and $5,000. Vic Bannon of WSPU and ASA members will be collecting donations of money in the concourse of the UC on November 15th and 16th from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

The Boy, which was imported from Europe, is one of 24 in the world and one of 10 in the U.S. It was purchased in 1895 by the City of Stevens Point to be erected in a fountain in the Market Square as part of a beautification project. Through the years, the Boy has been rescued by concerned Stevens Point residents, and has been under the protection of Stevens Point firefighters over the last 40 years.

To date, $2,217 has been raised by the community for the repair of the Boy. UWSP students, clubs and faculty are encouraged to donate toward the restoration fund.

Sorority Seeks Recognition

By Stacy L. Hoyer

Contributor

A recently formed group here on campus some of you may not yet be aware of is the newest sorority, Alpha Omega Rho. Its members are people both new and old to the Greek community. Some are Little Sisters of our campus' fraternities and others are pledging Greek for the first time.

Alpha Omega Rho has an advisor and is now temporarily recognized by the University and is seeking permanent recognition. They have yet to go before IGC, SOURCE and SGA. They have roughly 30-35 members at this time, making them the largest sorority on our campus.

Alpha Omega Rho is now the Sister Sorority of the Sigma Tau Gamma Fraternity. The letters chosen to represent this group symbolize both a new beginning for its members and it is tied to the original local fraternity that formed what is now Sigma Tau Gamma.

The reasons for becoming a part of this organization vary from member to member. The tasks of a founding organization include putting together a constitution, establishing the group's morals and purposes and deciding the direction of the group. Many members wish to be involved with a campus organization, others join for the lifelong friendships that often result.

Alpha Omega Rho will be active in community enhancement. The Association for Community Tasks (ACT) has recognized the new group's enthusiasm after receiving help from the members of Alpha Omega Rho with the "Very Special Arts" program held here on campus Oct. 31st. The "Very Special Arts" learning experience for the hearing impaired, emotionally disturbed, mentally retarded and children with learning disabilities. They were taught various arts, such as singing and dancing, and given a chance to create art of their own. Alpha Omega Rho will choose a charity which will receive a percentage of any money earned at sorority fundraisers.

The advisor is Janet Downs, Hall Director of Neale Hall. Downs recently returned from Mt. Pleasant, Michigan where she had the opportunity to experience another sorority which is bidding to go national at this time. "I believe in Greek organizations as an alternative organization to other groups on campus. I am really excited about this group. I already see quite a bit of commitment and I highly support students that form their own organizations," said Janet.
